WHEN LOVE AT ALL STAGES OF LIFE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XXV.
For Another's Sake.
He stopped and turned aside. Lord Carfield sank into the chair, and covered his eyes with his hands, and the constable retired with his prisoner.

At sight of them the crowd, which had been impatiently waiting at the front, set up a roar; but as Faradeane looked down at them, something in his face silenced them, and a man's voice cried out:

"Shame on ye! What'll ye judge a man guilty 'fore he's tried?"
It was Alford, and he forced himself to the front, and made a lane through the mob by the simple expedient of swinging his huge arm. "Don't be cast down, sir. We know you're innocent, right enough; but most of us have had too much liquor. Now, make way there!"

"Thank you, Alford," said Faradeane, simply, and the three passed through the crowd, which closed up behind them, and followed them to the end of the drive.

The constable had taken the precaution to order a carriage to await them at this point, and he and Faradeane got in, and were driven sharply away.

Faradeane sank back with a sigh, and closed his eyes, and remained silent for a few minutes; then he said, quietly:

"Where are you taking me?"
"To Wainford, sir," replied the constable. "You'll be more comfortable in the regular prison there than in the Hawkwood lockup."
"Thank you," said Faradeane. "That is thoughtful of you."
The man eyed him with a strange expression.

"Come, sir," he said, bending forward. "You know, and I know, that you didn't do this. Why not up and out with the truth? If you didn't like to do it before all these people, why not tell me? I know it's not quite regular, but I'll be hanged if I use a word against you!"

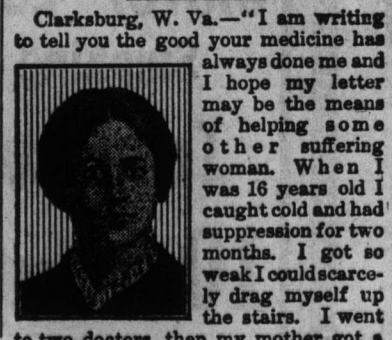

Faradeane shook his head.
"You mean well," he said, wearily. "I appreciate and understand your kindness, my good fellow; but you cannot help me. You must do your duty."
"Yes, I must do that," said the man, gravely. "But every minute you let this charge hang over you, settles it more firmly down, and—there's danger in it, sir."
"Yes, I know that," assented Faradeane, calmly.

They reached Wainford, and found the prison officials prepared for them by telegraph.

The governor, as he read the warrant, glanced once or twice at the pale face.

"All right and regular, Wilcox, I

The Woman's Medicine. Good for All Ages. Mrs. Harold Smith's Experience.

Clarkburg, W. Va.—"I am writing to tell you the good your medicine has always done me and I hope my letter may be the means of helping some other suffering woman. When I was 16 years old I caught cold and had suppression for two months. I got so weak I could scarcely drag myself up the stairs. I went to two doctors, then my mother got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it. I never had any more trouble and got strong fast. Then I took it again before my little girl was born and it helped me a good deal and I give the Compound the credit for it. Then this spring I felt very badly again, but I took the Compound and have been well all summer. I cannot be grateful enough for your medicine." — Mrs. HAROLD M. SMITH, 470 Water Street, Clarkburg, W. Va.

suppose?" he said. "No mistake, eh?"
"No, sir," said the constable, and he rapidly recounted the facts, and showed the revolver.
The governor nodded.
"Anything to say?" he asked of the prisoner, courteously.
"Nothing," replied Faradeane, gravely.
The governor signed to a turnkey, and Faradeane was conducted to his cell.

CHAPTER XXVI.
"Whiffl Murder."
The shades of evening fell upon the wedding day; the guests had gone, with one theme upon their lips; the village was all astir with excitement; the Grange was thronged with a hustling crowd, all talking of the tragic event which had fallen like a thunderbolt upon the marriage festivities.

Olivia lay still unconscious. The Wainford doctor was in close attendance, and had issued a strict command for profound quiet. A hush deep as that which waits on death prevailed throughout the great house, which a few hours ago had been brimming over with talk and laughter.

Beside the bed, his white head buried in his hands, sat the squire, and, kneeling with her beloved mistress'— hand in hers, was Bessie. She was almost as white as the face that lay so calm and still on the pillow, but every now and then her lips twitched and a spasm of agony passed across her face.

Downstairs in the library Bartley Bradstone paced to and fro. He had got a decanter of brandy from the dining-room cellaret, and every now and then he filled a glass with unsteady hand.

Now and again he stole to the door and, opening it cautiously, listened intently. Then, as no sound reached him from the room upstairs, he went back to his brandy and his restless, fearful pacing.

For hours, far into the night, Olivia lay wrapped in the deep unconsciousness which is so nearly akin to the great sleep; then suddenly the doctor held up his hand and bent over her.

"Do not speak to her!" he whispered to the squire, who rose trembling. She opened her eyes and looked round dully and vacantly, then she murmured, faintly:

"Where am I?"
Bessie drew herself up and put her arm across her.

"Here, Miss Olivia, here in your own room, at home, at the Grange. I am with you—Bessie—and the squire."

A look of relief crossed the lovely face.

"Thank God!" she breathed. "I—I made an effort to rise. 'Where is he?'"

"Hush, hush, my darling!" said the doctor. "He is downstairs in the library."
She sank back, and her lips quivered.

"In the library. Here, and—and safe! Ah, what a dreadful dream!"
"Bartley is safe, quite safe, of course dear," he said, soothingly.

She started, and her eyes dilated, as they fixed themselves on his face. "Bartley Bradstone! Is he here? Father!" and her voice rang with an awful dread. "You will not let him take me away, you will not—"

"No, no, no, dear!" said Bessie, quick to divine her fear. "No one shall take you!"

She sank back again, but tossed her head from one side to the other, her eyes glittering feverishly.

"I—I am trying to think; I can't remember! What has happened? Something dreadful—dreadful! Tell me, Bessie—tell me, or I shall go mad."

The squire bent over her; but the doctor held up his hand.

"Let the girl speak to her," he whispered.

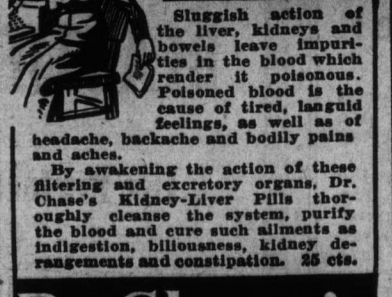

With the tears filling her eyes, Bessie drew the hot, restless head upon her bosom.

"Is it this mistake about Faradeane, miss?" she said, with forced carelessness.

"Yes, yes!" panted Olivia, her eyes seeming to glow upon Bessie's face. "Tell me!"

"It's all a mistake," said Bessie, calmly, setting her teeth almost defiantly, "a stupid, senseless mistake that people will be sorry for—" and unconsciously her voice rose.

Fatigue from Poisoned Blood

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

"My poor girl!"
The doctor went round and, taking his arm, led him outside into the corridor.

"Come, squire," he said, gently but firmly, "you mustn't give way; our only chance is to keep her free from excitement. If I can only keep her quiet she will be safe. If not—the first thing to do is to get rid of Mr Bradstone."

"Get rid of him?" groaned the squire.

"Yes," he said; "his presence here in the house affects her; there is no accounting for the fancies of fever. Tell him how ill she is, and persuade him to go home, so that I may tell her he has gone. Leave the rest to me. I can manage very well with Bessie for nurse; and no one else must enter the room. You understand?"

The squire grasped his hand and wrung it.

"Yes, I understand," he said, sorrowfully. "I will do as you say—if he will go."

"Tell him her life depends on it," said the doctor, sternly.

The squire went downstairs into the library, and Bartley Bradstone turned and faced him. His eyes were blood-shot, his lips hot and dry, and his hands plucked nervously at the edge of his coat.

"Is—is she better?" he demanded, huskily.

The squire shook his head.

"My poor child is very ill, Bartley," he said. "I fear there is—danger! You must go home!"

"Go home!" repeated Bartley Bradstone, dully.

"Yes," said the squire; "the fact of your being here in the house agitates her—her mind is wandering. You will go home, will you not? I will send to you every hour."

To his surprise, Bartley Bradstone made no remonstrance.

"I'll go if you—she wishes it," he said, staring at the carpet like a man in a dream. "Yes, of course."

"I'll tell them to get a carriage—and yet the noise. Will you walk?"

"Yes," he said; then he looked up with a sudden start of fear, and shuddered. "Yes, I'll walk; but—but I'd like to have some one—one of the servants with me. I'm—I'm upset, you see," he stammered, wiping the cold sweat from his brow.

Germany Facing
Disaster

(Frank H. Simonds in New York Tribune.)
The chance for victory was gone when Falkenhayn came, unless the victory could be won by relative minor effort and by exhausting Russia and Russia before Britain was enabled to escape by retreat; but the endured by the magnificent resistance at the Meuse. And if the Marne was a victory of generalship, Verdun was a triumph of the soldiers, whose commanders had, for a moment at least, failed them. But Verdun was a complete failure. After eighteen months Falkenhayn failed at the task set for him when he took command. He did not succeed in disposing of either Russia or France, and now not only is Britain in the field, but Italy has long been fighting and Rumania is just enlisted.

If Hindenburg were the supreme genius the German people believe him to be it would be a good sign of the change in command. But as it is it is impossible not to believe that the change has been made for political reasons and an inferior commander has replaced an able strategist—who has failed at an impossible task simply because the change will have a momentary effect upon the German people, whose discouragement can no longer be doubted. It may even be conjectured that the Kaiser made the change with great reluctance, for Falkenhayn is his protégé and his personal selection.

Hindenburg's task is colossal. He has at once to decide whether he will shorten his lines. If he does so do this he will presently find himself in the same situation as that of Napoleon in 1813, when the Emperor was defeated rather than militarily. He ates and kept his army so that in Eastern Germany that it was not completely destroyed and he brought back to the Rhine a tattered remnant of that splendid force, supplied by the main by the famous graduates of the Marie-Louise, the boys of the class of 1813, who performed miracles for a falling cause.

