

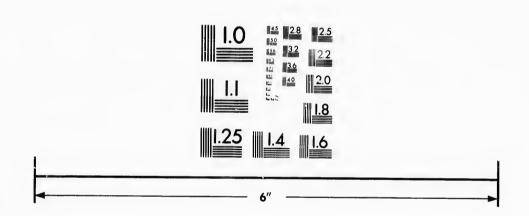

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580 (716) 872-4503

BILL GENERAL COLLEGE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR

CIHM/ICMH Microfiche Series.

CIHM/ICMH Collection de microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

(C) 1987

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

Th to

Th po of filr

Ori be sio oth firs sio or

The sha TIN wh

Ma diff ent beg righ req me

	12X	16)	,	20X		24X		28 X
			1
This i Ce do	item is filmed a ocument est fil	at the reduction mé au taux d 14X	on ratio chec e réduction is 18X	ked below i ndiqué ci-d	/ essous. 22X		26X		30X
	Additional cor Commentaires		aires:
	Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/ Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.				Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/ Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure etc., ent été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir la meilleure image possible.				d to nt ne pelure
	Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/ Lareliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la				Only edition available/ Seule édition disponible
		Bound with other material/ Relié avec d'autres documents			Includes supplementary material/ Comprend du matériel supplémentaire
	Coloured plate Planches et/o					Quality of Qualité iné			ion
	Coloured ink (Encre de coul				\checkmark	Showthrou Transparer
	Coloured map Cartes géogra		ouleur			Pages deta Pages déta
	Cover title mi Le titre de co		(in 9		V	Pages disc Pages déc	oloured olorées,	, stained tachetée	or foxed/ s ou piqu	ées
	Covers restore Couverture re					Pages rest Pages rest
	Covers damag Couverture er					Pages dan Pages end	-	ées
\checkmark	Coloured cove Couverture de					Coloured Pages de original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.				L'institut à microfilme le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui à été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifie une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Harold Campbell Vaughan Memorial Library Acadia University

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the lest page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▼ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Harold Campbell Vaughan Memorial Library Acadia University

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant solt par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selca le cas: le symbole → signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▼ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents.
Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à drolte, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

1	2	3

1
2
3

1	2	3
4	5	6

errata to détails

es du modifier

er une

filmage

pelure, in à

222

THE

SUPREMACY OF THE SOVEREIGN.

ASERMON

PREACHED IN THE OPEN AIR AT THE GROVE ADJOINING THE RICHMOND
LILL RAILWAY STATICE, ON STIE 24TH MAY, 1855; BEING THE THIRTY-BIXTH ANMYERSARY OF THE BIRTH-DAY OF

Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victorin;

THE REV. J. GILBERT ARMSTRONG, B. A.,

(INCUMBENT OF WOOD-BRIDGE AND TULLAMORE; ONE OF THE GRAND CHAPLAINS OF THE GRANGE INSTITUTION OF BRITISH NORTH AMERICA: COUNTY CHAPLAIN OF YORK AND PEEL; CHAPLAIN AND KRIGHT COMPANION OF THE ROYAL ORBER OF THE SCARLET FOR THE COUNTY OF YORK, ETG., ETG.)

TORONTO:

THOMPSON & CO., PRINTERS KING STREET EAST.

1855

THE

SUPREMACY OF THE SOVEREIGN.

ASERMON

Preached in the open air at the Grove adjoining the Richmond Hill Railway Station, on the 24th May, 1855; being the Thirty-sixth Anniversary of the Birth-day of

Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria;

