Old Rivals Meet Friday
When Holstein comes here on Friday evening for their first league game with the Mildmay Stars, there will certainly be a contest well worth witnessing. The Stars are ready for this big game, and will have to win to stay in the running. Game at 6:30 sharp. Don't miss any chances of missing it.

Autos Collide on Highway
Last Sunday night, about 10:30, as Mrs. E. V. Kalfbeisch and her sister, Mrs. J. V. Berschke, and Mrs. L. Kalfbeisch, and her sons Orville, Claude and Grant, and her niece, Joan Berschke, were returning home from Woodstock in their Ford Sedan, a Chevrolet Cabriolet, driven by Elmer Dahms, collided with them opposite J. G. Thomson's farm on the Flora Road. The occupants of the Ford say that they noticed the Chevy approaching on the wrong side of the road, and the driver, Claude Kalfbeisch, applied the brakes and brought his machine down to ten miles an hour. The Chevy driver, noticing his position, pulled off toward his right, but not quickly enough to avoid a collision with Kalfbeisch's car, which was thrown into the windshield, and his nose was twisted and crushed and cut four stitches when he started to close the cuts. Mrs. Berschke was thrown from the rear of the car, and sustained several bruises and badly gashed her head. Her daughter, Joan, received a blow on her head which required stitches to close. The other occupants of the Kalfbeisch car were badly bruised. A passing truck hurried them to Dr. Carpenter's office in town. Elmer Dahms was accompanied by his brother, Emmanuel, but neither of the cars was badly hurt. Both cars were badly wrecked, and are now undergoing repairs.

Stars Commence Well
The Mildmay Stars opened the season auspiciously on Wednesday evening of last week by playing a tie game at Chesley, the score being 3 all. The Stars had difficulty in securing eleven players for this game, but with the assistance of Edward Diebel, who has been out of the game for a few years, the Stars went into battle. Mildmay secured the first two counters, but the home-sters succeeded in sewing up the score, one on a nice kick and the other a penalty. The Stars again went into the lead, only to have the Chesley boys even it up a few minutes before the close. The play was clean and fast throughout, and roughness was almost entirely absent. On Monday evening of this week Mildmay played another scheduled game at Aytton, and had little trouble in disposing of the Aytton team by a score of 3 to 0. Mr. Ed. Brooks of Chesley refereed impartially. Mildmay's old defence—C. E. Wendt in goal and C. J. Kunkel and back Schurr, on the back line, were in action again, and had little trouble in warding off their opponents' attack. They were ably supported by the half-backs, Geo. Scheffer, Clem. Illig, and Gordon Lobsinger, who are in fine form. The forward line—Raybould, Walker, Lutkin, Harper and Kaufman are working together nicely, and their work was very effective. Mr. Howard, who came from the West recently, and works for Thos. H. Jasser, played a fine game as half-back at Chesley, and will find a permanent place with the Stars.

Aged Lady Passes
Mrs. Theresa Stroeder, who for the past year has been making her home with her son, John Stroeder, on the 6th concession of Carrick, passed away on Sunday night after a few hours illness with apoplexy. She took a stroke about seven o'clock in the evening, and it was soon evident that her recovery could not be expected. Mrs. Stroeder was born in Waterloo county 79 years ago, and had been a resident of Mildmay and Carrick for some forty years. She was a quiet, home-loving woman, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. She was a member of the Christian Mothers' Society of the Sacred Heart Church. Mrs. Stroeder is survived by her husband and one son. The funeral took place on Wednesday morning to the Deemerton R. C. Cemetery.

Higher Duties Or Better Friends?

Frank H. Simonds in the Reviews of Reviews States the American Side of This Very Timely Topic

By FRANK H. SIMONDS

There have been many indications that tariff is going to furnish a new chapter in American foreign relations. From Canada and South America alike have come warnings of the certainty of evil consequences if our new Congress shall predicate its measures of farm relief upon a further and considerable raising of the tariff as it affects the agricultural and cattle interests of our American neighbors.

Today we are faced by the fact that if we raise our tariff we make more difficult the task of our European debtors to pay us in goods and services the only method by which they can pay. And we are likewise confronted by the fact that if we raise our tariff in such ways as will affect our Canadian and South American neighbors, we destroy the famous good-will recently brought about by Mr. Hoover's journey, and at the same time give unmistakable advantage to our European rivals in South American economic and political spheres.

The Canadian detail is most immediately important. Canada's exports to us are precisely those which would be most affected by any tariff made to please the western farmer. It is Canadian livestock, in particular, which is to be aimed at in all schemes so far proposed. But any blow aimed at Canada will lead to immediate and far-reaching reprisals.

Moreover, Canada is in the position to strike back. While American exports to Canada amount to nearly a billion annually, Canada sends us no more than half as much. And much of what Canada gets from Britain, Germany, and Belgium. In recent years we have overtaken Britain in the Canadian market; but it would require no considerable elevation of the tariff upon American goods, as contrasted with those of British manufacture, to permit John Bull to ride back to his old situation.

As for South America, I recall one expert in Latin American affairs who warned me that an increase of a few cents in the duty upon linseed oil would destroy the last lingering benefit incident to Mr. Hoover's excursion, at least in so far as Argentina is concerned. Nothing would be more easy or more natural for Argentina than a policy of reprisal, which would advantage the European nations eagerly seeking to regain lost ground and ready to make reciprocal tariff arrangements to please the Argentinians.

Moreover, what is to be looked for is not merely a spasmodic raising of tariffs among nations severely affected by our own action, but combined action of the American nations—to-day our most promising markets—and of the European countries which are our most active competitors.

They are a certain number of suffering farmers in our West and North-west. A simple remedy for their troubles may lie in the raising of duties on such things as live cattle and wheat. But over against this relief must be set two items: an immediate contraction of the Canadian market for American manufactures, incident to reprisal and the worsening of our relations with Canada. The same situation manifestly exists in South America.

Is Canadian friendship worth keeping? Are Canadian markets of sufficient importance to be worth retaining? Is it a wise policy to make an American tariff system the foundation of European economic supremacy and political predominance in South America, predominate in the sense of friendship? These are questions which the present Congress must face.

Europe is steadily organizing a supreme attempt to recover its preeminence lost to the United States as a consequence of the war. It is steadily setting out to reduce our hold upon its own markets and to recapture those markets in Asia and both Americas which we have successfully invaded since 1914. It is prepared to offer all sorts of tariff advantages in its own markets in return for better rates than we have in foreign markets.

Therefore it is of vital importance to know whether the new Congress will limit itself to keeping the foreigner out of the American market, or whether it will consider the interests of the United States in foreign markets as well as the immediate difficulties of a single American industry, namely agriculture. Canada and South America are waiting to know the answer to this grave question.

