Letters from the Front

Letters from Our Boys Who Are Fighting for Us

France, June 30, 1918.

Dear Mother:

Well, another week has passed and still kicking around as usual, waiting for meal time. You know there is only one thing that bothers me over here, and that is getting up before breakfast and working between meals. Other than that every day is like a wedding, and every third one two.

I really don't know what I intend to say to-day, but as this is the day to write, I thought it would be well to start anyway. I think we are about due for some more Canadian mail, so probably I won't bother posting this for a day or so. Live in hopes that I get one soon.

Well, I suppose everyone is real busy over there now, especially the farmers, getting in their hay and remainder of their crops.

Believe me, we are sure having beautiful weather over here. The old French farmers, and daughters included, have been pretty busy getting their hay cut. I have only seen about two mowers since I have been over here. All they seem to use is a old scythe that no other white man could handle.

I had a post card from Austin Tudor the other day. He is in the camp that we were in when we first arrived in England. He was saying that he had been in Blighty for about four months, and he expected to be going on draft any time.

Well, I think I will ring off for this time. Hoping this finds you as it leaves me at present.

Yours as ever,

ROY.

P. S.—Have heard nothing of that money yet.

R. E. W.

France, July 2, 1918.

Dear Mother:

I guess I had better finish the letter I started on Sunday. I told you that I would hold it for a day or so, and perhaps I would have a letter from you. Last night I was lucky and received your letter, dated June 4.

The first thing that I noticed was that Dad has a little more added to his letter heads. He must be right into the business strong when he always has second hand cars on hand. I think it would be quite an idea if I had one over here; it would sure save a lot of walking.

So at last you got one of the pictures. I don't think it would have mattered much if it had got lost, also the one you got. I don't think that was near as good as the ones that got lost. However, you saw one of them.

You speak of changing from a white person to a darky, and that is caused by being in Sunny France. As a matter of fact, we are not in the part they call Sunny France, but it is certainly darned warm, even though we are not there.

I am glad to hear that everything is in fine shape over there in regard to the farmers' crops, but it was too bad about the wheat. The crops are sure in splendid condition over here, and I don't think old Kaiser Bill will starve us yet for a few years anyway. Look out it isn't the other way around.

The papers certainly look good these days. Our friends the Italians have sure had a great gain at the enemy's expense. I don't know whether to start and look to the day when we will be going home or not, because it may be longer than we expect; on the other hand it may be sooner than what any of us have any idea of.

That would be kind of bad news for Dougherty's to hear, that of Nathan being drowned, and along with the other boy being killed over here. I guess there are no more of them in the army now, unless it is George, and I have never heard anything of him joining up.

Well, I guess I will say good-bye. Hoping to hear from you again soon.

ROY WILKINSON.

Surrey, England, July 2, 1918.

Miss Ruth McGregor,

Just a few lines hoping they will find you in the best of health as it leaves me at present.

I am writing to thank you very much for the lovely box received from you a few days ago. The contents arrived in splendid condition and was greatly enjoyed by myself and the boys in my tent who shared in the eats.

I thank you and all who took part in packing up such a lovely box very, very much for your great kindness.

I am sure whoever received a box from you, as I did, will appreciate the good and splendid work you are doing and have done for us boys over here.

Wishing you and all my good friends at Waterdown the best of happiness in your good work.

Yours sincerely,

Sgt. E. TODD.

Among the number of Letters from the Front which we have published from time to time we printed, a short time ago, one from E. Roberts in which a part of it might cause a reflection on the good name of his wife and family.

The Review has no desire to cast any reflection whatever on the good name of anyone, and it is for this reason we wish to state that if Mr. Roberts is not receiving the letters he refers to, it is because good and sufficient reasons exist why he is not, and the fault, if any, is not on the part of either the wife or the children.

Your Home Town

Patronize home where your interests are and help maintain and support these interests, your interests, your neighbor's interests. Get that selfishness out of your heart that is envious of every success; that wants to pull down every interest that seems to reach beyond yours and in reality an advantage to it and the town. Neither imagine when a few shekles accumulate in your wallet you must necessarily go out of town to spend them, thinking it would never do to distribute a little cash to your home merchants, since you can stand them off for six months or a year. Mistaken idea. They'll appreciate the cash, and give you just as good bargains as any merchant in neighboring towns or cities that may get your money. Encourage home dealers or manufacturers in everything, not only by your patronage, but by words of encouragement and commendation. This is the way to build up a town and make business lively; and be sure you patronize your own paper when you see it stands by your interests, lauds every legitimate enterprise and waits to you the world's doings, transactions, picturing advantages, holding out inducements, and in a thousand ways building up your interests. If it deserves not your hearty and liberal support, pray, who does? It is a mighty poor rule that won't work both ways. Stand by your town and support all its interests.

Vote of Thanks

From the Patriotic League to the Citizens of Waterdown

We also wish to thank the young ladies of the Carnival Contest, the contest which added to the success of the Garden Party. The sum realized from this contest was $974.00, and thanks are due the following candidates: Miss Schoan, Miss G. Davidson, Miss Freed, Miss Henderson, Miss Alton and Miss Featherstone.

The latest returns show a total of $2,369.00. Of this, when the expense have been paid, there will be at least $1,700.00 for the League work for 1918 and 1919.

MRS. J. C. LANGFORD,
Vice-President.

No doubt there are other names which should be included in the above list, and if such should be the case, the omission has been entirely unintentional on the part of the Patriotic League, as the Leagues' vote of thanks is extended to everyone who in any way whatever helped in making the garden party a success.

Fichu Revived—New Neckwear, Skirts.

Though her thoughts may be 'way over on the western front, and her interest in the humbling of the horrible Hun has not lessened one bit, there are certain matters close at hand which require some consideration. Since one must be clothed, there are smart and becoming clothes to choose—and does not behoove Madame to look her best at all times and for all occasions?

Just now we hear so often that "things have changed," and they tell us how many things are different. One is reminded of this in connection with summer millinery, for time was—and not so long ago!—when we adhered rather closely to the straw hat for the summer months. But not this year of 1918! Perhaps it is because spring pushes so hard into the lap of next winter and we don our straw chapeaux along in January, that we are quite willing and anxious to wear something else in June. At any rate, the hat of Georgette crepe is the thing just now.

We believe MINARD'S LINIMENT IS the best.

THE SMALL HAT.

For morning and tailored wear Madame adjusts a close-fitting, trim little Hindoo turban, or a wee toque of crepe Georgette over her sleek coiffure. It is usually untrimmed, save for some effective draping of the crepe, or perhaps a little edge of white next the face. And usually this small hat is of dark blue.

For afternoon wear and other moral occasions, when she wishes to wear a large dress hat, does she choose a straw hat? Not at all! She chooses another of crepe Georgette! It may be of dark blue, or of the lovely shell pink, or a soft, creamy tan, or one of the orchid shades, or a delicate blue, or white—but it is of crepe Georgette. This filmy, transparent weave has had quite enough attention in millinery, it would seem, but are of crepe Georgette, and often in dark blue. It is really an ideal summer fabric, being so light and clinging and becoming to practically every woman. And the fashions and themselves to its use admirably.

Frocks of dark blue taffeta are another fashion of the moment. The latest trimming is a deep silken fringe, for fringe is having quite a revival at present. It is used around the neck quite often (and the fashionable neck is round, too), and on the long tunic and to edge the ever-present sash.

Sleeves are long. And usually they are tight at the wrist, though there is some vogue for the loose sleeves. When they are tight it gives Madame a chance to wear a pair of dainty, snowy cuffs to match the white collar with which she relieves sombreness of her attire. And that reminds us that is daintier and prettier than ever this summer. Organdie, crisp and sheer and fine, is particularly modish. And if it is hand hemstitched, so much the better. Or it may be edged with tiny frills, and this is a fashion many women find becoming. And if one does not wish to confine herself to white neckwear, there is ecru or pink or blue or pale violet.