But to shorten the lines is a confessed defeat. Rumor has long stated that Hindenburg advocated the withdrawal of the German armies from the Western and the Vistula. If a retreat would give Germany a fighting line in the East and release some of the corps for service in the South, it would mean the surrender of the Russian conquests save a small portion of Poland; it would mean the Germany Facign Disaster.

(Frank H. Simonds in New York Tribune.)

The chance for victory was gone when Falkenhayn came, unless the victory could be won by relatively minor effort and by exhausting France and Russia before Britain was ready. Russia escaped by retreat; France endured by the magnificent resistance at the Meuse. And if the Marne was a victory of generalship, Verdun was a triumph of the soldiers, whose commanders had, for a moment at least, failed them. But Verdun was an absolute failure. After eighteen months Falkenhayn failed at the task set for him when he took command. He did not succeed in disposing of either Russia or France, and now not only is Britain in the field, but Italy has long been fighting and Rumania has just enlisted.

If Hindenburg were the supreme genius the German people believe him to be it would be a good sign, this change in command. But as it stands it is impossible not to believe that the change has been made for political reasons and an inferior commander has replaced an able strategist who has failed at an impossible task simply because the change will have a momentary effect upon the German people, whose discouragement can no longer be doubted. It may even be conjectured that the Kaiser made the change with great reluctance, for Falkenhayn is his protegee and his personal selection.

Hindenburg's task is colossal. He has at once to decide whether he will shorten his lines. If he does not do this he will presently find himself in the same situation as that of Napoleon in 1813, when the Emperor obeyed political rather than military dictates and kept his army so long in Eastern Germany that it was practically destroyed and he brought back to the Rhine a tattered remnant of that splendid force, supplied in the main by the famous graduation of Marie-Louise, the boys of the class of 1813, who performed miracles for a falling cause.

But to shorten the lines is to confess defeat. Rumor has long insisted that Hindenburg advocated the withdrawal of the German armies behind the Niemen and the Vistula. Such a retreat would give Germany a strong line in the East and release some corps for service in the South, but it would mean the surrender of all the Russian conquests save a small portion of Poland; it would mean a second resigning of all Galicia and Bukovina east of the Dunaefec, and it would mean the complete destruction of Bethmann-Hollweg's map of Europe. Hindenburg can decide to abandon the Balkans, but this means the collapse of Turkey and the opening of the Dardanelles to Russian munitionment. It means the change in front of Bulgaria; it means the arrival at the Danube of the Balkan armies of the Allies and a new peril to Hungary. It means the final collapse of the German dream of a road to the Near East. It means closing the iron circle about the Central Powers, not merely for the war, but for as long as men can now see in the future.

Again, there is the option of retreating in the West. A retreat to the Meuse or to the German frontier would release enough corps to hold the Eastern and the Balkan conquests for many months. But it would be the greatest of all confessions, because it would be a long retreat in the portion of the battleground most familiar to the world, and the effect in France could not be exaggerated.

If there is no retreat at any point there will be disaster at one and perhaps at many points before another year. Germany has not inexhaustible resources in man power. She has mobilized more men proportionately and suffered greater proportionate losses than any of her foes. She has long ago passed the maximum of the regular formations which she can maintain. Her entire resources are taxed to keep up the number of corps she has in the field. In the last three months she and her Austrian ally have had to find more than 1,250,000 men to replace losses of the fighting.

The real value of the entrance of Rumania on the Allied side is that it instantly brings in new formations of first line troops which can only be met by the transfer of German or Austrian troops from some other front or from the reserves marked for immediate use on some other front. In this respect it has the value of the familiar "last straw." No one should mistake the fact that we are come to a great crisis in the war, the greatest since the Marne. Germany must now by her military policy confess defeat or court it. She must either retire far behind her present line or hold lines too long for her man power, and presently pay the penalty, as Lee did at Richmond and Napoleon at Leipzig.

And it is reasonable to conclude that in calling Hindenburg, whose unfitness for the position he must know, the German Emperor has prepared for defeat. He has given the German people the commander they trust, he has given the commander an impossible task and he has given it only after one of the really great generals of the present war has failed to perform a miracle after a supreme and brilliant effort.

Germany may still be able to hold all her present lines for many months, for the greater part of the next year conceivably, but the longer she stays on this too-extended front the more complete and the more terrible will be the ultimate disaster.

Germans are Now in a Sack Along the Somme Front

Next Year British Will Have Four Times as Many Guns and Incredibly Large Ammunition Supply - All Think War Will Last Over Next Summer.

(By Frederick Palmer, Associated Press Correspondent.)

With the British Army in France, Sept. 5, via London, Sept. 7, 4.45 a.m.—The British feel that their uphill work in this latest offensive is over, with the exception of the taking of Ginchy.

For over two months now their fight has been one to gain high ground over the broad commanding front. Gullionmont places them in possession of the last of the old second-line trenches, and from the Somme to Thiepval the Germans have now been blasted out of their old positions.

"This is not the only point in our favor," said a British staff officer. The Germans chose their ground when they built this line of fortifications, which they considered by their own admission to be invulnerable. When the British first smashed through, the Germans said that we were in a sack. So we were, in one sense.

"But we had to make an opening in that solid line of defence as a start in our plans. We knew the hardest work would come after the great main attack, and this is so far accomplished that it is the Germans now who are in a sack.

"If we prefer to end the summer offensive and wait for spring when we shall have quadruple the number of guns and so much ammunition that we shall have to keep up daily a battle of guns on four times the length of the present front with all the shellfire of the biggest day in this summer's offensive, in order to consume the supplies arriving daily across the Channel, why, our present position of artillery and infantry advantage on the Somme front in settled trench warfare means simply that we could kill two Germans to every Briton the Germans kill. This was the first step. What the others are to be only the commanders of the Allied armies know."

When the Armies Entense.

The Associated Press correspondent, who has been a year with the army, in his goings and comings, meets many officers and soldiers. One of the striking things to him is how often some gain which elates the army does not elate either the British or the French public. Again the public entenses over some event which the army opinion regards as incidental to the day's work.

The British and French successes this week had an extraordinary effect on both armies.

The ability of the French to make a second drive over the broad front and the same sector as that of the big offensive of the first of July brought conviction to the professional sceptics.

"Go over and see the French," said the British officer. "If you want to see an army with its head in the air." Not even the weather can dampen the high spirits of both armies. The rain has been of the persistent pitchfork, chilly autumn style. Men who came out of the trenches plastered with chalky clay, who had been charging under a weight of sixty pounds equipment and then lying in miniature ponds made by shell holes or on the wet earth digging and wallowing in the mud, say Gullionmont is taken, and that pays for their hardships.

War Over After Next Summer.

The many new highways which the British build by bringing ponderous road-making machines from England, and the new railways which are part of Sir Douglas Haig's policy, have saved transports from being mired. Supplies have gone up as usual through the storms on schedule time. In the camps at the rear the soldiers make themselves little tents with their rubber blankets, under which they cluster for shelter from the downpour. They manage to keep partly dry, but those in the fighting line expect to be saturated.

Whether private soldier in his shelter tent or general in his automobile if you ask them that old question, "When do you think the war will be over?" you get no opinion of any possible conclusion short of next summer.

They all take many months of fighting to come no less, for granted that Rumania's entry and the artillery results in the Somme battle mean that the Entente will dictate the terms of peace. This confidence may be wrong, but there is no doubt as to its existence, even more strongly than ever before.

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

The remarkable economy of the incandescent gas lamp is by no means either its chief—or even an important—claim for popularity. It meets better than any other source of artificial light the requirements of ideal light.

In the color of the light produced it is far superior to any other illuminant in general and universal use. The investigations of acknowledged authorities indicate that for the approximation of artificial daylight the gas mantle has at least one and one-half times the value of the carbon-filament electric lamp.

This quality is highly desirable, indeed absolutely essential where the approximation of daylight color values is important. For lighting shops, displaying haberdashery, suitings, gowns, millinery, etc., the incandescent gas lamp is not even remotely approached by any other incandescent lamp.

Of all the manifold advantages of gas light, perhaps the most important is its favorable effect upon the eyes.

The development of the incandescent electric lamp with its intense brilliant and glaring filament has been accompanied by hitherto unheard-of prevalence of eye troubles and diseases which are forcing themselves upon the attention of the medical fraternity. This is resulting in a greater appreciation of the soft mellow quality of gas light and is rapidly enlarging its field of use.—July 23, 1904.

Everyday Etiquette.

"George Smith always wants to stop and talk on the street. Do you think that is polite?" asked Jean. "A young girl should not allow a man to detain her in conversation on the street. He should walk by her side until their talk is completed," replied sister Madeline.

The War Situation.

It has become a commonplace that there is no room for strategy in the fighting of this war, where huge armies lie interlocked over hundreds of miles and flanking movements are impossible or rapidly obliterated. Like many other commonplaces, it is apt to be suddenly upset. It is still true of the West front, and probably will be until peace comes; but in the huge arena of the East things are rapidly shaping themselves into a disposition of force which would delight the heart of Napoleon. If large and brilliant strategic manoeuvres are impracticable for the same reason on all the fronts there, it is not true of the fronts themselves; and both the Allied and Teutonic general command are faced with the problem of making large decisions which may prove vital.

That this is so is shown by the variety of opinion among the foremost military experts upon the merits of the Balkan situation. Some of them regard the German-Bulgarian invasion of Dobruja as of little moment; the Times military expert calls it a serious danger to Roumania, whom he even compares to Serbia of last autumn. Some, too, criticise Roumania for going so eagerly after Transylvania, while others counter that Austria, even more than Bulgaria, is the weak link that should be snapped. Undoubtedly it is most important to the Allies that their greatest weight should be thrown where it is most needed, and it is by no means easy to find where that is.

The war is shifting more and more to the East, where it is the opinion of many besides Hindenburg that it properly belongs. Next year, probably, it will be fought out there almost entirely. Fortunately, this cannot be until Germany has withdrawn in the West, not merely to an intermediate line, of whatever strength, but all the way to the Rhine. It is most unlikely that Joffre will attempt to go further: long before that happens more accessible avenues will have been opened elsewhere. And the mere moral effect of the retreat should do much to counteract the defensive strength that Germany would gain thereby.

