CHAPTER VII.
BETH RUNS AWAY.

He reached his destination late in the afternoon, sought the nearest hotel, where he got rid of the dust of travel, and made some change in his apparel; then took a carriage and was driven directly to Miss Prudence Russell's thrifty farm, which was located on the outskirts of the charming mountain village, which, of late years, had become a popular summer resort.

When he arrived Mr. and Miss Russell were seated upon the broad, cozily furnished piazza, the only modern innovation which the present owner had ever permitted to change or embellish her childhood's home. Philip found Mr. Russell sadly changed, by his illness, from the alert, handsome man of ten years ago, though the warmth of his greeting assured him that the same genial, generous heart beat in his bosom; but his voice grew suspiciously tremulous when he remarked to Philip that he should never have recognized the strapping of a decade previous in the bronzed, broad-shouldered man of to-day. Miss Prue's gentle heart warmed toward him instantly, and she betrayed it as she graciously welcomed him to her home, but with a secret sigh of regret that Beth had been so hasty in writing to have the proposed relation between them annulled.

"You have been on the train nearly all day, Mr. Walton, and I am sure you need refreshment," she smilingly observed, on hospitable thoughts intent. "Of course we were expecting you, so a plate is laid for you, and our evening meal is ready to be served."

Philip thanked her, but remarked that he had eaten a hearty luncheon in the dining car about one o'clock. "Oh, but that was hours ago, and I am sure you are hungry by this time. Come, you and brother can talk over old times while you are eating, and so lose no time," she cordially returned, adding as she saw Philip's glance wandering about, "I am sorry Beth is not here to greet you—"

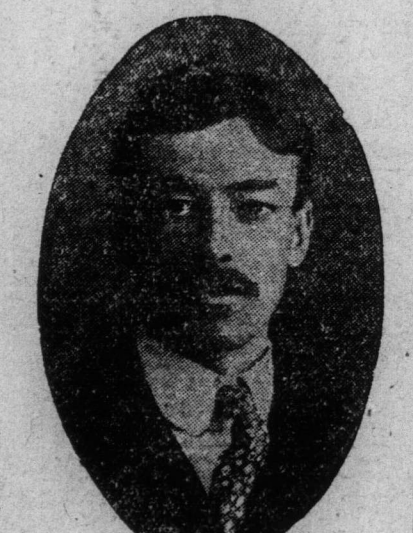

"Beth not here!" repeated Philip, his face falling.

"No, she has gone to York Harbor for a visit to her friend, Mrs. Armstrong. She left on Monday," Miss Prue explained.

On Monday. That was the day she had written to him. So Beth had run away from him, and left him to set-

"The Only Cure for Piles"

Writes Mr. Taylor in Telling His Experience With Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. M. Taylor.

Because Dr. Chase's Ointment brings almost immediate relief from the dreadful itching, burning, stinging sensations of piles, it is well worth the attention of everyone suffering from this annoying disease.

In most cases, even after years of standing, Dr. Chase's Ointment makes a thorough and lasting cure of itching, bleeding and protruding piles.

Mr. Maxwell Taylor, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "To all sufferers from piles in any form I would recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as the only cure. Over a year ago while in Boston, I became afflicted with a dreadful itching. I went to a doctor, who gave me some ointment, which made me no better. A friend advised 'he use of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and on the use of two boxes I was entirely cured. You may publish this statement in order that other sufferers may profit by my experience.'"

Dr. Chase's Ointment can better prove its value by the relief it affords than by all the words we could use in its praise. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

the disagreeable conditions of Miss Crawford's will with her father, he thought with a touch of chagrin. But—with a settling of his firm chin—he would see her yet, all the same, and have a straightforward talk with her. He had really been fond of her as a child, and he wished to renew their friendly relations, even if he did not want her for a wife. He must also try to efface the sting of those cruel words which she had overheard on her unsuspected perch in the old beech tree.

The evening meal proved to be a doubtful repast, such as only an old-fashioned country housewife can set before a guest, and to it the traveller did ample justice. Afterward Miss Prue, seconded by her brother, insisted that Philip should remain with them during his sojourn in the town, saying she would send a man to the hotel for his grip; then she busied herself with various household duties, leaving the gentlemen free to say all that was in their hearts to each other.

During the conversation Mr. Russell expressed his great disappointment in view of the stand Beth had taken regarding their union, saying he knew of the letter she had written him.