BY

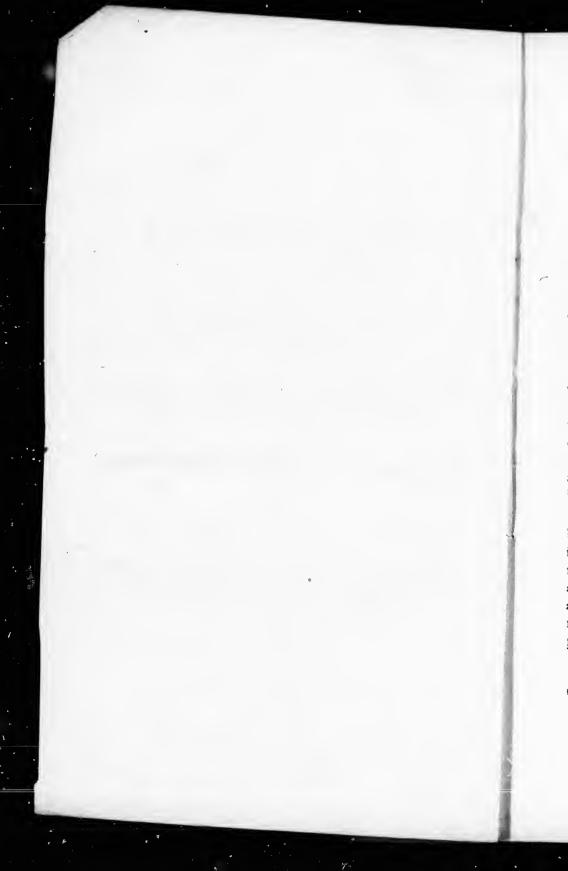

THE REV. J. GILBERT ARMSTRONG, B. A.,

(INCUMBENT OF WOOD-BRIDGE AND TULLAMORE; ONE OF THE GRAND CHAPLAINS OF THE ORANGE INSTITUTION OF BRITISH NORTH AMERICA: COUNTY CHAPLAIN OF YORK AND PEEL: CHAPLAIN & ND KNIGHT COMPANION OF THE ROYAL ORDER OF THE SCARLET FOR THE COUNTY OF YORK, LTC., ETC.,

TORONTO:

THOMPSON & CO., PRINTERS, KING STREET EAST.

1855.

PREFACE.

At a meeting of the Orangemen of the District of Toronto, (held, according to notice, on the 29th May, 1855,) at which were present, the Grand Master, the County Master of York, several Masters of Lodges, and other Grand Officers and Members of the Institution, a resolution was unanimously carried, requesting me to furnish to a Committee, (to be immediately appointed,) the manuscript of the discourse which I had preached on the Queen's Birth-day, at the Richmond Hill Railway Station, in order that it might be printed and published by the Institution. In this request—expressed in most polite and flattering language—and proceeding from so high a channel—I felt it my duty to acquiesce.

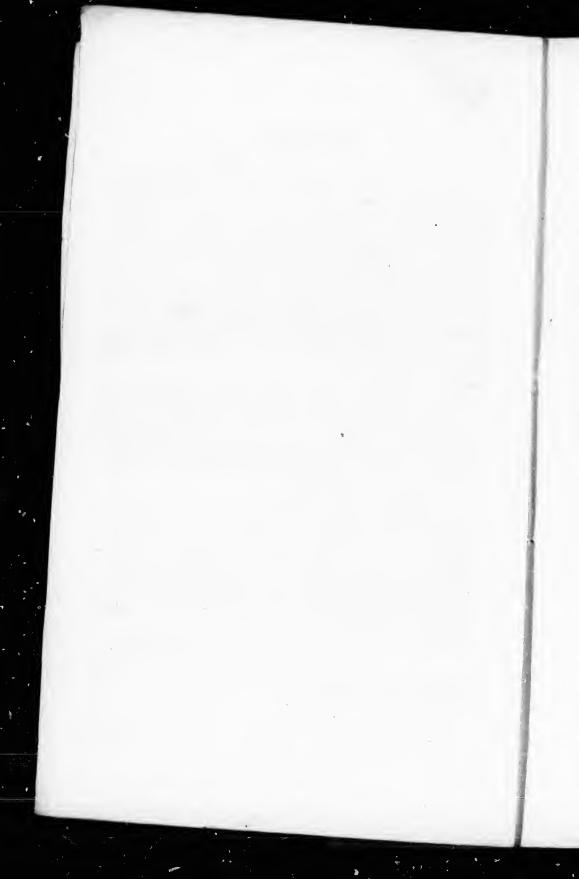

But the sermon having been delivered extemporaneously, and no portion of it having been previously committed to paper, excepting the mere heads of the subject, I have been obliged to reduce it to writing, from the notes of a Reporter, who happened to be present when it was preached, and by the aid of a memory by no means the most faithful.

Should, however, the proofs and arguments herein adduced, be the means of awakening an investigation amongst Romanists, into the absurd and unscriptural doctrines and practices of their religion; of staying, amongst professing Protestants, those who are wavering in their profession of allegiance to their Sovereign, and of "strengthening those who do stand," I shall consider myself more than re-paid for the time and study which its preparation has involved.