Germany is playing a bold game in throwing large reinforcements into Bulgaria and driving at Dobruja. It may or may not have been anticipated by our side, but there can be no doubt of its success so far. It is being countered in the most effective way in Macedonia. Roumania is in no serious danger as long as Bulgaria is, and Bulgaria is in very serious danger indeed. The victories of the Serbians (there are French and Russians there also) at Florina and Lake Ostrovo pave the way for the recapture of Monastir. No one will grudge them the satisfaction they must feel. It is likely to be increased very soon, for the great drive up the Vardar valley is under way, which alone will restore Serbia to her gallant people. It seems, too, as if the intervention of Greece can now be counted on definitely; if not, the new Cabinet is not likely to prove longer lived than its predecessors. Underneath the noisy surface and the clash of arms there must be proceeding a battle royal of the diplomats. For the present all eyes are turned to Dobruja and the Bulgarian campaign. If their invasion is repelled or halted all uneasiness on our side will disappear. That it should be possible at all is proof of the immense strength of the inside position of the Central Powers and the value of the Berlin-Constantinople artery, which must be cut at all costs.

Regret will be general in Newfoundland at the news of the death of Sir Cavendish Boyle. He will be remembered as one of the most popular and able Governors that have administered the affairs of the Colony. He came to Newfoundland from British Guiana in 1901 and left it to become Governor of Mauritius in 1904, retiring in 1911. His name will be long remembered here, for it is that of the author of the graceful verses that has been accepted as our National Ode.

We learn from private sources that Major Franklin has been awarded the high distinction of the D.S.O. His many friends will hear with pleasure of this recognition of his brilliant services in the field, an honor which he shares with Newfoundland.

The Royal Picture Theatre, Star Hall, will open on Thursday after the arrival of the Florizel with the latest and best pictures from America. WM. J. RYALL, Manager.—sep18, 11

A fruit stain on tablecloth or napkin, if wet with camphor before water touches it, will entirely disappear.

Have a reserve stock of dishes generally used by the family, and much trouble will be saved when extra guests arrive.

Cut the bloom and stalk of the sweet Williams, to the ground, and they will put up new shoots and continue blooming.

When serving sliced pineapples it is much better to slice and sugar it the evening before. This makes it very juicy and sweet.

Stockings should not be ironed, if you have no mangle to put them through, fold them smoothly with the hands and roll them up.

The most hygienic curtain arrangement for a sleeping room is a short curtain on the lower half of the window and a shade above.

A tennis racket should have its strings rubbed with vaseline, if it is put away for some time. This will prevent the strings from breaking.

BRITISH MAKE ADDITIONAL GAINS.

LONDON.—British forces south of the Somme have made additional gains according to an official German headquarters issued last night. Advance since Friday along six miles is estimated from the line; 1,700 additional prisoners have been captured the last 24 hours. To-day, Saturday, south of the Somme we continued our attack on the German positions. Further progress made; since yesterday we have a depth of from one to two miles in front of six miles. The prisoners taken to-day include 1,000 of whom 51 are officers. The number of prisoners captured during the last 24 days is 115,000 of whom 115 are officers. 150 present six guns and over 1,000 rifles are reported taken on the Somme. A considerable quantity of material was captured. The result of aerial fighting on Saturday was brought down in figures at noon. Two more of our aeroplanes were missing, making altogether 15. Additional gains along the front were made to-day and secured by the British last night their offensive against the Somme. The War Office announced this afternoon, the Danube front, 100 miles long, was taken. In a victory, 1,000 yards from the Somme, the British captured a battery of 100 yards from the Somme. Quantities of war material and numerous additional prisoners were taken.

SUNK BY GERMANS

MARSEILLES, France.—The British steamer, the Butetown, and the Swedish Prince have been sunk by German submarines. The crews were rescued here to-day.

HAIG CONGRATULATED

LONDON.—King George sent the following message to General Haig, British Commander-in-Chief: "I congratulate you on the brilliant success achieved. I have never known complete victory won by our arms. The success of your efforts. The suits of to-day confirm your success."

ST. PIERRE BOMBED

PARIS, Sept. 18.—On the Somme front the British attacked the German trenches northeast of Bery. A German attack against our positions at Santerre was repelled.

Aviation was extremely active. We attacked 20 German aeroplanes, thirty on Romania on Mondelingen front. German aeroplanes were hit by shells during the evening a plane was shot down. In the Stigma district the British attacked the German positions around Bacuvaro and advanced west of Lugos. Serbian troops are attacking the Bulgarians who are retreating. The Serbians advanced forward with their tanks. They have crossed the Danube at Bred, ten kilometers from Florina. The guns taken from the Bulgarians in this district. Our left wing captured German and French troops, 100 line on Malareka helped to advance victorious district.

BRITISH MAKE ADDITIONAL PROGRESS.

LONDON, Sept. 17. British forces south of the Ancre have made additional progress, according to an official from general headquarters issued last night. The advance since Friday along a front of six miles is estimated from one to two miles; 1,700 additional prisoners have been captured the last two days making more than 4,000. The text reads: To-day, Saturday, south of the Ancre we continued our attack on certain localities. Further progress has been made; since yesterday we advanced to a depth of from one to two miles on a front of six miles. The number of prisoners taken to-day is over 1,700 of whom 51 are officers. The total number of prisoners captured in the fighting of the last two days is over 4,000, of whom 115 are officers. Up to the present six guns and over 50 machine guns are reported taken or destroyed. A considerable quantity of war material was captured. Further reports of aerial fighting on Sept. 15th bring the total German machines destroyed to 15. Another hostile kite balloon was brought down in flames this afternoon. Two more of our machines are missing, making altogether six.

Additional gains along a front of more than a mile and a half were secured by the British last night. Pressing their offensive north of the Somme, the War Office announced this afternoon, the Danube front, about a mile long, was taken. In addition territory, 1,000 yards from near Courcellette, was captured. At Moquet farm the British forces finally took the position, for which the opposing armies had been contending for weeks. Quantities of war materials and numerous additional prisoners were captured.

SUNK BY GERMAN SUBS.

MARSEILLES, France, Sept. 17. The British steamers Lianogor and Butetown, and the Swedish steamer Princeton have been sunk by German subs. The crews were saved and arrived here to-day.

HAIG CONGRATULATED.

LONDON, Sept. 17. King George sent to-day the following message to General Sir Douglas Haig, British Commander in France: "I congratulate you and my brave troops on the brilliant success just achieved. I have never doubted that complete victory will ultimately crown our efforts. The splendid results of to-day confirm our faith."

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, Sept. 16 (Midnight). On the Somme front the day was rather quiet. We advanced north of Bouchevaines and captured a trench northeast of Berry. A German counter-attack against our positions of Belloy on Sarterre and Barleux failed.

Aviation was exceedingly active. Sixty shells of 120 calibre and six of 200 were dropped on Ut Kingen factories, thirty on Rombach and thirty on Mondelingen factories. The railroad track south of Metz was also bombed. Spincourt and Longuyon stations were hit by sixty shells. During the evening a plane dropped two bombs on Rheims. Two civilians including a little child were killed and one person wounded.

In the Sigmars district and all along the Vardar the cannonading is fierce. Around Bacukavo and Seres mounts were several skirmishes, our troops advancing west of Lake Ostrovo. The Serbian troops are throwing back the Bulgarians who are fleeing in disorder. The Serbians continued their advance forward with extreme rapidity. They have crossed the River Bred, ten kilometres northeast of Florina. The guns taken by the Serbians in this district amount to 32. Our left wing composed of Russian and French troops, have crossed the line on Malazorka heights and continue to advance victoriously in the Florina district. Our aerial fleet is bombing Monastir.

FRENCH PROGRESS.

PARIS, Sept. 17. The French have captured all the ground between Vermandovillers and Denicourt on the one side and between Denicourt and Berny on the other south of the Somme River, according to an official issued by the War Office to-night. They have also taken those portions of the villages of Vermandovillers and Berny which remained in possession of the Germans; 700 unwounded prisoners were captured.

On the Somme front to-day it was comparatively quiet according to an official issued by the War Office to-night. The French are making progress north of Bouchevaines. A German aeroplane dropped several bombs on Rheims killing two civilians.

BELGIAN FORCES CAPTURE TABORA.

LONDON, Sept. 17. Belgian forces operating in German East Africa have captured Tabora, the principal German fortress in the territory, according to a Belgian official received here.

IN MACEDONIA.

PARIS, Sept. 17. French and Russian forces advancing rapidly on the western end of the Entente Macedonian front, have arrived in front of Florina, close to the Serbian border, south of Monastir. The French war office announced in this afternoon's official. Further east the Serbians are advancing on both sides of Lake Ostrovo, defeating the Bulgarians in engagements near Kajmaekalan, and continue to throw troops across the river where the Bulgarians are resisting them on the right bank of the river.

ROUMANIAN OFFICIAL.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 17. On the northern and northwestern fronts there were sharp actions on the Streva valley, south of Elbin. On the south front there were skirmishes along the Danube. There is nothing new at Dobrinja.

THE GREEK CABINET.

LONDON, Sept. 17. A despatch from Athens says: The new cabinet was sworn in before King George yesterday. The fate depends upon the policy which, if it is in continuation of the so-called benevolent neutrality, will give it a slight life. The new Premier is considered one of the most clever lawyers in Greece. He lived for a long time in France, and has close relations with British. He is friendly to former Premier Venizelos, although not an active partizan of the Venizeloz policy. The new cabinet is considered here as favorable towards Greece's participation in the war.

ENEMY BATTERIES BOMBED.

LONDON, Sept. 17 (Official). In the early hours of Friday a squadron of naval aeroplanes successfully bombarded enemy's heavy batteries near Ostend on the Belgian coast. All returned safely.

SUCCESSFUL RAID.

LONDON, Sept. 17. A successful raid by the British patrols in the region of Struma, north-east of Salonika, is reported in today's war office statement concerning operations along the Macedonian front.

RUSSIANS TAKE PRISONERS.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 17. The Russian troops have resumed the closing in movement on the Galician town of Halez, southeast of Lemberg, on the Dniester. The war office announced to-day that the Russians were dislodged from positions south of Brzezany on the Blota-Lipa, northeast of Halez and that the Russians were attacking along the Podryzsko-Halez railway where more than 3,000 German prisoners and twenty machine guns were captured.

