CHAPTER XLVIII

In an endeavor to alleviate the sufferings of the poor. That was more like her old idea of happiness, more like the kind of life she had once mapped out for herself.

Lord Clanronald was very unwilling to go to Ronald's Court; but Diana told him, with a softening of her proud face, that she wanted to be happier, that she was tired of the perpetual round of gayeties, tired of frivolity, tired of the faces around her. She wanted to go home to Ronald's Court and see whether she could not find something more congenial and profitable to do there. He sneered at first.

"You are going in for the quixotic, Diana," he said. "It will not suit you; but you can try it."

"I should like to be a little happier," she answered, with a wistful look in her eyes.

"I will give you carte blanche," said Lord Clanronald. "I will fill the house with my own friends, and you shall go your own way."

So it was agreed; and they went to Ronald's Court. Diana tried hard to redeem her life by active and praiseworthy work. Just as she had drowned her care and remorse in a whirl of gayeties, so she now sought to drown them in working for and serving others. She soon knew every one on the estate. She had a school built for the children, a row of almshouses for the aged poor. She was bustled from morning until night with plans for the good and the benefit of others. She was now far less unhappy than she had been since her wedding; and, Lord Clanronald had been different their marriage might not have been so disastrous as it was. Always more or less addicted to drink, he now became more confirmed to his evil habit, and that fact raised an insuperable barrier between them.

There were times when Diana went in search of her husband, her mind full of some worthy enterprise, for the carrying out of which she was compelled to ask his consent or get his signature, only to find him angry at being disturbed or asleep.

There was one relief came to her at Ronald's Court. Lord Clanronald went away for weeks together, leaving her alone. But for those periodical reprieves, it seemed to her impossible that she could have lived.

CHAPTER XLIX

Five years had passed since Diana Cameron became Lady Clanronald. They had brought many changes to her, but few to Furness. The most remarkable event which had happened there was the marriage of Thea Scarsdale and Richard Marche. At one time Lady Cameron would have opposed such a marriage with all her power—would have refused to hear a word about it; but the years had softened her, and the chastening influence of time was visible in the daily life of the once proud and revengeful Lady Cameron.

She had, however, a sore trial in her daughter Evadne, who returned from her visit to the Duchess sour and embittered. She had really loved Lord Clanronald, and she had so entirely set her mind on being mistress of all the wealth and of Ronald's Court, that the disappointment was a terrible blow to her. To Lady Cameron's dismay, it had even affected her beauty.

"If you are not very careful, Evadne," said that wise lady, "you will lose all your good looks."

"They have done but little for me," was the gloomy rejoinder.

"There is still a bright future before you," said Lady Cameron.

"I do not think so," replied Evadne. "I loved Lord Clanronald; I shall never love another half so much."

"If I were in your place, I should try to forget all about him," said Lady Cameron.

"Even if I could forget him, I should never be happy again while Diana enjoys her triumph," declared Evadne. "It seems a wicked thing to say; but I really believe that I should be happy if I thought she were miserable."

"Then I think you may comfort yourself on that score, Evadne," said Lady Cameron, with a significant smile.

Evadne looked up eagerly.

"Do you not think Diana is happy, mamma?"

"I should say most certainly not," replied Lady Cameron, impressively. "To tell you the truth, Evadne, I am as much mystified now as ever to decide why she married Lord Clanronald. There was not a single element in the marriage to make it a happy one."

"It serves her right," said Evadne, vindictively. "I shall always believe that she did not care for him herself, but that, seeing I did, she took him away purposely from me."

"She has her reward, if that was the case," replied Lady Cameron; "but I never understood the marriage from the first, and I never shall."

It was not long after this that Lady Cameron began to notice a great change in her other daughter. Thea, who had always been proud, cold, engrossed, rather in herself than in others—Thea, whose abrupt and at times almost brusque frankness had made her disagreeable to those about her—by degrees became more gentle, more amiable, more thoughtful; and all these good qualities seemed to ripen under the cheerful, honest, sunny influence of Richard Marche, one of the most simple and earnest of men. Miss Scarsdale had from the first been struck by the upright manly integrity that was revealed in his every word and action; she was impressed by his abhorrence and hatred of everything mean, by his contempt for all the mere accidents of birth and wealth, and by his sturdy independent spirit.

Two more opposite characters could hardly exist than Thea Scarsdale and Richard Marche; but that very fact perhaps attached them more to each other. Thea could not realize the genuineness of her own thoughts when she owned to herself that she loved Richard, and that she would rather marry him for love than wed a peer of the realm for his money. It seemed incredible to her that she, who had been reared in the very atmosphere of worldly wisdom, should even think of marrying for love.

But Richard returned her love, and everything else was a matter of indifference to Thea. Richard had soon found out all the good qualities that lay hidden beneath the girl's proud and cold exterior. He did not seem to think that he was asking for anything unusual when he told Lady Cameron that he wished to marry her daughter. She looked up at him in blank wonder.

"Marry my daughter!" she exclaimed—"my Thea? How can you make such a request? If my daughters marry at all, they will marry into the peerage."

"I do not think Thea will," he said. "She loves me, and will marry me, I hope."

"Not if I can prevent it!" she replied, with the full assertion of her dignity.

Lady Cameron talked the matter over that same evening with Mr. Cameron.

"I cannot think of it," she said. "It is too great a disappointment to me. You see, I have trained my daughters purposely to marry well, and I expect nothing less than a peerage for them. I cannot entertain the idea for a moment."

"I cannot buy Rich a peerage, but I can give him a fortune," remarked the millionaire; "and if he marries Thea, I will do so. Barton Moss Manor-house is to be sold," he continued, "and there is a large estate with it. I was thinking only last week that, if I had some one to put in it, I would purchase it. Richard Marche of Barton Moss Manor-house will make his way in the world, I feel certain."

"It is not a suitable match for Thea," said Lady Cameron disconsolately. "I always thought she would marry an earl at the least. She is not beautiful, like Evadne; but there is an air of distinction about her that almost surpasses beauty."

"You must think it over," counseled Mr. Cameron.

"The more I think of it," said her ladyship, frankly, "the more I shall dislike it. I really could not sanction such a mesalliance. I shall take both girls to London in the spring, and there Thea will find some one more worthy of her."

And in that fond delusion her ladyship remained for some time.

When the season came Thea enjoyed it with all her heart. She lost no opportunity of enjoying all the pleasures and gayeties offered her, but she remained true to Richard Marche. Lady Cameron knew that her ambition was quite hopeless when her daughter said:

"Oh, mamma, I shall be glad to leave London and go home to Furness and Rich!"

Lady Cameron had hoped to find an ally in Evadne; but, when she appealed to her, the girl said, simply:

"If she likes him, mamma, let her marry him. I wish I had married Lord Clanronald!"—and she sighed as she finished the sentence.

"It is such a poor match for Thea," Lady Cameron continued, piteously.

"She will have plenty of money, mamma, and a good husband; matters might be worse," replied her daughter.

"She will never be anything but Mrs. Marche all her life. Think of that, Evadne!" Lady Cameron objected.

But, when her ladyship found that she was really vanquished, she gave in with a good grace.

"It is not much of a choice, my dear," she said to Thea; "but, if you still persist in it, I will not refuse my consent."

When Richard heard this, he kissed Lady Cameron's hand for the first time.

PFORRHEA.

Of all the poison taken into the blood, the germs and pus produced by diseased gums (Pforrhea) are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and if allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kidney, stomach, heart trouble, rheumatism and many other diseases are brought on by diseased gums and teeth.

MEMENCAU ON ELECTION RE-SULTS.

PARIS, Nov. 19.
 Premier Clemenceau, replying to the congratulations of Senator Monis on the result of Sunday's elections, said the returns showed France understood she must proceed according to law and order in the reconstruction of the country. France would be stronger than ever, he declared, because more united.

THE BELGIAN ELECTION.
 BRUSSELS, Nov. 19.

The Catholic Party will have seventy three seats in the Chamber of Deputies and the Socialists seventy as a result of the election on Sunday. It was announced officially to-night. The Liberals won 34 seats, the Front Party five, the National Regeneration Party one, the Ex-Soldiers Party two, and the Middle Class Party, two.

COALITION IS UNIONISTS' HOPE.

LONDON, Nov. 19.

Bonar Law's speech defending the present system of Coalition Government, has brought an editorial reply from the Westminster Gazette, which says the Unionist Party's hope lies in Coalition which secures it a certain number of Liberal votes, also an opportunity for slipping in between Liberals and Labor. The warmest supporters of the Government, says the Westminster Gazette, deplore the absence from the House of Commons of experienced statesmen to sustain the work of a critical Opposition. The same journal thinks the coalition will become a central block, standing for property interests and protection.

"No progress was made, the operators submitted no proposals, we are still in a receptive mood," said John L. Lewis, Acting President of the United Mine Workers, as he came out of the hotel room where the conference was held.

