Notes and Suggestions of Practical Utility

FOR THE FARM, FIELD, GARDEN AND DAIRY.

Cleanings of Interest for Our Country Readers.

We rise by what we do. Try to do justice by all. Figs improve by exercise. Keep up a brisk thinking. Keep the horses' feet clean. Clover is the best of pig feed. Educate a heifer into cow habits. Food for plants is poison to man. No man is fit to judge his fellow. Flowers are a sign of social taste. Have you got a good hog pasture. Plant some more peas for late use. Don't have your bean poles too tall. Self help is the best help in the world. Arbitrary power is always dangerous. An excited cow will hold up her milk. Educate the muscle through the brain. It is hard teaching an unwilling mind. Unusual dishes soon fall on the appetite. Dull, rough, or rusty tools make hard work. Sow lawn grass that thrive well on your soil. It is not good for any one to live without work. Too many men think they were born to rule. There is no use of talking to unwilling ears. Innocence is often a shield against temptation. Horns are going—prelude of an age of peace. Don't be anxious to regulate the affairs of others. Overeating, as well as overdrinking is dangerous. The pine apple is said to be good for indigestion. It is not necessary to be a hog in order to raise swine. Pick the early potato beetles by hand in the garden. Do your best and then be satisfied with yourself. An animal that has plenty of salt will never overeat. Don't borrow trouble. You will have plenty to lend. Disease is the result of improper conditions of some kind. It is a pleasure to a cow to be milked by a gentle milker. A root of white clover will make a fine hanging plant. Put on the soil an equivalent for all that is taken off from it. Don't neglect the garden until the field work is done again. A comfortable and contented cow readily gives down her milk. There is improvement every year in the treatment of animals. Petroleum and castor oil make a good lubricating mixture. Animals that are turned away to pasture should be seen often. A good farmer does small jobs when he sees the need of them. There are values in July foods that chemistry does not account for. Keep a supply of clover seed on hand and sow it on all waste places. More trees are killed by starting too early than by steady cold of winter. Go through with the emotion of milking a heifer before she comes in milk. The worst thing to do with a young animal is to "break it." Educate it. There is such a thing as profitable farming with commercial fertilizers alone. Land that is too moist for farm crops when level may have the rows ridged up. White clover will grow where dandelions and buttercups will, and is better food. Where are the rain makers this year? Are their last year's efforts just taking effect? Keep your knife sharp and use it when you see a limb growing where it is not wanted. Work, coupled with thought, putting theory into practice, is the educator of the world. When you work on the road do not throw the small stones out on the grass. Pile them up. Wide tires on the wagons are important. In France where they have the best roads in the world, four-inch to six-inch tires are common. Ordinarily the man with the small farm makes just as good a living as the man with several times as many acres, and with much less worry. Watch the young trees don't allow them to take on any superfluous growth. Allow nothing to remain that you don't wish to retain. Use the knife. We often see a difference in the yield of staple crops, such as corn and wheat, upon adjacent farms, that is not at all justified by the difference in the land.

The roots of lettuce and celery when dug up should be turned under water, so as not to expose the cut stem to the air, and should be left in the water till needed for use.

During the year 1892 12,855,019 bunches of bananas were imported into the United States, being an increase over the importation in 1891 of 2,008,294. Each bunch is worth $1 gold on an average.

The worst idea that a farmer can get into his head is that he needs more land. We have seen a good many farms, but seldom one where more labor could not be better employed than more land.

One of the best preventatives of mildew on plants is powdered lime. It should be dusted over them when wet with dew, or just after a rain, and repeated as often as necessary. It is a good check for potato vine disease.

The man who raises grain should keep enough stock to convert his rough feed into manure, and the farmer who keeps stock should raise grain enough to feed them well during growth and then properly fatten for market.

THE POULTRY YARD.

A sitting hen must be well supplied to endure the ordeal of remaining on the nest three weeks in order to bring off a brood. That is, she must be fat, as a large portion of the time of incubation she may not come off the nest more than once in twenty-four hours and even then the object will be more with a desire to quench her thirst than to satisfy hunger. In other words, the incubation of eggs by a sitting hen is, to a certain extent, a period of semi-hibernation, the fat of the body helping to maintain her during the time she is so engaged. The fact that in nearly all cases hens are fat when they become broody has led us to try several experiments with breeds in order to notice the effect of certain foods in preventing or inducing incubation, and we can safely say that there is no breed deserving the appellation of non-sitting, as the hens of any breed will become broody if they are made fat by heavy feeding. It is true that there are some breeds that appear to evince no inclination to sit, such as the Leghorns, Hamburgs, etc., but this is due to their active habits, which assist them to utilize the fat in the form of energy instead of storing it in the body; but we have had Leghorns prove as persistent as Brahmas on the nest by feeding them so heavily as to fatten them, and especially when they were confined and deprived of exercise.

A knowledge of this fact will permit of feeding the hens so as to keep them laying through the season. It is best, if a hen is broody, to allow her to sit, for in that way she will be reduced in flesh and be in better condition for laying. If broken up, she will lay but few eggs, and then become broody again, because she will not have gotten rid of sufficient fat. The proper way to feed laying hens is to give meat, grass and milk, keeping grain away except in cold weather. The main object should be to give the hens plenty of exercise. A hen will lay more eggs if allowed to hatch a brood when she shows a desire to do so than to deprive her of that privilege. Table Fowls. By table fowls are meant not the birds intended for market, but those you wish for your own use. One reason why there are so few choice table fowls is that the best breeds for the table are not high up on the list as egg producers, and as most farmers try to procure choice table fowls and at the same time secure a flock of excellent laying hens, they find the consummation of their wishes an impossibility. For instance, there is the Dorking fowl and also the Pit Game. They are the best for the table to be obtained, but they do not compare with Leghorns for laying, and when very young they are tender, as the chicks produce their feathers almost as rapidly as do young turkeys. They succumb quickly to lice and dampness, and are not easily raised. With all these drawbacks, however, they are worth keeping, for the quality of their flesh is superior; but we doubt if it pays to raise them except under favorable conditions and with the best of care and attention.

How to Sterilize Milk.

Place the milk in a flask, inserting a wad of cotton in the neck about one inch long and closely packed. Place the flask in a tin vessel filled with water, keeping the mouth above the surface of the water, and boil 20 minutes. The next day heat the milk again for 20 minutes. It will be then sterilized and can be kept in the flask just as it is for weeks. The heating destroys the microbes. The second heating makes sure of what the first scalding might miss. The pling of cotton, as has long been known, completely excludes the microbes. This is the whole secret.

In view of what Hood's Sarasaparilla has done for others, is it not reasonable to believe that it will be of benefit to you?

SKODA CURES That Tired Feeling.

Chas. H. Borden, of Wolfville, N. B., is Carriage Builder by trade. Mr. Borden is well-known in that vicinity, and his statement is entitled to great credit. He says:

"In the Spring of '92, I became much run down, with loss of appetite, as a result of over-work. I also have suffered for some time, with EXTREME CONSTIPATION. I had no ambition to work, and the slightest labor would completely tire me out. A few weeks' use of

SKODA'S DISCOVERY AND SKODA'S Little Tablets,

CURED my Constipation, restored my Appetite, and made me better able to work than I have been for years. As a result of their use, I have gained 7 1/2 lbs. in flesh. I would recommend them, as the BEST Remedies I know."

SKODA DISCOVERY CO., WOLFVILLE, N. B.

From Friend to Friend Goes the story of the excellence of Hood's Sarasaparilla and what it has accomplished, and this is the strongest advertising which is done on behalf of this medicine. We endeavor to tell honestly what Hood's Sarasaparilla is and what it will do, but what it has done is far more important and far more potent. Its unequalled record of cures is sure to convince those who have never tried Hood's Sarasaparilla that it is an excellent medicine.

SPICE.

Trestop—A dollar for pulling one tooth! Dentist—Yes; you took gas. Trestop—How much a thousand do you charge for that!

Metropolitan Waiter—Will you have your egg in a cup? Rural Student—Yes if it's just as good. They come in a shell out our way.

Mrs. Brown—George, have you seen that china I have been painting? Mr. Brown—Yes; I heard you say you wanted it fired, so I let it go out the window at a cat last night.

I don't see why you call him greedy when he gave you his nice large apple to divide. That's just it. Of course I had to give him the biggest piece then.

Hicks—Say, see here! when are you going to pay me that ten dollars you owe me! Dix—By Jove, old man! I forgot all about it, I'll make a note of it now.