The fillet lace collars and cuffs are still worn by well-dressed women (particularly those who possess the real fillet), but this, of course, is not a fashion brand new this season, although there are new shapes in the collars.

There are lovely new hand-made gimpes of net and of organdie, with hemstitching and tiny tucks, and some times lace for their adorning, and these are in new shapes and styles. And one may have white or ecru in the net.

THE FICHU REVIVED.

Fichus are a quaint, old-time fashion revived again this summer. They look well on the organdie and other thin summer frocks. These, too, are of net or of organdie, and are frilly, with lace and wee ruffles.

NEW SKIRTS.

are of silk tricolette, and are exceedingly smart. They are soft and graceful and women like their clinging lines. Usually they are most simply made, for the material is beautiful enough to be unadorned. One shop had tricolette skirts in the loveliest colors—Chinese blue, navy blue, rose, a shimmering taupe, pale gray, pink, and, of course, black and white.

Canada's River of Mud.

What is perhaps the most wonderful river in the whole world and one which is certainly unique of its kind was discovered by a party of prospectors exploring what is known as the "Smoky river region" in northern Alberta, Canada.

Briefly, it is a river of mud—that is to say, although its course is well marked, with banks clearly defined, as in an ordinary river, its bed contains not water, but thick liquid mud of the consistency of molasses.

The mud river flows, as does a water river, but, of course, much more slowly. In fact, its progress during the time the party were observing it more nearly resembled that of a glacier. Unlike a glacier, however, there is no terminal moraine. A glacier at its foot melts and flows away, leaving an accumulation of rocks, but any heavy masses that may be in this river of mud must settle to the bottom and remain concealed by the mud itself. This mud river debouches on a plain, spreading out fan-like and forming a morass of unknown depth and extent.—London Mail.

SUMMER HEAT HARD ON BABY

No season of the year is so dangerous to the life of little ones as is the summer. The excessive heat throws the little stomach out of order so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand, the baby may be beyond all human help before the mother realizes he is ill. Summer is the season when diarrhoea, cholera infantum, dysentery and colic are most prevalent. Any of these troubles may prove deadly if not promptly treated. During the summer the mother's best friend is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and keep baby healthy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EGG-EATING.

National Differences Are Very Clearly Shown.

Nearly every nationality has some special way of cooking and serving eggs for breakfast, and quite unconsciously the average person's order of eggs will reveal his nationality.

Americans are said to prefer poached eggs. The foreigner, when traveling, who sees a man order a couple of eggs poached on toast, almost immediately jumps to the conclusion that only an American could have given the order. Hard-cooked eggs served whole are another American dish, and "devil eggs," where the yoke is mixed with various condiments, is strictly American. Fried eggs, too, are more common in America than elsewhere.

Hard cooked eggs are eaten in Germany, too, but they are usually prepared in a glass, chopped with butter, salt and pepper. The German likes his soft cooked eggs very soft indeed, and breaks the contents into a china cup, eating them from the cup. The "egg cup" is an invention of Germany, but the German cups are large enough to contain several eggs. "Sour eggs" are eaten in Germany, too.

A Positive Luxury in Infusion

Pure Tea, without admixture . . . of Any Kind, foreign to its growth.

"SALADA"

has the reputation of nearly a quarter of a century behind every packet sold.

The average Englishman likes his egg cooked for three and one-half minutes, no more and no less. He is particular about the time. He prefers a small egg cup that holds one egg, the shell of which is not removed. The Englishman then removes the top of the shell. Bread and butter, instead of the toast of the American, is eaten with the Englishman's eggs.

The Frenchman removes the top of his egg, too, but then he stirs the contents vigorously and adds bits of bread and butter to the egg. Sometimes squares of bread are dipped into the egg.

No Spaniard would dream of letting an egg boil three minutes—that is, if he prefers his eggs prepared strictly in the native fashion. The egg is allowed to boil only one minute and is then broken open and the contents poured into a glass, the real Spanish custom drinking it off as if it were water.

In Italy eggs, to be perfectly prepared, are started on their boiling by being put into cold water. When the water comes to a boil, the egg is done. It is eaten on a large plate with bread.—Exchange.

Typical Pipes of the Nations.

The clay pipes used by the natives of various countries and nationalities are quite numerous and have their own individual fashion almost characteristic of each country. The French clay pipe is gay in color and for a few cents one can buy one decorated with the carving of animals' heads, and other adornments. The Hungarian clay pipe has a bowl of clay, and a long stem of either wood or bamboo. This pipe is usually large, with a big bowl, and the average cost is ten cents.

Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarhal deafness. Catarhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surface of the Eustachian Tube. Catarrh acts through the blood on the mucous surface of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All druggists 5c.

CROP PROSPECTS GOOD

Railway Official's Conclusions Following Western Tour.

"After an extended tour through the west, both over the C. P. R. and other lines, during which I looked carefully into crop prospects, I think it is safe to conclude that, with the increased acreage under cultivation, Western Canada this year will produce at least as many bushels of grain as last year, provided, of course, that conditions continue as favorable as they are at present." This was the statement made on July 15 by Mr. C. E. McPherson, assistant passenger traffic manager of the C. P. R. at Winnipeg, while in Montreal on a business trip.

So far as passenger business was concerned, Mr. McPherson said that the roads in the west had never done better than during the present year. As to American tourist business, particularly toward the far west, Mr. McPherson said it was too early to make any predictions, but the prospects pointed to at least as good a season as last year, while the number of visitors to the Rocky Mountain resorts was well up to the average.

FOE'S GREAT SUPPLY BASE IS ENTERED

French Troops On Sunday Entered Fere-en-Tardenois.

SIX MILES NORTH

Of River Marne, Was the German Line On Sunday Night.

With the American Army on the Aisne-Marne Front. Cable—The German line is again north of the Ourcq River, and Fere-en-Tardenois, which has been entered by French troops, is at the mercy of the allies. The tightening of the flanks holds promise that the retreat will be continued.

The line along the greater part of the bottom of the Soissons-Arras salient has been pushed forward in some places as much as five miles.

The Germans are bringing into play their artillery in force to check the plunges of the Franco-American troops. The Americans have played a brilliant part in the advance, which has resulted in the occupation of villages on the north bank of the river, and a number of small villages. The line tonight follows the Ourcq River to Serzy and to Loussancourt, the latter place lying about six miles north of the Marne.

The Germans offered bitter resistance, but not to compare with that which began late today for the retention of the higher ground further north of the river. They supplemented their defenses with artillery fire reaching over the American front lines to the supports, the volume of fire at times attaining enormous proportions. Unwillingly the Americans held their ground and even advanced slightly, while the French on their sectors to the right and left resisted as steadily against the vicious efforts of the Germans. From behind the advancing lines the allied heavy guns kept up a continuous bombardment throughout the day, shelling the Germans' positions where the German reported troop concentrations.

BIG GUNS ACTIVE.

Heavy artillery has been used to some extent by the Germans in their rear-guard actions, but to no such extent as to-day, and this gives some basis for belief that von Boehn, the German commander, is preparing to make a stand. It is pointed out, however, that until the Ourcq River is reached all the advantages of ground are with the allies. So it is generally believed that the creeping back of his heavy guns is merely an indication that his armies are being withdrawn with all speed from a position which is intolerable, and which unless relieved might result in the disorganization of what so far has been an admirably conducted retreat.

The Americans began their advance on Serzy early in the morning. They had been driven back a short distance Saturday night, but when they moved this morning under cover of the artillery—a few pieces going forward with the advanced line—they proceeded almost unchecked to the river, crossed the bridge and occupied the town about mid-forenoon.