J. GILBERT ARMSTRONG.

Christ's Church Parsonage, * Wood-bridge, Vaughan,

June 2nd, 1855.

THE SUPREMACY OF THE SOVEREIGN.

I Peter ii. 17.
"Fear God—Honour the King."

On the present anniversary of the nativity of our most Gracious Sovereign Lady, Queen Victoria, it is to me, my brethren, a subject of the deepest gratification, to be, by a gracious Providence, permitted to address so large and orderly an assemblage of my fellow Christians, upon the duty which we, as loyal subjects of her Majesty, are now desirous to discharge, in the most becoming manner.

To us, and all who have the privilege of living under the broad and glorious canopy of the British constitution,-a constitution, remember, the most excellent and auspicious of all others, because the most agreeable to the example and dictates of Holy Writ,—it becomes a duty of no mean importance, to hail every event which calls to the recollection past favours from the hands of our all-wise Creator and supreme Governor. therefore, is it our special duty, at this time, with joyful and grateful hearts, to commemorate the birth-day of our beloved Queen; who, from the period of her accession, down to the present eventful crisis, has ever swayed the sceptre with "justice and mercy," over the land of our forefathers, as well as over this portion of her Majesty's other dominions. The passage of Scripture which I have now placed before you, involves, in the most explicit and convincing language, this important duty; to which I would invite your serious attention.

The apostle Peter, in our text, seems fully to sustain that character which divines usually give him, of bringing forward the most prominent duties in the most "terse" and emphatic language.

The text embraces, in a few words, doctrines of grave character and responsibility. In the first place, we are commanded to "fear God;" and in the second, to "honour the king." And, as the style of St. Peter's composition so much, in many places, resembles that of St. Paul's; so we find that, like that great apostle, not only does one sentence refer to a preceding, but, in many instances, the one is so closely linked to the other, in its meaning and construction, that it would be hard to separate the one from the other, without material detriment to the instruction sought to be conveyed. Indeed, we might justly go farther, and say, that, at times, it would seem as if certain passages were indissolubly connected; and that a separation would altogether endanger the doctrines involved.

And surely, if, in any one passage more than another of his valuable epistles, the observation holds good, that before us is the example!

Such is the grand and beautifully expansive genius of our "pure and undefiled religion,"—such its wide and comprehensive character, that when, with the "heart, and soul, and strength," we love our God, and, as His creatures, render Him a willing and ready obedience, by this very act we, at the same time, discharge all our duties to our fellow-beings, whatever may be their rank or station in this world.

God is holy, wise, just, and gracious; and, therefore, when He is pleased to adopt us as His children, and when we are enabled confidently and faithfully to look up to Him as our Father, and to endeavour, by His grace, implicitly to do His will, and imitate His divine example, we are, in pursuing such a course, not only discharging our duty to our heavenly, but also to our earthly, parent and sovereign; that is, so far as weak and fallible beings can discharge their duty.

But let us proceed, at once, to consider this two-fold duty contained in our text:

Firstly, by ascertaining what is meant by "fearing God;" and

Secondly, what we are to understand by "honouring our Queen."

I. To "fear God," must, from what we have already observed, be laid down as a command of the first and greatest importance; and, consequently, to despise Him, on the other hand, or to reject His laws, a crime of the most heinous and awful nature and consequences.

But what is to "fear God?" Is it to tremble with awe, indescribable, at the bare thought that such a Being exists? Is it, with feelings of consternation, to shriek and flee when dangers, dark and appaling, seem to overshadow our terrestrial pilgrimage?

The man who is buried deep in the mire of heathenism, dreads the very idol to which he attributes the agency of every awful catastrophe; be that idol the sun, or moon, or any other imaginary deity! The untaught savage feels alarm at the fleet and sudden flash of the vivid and brilliant lightning; and is, as it were, struck dumb, as, far and near, he hears the thunder's rolling peal! The poor, wandering Indian,—a stranger alike to civilization, as to the blessings of the everlasting gospel,—becomes terror-stricken, as the huge trees of his rude fcrest-home yield their instant obedience to the hurricane's turbulent and destructive mandate!

But, my brethren, are these evidences of this portion of our text,—of the "fear of God?" Oh, no! they cannot be.

When St. Peter tells us to "fear God," he means (as the words might be more intelligibly, and perhaps more literally, translated) to honour God,—to prize him above all others,—to esteem him as a being deserving of the highest adoration,—to obey him as the only Sovereign "worthy (as St. John says) to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing." In short, to pay him homage as the majestic Architect and supreme Governor of all things in heaven and in earth,—the "King of kings and Lord of lords."