It should be apparent that the time is at hand when the country and its rulers will have to appreciate the fact that new conditions require new treatment, that tariffs will have to be framed not merely with an eye to the interests of specific domestic producers, but quite as much to the general interest of American exporters in foreign markets. Anything which makes relations more difficult and less friendly, anything which even tends to lead the American countries to turn toward Europe, is extremely dangerous for us.

Considerable and judicious tariff changes adopted in the present Congress would certainly strengthen the hands of every political party and group in Canada and in South America hostile to the United States.

Canada is our greatest present and prospective market. The Canadian people are our closest neighbors and the nation most friendly to us of all on this planet. While every sensible citizen of the United States recognizes that Canada is rapidly developing a national sentiment and a national soul utterly distinct, that all its evolution is toward complete independence of even the shadow of an American control, it remains true that there is a steadily expanding community of conception. We and the Canadians instinctively think the same thoughts about many subjects and primarily about European problems.

Both our friendship with Canada, and Canadian markets are involved in the question of farm relief which is coming up for final adjustment at Washington. Certainly nothing could be more absurd than a good-will tour of the President-elect, with all its immediate and prospective benefits, sacrificed to satisfy the demands of a few linseed-oil producers in the Northwest.

The proposal solemnly advanced, that we should put a heavy duty on bananas in order to encourage our people to consume oranges and apples instead, furnishes a fair sample of present-day tariff conceptions in many quarters. One can easily conceive how readily European countries would encourage banana imports, and in return obtain low duties for their own exports, which would enable them to replace the United States in the market of the banana-raising countries and enlist the governments of those countries in their campaign to recover lost influence in Latin America.

For several generations tariff discussion has centered in the doctrine that the American workingman must be protected against the cheap labor of Europe in our home market. But now our own tariff legislation may easily become the insuperable obstacle to the sale of the products of the American workingman in those foreign markets which have become a vital circumstance in our domestic well-being.

Every European country which competes with us is watching the new Congress with divided emotions. While all will certainly protest our action as it affects them directly, they will with equal unanimity hold it as it restores to them their old customers and brings back their lost markets.

Canada to Take Part In Congress

P. B. Fowler to Attend International Chamber of Commerce Meeting

For the first time, Canada this year will take its place among the great countries of the world at the biennial congress of the International Chamber of Commerce at Amsterdam, Holland. As first of the men to represent Canada, P. B. Fowler, president of the Victoria, B.C., Chamber of Commerce, and manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in that city, has been chosen.

When the congress is held, from July 8 to 15, leading business men from 43 nations will be gathered together. Belonging to the international chamber are 950 business organizations in addition to many business houses which have joined individually. The world-wide organization arose nine years ago out of the need for discussions on commercial and business problems of international importance.

Alberto Pirelli, president of the international chamber, who is a rubber manufacturer and a senator of Italy, sent a special invitation to the chairman of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Dr. John W. Ross, saying that it was felt imperative that Canada should be represented.

Duty On Live Cattle Would Affect Canada

Ottawa.—The amendment, which the house of representatives at Washington has placed in the new tariff bill to increase the duty on live cattle, if it becomes law, will have a very considerable effect on the Canadian cattle-raising industry. That seemed to be the consensus among members of Parliament from the districts most affected and from live stock officials of the Department of Agriculture, when questioned over the weekend.

The first result of the increase coming into effect would be to boost the prices in the United States just that much. At the present time there is a shortage of cattle in the United States, and as a result, the demand there, a shortage has also been created in Canada so that live stock men here think the present prices in Canada would hold regardless of the duty and the United States consumers would pay the higher prices. Three or four years from now Canadian cattle raisers would more likely feel the pinch of the increase. If the tariff accomplishes the object which its framers have in view, it would encourage United States farmers to raise more cattle and this takes from three to four years.

Western members of Parliament expressed the opinion that the prairie farmers have already this spring turned more to cattle raising because of the comparatively low price of wheat and the high price of beef. The increases which the amendment propose is larger than would appear at first glance. It would raise the tariff on the bulk of the cattle shipped by Canada to the United States from one and a half cents to two and a half cents a pound. The live cattle shipped across the line would average at Canadian yard prices a pound at Canadian yard prices, since a considerable portion of them are stockers. Accordingly, the two-and-one-half cent rate would be easily equal to a twenty-five per cent ad valorem.

The amendment has been so

Proposes Quota for Canadians

Bill Introduced in U.S. House Makes Further Restrictions

Washington.—A bill to make the quota restrictions of the Immigration Act of 1924 applicable to peoples of the Western Hemisphere including Canada and Newfoundland, was introduced in the House of Representatives last week by Adolf J. Sabath, Democrat, Illinois. The bill which began by mentioning Canada and Newfoundland and thereafter mentioned Mexico, Cuba and other countries, would permit wives and unmarried children under 18 years of age to follow the immigrant.

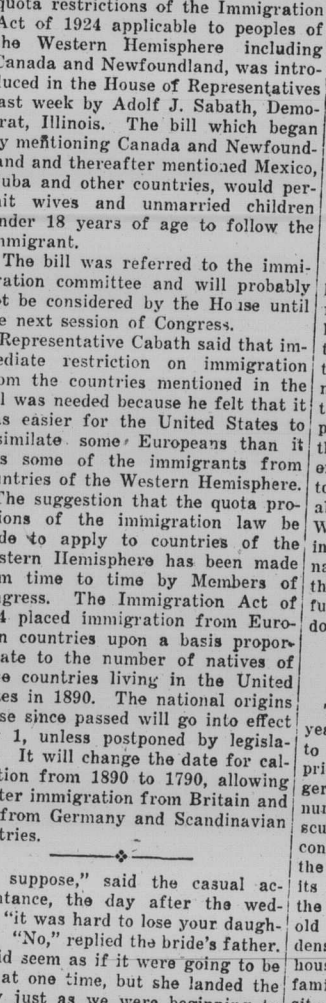

The bill was referred to the immigration committee and will probably not be considered by the House until the next session of Congress. Representative Cabath said that immediate restriction on immigration from the countries mentioned in the bill was needed because he felt that it was easier for the United States to assimilate some Europeans than it was some of the Western Hemisphere.

The suggestion that the quota provisions of the immigration law be made to apply to countries of the Western Hemisphere has been made from time to time by Members of Congress. The Immigration Act of 1924 placed immigration from European countries upon a basis proportionate to the number of natives of those countries living in the United States in 1890. The national origins clause since passed will go into effect July 1, unless postponed by legislation. It will change the date for calculation from 1890 to 1790, allowing greater immigration from Britain and less from Germany and Scandinavian countries.

"I suppose," said the casual acquaintance, the day after the wedding, "it was hard to lose your daughter?" "No," replied the bride's father. "It did seem as if it were going to be hard at one time, but she landed the fellow just as we were beginning to lose all hope."

