FRIDAY EVENING, FEB. 13.

Assessment Advances.
The Local Government promises a bill for the establishment of an equitable system of assessing and laying rates and taxes for local purposes. We don't know the nature of the bill, but sincerely trust that it will reform some of the abuses that thrive under the present system. The burden of the direct tax falls on the poorer classes now, the taxes being paid on the wages, not on the property of the rich. The income clause of the law has been interpreted so as to apply exclusively to the daily wages or annual salaries received for work done, a monstrous interpretation that could not have been anticipated by the framers of the law. This clause is a dead letter in nearly all parts of the Province, its manifest injustice causing assessors to ignore it, but in St. John it is enforced to the letter. The rate of property tax is not on wages but on the value of the property. This clause is a dead letter in nearly all parts of the Province, its manifest injustice causing assessors to ignore it, but in St. John it is enforced to the letter. The rate of property tax is not on wages but on the value of the property.

A Word to Candidates.
FAIRVILLE, Feb. 17.
To the Editor of the Tribune:—
It is not long that something was done to throw open the Suspension Bridge. We will have to elect a new member of the Local House soon, and whoever comes out as a candidate must get the votes of the Lancaster people. I have a few words to say to the candidates. Let them be men of good character, who will stand for the interests of the community, and not for their own private gain. Let them be men who will stand for the interests of the community, and not for their own private gain.

Why, Not Why?
It is quite cheering in these latter days of sin and iniquity to hear our worthy and Christian Police Magistrate, Mr. Raymond, on the violation of the law, but why, O Righteous Judge, when you find abundant proof, split proof—that your fat friend Raymond had violated, not only a commandment, but a city ordinance, as well as the law, why do you not punish him, did you not see him do it? If it had been some poor devil in York Street, or some other of our "fellows," you would have had to "split proof," but when you find abundant proof, split proof—that your fat friend Raymond had violated, not only a commandment, but a city ordinance, as well as the law, why do you not punish him, did you not see him do it?

The Fishery Matter.
The United States has free access to our fishing grounds under the Treaty of 1800. When they cancelled the Treaty, the Government of Canada, by imposing a tax on our fishermen, and protecting the Canadian waters from poachers. The Treaty of Washington again gave the United States access to our fishing grounds, and the Government of Canada, by imposing a tax on our fishermen, and protecting the Canadian waters from poachers.

Country Notes.
A correspondent of the Post Advocate writes to the Tribune:—
The late fire in the City of St. John, N. B., was a most disastrous one, and the loss sustained was very heavy. The fire was caused by a candle, and the loss was estimated at $100,000. The fire was caused by a candle, and the loss was estimated at $100,000.

Revolution Notes.
LIVERPOOL, N. S.—Rev. G. O. Gales writes to the Tribune:—
We are still encouraged in our work. Our Prayer and Conference meetings are well attended, and very satisfactory. Our hearts were cheered a few evenings since by seeing a sea captain rise to prayer. Sabbath last it was my privilege to baptize him on a profession of his faith in Jesus.

Revised Notes.
BARRINGTON, N. S.—Rev. W. H. Richards writes to the Tribune:—
The Lord is manifesting his power in West Wood's Harbour. Eleven were added to the church by baptism on the 7th, and we hope that many more will be added to the church.

HON. MR. MACKENZIE.
Hon. Mr. Mackenzie, in reply to Mr. Chouinard, said that the Government did not propose to have the General printed in both French and English (unless the House wished it). At present the General is reported in the language of the French, which was sufficient for all purposes.

MR. DUNDAS.
Mr. Dundas stated that the Government had commitments for trial for capital offences committed in 1867, and that he had full authority to introduce a bill for the abolition of capital punishment.

MR. MONTGOMERY.
Mr. Montgomery moved for a copy of the contract for running steamers between Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia.

the Chief of the nominals, said: "I assure you gentlemen of the House of Assembly, that I sincerely thank you for the distinguished honor you have conferred upon me by electing me to the position of Speaker, and appreciating the dignity of the office, I shall faithfully, honestly, and earnestly endeavor to discharge its duties."