This is what it is to "fear God," according to the Scriptures; which, we believe to be our sole and unerring guide in the paths

hatic

acter

And, aces, great it, in its

e the etion and inf his

our nsive gth," and arge rank

n He abled, and nitate only othly, eings

duîy

and

of duty. And the more carefully and seriously we "mark, learn, and inwardly digest" them, the more clearly will we be enabled to see our duty; and, therefore, learn to fear God as He would have us fear Him. The whole of His revelation presents to our view and contemplation, one transcendently be autiful and instructive picture of all that He hath done, to unfold to us His omnipotent and omniscient character,—that He is our "God and King" from everlasting to everlasting.

The very creation of this world which we inhabit; of worlds of which we know but little;—yea, of worlds of which we know nothing;—the creation of our first parents; the once lovely and blissful habitation of Paradise; the vaulted heavens with all their resplendent glories; the whole of earth's treasures, animate and inanimate; could we analyze and understand with tolerable accuracy, these or even the simplest of them, would furnish us with an inexhaustible argument of the power and majesty of Deity, and inspire us to fear Him, honour and obey Him, in our true position as the humblest of His creatures.

But we must pass on to the latter portion of our subject which commands us to honour the King; especially as a topic flowing from the former and one most worthy of our reflection on this memorable and propitious anniversary.

II. We have stated that the first duty involves the second; or in other words, that if we fear God, we must as a matter of course honour the King. Why then proceed now to prove the latter portion of our text? A moment's reflection will show us that the answer is plain and intelligible. We cannot lose sight nor fail to be convinced, of the fact that the duty of fearing, (or obeying) God, involves at the same time the duty of honouring the King, or Queen; inasmuch as the duty of rendering submission to our earthly Sovereign is one strongly approved of and in fact commanded and enforced by Almighty God Himself.

But my Brethren, when we consider the weakness of the human understanding—how slow we are to follow a direction, unless it is again and again laid down, explained and enforced; then will we see the necessity of establishing each point with the greatest clearness, and of giving text after text to convince, even the humblest comprehension, that the latter duty, is one flowing directly from the former.

Such a course indeed characterizes the sayings of our Blessed Lord Himself; and in the writings of His Apostles, are every where seen, proofs of the duty of unfolding, in the most intelligible form, God's will to His creature man.

Let me proceed then to show you the Scriptural ground, both from the old and New Testament, on which we base the doctrine of our allegiance to our earthly Sovereign; as well as further briefly to exhibit evidences from holy writ of the marked displeasure of the Almighty against a disloyal or rebellious spirit.

In the first place, if we retrace the line of old Testament history, we shall find that from the call of Abraham down to the coronation of Saul—a period of about 800 years—the Hebrew, or Israelitish, nation were under a Theocracy, or the immediate government of God. He regulated their labour, enacted their laws, (both civil and ecclesiastical) and gave effect to these laws by punishing the wicked and rewarding the good; and from thence appointed earthly kings and judges for the regular administration of His extraordinary Providence.

And to show the high respect which was due to Sovereignty and the exalted estimation in which the Kingly office was to be held, we find abundant proof in the history of the prophet Samuel.

When it pleased the Almighty to give to the people a King, Samuel anoints Saul, and says to them "See ye him whom the Lord hath chosen, that there is none like him among all the people"? And all the people shouted and said God save the King!

And again, during the reign of Saul, we find David, although he had at times been ill-treated by the monarch, paying the greatest possible allegiance to his majesty. He frequently speaks of the Sovereign as the "Lord's anointed"; and one instance may be cited, from the many others, to show not only this, but ds of know and their

nark,

e be

is He

sents

land

His

and

with eity, true

and

hich wing this

; or urse tter that nor (or

ing nisand

an s it vill test the manner in which those were punished who raised the sword against the King. When the Amalekite had slain Saul, David on hearing the melancholy news rent his clothes; and he said to the young man (the Amalekite) "how wast thou not afraid to stretch forth thine hand to destroy the Lord's anointed? And David called one of the young men and said, go near, and fall upon him. And he smote him that he died. And David said unto him, thy blood be upon thy head; for thy mouth hath testified against thee, Saying, I have slain the Lord's anointed."