FRIENDS.

It's hard to know who are your friends, so many men have selfish ends. I take a comrade to my heart, and feed him pie and damson tart, and give him love that's pure and deep, and let him in my woodshed sleep. Then he requests, in dulcet tones, that I shall lend him twenty bones. "I'd gladly lend you all you need," I say in answer. "But indeed, H. C. of L. has stripped me bare—I haven't twenty bucks to spare. If fifty cents will help you out, you're welcome to that much, old scout; but I've a wife and nineteen kids, who are all needing shoes and lids, and it's as much as I can do to dig up for that loving crew." and then my friend comes round no more, to hang his bonnet on the floor, and talk with me of vital things, of sealing wax and cats and kings. Instead, he roasts me through the town, and tries to give me punk renown, as being one who is too tight to help a comrade in a plight. This sort of thing one gets from friends, as through this woozy world he wends.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

ROME, Sept. 17. Italians are pressing the offensive in the Isonzo district with Trieste as their objective. The war office to-day reports further entrenchments on a wide front stormed and captured by Italian infantry who took some 800 additional prisoners.

WHAT BERLIN SAYS.

BERLIN, Sept. 17. Heavy offensive operations by the Russians have been in progress along a large section of the front of Russia and Galicia, the war office announced to-day. The Teutonic forces are holding the ground all along the line except at one sector where the troops of Arch-Duke Charles Francis, resisting the Russian advance toward Halez, were forced back a short distance.

CONSIDERED NULL AND VOID.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17. Ambassador Von Bernstorff to-day informed the State Department that the German Government consider null and void any loan that Belgium may have negotiated in the United States during the German occupation of that country.

THE FALLEN KING OF GREECE.

The language used in the address to King Constantine, drawn up by Venizelos and approved by the Athens demonstration, is clear proof that that King has fallen. It makes no difference that he still sits on the throne; the throne has become only a place to sit on. It was invective, it was not an argument or appeal, except in form; it was a sober and crushing recital of reasons why Constantine had become impossible and must mix no more in politics. It is not so much the fact of the address as the wording of it that explains everything that has happened in Greece since that address was drawn up on Aug. 27. Such language as "You are the victim of your natural and human weakness," is not used toward any kind of ruler until he can rule no more. It is extraordinary language to use toward a King, but it would be extraordinary if used toward a President or a Prime Minister, toward any kind of official who has a vestige of power left. Following upon it, and its demand that all parties be united, Premier Zalmis made himself dictator and prepared for the union of the parties.

So has ended the Government of Constantine. Though he reigns he does not govern; and the Government has been taken away from him by his people because he failed in it, because he had brought his country to the pass so strikingly described in the address: "Instead of Greece being respected by friends and redoubtable to foes, we see her to-day pitted by the one and despised, scorned, and chastised by the other." He becomes a mere spectator of the great events which are about to begin. He sought to guide his country into the path which she did not wish to take, because he was superior in wisdom and knew what was best for her; he guided her into paths of peril and disgrace and she has set him aside. If it is true, that as the address charges, "you hoped that after a German victory you would be able to concentrate in your own hands the whole power of Government and sweep aside our system of liberty," then the disaster of his course is even greater than it appears. For, in that case, he has sought for greater power, and by so seeking has lost even the power he had. Greece is emerging from the cloud of dishonor into which he brought her, and he himself, the individual Constantine, remains under a cloud of dishonor and, what is worse to some minds, of failure. Three years ago, after his military success, he was a popular hero; now he is less to be envied than any man in Greece. It was predicted that this war would be the downfall of some Kings; it has been the downfall of one—N. Y. Times.

Why Do We Care?

By RUTH CAMERON.

"The laws of custom make our spending one evening with her necessary. Al, how I hate this vile custom which obliges us to make slaves of ourselves! to sell the most precious property we boast, our time! And to sacrifice it to every prattling impertinent who demands it!"—Frances Burney.

Why do we bother so about what people, for whom we don't care a continental, think of us? Why do we accept their invitations lest they will think it strange if we don't? Why do we wear ourselves out in cleaning our houses lest they find something to criticize?

Why do we worry lest they put misconstructions on some action? Why give them Power Over Our Happiness?

What difference does it make if they do? We don't care about them, why should we hand them, on a silver platter as it were, this power over our actions and our happiness?

Everything I find myself doing this I am exasperated.

There is a woman who sometimes comes to see me whom I like but dislike. And yet, just because I think she is a first-class housekeeper I make more to-do in putting my house in order for her than for any of those whom I love. Why should I? I don't care for her. Why should I care for her opinion?

I have a neighbour whose mother-in-law lives next door to her.

She Disapproves Of Lying Down In The Morning.

"She watches everything I do," says my neighbour. "Sometimes I work in my garden before I do my housework and I know she thinks that's awful. She doesn't believe in spending so much time on flowers. And sometimes I lie in the hammock for a few minutes in the middle of the forenoon. And she thinks that's terribly lazy. It really makes me miserable to have her criticizing me."

Now this woman hasn't a particle of affection for her mother-in-law (Which I can well understand). But why then should she let her opinion of her make her life miserable?

To be influenced to self-betterment by the opinion of others is a very wise thing.

To let the opinions of others annoy and harass you when you know you are doing what is right and best is very foolish.

Especially when you don't care a continental for those who hold the opinions.

As in Caesar's Time.

The German inspired mind does not yet seem to have arrived at a comprehension of the fact that under the laws of war noncombatants are not prisoners. The fact that a noncombatant is not an enemy is readily enough understood when there is a question of some franchise to be punished; it then sees that, since a noncombatant is not an enemy, it is an offence for him to act as one, and he therefore merits death. But when Germany occupies enemy territory it ceases to be able to understand this fact, and it always acts towards the noncombatants therein as if they were its subjects, and sometimes as if they were its prisoners.

For some time dispatches have been coming in from France depicting the great excitement of the public mind there over the forcible deportation of 25,000 noncombatants from Lille and nearby towns to other regions, to work in the fields as agricultural laborers for their German masters. It has been apparent that no occurrence of the war has horrified and infuriated the French more. Gustave Herve declares that American feelings were no more deeply stirred over the "Lustitia" massacre than are French feelings over the filthy crime committed in the north against our countrymen.

The story of a city suddenly confronted with placards announcing that "the inhabitants will be removed by compulsion and transported to the country"; that "an officer will finally decide what persons are to be conducted to concentration points," and that "whoever attempts to evade removal will be pitilessly punished." At unexpected moments, at any hour of the day and night, soldiers suddenly appear at this house or that. The officer in command of the squad looks over the household, picks out at his own pleasure such members of it, male or female, as he may see fit, and that member or those members must go away with him to a place which he does not reveal. The prayers of fathers and mothers, sons and daughters, are of no avail. The victims have from ten minutes to an hour to get ready. There is not even a drawing by lot; the arbitrary pleasure of the officer is the only law; at his not Marie must go and Jean stay. Some officers doubtless exercised their power with as little cruelty as possible, some did not; in one case an officer politely inquires of a woman to which one of her servants she is most attached, which one she most desires to keep with her, and when she unsuspectingly names the girl, replies, "Then that is the one we will take."

"To dislocate the family by tearing young girls from their homes is no longer war," urges Bishop Charost in his vain appeal to the German commandant. In vain he speaks of the mothers "left alone now," and of the dangers to their daughters from "the promiscuity which fatally accompanies wholesale kidnappings." "You are a father," pleads the Bishop in his useless attempt to move the General, "you know that there is no right more respectable and more healthy in the human order than that of the family."

"At dawn, at 3 o'clock in the morning," writes one distracted woman witness of these scenes, "these heroes, headed by bands with machine guns, fixed bayonets, went to seek women and children, to take them God knows where." Yet some of them, she says, had no heart for it, and had to be encouraged by the fiction that there had been a rebellion in Lille, and that they were punishing the rebels; others said they would rather be back in the trenches at Verdun. The battle against the French defenders of Verdun, the battle against the mothers of Lille, the battle against the soldiers, the battle against the family; there is great room for a preference.

There are precedents. In ancient times no conquering army returned home without bringing a number of noncombatants to work as slaves; in fact this was one of the reasons for waging war; to recruit the labor market. The practice fell into disrepute with the advance of civilization, and was dropped, along with many other ancient practices which have been restored since 1914; for example the killing of merchant Captains who defend their ships from seizure and the bombardment of undefended towns. —New York Times.

Bridge Company Takes the Full Responsibility

And it is Expected That it Will Fulfill the Terms of Its Contract.

Ottawa, September 12—Pending reports from the St. Lawrence Bridge Company, and from the engineers of the Quebec Bridge Commission no action will be taken by the Government in regard to the bridge disaster. The Cabinet had the subject under consideration this afternoon but in the absence of any authoritative engineering report as yet, it was decided to await further particulars. The present expectation is that the St. Lawrence Bridge Company will fulfill the terms of its contract, take full responsibility for the collapse of the central span, and arrange for reconstruction and the final completion of the contract as soon as possible.

It is understood that assurance has already been given to the Government informally by the Bridge Company that it is willing to stand by the terms of its contract and try again. The company is legally bound to complete the bridge according to specifications, and there is a million dollars guarantee on deposit with the Government. Under the circumstances the Government will doubtless waive the contract penalty for non-completion of the bridge on time.

The main loss to the country will be the loss of time. It took a year to build the collapsed span, and according to expectations now it will take at least two years to replace it.

The main difficulty will be in securing steel under present conditions of over-taxed production. The engineering problems involved will, of course, take considerable time for solution. The engineers in charge of the construction of the bridge are holding a council of war in Quebec this week. Until their report is presented to the Government, no action is contemplated by the Federal authorities. The present disposition of the Cabinet is to leave things to the St. Lawrence Bridge Company, in the belief that the latter will devise ways and means of finally completing the work according to contract.

During the two year delay caused by yesterday's disaster the car ferry service for National Transcontinental trains across the river at Quebec will have to serve.