Training Courses For Fliers to Open

Royal Canadian Air Force Has Class of 40 Men

Ottawa.—Training courses of the Royal Canadian Air Force will shortly be opened for 1922. A class of 40 will be given training in flying during the next three months. Later on courses will be undertaken in the mechanical and other branches of the force.

Commissioned pilots are of two general classes—permanent and non-permanent. Permanent commissioned pilots may expect a career in the Royal Canadian Air Force, whereas non-permanent pilots are appointed for limited periods of service, which may, from time to time, be renewed according to the demand for pilots. The pay of permanent and non-permanent pilots is, for all practical purposes, the same.

The main source of supply of prospective commissioned officers is the science faculties of Canadian universities and the Royal Military College. Undergraduates of these institutions who are British subjects, single, medically fit for full flying duties, under the age of 21 years and over 18 years at the commencement of the course, and who are recommended by university or Royal Military College authorities as likely to make efficient air force officers, are eligible for a course of flying training. This training is carried out during the summer vacation period for three successive years.

Candidates selected for this course are appointed as provisional pilot officers in the non-permanent Royal Canadian Air Force. They are required to give an undertaking to complete both their college and air force courses before they can be appointed to the Royal Canadian Air Force, but are under no obligation to join the service after completion of training.

Throughout their training these officers are paid at the rate of $3 per day for the first year, $3.50 per day for the second year, $4 per day for the third year, plus clothing, quarters, rations, medical attention and transportation to and from their homes.

Application for the above training is made through the university or military college authorities, who have full information on the subject. Priority in selection is given to applicants who belong to the Canadian Officers Training Corps.

The Color Problem

Dublin Irish Times: General Hertzog has taken a bold stand. He announces that in no circumstances will his party consent to the placing of the black population on a par with the white. South Africa must remain a white man's country, and, for that reason, he declares, he is opposed unalterably to the suggestion that the Union should enter into federation with those Northern territories which, in his nature of things, always must remain "native" States. Well-meaning idealists have been trying to secure for the South African native complete political equality with the Europeans. General Hertzog refuses point blank to have anything to do with this suggestion.

Overcrowding of London

Truth (London): Two or three years ago London practically awoke to the fact that its innumerable and priceless "squares" were all in danger of being built over. If a certain number of them have now been rescued, it is only with the voluntary consent of his owners, not because the public had any power to act in its own defence. If the six acres in the heart of London occupied by the old Foundling Hospital and its gardens are not covered with tenement houses accommodating hundreds of families, it will be due to the generosity of one millionaire, not to the power of any public authority to avert the calamity, though a calamity every thinking person knows it would be. It is only by the creation and exercise of such power in regard to all new building and rebuilding that the overcrowding of London can be checked.

Killing No Murder

Manchester Guardian (Lim.): If President Hoover is really going to procure the general enforcement of Prohibition he will be the first to realize that he must employ means which are themselves lawful and which do not lead to a further contempt for the law. And the first necessity for this object is the reform of police methods. In this matter, as in others, one crime of violence breeds another, and the use of unnecessary violence by the police is not only a grave evil in itself but also a direct cause of the lawlessness which it is supposed to put down.

British Immigrants to the U.S.A.

Manitoba Free Press (Lib.): Taking into account the unrestricted immigration of native-born Canadians and the new European quotas, it would appear that at least 75 per cent. of the immigrants of the United States hereafter will come from countries flying the Union Jack. This should be a good thing for the United States, and it may be a good thing for both countries, as tending to maintain friendly relations between the British Empire and the United States.

Are you miserable and run-down?

WOMEN of all ages, all over the world, are finding new health in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Actual microscopic tests have shown that the medicinal elements contained in them increase the blood count and build up and revitalize the entire system. Miss Juliette Seguin, of Dalkeith, Ont., testifies as follows:—

"Two years ago I became weak, nervous and run-down. Various prescribed treatments did not help me. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and it was not long before I noticed a big improvement, and soon I was in the best of health. A year ago also my mother was badly run-down; her nerves were shattered and life became a burden. She began taking the pills and as a result she is in perfect health."

The Task in India

Manchester Guardian (Lib.): Enough has been said about the difference of caste, creed, language and race existing in these territories, but we are apt to think too little of other fundamental difficulties which have to be taken into consideration by statesmen who would construct a political system suitable to India's needs. These are the difficulties which arise from the vastness of the country's population, combined with its poverty and ignorance, all three connected in a vicious circle. The sums required to enable the next generation in India to reach the standard of literacy are big enough to appal the financiers of New York. Yet India's credit depends ultimately on the productivity of her workers, and that productivity cannot be increased till they have received an education good enough to give them a new outlook on life.

The Pigs at Weaning Time

Hog raisers who make it a rule to remove the litters at four or five weeks of age can have no correct idea of the extent of the mistake they make. Unless one has new milk and is very skilful in feeding the young pigs they are bound to give a "setback" that is quite unnecessary and which requires a lot of time and much feed to make up during the following weeks. Mr. Eric D. McGreer, Sheep and Swine Promoter of the Dominion Live Stock Branch, with headquarters in Kingston, in addressing special hog breeders' meetings in Eastern Ontario, recommended keeping the litters on their mothers for at least six weeks when two litters a year are being raised, or eight weeks when the litters are to come at periods wider apart.

To prepare the young pigs for weaning a good plan is to feed a mixture of equal parts of middlings and finely ground oats with the hulls sifted out. It is well to start feeding the mixture dry handful or so at a time. Skim milk should be given in a separate trough. This should be given sweet and not too cold during the first few weeks. Afterwards it may be fed slightly sour, but it is a mistake to feed sweet one day and sour the next as this is apt to bring about digestive troubles. After the pigs have been removed entirely from their mothers the daily ration for the next two or three months may well consist of a mixture of 1 part of sifted crushed oats, 1 part shorts, 1 part middlings, and 5 per cent. linseed oil meal—all soaked for 24 hours in skim milk. Another mixture may consist of equal parts of middlings and sifted crushed oats supplemented with 5 per cent. linseed oil meal; all mixed with skim milk. If skim milk is not available digester tanks, which can be purchased at feed stores, may be substituted at the rate of 6 per cent. to 8 per cent. of the meal ration. It is a good plan with pen fed pigs to scatter a little dry grain, oats or cracked corn in the litter.

WHAT TO DO FOR YOUR BABY'S COLD

When the cold is in baby's head, you can make his breathing easier by putting a few drops of liquid alcohol in his nostrils several times daily. But to throw off the cold completely, keep him warm, and make his bowels move freely. For this purpose, doctors advise Fletcher's Castoria, because it's purely vegetable and harmless. It acts as quickly as castor oil and doesn't gripe or sicken. Millions of mothers know how easily Castoria soothes crying, fretful babies and children to sleep; how quickly it relieves those common ailments, such as colic gas, constipation, diarrhea, etc. To protect you from imitations, the Fletcher signature is on every bottle of genuine Castoria.