Again in the book of Exodus we have Moses laying down, amongst the laws which the Isrælites were to observe, that of submitting to Supreme authority.

He there (xxii chap.) says "Thou shalt not curse the ruler of thy people." And again Solomon, the wisest of men and the last of the Kings of the "United Monarchy," says (in Ecclesiastes x. 20) "Curse not the King, no not in thy thought: for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter; and in the book of Proverbs he says to his Son (xxiv. 21) "Fear thou the Lord and the King; and meddle not with them that are given to change."

Instances, almost numberless, might be further adduced to prove the obedience, or allegiance, due to the Sovereign, not only from the books already named but also from those portions of the old Testament which give us the history of the separate Kings of Judah and of Israel; as well as of the whole Jewish people until the period of our blessed Lord's nativity.

But it is our duty, in justice to our subject, to see what is said on the duty of loyalty in the New Testament records. And here, in the very opening Gospel, have we the command of our Saviour himself:—"Render, (He says,) unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things which are God's."

St. Paul tells the Romans, (xiii. 1,) to "let every soul be subject unto the higher powers." For, (he says,) "there is no power but of God: the powers that be, are ordained of God. Whose-ever, therefore, resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist, shall receive to themselves damna-tion." Wherefore, ye must be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake.

In the same Apostle's first letter to Timothy, (ii. 1 and 2,) he says, "I exhort, therefore, that first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for Kings and for all that are in authority; that they may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all godliness and honesty."

In addressing an Epistle to Titus, the same illustrious apostle enjoins upon him to put those under his charge in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, and to be ready to every good work. And in a former part of the epistle, from whence our text is selected, (13 and 14,) St. Peter says, "submit yourselves to every ordinance of man, for the Lord's sake; whether it be to the King, as supreme, or unto Governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well:" and in the verse of our text, he says:-"Honour all men-Love the Brotherhood—Fear God—Honour the King." Where, then, is there the slightest ground for exception to the duty of loyalty? Do not the passages which I have already quoted-and there are many others on the subject, in the Bible-prove in the plainest and most comprehensive language, that we are bound as a duty—a high and holy duty, because enjoined by God Himself-to pay allegiance to our King or Queen, as the case may be,-to that monarch whom Providence may think fit to entrust with the reins of our country's Government.

But, not only is Holy Scripture most expressively clear on this duty, but also therein have we remarkable instances throughout, of a rebellious spirit meeting, not only with the disapprobation, but the actual punishment of the Almighty!

The very fact recorded of our first parent's rebellion against his Creator and Sovereign's injunctions, ought to be sufficient to strike with awe those who would dare indulge in the exercise of a like obstinate and sinful principle! The wicked antediluvians become more and more hardened and insubordinate; and they perish beneath the awful deluge, which the anger of a just God poured ear, and David uth hath nointed." g down, that of

be sword il, David

he said

ot afraid

iointed?

and the Ecclesit: for a wings to his meddle ot only ions of parate Jewish

And
of our things
od's."
e sub-

power hosoce of mna-

down upon them! The Egyptians rebel against Jehovah's commands, and plague after plague announces to them the visitation of heaven's omnipotent King; and at the last, the storm—the awful precursor of his anger—rends the firmament; and the host of "blood-stained Pharaoh" are overtaken in their mad career, and buried by the waters, which, in wild commotion, at their master's bidding, "heaved an ocean on their march below." We might, were further examples necessary, instance the case of Korah and his company, of thousands and tens of thousands of the Philistines, and also of the Isrælites, who were cut down by the hand of the Almighty, for their rebellion to their earthly, as well as to their heavenly Governor; and whose history, now stained with the records of their wicked and disloyal deeds, should be a standing warning to us if we should ever attempt to tread in the paths which still are deeply marked with their faithless foot-prints!

So far, then, have we seen from the word of truth, that it is a duty which admits of no modification, that we are to fear, or honour, our God; and honour, or pay due allegiance to our Queen; and that we are to expect nothing short of the punishment of the Almighty, should we oppose ourselves to these his just requirements.

But there is one point which must be strictly kept in view, by those who would desire to do what is right, with regard to the subject of my discourse; and that point I have endeavoured clearly to lay down in the observations which I have already made this day in your hearing. It is the ground or authority which I have taken in support of my argument. I have appealed to both the Old and New Testament Scriptures; to the command and testimony of God Himself, of His prophets, and of His apostles, who were inspired by Him, and who received instruction from Him, on every "jot and tittle" of His merciful dispensation. Now, if this is sufficient authority, and if we hold it to be such, for not only the duty which I have this day been particularly considering, but also every other duty devolving upon us as professors of Christianity; then are we most reprehensible, should we in anywise slight it, or treat it with indifference and contempt.