Hicks—Better make it a sight draft. Mother (putting the boy out of the pantry) How many more times will I have to tell you to keep away from that preserve-jar! Small boy (sobbing)—No more, mamma; they're all gone.

Fitz—What do you think of this order compelling the waiters to remove the hair from their faces! Mac—I think I should be far better pleased if the hotel managers devoted their tonorial attentions to the butter and the hash.

Ardent Suitor—Why do you want a week to consider my proposal? It will be a week of agony to me. Fanny Flirt—Well, I've just heard that some of those foreign naval officers are coming to the city next week, and I want to see if I can land one of them.

Wonderful climate in Arizona, said the returned wanderer. I knowed a feller to have twenty-seven bullets shot into him and still git as well as ever. He must have suffered a great deal. He did, pardner, he did. The pore feller was so full o' holes that he couldn't hold whisky.

POOR DOCUMENT

HORSE NOTES.

Dictator, though small, was a fine model of a horse.

Horses under 153 hands are excluded from races in Denmark.

Buffalo's Girl's foal by Direct has a speed inheritance of 2.09.

Captain Bowman 2.29, by Wilkes, is expected to beat 2.20 this year.

Fifty-four patents have been issued on ball-bearing, pneumatic sulks.

Palo Alto put fourteen two-year-olds in the record list last year with average records of 2.25.

So Long, 2.13, and Virginia Evans 2.15, trotted a mile double over Fleetwood last week to 2.17.

The owner of Yolo Maid has made a wager that she will go in 2.04 this season.

The influence of Dictator upon our speediest trotting stock will never cease to be felt.

If track speed is desired then a trotting mare should be mated with a trotting stallion.

Homer Wilkes 2.33 promises to be the first New Hampshire bred trotter to beat 2.30 this year.

Gillette 2.11 went a mile Memorial Day at Parkway track in 2.14 and Fairport one in 2.18.

When the weather becomes teally hot be very careful of horses as they will be easily overheated.

In no family is there a stronger tendency to sire pacing speed than in the family of George Wilkes.

The screws were put on at Baltimore. H. P. Norton a driver, was fined $250 for fraudulent driving.

The covered track at Meadville, Pa., which was destroyed by a recent flood will be rebuilt at once.

C. H. Van Ness of Cornwall, N. Y., will breed his fine mare Lou to Ansel and present Mr. Bonner the foal.

Never before has the demand for horses that possess speed, beauty and soundness been so active as it is to-day.

Allen Farm has a suckling colt that weighed on June 1 346 pounds. The colt is by Pistachio, dam Idalia, by Alcantara.

Ten miles of road jogging one day and six miles of track work the next is the program Nancy Hanks is following.

Nellie Aldine, 2.21, four years, by Wilkes Boy, has been bought by Lieutenant Field of Washington, D. C., for $6,500.

Almont Wilkes, owned by Dr. Seward Webb of Shelburne, Va., will be sold at auction in New York at Tattersall's sale June 21-23.

Although the bicycle sulky is a great help these were not many horses capable of going three heats better than 2.20 before the first of June.

Obtaining a 2.30 record in a race is not a "vitality-sapping" process. For the real trotter of to-day it should not be much more than good exercise.

The California Blood Horse association will erect a course near San Francisco that will rival Morris Park and Monmouth in its appointments.

Crit Davis regards as one of his most promising trotters this year Judge Wilkes 2.26, by Bourbon Wilkes, out of a Mambrino Patchen mare.

A bay filly by Stamboul, 2.07, dam Tricket, 2.14, was dropped at Forbes Farm, May 30. It is the fastest bred youngster ever dropped in New England.

Many trotters and pacers not only standard bred, but exceedingly well bred, that are models of form and style, are destitute of the crowning merit, speed.

Bran stands foremost as the food most generally in use for the invalid horse; it acts as a laxative, is frequently tempting to the appetite and easy of digestion.

Yearling races have yet to become popular with the public, and it is questionable whether the number of events for trotters of that age will increase in the future.

Pactolus, 2.12, in his campaign as a yearling, two, three, four, and five-year-old, has never been behind the money but three times. His legs and feet today are without blemish.

Honest racing is demanded, and good sport is demanded, and no longer the intolerable prolongations of trotting races of the past, especially in scoring, will be supported.

The records of Hal Pointer, Belle Hamlin Nancy Hanks, artha Wilkes, Allerton, Sunlon Arion, Kremlin, Stamboul and Goldsmith Maid were obtained in struggles against the watch.

There is no farm that contains so much of the blood of Electioneer, excepting Palo Alto itself, as Prospect Hill Farm, Franklin, Penn., and it has well been styled the Palo Alto of the East.

The breeding of horses for the turf reached that point where a tin-cup record is looked upon as a reproach rather than a credit, for it carries with it the inference that the animal is not a race-horse.

Bran mashes may be given hot or cold—cold are perhaps quite as grateful to the horse—but the sipping of hot mash in catarrhal affections is particularly beneficial, from the necessary inhalation of the steam.

The heaviest foal dropped on Allen Farm this season is a chestnut colt by Mazatlan, dam Mirella, by Kentucky Prince. He put in an appearance on the evening of May 26, and tipped the scales at 140 pounds at birth.

Stamboul will not be asked to go any fast quarters for some time, as Doble does not think a horse that is brought from California to this part of the country regains his form until he has passed the better part of a year here.

Public opinion has become so strong against the anti-pool law in Connecticut that a bill has been introduced, which, if passed, will permit the trotting associations, bicycle organizations and other societies to hold their annual gatherings.

Maurice D. Clarke, M. D., of Haverhill, Mass., has a handsome bay filly foaled June 4, by Fire King, standard grandson of Lord Russell, sire of Kremlin, 2.07. It is Fire King's first foal. The dam is a speedy road mare by Fred Lothair 2.29, dam by the Leighton Horse.

Barley, says an authority, is without a peer as food for horses. They will do more work on it than on oats, corn, peas, beans or any combination of these. The Arabs make extensive use of it for their horses when on long hard journeys, preferring it to anything else obtainable.

At Denver, Col., May 31, the twelve-year-old brown horse Longtime broke the six-mile trotting record. It was previously held by the chestnut gelding Satellite, by Tempter, who trotted in 16.53 in 1886. Longtime trotted the distance with only one break in 16.08.

The best and easiest way to oil harness is to use crude petroleum. Put a little lamp-black in it and apply it without washing the leather. The oil will take off the dirt; it will go into the leather, keeping the water out and making it softer. It will turn water and will not injure the leather.

Any breeder that has any natural tact for driving a horse can certainly develop the speed of his colts to such a degree that it can be told whether or not they are likely to be fast enough to be race winners; and in either case the training is quite sure to make them good road horses, if not trotters, and there is a good market for either class.

Breeders and blacksmiths should take note of this: At Palo Alto the horseshoer is never allowed to use a knife on the feet of trotters. The rasp only must be carefully used, and should there be any marks of it on the outside of the hoof, a prompt dismissal of the employe would follow. Very little trouble is ever experienced with horses' feet on this farm.

It is not so much the fashion as it used to be in the days of Hiram Woodruff to prevent a horse from obtaining proper nourishment before a race, but there is still lingering in the minds and methods of a good many trainers too much of the old-fashioned idea that a horse should be "drawn before a race. Trainers who have modern ideas in their heads and who learn something as they go through life have long ago been taught by experience that a horse can no more trot a good race on an empty stomach than a man could do a hard job in a similar physical condition.

The trotters and pacers went fast at Pittsburgh on decoration day. The six-year-old brown stallion Alvan Swift, by Alvan, won in 2.16, 2.18 and 2.20. His previous record was 2.17, so that thus early in the season he has knocked two seconds off his record. In the 2.45 class the bay gelding, Edgar W., reduced his record from 2.44 to 2.44, while in the same race the bay horse E. L. Robinson, by Epaulet, trotted in the same time. In the 2.24 class, Easter Wilkes, by Wilkes Spirit Jr., won the third, fourth and fifth heats in 2.23, and 2.21, which was a big cut off his mark.

Did you ever think how fast a horse at a 2.20 gait moves? His feet move a little faster than a mile in 1.10, as his body is moving at 2.20, and as ground is stationary and then it picked up and moved forward to take the next step, the foot must move as much faster than the body as to make the step, which is ever twice as fast. Now the action is—the foot is at rest upon the ground and is raised some one or two feet high, then forced forward nearly the full length of the leg, then lowered to the ground and is at rest for nearly two-thirds of the time that the next step is being taken. The time, nearly two-thirds, I think is too long, but it is from one-half to two-thirds of the next step.