The Germans used gas, but the attacking party long ago had had its baptism of gas fumes, and knew how to utilize the masks and to avoid the ravines through which the fumes filtered. When the town was occupied there was some street fighting, but not much, the Germans retreating to higher ground.

RELATIVELY FEW PRISONERS.

Considerable material has been captured, including a few locomotives which the Germans put out of commission. There were relatively few prisoners.

Many stories are told along the old lines of the depreciation in the German morale. The greatest significance is attached to a letter taken from an officer, written by his brother in Germany, giving it his opinion that a revolt was imminent unless the war was stopped.

RESISTANCE ENDS.

Washington Report—Resistance of the enemy between the Marne and the Ourcq has been broken down, and American troops with those of the allies are in pursuit, General Pershing announced in his communique for yesterday, received to-night.

"Section A—Between the Ourcq and the Marne the enemy's resistance has been broken down. Our troops with those of our allies are in pursuit.

"Section B—There is nothing to report in this section."

Useful in Camp—Explorers, surveyors, prospectors and hunters will find Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil very useful in camp. When the feet and legs are wet and cold it is well to rub them freely with the Oil and the result will be the prevention of pains in the muscles, and should a cut or contusion, or sprain be sustained, nothing could be better as a dressing or lotion.

ITALIAN FRONTS.

Rome's Report On Northern and Albanian Zones.

Rome Cable—The official state ment issued to-day by the Italian war office says:

"Yesterday there were effective concentrations of fire by our batteries in the Lagarina Valley, in the Vallarsa, and in the Brenta Valley, and the usual harassing activity of both artilleries on the remainder of the front. Our own and French patrols captured some prisoners at scattered points.

"Two enemy airplanes were brought down in air fighting."

"In Albania the fighting near Muel Bridge continued yesterday. Reinforced, the enemy repeatedly attacked, trying to drive us from the river. He was beaten off and suffered heavy losses. We captured a hundred prisoners and some machine guns.

"An enemy attempt to cross the Semlun west of Jagodina failed. In the bend of the Devoll, on the western slopes of Mali Sillives, an enemy column advancing to attack Hill 760 was repulsed.

"Italian front.—Thursday night enemy detachments attempted local attacks at several points on the mountain front. This morning a party succeeded in penetrating one of our trenches on Monte Corno, but was immediately driven out.

"At Mount Kaberlaba British patrols hindered the enemy from approaching and forced him to retire. On Ascovic the enemy counter-attacked on the flanks, withdrew, leaving prisoners."

254 HUN PLANES IN PAST 14 DAYS

Anglo-French Airmen Had Great Success.

Took Huge Share in Big Battle.

London Cable—Tremendous air fighting and consequent enormous losses of machines in the great battle is shown by official reports from both combatants since the resumption of the second battle of the Marne on July 15. In two weeks' fighting French and British machines, acting in conjunction, have brought down 138 German airplanes, while the British tactical air force, acting independently, accounted for 99 more destroyed and 17 driven down, making a total of 254 enemy machines lost. The Germans in the same period reported the bringing down of 226 Allied airplanes, showing what new production must accomplish to keep pace with wastage. Allied aircraft played an enormous part in the great battle, particularly in what the British style the enemy's back area, which consists of the enemy's lines of communication and support, ammunition dumps and concentrations. Airplanes constantly raided the enemy railway stations and the Marne bridges and silenced numerous batteries, bombed machine-gunners and advancing infantry, caused innumerable casualties at the Marne crossings, the railway particularly being harassed. The important German strategical railway junction of Pismes was continuously bombed.

FIVE BRITISH RAIDS SUCCEED

Each Worries Foe and Takes Machine Guns.

Anzacs Break Attack On Rossignol Wood.

With the British Armies in France, Cable—The front has been absolutely calm to-day save for five successful British raids, which netted some prisoners. The raids occurred near Louve, in front of Seneperre, Arras, on the Cambria Road and near Givenchy. Each of them won its quota of machine guns.

The weather is still unsettled. More rain has fallen and Flanders is showing the effects of the deluge. Prisoners taken in that region say the roads and camps on the old battlefield are suffering severely from the downpour. They are part of the attacking force of the Eleventh Division, sent out to retake Rossignol Wood, near Hebuterne, which the New Zealanders had captured a few nights earlier. The attack broke down in front of the British wire and thirty men and some machine guns were scattered in, while the remainder scattered back across No Man's Land in disorder.

Sunday morning's report read:

"Successful raids, as the result of which we captured a few prisoners and machine guns, were carried out by us last night south-west of Arras and in the neighborhood of Louve."

"In the Givenchy sector our patrols brought in further prisoners and a machine gun."

Saturday night's report said:

"The hostile artillery has shown some activity during the day on the northern position of the British front."

"During Friday night our raiding parties entered the enemy's lines in the neighborhood of Sully-Laurette, Neuville-Vitasse, Arieux-et-Gohelle and Lescaux, and brought back several prisoners."

EX-CZARINA WOULD BE UN.

London Cable—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Amsterdam says the Berlin newspapers publish a telegram from Moscow saying that the former Russian Empress has asked the Lenin Government to grant her permission to enter a convent in Sweden and take with her her daughters. The despatches say permission has been withheld for the time being.

GERMAN AID. Forces Reach Austria for Drive On Italy.

Washington, Report.—A new offensive against Italy by German and Austrian divisions, commanded by a German general, has been determined upon by the Central Powers, according to information reaching the Italian high commander. The German divisions are to be mixed with Austrian divisions and form an entirely new army, information received by the Italian command disclosed.

GERMANY WARNED

Of Time of Death After War, by Michaelis.

Amsterdam, Cable.—In an article quoted by the Berlin Socialist newspaper Vorwarts, Dr. George Michaelis, former German Imperial Chancellor, warns the Germans that their war will be a time of death after the war, because of lack of shipping.

"Let us not indulge in the idea that all distress will come to an end and happiness begin if our enemies indemnify for our billions of war debt," he added. "Everything depends upon how we face the period of distress. The billions of the war of 1870 did us great harm."

TURKS WILL NOT CONCLUDE PEACE

Army Staff is Getting Rich Profiteering

While the People Suffer Horribly.

Paris Cable—A high neutral person who has just returned from Constantinople describes the present situation in Turkey as one likely to bear disastrous consequences to the allies, shortly. What he told the French officials as to the general interior and political conditions and Turkey's rupture with Bulgaria which have already resulted in armed clash of the troops of the two allies, or about Turkey's alleged manoeuvres in Switzerland aiming at a rapprochement with the Entente could not be learned. However he confirmed reports of mutinies in the Turkish armies, notably an uprising of troops in Smyrna several weeks ago, where the food situation is described as horrible. He said, "Turkey will never be able to make a separate peace because the men who have it in their power to make peace are getting rich trafficking in food. They would no mind if the war went on forever. Nearly every member of the Government army staff and members of the so-called Food Controller Board, a so-called food trust, are reaping harvests of gold. So far as the people are concerned they will never rise against their oppressors. As an example of how utterly devoid of energy and stamina the people are it is only necessary to watch the poor famished Mohammedans look on dully while hundreds of food-laden trains pass through the cities and villages and not even a voice is raised while they continue to fall on the streets from starvation."

PIRATES SLEW TRAWLER CREW

Seven Put On Top of U-Boat, Which Submerged.

Foe Sailors Bolter Food On Board.

London Cable—The survivors of two sailing trawlers, respectively British and Belgian, just brought into a British port, tell a terrible tale of German cruelty. The British trawler was sunk before dawn on Friday by a bomb and the crew was taken aboard the submarine. Three hours later the Belgian trawler was sighted and sunk, and the crew, consisting of a father and son, also were taken aboard. All were kept on the submarine's deck near the conning tower, and when a patrol boat appeared the submarine submerged without warning, leaving the fishermen to drown. The Belgian skipper and his son and three Englishmen perished, and only two of the English crew were saved.