MADE HER BABY PLUMP AND WELL

Nothing makes a mother more grateful than a benefit conferred upon her child. Mothers everywhere who have used Baby's Own Tablets for their children speak in enthusiastic terms of them. For instance, Mrs. Zepharia Lavale, Three Rivers, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets are a wonderful medicine for little ones. They never fail to regulate the baby's stomach and bowels and make him plump and well. I always keep a box of the Tablets in the house and would advise all mothers to do likewise." Most of the ordinary ailments of childhood arise in the stomach and bowels, and can be quickly banished by Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets relieve constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers, expel worms, allay teething pains and promote healthy sleep. They are guaranteed to be free from injurious drugs and are safe even for the youngest and most delicate child. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Girl Worth Knowing

In these days of convention it's like a breeze from the ocean or the mountains to meet a girl who disdains the powder-puff and lipstick, and whose hand grasps a pistol or a sword much more readily than a golf club or tennis racket. Such a girl is Tiger Dawn, the fascinating heroine of Selwyn Jepson's latest novel. Beautiful in face and form, she disdains to use her loveliness as a weapon, fighting for her right to a fortune with the valour of an adventurer of old. "Tiger Dawn" is a book to read on holiday; it is full of that speedily movement and thrilling plot which every novel-reader likes. The characters live and love. So don't miss "Tiger Dawn," or you'll miss a good thing.

Leo Masse in the National Review (London): All political parties have done extremely badly by the British taxpayer, who, as we have frequently had occasion to point out, is "let down" over every international cash transaction, because while everybody is out to "do" him, he has no one to champion his interests except "internationalists" who are too "broad-minded" to adopt a "selfish" British standpoint, or sentimentalists, who conceive their whole duty as consisting in getting some other Power "on its legs" regardless of the fact that its main object is to knock us off our feet.

COLOUR BRINGS PERSONALITY TO YOU

TRULY, this is the age of colour. Brilliant harmonies of home decoration are the vogue, inside and out. Daring yet artistic colour schemes, unthought of before, are being introduced everywhere.

This widespread colour trend is particularly marked in roofs. No longer are people content with the drab, dull sameness of former years. They want roofs that satisfy their colour hunger—that give a rich, dashing personality to their homes.

Such people turn inevitably to Brantford Multi-Coloured Asphalt Slates. Their charm, their vivid beauty, their almost unlimited range

WIT AND HUMOR

"My papa's a bookkeeper," said little Albert proudly. "Yes, I know it," rejoined small Dorothy, daughter of a minister. "He borrowed a book from my papa."

"What's the matter with your wife, she's all broken up lately?" "She got a terrible jar." "What has happened?" "Why, she was assisting at the Ladies' rummage sale, took on her new hat, and somebody sold it for thirty-five cents."

A man once rented a lot of several acres to one of his Negro neighbors. The land was to be planted in corn and the owner was to receive one-fourth of the crop. The corn was duly harvested, but the owner received no rental. Meeting the Negro one morning he said: "Look here, Sam, have you harvested your corn?" "Yes, sah, boss, long ago." "Well, wasn't I to get a fourth?" "Yes, sah; boss, dat's the truf, but dar wasn't no fo'th. Dar was jes' three loads, an' dey was mine."

Two Irishmen met in the street. "What did you get for your birthday, Pat?" asked Mike. "I got a pair of opera glasses." "Are they good ones, Pat?" "Good ones? You see that church over there?" "Yes." "Well, these glasses bring it so near that you can hear the organ playing."

Mistress—Jane, I saw the milkman kiss you this morning. In the future I will take the milk in." Jane—"Twouldn't be no use, mum. He's promised never to kiss anybody but me."

Lack of Energy A worried looking man drove up to the doctor's office. "I'm Hiram Hoe," he told the medico, "and I'd like you to come and see my wife." "Is she very ill?" "Not exactly."

"What seems to be the trouble?" "This morning," began the farmer, "she got up at four o'clock as usual; milked six cows, got breakfast for the hands, did her housework, churned the butter and along about ten o'clock she said she felt a little tired. So I thought maybe she needed a tonic or something, doctor."

HAD THUMB SEVERED

A number of children have recently chosen the dangerous place of playing around the big road grader and other machinery left by the county road officials on Broadway. On Thursday of last week while a number of kiddies were playing there they probably loosened some of the levers that work the sharp blade on the grader and unfortunately the hand of Eileen Catto, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Catto, happened to be directly below the blade when it became released and fell, severing the child's thumb, just below the first joint.—Kincardine Review-Reporter.

ELDERSLIE MAN MISSING

The possibility that a fellow-being may be lost in the woods, in a swamp or in some other out of the way place and suffering from exposure, hunger or thirst, or met with fatal mishap, bestirred the community when it became known that Malcolm Currie had not been seen since Sunday night, May 26th, when he was missed from the home of his nephew, Mr. Chauncey Parker, lot 4, con. 21, Greenock. A small search party went out for him that night, and throughout the whole of the following week relays of men of the neighborhood kept up the search far and near. So thoroughly has the ground been covered from the vicinity of his old home farm, lot 20, con. 8, Elderslie, and westward to the shore of Lake Huron that there seems no probability that he would not have been discovered, alive or dead, within this territory. On Sunday last fully 150 men scoured the country for miles around.

The missing man is an old resident of Elderslie, 70 years of age, and a bachelor. He was only a young lad when his family arrived in this new settlement from Scotland, and he was at the time of his disappearance the only remaining member of the family. He had been living alone on the farm in Elderslie since the death of his brother Archie, also a bachelor, some years ago. Last fall Malcolm was stricken with paralysis, which left him in a partially helpless condition, and he was brought to the home of his nephew, Mr. Archie Parker, in Paisley, where he was cared for until near spring. Since then he has been at Mr. Chauncey Parkers in Greenock, from where, as stated, he wandered away.

From the time he was taken charge of in the homes of his nephews, Mr. Currie has always evinced a desire to go walking away by the road, and whenever a motor came along he would hail the driver and ask for a ride, being willing to go in any direction and continue the trip to any length without giving any direction as to destination. At all times he was quite traceable in his manner. Scores of times he slipped out of the house quietly and headed for nowhere in particular, but was brought back and kept within doors as close as possible, also being given the best of care.

The extensive search so far having failed to disclose his whereabouts, the friends have about come to the conclusion that he has perished somewhere, or having been picked up by a motorist and so been carried out of the locality, perhaps to go farther by means of other cars, and may now be many miles away among people by whom he is unknown, and who may not find it possible to learn from him his identity or location of his friends.—Paisley Advocate.