"Of course," he observed, "I have always felt that Eliza Crawford's will was a preposterous piece of folly, and, in this advanced age, compulsory match-making is a fatal mistake. Yet I have hoped, all these years—let alone the desire to keep that money where it belonged—that you and Beth would find your affinity in each other, and so perpetuate, in a more sacred union, the long friendship that has existed between the two families."

"I know my father felt the same way, for he always declared that Beth was the brightest girl of her age he had ever seen, and would make a splendid woman," said Philip, adding gravely: "And I came home at this time, Mr. Russell, as I wrote you, to fulfill the conditions of the will; but, as Beth has said, we are almost strangers to each other, and I could not for a moment think of forcing anything of a repulsive nature upon her. I am sure you would not wish it, either."

"No, I would not have her do anything that was—er—repulsive to her," Silas Russell thoughtfully admitted, while he covertly studied the young man's averted face; "nor you, either, my boy," he added after a moment. "How is it, Philip: Will the loss of this money be a disappointment to you?"

"In a way it will," the young man replied. "Not because of my own personal loss, for I am well fixed financially, and have always felt I had no moral right to any part of Miss Crawford's sentimental legacy; but, since learning of your reverses, I have been bitterly rebellious over this preposterous piece of folly—as you rightly term it—and the injustice of it as well; especially since, now that I am appointed one of the trustees, I shall have to see that the will is carried out. I swear, Mr. Russell, it makes me feel almost like a robber, and it is a burning shame!" he concluded, flushing with indignation.

"No blame can be attached to you, Philip, and I can understand that you find yourself in an unpleasant position," said Mr. Russell with a sigh. "I confess," he went on, "that I had hoped, if this money had come to her, that Beth would lend me enough to see me on my feet again—"

He broke off suddenly, looking so utterly discouraged, his lips unsteady, his massive chin quivering with repressed emotion, that Philip was deeply moved also.

"I will do that, Mr. Russell," he said eagerly, "and that was part of my errand in coming to you. I have money to invest, and I shall want something to do myself, now that I have returned; so if you want a partner, take me into business with you, and we will try our luck together. What do you say?"

Mr. Russell got up suddenly and walked the length of the piazza and back. When he sat down again he looked like a different man, his eyes were bright, his manner alert.

"Philip, you can have no idea what your offer means to me," he said, a new hope vibrant in his tones. "With returning health I know my business capacity will be just as vigorous as ever. Capital is all I need to give me both courage and opportunity to regain the ground I have lost. You are your father's own boy—a noble, generous-hearted man, and from the depths of my heart I thank you. But, we will not talk any more about it to-night. I feel we both should think the matter over more carefully before deciding it definitely. Now let us go inside and join my sister, who, I know, will be glad to make your acquaintance. You have hardly seen each other yet."

Philip gave him his arm and helped him into the house, for, in spite of the new hope which seemed to animate him, he could see the man was greatly excited over their conversation, and was trembling visibly. They went a social hour with Miss Prue, whom Philip found most charming, and he secretly wondered how it was possible that so sweet a woman had lived so long without finding her proper mate.

The next morning, Mr. Russell was the first one downstairs, and surprised every one by the change in his appearance. His face was bright and animated, his movements alert, his step firm and steady. It was as if he had imbibed some subtle elixir that had put new life into him during the night.

"Why, Silas, surely the coming of our guest has done you a world of good. You seem years younger than you appeared last night," his sister joyously observed as they sat down to the breakfast table.

"Philip has done me good, Prue. I feel like another man this morning. He has generously proposed to set me up in business again, coming in with me as partner, and, my boy, after giving the subject earnest consideration, I am going to accept your offer. God bless you," the man returned with a thrill of eagerness in his tones that brought tears to his sister's eyes.

"I am very glad. You are doing me a great favor, Mr. Russell, for I did not anticipate finding a favorable opening so soon after my return," Philip cordially observed, and from that moment Miss Prue was his warm friend and champion.

"Poor Beth," she thought, "you don't know what you have missed by running away. Philip Walton is a man after my own heart, and I believe you will yet be sorry you were so hasty in sending that letter. I suspect there is a secret reason why you were afraid to meet him."

She regretted that she had not been more insistent in her argument to keep her at home, for Beth, feeling sure Philip would come to see them in spite of her letter, had taken it into her willful little head that she could not, would not, meet him just yet; so, immediately after writing him, she had gone to make a long-talked-of visit to her friend, Muriel Armstrong.