About Stanley.

The Halifax Echo says: There are some cool people in St. John and evidently the owner of the horse Earl, formerly Stanley entered for the free-for-all in the Halifax Driving club races on May 24th is one of them. It will be remembered that Earl was not allowed to start owing to the non-payment of about $200 ordered by the trotting association as a condition of reinstatement. Had a bond been given the horse could have started, but it was not. Now the owner sends a bill to the riding ground authorities for $110 expenses and intimates that the refusal to allow the horse to start was a trick to give a Halifax horse the race. Mr. Earl evidently thinks the Driving club and Riding grounds are all one and the same. And even if they were, he could have seen the telegraphic correspondence from the secretary of the trotting association regarding the matter had he wished.

The Cholera Outlook.

At a late meeting of the Berlin medical society Professor Virchow made the reassuring announcement that there is no probability of an outbreak of the Cholera anywhere in Germany this year. A month ago he said the direct contrary, it is said, but then conditions may have changed in that time. It is reported sub rosa, though, that a laborer died in Holstein last week with all the symptoms of cholera, and that two others were taken to the hospital suffering in a similar manner. It is also reported that a case had occurred in Hamburg, but nothing more has been said about it. It looks a little dubious, too, that the authorities of Germany have given out that any newspaper which announces the existence of cholera there is to be prosecuted.

Cutting Down The Telegram.

John, said Mr. Squills, the old chemist, to his son, I will give you one hundred pounds to go away with. Maybe as you don't like my business, you will find a better one.

Three weeks later the young man landed in New York. A month later, finding but six pounds in his possession, he determined to sail home again. It was best to let his father know before-hand; but how? A letter would be too slow, so off went John to the telegraph office.

Four shillings a word to London, sir, answered the polite clerk to his enquiry.

I want to tell my father I've spent all my money, and I'm sorry, and I'm coming home, and want him to forgive me, and, and lot of other things, and I can only pay for six words to tell him everything, said John.

Cut it short, replied the clerk.

John sat down and thought. An hour after to his intense astonishment, the old man received the following telegram:—

Squills, London. Fatted calf for one.

It Was Petrified.

A Yankee travelling in England listened for some time to a crowd of men talking together about the wonders they had seen in other lands. While others expressed surprise at what they had heard the Yankee remained passive, and he even yawned when others were working up to a high pitch of excitement. At length one of the travellers said to him:—

Have you anything in your country so superior and so much more wonderful than you could tell us about?

Waal, I just have, drawled the Yankee. There's hundreds of more wonderful things over in Ameriky that we don't pay no heed to.

Oh, you mean Niagara Falls and the Mammoth Cave and such things? said one.

Pshaw! We don't count caves, nor waterfalls though we can beat creation in such things. Say, did any of you fellows hear of the petrified forest in Arizona?—hundreds of thousands of acres of stone forests.

And the trees standing?

The trees standing? Waal, I should say so, and not only standing but all in leaf and some of them in blossom, and others again full of nuts and other fruit, all turned in stone mind you.

And I suppose there were birds in the trees? sneered one.

Birds! Yes, sir, no ends of birds all of the most beautiful plumage and all turned into stone. Even the nests in the trees and the eggs in them were petrified in the most wonderful manner you ever saw. I see some of you fellows doubt me.

Waal, all I have to say is that what I am telling you is true, and I'll bet any sum on it, and take you there to prove it. I'll tell you what I saw last time I was in the petrified forest. There was a hunter who must have been in the forest when the petrification took place, for he was petrified too, and there he stood as straight as you please, with a petrified gun on his shoulder aiming at a petrified bird. Why, the whole thing was so natural that you could see the shot and smoke coming out of the muzzle of the—

I've got you there! interrupted the Englishman. The law of gravitation would have brought down the smoke and the bullets.

So it would, said the Yankee, but the funny thing about petrification is that the law of gravitation was petrified too, and so the blamed thing did not work.

VROOMAN KILLED HICKEY.

A Case that Oves Its Existence to a Woman.

WINDSOR, Ont., June 13.—John Vrooman, a Grand Trunk mechanic, shot and killed Captain James Hickey, a submarine diver, in front of the Manning House here last night. It was an extraordinary case of killing, for the men were driving along the street in the same buggy and, when opposite the Manning House, Vrooman drew a revolver, and shot Hickey in the left breast, and then gave him a push out of the buggy. Vrooman then took the reins and drove along Chatham street and Windsor avenue until he reached Millard's livery stables. Here he halted the horse and got out of the buggy. Two policemen in pursuit overtook him just as he alighted and put him under arrest. Hickey by this time was dead. One of the policemen asked Vrooman why he shot Hickey, and he replied, "Because he smashed me first." Vrooman's face was covered with blood when arrested, which would indicate that he had received a blow from Hickey before the shooting, as he states. Vrooman's statement after being arrested is about as follows: He was driving along Sandwich street when Hickey appeared and insisted upon getting into the buggy to talk over some trouble between the men, in which Hickey's wife figured. The conversation grew into a quarrel when Vrooman says Hickey hit him. He believed Hickey intended to shoot him, and for his own self-protection shot Hickey. A revolver was found in Hickey's possession when shot.

MEYERS' CLEVER ESCAPE.

The First From the Tombs in Eighteen Years.

NEW YORK, June 11.—By the escape of John Meyers on Thursday night, the Tombs loses its first prisoner since that day, some eighteen years ago, when William Sharkey, imprisoned there as a convicted murderer, dressed in the clothes of a woman, who took his place in the cell, with his handkerchief up to his eyes, and with all the symptoms of a weeping and distressed damsel, was escorted by a sympathetic officer into Centre street, and there turned loose to make good his escape. Cell 120, in which Meyers was confined is on the fourth, or top, tier of the old prison. Nothing more uncompromisingly secure could be well imagined than the cells through there, with their heavily barred, grated and padlocked iron doors opening on the corridors, up and down which the tramp of the keepers is constantly echoing. Air is admitted to the cell through the gratings of the door and through the ventilator, about four inches wide by sixteen in length, which opens with an upward slant, into the yard between Elm street and the prison building. The tiniest of kittens could not wriggle through this narrow ventilator, which, to render assurance doubly sure, is a framework of half-inch iron let in some eight or ten inches into a wall over three feet thick, and composed of heavy stone blocks laid in the strongest of cement. Yet, probably it was this most insignificant of loopholes, with the welcoming rays of light filtering through, that inspired Meyers, aided by the crust of tools, to dig his way through the massive masonry, and that formed what a strategist would call the base of his retreat. The implements were of the crudest possible nature, yet they proved most effective. The iron braces between the legs of his cot wrenched from the frame work and broken into three pieces, so as to OBTAIN AN ANGUARD EDGE, acted in Meyer's skillful hands both as knife to scrape away the cement and crowbar to pry away the blocks of stone. An old iron spoon, too, worn as it is almost to a water edge, evidently did good service as a scraper. It was therefore with three pieces of old iron that, to use the expression of one of the keepers, looked as if "they could not cut butter" and with a spoon that might with almost perfect safety be put in the hands of a man contemplating suicide, this young man succeeded in accomplishing his rescue. While Meyers must have been burrowing away at the wall of his cell for weeks before his actual escape, it is difficult to imagine how, even by the cleverest arrangement of his cot in front of the gaping hole, he was able to conceal all vestiges of his work, the shreds of rope and bedding, the big blocks of stone, and scraps of plaster, from the most purblind of keepers. Meyers waited till the Yard Policeman, Lawrence Lamb, who was on duty on Thursday night, had gone his round. Then with a hasty and comprehensive into the corridor to see if all was safe, he drew out his ropes, made of bedding, from their place of concealment, and putting one in his pocket, tied the end of the other around the middle of his cot. He lowered himself out of the hole he had made into space, with the ground 80 feet below. As the rope tightened under his weight the cot rose on its end finally jamming up against the sides of the hole and acting there as an anchor. Meyer's rope let him down to about eight feet of the ground. When he dropped it was with the Elm tree wall towering bare in front of him and a corresponding wall shutting him off from Leonard street at the left. It was to the left that he turned, gliding noiselessly in his stocking feet to the angle formed by the junction of the tin-roofed female dormitory with the Leonard street outside wall. From the bottom of the angle there runs a sheet-iron water leader up to the roof of the female prison. It is a frail-looking affair, by no means inviting to climb, running as it does for thirty feet perpendicularly upward, and then, after a sudden slant, resuming a perpendicular direction for about ten feet more to the top of the roof. Nevertheless, it was a ladder of salvation for Meyers. How he climbed it without bringing the ladder down to the ground and himself crashing along with it is a mystery. But climb it he did and got safely on the roof of the female prison, with deep dens left in the thin metal of the water pipe to show the hazardous way he had gone. From the female prison he dropped to the female dormitory, his feet patterling noisily on the tin roofing of the latter building and disturbing Mrs. McKeon, the night matron. At the corner of the female dormitory building, that, hidden behind the laterally-projecting and gloomily imposing front of the Tombs, joins the northern wall, there is another water leader edging over into Leonard street. Bracing the second rope around this leader as securely as the fragile support would allow, Meyers trusted his weight to it and dropped safely into Leonard street, a free man.