REVOLUTION QUELLED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. The revolution at Vladivostok has been quelled, despatches to-day to the State Department said.

RIOTS IN CAIRO—11 KILLED.

CAIRO, Nov. 19. Eleven natives were killed and sixty wounded yesterday by British troops who opened fire on a crowd, which besieged the police station during the course of a demonstration. Ten of the wounded are reported to be in a serious condition. The demonstrations were continued to-day, but in an orderly manner.

YUDENITCH IN BAD WAY.

LONDON, Nov. 19. The position of the Petrograd front as described in a Bolshevik wireless message, is a serious one for General Yudenitch's army which has been cut in half. It must either surrender, the message says, or cross the frontier into Estonia, in which direction it is being pursued. In the course of the coming week the region between the Luga and Narova Rivers will be cleared.

She Knew Him.

"I don't know you, madam," the bank cashier said to the woman who had presented a cheque.

But this woman, instead of saying haughtily "I do not wish your acquaintance, sir!" merely replied with an engaging smile:

"Oh, yes, you do, I think," she said, loud enough for all the clerks to hear. "I'm the red-headed old virago next door to you, whose 'scoundrelly little boys' are always reaching through the fence, and picking your flowers. When you started to town this morning your wife said: 'Now, Henry, if you want a dinner fit to eat this evening, you'll have to leave me a little money. I can't keep this house on plain water and five shillings a day...'"

"Here's your money, madam," said the cashier, pushing it towards her and coughing loudly.

THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all. Your druggist gladly will give you the genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" because genuine Aspirin now in use is made by Americans and owned by an American Company.

There is not a cent's worth of German interest in Aspirin, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government.

During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. But now you can get genuine Aspirin, plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross"—Aspirin proved safe by millions for Headache, Toothache, Earache, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Colds, Neuritis, and Pain generally. Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. The Bayer Co., Sues, U.S.A.

Fads and Fashions.

Velour is one of the best materials for the one-piece robe. Laces will be used on some of the gowns for southern wear.

There are some interesting domestic smocks of wool Jersey. Novelty weaves in triclottees are being used for spring bioeas.

A novelty is the lace petticoat, made in one with the pyjamas. Some interesting spring wraps will be made of tinsel triclottees.

Tinsel embroidery will probably be used on some spring models. For the Spring trotteur the wool stripes and plaids will be pleasing.

Cavalier hats go naturally with the more picturesque velvet gowns. Changeable taffeta in dark shades is used for breakfast coats. The wrapped turban is the greatest favorite among dance hats.

Millinery flowers and fancies are used in draped effects on overblouses. Knitted wool robes belong in the trunk being packed for a house party. Some tailored and Irish trimmed negligees are of heavy, lustrous silk. Entire capes of gray squirrel fur are among the most luxurious garments. Black satin, draped with black tulle, is a wise choice for an evening gown.

"Was the Right Thing for Me," Farmer Says

Gains Thirty-Eight Pounds and is Restored to Health by Taking Tanlac.

"The best proof that Tanlac was the right thing for me is the way it has gotten me over my troubles and built me up," said John Rowe, a well known farmer of Pilot Mound, Manitoba, while at Liggett's drug store in Winnipeg, recently.

Mr. Rowe was a member of Company A 28th Infantry Battalion. He returned from France and received his discharge last January, after four years and four months in the world war, and went back to his former home and occupation at Pilot Mound. Continuing Mr. Rowe said:

"During the past nine months I have suffered beyond words to tell with my stomach, and had fallen off on account of it until I was amazing, and the very lightest of things. If I ventured to eat meats or anything the least bit heavy I would almost double up with pains in the pit of my stomach. I suffered a great deal with headache and neuralgic pains through my temples and eyes. I was very nervous and between this and my other misery I was awake all hours of the night never getting any sound sleep. I was in such a bad shape that I often had to stop my plow or whatever I might be doing and lay off for a day or two.

"Well, I just kept pegging along in this awful condition until I came here to the drug store a few weeks ago and bought myself some Tanlac. I had no idea at the time I would make a statement to be printed in the papers, but I have been helped so much that I want everybody to know what it did. I have an appetite like a bear and can eat all kinds of meat, vegetables, or anything else I want and everything I eat agrees with me perfectly for I never have a pain or a sign of indigestion. I have gotten entirely rid of the headaches and nervousness and sleep like a child every night. I never miss a day's work on my farm any more. In fact, I am feeling as strong and well as I ever did in my life and there's nothing too good to say for Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, and the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative; in Harbour Buffet, by Thos. Warkely & Sons; in Placentia, by James Murphy & Son; and in Topsail, by J. K. Bursell.

Some Thirty Nations.

The Chinese may be regarded as the most thrifty nation in the world. In daily life they are frugal, sober and industrious. Their wants are few, and easily satisfied. The poorer class live almost entirely on rice and vegetables, to which they sometimes add small pieces of fish and milk. Their clothes are of the cheapest kind, and they are so accustomed to crowded apartments that house-rent forms an insignificant item in a Chinaman's expenditure. Thus a Chinaman would starve, and it is on account of the advantages which he thus possesses, combined with sobriety and frugality, that he is able to underbid the American workman in California and the British colonist in Australia in almost every branch of industry.

The Dutch have the character of being a most thrifty people, they live on the plainest food and eat little meat, their fare being generally rye-bread, milk, cheese, butter, and dried fish, which is all produced in their own country. Although wages are low, they manage to save money; they are always cleanly and comfortably dressed, and live in good houses, which for neatness and cleanliness are unsurpassed.

France is also a thrifty country. Among the peasantry the same fashion of clothing prevails from one generation to another, and this is conducive to economy. French cookery is proverbially economical, and a French family will live comfortably, according to their ideas, on what would be a miserable insufficiency to a family of the same number and station in England, and what is more, they manage to save besides.

Italy oranges rarely yield over 2,000 to each tree. Florida and California trees forty years old bear 20,000 each.

Canaries, in the mating season, seem to vie with each other in the production of brilliant melody; and it is observed that the female birds always select the best singers for their mates.

Mosquitoes were unknown in Switzerland until the completion of the St. Gothard tunnel under the Alps. The tunnel gave them a short cut to the land of William Tell.

Eagles are so plentiful in the mountains near Selma, Cal., as to be a serious nuisance to stockmen. They have a strong preference for sucking pigs, and a stockman says that in one season fully 200 young pigs were carried from his ranch by eagles.

All chalk is composed of fossils. If you take the thickest bit and place it under a powerful microscope, you will see an infinite number of extremely diminutive shells, and no spectacle on a larger scale is more beautiful than the varied forms of those tiny homes of animal life which are disclosed by powerful glasses.

An Eskimo baby is born fair, except for a dark round spot on the small of the back, varying in size from a threepenny-bit to a shilling. From this centre-head of colour the dark tint gradually spreads, till the toddling Eskimo is as beautifully, as completely, and as highly coloured as a well-smoked meerschaum pipe. The same thing happens among the Japanese.

Cases of twins occur once in every sixty-nine births. The only fish that never sleep are said to be the salmon, pike and goldfish.

How Japan's Navy Was Begun.

The present navy of Japan, the best outside of a few of the larger nations of Europe, may be said to have had its beginning in a small yacht which was presented in 1858 by Queen Victoria to the Emperor of Japan. The Queen also detailed some British blue-jackets to the duty of instructing the Japanese in the management of that class of vessel.

Since then Japan has risen to the position of one of the great naval Powers, and her progress of recent years, has been nothing short of marvellous. At the time of her war with China her whole fleet displaced only about 30,000 tons; to-day the displacement runs into millions of tons.

Japan has a fishing population of about two million men, and from this section of her community she draws her seamen. Until a few years ago she has been depending upon other countries for the construction of her vessels; but she is now able to throw off the assistance of the Western world. Her shipyards are capable of building protected cruisers and torpedo craft, and gun factories and armour-plate factories have been established, which were of great help in the late war.

The Failure of the Tyre Guarantee

The only outstanding and unalterable fact about the definite mileage guarantee is that it must be paid for by the careful driver who does not need it—like yourself.

The Goodyear Service Station Dealers know this well as you tyre users should know it.

The cost of such a guarantee, like every other cost of production and marketing, is included in the selling price of the tyre.

Thus the presence of such a guarantee in a tyre of normal price can mean only that some other quality has been slighted or sacrificed.

If you drive with reasonable care, almost any standard make of tyre will deliver you mileage above the average guaranteed figure.

The premium you pay for the guarantee does you no good at all, and by paying it you deny yourself such additional mileage as uncompromised quality could give.

It is only the reckless driver—the man abusive of his tyre—who can expect to profit regularly from the definite mileage guarantee.