BOY DROWNED AT KINCARDINE

Freddie Hodgins, a lad of 14, was drowned, while bathing in the Pennington River near Kincardine on Wednesday evening of last week. He with a number of other boys had gone to a popular swimming pool in the river, and he evidently got into a deep hole and sank. The place was not regarded as dangerous, but due to the high water, or changes in the bed of the river the water seems deeper than formerly.

THE OLD AGE PENSIONS

(From County Council Minutes). The County contributes 20% of the cost of this new social scheme as well as looking after the administration. This matter came before Council and two suggestions dealt with. One, that as the Board which administers the Mothers' Pension Allowance has been working satisfactorily and efficiently, it would be advisable that this work be turned over to them. The other, that this could be better done by appointment of a Board made up entirely of County Councilors. Some discussion took place on these suggestions, and on being put to a vote, Council decided to keep the administration of the Act within the members of Council. By a vote of 28 to 5, they so decided. Having done so, they appointed the following to constitute the Old Age Committee: D. J. Byers, Warton; J. W. Sinclair, Arran; Major Tolmie, Southampton; W. J. McKay, Huron; Campbell Grant, Walkerton. It is a rough guess, of course, but it was estimated that around $75,000 might be dispersed under this scheme in Bruce County. The County's share at this figure would amount to $15,000. Thus when the Finance Committee was striking the rate for 1929, they made provision for $2500 to cover the months of November and December, when the Act will be in operation, as November 1st is the date set for it to go into force.

The newly appointed Board has already met and organized to take on the work when the time comes. Major Tolmie is appointed as Chairman and Campbell Grant as Secretary. John D. McTavish, 12 years of age, of Shakespeare, was instantly killed on Saturday when hit by a bullet accidentally discharged from a .22 rifle being carried by his 15 year old brother. A dog walking beside his brother brushed the trigger discharging the bullet.

Fines Go to the County County municipal men were rather surprised on receiving Bill 120 of the recent session. This provides that all fines for offences under the Highways Traffic Act on county highways shall hereafter go to the County Treasurer instead of to the municipalities in which the offences were committed. Under another bill passed at the same session the county will now be policed by the Provincial officers where there is no High Constable.

BETTER BULL AREA

Bruce County will hereafter be known as above. A by-law is to be prepared and scrub bulls hereafter will be infra dig. Those wanting to keep bulls must conform to the provisions that such will be up to a certain standard, set by the Agricultural Department. The purpose of this is to assure better cattle in the county. Good bulls will provide good progeny.

THE FORD CAR SIX-BRAKE SYSTEM

Grips with Silent Power

THE greatest safety feature on any automobile—the braking system—has been developed on the Ford car to a degree that insures absolute driving confidence. Being fully enclosed, the internal expanding brakes on all four wheels are free from any danger of impaired performance from mud, sand, road dirt, grease or other foreign matter entering the mechanism or between the bands and drum.

The four wheel system is operated by a foot pedal, while the emergency or parking system of two brakes, one on each rear wheel, is distinct and separate, operated by a hand lever. This added security is made possible through the unique design of the Ford steel spoke wheels to which drums are fitted to accommodate two sets of internal brakes on the rear wheels.

The smooth, even braking of the Ford car yields more advantages than maximum safety at all times, since it makes tires last longer and adds immeasurably to riding ease and driving comfort.

"SALADA" TEA

'Fresh from the gardens'

"The announcement at breakfast went well. After the golfing party had gone off, we had the morning in which to complete our arrangements. What I was chiefly concerned about was to establish as completely as possible the identity of Robert. For this reason I suggested to Mark that, when dressed, he should go out by the secret passage to the bowling green, and come back by the drive, taking care to enter into conversation with the lodge-keeper.

"In this way I would have two more witnesses of Robert's arrival—first the lodge-keeper, and secondly one of the gardeners whom I would have working on the front lawn. Mark, of course, was willing enough. He could practice his Australian accent on the lodge-keeper. It was really amusing to see how readily he fell into every suggestion which I made. Never was a killing more carefully planned by its victim.

"He changed into Robert's clothes in the office bedroom. This was the safest way—for both of us. When he was ready, he called me in, and I inspected him. It was extraordinary how well he looked the part. I suppose that the signs of his dissipation had already marked themselves on his face, but had been concealed hitherto by his mustache and beard; for now that he was clean-shaven they lay open to the world from which we had so carefully hidden them, and he was indeed the wretch which he was pretending to be.

"Wonderful," I said to myself. "Nobody could possibly guess."

"I peered into the hall. It was empty. We hurried across to the library; he got into the passage and made off. I went back to the bedroom, collected all his discarded clothes, did them up in a bundle and returned with them to the passage. Then I sat down in the hall and waited.

"You heard the evidence of Stevens, the maid. As soon as she was on her way to the Temple in search of Mark, I stopped into the office. My hand was in my side-pocket, and in my hand was the revolver.

"He began at once in his character of Robert—some rignarole about working his passage over from Australia; a little private performance for my edification. Then in his natural voice, gloating over his well-planned retaliation on Miss Norris, he burst out, 'It's my turn now. You wait.' It was this which Elsie heard. She had no business to be there and she might have ruined everything, but as it turned out it was the luckiest thing which could have happened. For it was the one piece of evidence which I wanted; evidence other than my own that Mark and Robert were in the room together.

"I said nothing. I was not going to take the risk of being heard to speak in that room. I just smiled at the poor little fool, and took out my revolver and shot him. Then I went back into the library and waited—just as I said in my evidence.

"Can you imagine, Mr. Gillingham, the shock which your sudden appearance gave me? Can you imagine the feelings of a 'murderer' who has (as he thinks) planned for every possibility, and is then confronted suddenly with an utterly new problem? What difference would your coming make? I didn't know. Perhaps none; perhaps all. And I had forgotten to open the window!

"I don't know whether you will think my plan for killing Mark a clever one. Perhaps not. But if I do deserve any praise in the matter, I think I deserve it for the way I pulled myself together in the face of the unexpected catastrophe of your arrival. Yes, I got a window open, Mr. Gillingham, under your very nose; the right window, too, you were kind enough to say. And the keys—yes, that was clever of you, but I think I was cleverer.

"I deceived you over the keys, Mr. Gillingham, as I learnt when I took the liberty of listening to a conversation on the bowling-green between you and your friend Beverley. Where was I? Ah, you must have a look for that secret passage, Mr. Gillingham.

"But what am I saying? Did I deceive you at all? You have found out the secret—that Robert was Mark—and that is all that matters. How have you found out? I shall never know now. Where did I go wrong? Perhaps you have been deceiving me all the time. Perhaps you know about the keys, about the window, even about the secret passage. You are a clever man, Mr. Gillingham.