FREDERICTON, N. B. JUNE 17, 1893.

A CIVIC HOLIDAY.

We are among those who believe that holidays are real and material benefits to those who are so fortunate as to obtain them. This is especially true of individuals, who are forced to work during the greater portion of the year in a state of more or less confinement. To them a holiday brings a period of rest, of change and relaxation, which recuperates and invigorates the system for renewed labors, so that when he returns to his office desk he feels capable of any amount of work, as long as the good effects of the holidays last. What is true of individuals is true of large corporations, and of the city of Fredericton among them. It has been a long time since we have had a civic holiday, such as it is the custom to hold in cities throughout upper Canada. The nearest approach to it was the first of July celebration in 1882, when the citizens held games and athletic competitions of all classes up and down the length of Queen street, and which proved an unqualified success. During the present year we have thus far had one holiday, the 24th of May. It is true that the citizens enjoyed themselves very much on that day, but had it not been the first holiday of the season it is doubtful if so much pleasure would have been experienced. There was no preparation, or attempt at preparation of public attractions for the amusement of the people, beyond the military display in the officers square, and the great majority of citizens provided their own amusements. Take the holidays that are to come. The first of July will probably be spent by the people of Fredericton in driving, walking, boating, and other enjoyments of a quiet and desultory character. There will be some tame horse races in the park in the afternoon, but we will venture to say that not more than one quarter of the citizens will attend. The bicyclists are all going to Woodstock, and many other citizens will follow their example, and pay a visit to some other portion of the province. The twelfth of July is essentially an orangeman's holiday, and as such will have no general attractions for all classes of the people. It is true the orangemen intend to hold a big celebration in Fredericton, but the day will not be a public holiday, and there will be no sports to draw the public. What the citizens of Fredericton ought to have this year is a civic holiday, to be proclaimed by the Mayor, upon which all places of business should be closed, for public enjoyment. There being no outside attractions, none of the people would leave the city, while probably many might be drawn to Fredericton if athletic events of interest were provided. There could be horse-races, bicycle races, cricket or base ball, foot-races, and all other kinds of sports. The grounds of the Park Association could be got by small subscriptions. Such a holiday would prove a source of much pleasure and benefit, obtained without much exertion, while the novelty of having a purely local celebration would without doubt interest and please the populace of the city. It is understood that some of the citizens are talking the matter up, and we sincerely hope they will be able to realize their ideas, and make the celebration a success.

THE CROWN LAND SALES.

The sale of licenses to cut timber on the greater part of the crown lands of the province will be held at the Crown Land office in this city, commencing on the 29th of August next, and continuing as long as necessary thereafter. The lands offered for lease comprise about 4400 square miles, or about 2,800,000 acres. They are held at present under what are called ten year leases, all of which expire on the 1st of August. The present leases are really only yearly licenses with a right, however, of renewal without competition for a period of ten years, provided all the conditions of the lease are complied with. It will be remembered that, in view of the coming expiration of the leases, the government at the last session of the legislature carried a resolution providing that they might, if they saw fit, in granting new licenses this year, give the right of renewal without competition, and subject as aforesaid, for a term not to exceed twenty-five years. The reason which they gave for this step was that they would be the better able to obtain a good class of customers and better prices for the licenses if they could guarantee that the licenses would not be disturbed for a comparatively long period. The present period of ten years they, and the large lumbermen, who chiefly trade on the crown land licenses, considered too short, as under it a man might obtain a piece of land, which he might just begin to operate to advantage at the end of the term, and might be dispossessed by another license. Under the 25 years' leases, a much longer period is given him—long enough to enable him to realize any profit or advantage which the lands might contain for him. But in order to protect the rights of the crown in these timber lands and to prevent any of them from being held by large capitalists merely for speculative purposes, the government around the leases certain safeguards in the way of conditions, which must be fulfilled, or the license's right would be forfeited. The principal one of these is contained in section 20 of the regulations governing the sale. It provides that the surveyor general shall have the power to call upon every licensee to cut an amount of lumber equal to at least to 10,000 superficial feet per square mile of licensed land, and may direct upon what blocks of timber land held by the licensee the cut shall be made. Any licensee may on giving notice to the surveyor general, pay the stampage that would be due on such amount of lumber, instead of making the required cut. By this provision parties will be prevented from buying up crown lands for the long period of 25 years for the purpose of holding them on speculation. Another salutary provision, which did not exist, is that the Government may, at the expiration of each year, by publishing a notice to that effect in the Royal Gazette, increase the rate of lumber, as they may deem expedient, and a failure on the part of any licensee to pay the increased rate will work a forfeiture of his license. The crown reserves the usual first lien on all lumber cut under these licenses, until the stampage dues shall be paid. The upset price of these licenses will be $8.00 per square mile, with a right to renew each year upon the further payment of $4.00 mileage per square mile, in addition to the stampage dues. These dues are as follows:—

For Spruce, Pine, Hardwood, Hemlock Saw-Logs per M. superficial feet,.....	$ 1 00
Hardwood Timber, up to average of 14 inches square, per ton.....	0 90
Hardwood Timber, above 14 inches, per inch additional, per ton.....	0 10

Further Promotions.

W. K. Hatt, son of George Hatt jr., of this city and formerly professor of civil engineering in the university, has recently been appointed professor of civil engineering in Pader university, Lafayette, Indiana. Prof. Hatt graduated from our university in 1887, and after taking a course at Cornell came back here a year and occupied the chair of civil engineering, when he was appointed a tutorship in Cornell, and now his old friends will be pleased to learn of his further promotion.

Mr. Warren D. Wentz

Tells of His Fearful Sufferings After Gastric Fever and His Cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla

All who know Mr. W. D. Wentz give him the best of recommendations for honesty and integrity. For many years he has worked for Mr. D. P. Wilson, the harness maker and member of the Geneva Board of Health. He says:

"I was taken sick last October with gastric fever and my chance for recovery was considered almost hopeless. After 7 weeks the fever slowly let up, but I could not eat the simplest food without terrible distress. It seemed that I had recovered from the fever to die of starvation."

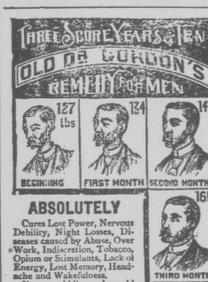

I took peptic compounds, bismuth, charcoal, cod liver oil and malt until my physician confessed that his skill was about exhausted and he did not know what else to try. Everything I took seemed like poison, and I suffered most of my stomach. I happened to think I had part of a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the house for two or three years, that I found had benefited me previously for dyspepsia. I began taking it and soon began to feel better. I have now taken a half over two bottles and can truthfully say I feel well again and can eat anything without distressing me, even to which I have been unable to touch for years. The English language does not contain words enough to permit me to express the praise I have for Hood's Sarsaparilla. W. D. WENTZ, 101 Castle St., Geneva, N. Y.

Tin wedding.
A large number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. John Hawthorne assembled at their residence Tuesday evening for the purpose of celebrating the tenth anniversary of their wedding. During the earlier part of the evening what playing was freely indulged in, after which the party proceeded to trip the light fantastic, the music for which was furnished by the F. O. M. W. orchestra. Refreshments were served during the evening. The party broke up shortly before two o'clock, all present having enjoyed a most delightful evening. The Globe wishes Mr. and Mrs. Hawthorne many happy returns.