After breakfast, Mr. Russell and Philip held a long business conference on the veranda. Then, when they had lunched, Miss Russell drove them about the pretty village, in her handsome station wagon, taking in the famous River Road Drive, returning in season for an early dinner, and, later, Philip, having made an appointment to meet Mr. Russell, in Boston, the following week, took the night train back to that city, where he arrived early the next morning, feeling very well satisfied with himself and the world in general.

He was free from what had long been a galling bondage, without compromising himself in any way, while he believed he had also released Beth from a prospect equally revolting. He had inspired his father's old friend with new courage by pledging capital sufficient to start him anew in life, and at the same time had secured a partnership in the business which he felt sure would result to his own interest. He must have something to do—idleness he detested—and, with Mr. Russell's capacity and experience, backed by his money, he knew this was an opening not to be despised.

the stark nakedness of conceit.

"I don't think we'd have half the divorces we do," says my neighbour, "if people only had a sense of humor. Now I make it a plan to always look for the funny side of things and I think I avert a great deal of trouble that way."

My neighbor's philosophy is most excellent, but I wonder if she realizes what an emphasis she puts on "Now I."

Ordinarily she is a very diffident person, rather too much so; she is always wishing she were as good or as clever or as pretty as someone else. But once in a while she is betrayed into revealing some of that normal self-conceit, of which I believe every human being has more or less, no matter how thickly he overlays it with mock or real humility.

"I don't think Mrs. W. has any right to spend so much money for clothes," says another neighbor in speaking of a friend who dresses extravagantly. "Now, I believe in being well dressed, but I don't put half my husband's salary on my back and keep him perpetually in debt." Again, in speaking of another friend who (according to her) is inclined to be careless about her personal appearance—"The idea of her neglecting herself like that! Some day she'll be sorry. And I know she could dress decently if she'd only manage a little. Goodness knows I don't have any too much money to spend on my clothes, but I always make a great effort to look as well as possible."

Evidently this woman believes that she herself is the ideal, the happy mean between these two objectionable extremes. And yet if you should tax her with having a high opinion of herself, she would be as astonished as she was indignant.

We have all laughed at the old saying, "Accidents will happen in the best regulated of families; they do in ours." And yet most of us sometimes betray ourselves as blatantly as its author.

Now, mind you, I am not protesting against this instinctive self-conceit. On the contrary, as I have said before, I think a certain amount of it is necessary to the happiness of the human race.

I'm just laughing with you at the amusing and ostrich-like way in which we—you and I and our neighbours—by a careless speech or even by a single inflection betray that which we are so anxious to hide.

High in favor is the jewelry of platinum.

The new pendant represents a tiny lantern.

The gloves should match in color the gown worn.

Shantung silk trimmed with pearl buttons and embroidery is very smart.

Fashionable women are wearing the anklets of brilliants.

White woolen coats are in great request as odd garments.

The modish gown still shows the sash and its phases are innumerable.

The newest lingerie blouse shows a Japanese kimono finish at the neck.

Crowns and brims of the new hats are covered with white figured crepe.

Black and white stockings have insets of lace over the ankle and instep.

For children the smoked frocks of challis and crepon are very much in evidence.

A pretty sleeve is formed of two scant puffs set in at a dropped shoulder seam.

The slit skirts have revived the vogue of the founced silk petticoat in bright color.

Embroidered batiste collar and cuffs make a pretty finish to many of the silk gowns.

White pearls and diamonds have fallen in favor. The jewel of the moment must have color.

Creu linen scarfs, etc., are being chosen by many people for the bedrooms of summer cottages.

The favorite shoe in Paris is the "cothurne"—a low shoe laced with ribbons high on the ankle.

White cotton ratine is on the top wave of favor. Skirts of it are fastened by Irish crochet buttons.

The purple and yellowish face powders only lately originated in Paris, are no longer in vogue.

For the afternoon costume, crepe de chine, poplin, moire, taffeta, ottoman silk and crepon are used.

Black ribbon sauteurs, with rhinestone slides are being worn by the women who like the new things.

Materials most approved of are voile, sheer linen, plain or embroidered batiste, swiss and silk crepon.

Taupe is as great a favorite as ever but is almost invariably brightened with coral or other vivid hue.

The expensive voile morning frocks

Children's millinery this season is charmingly simple; not overtrimmed, but artistic from every point of view.

Fascinating articles of neckwear are made of finely tucked mousseline de soie, mull, batiste, sheerest linen and net.

For street wear are hats of hemp, milan and chip, trimmed with ribbon bands of Bulgarian embroidery, flowers or velvet.