Mr. Keen introduced the St. John Public Slaughter House Bill. The Speaker having repeated the Speech Mr. Keen moved the Address in reply thereto, and Mr. Beveridge seconded the same.

Two hundred copies of the Speech and Address were ordered to be printed, and its consideration is set down for Saturday at noon.

On motion of Mr. Robinson, the following Committee on Contingencies was appointed, their decisions to be final: Messrs. Robinson, Austin, Smith, March, Flewelling, Butler, Coverly, Tweedie, O'Leary, Leighton, Bismarck, Phillips, Ryan, Beveridge, Theriault and Keen.

Mr. Keen introduced a bill to regulate the sale of spirituous liquors in Lancaster, Simonds and St. Martin.

Hon. Mr. Williams presented the petition of William Henry Hatheway, praying for redress of grievances submitted by the Corporation of St. John for damages to Reed's Point pier. It was laid on the table for the Speaker's consideration.

The Attorney General, in moving for the issue of a writ for the return of a member for the County of St. John, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Coram, said that gentlemen's practice was a matter of regret to the House. As a public man Mr. Coram was honest, honorable, and painstaking in the discharge of his duties, and in his fidelity to St. John County and its interests.

Mr. Austin seconded the Attorney General's motion, and the House adjourned.

RECORDED.
After the morning routine Butler, Robinson, O'Leary, Rogers and Phillips were appointed a Mining Committee.

On motion of Keen's subject or reporting the debates was referred to the Contingent Committee for a special report that was submitted.

On motion of McQueen Dr. Sparden was appointed House Chaplain.

Crawford introduced a bill for the amendment of manumission.

Keen presented the petition of the Magistrates of St. John in favor of the Public Slaughter House Bill. The petition in favor of the Spirituous Liquor License Bill.

On motion of McQueen, the rules regarding the proceedings at the last House were adopted for the guidance of the present House until repealed.

The Speaker read the report of the Hon. Judge Allen on the result of the election petition matter, showing why said petition was set aside.

Keen moved that two hundred copies of the rules of the House be printed, so that members might have them for reference.

Ryan and Crawford thought, as the rules were in the Journals of last year, that that was sufficient.

Division thought the rules should be printed in this year's Journals.

The motion was lost after explanations by McQueen.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.
There were present at the opening of the Legislative Council: Hon. Messrs. Saunders, Chouinard, Deschamps, Hanington, Bailey, Harrison, Percival, Young, Beveridge, Jones, Lindsay, Hibbard and Beckwith.

Mr. Jones strongly deprecated introducing private bills, where the rules of the House had not been complied with.

A LIFE'S ENIGMA - A NORWEGIAN SHERLOCK

BY GIOVANNI BACCINON.

Out from the set she had come to him that night of first; into the sea she had now passed away again; and with her the story of her life. In the midnight darkness of that silent deep lay all that was dear to him; should he not follow? He had come to that place with a firm determination to make an end of the thing that tormented him; this was not the end; and now it could never come, the trouble was, indeed, only now in reality beginning. As the boat drifted out to him that he had made a terrible mistake, and had killed her. Even if his misery should become ten times greater, he must live on to find out how all had happened. She who was almost the only one saved on that fearful night, had been saved only to be killed by him who had saved her. He who once voyaged and traded about as if the whole world were nothing but sea and land, had all at once become the victim of a love which had killed the woman of his choice, and he must now kill him. Was he a bad man? He had never heard any one say so, neither had he ever felt it himself. He rose, not, however, to cast himself into the sea, but to return to the valley; no man kills himself just when he has found a great enigma which he wishes to solve.