Supper and Presentation.
Mr. S. T. Colter, for some years connected with the establishment of Mr. Geo. C. Hunt, druggist, was entertained Wednesday night by the members of the F. O. M. W. Club at the York street restaurant. After the party, who numbered about twenty-five, had fully satisfied the inner man, the health of the Queen was proposed by the chairman, Mr. Geo. R. Perkins. Mr. A. Tweedale was then called upon for a song, and responded by singing "The Working Man's Friend," which was heartily applauded. The chairman then rose, and in a brief and appropriate speech, proposed a toast to Mr. S. T. Colter, the guest of the evening, which was most heartily responded to. In a brief but sincere reply Mr. Colter thanked those present for their kindness to him in the past few years, and although he was going to a country where he felt his prospects in life would be better, he felt that he was leaving friends and associations that were very dear to him, and that he would always remember and look back upon as one of the brightest and happiest periods of his life. Music by the club orchestra followed, after which Mr. A. E. Massie favored the company with a song, rendered in his usual good style. Mr. John Jennings then rose, and after a touching and very eloquent speech presented Mr. Colter, on behalf of the F. O. M. W. club with a heavy gold ring with the initials S. T. C. beautifully worked upon it in raised letters. The ring which was made to order by Mr. Buchanan, manufacturing jeweler, of this city, was a really beautiful piece of work. Numerous toasts followed, and were responded to by the following: The medical profession, Dr. Vanwert; the press, A. J. Machum; the ladies, Messrs. T. Fowler and H. Porter; manufacturing industries, Messrs N. Edgecombe, N. C. Sutherland, Fred Risteen and Fred Trites, the new milliner; the city fathers, ex-Alderman Davis; government officials, Bedford Phillips; the military, Lieut. Hawthorn of the 71st. A vote of thanks having been tendered the chairman, the party joined hands and the orchestra struck up "Auld Lang Syne," which was followed by "God Save the Queen."

There is $5,000 insurance on the buildings, $2,500 in the Imperial with Mr. E. L. Whittaker and $2,500 with Mr. A. C. Fairweather in the Commercial Union.

A Royal Order.
An order received in a recent European mail, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. of this town, probably stands unique in the history of Canadian or American proprietary medicines. It came from St. Petersburg, Russia, enclosing a round note (65 cents) for a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the sender being the Count de Bodisco, Grand Chamberlain to His Majesty the Czar of Russia. It would appear that even royalty, in far away St. Petersburg, has learned of the virtue of this remarkable Canadian remedy, and turn to it for relief in preference to others. It is more than probable that in the near future, this unequalled blood builder and nerve tonic will be the standard remedy throughout the civilized world, as it is today in Canada, the United States and Great Britain. Its virtues cannot be too widely made known. The round note company the order is a fair sample of Russian bank notes, and in this country is somewhat of a curiosity. The note is at the company's office and may be seen by any who have not had an opportunity of examining a specimen of Russian currency.—Brockville Times.

The Bathurst school investigation is over and the evidence will be submitted here in August. The evidence taken has been furnished by the daily papers, and is merely a repetition of what came before the House last session. It is quite clear to all who have had the courage to tackle the columns of evidence, what the result of Judge Fraser's report will be, and that it will be a just one.

A meeting of the men interested in the promotion of the electric railway between Fredericton and Marysville, for which an act was passed at the last session of the legislature, is to be held in Boston some time in July. Joseph Jefferson, the actor, who is one of the principal promoters, has been ill for some time, and his sickness has delayed the progress of the scheme. Mr. F. B. Coleman will be one of the first directors of the company when it is formed.

A fishing club composed of the following ten members has been organized: Messrs. J. G. Gunn, T. Amos Wilson, W. Chestnut, Arthur Porter, Gns Tweedale, Fred Carey, T. Fowler, bookkeeper in Geo. Hatt & Sons, D. Shea, Harry Atherton and H. Kitchen. The club have a lake in the vicinity of the city in view which they propose giving a thorough trial for fish. Should it come up to their expectations they intend securing a right of certain portions and will build a club house on the margin of the lake. The lake is beautifully situated and is but a couple of hours drive from the city. Just where it lies we are requested not to mention. A meeting was held last night at which a committee were authorized to purchase a boat and have it conveyed immediately to the lake.

Inevitable Mention.
The STENOGRAPHER for June contains a very fine portrait of Mr. Frank H. Risteen of this city. Mr. Fred Ireland, of the congressional reporting staff, who is considered to be the best all-round stenographer in America, has this to say of Mr. Risteen:
Mr. Frank H. Risteen, one of the official reporters of the New Brunswick House of Assembly and stenographer of the Supreme Court of the same province, is a gentleman whom it is well to know. His portrait is presented in this issue of THE STENOGRAPHER. It is the opinion of the writer that Mr. Risteen will some day be needed where there is nothing to do but to report. What a lively interest we all take in a good man's worthy record, be he young or old, and especially when there is the promise of more yet to come.

One does not have to look far to find the reasons why Mr. Risteen has been so successful already in the exacting work of reporting. He is only thirty-one years of age, yet he has certain all-important characteristics already strongly developed. In the first place, he is a master of the technical difficulties of note-taking. In spite of all anyone may say, the greatest stone in the foundation of a reporter's success is the ability to put down on paper all that is said, no matter how rapidly spoken, and then to read it afterward. Next, Mr. Risteen possesses in an unusual degree the literary faculty, the power of expression. We have all read some of his sketches, and laughed heartily over the humor of them. Some of us are familiar with the stories written over the alias of "Bildad." Bildad is Mr. Risteen; and when we read his wonderful tales of the wilderness, fishing and hunting narratives that sometimes grace the New York Sun and Forest and Stream, we know every word is true, because it is so charmingly told. There never was a greater reporter who did not possess the creative literary faculty, a power which, when applied to the reading of a page of shorthand notes, recalls the forgotten scene, brings up the face and voice of each witness, illumines the doubtful expression, and enables one to draw out the thread of the story without a break; to put himself in sympathy with the stumbling orator, and to smooth down the rough spots and put some style into a report.

Mr. Risteen is fond of fishing and shooting, is strong and well, and is liked by everybody. The judges, attorneys, and legislators with whom he associates may not know why he is such a favorite with them, but if they will read this sketch, they will find out some of the reasons. This is not a biography of Mr. Risteen—not even an index. The time to write Mr. Risteen's biography will be about forty years hence; for there will be a new chapter every little while. He is "to be continued."

It is said that Mrs. Pompadour used to spend $100,000 a year in perfumes.

Mrs. Ann Lexington, aged 68, was burned to death, and her brother, Alexander Rogers, aged 78, fatally injured, in a fire which destroyed their house in York township, Ont., Saturday. The old couple lived alone.

The House of Lords at London have passed to a second reading a bill extending the act of 1891 relating to Behring Sea, to the Pacific ocean adjacent to Behring Sea. Lord Rosebery, referring to the seizure of British sealers by Russian cruisers, said that he believed from the attitude of Russia that the parties injured would receive compensation.

In the suit for divorce, instituted by Mrs. Frank Leslie against William C. K. Wilde, it is adjudged and decreed that the marriage between the plaintiff, Mrs. Leslie, and the defendant, William C. K. Wilde, is dissolved. Mrs. Leslie may marry again, but Mr. Wilde cannot, unless he remarries Mrs. Leslie. The decree further states that he has no interest in her property before or after death.

Arthur Little, a boy of 11 years of age, ran away from home in Utica last week because he did not want to go to school. He went as far as Little Falls, where he was intercepted by the police and locked in the chief's office overnight. When the office was opened Friday morning the boy was found on the floor with a bullet hole in his neck. He had found a revolver in the chief's desk. He died without regaining consciousness.

A special from Pueblo, Mex., says the most disastrous storm that ever visited this part of Mexico is reported from the town of Puchmetta. The entire town was destroyed on Friday last, every residence and building in the place being swept away by the terrific wind. Two thousand people are homeless. Three hundred persons were injured but no fatalities are reported. The storm also destroyed the crops of that section.

Another disastrous fire took place Saturday afternoon, near Montreal city, and before the flames were through with their work the Parish church of Longue Point, built in 1724, the priest's house and four smaller buildings were destroyed. The brigade from the city was called down, but little could be done to save the property. The church was valued at $60,000 comprising some old paintings, the presbytery at $6,000 and the other houses at a few thousand more. There was an insurance on the church of $22,000.

A London despatch says: James Gilbert or Cunningham, the dynamiter, released from Portland prison because he was thought to be near death, sailed on the American liner "Chester" from Southampton, on Saturday. Three physicians certified that his voyage would probably prolong his life. In an interview Gilbert said he intended during his sojourn in the United States to call the Washington Government's attention to the pitiable cases of Americans imprisoned at Portland. Gallagher, he said, had become hopelessly insane, and Daly was dying slowly. Other political prisoners were threatened with insanity.