A French idea is the finest of round hats, brimless except for a flounce of black tulle projecting stiffly for a width of six inches.

Pretty detachable chemisettes are made of embroidered or tucked net, and linen or French crepon. They are easily laundered when soiled.

CURES INDIGESTION & DYSPEPSIA IN ALL ITS FORMS.

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: "Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything. I have no heart to exert myself, and at times I care for nothing."

I often have a pain in the pit of my stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden.

Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons like this to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a bottle of Prescription "A". A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained at

It Can't Be Done.

Somebody said it couldn't be done. But he, with a chuckle, replied, "That 'maybe it couldn't' but he would be one."

Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried. So he buckled right in, with the trace of a grin.

On his face. If he worried, he hid it. He started to sing as he tackled the thing.

That couldn't be done—and he did it. Somebody scoffed: "Oh, you'll never do that."

At least, no one ever has done it. But he took off his coat, and he took off his hat.

And the first we knew he'd begun it. With a lift of his chin and a bit of a grin.

Without any doubting or quiddit; He started to sing as he tackled the thing.

That couldn't be done—and he did it. There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done.

There are thousands to prophesy failure; There are thousands to point out to you one by one.

The dangers that wait to assail you. But just buckle in with a bit of a grin, Then take off your coat and go to it; Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing.

That "cannot be done," and you'll do it. —Killog's Square Dealer.

How Governor Williams Exposed Himself!

Sir Ralph Williams has written a book telling, so the title intimates, how he became a Governor. Thousands of people have wondered how he did it. We do not know, as we have not had the opportunity of reading the book. The author did not forward a copy to us, and we are not surprised that he did not do so. The criticisms to which we subjected his conduct in the case of the Morison Memorials were such that he could not count his recollections of them as part "of the most pleasant memories of his official life."

Now that ex-Governor Williams has unbundled himself of his opinions on Newfoundland and its people, the supporters of Sir Edward Morris will learn with delight that though Sir Ralph Williams has no use for them, his association with Sir Edward Morris is one of the most pleasant memories of his official life, and that Sir Edward was "not only my official prime minister but my warm personal friend." Sir Edward must be profoundly impressed with his success with the late Governor, who has taken him to his heart. It will afford him much comfort now that he knows the electorate of Newfoundland, so much despised by Sir Ralph Williams, have as much contempt for him as they have for his friend, Sir Ralph Williams.

Sir Ralph Williams prates about "the extraordinary oblique ideas which the electors at large have of their political duties and political responsibilities," and elaps himself on the back on a persistency he showed in refusing to let some poor devils out of the Penitentiary. Sir Ralph uses a magnifying glass in showing up what he regards as the faults and follies of Newfoundlanders, but he is absolutely blind to the mote in his own eyes, which warped his vision so much that his conception of his political duties and responsibilities became a byword during the latter part of his career in Newfoundland.

He declared he was staggered at the revelations made about one of his ministers, and yet he staggered the people of Newfoundland by accepting a plea of forgetfulness from Mr. Donald Morison, when the latter declared he forgot the law when he advised the agent for the sale of some timber lands in which he was interested that a purchaser might raid adjoining Crown Lands for timber. He read him a lesson and let him off. And this is the man who prides himself as Governor, as one who is "a Governor strong enough" to override Ministers who want to be overridden and keep some poor devil in jail, and who was in reality weak enough to fall in with his personal friend, the Prime Minister, Sir Edward Morris, and help him to keep his Ministry together after the exposures made in the Morison Memorials.

The obliquity of his ideas of his duties is revealed also in his sneer at his locum tenens, who he declares was caught napping and succumbed to the impertinence of a would-be C. M. G. It is a sneer at a better man than himself and one who is honoured by his fellows as much as ex-Governor Williams is despised by them. His cheap sneer at local opinionists are on all fours with the rest of his diatribes against the people of Newfoundland and their ways.

Sir Ralph Williams has tried to make a show of the people of Newfoundland and he has succeeded in making a sorry exhibition of himself. In his personal addresses to the public no Governor ever used so much soft sawder. At times his expressions of love for Newfoundland and esteem for its people were positively couched in terms that were nauseating to those who saw through him. Now everybody can see they were insincere. If the book has accomplished anything it has proved to those who listened to his adulation his rank hypocrisy.