It is wise to remember that you are paying for his neglect and helping to buy his tyres the next time you are offered such a guarantee as an inducement to purchase.

Foreseeing the End.

A book of poems has just been published which was written in trench and billet during the war by a young officer, who distinctly foretells his own death, and never for a moment believes that he will live to come home. Instances of such foreknowledge are not uncommon.

One of the most remarkable was the case of Von Spee. If it is true, as it was reported on the very good authority, it does credit to the German admiral, who showed a rare spirit and delicacy. After the Battle of Coronel the German colony at Valparaiso gave a banquet to celebrate the occasion, at which the final toast was "Destruction to the British Navy." It is said that Von Spee immediately rose and said that neither he nor his officers cared to respond to the toast, and they withdrew.

The steps near the door were covered with flowers, and the admiral said: "I think you had better keep these for my grave. They may be wanted." A few weeks later he encountered Sturdee at the battle of the Falkland Islands.

The personality of Abraham Lincoln has been vividly brought to the minds of playgoers lately, and all his biographers agree that the great President had premonition of the tragic death which befell him on April 14th, 1865. Of the danger of assassination he was fully aware, and at a Cabinet meeting on the morning of the fatal day he was observed to wear a grave and troubled look. When General Grant asked what was the matter, he said he had had a strange dream, but did not say what it was. In the afternoon his mood changed to one of extreme gaiety, and his wife remarked uneasily: "I have seen you thus only once before, and that was just before our Willie died."

The Derby has had few more ardent devotees than Lord Palmerston. For fifty years, as regular as clockwork, the popular statesman galloped down to Epsom on Derby Day, and it was to his great disgust that on his last visit he was compelled by infirmity and vile weather to make the journey in a carriage.

As, that day, he saw the French horse Gladiator forge ahead, he said to a friend: "If the foreigner wins I shall not live through the year." Gladiator won, and in less than four months "Pam" was dead.

"Man-Power."

HUMAN STRENGTH COMPARED WITH THAT OF THE LOWER ANIMALS.

A man rowing does one-third as much work as an ox ploughing.

An ox ploughing does a little more than half the work of an average cart-horse hauling a ton of coals.

A camel carrying five hundred pounds on its back is nearly equal to two average horses.

While an elephant, which will bear a load of half a ton or lift a log of oak of the same weight, is worth in muscular power rather more than three good camels.

The lion, usually known as the King of Beasts, is by no means the strongest. Its strength is estimated at that of six men only; while that of a full-grown Indian tiger is a third greater.

Equals a Thousand Men. Neither of these animals is equal in muscular power to the bear tribe, of which the Polar and the grizzly are the strongest. A grizzly weighing about one thousand pounds has been seen to carry a steer weighing eight hundred pounds up a steep mountain-side for over half a mile. Its strength is at least twice that of a lion.

A gorilla four-feet-six in height and weighing eleven stone has the strength of four strong men. It can bend double a pair of twelve-bore gunbarrels in its hands.

The African buffalo and the Indian gaur—or wild ox—are the two largest and most powerful of the buffalo tribe. It is doubtful if twelve men could hold a gaur, which stands as much as six feet high, and is over eight feet in length.

The only other wild animals which are stronger than the gaur—always excepting the wild elephant—are the rhinoceros and the hippopotamus. The latter, when appeared, has successfully resisted the combined efforts of twenty-two natives to pull it out of the water on to dry land.

Largest and by far the strongest of warm-blooded creatures is the whale. A right whale of the estimated weight of sixty tons has towed for a whole day a steamer of one hundred and twenty horse-power, with the full force of its engine working against it. Its strength is therefore at least equal to a regiment one thousand strong.

Picturesque Postmen.

Although the rail and the motor vehicle have almost ousted the horse as a carrier of mails in this country, yet in many parts of the world very primitive methods of transporting the mails are still used.

For picturesqueness the dog-team boat is hard to beat, and it is common enough in the Yukon country, in Kamtschatka and Siberia, as well as in the far north of Canada. This mail service

The buffalo post is to be found in Asiatic Russia and other parts of Asia, and especially in very marshy country. The spiky feet of the buffalo can go where oxen fear to tread, and where a horse would be swallowed up. A buffalo wagon looks as if it had come out of Noah's Ark, and the buffalo looks no less antediluvian.

Great Battles Fought on Sunday.

It is a curious thing that many of the hardest battles of the present world war, as in former ones, were fought on the Sabbath.

The fiercest battle of the War of Roses was waged on Palm Sunday, 1451. Ten years later the battle of Barnet was fought on Easter Sunday. Ramillies was fought on Whit-Sunday, 1706. It was on Sunday that Wellington issued his famous order, "Ciudad Rodrigo must be carried by assault this evening." Napoleon lost at Waterloo on the Sabbath. Washington won the battle of Monmouth on Sunday, June 28th, 1778. Both the battle of Bull Run and the battle of Shiloh were waged on Sunday. War knows no holidays and respects no holy day.

World's Largest Date-Growers.

It is not generally known that Basra, the great port of Mesopotamia, situated on the picturesque Shat-el-Arab, some sixty miles from the head of the Persian Gulf, and now under the British flag, is the centre of the world's greatest date industry. For here, in normal times, is shipped every year between 50,000 and 75,000 tons of this delicious fruit. Should, as it is expected, Great Britain obtain economic control of the country as a result of the war the date industry would then pass under British supervision.

The date gardens extend for a distance of fifty miles along either bank of the stream, stretching back among the innumerable creeks in some places several miles. But the nearer the river or stream, the more vigorous the growth of the trees, for as the Arab says, "the father of trees must have its feet in water and its head in fire." It is said of the date palm that it is put to no less than a hundred different uses. The fruit forms the staple food of the people of the East, with its wood they build their houses, and with the long and supple leaves they weave and make baskets. From the fruit is distilled various beverages, while the stone furnishes fodder for camels and mules.

Each tree produces in its prime from 150 to 250 pounds of fruit yearly. From some of the more fruitful ones as much as 500 pounds weight of dates is often secured in a single season. It is gathered by the natives, who climb the trees by means of a rope round their waist, the other end of which is thrown up like a lasso until it lodges on some projecting part of the trunk, and the climber draws himself up until the big bunches are reached. These are cut off with a knife, curved like a sickle, and allowed to fall to the ground. Here it is gathered up by the women and boys, and packed in cases ready for shipment.

There are many varieties, the best quality date being the Hallowi, which is golden in color.

Wireless in the Wild.

HOW DO ANIMALS COMMUNICATE WITH EACH OTHER?

When motors first came into New Zealand the horses went frantic. Nowadays, however, you may bring a raw colt down from roadless country, and though he has never seen a motor-car before in his life he won't be half as scared as his parents were. Animals of all sorts—birds indeed—must have some mysterious means of communication. Take, for instance, grouse and other birds which, when telegraph-wires were first put up in the Highlands, flew into their end were killed by the hundreds, yet which now have learnt to avoid the wires, and fly in perfect safety.

This brings us to a curious change in their habits on the part of partridges. In old days partridges were "dogged." The covey was found by pointers or setters, walked up and shot. Some twenty-five years ago this form of shooting was given up in favour of "driving." The birds are driven by beaters over the heads of the shooting-party.

Now, in the old days partridges remained in coveys—that is, families—right up to Christmas. Then they packed in larger bands. To-day they begin to pack as early in the year as September, and fifty or sixty birds may commonly be seen together.

These packs have so many pairs of ears and eyes that the mere glint of a gun-barrel or the sound of a human voice is not likely to pass undetected. The amazing part of it is the whole great pack will respond to the warning of one single bird, and consequently it has become extremely hard to get them over the guns.

These packs fly much farther than coveys ever did, and will turn and go clean out of a district when they suspect danger.

The birds have, in fact, completely changed their habits, and fields thick with partridges will now often yield a perfectly blank drive. Shooters will have to resort to some other device. They talk of using mounted beaters to break up the packs.—Answers.

An Eye Opener.

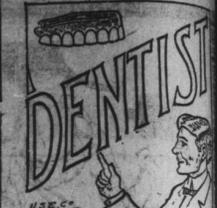

Mrs. Borton came home from a call one day in such a disturbed condition that it was evident that tears were not far in the background. She lost no time in beginning her explanation. "John," she said to her husband, "I am so mortified I don't know what to do."

"What is the matter, my dear?" asked Mr. Borton.

"I have just been calling on Mrs. Peverill. You know her husband, Major Peverill?"

"Yes."

"Well, I just learned to-day, to my horror, that Major isn't his title at all. 'Major' is his Christian name. 'Why, certainly, I've always known that. What is there so mortifying about it?'"

German Spies in Alsace Lorraine.