"I had Mark's clothes on my hands. I might have left them in the passage, but the secret of this passage was now out. Miss Norris knew it. That was the weak point of my plan, perhaps, that Miss Norris had to know it. So I hid them in the pond, the inspector having obligingly dragged it for me first. A couple of keys joined them, but I kept the revolver. Fortunately, wasn't it, Mr. Gillingham?

"Goodbye, Mr. Gillingham. I'm sorry that your stay with us was not of a pleasanter nature, but you understand the difficulties in which I was placed. Don't let Bill think too badly of me. He is a good fellow; look after him. He will be surprised. And thank you for letting me end my own way. I expect you did sympathize a little, you know. We might have been friends in another world—yeh and I, and I and she. Tell her what you like. Everything or nothing. You will know what is best. Good-bye, Mr. Gillingham.

"MATTHEW CAYLEY.

"I am lonely tonight without Mark. That's funny, isn't it?"

CHAPTER XXI.

"Good Lord!" said Bill, as he put down the letter. "What did you write to him? Was that last night? After I'd gone into Stanton?"

"Yes."

"What did you say? That you'd discovered that Mark was Robert?"

"Yes. At least I said that this morning I should probably telegraph to Mr. Cartwright of Wimpole Street, and ask him to identify the body."

Bill nodded thoughtfully and went back again to the letter.

"I see. And you told Cayley that you were telegraphing to Mark's dentist?"

"Yes. And then of course it was all up for him. Once we knew that Robert was Mark we knew everything."

"How did you know?"

Anthony got up from the breakfast table and began to fill his pipe.

"Well, let's see if I can go through my own mind again, and tell you how I guessed it. First of all, the clothes."

"Yes?"

"To Cayley the clothes seemed an enormously important clue. I felt certain that, in that case, the absence of the collar was unintentional. In collecting the clothes he had overlooked the collar. Why?"

"I took out my revolver and shot him."

"It was the one in the linen-basket?"

"Yes. It seemed probable. Why had Cayley put it there. The obvious answer was that he hadn't. Mark had put it there."

"Go on," said Bill eagerly.

"Well, why had Mark changed down there instead of in his bedroom? The only answer was that the fact of his changing had to be kept secret. When did he change? The only possible time was between lunch (when he would be seen by the servants) and the moment of Robert's arrival. And when did Cayley collect the clothes in a bundle? Again, the only answer was 'Before Robert's arrival.' So another x was wanted—to fit those three conditions."

"And the answer was that a murderer was intended, even before Robert arrived?"

"Yes. Well now, it wasn't possible a murder could be intended without any more preparation than the changing into a different suit in which to escape. The thing was too childish. Also, if Robert was to be murdered, why go out of the way to announce his existence to you all? I began to feel now that Robert was an incident only; that the plot was a plot of Cayley's against Mark—either to get him to kill his brother, or to get his brother to kill him—and that for some inexplicable reason Mark seemed to be lending himself to the plot." He was silent for a little, and then said, almost to himself, "I had seen the empty brandy bottles in that cupboard."

"You never said anything about them," complained Bill.

"I only saw them afterward. I was looking for the collar, you remember. They came back to me afterward; I knew how Cayley would feel about it . . . Poor devil!"

"Go on," said Bill.

"Well, then, we had the inquest, and of course I noticed the curious fact that Robert had asked his way at the second lodge and not at the first. So

WRIGLEY'S after every meal

I talked to Amos and Parsons. That made it more curious. Amos told me that Robert had gone out of his way to speak to him.

"Parsons told me that his wife was out in their little garden at the first lodge all the afternoon, and was certain that Robert had never come past it. He also told me that Cayley had put him on to a job on the front lawn that afternoon. To I had another guess. Robert had used the secret passage—the passage which comes out into the park between the first and second lodges. Robert, then, had been in the house; it was a put-up job between Robert and Sayley. But how could Robert be there without Mark knowing? Obviously, Mark knew too. What did it all mean?"

"When was this?" interrupted Bill.

"Just after the inquest—after you'd seen Amos and Parsons, of course?"

"Yes. I got up and left them, and came to look for you. I'd got back to the clothes then. Why did Mark change his clothes so secretly? Disguise? But then what about his face? That was much more important than clothes. His face, his beard—he'd have to shave off his beard—and then—oh, idiot! I saw you looking at that poster. Mark acting, Mark made up, Mark disguised. Oh, priceless idiot! Mark was Robert . . . Matches, please."

"Yes," said Bill thoughtfully. "Yes . . . But wait a moment. What about the 'Plough and Horses'?"

Anthony looked comically at him.

"You'll never forgive me, Bill," he said.

"What do you mean?"

Anthony sighed.

"It was a fake, Watson. I wanted you out of the way. I wanted to be alone. So—" he smiled and added, "Well, I knew you wanted a drink."

Joan was at her friend's party, and had received from Mother strict instructions not to say "Yes" when asked if she would like a second piece of birthday cake. "Will you have another piece of cake, Joan?" asked her hostess. "Thank you very much," said Joan. "The idea is not repugnant to me."

"The Duke of Wellington once slept in that bed," volunteered the landlord.

"Um." "And sat in that very chair you are now sitting in." "And refused to eat this ham sandwich, I s'pose," interposed the tourist. "Well, I don't think I want it, either."

4000 miles for a better crude

In far Peru—more than 4,000 miles from the station where you fill with Marvelube—Imperial Oil secures the rich petroleum from which this better motor oil inherits its lubricating superiorities.

To bring this better crude to Canada in Imperial's own ships and transform it by special processes into Marvelube is an undertaking which is possible only because of Imperial Oil's immense resources and facilities.

But Marvelube, a better oil because of the natural lubricating superiorities of its carbon-free, sulphur-free base, is well worth the huge effort and investment.

Marvelube is preferred by aircraft operators because it ensures a greater margin of safety in the air and gives longer periods between engine overhauls. It is the favorite oil of more than a half million motorists in Canada, because it ensures smoother, more powerful, more economical operation.

There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car, truck or tractor. See the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil stations and dealers.

Sunday School Lesson

June 16, Lesson XI—Judah Taken Captive—2 Kings 25: 1-12. Golden Text—Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14: 34.