The title of the book is "How I became a Governor." As a study of that it may be interesting to know how such a man became a Governor. So far, however, as the extracts published show, they set forth how a Governor retired with a bad taste in his mouth. The people pleased him not. Their Prime Minister, however, he has taken to his heart. He looks back on his association with him as a pleasant memory. The people look upon the career of Sir Ralph Williams in Newfoundland as a bitter memory. They are now well rid of him. Next November they will have an opportunity of ridding themselves of his personal friend. If anything was wanting to add to the unpopularity of Sir Ralph Williams in Newfoundland, the revelation that while he was lauding the people in public he was knifing them in the secrecy of his study, amuses it. May we never see the like of Sir Ralph Williams in Newfoundland will be the earnest wish of all who respect themselves and their country.

Possibly the scene presented on Saturday at the meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly was the one most unique in the history of that Church. There was a phalanx of young men admitted to the ranks of the church from the Presbytery at Winnipeg, nineteen in number, who were all Ruthenians. The occasion was one of the most impressive witnessed since the remarkable series of meetings in connection with the Assembly began. The subject of church union was introduced by Rev. Dr. Duval, Winnipeg, who made a strong speech in favor of it, but the discussion was adjourned.

LONDON, To-day.
Emily Davison, first martyr of the militant efforts to obtain suffrage, died yesterday, as a result of a fracture of the skull sustained in an attempt to stop the King's horse during the running of the Derby. Only the matron of the hospital and two nurses were present at the deathbed. Miss Davison's relatives having left the building when told there was no hope of her regaining consciousness. A few moments before death, two comrades draped the scene surrounding the cot with the fateful colors of the Women's Social and Political Union which she wore when she made her sensational attempt to interfere with the great classic of the British turf. Speaking with great emotion at Hyde Park meeting yesterday, Mrs. Despard said she hoped the case of Miss Davison would kindle and inflame the souls of men which would end the present awful situation. Miss McGowan, another suffragette leader said Miss Davison had given her life in order to call attention to the wrongs of men. She knew Miss Davison always held a view that women's life would have to be sacrificed before the women of this country would get justice. In striking contrast the meeting of the Constitutional Society in Hyde Park subway in the afternoon met with only mild opposition, but the attempts of the W.S.P.U. speakers to address the crowd resulted in considerable disorder. A number of fights between the main body guards of the women and spectators took place. Last Sunday the members of the Women's Social Political Union raised their flags at several points, but the crowd pushed and pressed the women together. At one point the women were rushed off their feet and the police had to escort them from the Park.

The 17th anniversary of the Catholic Cadet Corps, was celebrated yesterday. The regulars and members of the reserve battalion attended eight o'clock mass, celebrated by His Grace the Archbishop, in the morning, at the R. C. Cathedral. In a body they received Holy Communion. At 2 p.m. the battalion again paraded to the Cathedral. At 3 p.m. Benediction was imparted by His Grace the Archbishop and Fr. Pippy, Chaplain of the corps, preached an instructive discourse, exhorting all to be as devoted to their religious duties as they were to their military training. At the conclusion of the service ranks were reformed and headed by their brass band, which discoursed pleasing selections, marched through the city. The regulars were in charge of Lieut-Col. One Killed; Four Injured.

When Horse Ran Away Coming From Funeral — Philip Bougie Died Instantly and His Three Daughters Received Such Serious Injuries That They Too May Succumb — Animal Took Flight at Steam Roller — Cabman Also Injured — Wheel Came Off Rig — Had Just Buried His Son.

While returning from the funeral of his son, Philip Bougie, aged 66, was dashed to death against a curbstone, and three of his daughters and one son, were knocked unconscious and may never recover, as a result of a runaway accident at the corner of Cote des Neiges Hill and Pine Avenue, this morning.

Taking flight at a steam roller, the horse attached to the carriage in which the bereaved family were returning from the cemetery, galloped wildly down the steep grade towards Pine avenue, with Roul Deschamps, the driver, using all his strength to hold in the infuriated animal.

Rising up in his seat, Deschamps with almost superhuman strength pulled on the reins and pulled the wild animal around the corner of Pine avenue, thinking thus to break his headlong career.

Wheel Came Off Rig.

All would have been well, but just as the cab turned the corner, a wheel came off dashing the four occupants against the sidewalk.

Landing on his head on the curb, Philip Bougie, who had only a few moments before seen his son laid to rest, never moved again. His neck was broken, and death was apparently instantaneous.

Lying beside him were the unconscious forms of his three daughters and one son, while George Deschamps, the cabman, who had so heroically tried to avert the accident, was limping about with a broken shoulder and several broken ribs. Strange to say, the horse was not scratched at all.