As has been expected, the French are having their troubles in Alsace-Lorraine. The main difficulty seems to be that there are too many Germans there. Among them are agitators, who, finding fault with France and everything French, are corraling enough sympathizers to create serious difficulties. Latest and most troublesome in this agitation is the demand for an independent Alsace-Lorraine, which came into strength about two weeks ago. It looked from the first like a piece of German propaganda, and now the French Government makes the charge that it has uncovered the payment of 500,000 francs to agitators by the German Ministry of Foreign Affairs. M. Louquet, the French Radical leader, has become tangled in the affair. The French have arrested several hundred leading German agitators for deportation. A wide-spread investigation has been started, and the French press is turning great attention to the situation. There are also propagandist troubles in Lorraine. On October 22nd, 100 Germans were arrested as agitators and locked up at Metz. The French seem firm in their belief that this trouble-making propaganda is directed from Berlin.

An Unknown Language.
The revival of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas at the Prince's Theatre, London, reminds me of an amusing story which that popular Savoyard, Mr. Rutland Barrington, once told me.
When "The Mikado" was first produced at the Savoy, he went into a music shop one day and asked, somewhat abruptly, for "The Mikado" libretto.
"I beg your pardon?" stammered the salesman.
"Mikado" libretto," repeated Mr. Barrington.
The salesman gulped, then: "Me no speake Italiano!" he replied.

A Wonderful Veil of Beauty.

The Queen of Siam owns a toilet article which is altogether calculated to fill the hearts of all other ladies of the kingdom with ardent desire and envy. For the Queen is the happy possessor of a veil capable of beautifying her face most wonderfully. This veil is a delicate tissue of the finest threads but woven so as to have some resistance. Part of this long veil is intended to conceal the face, while the remainder flows down over the figure and closely nestles to the body. The veil, which falls over the back, is completely sown over with diamond dust, while the part in front is less dusted, so as not to impair the face and the organs of sense. The lowest ends of the veil are covered with brilliants. Naturally, the veil has an almost inestimable value, as the dusting with diamonds is extremely difficult, and from time to time must be renewed. The tissue of the veil is so prepared as to cause changes in colour when exposed to the air. No sooner has the wearer stepped into the street than the veil assumes a delicate rosy hue, which deepens and, as it were, becomes animated the longer it remains in the open. When the Queen returns to her abode the hue passes away and the veil turns pale and dead as before. The veil has been credited with possessing the most wonderful powers. For a century it has been in the possession of the royal House of Siam, and although constantly used and exposed to all kinds of influences of the weather it has not lost anything of its texture and beauty.

The Coal Strike.

The strike of the soft coal miners in the United States drags its weary length over half a continent, and the tie-up of the collieries is beginning to have an effect on the manufacturing industries, as well as upon the domestic situation. An injunction by the Supreme Court of the United States has failed, practically, the operatives as a majority refusing to go back to work, notwithstanding the order, because being citizens of a free country they cannot be commanded to mine coal, the injunction therefore possessing no terrors for them, their claim being that the law can only concern itself with conduct. The mine workers will not be commanded to do anything excepting to submit to the law for the protection of the public weal.

The peculiarity of the present strike is that it was not ordered by the miners themselves, and it has been alleged that had they had any say or vote in the matter, there would not have been any strike at all. The officers of the Mine Workers' Associations, however, thought differently and on their own personal responsibility it was ordered, their argument now being that what they did cannot be undone by the miners themselves, a condition of things, which if borne out by the unions in council, will make for the subserviency of the masses of membership to the executive officers of each union, and as a consequence will impose upon the men the obligation of backing up whatever such executives may resolve in future.

Public opinion, which is sometimes very sympathetic towards strikers, has in this case set its face entirely against the strike, because in the first place, as President Wilson declared, the coal strike was both unjustifiable and unlawful. Unlawful because it violates an agreement which does not expire until April 1st, 1920, and unjustifiable because it had not been authorized by a vote of the miners themselves: because it had been undertaken under the false pretence that the operators had refused to confer, negotiate or arbitrate: because the country was still in a state of war, and because wages and conditions of labor in the bituminous coal industry were not such as to warrant revolt and idleness on the doorstep of winter, when the whole country was vitally interested in the maintenance of its full tally of production.

Public opinion was furthermore arrayed solidly against the strike because of the falsehood upon which the strike makers sought to justify the hold-up of the entire industry. "It was," says a contemporary, "a striking example of autocracy seeking to impose its will upon the people. The strike on November 1st was fully prepared for, and duly ordered long before it occurred to its authors to accuse the operators of a refusal to arbitrate. At the Miners' Conference held in September, a resolution was passed, not to authorize the officers of the union to negotiate a new wage scale and working conditions, but to demand a sixty per cent. wages increase with a thirty-hour week, and to break off negotiations and call a strike on November 1st if these terms were not accepted. The whole case was settled in advance. The officers did not ask for arbitration. They simply presented an ultimatum. Now they have discovered how badly they were advised, and how sadly they miscalculated public opinion. The strike which does not command public opinion is doomed to failure from the outset. Labor may always count confidently upon the support of the public for any fair and reasonable demands, and may safely entrust its case to arbitration with the assurance that it will receive equity and justice."

In the present big coal strike the public was absolutely ignored, and the striking interests reckoned that it would quickly be brought over to their side and view. But the public has a long memory, and as in all cases of yielding to demands for higher wages it is the public which has to pay the piper, the U. S. coal strike is one in which a huge blunder was made by the bosses in thinking that the public would again stand for autocratic demands and submit, without protest, to the mine union's ultimatum.

Startling Revelations.

The next few weeks, the public might expect to be regaled with tales of graft and corruption alleged against the members of the Cashin Administration. This is the season for the telling of such, and the Advocate opened the list with a highly-colored yarn yesterday. The first business, obviously, of the new Government, will be to discover any delinquencies on the part of the old, and judging by the shrieks of our Duckworth Street contemporary, some heinous crimes have been already unearthed. And there are more to follow. The newly-appointed departmental heads have not wasted any time in digging in.

Touching the Advocate's reference to the Telegram's reprinted article on "The Newfoundland Elections," taken from "The Catholic Register" of Toronto, the Telegram merely wishes to state that in every case where either fair or unfair comment is made on local matters by the foreign press, we deem it our duty to publish same for the information of our readers, and we are not going to be deterred from so doing by any scare cries raised by journalistic Uriah Heeps. There are many "startling revelations" in connection with the recent election that have yet to be presented to the people. Will they be interesting? Well, rather!

Filled at Last.

The Telegram learns to-day that the Department of Agriculture and Mines has been given to Dr. Alex. Campbell, the defeated Squires candidate in St. John's West. The precedent of Hon. R. A. Squires accepting the portfolio of Justice under Sir Edward Morris, without having a seat in the House of Assembly, is being followed in the present instance. Having come back with such a majority following, it is somewhat surprising to find that, out of all the party, there was not one of the elected candidates to whom this office could have been given, and the impression has been created that the rank and file have been rigged to suit the political exigencies of the moment. That the left-overs will resent this latest outrage is patent.

Thanksgiving and Missionary Sunday.

It is hoped the collection in St. Thomas's Church next Sunday (Thanksgiving), will exceed the anticipations of the clergy in charge. The amount of the offering last year was $2,800 and this year the congregation is asked to subscribe the sum of $5,000.

At the Majestic.

Never before in the history of St. John's did such a crowd of people block a street in waiting to see a picture, as occurred last night outside the Majestic Theatre. The sidewalks on both sides and the centre street, extending for a distance of a hundred feet, were blocked and policemen had to be present to prevent disorder. The hall was filled before the first show was half over, and the crowd waited patiently outside for the intermission so that admission could be gained. Inside every seat was occupied and every bit of space filled with hundreds of people who stood. Such a testimony to the value of a Moving Picture Theatre was never seen in the city before. The big attraction was "The Cavell Case," for talk of this stupendous production had gone the length of the city and everybody was eager to see it. Close upon five thousand people have already witnessed the wonderful picture and to-night half as many more will have the opportunity of doing so. This will be the fourth night for the picture, every night bringing record-breaking attendances. To-night will possibly be the crowning point of all. To avoid disappointment it will be wise to go early.

THURSDAY, Nov. 20.
For convenience, commend me to a liquid shampoo. Jevgen's Violet Glycerine Shampoo is one of the nicest things of this kind we have seen recently. It cleanses the scalp thoroughly, and leaves the hair soft and fluffy. It is very simple and easy to use and leaves a pleasant feeling all over the head. For use as a general toilet soap it has advantages, and supplied as it is with a sprinkler stopper, it can be economically used by those who favor an individual soap container, and being nicely perfumed it has all the good points of an ordinary toilet soap. On the whole, a bottle of Jevgen's Violet Glycerine Shampoo containing 5 fluid ounces net, at 70 cents is quite a good buy.
Our Headache Tablets, safe, speedy, certain, 20 cents a box.

An Interesting Weekly.

"Christian Guardian's" Ninetieth Birthday.