ANALYSIS.
I. THE SIEGE OF JERUSALEM, vs. 1-7.
II. DESTRUCTION OF THE CITY, vs. 5-12.
III. THE VICTORS AND THE SPOIL, vs. 13-21.
INTRODUCTION.—The tragic story of the siege and capture of Jerusalem, and the carrying away of the captives and the spoil is told also in 2 Chron. 36; 11-21, and more fully in Jer. 39: 1-10 and 52: 1-27. A brief account of the numbers carried away in three successive deportations of captives appears in Jer. 52: 28-30. The events of our Lesson Story took place in the years B.C. 588 to 586. In B.C. 597, the city had previously been taken by the Chaldeans, and many of its best of the people exiled along with the young King Jehoiachin. (See 2 Kings 24: 1-17; 2 Chron. 36: 6-10; Jer. 24: 1.) This time, in B.C. 588, the city and the temple were destroyed, and only some of the poorest of the people left with Gedaliah, a Jewish prince of good character, as governor, 2 Kings 25: 22. Gedaliah was shortly afterward murdered by a renegade prince of Judah whom he had befriended and trusted, and the poor remnant of the people fled to Egypt taking Jeremiah, the prophet, with them. The kingdom of Judah came to an end with the fall of Jerusalem in B.C. 586, and was not re-established until the time of the Maccabees in the second and first centuries, B.C. Its entire history from the accession of David about B.C. 1010, covers about four hundred and twenty-five years. The kingdom of Israel, which separated from Judah after the death of Solomon about B.C. 934, came to its end when the Assyrians took Samaria, its capital city, in B.C. 722. The prophet Isaiah had witnessed the fall of Samaria. Jeremiah was an old man when Jerusalem was taken. There must have been many who, in the hard conditions of captivity and exile, remembered, and were helped by their teaching.

I. THE SIEGE OF JERUSALEM, vs. 1-7.
 Zedekiah, the last of the kings of Judah, a son of the great king Josiah, began to reign in B.C. 597. He was put upon the throne by the king of Babylon to whom he swore a solemn oath of submission and allegiance. This oath he broke when he rebelled against Babylon in the ninth year of his reign, that is, in B.C. 588. Against this rash and foolish act Jeremiah, the prophet, had repeatedly warned him, assuring him that in continued submission to the king of Babylon lay the only way of safety for himself and his people, Jer. 21: 1-10; 27: 1-18, etc. From his place of exile in Babylon, whither he had been taken captive in B.C. 597, Ezekiel also denounced Zedekiah for the violation of his covenant bond and oath, Ezek. 17: 11-21. The unfortunate king seems to have been a man of good impulses, and, on the whole, disposed to be guided by Jeremiah's good counsel, but he was too weak to resist the pressure brought to bear upon him by the evil counselors with whom he was surrounded.

It was in this same ninth year of his reign, B.C. 588, that Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, came, he and all his host, against Jerusalem, vs. 1. The siege lasted a year and a half. The defenders of the city made a stout resistance. At length famine prevailed and they began to seek safety in flight, vs. 3, 4. The king himself was among those who fled by night, but he was overtaken in the plains of Jericho, and was brought for trial to Riblah, on the river Orontes, about sixty-five miles north of Damascus, where the king of Babylon at that time had his headquarters. There he was treated with the barbarous and merciless cruelty of which even the highly civilized Chaldeans were capable. The last scene upon which his eyes looked was the murder of his sons, then blinded he was carried away to die in a Babylonian prison. Such was the tragic end of a weak, unprincipled, and unstable life, vs. 5-7. Compare the story as told in Jer. 39: 1-7.

II. DESTRUCTION OF THE CITY, vs. 5-12.
 Nebuchadnezzar began to reign in Babylon in B.C. 605 to 604. The nineteenth year of his reign will, therefore, have been B.C. 586, the eleventh year of Zedekiah who became king of Judah in B.C. 597 (see vs. 2, 7). Nebuzaradan, commander of the king's bodyguard, was entrusted with the completion of the work of destruction and spoliation, and the deportation of the captives. Five years later he was again in Palestine and carried away thence another large body of captives, Jer. 52: 30. The temple, the palace, the city walls, the houses of the people, all were burned or broken down. The number of captives is given in Jer. 52: 29 as eight hundred and thirty-two, but the statement in our Lesson (vs. 11; compare Jer. 39: 9; 52: 15) appears to indicate a much larger number. The poor of the land who were left, were placed under the rule of a Jewish prince, Gedaliah, v. 22.

III. THE VICTORS AND THE SPOIL, vs. 13-21.
 The pillars, the bases and the brassy sea (or basin) are described in 1 Kings, ch. 7, in the account of the building of the temple. The brass thus taken must have been in those days of immense value. For vs. 14-17 compare Jer. 52: 18-23. For the words "without weight" (v. 16), see 1 Kings 7: 47. The language of Psalms 74 and 77 in several passages seems to give expression to what must have been the terrible agony and distress of that dreadful time. The heathen are come into O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance; Thy holy temple have they defiled; They have laid Jerusalem on heaps. It is the same pitiful cry of unrelieved pain that is heard in the Lamentation of Jeremiah: How hath the Lord covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud, in his anger, And cast down from heaven to earth the beauty of Israel!

PRACTICAL—SMART.
 Very slim and simple, too, is a charming house frock of linen in dainty garden flower print. The reversible fronts which is an interesting feature, are piped in plain linen in vivid tone, which is also used to bind narrow belt that fastens at either side of front and ties in bow at back, and to edge patch pockets. It's easily made! See diagrams! Tussah silk in soft rose piped in deeper shade, printed cotton broadcloth, orchid gingham with purple binding, dotted pique in French blue with white, washable striped radium silk, tiny yellow and white checked gingham and striped men's cotton shirting fabric are exceptionally attractive for serviceable wear. Style No. 189, designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure, takes 2 1/2 yards of 40-inch material with 1 1/2 yards of binding for the 36-inch size. Pattern price 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred).

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.
 Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred); wrap it carefully for each number and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

Far Notes

Protecting Calves Against Blackleg
 In certain sections of the country, particularly where the drainage is poor, cattle owners suffer losses through the disease of blackleg, which attacks calves after they are six months of age and up to the time that they are two years old. It seldom attacks cattle of other ages and rarely affects other classes of livestock. Dr. A. E. Cameron, chief veterinary inspector of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, describes the disease, which is marked by loss of appetite, dullness and high temperature. Swelling of the body above the legs at any point is a common symptom and is accompanied by a crackling sound when pressed with the hand. The crackling, Dr. Cameron explains, is due to the formation of gas in pockets in the tissues beneath the skin. Fortunately, the disease is preventable by vaccination with blackleg agglutinated filtrate or vaccine products obtainable through local agencies, druggists and veterinarians. In Bulletin No. 117 of the Department of Agriculture, instructions are contained for submitting specimens to the laboratory of the Department for examination. A few drops of blood of an animal that is suspected of having the disease, in an equal amount of glycerine, may be placed in a phial. If a phial is not convenient, a few drops of the blood, if dropped on a sheet of clean notepaper and allowed to dry, will answer as a specimen. In either case the package must be carefully packed with the sender's name and address and the history of the case, and carefully wrapped according to instructions contained in the bulletin, which is obtainable from the Publications Branch of the Department. Dr. Cameron recommends, as a preventive measure, the inoculation of young calves before they go to pasture, and in badly infected districts, inoculation again in the fall is recommended.

