The Minutes were then read and signed, and after a brief address from the President the Conference was closed with devotional exercises.

This closed an interesting Conference, the important business of which was concluded with admirable tact under Mr. Punshon's presidency. The ability, impartiality, and urbanity of the Chair, afforded very general satisfaction; while the several public efforts of the eloquent President were acknowledged by all to be beyond commendation. One of the most interesting services in connection with the Conference was that of the Ordination, a full report of which we hope to have in our next issue. The several young men, candidates for ordination, gave clear and unimpaired evidence of their religious experience, and the reasons which influenced them in regarding themselves as called to the sacred office.

We copy from Frederick correspondence of the St. John News some notice of this service, as well as a report of the Conference sermon.

After the laying on of hands and the presentation of the candidates, the Rev. Mr. Punshon made a short address to the newly ordained. The address of the venerable Dr. DeWolfe, who presided at all those occasions which have marked the history of the Synod, the dignified pulpit orator in British America.

President Punshon followed Dr. Richey, delivering "the charge" to the young men. Mr. Punshon did not talk on any subject without saying beautiful things, but what struck me in the charge with the most force were these facts: the matter was the perfection of common sense, the spirit was that of the most Christianian gentleness; he exhorted the young ministers to take heed to themselves—their hearts, their motives and their principles and manner, their studies and their pupils and to the flock committed to their care. The charge was better than eloquent—it was good thoroughly.

The most event yesterday was Mr. Punshon's sermon in the morning, in the Methodist Church in this city. The church was crowded to excess throughout. Many persons from St. John were present. I observed also the Lieut. and G. Vernon, the President of the University, Hon. Mr. Fisher and other local celebrities present. His serenity appeared to be one of those moments when the great orator's heart is in his words. Mr. Punshon's sermon was founded on John 14:23—28—verse. It did not deal in the ordinary passages of biblical beauty as one does delivered in St. John, but through its discourses, especially toward the close, was clear and by a deeper pathos and devotion, it made an impression on the hearts of St. John's hearers. However, it must be borne in mind that dissimilar subjects do not always furnish equal opportunities for the exercise of the same facilities on the part of the preacher. A very full report of the sermon lies before me. I had time to condense a little, and felt sure you would have space to contain it. I would give you readers something like a just idea of the excellent pulpit effort. I must content myself with stating generally how Mr. Punshon dealt with his theme.

He introduced the subject by remarking upon the interest with which we regard the dying utterances of those dear to us, or of those regarded as good or great. The chapter containing the text formed part of the last discourse pronounced by the Saviour prior to his sacrificial death. He regarded in connection with the context the text:

I—Revealed the true nature of Messiah's glory. This point he illustrated in a train of thought not unusual to intelligent preachers, but by very unusual beauty and precision of language. He contrasted the glory of Christ in Redemption with the glory of military power, &c. He compared the glory of Christ with the glory of God in the material world in creating and with the glory of God in the moral world in printing. He dwelt in glowing terms upon the fact that upon the verge of His death agony, humiliation and shame, Christ saw with kindling eye the magnificent results in both worlds which would accrue from the conflict of "the hour which had overtaken him."

II—The Mystery—Life from death. Triumph from defeat. Joy born of sorrow. The crown by the cross.

III—The personal duty enjoined—To follow Jesus at any cost, over life's hardest path, in temptation's fiercest hour, amid pain and would gladly escape and even at the price of life itself. IV—The Redeemer's human conflict—He was "troubled" on this head it is illustrations of his inner life and touching, the distinction also was exceedingly choice and musical.

The Family

Little May's Lesson-Book.

She sits as steadfast as her task;
As mother's a sleeping child;
A foolish word I passed to ask;

And as I watch the earnest gaze
Of little, tender, dark-eyed May,
Whose face is foremost in the race;

Whose laugh rings merriest at play;
I pray that she may read aright,
A deeper lesson yet in store;

That she may never scorn
Trifles that are life's daily food;
Respect towards the humbly born;

That she may never lose
The kindly love, the gentle tone;
The insight that divines a grief;

That she may never lose
The silent sympathy alone,
Whence silence best may speak relief.

Thus, standing upright to the mark
Which measures highest workmanhood,
In nothing stooping, where 'tis dark,

And might may scarce be understood,
Perchance her lesson may be learned,
So well that dying ones may say,

Their love, their hope, their faith was earned
From little, tender, dark-eyed May.
Ranny Susan Wynn.

Mother's Staff.
"Lean on me, mother dear."
"You are not strong enough to bear me, Ernest."

"Yes I am, mother; and if I were a man
I would carry you instead of letting you walk."
"Will it do me good to walk, thank you, my boy?"

"Well, lean as heavily on my shoulders as you can. I shall be glad when I am tall enough for you to take my arm."

Mr. Fletcher had been ill. For several weeks she had not left her bed, and the house had to be kept quiet still for fear of being disturbed.

The doctor came to see her every day, and for a long time he always went away with a very grave face, for he seemed to get worse instead of better.

"You are the best mother in all the world," he said, "and I would rather not leave you."

But the very happiest time was when Mrs. Fletcher was well enough to take a short walk. As she was still very feeble and weak she asked Ernest to go with her, and it was then that he said, "Lean on me, mother."

They did not walk far, but Ernest thought a good deal. It was so nice to feel his dear mother leaning upon him that he thanked God who had spared her, and he made a resolution which he intended to keep. It was that, whatever else he failed in, he would be his best in all respects, he would never be any other than kind and loving to his mother.

recommended him, and Ernest had so many friends to speak good words for him that he had no difficulty. He became a clerk in an office.