Two Deaths in Three Days.

Death thus struck the Bougie family two heavy blows since last Saturday, when George Bougie, aged 24, the youngest son of the man who was dashed to death to-day, passed away.

The family had left their humble home, at 10 Mountain street, early today, weeping for George, and other relatives returned to the same home at noon, mourning the death of a father, and expecting any minute to hear worse news still from the hospital to which the injured were taken.

They had just seen the last sod placed on George's grave and had mounted into the cabs to return from the scene with sad thoughts, when the horse in the leading cab took flight at the steam roller.

Wife Saw Accident.

With tense, pale faces, the five occupants of the cab sat tight in their seats while the horse dashed madly down the grade. Those who witnessed the tragic gallop say that Deschamps exerted his utmost strength to pull the horse to his haunches, but nothing could be done to check his speed.

Just behind the ill-fated cab was another carriage, in which Mrs. Philip Bougie, her son-in-law, and two younger children were seated. They heard the shouts of distress, followed by a terrible crash at the corner of Pine Avenue.

The second cab drove up to the corner just in time for Mrs. Bougie to see her husband breathe his last. She bent over the prostrate man and implored him to speak, but no words came from his lips, which were already sealed in death.

Injured Man Helped Others.

After his plucky drive ending in the fatal crash, Raoul Deschamps rose to his feet in an instant and helped the three women from under the wrecked cab. Then he gasped: "I did my best," and he fainted.

"I never saw a man drive as that man did," said William Wright, of 32 Walnut Street, who was standing near the corner when the cab turned over. "I saw the horse galloping down the hill, then I saw the driver stand up and just pull the horse around the corner, and he had everything safe when the wheel came off."

"I did it for the best," were the only words which Deschamps could murmur, as he lay on a couch in his home, at 10 School Street.

Exhibits at the Grenfell Hall.

On exhibition at the Grenfell Hall of the new Seamen's Institute, there are a collection of mats which were brought here by Dr. Grenfell from St. Anthony and other extreme points on the Newfoundland Coast. The mats illustrate the splendid workmanship that can be produced by people of the far north with so few advantages as they would do credit to the hand of any artist. They are of exquisite design, depicting in various colors the reindeer, caribou, Labrador dogs, icebergs, polar bears, crafts, in collision with icebergs and other picturesque sceneries of Labrador life. Scores of people have visited the exhibits with pleasure. Amongst the visitors being their Excellencies Governor and Mrs. Davidson, who expressed themselves delighted with the beautiful and artistic work of those who are shut out from modern civilization. The mats are for sale and Manager Jones, of the Institute is already booking orders for them.

George Stephenson.

By H. L. RANN.

George Stephenson, the author of the steam locomotive and the Janus-faced cow catcher, was born in England on this date, in the year 1781. He was a poor boy, and if he had not thought of the locomotive he would probably have remained poor at a very gratifying rate of speed.

At the time George was born the extra-fare train and the parlor car with telephone and shower bath attachment had not been heard of. When people wanted to go anywhere they slipped the harness onto a pair of oxen and wended their way at the rate of about two short wends per day. There was not much indiscriminate and tenacious visiting done in those days as there is now, and a man could come home in the evening without finding a flock of ingrating relatives camped in the front hall with telescope grips and an air of complete satisfaction with their lot. That was the golden age.

As a young man, Stephenson had tinkered with a traction engine until he knew every part by its first name, and one day he decided to put one of these engines on rails and see how far it would run without killing somebody who was looking on. When the neighbors heard of George's intentions they called at his house with their needlework and informed Mrs. Stephenson that she had married the prize maniac of the nineteenth century. People who owed George for repairing their congested plumbing and spark plugs refused to pay him because they said he was nine-tenths non compos mentis and one tenth crazy. His life was very sad at this time.

Finally, however, Stephenson got his engine on the track and soon was able to maintain a speed of ten miles an hour for several feet. All was changed now. He became immensely wealthy, learned how to number his checks and had his washing done at the laundry. People who had never called on Mrs. Stephenson used to drive up and leave engraved cards wrapped up in cigarette papers on the piano, and she was made fourth vice-president of the Ladies' Kensington. George was soon covered with honors and pound notes, and lived to see the time when politicians could ride all over England on an annual pass.

At the Yarmouth Y. M. C. A. Boys' Camp, held at Tusket Falls in August, I found MINARD'S LINIMENT most beneficial for sun burn, an immediate relief for colic and toothache.