A Substitute for Skim Milk in Hog-Raising

While it is recognized that dairying and hog raising go well together, one need not be discouraged in undertaking to raise pigs in the absence of a commercial product of considerable importance, is proving a useful substitute to skim milk during the fattening period. At a trial carried out at the Agassiz, British Columbia, Experimental Farm, during sixty-four days, the two feeds were compared. Two pens were fed a ration consisting of one part bran, one part corn meal, two parts shorts and seven per cent. fish meal. Two other pens were fed a similar basic grain ration except that no fishmeal was included. The hogs were given instead of the fishmeal six pounds of skim milk per day per pig. The milk was charged at 25 cents per hundred pounds and the fishmeal at $80 per ton. While the skim milk, fed groups produced slightly cheaper gains, the rate of gain was practically the same for the two lots. In his report for last year, published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, the Superintendent of the farm concludes that the results secured from this experiment and previous ones show that skim milk at 25 cents per hundred pounds gives cheaper pork than fishmeal at $70 to $80 a ton. The difference in the cost in this test amounted to about two cents a pound of gain made by the hogs.

Varieties of Strawberry for Canning

The strawberry holds an important place in the dessert fruits enjoyed by the people of Manitoba. The home garden crops on many farms provide fresh strawberries during the ripening season as well as large quantities for canning purposes. Tests for suitability for canning of different varieties grown at the Morden Experimental Station were made by the university graduates in home economics. Mr. W. R. Leslie, the Superintendent of the station, in his report for last year, gives the results of the tests on the basis of colour of the fruit when canned. The varieties turning out very rich, red fruit are given as marvel, premier, prince, easy picker and a few others, including champion. For good colour, dunlap, Dr. Burrill and progressive stand high. Of the medium pink to light red colour, Glen pink, Minnehaha, Nokomis and Mastodon are classed. Of the lighter, poor coloured varieties Stevens late, rockwood giant, cooper and a few others are named. The report of the station for last year, published by the Department of Agriculture for last year published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, gives the other qualifications of these varieties, including softness, productiveness and shape. The report is based on a four-year period with fruit grown at the station and canned under definite controlled conditions. Mr. Leslie observes that fully red berries are desired in order to obtain the best bright colour in the canned product.

The St. Lawrence Route

Victoria Colonist (Cons.): The Canadian Pacific Railway Company recently sent a questionnaire to 300 travel experts in the neighbourhood of Buffalo, Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Louis. In the answers received it was shown that only 35 of these knew that Montreal is 200 miles closer to Europe than New York. There were 208 who were unaware that Montreal is the second largest port in North America. Only 41 knew that Montreal has a thousand miles of navigable tidal water. Fifty-five only knew that 75 per cent. of the population of the United States is only seven days from Europe via the St. Lawrence. Forty-one showed acquaintance with the fact that a ship leaving Montreal is in sheltered waters for two days' steaming. The lack of knowledge of transportation conditions affecting such a port as Montreal is amazing when it is apparent among those whose business it should be to know.

"The army should take only married men."
 "Why?"
 "Because they're trained to take orders, of course."
 "Why our wants couldn't be as easily supplied as our needs."

HOLIDAYS AND HEALTH

Health protection for the holiday-maker has come to be regarded as an important necessity. The extensive automobile traffic of recent years has caused tourist camps and highway refreshment booths to spring up in great numbers. Unless these tourist services are properly cared for they may be the means of spreading disease. Improper sanitary measures including polluted drinking water, fly nuisance, infected utensils, contaminated food and refreshments must all be avoided. In order that the tourist and others using these facilities on the highways may be safeguarded the Provincial Department of Health inspects all tourist camps and highway refreshment booths each year. Where conditions are found satisfactory and equivalent to the standards adopted by the Department conspicuous banners of approval are given. These are displayed in prominent positions by the camp or booth and indicate to the tourist where the safest and best services can be secured.

Water

Nothing requires more consideration than the water we drink when away from home. If contaminated, it may cause typhoid or other illness. A few simple precautions are all that are necessary.

Swimming

One of the summer's main attractions is swimming. Swimmers cannot easily avoid taking some water into the mouth, nose and ears; consequently the water should be as safe as that required for drinking purposes. All indoor and artificial pools must be chlorinated in order to protect the bathers. In open streams or lakes, on the other hand, it is seldom feasible to treat the water by chlorine as in closed pools. Under these conditions the bather must exercise discretion about the quality of the water in which he swims. Running streams or lakes may be receiving sewage or other contamination so close to the bathing area as to make it unsafe for use. Safety demands that you look around before you dive. Where possible, use artificial pools. They are treated for your safety.

Milk

Be careful about all food away from home, particularly milk. Milk is responsible for the spread of much sickness. Pasteurization protects the consumer against this danger. Safe milk is pasteurized. Where this cannot be secured it may be rendered safe by heating to 133 F. for 30 minutes. If raw milk must be used, get it from a dairy free from infectious diseases, and from cows that are free from tuberculosis.

Sanitary Conveniences

Out-door closets are the usual sanitary conveniences at camps and summer cottages. A pail closet—with lots of dry earth or ashes thrown on the contents after each visit—cleaned every week and made fly-proof—is more sanitary than a pit closet. A small quantity of kerosene added to the pail helps to keep it free from flies and odors. Flush closets are, of course, most desirable, but chemical toilets, employing a caustic solution, are well adapted for use at summer cottages. They can be had at a reasonable cost, and are installed either indoors or out. When given reasonable attention, they are fly-proof, free from odors, and quite satisfactory.

Stolen Treasures Found In Valise

Australian Crown Jewels Said To be Worth Millions of Dollars

Casablanca, Morocco.—The Australian Crown Jewels, stolen in 1921, were discovered in a valise checked in the town of Safi. The valise contained the famous imperial necklace, worth millions of dollars, and many other valuable articles belonging to the Crown collection. It was believed that Maïlida, Italian, who was arrested when he tried to sell some of the jewels, was merely a tool for an international band of thieves and confidence men.

Sangster Bros. sold their 38 head of fat cattle the other day to Stanley Darling at 11 1/2c per pound. They were offered more than this a month ago, but they are not in the habit of selling ahead. We saw these cattle and they are a good bunch. Some of the larger steers will weigh between 14 and 16 cwt., but they tell us that heavier ones are not in as good demand as handyweight animals. However, this bunch will bring a wonderful wad of money, yet there were many dollars worth of feed put into them and they cost a good figure last fall.

Thos. Inglis, Reeve of Howick and Warden of the County, and Geo. Hubbard, Deputy-Reeve, attended the June meeting of the County Council at Goderich last week. We notice they had to raise the County rate one mill, something which has not been done for years. We are living in strenuous times and so long as people persist in going at the present pace they will have to pay for it. We notice that at this meeting Geo. Hubbard was one of the 5 appointed to Committee to look after Old Age Pensions.