But, my brethren, so far as you, as a body, are concerned, I have no reason to ask you whether you consider the authority which I have this day quoted, as valid, or otherwise. I know that as professing members of Christ's Catholic or Universal Church, you hold the Bible as the only guide for your conduct; and that you believe that "whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not required of any man that it should be believed as an article of Faith, or be thought requisite or necessary to salvation." Yet, there are others, in this, as well as in the land of our fathers—I regret to say many others—who differ from us on this subject of the first importance; many who, while they profess to hold the Bible as God's revelation, and to attach to it the highest importance; nevertheless, so strain its passages. gloss over many of its most direct injunctions; and so accommodate to themselves whatever they please of its contents, (to suit their own peculiar creed and discipline,) that it appears a sort of mockery to appeal to it at all, as even a portion of the standard of their belief. And, moreover, my brethren, in addition to all this, the persons to whom I allude, take in numerous oral traditions, (the authority of which is most questionable,) to form an addition to the Bible, and with the Bible to complete their religious creed.

Now my object in making these remarks, towards the conclusion of my discourse to-day, is to show you, before we separate, that the duty of loyalty, as it is clearly laid down in the Bible, cannot be faithfully held by those do not take that sacred book as the only Standard of their religious faith.

The class of Christians to whom I have just alluded denominate themselves the Church of Rome; and I am ready to show you that they cannot, to be true to their creed, yield to our most gracious Queen the allegiance which the Scriptures demand of her subjects. The Romish creed, lays down that the "Pope is Supreme"—that he has universal authority (not jurisdiction merely over Rome, but over all the world); that he is the suc-

lehovah's hem the last, the
mament;
in their
motion,
march instance tens of ho were

llion to whose

nd dis-

should

tit is a ear, or to our unishese his view, ard to oured ready ority e ape; to ohets, who His

this duty we

cessor of St. Peter, and therefore as such has the highest authority given him by our Lord Himself, "not only over all churches" but also all the Princes of the earth." From this belief in the " Supremacy of the Pope"; Romanists are justly termed, by the peculiar name of "Papists"—or children of the Pope. Now, my Brethern, it requires no argument to prove to you that a religion which recognizes no one on earth as superior to the Pope, cannot recognize the Queen's supremacy; and, therefore, Papists holding this religion cannot, if faithful, be loyal subjects of Victoria. The Scriptures (although by papists referred to in this matter) most signally fail in supporting the Pope's succession from Peter, or his inheriting the infallible and supreme power which he arrogates to himself. The contrary is most fairly established—that Peter had no power more than any other apostle—that he was not infallible; and from ecclesiastical history it can be further shown that the suprerracy of the Romish See was wholly unknown for the first six centuries. In the fourth century, for example, all bishops were pronounced equal; and when in the sixth century the Bishop of Constantinople, was offered by the Emperor Mauritius the title of Universal Bishop; Gregory the Great, of Rome, burst out in furious opposition against this title and authority, and said that he who assumed this universal jurisdiction "was the forerunner of Antichrist"!! Strange language you will say, my Brethren, from the lips of one who, if we believe modern Romanists (or Papists) was a successor of St. Peter and inherited as such this universal power and title!

But the truth of the matter is simply that as the city of Rome grew in importance, so did her Bishop, until at last he assumed the power and title which now his votaries give him with abject submission—a title and power strongly advocated in the notorious decrees of the Papal Council of Trent, which bears the modern date of the sixteenth century.

But that Papists cannot be, (in adherence to their creed) loyal subjects, is not only clear from their belief itself; but is also shown from their conduct engraven on the pages of history. There we find that wherever and whenever Romish power can be manifested, there and then without exception, is the subjugation of the monarch to Papal obedience sought to be established. If you would have evidences of this assertion, take up the history of any country in Christendom which popery has visited, and examine for yourselves.