A despatch from Cairo says: Fifty convicts, while returning from the quarries to Lousrah prison, near this city, on Sunday, overpowered the mounted guards and tried to escape. They constituted the last squad of a gang of six hundred, and the guards ahead did not know the mutiny was on until the men had captured the rifles of the rear guards. As the fifty convicts fled, eleven of the advance guards started in pursuit. The guards overtook the fugitives and ordered them to surrender. The convicts answered with a volley, which wounded two men and killed three horses. The return volleys of the guards killed thirty-nine convicts; the other eleven convicts escaped. The convicts are believed to have been encouraged to revolt by the recent action of the native courts in punishing guards who shot at runaway prisoners who had been committed to their charge.

The Earl of Derby's Will.
LONDON, June 11. The will of the late Earl of Derby has been proved and the personal estate sworn at £1,809,611, gross value. Lord Derby, among other bequests, left £29,000 in trust to each of the younger sons and daughters of his brother, Lord Stanley of Preston, Governor General of Canada. His five stepchildren all received similar legacies, and the three sons of one of them, Lord Arthur Cecil, £500 each. Sir Thomas Sanderson, one of the executors, receives £10,000. The Earl remembered all his servants and retainers most handsomely; his valet was given a life annuity of £50, and to all his in-door and out-door servants, including bailiffs, foresters, gamekeepers, farm and stable servants and to each clerk in the estate office at Knowsley, a sum equal to two months' wages for each year of service. The will paid duty of £54,063 and estate duty £18,021.

Detective Carpenter, of the Canadian Secret Service, went to Lacolle this week to investigate the Edy tragedy.

The railways, disappointed in the travel to the World's Fair, are reducing the number of trains first scheduled. There would likely be more money for them in reducing the rates.

A four-oared crew of the Ottawa R. C. came near being drowned on Saturday last while training for the spring four-oared races. The men were: W. Torrance, W. McKay, H. Tovey, and S. James, and they were rescued much exhausted.

A despatch from Madrid says a large petard was exploded last Tuesday night on the Plaza Oriental, which is directly in front of the left wing of the palace. All the buildings in the neighborhood were shaken by the shock.

A despatch from Rome says that the Pope, in his allocution to the consistory, has referred to the American school question in a manner that shows he is not in sympathy with Archbishop Ireland's views.

Danie St. Aubin, widow of the late Louis Ernest de Montarville Smith, has obtained judgment for $3,000 damages against the Montreal Bowling Mill. Her husband was killed in April 1892, by the collapse of a drain in which he was working for defendants.

The American National Bank of Omaha was closed by order of the Comptroller of the Currency the other morning. Runs have started on the Globe Loan and Trust Company, the Dime Savings Bank, the German Savings Bank and Nebraska Savings Bank. No statement of the condition of the American National Bank was made, except that the Clearing House refused to assist it. It is understood the affairs of the Bank are entangled with those of the McCague Savings Bank, which also closed this week.

A Great Phenomenon.
At the head of the Gulf of Bothnia there is a mountain on the summit of which the sun shines perpetually during the five days of June 19, 20, 21, 22 and 23. Every six hours during this season of continual sunshine a steamer leaves Stockholm crowded with visitors anxious to witness the phenomenon.

At the same place during the winter the sun disappears, and is not seen for weeks; then it comes in sight again for ten, fifteen or twenty minutes, gradually lengthening its stay, until it finally stays in sight continuously for upward of one hundred and twenty hours.

Ainsworth Catching It Hot.
WASHINGTON, June 13.—At yesterday's inquest on the Ford theatre victims, a well-dressed man in a passion, shaking his fist in Colonel Ainsworth's face, shouted: "You murdered, murdered my brother and you shant sit there intimidating witnesses." The man was Charles Barnes, whose brother was a victim of the disaster. After the uproar thus occasioned, had quieted, Mr. Davis, representing Col. Ainsworth, started to speak, when a dozen excited departmental clerks rose to their feet and shouted for him to sit down. The lieutenant of police endeavored to quiet the outbreak, but his voice was as ineffectual as it would have been in a cyclone. The excitement grew to intensity. Nearly every clerk present, who was employed in the old theatre building, was on his feet shouting. At first they only called "sit down," "shut your mouth," but finally some frenzied individual cried "hang him, hang him." Men were springing forward by this time and mere spectators sought cover. It looked as if harm would come to Ainsworth, who had charge of the old Ford building, for some clerks were shaking their fists over his head and others were pushing forward as if they wished to tear him in pieces. Mr. Warner, one of the jurors, finally managed to quiet the mob and the deputy coroner adjourned the inquest. When the hall was emptied the excited language of the clerks continued on the sidewalk, and finally old Butler Fitch mounted the entrance of the building and proposed an indignation meeting immediately. The proposition was adopted, and the clerks took possession of the hall. Smith Thompson was elected chairman of the meeting, and bitter denunciations of Col. Ainsworth and those who justified his course were indulged in. A committee consisting of Smith Thompson, W. N. Bayre, B. Fitch, Percy Munroe and M. M. Jarvis were appointed to wait upon the president, and protest against the proposed secret session of the investigation, and to urge the suspension of Col. Ainsworth pending the investigation.

The Late Dr. Archibald Campbell.
The late Dr. Archibald W. Campbell, who died on Saturday last at his residence on University street, was professionally one of the most successful graduates of McGill. He received his diploma as an M. D. from McGill about eight years ago, after which he studied for some time in Heidelberg, Germany, where he became a specialist in diseases of the nose and throat. He himself, however, was subject to pulmonary weakness, and shortly after beginning practice in Montreal, was compelled to go to Colorado to seek a gentler climate. He returned to Montreal a few months ago and resumed practice, but his old trouble recurred, and from this he died on Sunday night. The funeral took place Tuesday from 240 University street to Mount Royal Cemetery.

"The curlew tells the knell of parting day. The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the sea."—The fisherman homeward plods his lazy way To tell his whooping lies to you and me.

Statistics of the thirty-one day's meeting at the St. Louis Fair Grounds show that 412 horses took part in the races, and of these 175 won. Seventeen captured $1000 over in stakes and purses. The largest winners are: "Morello" $6310, and "Echel Gray" $6555.

It is known definitely that Billiardist Eugene Carter came back from Paris authorized by the French stars, Vignaux, Piot and Garnier, to negotiate in their behalf for a series of international games in New York and Chicago with the American stars.

Horse-racing sprang doubtless from the people themselves, and was given increased importance by the quality and power of great and wealthy patrons. Thus a rich iron-monger, who was sheriff of Chester in 1699, originated the St. George's Race, while James I gave new importance to sundry race meetings in Yorkshire and Surrey and Charles I made the Stamford Race Meeting greater than it had ever before been. Newmarket and Hyde Park races thus grew famous, and Charles II with his successors William III, and Anne and George IV made the fortunes of many a previously little known and yet old-established meet.

Bicycle.
G. P. Mills, the well known amateur tricycle rider, has completed a race against time from Land's End to John O. Great's hills. The route he travelled was about 700 miles long, and he covered the distance in three days and 16 hours. This beats the bicycle record for the distance by seven hours and eight minutes and the tricycle record by forty-one hours and thirteen minutes.

The scratch mile cycling race at Heme Hill, England was won by Harris, the Englishman, in 2:34; Sanger, the American, was second.

King of Trumps is the latest addition to the pure bred horse stock of Fredericton. He is a rich dark bay, with star and white hind ankle, stands sixteen hands three inches high, weighs 1,680 pounds and is descended from the very best shire blood on both sides of the Atlantic. This horse has lately been purchased by John H. Reid, Fredericton's veteran horseman from E. C. Peabody of Concord Mass. King of Trumps has been awarded first premium at the New England fair, first at Barre and first at Stanbridge over all draft stallions. He belongs to the shire stock, is eight years old, was bred in York, England and imported in 1887. Mr. Reid is justly proud of his latest purchase, and claims that he has the best shire horse in this country.

F. J. McCAUSLAND,

Robinson extracted from Dr. Bowen the statement that he had given Miss Borden morphine to quiet her nerves, and that this had a tendency to produce hallucinations, the evident purpose of this being to accout for the various contradictory stories told by the prisoner.

At that Miss Borden has done or said is equally consistent with the theory of innocence or the theory of guilt. This is most strikingly illustrated in that worst of all things against her.

THE BURNING OF THE DRESS.

A woman accused of a double murder of such a character that she must have been spattered and splashed with blood from head to foot when she did the deed burns up a dress which corresponds to one the witnesses describe as having been worn by her on the morning the murder was known to have been committed. That certainly is a portentous fact, pointing with dreadful emphasis to guilt, but, on

THE BORDEN TRIAL.