The survivors state that the Germans ransacked the trawlers before sinking them and carried off everything of value. The German sailors, according to the survivors, ate biscuits and fish ravenously as if starving. All of the Germans appeared to be youths, their commander being only 26. The survivors were in the water for three or four hours before they were picked up.

ALLIED GUNS RAKES ROADS HUNS FLEE ON

Foe's Best Troops Stubbornly Holding the Wings Against Allies.

12-MILE RETREAT

From Point Nearest Paris to the South of Chateau Thierry.

London Cable—The Franco-American troops, continuing their pressure on the Germans in retreat from the Marne, have reached and crossed the Ourcq River and penetrated the town of Fere-en-Tardenois, one of the great German supply bases for the enemy troops inside the Soissons-Arras salient.

Between on the centre of the allied right wing south-west of Rheims violent attacks by the French have forced the enemy to give further ground and enabled the French to capture several towns of strategic value and to draw their front appreciably nearer the high road when runs north-eastward from Dormans to Rheims.

On the extreme wings of the gradually decreasing pocket—near Soissons and Rheims—the enemy, heavily reinforced, is holding tenaciously to his ground, realizing that if indents there would result in a general crumpling of his plans of defence against the looking up of his entire armies inside the big gap. In addition to the large number of troops for reinforcements that have been thrown on these two sectors, the German long-range guns from the region north of Soissons and north and north-east of Rheims, are keeping both wings of the salient under a heavy enfilading fire.

Under the battering tactics of the French and Americans the German line on the south has now been driven back more than 12 miles from the point south of Chateau Thierry where the allied troops locked the door to Paris against the enemy on July 18 and themselves became the aggressors in what has turned out to be one of the greatest battles of the war. The roads over which the Crown Prince's armies are retreating are being incessantly raked by the allied guns.

The crossing of the Ourcq, even if only by advanced elements of the allied forces, presage a general crossing later on. The French official communications thus far during the battle have been remarkably conservative in their estimates of the gains that daily have been made, and it is indicated in unofficial despatches that allied troops are considerably in advance of the line as announced officially.

Where the Germans are in retreat from the south the cavalry has been brought into the fighting and numerous tanks and machine guns in profusion are everywhere harrying the enemy, whose losses are heavy. Meantime airplanes are flying over the retreating hordes dropping bombs, while big allied guns from the sides of the salient are keeping up their intensive firing from all angles into the densely congested area.

NOT YET A ROUT.

The retreat of the enemy has by no means become a rout and so long as the picked troops around Soissons and Rheims are able to keep well open the mouth of the bag through which the Germans are falling back it is expected that the greater portion of the armies of the Crown Prince will be successful in reaching the line where it is intended for them to turn and make a stand.

Just where this stand will be made is problematical. More than half the pocket has been recaptured by the French, British, American and Italian troops opposing the enemy, and there have as yet been no signs of a let-up in the retrograde movement.

Asthma Can Be Cured.

It is as needless as it is terrible to endure. After its many years of relief of the most stubborn cases no sufferer can doubt the perfect effectiveness of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Comfort of body and peace of mind return with its use, and nights of sound sleep come back for good. Ask your druggist; he can supply you.

SEES AUSTRIA AS FOE OF GERMANY

Amsterdam Cable—The Weser Zeitung, of Bremen, discussing the situation in Austria, says the past year has been one of progressive internal dissolution.

"For nearly forty years," says the newspaper, "our Austrian racial brethren have been prisoners of the Slavs and their serfs. The first day of a federal state of autonomous peoples in Austria would likewise be the last day of an alliance with Germany—perhaps even the beginning of the end. It may be painful, but it is so. Austria no longer is in our camp, but only its German peoples."

Refused a Decoration.
The London Gazette has announced that the name of James Wood, of the Canadian Munitions Board, should be omitted at his own request from the list of those receiving the Order of the British Empire.
Mr. Wood is a Toronto man. He was formerly connected with the Imperial Munitions Board, but has since resigned. He is president of the British Forgings Co., and also president of the Amalgamated Ammunition Co.

A Candid Editor.
A Canadian acknowledgment of exceeding frankness is this in the Morse News: We made an awful muddle in our last issue in announcing the arrival in town of Mrs. E. L. We apologize for the error and leave our readers to form their own conclusions as to what was wrong with us.

HEALTH COMMANDMENTS.

Don't leave your rooms in the morning with an empty stomach.

Never place your back near a heated oven or against a wall, warm or cold.

Don't remain motionless in a cold room and do not stand in an open space, on ice or snow.

Don't leave your abode in cold weather without warm wraps around your shoulders and breast.

Never expose yourself to cold air immediately after you have partaken of a warm liquid of any kind.

Talk only when you must, for the old phrase, "Speech is silver, silence is gold," holds good even in hygiene.

Don't stand before an open window in a railway carriage nor take a drive in an open carriage after violent physical exercise.

Don't retire with cold or wet feet. Nothing prevents sleep with so much certainty as the neglect of your pedal extremities.

Begin respiration in the cold by breathing through the nose. This will give the air a chance to get warm before reaching the lungs.

Don't put off your regular bath. When the skin is not kept fresh and soft, the cold draws the pores together and you are rendered susceptible to pulmonary troubles of all kinds.

Maple Sugar.

Reports reaching the Canada Food Board indicate that the maple sugar season this year will be a very busy one. Trees were tapped in southwestern Ontario during the first week in March and a good run of sap resulted. From all districts come reports of unusual activity. Farmers who have received circular letters from the Canada Food Board have, in many cases, in reply told of their plans and of their special efforts to increase production this season. At Oka, on Lake of the Two Mountains, the Trappist Monks will tap 5,000 trees, according to a letter received from Rev. Father Tremblay. "We have tapped every maple tree that we can find," he writes, "and are making a specialty of sugar and syrup of the best quality." Mr. J. H. Grimm, of the Grimm Manufacturing Co., says that he has been positively overwhelmed with orders from farmers for sugar-making equipment.

Catch the Wasters.

Anybody who discovers cases of waste of food may notify the legal authorities, who have power, under the new order, to take action. Willful or careless waste has become illegal, and municipalities who secure the conviction receive half the fine, while provincial officers securing the conviction receive half the fine for the province.

Canada's Fondness for Automobiles.

It will surprise most Canadians to know that among the nations of the world their country holds third place in the number of automobiles in use. In 1917 there were 199,302 cars registered in Canada, an increase of 47,705 over 1916, while the number of new cars registered in that year was nearly 76,000. The increase for 1918 is expected to be on a proportionate scale. One Canadian in every 40 owns a car; and, roughly speaking, there is one automobile for every eight families. Considering that in 1903 there were only 220 automobiles in Ontario, and that in 1917, 84,353 auto licenses were taken out, the increase is nothing short of amazing. A marked feature of the pre-eminence which Canada enjoys is the ever-increasing proportion of motor licenses which are being taken out by farmers, a fact which in itself affords a strong guarantee that good country roads will soon be the rule rather than the exception.

Loading is Illegal.

Loading is now illegal. All persons domiciled in this country are now supposed to work or show cause why they are idle, according to the new order-in-Council. The law applies to all between the ages of 16 and 60, and heavy penalties are imposed against offenders.

LESSON

Lesson V. AUG. 4, 1918.
Growing Stronger.—Luke 2: 45-52;
2 Peter 1: 5-8.