Trampled on by Horse

On Saturday evening Hon. J. D. Ryan's horse was frightened by a street car and while attempting to bolt trampled upon a boy who was crossing the street. The lad was picked up in an unconscious state and driven to his home. The victim was badly shaken and sustained slight bruises but no bones were broken.

Weston Walking Again

75-Year-Old Pedestrian Starts in a 1,500 Mile Tramp.

New York, June 2.—Edward Payson Weston, the famous long distance pedestrian, who has twice crossed the continent afoot, started to-day on a 1,500 mile tramp to Minneapolis. The 75-year-old walker expects to complete the journey in sixty days, excluding Sundays, and is due to arrive on Saturday, August 2nd, where he is to lay the corner stone of the new Minneapolis Athletic Club building. His route will take him through the States of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. He will be accompanied by an auto, containing two assistants, to provide for safety and comfort.

The Rival Leaders in Australian Politics.

"A General Election campaign over the whole of the Commonwealth is now in progress. There are," says the Daily Chronicle, "some remarkable similarities between the rival leaders—Mr. Fisher, the Labor Prime Minister, and Mr. Cook, the Leader of the Liberal Opposition. Both were coal-miners here in the old country, and both became miners again on emigrating to Australia, although Mr. Fisher went in for gold, whereas Mr. Cook went down to coal."

"Both Mr. Fisher and Mr. Cook also became secretaries of miners' organizations, and each displayed such capacity that he was returned by his 'mates' to Parliament. Both, too, in their mining days, mastered shorthand, and Mr. Cook possesses a certificate of his competency to take down 160 words a minute. Although strong political opponents, they are close personal friends, and frequently play billiards together—the principal recreation in the Commonwealth Parliament House, but not yet permitted at Westminster."

Special to Evening Telegram. CALCUTTA, To-day.

A society organized for the purpose of waging war on British Rule in India has been discovered. Acting on information laid before him which resulted in the search of the house of his own son, Deputy Magistrate Midnapur, of the Bengal Police, arrested forty-four Bengalees of good family on a charge of conspiracy to carry out wholesale massacres. The documents found in the house contained proposals for corrupting the Sepoy's Establishment and military centres. Plans for a wholesale massacre instead of isolated murder as at present; also a list of the names of members of the Society. The police searched other houses and found abundant evidence to show the widespread nature of the plot.

Mr. John F. Ryan, of this city, now a resident of Halifax, N.S., and the popular agent for Sherwin Williams Paint, arrived here a couple of days ago on his usual business errand. John's many friends in the old home are always glad to see him.

NOTE OF THANKS.—Mrs. John Murphy wishes to sincerely thank the kind friends who sent wreaths to adorn the casket of her late husband; those who sent messages of sympathy and those who otherwise gave their help in her bereavement.

FORTY DOZEN TROUT.—Messrs. Frank Woods, James McGrath and Michael McDonald who were out at Salmonier for 3 days fishing, returned to the city by Saturday night's train. They had good sport and secured 40 dozen fine trout between them.

PRACTICE.—There will be practice for the Mendelssohn Recital at 9 o'clock to-night in Gower Street Church. All taking part are particularly requested to be present.—jun9, li HORSE WANDERING ABOUT.—Saturday evening Sgt. Mackay found a horse without an owner wandering about the West End. He had it stalled in Mr. John Fitzgerald's stable, Brennan Street, but up to yesterday there was no trace of the owner who belongs to Mundy's Pond.

SEVERELY HURT.—As the train was coming into the station at Holyrood a horse owned by Mr. O'Rourke and attached to an express took fright and dashed off. The vehicle collided with a telegraph pole and was wrecked and Mr. O'Rourke who was seated in the express was thrown out and severely cut about the head and face.

ARRESTED UNDER WARRANT.—Saturday evening, two young men residents of the neighborhood of Mundy Pond, were arrested under warrant. They are charged with complicity in the destruction of a fence there owned by Mr. A. Snow. This section of late has become notorious for rows and disorders. A feud exists between some of the people, and collisions are frequent and violent.

REGATTA MATTERS.—The Regatta Committee of last year will meet in the T. A. Armoury to-night at 8 o'clock when the business for 1913 will be wound up and later a new committee to look after this year's regatta will be appointed. No doubt to-night's meeting will be largely attended. President Hiscock and the "Old Guard" intend that the Regatta of 1913 will be a memorable one.