But the enigma of Asata's life could never be solved now. She had lived in America ever since she had been grown up, and she was coming from there when the ship ran into each other. In what part of America should his quest begin? From what part of Norway should he first come he did not positively know; and he was uncertain even whether her family name had not been changed since she had left Norway. And that foreign skipper? Who could be it? Did he know Asata, or was it only she who knew something of him? To question thus was like questioning the very sea; and to journey forth to do this was like plunging into its depths. Surely he had made a terrible mistake. A woman pent-up on account of some guilty thing would have found relief in confessing it to her husband, and one still impatient would have sought refuge in some evasion or other. But Asata had neither confessed anything nor had recourse to any evasion, but had sought refuge in death when she had been told that her husband had been killed. But why? No one could explain that great deed of hers. Asata, however, had no such dread, for she had already confessed there was something about her life which she could never tell him. Perhaps, then, the greatness of her guilt made confession impossible. But she could not have had the burden of any great guilt upon her; for she was often joyous, even full of fun. She was happy and impetuous, it is true; but she was also very full of tender feeling and kindness. Perhaps the greatness of her guilt was some other person's and not hers at all. Why, then, had she not told him so? If she had only done this, all would have come right. But supposing there was no guilt, either on her side or on that of anybody else, how then? But she herself had said there was something she could never tell him, and then how about that foreign skipper she was so afraid of? How was it? In the name of goodness, how was it? Ah, had she been still alive, he would still have tormented her. This thought moved him deeply, and made him repeat and repeat himself beyond measure.

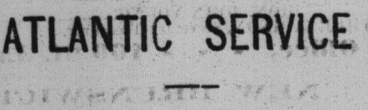

Still he began again—perhaps she was not so guilty as she herself believed, or perhaps not so guilty as others might have thought. How often did he do wrong quite innocently, and only through ignorance, though so few could understand that! Thus Asata had thought that he, who was always full of suspicion, would not understand her. Out of one clear, simple answer he would have found matter for a hundred suspicious questions; and so she had chosen to side herself to death rather than to him. Why could he never leave her in peace? She had died from the things of her life, and then he, sought refuge with him; and then he, sought most constantly drag them forward and bring them to her face. She was truly attached to him, and showed him all her love and tenderness; what right had he, then, to concern himself about her past? And if he had any such right, why did he not say so in the beginning? Whereas, the more her affection had grown, the more his disgust had grown likewise. When she, not merely through admiration and gratitude, but also through love, had chosen wholly by her own, then, forsooth, he must be guilty to know all about what she had done and been in days gone by. The more, too, she had pleaded for herself the more he had thought of her, and the more he had insisted that there was something he ought to be told.

Then, for the first time, arose the question, had he told her everything? Would it really be right for husband and wife to tell each other everything? Would all be understood if it were told? Most certainly not. He heard two children playing, and he looked around. He was sitting in the green inclosure Asata had spoken of a little while ago, but he had not been aware of it till now. Five years had passed; he thought it was only a few minutes. The children had most likely been playing there for a long time; but he heard them now for the first time. What! Was not one of them Agnes, the chieftain's little daughter of eight years, whom Asata had loved even to idolatry, and who was so like her? Good heavens! how like she was! Agnes had just set her little brother upon a great stone, where he had to be in school, while she was schoolmaster. "Say now just what I say," she commanded. "Our Father," "Our Father," "Who art in Heaven," "Hallowed be thy name," "Arise, be named," "Thy kingdom come," "Thy will be done." "No!" "No!" "No!" "No!" "No!"

Not a word! He had not, however, because the prayer had touched him; indeed, he had not marked that it was a prayer; but while he looked at and listened to the children, he became, in his own eyes, a horrible wild beast, unit to come near neither God nor man. He dragged himself behind some bushes, so that the children might not discover him; he was more afraid of them than he had ever been of any one in all his life. He slunk off into the forest, far away from the high road.

THE ILLUSTRATED LIBRARY OF POETRY AND SONG

Edited by Dr. J. M. HOULAND.

Author of "The Story of the Bible," etc.

FAVORITE SONGS in a royal octavo volume of over 700 pages, printed in the best style of modern art.

The illustrations are numerous and exquisitely wrought. Each has been prepared by the best artists of the day.

One of the most beautiful and artistic as the song itself.

Considerable also, for its rare beauty, is the illustration accompanying the "Song of the Brook," where the stream flows, dashing beneath the rustic bridge, goes chattering.

Head Matter, or a summer's day. "The last by Philip's farm in 1878, for the year 1879."

Altogether, this is one of the most charming and elegant books ever issued by the American press—a gift for the lover or friend, an attractive addition to the parlor table, a valuable addition to any family library.