The Evidence Given by Miss Russell Tells Against Lizzie.

Peculiar Circumstances Connected With Miss Russell's Actions.

The people in the vicinity of New Bedford regularly live in the court house during the hours it is open for the Borden trial. They bring crullers and cookies and other New England food atrocities in their pockets, and actually camp out and lunch near the scene of battle. They swarm all about the neighborhood and invade the verandas of adjacent houses until it has been necessary for the people owning them to have signs printed and posted up, warning them off. Next to the anxiety to get in the courtroom is the overmastering curiosity to catch even so much as a glance of Lizzie Borden. At the adjournment of court, the street from the back entrance of the court house, out of which she passes to her carriage, all the way down to the jail, three long blocks away, is daily literally lined on both sides of the way with wagons and carriages many of them stylish turnouts. In addition to this the sidewalks on both sides of the street are packed with people all the way down to the jail, standing as closely together as they comfortably could. It looks like a country street down which a circus procession was expected to pass, and the extraordinary thing is that all these people, both in the carriages and on the sidewalks fully 80 per cent are women and little girls. But they see nothing for their pains. Miss Borden drives to and from the goal in a little old coupe drawn by one horse. The curtains of the coupe are so tightly closed that not a glimpse of her face or figure can be seen.

Of late the coupe has been actually blocked and stopped in its passage by the great number of carriages, and one evening, just for the tenth part of a second, Kirby, the deputy who had charge of the prisoner, pulled the curtain aside just long enough to peep out and see what was the matter and the glimpse of his grizzled face was all the spectators had to

REWARD THEM FOR THEIR PATIENCE.

The full force of the prosecution's attack has developed and the most damaging of all their evidence against the prisoner been brought out. The one distinctly vulnerable point is Lizzie Borden's movements at the time of the murders and during the few days immediately following them was the burning of the light blue dress with the dark, navy blue diamond figure. It is upon this that the Grand Jury indicated her and it is this which will convict her if she is convicted. Without that dress the Commonwealth's case is a mere tissue of speculations. The Commonwealth established beyond a peradventure in the opinion of all who heard the evidence, that Lizzie Borden did on the Sunday morning following the crime, which occurred on Thursday, burn such a dress in the kitchen stove and in the presence of two persons. The testimony of one of these persons was the feature of the forenoon's proceedings, and, indeed, of the entire trial up to that moment. Not only was the testimony itself the most startling of any heretofore produced, but the witness herself was a person of such singular individuality that she seemed typical of all the uncanny features of this amazing mystery, as well as of the strange people and their strange and narrow lives who are the actors in it.

It was fully expected that this witness, Miss Russell, would occupy the stand for at least one day, but her examination and cross-examination were both finished in a trifle more than an hour. During that time, however, the witness, who in her way is an extraordinary woman as the prisoner herself made.

APPARENTLY WITHOUT RELUCTANCE,

at times even with an air of every desire to inflict injury, the most terribly damaging statements in relation to the girl who for years had been her bosom friend. This sudden change in the attitude of Miss Russell toward the prisoner is one of the most mysterious features of this most mysterious case. At the trial in Fall River last year Miss Russell testified with marked reluctance and carefully suppressed the features of prime importance to which she has so glibly sworn. In Fall River her testimony was of hardly any importance, but now she did more to secure a conviction than all the witnesses so far heard from. The prosecution claims that Miss Russell at first confined herself to unimportant testimony because she desired to shield the woman who was her dearest friend; that she continued this deception even when she was summoned before the Grand Jury, and it was only when she could no longer stand the pangs of a gnawing conscience that of her own accord she sought the authorities and made a clean breast of all she knew. Twice Miss Russell swore that she had told the whole truth and then at the eleventh hour she admits that she deliberately suppressed the two essential features of her testimony. Whatever her motive may have been, the prosecution could hardly have expected to get a verdict without the testimony supplied by her. Under cross-examination, Miss Russell remained absolutely unshaken as to Lizzie burning the dress, although as a matter of fact the defence hardly made any serious attempt to impugn the truth of what she had said. It becomes more difficult every day to see what the line of defence will be, although an indication of a portion of it was given when Dr. Bowen the officer, was called. During his testimony as to the condition of the bodies the prisoner said she left her father reading a paper, and after twenty minutes found him dead, and that she said the motive was not robbery, as everything was all right about the house. The witness gave a detailed description of the prisoner's dress which caused amusement, and the prisoner twice leaned on her arm and laughed heartily for the first time in the trial. Mr. Robinson involved the witness in several contradictions about the conditions of the barn doors and windows. Witness contradicted Fleet as to the place where one hatchet was found. Doherty, another officer, was put on and described his experience at the Borden house on the day of the murder. Mr. Mullally's direct testimony as to the condition of the premises on the day of the murder developed nothing. He corroborated Fleet's testimony as to finding the handleless hatchet. The broken handle was clean, but the blade was covered with ashes in searching about the premises he said, in answer to a question, that he had seen

NO WEAPON WITH BLOOD ON IT.

Some of the testimony given by Mullally a few minutes later took on a curious interest. Mr. Robinson was asking the witness about the hatchets found in the cellar. He said there had been no dust on the hatchets when he saw them. He told his questioner that something else had been found in the cellar besides what had been enumerated. It was nothing less than the missing part of the handle.

Where was it found? asked the surprised lawyer, while everybody leaned forward anxiously. It was found in the box with the hatchet, was the reply.

Where is it now? the question came quick and sharp.

I don't know, Assistant Marshall Fleet found it.

Ex-Gov. Robinson turned to District Attorney Knowlton and asked: Does the Government know anything of that missing part of the handle?

The Government has no knowledge of it.

Fleet was recalled to the stand. In a few rapid questions he was asked about the finding of the handle. He said he had not found it, had not seen it, and did not know of anybody who had seen it, or knew anything of it. There was an awkward pause for a moment, and then he was excused. Other evidence followed, but merely corroborative or in line with previous testimony.

THE GREAT FAIR.

One of the pleasing things about the white city is its exhaustless capacity for surprising changes. In the centre part of the grounds Venice and Lagona and marble palaces greet the eyes, but in the Northeast corner one comes upon a wild and freer stretch and an ocean scenery. On a windy day our much abused lake rolls up to the curved stone walls skirting the beach in great, booming waves, dashed with angry white spray. Down the curve of the harbor loom the monstrous palaces, and the fresh, sweet breeze blows inland over the sandy shore. If one happens to be there in time above the roar of the waves will peal out the chimes in the German building, lending a foreign touch of enchantment to the scene that completes it. Those German chimes are rich and clear, and off in the distance the echoes still clash musically.

It is a lovely, dreamland country, the six hundred acres shut in by a prosaic board fence, and it grows upon one. Next winter, when the edict goes forth for its destruction, there will rise an indignant protest from the visiting thousands. But it is like the snow sculpture we made when we were young, or the desert mirage, and, like them, melt away. It is out of the question to think of its being torn to pieces, board by board like a common creation.

SICK ESQUIMAUX CHILDREN.

The cunning little children in the village of the World's Fair are sick nearly all the time. They are not used to the sweet things which the visitors give them, and so the poor little tots suffer from all the troubles which our children have when they have eaten too much at Christmas or Thanksgiving. The poor little Esquimaux children have fared the worst. In Iceland, where the Esquimaux live, there are no sugar at all or any sweet things. And until they were brought to Chicago the children had never seen a piece of candy nor as much as heard of a peanut.

But everybody who visits the Esquimaux village is sure to give the funny little snub-nosed toddlers a stick of candy or something else that is sweet. And, not long ago, there was not a well baby at the fair, just on account of the things which the visitors gave them to eat. If people keep on feeding the children candy out of their hand bags and cakes from their lunch-baskets, a woman is to stand near by and tell every one that candy makes the children sick and please not to give them any.

HE SAID IT.

One day during the war, while a Middle Tennessee regiment was stationed in the city of Nashville, an Irish recruit was put on guard duty on one of the principal streets in the city. He thought it his duty to challenge every one who came along, just as he would in camp. By and by a well-dressed citizen approached.

Halt! Who goes there? said Mike.

A citizen, answered the man.

Advance, citizen, and give the counter-gait! But I don't know the counter-gait, said the citizen; and if I did, I think it is very strange and unusual that it should be demanded in a public place like this.

Well, be jabers then, said Mike, ye don't pass this way till ye've said 'Booker Hill'!

Booker Hill, said the man, with a grin.

Right! Pass on! said the sentinel at "present," and the citizen went on about his affairs.