At first, of course, he did not receive much money, but only a fortnight passed before the gentleman who employed him said, "He is so diligent and so clever that he can do a man's work, and, therefore, he shall receive a man's salary."

Think of that! He was able to provide his mother with the comforts which she had been used to, and even more. God prospered Ernest Fletcher because he feared him, and always put his mother first.

Once he had a large sum of money offered him if he would go abroad. He thought he would very well like to do so; but his mother said she did not wish him to go, and Ernest gave it up directly. But he lost nothing by it.

Whatever he did was successful, and even when he was quite a young man he was able to buy a carriage for his mother to ride in. He was a very good man, and when his mother grew quite old she died blessing him. As for Ernest, he lived a great many years and won the respect and love of all who knew him.

Do you know why? There was one commandment which he never forgot. "Honour thy father and thy mother, thy duty may be long in the land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee."—London Christian Work.

A Thorn in the Pillow.
How pleasant it is when night comes and we are weary, to lay our head on a soft pillow and go sweetly to sleep.

But if often happens that our pillow contains a thorn! I have just read a paper about a child who found a thorn in her pillow and it hurt her very much. Shall I tell you about it? Well, here is the story:

A little girl went to visit her grandmother, who lived at some distance from her mother and she had every thing to make her happy; but when her grandmother went to look at her eyes she was asleep, she saw tear drops on her eyelashes.

"Ah," said the old lady next morning, "you were a little home-sick last night, my dear."
"Oh, no, grandmother," Mable replied, "I could never be home-sick here."

It was just so the next night, and the next; at length grandmother thought, as the child seemed troubled, that she would sit in the next room until she went to sleep. Presently, although Mable was tucked up, she began to rustle the quilt and shake her pillow, and her grandmother heard a little sob, so she went to her and said, "Mable, my child, you have a thorn in your pillow; what is it?"

Then the little girl hid her face and began to cry aloud. Her grandmother was very much troubled. At length Mable answered, "O, grandmother, when I am alone here I cannot forget how I said, I won't mother, and I cannot unsay it; and mother is good and loves me so much, and—I was so naughty!"

And the tears streamed down the child's cheeks. Here, then, was the thorn in her pillow, and she could not withdraw it. And so it will be, by and by, with the little boy who is selfish and unkind at home. When he is away among strangers he will think of the home of his childhood, and the recollection of some unkind word or action will be a thorn in his pillow when he retires at night.

And the little girl who does not care to help her mother now, will find a thorn in her pillow when that mother briefts her fresh spring frowns, primrose and violets and everything he could find. With his own pocket-money he bought her some oranges and grapes, and any nice thing which he fancied she would like. As soon as she was well enough to listen he brought a book and sat by her bedside reading it to her; and when she was tired he sat quiet still, and did not disturb her. When he had learned any fresh piece to sing he sang to his mother; and if anything happened that he thought she would like to hear he always told her.

The boys wondered that Ernest did not come out to play more frequently, but he was quite happy to stay with his mother.

"You are the best mother in all the world," he said, "and I would rather not leave you."

But the very happiest time was when Mrs. Fletcher was well enough to take a short walk. As she was still very feeble and weak she asked Ernest to go with her, and it was then that he said, "Lean on me, mother."

They did not walk far, but Ernest thought a good deal. It was so nice to feel his dear mother leaning upon him that he thanked God who had spared her, and he made a resolution which he intended to keep. It was that, whatever else he failed in, he would be his best in all respects, he would never be any other than kind and loving to his mother.

THE GREAT PURGATIVE

DR. RADWAY'S PILLS.
FOR THE CURE OF ALL DISORDERS OF THE Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Bladder, Nervous Diseases, Headache, Constipation, Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piles, and all derangements of the internal viscera.

ONE TO SIX BOXES ARE Warranted to effect a Positive Cure.
DR. RADWAY'S PILLS ARE COMPOSED OF VEGETABLE EXTRACTS PREPARED IN VAPOUR; Superior to all Purgatives, Cathartics, or Alteratives.

COATED WITH GUM.
Which renders them very convenient, and well adapted for children, and persons who have a dislike to take medicine.
DR. RADWAY'S PILLS are the only pills in general use, which are so perfectly adapted to the human system, being highly concentrated. One or six of these pills will cleanse the bowels, and give a healthy tone to the canal, without producing cramp, spasms, pain, or any other ill effects.

THE GREAT WANT SUPPLIED.
It is a well known fact that Physicians have long sought to discover a vegetable purgative as a substitute for Calomel, and that would cleanse the Alimentary Canal of all diseased and retained humors, as thoroughly as Lobelia will the stomach, without producing sickness at stomach, weakness, or irritation of the mucous membrane.

Dr. Radway's Pills, this very important and essential principle is secured. A dose of two to six (according to the condition of the system) of Dr. Radway's Pills will produce all the positive alterative change—from a sluggish or torpid, to a healthy action of the Liver—as the physician hopes to obtain by a dose of Blue Pills, or Calomel; and will as thoroughly cleanse the Stomach, and purge from the bowels the diseased and retained humors as the most approved emetic, or cathartic.

Professor Reid—College of Pharmacy.
THE GREAT PURGATIVE.
The celebrated Prof. Reid, of New York, Lecturer on Chemistry in the College of Pharmacy, styles Dr. Radway's Pills "the most valuable of all the Purgatives Medicine has to administer in cases of chronic Debility, and in Dyspepsia, Small-Pox, Typhoid Fever, and all the other diseases of the bowels, arising from indigestion, and the use of high-dose medicine. It is a safe, healthy, and pleasant medicine, and is well adapted to the human system, and is well adapted to the human system, and is well adapted to the human system."