Read over the history of England for example. back as the twelfth century and what will you find? The Pope exercising his assumed power over the monarch John, forcing him to give to him and his successors the very Kingdom of England; to pay him an enormous tribute and acknowledge him his master! Pass on to the beginning of the sixteenth century and you find Henry VIII shaking off the power of Rome, which struggles for the ascendancy. Examine then. towards the middle of the same century, the history of the days of Mary, (called bloody on account of the awful scenes of butchery which were caused by her almost inhuman cruelties.) you find popery rampant—Mary the wicked Pontiff's contemptible slave, following out his wishes through his cardinal, who now a legate from the holy see, and in the chief city of her dominions. communicates to the nominal Queen her master's stern and haughty commands. Turn then to the close of the seventeenth century and you will find an agent is transmitted to Rome by the bigoted and ignominous James Second, to declare his submission to Romish dominancy. Nor in England alone are there to be found evidences of Papal assumption and despotic rule. Ireland, too, has furnished a dark and melancholy history of Popish arrogancy. The disaffection of the period of James the Second—the awful rebellion of 1798—the attempt to throw off allegiance to the crown in 1848 (of which I was myself a witness) will all be found to be the fruits of the pernicious seeds of Papal dogmas; and all their horrors and massacres will but serve to exhibit the efforts of a people, the majority of whom, are taught, by Popish doctrines, to place the Papal standard in the citadel of our Protestant Queen and "faith's Defender."

These are but a few sketches to illustrate and establish a subject upon which volumes might be written. But they are, I believe, more than sufficient to convince us that where Popery authorchurches of in the l, by the Now,

u that a to the serefore, subjects ed to in succes-

preme most an any iastical comish

In the equal; nople, versal oppo-

e who er of thren, ts (or a this

Rome umed bject otoridern

also ory.

gi

tl

t

exists, there also must exist disaffection—that the very doctrine of the "Papal supremacy," and the rigour with which that doctrine must be enforced, according to the genius of Romanism, is calculated to strike at the very root of Sovereignty itself, and to render the monarch a mere nominal occupant of the throne, denominated, perhaps, by them, through policy, the "head of the constitution," but in reality as powerless as the meanest of her subjects.

Such is Romish doctrine, and such the effects of Romish government! But it may be said that there are some Papists who are good and loyal subjects; and perhaps to be found in that assemblage before me to-day doing honour to their Queen. If there are, there will be found none more ready and forward than myself to congratulate them in the discharge of so high and exemplary a duty; simply because if I find them so acting, I have then some hopes that they are being led to see the apostacy of their creed and to renounce the superstitious mummeries in which they have been practised. And if the errors in which Papists have been so blindly trained were more boldly and carefully explained on such occasions as the present, I doubt not but that many would forsake their modern and un-scriptural tenets and morose, bigoted, and almost heathenish practices; and endeavour to serve the One living and true God, as alone worthy of adoration; as well as to pay faithful allegiance to the earthly monarch.

But, my Brethren, to conclude. Let me congratulate you this day on your goodly numbers, and your praiseworthy deportment. What sight is, or can be, more lovely and attractive than a throng of Christians, assembled together to hail the birth-day of their Sovereign by a religious service—to bend the knee in humility "before Jehovah's awful throne;" to ask Him to spare our beloved Queen—"long to reign over us"—to thank Him for having caused the true light of the gospel to shine in our land, dispelling the clouds of Papal darkness from our hearts and understandings.

As true and faithful subjects we protest against Romish apostacy; and though our forefathers have bequeathed to us the legacy of a sound faith; let us not think that it was exclusively given for ourselves, but labour zealously that others even in our own days may share in its advantages; and that untainted it may be handed down to our children and children's children.

e of

rine

ılcu-

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{der}$

ated,

on,"

mish

pists

d in een.

vard

high

ting,

pos-

eries

 \mathbf{hich}

and

not

tural

and

rthy

thly

this

aent.

rong

their

ility

 oved

ving

lling

ings.

pos-

the

vely

Nature seems this joyous day, my brethren, to favour our loyal and happy congregation. The stately trees around us, in this sequestered grove, seem to bend over us their wide-spread boughs, clothed with their rich summer foliage, as if to screen us from the heat of the mid-day sun. No storm, with violence, disturbs us in the contemplation of our duty and our privileges. No sickness, loads the atmosphere with its enfeebling and death-bearing contagion. No civil commotion plants its seeds of perturbation in our hearts and minds: peace and unity, and brotherly love, seem, on the contrary, to cement each heart to heart, and hand to hand, in our happy and contented assemblage.