There is no question of shunning the bridge project as a result of the failures which have so far occurred. That idea has not been entertained by the Government.

AT THE CRESCENT. The Crescent Picture Palace presents a big variety programme today. "The Angel of Piety Flat" is a great western drama produced in two reels; a reel of comedy cartoons is the "Gaiety News Piccola." Claire McDowell and Charles H. Matles feature in "The House of Darkness," a thrilling Biograph drama; and Billie Reeves, the celebrated English music-hall comedienne is presented in "Some Body," a lively Lubin Comedy. Mr. Sam Rose sings a fine novelty song, "In Florida, Among the Palms." Professor McCarthy presides at the piano. On Wednesday—Tom Martin—A Man's great three reel Selig.

In the Balkan Express

From Berlin to Constantinople Personal Narrative.

The impressions of a traveler recently made the journey from Berlin to Constantinople by the "Balkan Express" are given in the following article: Twice a week a train of seven engines and officials to and from the Turkish capital. It has been talked about, and for some time before it was actually running. It held up to the world as another wonder of the war as waged by many. That it was a wonderful feat for a train from the German capital to Constantinople is disputed. The work of preparation for the train run was a stupendous one. For a month after the advertised date running the train was still in the railway yards at Berlin. Difficulties in the way of the engineers were very great, and not the least serious of these were the delays that had been made on the permanent way by the Serbians when they left the country. Every bridge, any pretensions was blown up, or more spans were missing, and German military engineers had a difficult task in repairing these.

In Berlin only a few weeks ago was impressed with the great change in the tone of the people. The grant elation is no longer meted and certainty of victory is gone. The espionage is exaggerated. One's own weapon has receded upon one to a treacherous degree. The obtaining of a permit to travel on the Balkan express is a matter of extreme difficulty. Every passenger after a thorough examination is provided with a train ticket like that which bears the portrait of the emperor and all particulars of use to the police and the military. These particulars are written in German and Turkish, for the train is supposedly owned and run by the two countries. As a matter of fact this is the case of great deal of friction between the two Governments. The true state of the affair is that the train is a Turkish train when it is in Ottoman territory, but immediately it leaves it becomes a German train. All the train attendants are Germans.

The Mark of the Teuton. With characteristic thoroughness the Teuton has effaced all the traces that were printed in English or French. This has been carried out in a manner that is really childlike. For instance, the notices as to how to get the tickets which hitherto were printed in English, French and German, have been altered. The English and French versions being blotted out and a Turkish translation substituted. All through the train these notices warning the travellers as to talking of military matters and suggesting that spies are everywhere and in all the corridors. In fact they are on all the stations and one becomes almost sick of the sight of them.

Running Nose Cured. Sneezes Stopped Instantly. The worst of a cold is how long it comes. No time to hurry to the drug store, croup develops, the lungs are affected with pneumonia or diphtheria and it's too late. Key-Catarrhose on hand—it kills the instantly. Something magical about the way it cures catarrh and bronchitis. Catarrhose is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way. It heals, soothes and restores. Carry it in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold—that's worth remembering.

Beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhose which is sold everywhere. Large size containing two months' treatment costs $1.00; small size 50c.; sample size 25c.

Aching Back Gets Relief Quick! One Rub with "Nerviline" Cures

Every Bit of Stiffness and Soreness Goes When "Nerviline" Is Used.

Pain in back or side is awful hard to reach. Deep in the tissue is a congested or strained muscle. It is a long way for a liniment to go. Liniments you have used have not reached it and the pain bothers you, whether morning or lying down.

What a pity you haven't tried Nerviline! Penetrating, you ask? Yes, and powerful, too. Nerviline strikes in far deeper than any application you have ever used. You might pay a dollar, ten dollars, a hundred, for that matter, but you could not equal Nerviline, either in strength, quickness of action, or permanency of relief.

If you think this too much to say for Nerviline, try it, and be convinced.

If you receive from Nerviline even a little less relief from pain than this advertisement induces you to expect, you can get your money back.

The only pain remedy in the world sold under a guarantee is Nerviline—surely it is safe to try it.

Nerviline is sold by druggists everywhere 25 cents or 50 cents a bottle.

In the Balkan Express

From Berlin to Constantinople—A Personal Narrative.

The impressions of a traveller who recently made the journey from Berlin to Constantinople by the "Balkan-Express" are given in the following article:

Twice a week a train of seven cars pulls into Berlin. It is labelled in foot-high letters throughout all its length "Balkan-Express." This is the much lauded Berlin-Constantinople express, which conveys military officers and officials to and from the Turkish capital. It has been much talked about, and for some time before it was actually running. It was held up to the world as another of the wonders of the war as waged by Germany.

That it was a wonderful feat to run a train from the German capital to Constantinople is disputed, but the work of preparation for the through run was a stupendous one. For almost a month after the advertised time of running the train was still lying in the railway yards at Berlin. The difficulties in the way of the engineers were very great, and not the least serious of these were the ravages that had been made on the permanent way by the Serbians before they left the country. Every bridge of any pretensions was blown up. One or more spans were missing, and the German military engineers had a difficult task in repairing these.

In Berlin only a few weeks ago one was impressed with the great change in the tone of the people. Extravagant elation is no longer manifest, and certainty of victory is gone. Fear of espionage is exaggerated—their own weapon has recoiled upon them to a tremendous degree.

The obtaining of a permit to travel on the Balkan express is a matter of extreme difficulty. Every passenger, after a thorough examination, is provided with a train ticket like a passport, which in fact it really is. It bears the portrait of the traveller and all particulars of use to the police and the military. These particulars are written in German and Turkish, for the train is supposedly owned and run by the two countries. An matter of fact this is the cause of a great deal of friction between the two Governments. The true state of the affair is that the train is a Turkish train when it is in Ottoman territory, but immediately it leaves it becomes a German train. All the train attendants are Germans.

The Mark of the Teuton.

With characteristic thoroughness the Teuton has effaced all the notices that were printed in English or French. This has been carried out in a manner that is really childish. For instance, the notices as to hot air for the heaters which hitherto were printed in English, French and German, have been altered, the English and French versions being blackened out and a Turkish translation added. All through the train there are notices warning the travellers as to talking of military matters and suggesting that spies are everywhere. They are plastered in every carriage and in all the corridors. In addition they are on all the stations until one becomes almost sick of the sight of them.

Running Nose Colds Cured. Sneezing Stopped Instantly

The worst of a cold is how suddenly it comes. No time to hurry to the drug store, croup develops, the lungs are affected with pneumonia or tuberculosis and it's too late. Keep Catarrhose on hand—it kills colds instantly. Something magical about the way it cures catarrh and bronchitis. Catarrhose is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way; it heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhose Inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold—that's worth remembering.

Beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhose which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months treatment costs $1.00; small size, 50c; sample size 25c.

As the train passes through the various countries along the route the populace is immensely interested. The stops are short, none longer than twenty minutes; at Dresden only seven minutes are allowed. Passengers may not leave the station, but are expected to keep to the platform. For the most part the travellers are German and Austrian officers and officials, but a few Turks use the train for journeys as far as Berlin, where now the turbans may be seen in the streets.

Running through Serbia the most impressive signs of the German occupation were the encampments of the troops alongside the permanent way. There are huge notices up at all the stations warning the inhabitants to keep away from the railway. No one is allowed on the platforms because the whole country is still infected with typhus, and there has to be the most rigorous supervision for this reason. All along the line may be seen the trenches and the rusty barbed wire entanglements that tell of the fighting months ago. At each little fortified encampment German soldiers have planted vegetable gardens over which may be read the legend, "Kriegsgarten" ("War Garden"). There were no signs of their having planted any wheat or grain.

Through Serbia nearly all the bridges of any size had been destroyed, at least partially. Often whole spans had been blown up. In many cases the Germans had replaced these, moving them bodily with great pains to their old positions. In some of the other bridges, where the girders and way were so badly damaged as to defy repairs, temporary bridges on wooden trestles had been built. These structures may serve during the summer season, but they could not stand even a moderate flood. The work, therefore, still goes on, and in time the old bridges will be reconstructed.

Blindfold Bulgarians.

A whole day is spent in the journey through Bulgaria. There one sees line after line of railway carriages, all with their windows whitewashed. Germans and Bulgarians state openly the reason for this decorative work. When things were hanging in the balance for Bulgaria and she was not sure which way she would throw her weight, the windows were all painted over. It was not to prevent the people outside from seeing into the carriages, but to make it impossible for the men in the train to see which way they were going. Not a Bulgarian soldier knew until some time after he had been dispatched whether he had been sent and where he was supposed to be fighting. Shut up with the doors locked the men could not tell in what direction they were travelling—north, west, or southeast.

Along the whole line from Berlin to Constantinople and even down into Syria there are thousands of Belgian railway cars. These are easily recognizable, for they still have the Belgian marks on them. To these the Imperial cipher and the eagle have been added. Troops are on the move in Bulgaria, as elsewhere, but they seem to be mostly away from the line of the Balkan-Express. There is not the briskness that is evident immediately one enters Turkish territory. At Adrianople there are signs of great activity. Thence all the troops are evidently moving eastwards. That is the significant fact. There has been a great deal written about the movement of Turkish troops into Austria and even to Germany and the Western front. All this is quite ridiculous. The Turks could not move any of their troops to the west for the following reasons, among others: First and chief, the Turks cannot spare troops from the defence of their own territories; secondly, transport and commissariat, to say nothing of medical stores and equipment, are lacking. The Turkish troops are kept quite distinct from the Germans, and especially in Constantinople, where friction between these allies is so strong that one wonders how the German regime stands at all. It is only due to the fact that the Germans are there in such numbers and supply the organizing ability and the backbone that the Turks lack that they have been enabled to hold on at all.

The German Regime.

There are two great wireless stations in Constantinople, almost side by side. One is supposed to be the Joint station of the Ottoman and the German Governments. As a matter of fact the Germans manage everything with regard to it, and the Turks are masters of it in fancy only. The other station is frankly German. It is worked by Germans and guarded by them with the utmost care, and no Turkish subject is allowed near it.