We have received a copy of the ninetieth birthday number of the Toronto "Christian Guardian," a religious weekly magazine, and if this issue can be taken as a criterion of the average one, we admit that it is a magazine without a peer in Canada. Established in 1829, it has ever since been an influence for good, and to-day it is known as the oldest religious weekly in the neighboring dominion. Some of the articles in the present issue are: "What the Press Has Done for the Church," "Our Brave Pioneers," "The Canadian Women of Ninety Years Ago," "Bibleish Journalism," and many others of equal interest. The one, possibly, that will be of most interest to Newfoundlanders is written by Rev. Dr. Bond, an ex-editor of the magazine. Altogether it is a publication of which the editor and associate editors may be proud.

Extradition of the Kaiser
Evidently the President of the United States Association, in Germany, though he uses the Dutch language. That is shown by a recent speech of his, protesting with vehemence against yielding to the Allies if they should demand the extradition of the former Kaiser.
The question, curiously enough, seems to excite more interest in Holland than it does in Germany, and it was more curiously, the Dutch friends of the Kaiser are using arguments of which the Germans of to-day are far from fond than they were while the Kaiser was in progress and soon after the armistice was signed.
The head of the Dutch bar could find nothing better to say against the extradition of the Kaiser than that the demand for it was a manifestation of hatred and the lust for revenge. He quite forgot the possibility that he called hatred might be a righteous anger, and that instead of lust for revenge, the Allies might simply be desirous of bringing to justice a great criminal.
His attitude of mind is truly tonic, but it is a little out of date, as for some time all except a few of the most junkerish Germans have tired of having their attention called to the inconsistency of denouncing hate as criminal, when they themselves for months and months preached it from their pulpits as a virtue. As a matter of fact, the Allies show no great eagerness to get the Kaiser into their hands, and no real certainty as to what they would do with him if they did.
If half of the current stories about him are true, his old illusions already have turned into out-and-out madness—a fate worse than his bitterest foes would inflict if at liberty to do with him what they chose—New York Times.

About John O'Groat.
"John O'Groat" was for a long time a landmark in Britain, and even to this day is one of the Englishman's starting-points of measurement—"Lands End to John O'Groat" signifying from one end of Britain to the other.
In the reign of James IV. of Scotland John O'Groat and his two brothers, Malcolm and Gavin, arrived at Cathness, and bought the lands of Warne and Duglby, near the beach at the mouth of Pentland Firth.
In time their families increased until there were eight households of the same name. They lived as neighbours in the greatest peace and amity, each year holding a festival in the original home. At one of these annual gatherings the question of precedence arose among the younger members, and they disputed as to whom should sit nearest the "head of the table," or enter the room first.
The old grandfather, Johnny O'Groat of history, was made arbitrator. He promised to have all satisfactorily settled by the time of the next annual meeting. Accordingly, he built an eight-sided house, in which to hold the annual jubilee. This octagonal domicile was fitted with a door and a window on each side, and a round table in the centre. This arrangement made it possible for each family of the O'Groats to enter by its own door, and to sit at a table which was practically "without a head."

The Magic Button.
Imagine sitting at a table in London, pressing a button, and key, presto!—people 4,000 miles away have the message in two-fifths of a second!
A week or so ago King George pressed a button at Balmoral, and in a flash the people standing round the memorial to Jacques Cartier (the first navigator of the St. Lawrence River) in Montreal 3,000 miles away, saw the covering shroud roll off as if by magic.
The idea is not new. Shortly before he died, King Edward, while staying at a Sussex mansion, similarly opened a university in Montreal, and six years ago Queen Mary, by merely pressing a button in Buckingham Palace, opened a hospital in Ontario.
Regarding the method by which these feats are accomplished, a Post Office official, referring to the unveiling of the Cartier statue, explained that a line was connected from Balmoral to the Central Telegraph Office in London, which was connected in turn by cable to Halifax, Nova Scotia, the current being switched to Montreal, a small line to the statue completing the circuit. The only "man power" employed was that of King George.

NON-RATIFICATION PREDICTED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. While the debate was proceeding, and the final voting was in progress, Majority Leader Lodge, Administration Leader Hitchcock, and other prominent Senators of both factions made private predictions that the ultimate outcome would be the refusal of the Senate to ratify the Treaty. They said this would not be its rejection, but a refusal to ratify at this time, leaving the Treaty in preliminary possession for the consideration of the next session of the Congress.

LABOR'S CHANCES GOOD.

LONDON, Nov. 19. Sir John Simon, formerly Home Secretary in the Asquith Govt., and defeated in Walthamstow during the last election, has been chosen as the Liberal candidate in the Epsom Valley bye election. Herbert Hirst, President of the Local Unionist Association, will probably be a candidate, and Tom Myers, Laborite, who opposed Sir Thomas Whitaker, deceased, at the last election is also standing. Strong pressure was brought to bear on Mr. Asquith to contest the seat, in which case the Labor Party would have withdrawn its candidate. A three cornered fight is considered highly favorable to Labor.

HIND'S STATEMENT.

BERLIN, Nov. 19. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg declared before a subcommittee of the National Assembly, investigating war responsibility, "I know with absolute certainty that neither the people, Kaiser nor Government desired war, for the Government knew, better than others, Germany's tremendously difficult position in a war against the Entente. If there had been solid, united, cooperation between the Army and the Homeland, we could have attained victory."

HEAVY DROUGHT IN AUSTRALIA.

LONDON, Nov. 19. Australia, especially New South Wales, is suffering from the most devastating drought since white men have resided in that country. Even the drought of 1902 is being surpassed, according to a Sydney despatch to the Daily Mail.

SOMETHING DEFINITE EXPECTED.

LONDON, Nov. 19. The Daily Telegraph's Parliamentary correspondent says that the Attorney General and Solicitor General are now in Paris for consultation with Allied Council in reference to the trial of the ex-Kaiser. It is hoped that definite steps in the matter will now be taken.

Prince Defeats Professional.

AND WINS DIVING CONTEST. WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., November 15.—The Prince of Wales spent the first of his three days of rest here by walking ten miles, spending an hour in a swimming pool, golfing three hours, and in dancing for three more hours. At the conclusion of this programme he seemed to have recovered considerably from the fatigue of his strenuous four days visit to Washington.

The Prince won his golfing match, played with Sir Godfrey Thomas, his private Secretary, and again proved his title as an athlete when he turned a somersault from a platform twelve feet high in seven feet of water in the swimming pool.

The desire of the royal visit for three days' rest incognito was only fulfilled partially. The whole population of this little mountain resort was at the railroad station when the special train arrived, but the news of his intended visit had been kept carefully enough so that only a handful of strangers were present.

At the Mammoth Hotel, where the Prince was lodged, there was scarcely 100 guests, and throughout the day the Prince was able to move about with the freedom of a private individual.

The visit to the swimming pool was made after the Prince had spent the morning tramping over the Appalachian mountains. Practically unrecognized, the royal bather laughingly challenged the professional swimmer in charge of the pool to a diving contest, and according to the professional beat him at his own game.

The afternoon was spent in golf, and in the evening the Prince witnessed a movie given in the hotel. He danced afterward until midnight.

Deather of Mr. Michael O'Toole.

The Doyen of Newfoundland-Labrador Planters Passed Away. (H. F. SHORTIS.)

By the death of Mr. Michael O'Toole, Newfoundland has lost the doyen of her Labrador planters, and a familiar figure has been removed from everyday life in St. John's.

Mr. O'Toole was born in Carbonear about seventy seven years ago, (but came to St. John's with his parents when young), and when an infant of about two years old he made his first visit to Labrador, his mother in those days accompanying his father to that northern latitude. His father conducted a large fishery business at Baateau, for many years, before Michael was born, and from his second year, up to the past season, Michael O'Toole never missed a summer out of Baateau, except that of 1917 (two years ago) when he was incapacitated from going down through illness. This would give him seventy five years residence at Baateau during the fishing seasons, which is unprecedented, as far as I know, with the exception of the late Mr. Andrew Granfield of Harbor Grace, who had seventy eight years to his record.

Mr. O'Toole was a typical Newfoundland fisherman, upright, honest and industrious. The members of the mercantile firms had every confidence in the honesty and integrity of the deceased veteran, and for many years he had dealings with the time-honored and enterprising firm of Baine Johnston & Co., as well as several others.

Mr. O'Toole never had any difficulty in securing a berth to the seal-fishery in his young days, and up to, comparatively, a short time ago, he prosecuted our great industry in the Dundee fleet, with Capt. Richard Pike and many others, and in the days of our sailing fleet, few men could get ahead of Michael O'Toole with his tow of seals.