Commentary.—I. The boy Jesus at Jerusalem (vs. 42-50). 42. When he was twelve years old—At the age of twelve years the Jewish boy became a "son of the law" and was under requirement to obey the law fully, and was under obligation to attend the principal feasts at Jerusalem. We have no record that Jesus had previously attended a Passover feast. After the custom of the feast—Jewish males of twelve years of age and upward were expected to attend the Passover feast and others, and were to bring an offering to the Lord. 43. Had fulfilled the days—The Passover feast lasted seven days (Exod. 12: 15; Deut. 16: 3). As they returned—it was customary for those attending the feasts at Jerusalem to travel in large companies, or caravans, for safety from robbers and for companionship. The children and younger persons walked in groups, while the older ones rode upon beasts of burden. Knew not of it—it does not prove that the parents were lacking in care for Jesus, that he was left behind without their knowledge. From the customs of the times, and from the wisdom and trustworthiness of Jesus it is not strange that Joseph and Mary passed on with the company, supposing that Jesus was among the youths of the caravan. 44. A day's journey—A day's journey was ordinarily about twenty or twenty-five miles, but it is probable that the first day's journey out of Jerusalem was six or eight miles, since travellers often encamped the first night within sight of the starting point, when setting out on a long journey. The traditional place of this encampment is Beeroth, a few miles north of Jerusalem. They sought him—Families would naturally come together at the close of the day's journey and at this time the absence of Jesus was discovered. Kinfolk—Relatives. 45. Found him not—There was a divine purpose in this incident. There grew out of it an unfolding to Joseph and Mary of the nature of Jesus.

46. After three days—An idiom for "on the third day"; one day for their departure, one for their return and one for the search. They found him—Jerusalem was crowded with people packed into a small area, and they had none of the means to which we would at once look for assistance in searching for a lost child in a great city. In the temple—Joseph and Mary evidently knew where they would be most likely to find him. Jesus was probably in one of the porches of the court of the women, where the schools of the rabbis were held. In the midst of the doctors—Teachers of law, Jewish rabbis. Some of the greatest doctors in Jewish history lived at about this time. Hearing—... asking—Jesus was there as an inquirer in the sense that he was asking questions, and his questions and answers were of a kind that indicated his superiority in intelligence.

47. Astonished—"Amazed"—R. V. A strong word having in it the thought of being "struck with admiration." The doctors of the law had never known of one so young being so deeply versed in the law as was Jesus. His knowledge of the law and the prophets was such as to impress deeply even the Jewish rabbis. We can not conceive of Jesus being other than humble and modest in all this discussion in the temple. 48. Amazed—Joseph and Mary looked on with a half glad astonishment, as they saw the boy Jesus thus engaged. The worlds of the angel, of the shepherds and of Simeon were already being verified in part before their eyes. Why hast thou thus dealt with us—From Mary's point of view a mild reproach seemed necessary. Some, however, see in this question an expression of joy at the sight that met her eyes. If Mary had understood the whole situation she would have seen no occasion for reproach. Sought thee sorrowing—As any parents would anxiously seek their own lost child. 49. How is it that ye sought me—This is no reproach question. It is asked in all the simplicity and boldness of holy childhood.—Alford. Wist we not—Did you know? About my Father's business—"In my Father's house."—V. The latter rendering does not particularly express the idea. Jesus would convey the thought that he was attending to affairs that pertained to his Father's kingdom. 50. Understood not—He did not yet understand his mission. His first recorded utterance is too deep for them.

II. Jesus at Nazareth (vs. 51, 52). 51. Went down with them—Jesus was about his "Father's business" while he was in the temple at Jerusalem, and he was also pleasing the Father in going back to Nazareth with Joseph and Mary, and being obedient to them. To Nazareth—Here he remained eighteen years longer. These were years of growth and preparation for his great life-work. Was subject unto them—There is something wonderful beyond measure in the thought of him unto whom all things are subject submitting to earthly parents. No such honor was ever done to angels as was done to Joseph and Mary.—Hom. Com. "Great men have learned first to obey." That general could not command an army if by most severe discipline he had not learned to obey. That college president could not fill his position if he had not learned this lesson. It is a sign, not of abjectness, but of greatness, to be subject to law." in her heart—Expecting that hereafter they would be explained to her and she would understand them fully.—Henry. 52. Increased—The words of this verse give us all we know of the life of Christ from the age of twelve to the age of thirty.

III. Increasing in grace (2 Peter 1: 5-8). 5. And beside this—"Yes, and for this very cause."—R. V. Because of the "exceeding great and precious promises" which are given unto us, we are exhorted to press forward to the attainment of the graces enumerated in the passage that follows. Giving all diligence—Bring your attention and efforts to bear upon the work in hand. Add to your faith—Those to whom Peter wrote had faith as is seen from the first verse of this chapter. Virtue—Courage to do and excellence. This grace was to be possessed in an increasing measure by those to whom the apostle wrote. To virtue knowledge—Let knowledge be added to virtue to guide it and make it effective. 6. Temperance—Self-control is of great importance in Christian experience. Temperance means a proper use of that which is wholesome and abstinence from that which is injurious. Patience—Patient endurance. There are trials incident to the Christian life and patience is of prime importance. By enduring trials in faith patience will be increased. Godliness—Godliness, piety. This supposes a firmer trust in God and a closer fellowship with him. 7. Brotherly kindness—Christian experience does not centre in self. While the growing Christian pays close attention to his personal experience, he is interested in being helpful to others. He has tended regard for his brethren in the Lord. Charity—This regard for others does not stop with his fellow Christians, but his charity, or love, goes out toward all. 8. These things—The graces which have been mentioned.

Questions.—How old was Jesus when he attended the feast mentioned in this lesson? Where was his home? How long did the feast continue? When did Joseph and Mary miss Jesus on their homeward journey? Where did they find him? What was he doing? Why were the teachers of the law astonished? How did he show his obedience to his parents? What is recorded of him after his entrance to Nazareth? In what graces are Christians to increase? What will be the result of this increase?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—The Kinds of Strength We Need; Getting It; Using It.

I. The kinds of strength we need.

II. Getting it.

I. The kinds of strength we need. Strength, both in kind and degree, must always be determined by the end to be attained. It manifests itself on three planes, the material, intellectual and spiritual. The higher energies may control the lower, but the order can not be reversed. The kingdom of Christ is essentially and distinctively a spiritual kingdom. It "is within you," and "cometh not with observation." While the provisions and belongings of the world embrace the whole being, its vital experiences lie within the spiritual realm of man's nature. Enthroned here, it controls and conserves the intellectual and physical energies. Spiritual strength, then, is first in consideration and importance. All agencies are valueless except as they contribute to the deepening of the spiritual life, and contribute to spiritual ends. Jesus included both the men and their mission in the command to "tarry" until the needed and promised endowment was given. The kingdom hastened while the disciples waited, and under Pentecostal unction made immense strides. This is the normal state of personal and associated Christianity; and the provision is as permanent as the need.

II. Getting it. By meeting its conditions and supplying its resources. Strength is both a result and a cause. It is dependent upon conditions, and can neither be secured nor exercised apart from them. It must be self-maintained. Purity of purpose and practise is primarily necessary. "He that hath clean hands shall be stronger and stronger." Thy God hath commanded thy strength. The first great source is the word of God. Truth assimilated is the true nourishment of the soul. "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." It is also the great means of spiritual defense (Matt. 4: 7, 10). Grow strong by personal communion with God. The strong Christian life is always a prayerful life. Eminent holiness is attainable by no other means. Closet victories are the surest forerunners of open triumphs.

III. Using it. The development, and even the continued possession of any faculty is dependent upon its exercise. Preservation is conditioned upon progress. Demand and supply go hand in hand. "As thy days, so shall thy strength be." Use strength in resistance. The foes of the Christian life are both numerous and strong (Eph. 6: 12). No Christian life escapes the assaults of the wicked one. The life of the Master was an example both of conflict and conquest; and his followers are included in both. Strength is needed and should be used in making progress. The figure of a race represents the Christian life as directing its energies to secure its own advancement. The possibilities are limitless. The scriptural ideals are exalted, and the examples inspiring. Strength is needed in overcoming the difficulties. To be "like him" is the summit of Christian hope. Strength is to be used in advancing

FARM GARDEN

PLANT DISEASES.