There are Germans everywhere in Constantinople. There are German soldiers and German sailors. The latter are from the Goeben and the Breslau, which are now lying up in a side basin of the Bosphorus. It is evident that the latter has finished her career. Her stern is all built up with masonry and concrete, and this has shaken loose, for the optimistic Turks took her to sea, and the vibration played havoc with the mortar. The repair looks like the stopping of a gigantic tooth, done very badly, and then knocked loose again. The German naval men are mostly quartered on a Hamburg-American liner lying by the Galata Bridge. She is used as a store ship and a base depot for the naval ratings of the Goeben and the Breslau.

The distress in the city is terrible. The widows and children of the men who have been killed are starving. They receive no aid from the Government. These women were given a pittance as long as their men were alive, but when their husbands were killed the pension, if it can be called such, ceased. This is the only official notification of death that wives get of the loss of husbands. The currency becomes more and more embarrassing every day. Paper has declined fully 40 p.c. in value, and is still rapidly depreciating. All the monetary transactions are in the hands of the Jews, who make enormous profit in changing gold into paper money or vice versa.

The Germans have recently installed several Prussians in the Government Departments of the Porte. The Under-Secretaries of the Ministries of Agriculture and Post and Telegraphs are both Germans. The former has immense power, which he can and does undoubtedly make use of for his real masters. He has charge of all the Agricultural Bank moneys, and as Turkey has been raising a great deal of her revenue from the land, much as Pharaoh did, it is useful to the Germans.

Turkey started a campaign for the restoration of the Turkish language for general use in the Ottoman dominions. All signs other than those in Turkish were to be taken down. This was done, but it was impossible for her to carry out the reform completely. The Germans would not allow it, and now there are more German signs than ever in the streets of Stambul. There are the usual spy notices, and in addition every manifesto that has been published is displayed in German on the walls and lamp-posts. This has irritated the Turks immensely. It has shown them in a small way just how much they are under the Prussian thumb.—The Times.

Local Druggists Repair What Famous Surgeons Cannot Touch

Shattered nerves are beyond the reach of the Surgeon's knife. What will repair them? Dozens of people right here in your home town will bear testimony to this fact that Zoetic—the health tonic—has set them on their feet again. This famous combination of glycer-phosphates—the actual element of the human body—Cod Liver Oil and delicious tonic wine, supply the very elements that worn out nerves require. In a quiet way the action of Zoetic is truly marvellous. Without a trace of narcotic it induces sound sleep. And following that, better and better digestion. And following that a final and complete rebuilding of the nervous system drained of vitality. Two weeks' faithful use of it will convince you. Because you have been so often misled, expecting much and receiving little, we offer outright to refund the purchase price of Zoetic if at the end of two weeks you cannot report real progress toward better health. Start trying it to-day. Sold by T. McMurdo & Co., Sole Distributing Agents for Newfoundland.

Your Boys and Girls.

One of the most important facts to remember when feeding infants with cows milk is the very large proportion of water which is found in normal human milk, for it teaches us that it is a highly diluted food by which the best results can be obtained in infant feeding. It also explains to us how careful we should be not to overtax the comparatively slight power for absorbing a concentrated food which exists in the early months of life.

The intervals of feeding constitute a very important part of an infant's life and therefore they should be definite and strictly adhered to. The danger points of dilution and intervals must ever be kept in view in infant feeding. Pasteurized milk must be considered as perfectly pure, sweet milk, ready for modification and administration.

HOLLWEG ADMITS U-BOATS A FAILURE.

London, Sept. 16.—A wireless message from Berlin received to-day says that disillusionment about submarine warfare is now complete in official circles in Germany.

According to additional information received here from Berlin, the Imperial Chancellor has pointed out the failure of submarine warfare, not only at secret sittings of the Bundesrat, but to a considerable number of political leaders.

Attacks and criticisms by pan-Germans drove Von Bethmann-Hollweg to this course. He was accused of slackening in abandoning unrestricted submarine warfare. The Chancellor therefore was obliged to prove that it was not his own wish but a failure of submarine operations which inspired his policy in this respect.

Definite information concerning the magnitude of Germany's losses in submarine warfare now has been communicated to leaders of all parties and groups in the Reichstag, to the principal Berlin editors, and to the Berlin correspondents of some of the leading provincial papers.

Most recipients of this information including many who were formerly advocates of unlimited submarine warfare, rallied to the Chancellor's side and condemned his detractors. This, of course, was the object aimed at by the Chancellor in confessing the failure of submarine warfare.

DEATH OF SIR CAVENTISH BOYLE
LONDON, To-day.
Sir Cavendish Boyle, former Governor of Newfoundland from 1901 to 1904, died here to-day.

DEATH OF FORMER MAYOR.
NEW YORK, To-day.
Seth Low, aged 66, former Mayor of New York, died to-day.

ILLNESS OF PRINCE ALBERT.
LONDON, To-day.
Prince Albert, second son of King George, has been invalided home on account of an abdominal abscess, says an official statement issued to-day. The communication adds that the Prince, who has undergone an operation, is doing well, but it will be some time before he is able to return to duty. Prince Albert while serving as a midshipman on board the Collingwood at the outbreak of war, was stricken with appendicitis while operating on. The Prince is 21 years old.

IN DOBRUDJA.
LONDON, To-day.
A despatch to the Times from the Roumanian headquarters on Sunday says that in Dobrudja the Russo-Roumanian forces are falling back and taking up strong positions on a line extending from Rasovo to Tula.

WAR SUMMARY.
LONDON, To-day.
German positions exceeding four miles in length were captured on Saturday night by the British and French armies in a continuation of their offensive north and south of the Somme River in France. In addition to quantities of war material, a large number of prisoners fell into the hands of the Entente Allies, 700 prisoners being taken by the French alone. Heavy counter-attacks against the British on Sunday were repulsed with large losses to the Germans, according to London. Near Thiepval the British took a fortified position over a front of one mile known as the "Danube"

Trench, near Courcellette and advanced about 1,000 yards, and finally the strongly defended position at Mouquet farm, over which there had been numerous hard fought battles for several weeks, fell into their hands. To the south of the river the French pushed back the Germans and occupied the remainder of the towns of Vauxandillers and Berry, which are still in their hands. They also captured all the ground between Denicourt and Berry, the gain being over a front running northeast two miles and thence another mile. The advance of the British apparently straightened out the salient which had projected into their lines between Thiepval and Courcellette. This brings the front here to within a scant mile of Grandcourt and the Albert-Bapaume railway. Grandcourt is now being bombarded by the British. The success of the French obliterated another in her many saw-tooth salients which dot the entire front of the Somme, and is another move on the right flank of the Entente toward the pocketing of Peronne. Heavy fighting with the Russians and the aggressors has been reported from the Pripiet marsh in the region of Russia through Galicia and up in the Carpathian mountains. Berlin and Vienna claim the repulse with huge casualties of Russian attacks on a front of about 12 1/2 miles in the region west of Lutsk, in Galicia north of Zborov near Stanislaw and in the Carpathians at several points near the Marajowka River. However, Berlin admits that the front of the Archduke Charles Francis was pushed back by the Russians a short distance. Petrograd records an advance for the Russians south of Berezany, southeast of Lemberg and the capture of more than 3,000 Germans fighting along the Anaratvka river and the Carpathian mountains. Bucharest reports the occupation of additional towns in Transylvania, while both Berlin and Sofia assert that the forces of the Central Powers in Dobrudja are still in pursuit of the retreating Roumanians and Russians. Further progress for the Entente Allies on the Macedonian front, and by the Italians in Albania is recorded in London, Paris and Rome. The communications with Kavala on the Aegean Sea, which is held by the Bulgarians, are under bombardment by the Entente fleet. Sofia admits the loss of Nidje-Planina near Lake Ostrove. Combined French and Russian troops have pushed their way to a position near Florina across the Greek frontier south of Monastir, while the Serbians have reached the immediate outskirts of Vretneek and Kalmackalan. Success must sooner or later, many see in Cadorna's army a more dangerous threat to Vienna than would come from any other direction.

"Brussloff is again on the move, though the usual uncertainty again allowed the neighborhood of his activities. The most important junction of Halicz is at last the object of a concentrated attack, to meet the threat of which a great army has for some time been massed. Halicz is the pivot of the last defensive line before Lemberg—its importance. That line is formed mostly by the Zlota Lipa river, though the Russians have crossed it further to the north. Indeed, they face Halicz both from the north and from the east, and if it falls the German army will be in great danger of being cut off. There has been a report that it has already fallen, but it has not been yet confirmed as so important an event would certainly be. The position is, however, becoming serious for the Austrians, whose army is being flattened out against the Carpathians in an ever-lengthening line, a most unfavourable condition in view of its shortage of men. We shall soon hear big news from this theatre."

The biggest news, however, for the present comes at last from Saloniki. While Rumania is steadily pushing across Transylvania and apparently regarding with the greatest confidence the attempts of Bulgaria to invade her eastern dominions, the great Allied armies in Macedonia are at last moving northward. This advance is compelled to seek one or other of three lines, the mountainous country precluding a general wide-spread progress. It must go up through Serbia by way of Monastir, along the Vardar valley or along the valley of the Struma. Already the Serbians are moving along the first route. After very fierce fighting they seem to have worsted the Bulgarians badly. Their first great objective is, of course, Monastir. At the same time the British and French have scored successes along the line to the east. It is up the Vardar valley that the great advance will almost certainly be made, so that we need not take too seriously the Bulgarian demonstrations at Kavala and thereabouts. A great and momentous campaign is in its first stages. It is now obvious that the Allies were waiting for Rumania to declare herself; now that she has done so, they are striking, and striking hard. The success of the Bulgarians, strongly reinforced and offered by Germans, in their invasion of Dobrudja would value of itself be serious, but it cannot be taken by itself. It is almost certain that these troops will soon have to be turned south to assist in repelling an invasion of Bulgaria herself which she will find her utmost available forces inadequate to meet.