He was somewhat retiring in his disposition, but when he was once started, he could relate historical events of the days of yore, that, perhaps, no other man in the country had any knowledge of. He possessed a most retentive memory, and having a good command of language, seasoned with natural Irish wit, his reminiscences were most interesting and instructive. His knowledge of our fisheries was undoubtedly second to none in this country, and it could not be otherwise from his long experience, as well as his keen intellect which permitted nothing in connection with his noble calling to pass his observation. He was a planter of the old school, which, also, is now almost a memory, and by his demise Newfoundland has lost the nestor amongst our fishermen, and St. John's one of its most enterprising, upright and respected citizens.—Requiescat in pace.

Proposed Churchmen's Club.

On Wednesday next, a banquet will be held at the Methodist College Hall, for the members of the Church of England who will gather from all parts of the island. The object of the banquet is to form an organization, having in view, the awakening of churchmen to increased practical interest in the work of the Church which will give His Lordship the Bishop an opportunity of meeting the members, and placing before them his plans for their co-operation. His Lordship will address the gathering, outlining the objects in view. The arrangements are in charge of Dr. Jones and Mr. C. E. Hunt, and it is anticipated that at least 350 Churchmen will be present.

Stories For All Moods.

THEREBY HANGS A TALE. LET'S TALK—TAMING OF THE SHREW

Mr. William Allison is a writer on sport who has no superior in popularity or authority to-day. In his new book "My Kingdom for a Horse" (Grant Richards, 21s. net), he has given of his very best. It is the kind of volume which even the most un-athletic type of sportsman will read again and again. There is, of course, much about horses and horseracing absorbing interest to followers of the turf, but under the headings of Berkshire, Rugby, Balliol, The Bar, and Journalism, he has written much that will appeal to all, for it is one of the most entertaining books of reminiscence of our time. An amusing story of his Rugby days is that about "Stevenson's Ghost."

that happened to be about. One of them was Allison. They laughed at his alarm and told him not to be foolish. The following night the rapping and the moaning was repeated, and it was suggested to Stevenson that the floor should be torn up, and this was done, but nothing was found. Directly the boards and the carpet were replaced the noise commenced, and this time the other boys were alarmed. The house butler was summoned and he heard the rap and the groan, and with "Ooh! Is, you know," he beat a hasty retreat. The boy Stevenson was given another study, but the one he had left continued to be haunted, and, according to Mr. Allison, defied the detective powers of Mr. H. Lee Warner, then a scholar there.

STEVENSON'S GHOST.

A boy named W. E. Stevenson was sitting alone in his study one evening when he was startled by a weird rapping noise, followed by moans, coming from the floor of his room. He was so frightened when the noise was repeated that he rushed into the passage outside and called to the boys

THE BROOM AND THE FUNNEL.

But no one discovered the originator of the ghost, and apparently Mr. Allison is the first to tell the true story in print. What happened was that he and other boys discovered when hunting rats with a terrier that below the floor and in the partition wall dividing Stevenson's study from another there was a brick missing. A small boy named Arbuthnot was let down through the floor of the adjoining study, with a candle to enable him to see, and provided with a half broom handle and a long paper funnel. The broom he pushed through the aperture and tapped under Stevenson's floor and he sent the moans through the funnel. Whistle signals were arranged, by which the boy knew when to operate and when to stop or put out his candle. The fact of the door of the adjoining study being open, with a light burning in it, and the carpet down and nothing disarranged disarmed suspicion.

A JOWETT STORY.

The author has an entertaining reminiscence of Balliol and of the great Jowett. Exploring an underground region under the College he and his fellows discovered a huge Bacchanalian picture "of a really startling character." It was hidden in a student's room until a Sunday afternoon, and then when the Master and several important guests had gone into the hall to dine, "this appalling picture" was brought out and hung on a lamp-post immediately facing and within ten yards of the Master's house. The sequel was that all the available culprits were "sent down" for the rest of the term. But Allison happened to have gone away the next day, and when he returned he found that it had been left to the Master to deal with him and he prepared for the worst.

This was what occurred when he saw Jowett. The great man was absorbed in his work, which, as Jowett's Plato, became a classic from the moment it went to press.

"He looked up as I entered but seemed hardly to recognize me, for his mind was concentrated on his work. At last he said: 'Ah! Mr. Allison.' Then after a pause: 'Your tutor tells me you haven't been attending lectures regularly.' In an instant it flashed across me that he was not thinking of me at all and that if I could get away without diverting his thoughts from Plato all might yet be well; so I said very quietly, that I would be more regular in future, and backed as noiselessly as possible towards the door. I had hardly got there when he said: 'Ah! there was something else I had to speak to you about.' 'Now for it,' thought I, but I felt instinctively that there was still a chance if I made no noise, and held my breath; and so it proved, for the slight spark of recollection about me died out; he was again immersed in Plato, and glancing up for a fraction of a second he said: 'I'll not detain you any longer!' Even so, no burglar ever opened a door or passed from a room more silently than I did from his that night."

A STORY OF PHIL MAY.

Mr. Allison is never so happy as when he is writing of his celebrated venture in Journalism, the satirical St. Stephen's Review, which at one time had a great vogue, and which died after many vicissitudes.

A TREMENDOUS BALL.

It was Mr. Allison who gave that great humorous artist, Phil May, his first real chance in his pages, and he tells many amusing stories about him. Here is one: A certain Colonel North gave a tremendous fancy-dress ball at the Metropole Hotel "when the nitrate boom was in full blast," and an invitation was obtained for the artist. Says the author: "The whole of the ground floor and the whole basement of the hotel were taken for the ball, and the whole of the champagne in the hotel was consumed. Phil May did a splendid double-page drawing of the affair. . . . Colonel North on first sight of the paper, tore it up in wrath and kicked out the old canvasser who had come to ask him how many copies he wanted. What specially annoyed him was the sketch of himself as Henry VIII, saying: 'Cost me £8,000 and I can't get a drink.'

"It is a fact that the Colonel could not get a glass of champagne at the conclusion of the proceedings; but after thinking about what Phil May had done he saw the humour of it, and as I told him when I met him, the 'can't get a drink sketch' only illustrated his unbounded hospitality. 'If,' said I, 'we had represented any of your guests as unable to get a drink, that would have been a very different matter.'"

"NOT SOME OLD JAMAICA"

One of Mr. Allison's best stories is concerned with his days at the Bar, and it is about an election petition in which he was briefed because he knew all the people concerned and could tell his leaders more than the solicitor dared to do in his instructions. A friend of Allison's had carried the war so far into the enemy's camp that from contiguous premises he had contrived "what King James I. called 'a Lug,'" and in it he could both hear and see what went on in the office of the petitioner's solicitor, a Mr. Cass. Now, one of the weaknesses for the petitioner was "a leading light of Nonconformity and teetotalism." He was seen and heard in Mr. Cass's office when his "proof" was being settled, and he had been invited to take a drink. He had at first refused, but the solicitor had said: "What!

Not some old Jamaica?" and had produced a bottle. This had proved too much for the total abstainer, who succumbed to the temptation and drank.

Says Mr. Allison: "I had all the details of the incident and wrote them down. My leader received the memo. somewhat sceptically, and I could not explain, but assured him that it was right; so he proceeded to ask the witness if he had been supplied with drink in Mr. Cass's office. This he indignantly denied, saying, 'I have never tasted whisky, gin, rum, ale, or anything else for seven and twenty years' (laughter). Instantly there came the question in the exact words that had been used by Mr. Cass, 'What! Not some old Jamaica?' This so startled the witness that he fairly broke down, believing that Cass had given him away, while Cass, on his part, evidently regarded the witness as a traitor. This was but one of many instances in which my secret information enabled our side to dumbfound the witnesses for the petitioner."—John O'London's Weekly.

Wooden Submarines.

Who built the original submarine? The idea was first suggested by a British seaman in 1578, but it remained for a Dutchman, named Van Drebbel, to build a boat able to travel under the water for a short distance. Van Drebbel constructed two submarines about the year 1620, which were launched on the Thames. They were built of wood, strengthened inside with iron bands, and covered externally with tightly stretched hides soaked in grease.

The larger one pulled twelve oars, which passed through holes in her sides. The holes were made watertight by leathern sleeves attached both to the oars and the vessel's side. According to one account the balance between flotation and submergence was so fine that she could be kept below water by the oars alone, resumably used in the same way as the living fins of a modern submarine.

Van Drebbel also invented what he called a "certain Quintessence," or chemical liquor, by which he was enabled to renew the air in his boat when it had become exhausted. It is even said that King James I, cautious as he was, ventured on a submarine trip in Van Drebbel's under-water boat.

WEAK CHESTED PEOPLE

and clearly people particularly, who are so subject to ailments of the breathing tubes and lungs, are frequently difficult to prescribe for owing to their frail constitutions. For all such people Peps are the safest remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, etc., as Peps contains absolutely no harmful drugs. Mrs. David Patriguin of Mattatall Lake, N.S., writes: "I have just been cured of a very bad cough by the use of Peps. As I am seventy-five years of age I consider this cure all the more remarkable." For very young people, too, Peps are just as good. All dealers sell.