There are many, my brethren, who, no doubt, would speak of our congregating here to-day, with terms of the utmost ridicule and contempt; and who, did power and influence enable them to accomplish their desires, would have us, if possible, for ever scattered from each other's society; but even the approbation of such could not be esteemed by us as of any advantage or consequence; for those who could treat with indifference an injunction so ancient and scriptural as the allegiance to the Sovereign, are unworthy of the very name of men, or of christians. Others there are, who, while they would have us esteem them for their loyalty to the Queen, and their respect for the laws of our constitution, are all the while but wearing the mask to achieve an object; and who, could they attain their darling purposes, would show themselves at once in all the deformity of their anti-constitutional deception, and having clambered to the eminence, would, perchance, according to ancient precedent, kick the Crown from off a British Monarch's brow!

Let us not for a moment flatter ourselves with the idea that Rome is not what she had been. Let us not imagine that she is idle or indifferent at the present. She is e.cr awake, ever active; watching with intense desire to gai the ascendancy. And if Protestants are not forward in taking the vantage ground, ren

an alo

you

lor

ins

an

fer

of

fas

w] m

bi

(a sh

le

ar

C

fle

W

C

y

p

fa

if their sentinels are not continually at their posts, if like mighty men of christian valour, they do not, by their action and example, contend for the pure faith—the "faith that was once delivered to the Saints"—they may have good reason, by and by, to regret their apathy and drowsiness; too late will it be then to endeavour to recover their position, when a wide spread gloom shall have obstructed their path, and the sword of persecution guarded them in on every side.

We should, this day, thank God, my brethren, that such an awful state of things does not now exist, though it may be apprehended; but that the glorious and uninterrupted rays of Gospel light shine in our favoured land; and that we are permitted by the mercy and loving-kindness of God, to celebrate the Birth-day of our Protestant Queen, in peace and quietness: in peace, while the glittering sword of war, in a foreign land, stands unsheathed, full-drawn, portending desolation! in quietness; not the serfs of despotic rule, but under the limited government of our amiable and beloved Victoria, who, as a "nursing mother," (in the language of Scripture,) is not too high exalted on the throne of royalty, to visit, and converse, and sympathise, with the poorest and most needy of her subjects; yea, and grant them every assistance which they may require.

But, why need I enforce upon you, my Brethren, true, loyal, and Protestant principles? Does not your very attendance here, and the attention which you have so far paid to this day's services, now near their close, give strong and unerring proofs of your heartfelt convictions on the subject? I have only to look at those flashing banners around me, now unfurling in the genial breeze, to learn your principles—those banners bearing upon them mottos and emblems of your Orange cause, glorious with life—and to feel, as I love to gaze upon them, that whatever others have done, or may do, you have not forgetten past deliverances. Long may your noble and loyal order flourish, (my brethren.) Long may you live to wear, on this and all other momorable occasions, your Scarlet, Orange, and Blue Insignia—which have never faded, though oft fearlessly exposed to sun and storm—ever

nighty

exam-

once

y and

l it be pread

of perch an

ay be ays of

e per-

ebrate

tness:

land,

overn-

ursing

xalted

athise.

grant

loyal,

here,

rvices,

heartthose
creeze, motand to
done,
Long Long
sions,
never ever

remembering that they are the bright and glowing marks of an Institution, whose principles are based on the word of God alone—ever remembering that they are the colours under which your fathers fought and bled, to maintain truth, unity, and love—to maintain Protestant Ascendancy and no Surrender!

And you, my brethren, who, though not belonging to this institution, nevertheless uphold, with them, the Protestant creed; and who are ready, on every occasion, to unite with them in defending both Church and State from hostile attacks,—whether of a moral or physical character; you, I would exhort to "stand fast," in your holy religion,—believing it to be the religion which, under God's blessing, has withstood the nipping frosts of many a severe and stormy winter,—the vily attacks of many a bitter and misguided foe; to be the religion against which (according to the Saviour's own prediction) the "gates of hell shall never prevail."

Be thus UNITED and seek God's grace to succour you, and lead you to read and understand His holy word—to enlighten and encourage you—believing it to be the corner stone of your Christian edifice. Be this your course, and then darkness shall flee before you—rebellion and persecution shall never cross your way, nor do you hurt; then shall you go on "conquering and to conquer," till at length, under the blessing of Jehovah, if not in your own days, in the days of those who shall follow you, the prediction of old shall be fulfilled—"Babylon the Great shall fall,—fall—never to rise again!"