FOGOTA'S FISHERY NEWS.—From Capt. Barbour, of the Fogota, we learn that codfish are plentiful at some places north, and at most harbors there is a good sign. About 20 traps out at Seldom landed between them from 800 to 1,000 qts. last week. At Change Islands some of the traps hauled as high as 70 and 80 qts. The rest did fairly. The hook and line men have not done much to date.

FOGOTA ARRIVES.—The s.s. Fogota, Capt. Baxter Barbour, arrived here from the northward at 8.30 last evening. The ship made a very good run north and reached Change Islands Friday morning and left there after a delay of two hours. She had fine weather on the run north but not so coming south as owing to fog she had to lay up two nights, one at Frederickton and the other at Valleyfield. She brought 100 packages of freight and 30 passengers.

S. A. Revival Services.

The special meetings at the S. A. Citadel yesterday, drew great crowds at night every seat was taken, many having to stand throughout the entire service. Adj. Hargrove was the speaker, taking his text from Rev. 22 chap. 17th verse: "Whosoever will," and for twenty-five minutes while he talked to them of the height and depth and length and breadth of the great invitation and the provision which God had made for all mankind, likening it to a mother who died on Saturday, and who a few days before had called him in that she might make some provision for her children before she passed away, the great audience was moved to tears, and when the call for penitents was made, the first to respond were two men, and then from all parts of the building they came the gallery included, until the penitent form was filled with seeking, sobbing men and women. To-morrow night, Rev. Mr. Thomas, of the Congregational Church will preach, and Mrs. Cochrane, acting Deaconess of George St. Church, will sing. The Junior Brass Band will furnish the music. All are welcome. Seats free.—J.M.

Schooner Ashore

Lumber Laden for St. John's. We learn by the Fogota, that the schooner Nettle R., a vessel of 70 tons, lumber laden from Dog Bay to the Horwood Lumber Co., St. John's, went ashore Friday evening coming down the Bay, and going on a sunk-ron rock there which is charted. The vessel made too bold, hence the mishap. The weather was fine and when the Fogota left that section a large scow from Horwood and a schooner were alongside taking her cargo off to lighten her. Capt. Barbour thinks she will come off all right, when any necessary repairs will be effected.

Hilarious Comedy at Rossley's.

To-night there is a great treat in store for the patrons of Rossley's Theatre. The Lorraine Buchanan Co. will appear in a very laughable sketch entitled "First Aid to the Wounded." During the act Billy De Vans will sing "Here's to Love," taken from the Sunshine Girl, now playing in New York and London. Every one is delighted with this talented company and Billy DeVans can always draw a big house with his singing alone. Miss Buchanan is arranging a fine act, for which Jack Rossley does the comedy, and we all know what that means. Harry Ingram, who is making quite a hit with his singing, has a beautiful ballad for to-night. There are Pathe weeklies and graphics of the very latest events purchased by Rossley while abroad, and the Star orchestra with Prof. Ryall as leader. The Rossley Theatre has become a household word, noted for a clever, clean, refined and wholesome show.

Both Went to the Floor

Ghent, Belgium, June.—George Carpenter, the French heavyweight, today won the heavyweight championship of Europe by knocking out Bombardier Wells, the British champion, in the fourth round. Carpenter himself took the count of nine in the first round and came up bleeding. In the second Wells soon had the man to the ropes, seemingly landing where he pleased. A left hook floor-book floored Carpenter.

In the third the Frenchman discovered the Bombardier's weak stomach, showering blows in the mid-section crumpled up the Englishman and sent him reeling with a hard swing to the jaw.

In round 4, Carpenter continued boring in. He missed a hard right as a result of which both the fighters slipped to the floor. They were up immediately and Carpenter landed a left to the body, following this with a right to the solar plexus, which floored Wells for the count. The Englishman had a considerable advantage in weight and height.

Here's a Tip.

A Lakewood woman has made a wonderful invention and she hasn't protected it by patent or copyright, so it is now available for everybody. Listen to it:

A friend of hers was calling the other day and she said: "How do you know when your husband forgets to mail the letters you give him in the morning?"

"Oh, that's easy. I always put a card addressed to myself in the bunch if I don't receive that card in the next day. I know that he has been delinquent. And I can prove it on him. And it only costs one cent!"

THE CLUTHA HERE.—The brig. Clutha, Capt. Joyce, arrived here Saturday, molasses laden from Barbadoes. The vessel made the run up in 17 days and had fine weather.