Shackleton's Men Had to Live on One Meal a Day

New York, Sept. 4.—The following cable has been received by the World from Sir Ernest Shackleton at Punta Arenas, via London: Our fourth attempt to rescue our comrades left on Elephant Island has succeeded, and all have arrived safely and well. The Chilean government very generously placed at my disposal the steamer Yelcho, commanded by Commander Barton. The steamer, manned and equipped at the expense of the Chilean government, left Punta Arenas on Aug. 4. (It is believed that this date is a mistake in transmission, as a despatch from Punta Arenas on Aug. 25 said Shackleton had sailed on that day for Elephant Island.)

On this occasion I set a course which would enable us to approach Elephant Island from the northeast, my reason being that I hoped the ice had worked toward the northeast. This hope was realized, and on Aug. 30, after steering in the fog through numerous stranded bergs, I reached Wild's camp at 1 p.m., finding all well. At 2 p.m. we were homeward bound.

To the Chilean government, to Commandant Pardo and to Lieut. Aguirre, I owe my deepest thanks for the means of rescue. With Wild lies the credit of having kept his party together in strength and safety under most trying and difficult conditions. Crean and Worsley, who have seen this thing through with me, I cannot speak too highly.

Following is Wild's report: "On April 25, the day after the departure of the boat, the island was beset by dense pack ice. The party was confined to a narrow spit of land, 250 yards long and 40 yards wide, surrounded by inaccessible cliffs and ice-laden seas. "We were forced to abandon our ice hole, made untenable by snow. We made a dwelling of our two boats, supported by rocks set up as far as practicable from the sea. The weather continued appallingly difficult to work in, and the vitality of the whole party was lowered owing to exposure. "Blackburn, Hudson, Greestreet and Rickensen became ill and several others were frostbitten. "In May a heavy blizzard swept much valuable gear into the sea and we were in grave anxiety, owing to the danger of being swept away by the heavy seas raised by the blizzard, blowing with a velocity of 70 miles an hour. Fortunately, owing to the low temperature, an ice foot formed on the seashore, and this protection was the means of saving us from total destruction. "On several occasions the adjacent glacier calved, throwing up waves, and on one occasion a block of ice was hurled to within 15 feet of our dwelling. Observing how the island was beset, I realized the difficulty our leader must experience in effecting our speedy relief, and as a measure of precaution I drastically economized our food, allowing only one meal daily until we had strengthened our reserve of blubber."

To-day's Fire at Mr. Eric Bowring's.

Shortly after noon to-day an alarm of fire was sent in from box 113, bringing the Central and Eastern Companies to Rennie's Mill Road, a fire being well under way in the residence owned by Sir E. P. Morris up to a few months ago when it was purchased by Mr. Eric A. Bowring. The house is situated on the west side of the street and was unoccupied for several months. Miss Constance Fox, daughter of Lady Morris, occupied it a few weeks ago and was in it at the time of the outbreak. The fire started in the basement and eating up through the floor ignited the upper flats. The firemen fought the blaze with several streams of water and not until 1.15 p.m., or exactly an hour from the time the alarm was rung, did they get it under control. Several rooms were gutted and a considerable amount of furniture destroyed. The extent of the damage done will reach a few thousand dollars.

Invalid Soldier Assaulted

William Kearney, a veteran soldier, who was seriously wounded in the head while fighting against the Turks on Gallipoli, was assaulted on George Street on Saturday night by two young men. It appears that all three were engaged in a conversation. Kearney tried to speak glowingly of our soldiers, remarking how glad he was to be one of them and exhorted his listeners to do the khaki. The appeal did not take, however, and he was attacked, receiving a stunning blow in the face from one of his adversaries. Sergeant Sparrow was quickly on the scene and with the aid of a volunteer policeman arrested the disturbers. This morning they were tried before J. J. Morris, K.C., in the Police Court. One of them was convicted of the assault and fined $5 or 10 days. The other was not prosecuted.

Arrested For Theft.

Last night Detective Byrne arrested an undesirable named Billy Fynn, charging him with stealing a meershaum pipe, valued at $12, the property of George Goss of Bell Island. Fynn was shipped to the fishery with some one around St. John's. He soon gave the fishery a wide berth and drifted to Bell Island where in a shack a meershaum pipe took his fancy and he made "love" to it. Fynn was before court to-day and remanded for eight days.

THE PICNIC.
The picnic is a place where people go to relax from labor and study the bug family. There is no place on earth where the habits and personal eccentricities of the wandering and disaffected bug can be studied to greater advantage than at a picnic, when the tablecloth has been laid directly over a smouldering ant hill.
Picnics are held in the summer time, when the grass is long and green and insect life is more animated. Great care is taken to read the weather forecast and pick out a day that winds up in a moist rain storm. This teaches us that the United States Weather Bureau, which is supported by the patient, perspiring taxpayer, is a lugubrious and agonizing joke. If Congress would quit distributing free garden seeds and give out trustworthy barometers instead, fewer picnic parties would have to be hauled home in a hack and wrung dry by anxious parents in the deal of the night.
Picnics are composed of people who go and people who provide. Why is it that so many people are able to go but never can see anything to do except prophesy rain and fight flies. That we are a humane and tender-hearted people is shown by the fact that these two classes are always welcome and are even given some of the white meat.
Men are invited to picnics on account of their lovable attributes and their ability to produce a fire out of water-soaked brush. A picnic without a few men to build the fire and eat all of the surplus potato salad would be a greater failure than an attempt to sell envelope chemises on the African coast. Unmarried men are much sought after at picnics, as they know how to hang a hammock and also how to disport themselves therein. One of the most pathetic sights in life is a picnic party composed entirely of old maids who have no more use for a hammock than a bald-headed man has for a set of military brushes.
Picnics would be more popular if they were held on high, dry ground, where the death chant of the coarse, aggressive mosquito could not be heard.

The War Week by Week.

By OBSERVER.

Last week was one of fine achievements by all members of the Great Alliance, holding out the brightest prospects for the future. The preceding one had witnessed valuable work by the Anglo-French armies, but even the successes then recorded did not prepare us for the sweeping victories that have followed them. Beyond all doubt, these have been so great as to arouse the enthusiasm of London and Paris to the highest pitch and to revive their serious talk of the open fighting which is one of the first aims of the offensive. Both Bapaume and Peronne are now dangerously near the zone of the attack. The British catalogue of gains is formidable—Courcellette, Martinpuich, Fiers and Ginchy; while the French line runs from Le Prieux to Bouchavesnes, menacing Comblès and the all-important Peronne.

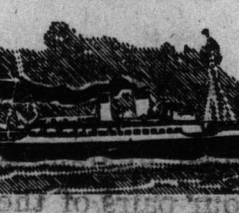

It is pointed out in Saturday's message that Mont St. Quentin remains as the last formidable northern defence of Peronne, a high ground on which a great battery of German guns is posted. But the French face it and may even dominate it, while they may possibly adopt their favorite tactics of creeping past and encircling it. To this the capture of Comblès is first essential to them, in which task they have the valuable co-operation of the British at Ginchy. Perhaps the greatest asset of both advances is the distance which they carry the respective armies along the highways that radiate from Bapaume. There is no doubt that the great offensive is, metaphorically and literally, "over the hill," and the new and favourable positions they have acquired are already showing their value.

South of the Somme, matters seem at a standstill since the French made their great push forward at Chilly. There Chaulnes is in much the same jeopardy as Comblès. The purpose of the French offensive here is not clear—that is, whether it was used to draw German troops away from the northern area or to attempt the ultimate surrounding of Peronne. From either point of view its success has been most valuable, for the Germans are faced with the necessity of maintaining the defense of an ever-widening front, exactly the reverse of the French fortunes at Verdun.

No less momentous and encouraging are events on the other fronts. The Italians have gathered themselves together for a fresh advance upon Trieste beyond the bare fact that they are again under way we know nothing, but the pressure they will exert must be of the greatest value at the present juncture apart from anything which it may achieve. That it will achieve much cannot be doubted, nor is it to be expected that Italy will be content to give her attention to Trieste alone. When the collapse of Austria comes, as come it

Torbay Garden Party a big Success.

Under favourable circumstances, the annual garden party at Torbay, postponed from Wednesday last, was run off yesterday and was the most successful event of its kind yet held at the historic settlement. Rt. Rev. Monsignor St. John and a large concourse of Torbay people attended as well as hundreds of city folk, including Rt. Rev. Mons. McDermott, Rev. Fr. Renout and other clergy, a number of the Christian Brothers, John Dwyer, Esq., M. H. A.; W. J. Higgins, Esq., M. H. A.; Councillor Vinicombe and Chas. J. Ryan, Esq., Fr. St. John received the visitors and made the day as enjoyable as possible for them. The Presbytery grounds, the scene of the garden party, were profusely dressed with bunting. Teas and refreshments were provided and the ladies in charge of the various tables did a brisk business. Football, races and other sports were also engaged in during the day. The proceeds of the affair were very substantial and will be devoted to church purposes.

Shooting Season Opens

As September 20th is the time allowed by law for the carrying of firearms, killing of game, etc., to-morrow midnight the shooting season will be ushered in for 1916. Many sportsmen are getting busy with dogs and guns and already several have left for their favorite hunting grounds. Some went out by this morning's train, others will be leaving on this evening's outgoing train. Judging from reports coming in from various sections of the country partridge are none too plentiful, but there is an abundance of rabbits, even on the nearby suburban barrens.

AGAIN REPORTED.—The schooners Nellie M. and Lady St. John reported on last Monday off Cape Race, showed up there again yesterday afternoon.

BROKEN ARM.—Another message has been received stating that the nature of the wounds of Sergeant Ernest Teaster, C. E. F., was a broken arm, supposed to be caused through the bursting of a shell. He is now at Birmingham Hospital where he was visited a few days ago by his brother William Teaster of "Ours."

Killed in Action.

Mr. George E. Turner, Deputy Minister of Agriculture and Mines, received official notification from Ottawa informing him of the death of his second son Alfred W., 12th Battalion C. E. F., who was "killed in action" on Sept. 7th, while fighting in France. Mr. Turner has four other sons with the colours, two with the Canadians and two with Ours. The eldest, Sergt. Jack, has just recovered from a wound received recently while fighting in Flanders and is now back in the trenches.

Made Quick Passage.