In a recent article the various bugs and caterpillars likely to attack the garden vegetables were discussed with the best methods of controlling them. Many garden beginners make the mistake of thinking that the poisons of sprays which are used against bugs and caterpillars will also be effective against germs, mildews and other diseases which may put in appearance from time to time. The very first thing which the beginner should learn to realize in connection with the various diseases he is likely to encounter in his garden is that they are entirely distinct and different from insect troubles and usually more serious. Most of the diseases cannot be distinguished when they first attack the plant. It is only after they have become so firmly established that it is next to impossible to check the attack until they become noticeable. Moreover, while most of them attack the outer surface and will spring from the soil, some, such as several of the fungous diseases, are carried through the air or transported by insects, implements, or other diseased plants to healthy ones. If, therefore, the surface of young growing plants can be covered with something which will destroy the germs as soon as they attack the healthy surfaces then it will be possible to protect them from attacks. Both experiments and experience have proved that several chemicals known as fungicides have the power of killing plant disease germs when the latter come in contact with them. Applied to healthy plants, therefore, they act as preventatives, and the fact that they must be used as preventatives does not detract from the first thing that the beginner must learn.

SPRAY EARLY, OFTEN AND THOROUGHLY.

It is very apparent that to be successful in warding off plant diseases by spraying the work must be begun early enough to get ahead of the diseases. It must be done so thoroughly that every portion of the plant, stems, leaves, roots, flowers or fruits must be entirely covered and the spray must be repeated often enough to keep the new growth covered and protected as it develops. Otherwise there will be some spot like the heel of Achilles which is not protected and will finally prove vulnerable, making much of the rest of the world done in vain. The frequency with which the spraying will have to be repeated to afford complete protection depends on how long the spray that is being used will last or stick to the foliage, and upon how rapidly new growth is being made. For vegetables making rapid growth the spray should be applied every week or ten days to keep the new growth thoroughly covered. The various plant diseases belong to two quite distinct classes. Most of them such as the various blights, mildews and rust begin locally at some part of the plant which is infected by bacteria from the outside. There are some diseases, however, which seem to attack the whole system of the plant, from root to tip. These are called "constitutional" diseases, and in the majority of cases little or nothing can be done against them. Fortunately these are in the minority.

WHAT TO SPRAY FOR AND WITH.

While, scientifically, every little plant has a trouble of its own—and some times two or three—most of the plant diseases may be grouped in a few general classes, the treatment for which is the same. The most common of these are "blight," "mildew," "rust," of various kinds, and "rust." There are, for instance, blights which attack potatoes and melons, fruit-rot and stem-rot of tomatoes, and rust (or anthracnose) on beans—to mention but a few of the many. The same treatment for prevention may, however, be used for all, but is much more successful with some than with others. blight may be looked for on potatoes, tomatoes, melons, cucumbers and onions. Rust, or "leaf-spot," on beans, tomatoes and celery; and mildew on peas, melons, cucumbers, and lettuce.

There are two standard sprays used to prevent all of these fungous diseases—Bordeaux Mixture and "summer" lime sulphur. There are a number of good trade preparations, sold under trademark names, which contain one or the other of these two things as their chief ingredients. While either Bordeaux Mixture or lime sulphur may be made at home, it is both more convenient and more safe for the small garden to use a ready-made preparation.

As already pointed out—the success of spraying for the prevention of plant diseases depends on thoroughness. To do a thorough job one must have a good sprayer. Whatever type of sprayer you buy, get the best to be had. Whether it is a small hand-machine or a barrel agit, it will mean economy in the long run. The various spray preparations should be used according to the directions which accompany them, usually there is nothing to do but add cold water, stir thoroughly and apply.

In using any spray remember that the upper sides of the leaves must be covered as well as the top surfaces. To do this it is generally necessary to use a special nozzle, designed to throw upward. Beginning to spray early is essential for this season, too. Because it is impossible to cover the early growth thoroughly with a mass of leaves of vines has been formed. Don't neglect the seedling plants of cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, etc., started during the last week of two for transplanting next month. Just as soon as they are well up, thin out to stand them about 2 1/2 to 3 inches apart. Give frequent cultivation to keep them growing rapidly, and free from weeds, so they will be short and stocky. Good plants are the result of growing good crops for fall and winter.

NOTES.

A few years ago the Wisconsin Experiment Station undertook to demonstrate whether or not salt was necessary for cattle. It carried the investigation to such a point that the cows had their physical vigor impaired and the flow of milk decreased. Several months elapsed before the absence of salt showed any effects, either in the physical condition of the cow or the milk flow. Those in charge of the investigation were about ready to quit, with the conclusion that salt was not necessary, but they continued the experiment until the physical conditions and the decrease in milk flow showed without a doubt the necessity of salt.

Tuberculosis is caused by bacteria. These micro-organisms find their way into the system of the animal, and when conditions are right they produce tuberculosis. In other words, an animal does not develop disease, unless it comes in contact with tubercular germs. A strawberry bed seldom gives more than three profitable crops. After that they should be more fruiting wood for next year, and a bigger crop.

The tops of new raspberry and blackberry canes should be pinched back when they have reached a height of about three feet. This makes them branch out so that they will be more fruiting wood for next year, and a bigger crop.

It is an old saying that "tilage is manure." One might also say that tillage is salt. Of course, it will not put moisture in the growth, but it will prevent that which is already in from evaporating. Work the surface of the ground after every rain or after it rains so far apart and work it shallow—to keep a dust blanket on it.

THE STORY OF THE STAIRS

Every time you go up stairs you can test your state of health—the condition of your blood.

Do you arrive at the top of the stairs breathless and distressed? Does your heart palpitate violently? Do you have a pain in your side? Perhaps you even have to stop half way up, with limbs trembling and head dizzy, too exhausted to go further without resting. These are unfailing signs of anemia. As soon as your blood becomes impoverished or impure the staircase becomes an instrument of torture. When this is so you are unfit for work; your blood is watery and your nerves exhausted, you are losing the joy of an active life and paving the way for a further break down and decline. In this condition only one thing can save you. You must put new, rich, red blood into your veins without further delay and so build up your health anew. To get this new, rich blood give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and they will give you new vitality, sound health, and the power to resist and throw off disease. For more than a generation this favorite medicine has been in use throughout the world and has made many thousands of weak, despondent men and women bright, active and strong. You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Enormous Land Values.

There is an amazing price set upon the land in London. In the centre of the English metropolis tiny lots have been sold for fortunes. An acre there is the dearest in the world. Many a transaction over ground in the heart of the city has set the figure of $16,250,000 per acre. One square mile of London is valued at $750,000,000. The land beneath the Bank of England at low estimate is worth $35,000,000, and there are only three acres in that tract, too.

There are places on Queen Victoria, Upper Thamps, St. Mary-at-Hill and Cannon streets where one square inch is worth $1.25. In Lombard street and King William street prices have ranged from 200 and $250 to $350 per square foot.—National Real Estate Journal.

Geo. Allan England

Author of "Darkness and Dawn," "Beyond the Great Oblivion," "The Empire in the Air," "The Golden Blight," "The After-Glow," "The Crime-Detector," etc.

"What — for Heaven's sake, what are you people trying to put over on me, anyhow?" he managed to exclaim huskily.

For the first time now some glimmer of suspicion had begun to dawn in his taciturn mind of the gaping abysses, the yawning pits and snarls laid ready for his feet.

"What are you driving at, anyhow?" he demanded again. "You — you aren't trying to — make out that —"

"Driving at?" smiled Roadstrand, dangerously suave all of a sudden. "Why, nothing except the truth. That's all we're striving for—to elucidate the truth from all this mass of confusing details. The truth, nothing less and nothing more. You surely can't take exception to that, can you?"