Ambassadorial Privileges.

Ambassadors have curious privileges. Most people know that they and their households are immune from arrest, an embassy being considered a geographical part of the Ambassador's own country. But there are many privileges less well known. The Ambassador is the only person about a court who has the right to turn his back on the Sovereign or ruler at the conclusion of an audience. And curiously enough, he always exercises this right, turning to bow after walking three paces. This, of course, refers only to state occasions.

This rule worked rather oddly in Queen Victoria's time. To turn one's back on a lady would be rude, to retire backward would be to resign a privilege; so the Ambassadors always compromised by edging sideways toward the door like a crab. Another privilege of Ambassadors is the right of having both leaves of the folding doors thrown open when being ushered into the ruler's presence. No one else can claim this privilege.

Another highly-prized privilege of the Ambassador—one that Sovereigns must often regret—is that of being able to demand an interview whenever he chooses, at any hour of the day or night.

The sword is the Ambassador's emblem of honour. It is a long rapier with a blunted point. One great diplomat, the late Lord Dufferin, used to say that the only practical use he ever found for it was to poke fires with and file bills on.

Last Day of Social Welfare Congress.

VALUABLE ADDRESSES ON INDUSTRIAL MATTERS BY MESSRS. E. F. HORWOOD AND WARWICK SMITH.

This Year's Congress Considered Most Successful. Date for Next Year's Not Yet Set.

Yesterday's sessions constituted the last day of the Social Welfare Congress. For three days—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, three daily sessions have been held, and lectures and addresses on many matters of supreme importance made. The various speakers have each been expert in the subject handled, and the auditors in each session were well and highly rewarded for their attendance. Depreciating the former ones none, it can safely be said that yesterday's lectures were the best of the Conference, dealing, as they did, with subjects so important and vital. The speakers at yesterday's sessions were Mr. Armitage, of Washington, U.S.A., Mr. Reuben Horwood, Mr. Warwick Smith and Rev. J. G. Shearer.

Afternoon.
The chairman, after briefly referring to the world-wide industrial chaos, introduced Mr. Armitage, of Washington, U.S.A., who delivered a splendid address on the responsibility of the Church in solving the problem and the Inter-Church World Movement. The duty of the Church was to impress upon the workers that it was taking an interest in their welfare, to go out amongst them, and give them confidence. The Church as a force in this connection has almost been unknown, it has taken little or no interest in labor, but the great movement now on foot should bring closer relations between the two. The Church should be able to secure a measure of justice as between employer and employee. The laborer must be made meet his employer as a brother. The one and the other should live up to his contract. The first lien on the employer is a living wage; the second pleasant surroundings, plenty of ventilation and light in summer, and warmth in winter in the factory. The men and women employees should be segregated. The Church was in duty bound to assist in bringing these reforms about. The relations between employer and employee should be of a Christian character. The investor, the director, the manager had a great responsibility, so had the consumer. The investor should see that his money was legitimately placed, the director that the profits were not made at the expense of the worker, and the manager that those under him were properly treated. The consumer's responsibility was that when purchasing to take care that the product did not come from the sweat shop, that it was not the work of poorly paid labor. The Church was an investor, a director and an employer of labor. In many cases it had not measured up to the standard. The clergyman and the sexton were poorly paid. It has also failed when selecting its officials boards to get down among the laboring classes. Generally, it was the better class—the upper crust—that was selected to fill the Church office. The duty of the Church was to get down among the working classes, talk to them, keep in touch with them and advise them. When discussions between employer and employee arose, it was the duty of the pastor, to seek the cause and find a solution. If it could not be achieved by himself he should bring others to the fore, and in this way a great deal would be accomplished. It is impossible this morning to even give a resume of the points brought out by Mr. Armitage, and it is a pity that his address in full is not at hand for future publication.

Mr. Reuben Horwood read an excellent paper (which will be published in full later) on "Industrial Life." Mr. Horwood dealt with the present industrial conditions in the city under several heads. (1) "A disinclination to co-operate": Getting together has been found to be a remedy for many an obstacle to human progress, but this community is strangely backward in practicing this means of development. Never was there a community less gregarious. Select classes and cliques abound on every hand. Labor Unions refuse even to associate with each other, much less with employers, and the latter maintain a studied avoidance of common ground with those they employ. The Government should interest itself in the creation of industrial canals. Labor should not be regarded as a commodity to be bought and sold. (2) "High Cost of Living": This was one of the chief causes of labor unrest. The working classes assigned the cause to profiteering, overlooking the fact that their own wasteful methods, and that high wages make for high cost of production. (3) "Flaming display of wealth": Here was a cause of unrest that frequently appeared with fearful results. (4) "Insufficient Housing": St. John's furnished an example of the housing problem highly developed. A falling off in building during the years of the war, a continued flocking into the city from the outports, in addition to natural increases in population; and an apparent reluctance to invest in this class of enterprise, are among the causes. The results are unhappy and blighting family conditions and inefficient, discontented workers. The remedies are extension of the street car system and a stimulation of interest in building investments. (5) "Fear of Want": This gaunt spectre haunts many a man with baneful shadow and robs him of his peace of mind. The laborer who is obliged to live from "hand to mouth" has always this real fear before him. Cramped and repressed environment, and distrust of constituted government, were also dealt with, the address being to the point and well received.

Mr. Warwick Smith read a paper entitled, "The Gospel of Labor." Mr. Smith, in the address of the evening, covered labor in all its phases as it affected St. John's. He showed that many improvements had been brought about during the last few years, through the influence of the city unions. In most of the factories the 8-hour day system had been inaugurated, better ventilation, better sanitary arrangements, and better treatment all round had resulted. Some of the employers have established lunch counters where meals are served at cost. One has placed baths at the convenience of the employees without cost. Insurance schemes; another gives every employee a week's vacation yearly first aid in case of accident. One matter that needed consideration, was the child labor problem. In some cases children of from 13 years to 16 years were employed from 8.15 a.m. to 11.45. In other cases boys were employed at work on the wharves rolling flour, when they should be at school. In this evening's issue it is ever impossible to deal with the salient points of Mr. Smith's address, but it will appear in full in due course.

After Mr. Smith had finished, he and Mr. Horwood were warmly congratulated by the Chairman, and a request was made by Rev. Mr. Hemmeon that copies be given the Arbitration Board now sitting in connection with the dock strike. A discussion followed, in which the Chairman, Rev. Canon Vernon and Mr. Smith took part, after which Hon. Mr. Anderson spoke on the housing problem. He told of the deplorable conditions in the city and of the efforts being made to bring about reform. In the city at present some 2,500 homes are without water and sewerage connections. A movement was on foot to erect 625 workmen's houses, which would rent at from $8.00 to $15.00 monthly. The co-operation and financial assistance of the Government was needed in the matter, and Mr. Anderson hoped to see from 60 to 75 of the proposed dwellings completed next year.
With a few closing remarks by the chairman, and after Benediction had been given by Rev. Canon Bolt, the session closed at 5.30.

BIFF!

Stop jolting Liver and Bowels with violent drugs, but take "Cascarets."

"Dynamiting" bile out of your system with calomel and other sickening purgatives is all wrong. Salts, Oil, and Cathartic Waters act by flooding the bowels with the digestive juices which are vital to the stomach. Cascarets are different. They act as a tonic to the bowel muscles, which is the only sensible way to relieve a bilious attack, a sour, acid stomach, or constipated bowels. There is no gripping or inconvenience. You naturally return to regularity and cheerfulness. Cascarets cost very little and they work while you sleep.