The schr. Edith Marguerite, the new purchase of Capt. A. Kean, has arrived at Lisbon with a cargo of codfish, shipped by her owners. The vessel, which is in command of Capt. W. Kean, is a fast sailer and made a quick run across the "herring pond." She has since loaded salt at Spain and left for that port.

Capt. A. Kean is getting another new vessel built at Shelbourne, N.S., to be used as a foreign fish carrier. She will be ready to be launched, it is said, next spring.

SUSU'S STORMY TRIP.—The S.S. Susu, Capt. Roberts, reached port at 9 a.m. yesterday from the Fogo mail service. The Captain reports strong N. E. gales with heavy sea and fog, and it was without doubt the roughest trip since this service was inaugurated. The fishery at almost every place along the route was held up by the unfavourable weather. The Susu brought a small freight and several passengers.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The s.s. Neptune remained in Carbonear all last night and arrived here at 6 a.m. to-day. After taking on board a quantity of freight she sailed for Labrador.

The sad news was received here this week of the death at Apr. Scotland, of Sergt. R. J. Kennedy, of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Mr. Kennedy, who was a son of Capt. Terence Kennedy, of this town, leaves besides other relatives four little children—two boys and two girls, his wife having predeceased him by several years. His death was due to heart trouble.

Among the visitors to town this week were: John G. Munn, of the Jas. Baird Co. John Reddy, carpenter at Mount Cashel and his wife, Messrs. Thomas and Louis Davis, Miss B. Wats, all of St. John's.

Miss M. Butt and Mrs. T. Watts left for St. John's on Wednesday, the former expecting to return on Saturday, the latter staying several weeks.

Mr. Eli Martin, who came in from Harbor Grace Island a week or two ago very sick, is now slightly better and his friends are hopeful that he will soon be out of danger.

While we were walking over the barrens a couple of miles from town on Wednesday morning enjoying the beauties of nature, all of a sudden I almost seemed as if we had walked into a German trench as ten of the feathered tribe, with language beyond our ken, flew up all about our feet—ten fine plump partridge. Oh, no, we did not shoot, the close season being on. Many of our sportsmen would like a similar experience on Wednesday next.

Mr. A. L. Collis returned from his trip to the northward on Tuesday. He was north as far as LaScie and had a most successful and enjoyable trip.

HR. GRACE, Sept. 15, 1916.

Letter From the Front.

The following is an extract from a letter received by Mrs. E. A. Butler, of Sandy Point, from her brother, Sergeant J. V. Temple, who was one of the first in the Regiment to be wounded on July 1st:

"We have found rather a comfortable billet at present, down in Surrey, near the race-course of Brooklands, though there are no races held there now. . . . You should have seen your brother on the morning of July 1st in an old tunic, that had been through Gallipoli, and was all faded, trousers smashed across the knee, legs from the knee down covered with mud, and all this crowned by an inverted dish cover or shrapnel helmet, and strapped to his waist a thundering big coil. It certainly looked ill for the Hun that day. I forgot to mention four bombs and two gas helmets, not to mention web equipment. Very, the historian who says a soldier was invented to hang things on was right. Hope you may be able to read this scrawl, but the arm is not yet fully under control. We are close to the hahgars here, and aeroplanes are as common as mud. We see them vol-plane, and loop the loop almost every day—reminds me of Balfour's cartoon of a chap in France looking up at an aeroplane and remarking: 'To think I paid fourpence to see 'em at Hendon!' Can't write too much as arm is still 'groggy'."

Our Reatrnng Soldiers.

The soldiers returning in charge of Lieut. Charles St. Clair Strong are due to reach the city by Thursday's express; the first 15 are on furlough, and the next 7 are pronounced medically unfit. Their names are:—

2nd Lieut. Strong, St. John's; Corporal Don Moore, St. John's; Corporal Coffield, St. John's; Ptes. O. K. Batstone, Jackson's Cove; Thomas Iveny, St. John's; Alder N. Whiteway, St. John's; W. A. Delaney, St. George's; Sylvester Madden, St. John's; Harold W. Matthews, St. John's; Joseph Stansford, Grate's Cove; Wilfred C. Parsons, Bay Roberts; P. O'Riada, St. John's; Chas. H. Ellis, St. John's; Edmund F. Shea, St. John's; Fred. A. Clouter, Catalina; Lance-Corporal J. F. Barnes, St. John's; Privates M. W. Morrissey, Bell Island; T. J. Lake, Burin; John Hartery, Fleur-de-Lys; John Hayward, Bonavista; Walter Ruth, Grand Falls; John White, Bay Bulls; Frank Brake, Humbermouth, and W. P. Taylor, St. John's.

Pte. Ellis, of St. John's and Pte. Morrissey, of Bell Island, are both in the greatest health. The greatest number of the men have seen active service in Gallipoli and France and bear up on their bodies honourable scars, while others show signs of great suffering from the ravishing trench diseases.

St. John's Lady and American Doctor UNITED IN WEDLOCK.

The marriage of Miss Selena Beatrice Moulton, of St. John's, graduate nurse at the General Hospital, at Chelsea, and Edward Henry Edwards, Jr., M.D., of Somerville, took place at Douglass, Mass., U.S.A., on September 4th. Miss Moulton is the sister-in-law of Mr. W. H. Bartlett of this city, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Moulton and sister Miss Mabel Moulton, who are nurses, were at the wedding. The bride looked charming, dressed in pussy willow silk and chiffon trimmed with pearls and real duchess lace, the latter having been given her by a wealthy female patient whom the bride nursed at the hospital in Chelsea; also a duchess lace handkerchief was presented to her by the same patient, who wore both articles on her wedding day twenty-five years ago. The bride also had a train of orange blossoms and her bouquet was rose and maiden-hair fern and she wore a brooch of pearls and a diamond, the gift of the groom. Her travelling dress was a blue pussy willow silk with hat of silk and velvet. The bridal party left by motor car for Washington and other places of interest on their honeymoon tour. They will be absent about a month. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards were the recipients of many valuable and useful gifts. We wish them a very pleasant voyage over the matrimonial sea.

C.L.B. Church Parade.

The C.L.B., over 200 strong, under Lieut-Col. Rendell, attended Divine service at St. Mary's Church at 11 a.m. yesterday. The preacher was the Rev. H. Uphill, Rector of the parish, who delivered an impressive and instructive address on the Great War, referring to ex-Sergt. Rice, of the C.L.B., now prisoner of war in Germany, and asking the laity to write him letters. The return to the Armoury was made via Water St., St. Bride's, Church and Long's Hill, the battalion band discoursing excellent music along the way. On reaching the Armoury, Lt-Col. Rendell announced that in accordance with the suggestion made by their Chaplain, Rev. H. Uphill, a collection would be taken up among the laity and a Christmas present sent to ex-Sergt. Rice. A committee of four officers was appointed to receive donations. The prizes for the camp held at Top-sail last month were won by the following: Best behaved boy A Co., Pte. J. Shears; Best behaved boy F Co., Pte. D. Ellis; Shooting medal won by Lance Sergt. Thos. Pottles; Cleanest and best kept camp, Corp. Downton, tent No. 1, F Co.

At Cochrane St. Church

The Rev. N. M. Guy, M.A., was the preacher at the Cochrane St. Cathedral Church yesterday morning, who, after addressing a few words of counsel to children present, delivered an earnest exhortation on the "Seasons of the Soul and the times of God's visitation." A splendid congregation assembled at the evening worship, when the Pastor, the Rev. Dr. Bond, delivered in chaste language one of his practical and heart searching sermons, on "Hope, the anchor of the soul." The learned doctor since talking up his work at this church is drawing very large congregations. The singing was hearty and the special music by the choir added much to the effectiveness of the service.

COAL SHIPMENT.—Since Saturday evening last four steamers arrived here with coal cargoes from North Sydney, namely, the Algonquin, Viking, Jacobson and Njord.

TRAIN HELD UP.—Last night, as the Fogo excursion train was passing the Goulds, the engineer observed a mare and foal with their legs caught in the trestle. The engine was immediately stopped, and after great difficulty the animals were extricated. The train was delayed one hour by the incident.

Modern Gullivers

Some men stand out from the crowd as Gulliver towered over the Lilliputians. By superior energy, activity and reserve strength they predominate. Feeling right within, is one of the fundamentals of physical and mental strength, and is largely the result of proper nourishment.

Grape-Nuts

is the logical food for thinkers and doers. It contains all the nutritious elements of whole wheat and malted barley, is partially predigested, and supplies an abundance of energizing nourishment without overworking the stomach. It also includes the vital mineral salts of the grain which are lacking in white bread and many other cereal foods.

There's able help for many in Grape-Nuts.

FINAL CHAPTER OF GREAT SERIAL.

Frank Daniels, the celebrated comedian, who is known the world over, will appear in "Crooky" at the Nickel Theatre this evening. The story is by Pearl West, and the cast includes such popular artists as Evert Overton, Harry Morey and Caroline Birch. "Crooky" is Frank Daniels' first departure from the stage to the screen. Another great feature to-day is the final chapter of "The Strange Case of Mary Page" who killed David Pollock. To find out be sure and attend to-day's performance. On Wednesday the popular picture now run-

BUY YOUR

—FROM—
BLAIR'S

Because they will Save you Money.

They are offering a big variety of patterns in the New American Floor Coverings at $1.10 yard.

You can buy these same Floor Cloths somewhere else for $1.20 and that is the usual price, but Blair's say September being a kind of a quiet month they can easily cut more Floor Cloths than, so the cut in the price cuts two ways.

They say according to the prices the manufacturers are now quoting, these coverings would cost them all this to land.

They show a big range of Block and Floral Patterns, as they have the manufacturers of three different makers, viz.: Congoleums, Feltoleums and Neponsets, and show the best patterns of each make. These are much better than cheap Floor Canvases, of which the cheapest to-day is about $1.00 per yard.

This is mainly because the basic material for Cheap Floor Canvas is Burlap or Brin, and the immediate demand for that is tremendous. It is estimated that for the making of sand bags and the wrapping of foodstuffs, etc., for the Army, that the British Government calls for sixty million square yards per week. Therefore the price of brin has more than doubled. But Blair's are trying to help you all they can on prices, therefore remember—