Speaking, he had fixed his eyes keenly on the boy's coat. He seemed to be studying the buttons there. A peculiar look came into his eyes.

"Just as I thought," he muttered. "Precisely as I thought!"

Arthur, too confused to answer anything, too violently shaken by the new and horrible suspicions that now, like sudden tempests, were whirling and ravaging about his head, stood there peering at him as a trapped rat will sometimes peer at its captor. His face twitched, especially the mouth, and on his forehead a few little glistening drops of sweat began to appear. He put out his left hand and took hold of the back of the chair where Sheridan, his only friend, had been sitting.

Thus for a moment silence came again upon that group of helms, between whom and around whom the lines of destiny were drawing with a savage, ever-increasing tension. And in that moment, through the revolving doors of the bank, two figures entered — entered, and came into the lobby; stopped there, looked about, and once again came forward.

CHAPTER XIII.

One was the Hon. Edward Bruce Chamberlain, president of the bank, a man of about sixty-five, gray and rather markedly wrinkled, yet of military bearing, keen of eye, alert of mind, confident of manner.

The other, Enid Chamberlain, gave one an impression of sunshine and spring, even on this dull, gray November morning, of warmth and life and happiness. One could hardly see her clearly as yet, for the screened windows of the bank shut out the daylight and the electric lights seemed but pale and ineffective; but one could

MOTHERS TO BE

Should Read Mrs. Monyhan's Letter Published by Her Permission.

Mitchell, Ind.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me so much during the time I was looking forward to the coming of my little one that I am recommending it to other expectant mothers. Before taking it, sometimes I suffered with neuralgia so badly that I thought I could not live, but after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was entirely relieved of neuralgia. I had gained in strength and was able to go around and do all my household work. My baby when seven months old weighed 19 pounds and I feel better than I have for a long time. I never had any medicine do me so much good."—Mrs. PEARL MONYHAN, Mitchell, Ind.

Good health during maternity is a most important factor to both mother and child, and many letters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., telling of health restored during this trying period by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chamberlain laid a hand on the girl's arm.

"Sit down here, Enid," he bade her, "and wait for me. I'll find out about Arthur. Don't be troubled, my dear. Everything will be all right!"

Enid, nervously twisting her long white gloves together, sat down in a deep leather chair in the little alcove reserved for women, glanced about her, bit her lip, tapped her foot on the carpet, and in a dozen ways showed extreme distress. The glances of admiration that — despite their worry — two or three employees could not help leveling at her, fell unnoticed from her shield of indifference. Only one thought possessed her now:

"Where is Arthur?"

Where was Arthur, indeed? On the brink of the pit! On the sheer edge of the abyss that has no bottom and no end. There he was standing, clutching in desperation at any hold and finding none!

Out of the vague and formless vapors seeming to rise from that depth he seemed to hear a voice speaking to him again. And the voice said:

"Is that your letter-opener?"

He stared at a bright metal object, blinked, and made no answer.

"I examine that letter-opener, Mansfield," said the voice. "It is broken, you see. The broken end was found in the lock of Mr. Slayton's top drawer. That was where he kept the combination of the safe. On the handle of this utensil you will observe all right the initials 'A. M.' Kindly tell me — does that letter-opener belong to you?"

Mansfield nodded. Useless now to combat that even, horrible, betraying voice. Helplessly he looked at Roadstrand, whose face had now also emerged from the mists.

"Yes," he said in a flat tone. "It's mine. But how it got broken—"

"No matter about that. Later such matters can be discussed. It's yours; that's enough for now. Doctor, enter the data. Letter-opener acknowledged also before witness. Exhibit B."

"And now," the coroner continued, "now finally here is a button. This button was found near the body of Mackenzie. Do you recognize the button, Mansfield?"

He laid it on the table close before the shivering boy. Arthur stared at it unseeing.

"Off his sleeve," whispered Slayton, pointing.

The doctor, rising, pulled the sleeve around into full view under the electric cluster in the ceiling.

"One button is gone, you see," the cashier remarked. "And — well, you can see for herself; this one matches the other two, there."

Unable to make any answer, on the ragged edge of collapse, Mansfield stood there, hanging on to the chair.

"It's yours, isn't it?" leaped Slayton, with malice. "Maybe you can explain how it came to be found beside the body of the murdered man, and—"

"Gentlemen! Gentlemen! What is this? For Heaven's sake, what does this mean?"

Slayton, half starting from his chair, faced the door, on oath on his pale lips. In the doorway stood President Chamberlain, peering at the strange scene with eyes that, unable to believe their testimony, seemed to understand nothing.

"What does this mean, gentlemen?" repeated the old man.

He raised a trembling forefinger, pointing it at Mansfield.

"What is this? What—?"

"My dear Mr. Chamberlain!" exclaimed the cashier, and flung a protesting hand outward at him. "I beg you—"

"You aren't accusing Arthur, are you?" demanded the old gentleman, taking a step forward. "Not that! Not that!"

Roadstrand stood up so suddenly that his chair clattered over backward.

"Mr. Chamberlain," he cried, "we are accusing nobody! If there is any accusation, the hard, cold facts of the case are making it!"

"They're all lies, lies, lies! Foul, horrible lies!" cried Mansfield, turning toward Chamberlain. "They've got some — some kind of frame-up on me here!"

His voice rose wild and trembling; his hand vibrated at the table.

"Look at that there, will you? They say I broke into Slayton's desk with that letter-opener and took the cipher of the combination! They say I shot Mackenzie!"

"Shot Mackenzie!" cried Chamberlain. "You? Father above! You — shot—"

"They say so! They—"

"The facts say so!" interposed the doctor, also rising.

"Fact, be damned!" cried the boy in a wild outburst of passion. "I know what I know! I never was in this bank last night! I went home to my room—"

"After threatening to kill me in my house if I didn't give him money to make good his thefts!" shouted the cashier, in a white heat.

"Arthur! You—you've been stealing!"

"Yes, by Heavens! I have! But murdering? No, no, no! But they're trying to put it over on me, just the same. They've got one of my gloves and put blood on it, and they've put a button off my coat beside the body, and—now they're claiming—"

"Arthur!"

At the girl's cry of anguish everybody faced the door. They got a glimpse of a pale, wild face, of outstretched hands, of eyes that stared in terror. Then the old man whirled toward his daughter, arms outspread, to shut away the sight of that terrible room from her.

"No, no, Enid!" he cried. "You mustn't come in here! You mustn't—"

"Arthur! Arthur! What are they doing to you? Oh, what are they doing—"

"Enid! You believe me, anyhow, don't you? As I live I never killed Mackenzie!"

"Killed him? Killed him? They say you—"

"No, no, no, no!"

And the old man, seizing his daughter by the wrists, held her back as she would have run to Arthur with open arms of trust and comfort.

"None of that now, Enid! No scene here!"

He forced the girl back, away, out of the room. The door closed behind them both. From without came sounds of anguished sobbing.

Three or four men started toward Chamberlain and Enid. Pale with rage and resentment, Sheridan ran to the old man.

"Of all the rotten frame-ups ever spawned," he cried, "this is the—"

Chamberlain raised a trembling hand in protest.

"Water, quick!" he entreated. "I think Enid's going to faint!"

Inside the room sudden battle had flared into fire. Now Arthur was smashing into all three men.

"Go on! Arrest me!" he shouted. "You, Slayton, perjure your infernal soul! But I'll give you something to remember first!"

His fist cracked like a pistol-shot on Slayton's lantern jaw. The murderer, cursing, plunged headlong across the table, strewing the exhibits right and left.

"Come on, you!" defied Arthur, the lust of battle in his blue eyes, which now had cleared again. "You've got me framed up, all right—but I'll land a few good wallops before you get me!"