WAS COVERED WITH ASHES

when he found it; that it was not produced at the preliminary hearing and that he did not testify about it at the time because he did not think it was used in the murder. Harrington, an

THE MAN WITH THE BLACK GLOVE.

There was a look upon his face that none of them could fathom, for it seemed to be a mixture of triumph, cunning, dread, and Heaven only knows what.

You see I convinced the fool he had made a big mistake, as I told you I would, and he has gone on to Richmond. Some one misled him, but it is all right now, said the Captain.

Lawrence Richmond noticed several things that excited his curiosity.

In the first place the Captain was whither than he had ever seen him before, and seemed to be trembling somewhat.

Then again he had a handkerchief bound around his left hand, and it seemed to have scratched it on a thorn in passing.

He made no comment, though his suspicions were aroused.

The Captain did not seem disposed to renew his assault upon the old man. Indeed what had passed since then seemed to have quieted his spirits in a wonderful manner, and he was even ready to believe the story of Lawrence Richmond in regard to his suspicion that Roger Darrel had been the one who had committed this daring abduction, though, of course, as they had not the slightest proof, they could not do anything in a legal way.

The news seemed to affect the Captain for apparently he hated Roger with an intensity such as is given by the tiger for its prey or his foe, but he did not remain but he did not remain at the house more than a couple of hours.

There is no use of our lingering here, crying over spilt milk. When we are ready for the ceremony again, we will meet once more, and with this the valiant Captain left the house.

It was about midnight, and the moon in the east showed quite a slice off one side, yet her light, though reduced several degrees, was strong enough to show all the paths through the forest.

It was at this time that the strange and wonderful scene was occurring in front of the old mill, and during which Nora Warner fell into the power of her old-time foe, the man most hateful to her on earth—the mad house doctor.

As he left the house the Captain cast several glances over his shoulder in order to make sure that he was not followed.

The very fact of his doing this would seem to indicate that he was bound upon some errand that would not bear inspection.

Once among the trees he made his way rapidly to a point where the shadows lay densest, and there upon the ground lay the form of a man silent and motionless.

It was the mysterious foreigner.

The Captain had proven too much for even the keen detective, and his manner of convincing the man-hunter of the mistake he had made had been a forcible one. In the struggle, and before Captain Grant had struck a favorable spot with his knife, the detective, whom he held under his knee, having knocked him flat with a sudden and terrible blow, caught two of the fingers of his gloved left hand between his teeth, and almost bit them off at a point below the end joint.

The murdered man lay just where he had fallen, and, realizing this, the Captain vanished among the trees, returning in less than ten minutes, leading a horse already equipped, which he had secreted in the forest to have ready in case of an emergency, for he was one of those men who always make sure of a way to retreat before proceeding any depth into their schemes.

Presently he was mounted upon the horse, with the body of the foreign detective in front of him, and held in such a manner that it looked like a comrade asleep while he rode, with his head hanging upon his breast.

He kept in the densest portion of the forest, for he did not care to be seen by any one, though the chances of such an event at this hour would have been poor enough even upon the public highway, for the negroes were of too superstitious a nature to think of wandering about the country when ghosts and goblins were supposed to be abroad.

Because of his taking such a round-about way, instead of going direct, he was a much longer time in reaching the old mill than Roger had been when carrying Carol there earlier in the night.

Strange how his mind should have been turned to this quarter as a place of hiding. Surely there must have been something more than chance in it all. The future will disclose that.

When he found himself in the immediate neighborhood of the haunted mill, Captain Grant brought his horse to a sudden halt, and placed his dead charge upon the ground. Then, securing his horse, he raised the limp form of the murdered detective in his arms, and, by the exertion of tremendous strength, bore it on.

He disappeared inside the old mill.

The moon, finding ingress through the open windows and great gaping holes in the roof, lighted up the interior in a crude manner, but the illumination was quite enough for his purpose.

There was a large chimney at one side of the mill, and, for some purpose or other, a hole had been made in this, the bricks lying upon the floor close by.

It required a herculean strength to raise the dead detective to this opening, but, as he was not a man of over a hundred and thirty pounds in weight, the Captain succeeded in accomplishing it. As he let go his hold he heard the body fall with a thump to the floor. Then all was quiet.

He made no change, not even touching one of the bricks upon the floor, for though it had at first been his intention to brick up the orifice in the chimney, upon second thought he realized it was wiser to leave things just as they were, for fear of exciting suspicion.

As he turned to leave he either saw or fancied he did the head of a man outlined in one of the windows against the light background.

The idea gave him such a start that he fell over a piece of old machinery that lay rusting upon the floor. This was the racket that had reached the ears of Carol and the widow.

As soon as he could recover he fled hastily from the mill, turning once to look back, as has been said before, and then plunging in among the trees like a hunted stag.

Had there been a witness to the hurried flight? He shuddered at the thought, but found it impossible to decide whether it had been real or a specter of his imagination.

CHAPTER XVII
FROM THE JAWS OF DEATH.

It was twilight.

The trees were moaning a requiem for departed day, and the last tinge of red was dying out of the Western sky, when Carol suddenly sat up straight, and her heart seemed to stand still as she heard heavy footfalls outside.

An interval of silence ensued, and then there came a rap, loud and clear, upon the door of the haunted mill.

Carol held her breath.

She could not imagine any one else coming at that hour than Roger, and such had been the intensity of her recent thoughts and feelings toward him that it seemed to her she could not, dared not, meet him face to face, at least until she had time to recover her self-possession.

So she remained back while her mother went to the door.

How eagerly she listened, and yet with what trembling, to hear that well-known and equally well-loved voice. She had not reached a determination even yet, but it seemed to her that there was something wrong with the man she worshipped, for he did not appear as perfect in her eyes as formerly.

To her astonishment it was a strange voice that fell upon her ears—a voice that was full of eagerness and trembling.

I have to beg your pardon for this late visit, madam, but I am looking for a friend of mine, and her continued absence has worried me more than I can tell you. Have you seen Nora Warner?

These were the words she heard.

Carol started, for she realized that this person, whoever he might be, was about to receive a shock. Evidently he was unaware of the terrible fate that had overtaken the poor girl, and that she was by that time, if still alive, confined within the walls of the mad-house that had before been her prison.

Her mother retained her self-possession though she knew full well there was a blow in store for this gentleman whoever he might be.

Step in, sir, and be seated. Do not refuse, for I have that to tell you that will strike a blow at your heart, perhaps, though I know not what relation you bear to Nora Warner she said.

Wonderingly and with a great fear at his heart, he obeyed her request.

Do not keep in suspense, madam. Nora Warner was very dear to me. In Heaven's name tell me what has happened to the poor girl, he pleaded.

You knew something of her former history, I presume? inquired the lady.

She had a double object in view: the idea of finding out what he knew and whether the story of Nora Warner, as told to Carol, were true.

There is nothing of her past that I do not know, madam, and if she has come back of him was the little widow holding the heavy kitchen poker, while Carol brought up the rear being armed with that favorite weapon of a woman, a broom.

While they stood thus there came to their ears a plain, unmistakable groan that made them start, and a cold chill ran through their frames.

There was excuse enough for this.

In the first place their surroundings were ghastly in the extreme, and made more so by the halo of haunting romance that was supposed to hang over the old mill.

Then again, they had been talking of a mad-house, and each one had conjectured the terrors of such an institution, so that their minds were full of horror, and ready to receive any new impression much more quickly than usual.

Still they showed no new signs of turning back, and Jack even led them on in the direction from whence he thought the groan had come.

Again it sounded in their ears.

This time his face brightened, for he saw the hole in the great chimney, and striding up to it he cried into the orifice: Hello! where are you?

NOTICE—Five good reasons why we can sell cheap and give satisfaction.

- 1st. We are direct importers of all foreign goods, buy in large quantities for Cash and save importers' profits.
- 2nd. We import our stock for manufacturing, have all our goods made up and save Manufacturers' profits.
- 3rd. Having had long experience in the business we know how to buy the very best goods for the smallest possible amount of money, to suit the trade.
- 4th. We have connections with some of the best manufacturers in England, Austria, United States and Canada and get special prices for wholesaling and save Jobbers' profits.
- 5th. Do not be so unwise as to purchase upholstered Furniture made up for agents to sell, who know nothing about the work and are not responsible for it. Such goods are brought to us after a few months wear for repair; Having been badly stuffed and the covers cut too small it costs nearly the price of new goods to make them over. It is wasting money. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Respectfully yours,
J. G. McNALLY