Roadstrand lunged at him just as the doctor closed in from behind. Arthur parried the blow and drove home hard with his left. Before he could swing on the doctor that wiry person had flung an arm about his neck, unbalancing him and dragging him down.

Unmindful of discipline, bookkeepers, clerks, and reporters came crowding. In the door appeared a policeman, stick in hand.

Holding his dazed head, which rang and echoed with Arthur's blow, Roadstrand shouted:

"Officer! Your duty!"

The stick, descending, crashed a shower of sparks through Arthur's hair. All strength Enid abandoned his tense body. His head drooped forward; his arms relaxed; his legs, doubling beneath him, let him slip down to the carpet of the disordered room.

Then consciousness lapsed. Insensibility drew the mercy of its pall across his agony.

The trap so cleverly, so malevolently set by Walter Haynes Slayton, cashier, had sprung at last.

And in its jaws—mangled, helpless, doomed—lay Arthur Mansfield.

CHAPTER XIV.

Only three persons in a whole world of accusers arose to defend Arthur Mansfield. One was the boy's mother, one, ex-Teller Sheridan, of the bank, the third, Enid Chamberlain.

Of all strength Enid abandoned his tense body. His head drooped forward; his arms relaxed; his legs, doubling beneath him, let him slip down to the carpet of the disordered room.

Then consciousness lapsed. Insensibility drew the mercy of its pall across his agony.

The trap so cleverly, so malevolently set by Walter Haynes Slayton, cashier, had sprung at last.

And in its jaws—mangled, helpless, doomed—lay Arthur Mansfield.

white her face had grown. A picture of Arthur on her dressing-table, a withered flower, a few mementoes of happier days, told Chamberlain much.

His heart went out to her in pity and love. The blow of this crime, the horrible campaign of sensationalism, it had engendered, the shattering of Enid's happiness, had staggered him. And yet he felt that truth was truth, and that to face it honestly with her was best.

"Enid," said he, laying a hand on her shoulder. "I've just come from talking with Hillis & Ballantyne. I've got a deal to tell you. I want you to listen to me sensibly and bravely, as your mother would have done. We must see where we stand and what's to be done. We're facing a sad problem, my girl—a sad, heavy problem."

The girl looked at him understandingly with pity that for a moment lessened her own suffering. Chamberlain's shoulders had drooped into an unaccustomed curve. In the two days since the murder ten years seemed to have weighted him with a burden that never grows lighter—old age. His eyes showed dull and lifeless in the glow from the fireplace, and under them the skin was pouched as never before. For the first time in his active, vigorous life Edward Bruce Chamberlain looked his years.

He sat down heavily in a big leather chair, and motioned the girl to sit down, too. For a minute he kept silence, soothed and rested by the warm light of this upper room.

"Horrible affair!" he exclaimed suddenly. "Wreckage of everything! And the infernal publicity and sensationalism—brutal, hideous!"

"Nothing matters, father," she answered, "so long as Arthur is innocent."

He shook his head.

"He isn't, Enid. He isn't!"

"You mean you think—"

"I mean, Enid, if you insist on asking me in plain words, that I believe Arthur is guilty. And in saying so I am voicing the opinion of two of the best criminal lawyers in New York. For three hours to-day they went over all the available evidence with me. At the end of that time I could reach no other conclusion than that Arthur really did it, and that in all probability he will have to pay the full penalty."

"You don't mean—they can—"

"The evidence is conclusive."

She looked defiantly at Chamberlain.

"The evidence! What does that matter? You may know all about that and everything, but I—I know Arthur!"

The old man shrugged his shoulders.

"My dear," he protested, "that attitude is irrational and can only harm both Arthur and yourself. Much as I have liked the boy and built upon your happiness and his, nevertheless, I can use my reasoning faculties. The facts prove Arthur guilty, and justice must be done. Why, my dear, they've found the very gun that killed old Mackenzie! They've even recovered the bullet. The gun is Arthur's, and—"

"It can't be!" she denied, passionately.

THE MUSICAL CATBIRD.

This Canadian Has Ugly Name But Beautiful Song.

The apple-blooms in the solitary apple tree in the backyard, the only survivor of the ravage of the San Jose scale, have been scattered by the winds. In their place is an assemblage of little green buttons, which it is hoped will one day develop into pippins.

From the uppermost twig of this tree, the family in the house and all the neighbors have been furnished, morning after morning, with a musical medley, the delight of all who hear it.

Poets on this side of the Atlantic have indulged in raptures over the song of the nightingale, which they have never heard but have taken second-hand from European rhythmeters. Deaf are they to the wonderful vocalist singing in the apple tree to whom, native Canadian that he is, has been accorded no sounding title. He is called—one may blush to write it—the catbird.

This name has been given, it is said, because of one of its cries, which resembles the mew of a cat, and this mew of the cat is the least of this bird's accomplishments. His musical matinee from the top of the apple tree lasts a full half hour each morning, and what a variety, with no number repeated!

A handsomely-shaped chap he is, about eight and one-half inches long from the tip of his bill to the longest of his tail feathers. His suit is of a dark slate color with crown and tail black, and under tail covers chestnut. Other birds arrive in this neighborhood somewhat earlier in the spring, but do not deserve and should not receive a warmer welcome, not even the red-chested robin, who has impudence and style but small song power.

The catbird is related to the mocking bird, and that warbler may well be proud of his relative, who is better known in the north than he is.

Science has come to give this bird a name quite as objectionable as "catbird." No one need be expected to pronounce as the name of this species the syllabic monstrosity "galeoscoptes carolinensis." Certainly not, especially as the translation of these words gives to us that in English the syllable "gale" is Greek for "weasel," and from "skoptes" comes the word "mocker."

And there he swings on the toppling twig of the apple tree and sings and sings, wholly careless of any of the names given to him in either Greek or English. The bird breeds in the north and winters from Florida southward.

The nightingale is a smaller bird than our catbird. It sings for the most part after dusk. Our independent Canadian bird sings at any time he chooses. He is an early riser and under the summer schedule now opens his repertory at 4.30 a.m.

Speedy Athlete Injured.

The accident which Jack Laviolette, noted Montreal athlete, met with a few days ago while driving one of his racing motor cycles at Montreal, has ended his career as a lacrosse player, as one of his limbs has had to be amputated. Laviolette's career as an athlete has been a very brilliant one as he starred in motorcycle, racing, aeroplane, lacrosse and hockey. It was his craze for speed that undoubtedly brought his athletic career to such an unfortunate end, as speed was his middle name. He always remarked that they didn't build motorcycles too fast for him, and that he hoped to see the day that he would operate an aeroplane 150 miles an hour. Few players, if any, could travel up and down a hockey arena as fast as Laviolette. In fact, he was a sensation on the steel blades, as he skated just as fast backwards as he did going straight ahead, and it was a very common sight to see him jump clean over an opponent rather than waste the time of stick-handling around. Laviolette was equally as speedy on a lacrosse field.

The Montreal whirlwind, as he was commonly known to his friends, first came into prominence as an athlete when the old International Hockey League was organized. Lavio-

He has been a fixture with the red, white and blue aggregation ever since. He played defence for many years. Two winters ago he tried a forward position and made good. Even last winter he played a few games, and despite his age, which is 40 or over, he delivered the goods. His genial disposition both on and off the ice and the lacrosse field made him many friends.

Dean Welton on Titles.

Dean Welton, of Manchester, formerly head master of Harrow, writes to the Manchester Guardian: "It is slightly surprising that the protest against hereditary titles should come in the first instance from Canada because Australia and New Zealand are probably still more democratic in sentiment. My general experience is that there is a widespread feeling beyond the seas that hereditary titles and still more hereditary legislative powers are incompatible with democracy. The feeling is intensified by the suspicion to which evidence at home has recently afforded color, that titles may tend to become a scarcely less effective means of corrupt political influence than bribes openly given in the time of Walpole."