Evening.
The evening session in the College Hall opened with the Doxology, after which Rev. Dr. Bond, who presided, congratulated the visitors on having an audience who showed their great interest and support by attending despite the unfavorable weather. Rev. J. G. Shearer was the first to address the gathering and dealt with social ideals. A new day he pointed out has now dawned with a social conscience of sympathies and interest in welfare work of every kind. The war has contributed largely to ushering in that day and the world will never again be like it was before. There must be radical changes in ideals and sympathies. The spirit of Christian chivalry which we witnessed on the part of the Allies particularly of the Mother Country in throwing herself into the struggle reckoning not the cost, when the neutrality of Belgium was violated, and which was also splendidly demonstrated by the overseas dominions must be continued and developed to embrace service for the children and all needing help. Again there is social efficiency which depends not alone on the individual but on discipline and training. In education and on other lines there must be development according to the fierceness of the struggle. Personality has received a new value, and as not war, but illness and neglect are the greatest destroyers of life, health and justice have a new place as we enter on the new day following the clash of arms. Social ideals demand that nothing antagonistic to health, sound minds and moral character be tolerated but that all forces of an injurious, anti-betterment nature be driven out of our lives. In the future those who obtain power and wealth, by questionable or immoral means, will have a hard time of it because they are cheating their fellows, though such in the past have been considered favorably and even honored. Profiteering again, that is the making of unreasonable profit by extortion and out of the necessity of the poor, is totally wrong and no man has a moral right to gains made out of the suffering of the people. The high cost of living is bringing home more forcibly than ever to all, the question of profiteering and a hard time is in store for the one who holds back necessities till scarcity has doubled or tripled them in price. In the new day there will be a transformation in industrial life which at present, generally speaking is war, employer and employee being organized with only their own interests in view. The result is strikes, which sometimes are justified, but which affect the whole people who must now take part. The Church can also assist and do a great deal towards bringing about Peace and co-operation through such bodies as the Service Council. The capitalist system cannot be replaced by any other yet, but the ideal for the immediate future is to banish from the minds of the toilers the idea of unemployment and destitution by social insurance workmen's compensation etc. The worker must be guaranteed an adequate wage to provide himself and family with decent housing and food, reasonable hours, and a fair amount of leisure time, in which he may seek improvement. There is absolutely no hope of employer and employee agreeing unless they come together in some kind of Council including also a representative of the public to discuss all matters in dispute. The employer has no right to be an autocrat but must show a spirit of Christian democracy because if he gives the capital the employee invests his service and life. Hostility in industrial relations is to be banished by co-operation, each serving the other in the true spirit of brotherhood. The object will be attained when the Master's spirit enters more fully into our industrial circles. The chairman referred to the state of the Council's finances and on behalf of the treasurer, Dr. Robinson appealed for support, the expenses in connection with the visitors' trip and stay here being large.

A solo was sweetly given by Miss F. Curtis, after which Mr. Armitage took the platform. He pointed out that the business of the Church is to put the mind of Christ into all parties in industry, in which field there are three fundamental principles. One is the inestimable value of the individual and the development of personality. The Church must pay attention to all spheres of industrial life and schools be shaped to give the fullest development to all. The second principle is that service is the supreme motive of our activities. The time has arrived when the people will no longer be led by the demagogue, but must get down to reason and let the idea of service predominate in the councils or conferences on all matters. Thirdly is the inescapable responsibility to social order. Profit making alone has heretofore been the mainspring of industry but this must be altered to the spirit of serving the people not the reaping of gain for one. It is our duty as Christians to see that reforms are brought about. We are only the stewards of all we possess and it must be used to the benefit of our fellow man. Now is the time to apply the doctrine of stewardship to industry and for the Church to teach it. These principles if applied will prove the solution of our problems. The spirit of Christ however is necessary to guard against going to extremes in gaining power or influence. Equal rights and combined effort must be looked to and mankind be convinced that the spirit of righteousness which exalteth a nation must and shall prevail. Mr. Armitage closed by warmly expressing his pleasure in coming here and on behalf of himself and friends thanked all for the hospitality extended.
Rev. Dr. Bond, felt all appreciated the services so splendidly rendered by the visitors and that new light had been thrown on various questions by the discussion of them. Pressure had also been brought on all to get down to work. A big programme had been laid before the people of the city and island and the old feeling of complacency can no longer be entertained. He would take it upon himself to tell the visitors that their lessons will be taken up and improvement made along many lines. In saying good-bye he extended a hearty invitation to come again in the near future. The meeting closed with the National Anthem and Benediction by Rev. Canon Vernon.

SOCIAL SERVICE COUNCIL ELECTS OFFICERS.
Following the session in the College Hall last night, the local Social Service Council met for business. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—
President—Rev. D. B. Hemmeon.
1st Vice-Pres.—Rev. Canon Bolt.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Rev. Gordon Dickie.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. G. H. Emerson.
Secretary—H. Y. Mott.
Treasurer—Dr. J. A. Robinson.

Fascinated by Niagara.

PRINCE CROSSES TORRENT IN A FRAIL BASKET.

Another interesting stage was reached in the Prince of Wales tour of Canada when he visited Niagara Falls. After a civic banquet at Hamilton, he made a night journey in order to press a button that switched on a series of powerful electric lamps newly installed for the purpose of directing a dazzling light on the Canadian Horseshoe Falls. On his arrival at the residence of Dr. Grant, the Canadian Commissioner, the American side was already illuminated, but all was in darkness on the Canadian side until the Commissioner struck a match to show him the button. Directly contact was made, the beautiful Horseshoe shone through the trees. The Prince watched it in silence for some minutes, visibly impressed. He then motored to the Boulevard for a close view of the Falls. For a considerable time he was fascinated by the sight, and reluctant to leave.

Sleeping in a train at Niagara Station, he was wakened early next morning by the cheers from an American troop train, filled with returning soldiers from France and Germany, including many prisoners of war, en route to Iowa, via Canada. His Royal Highness lunched at Dr. Grant's after a long walk along the Canadian side, watching the falls from every possible angle. In the afternoon, he visited the gorge by electric car, following the line of the falls and the river. At the Whirlpool Rapids he went down an incline to the river level, where the pent-up waters leaped and swirl through the narrowing gorge to the big pool where the river bends towards Lake Ontario. Reaching the cliff top again he crossed this big pool in a frail car of the Aero Railway, like a big balloon basket, which went slowly across the gorge with gentle swinging motion on cables.

Hanging in Mid-Air.

he looked down over 200 feet at the eddying water. There was a particularly good representation of Americans amid the crowds along the route, some motorists waiting stoically for hours, to get a glimpse of "the boy," and give him a cheer. At Brantford, the town of the Six Nation Indians, the Prince received another addition to his already long array of titles when he was elected Chief "Dawn of Morning" at a council of the heads of the tribe. The ceremony took place upon a raised and beautiful beflagged platform, around which a tremendous crowd assembled. There was a long debate in the Iroquois tongue as to what title the chief should bear. Several names—"Dawn of Morning"—were discussed. The Prince himself gave a vote for "Dawn of Morning" and that was adopted.

An address on yellow sheepskin was read to him, and he unveiled a tablet let into the base of Brant's statue, on which the names of all the Indians of Six Nations who have fallen in the war were inscribed. Afterwards he went through a dance of initiation, in which his steps were guided by a brother chief, in bright yellow tunic. Together both of them passed shuffling to and fro across the platform, the Prince entering thoroughly into the spirit of the ceremony, and dancing and bowing to the other at the ritualistic moments. He was subsequently congratulated for the way he had carried himself. The Indians sent a message to Queen Mary, whom they called "Great, great Woman; Mother of Love," which the Prince agreed to deliver. A pleasing incident occurred when an old Indian lady ran up to the Prince near the platform and cried, "I met your father, and your grandfather, and I'm British, too." The Prince immediately took a rose from his buttonhole and presented it to her.—News of the World.

In Old Japan.

Inscriptions on a workman's cap or back, stating the occupation and name of employer, are said to be customary in many parts of Japan. The Japanese are very much alike physically. Recent measurements taken of an infantry regiment showed no variation, except a couple of inches in height, or twenty pounds in weight. The Japanese are expert gardeners. They give such individual attention to each blossom that wonderful results are obtained. Native gardeners have been known to help the buds of delicate and choice flowers to open by gently fanning them. Seven pounds a year is said to be sufficient to enable a man to live in Japan—that is, pay for board and lodging—and many have been known to manage on three pounds a year. A Japanese auction is a most solemn affair. The purchasers do not call out their bids or nod, but they write their names, together with the amounts they are willing to pay, on slips of paper. Then the slips, having been placed in a box, are looked through, and the articles awarded to the person who had made the highest offer. The Japanese festivals number five each year. They are easily remembered, 1st of first month—New Year. 2nd of third month—Feast of Dolls, for girls. 5th of fifth month—Feast of Flags, for boys. 7th of seventh month, the Day for the God and Goddess of Love. 9th of ninth month—Feast of Chrysanthemums.

Millions of Germs
Breed in Tooth Film—Keep It Off

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Film Wrecks the Teeth

THAT slimy film which you feel with your tongue causes most tooth troubles. The tooth brush does not end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. In crevices and elsewhere that film clings. That is why your brushing fails to keep teeth white, free from tartar, clean and safe.

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth so cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So all these troubles have been increasing despite the wide use of the tooth brush.

Dental science, after years of search, has found a film combatant. Able authorities have amply proved this by careful clinical tests. Leading dentists everywhere now urge its daily use.

The method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we offer a 10-Day Tube free now to everyone for home tests.

See the Results, Then Decide

The results of Pepsodent are quickly apparent. Some are instant. We ask you to see them—watch them ten days—then decide for yourself about them.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But science has discovered a harmless, activating method. The inventor has been granted patents by five governments already. It is that invention which makes possible this efficient film combatant.

Lecture on "Placenta Repeated."

Tuesday night the President of the Historical Society, Mr. LeMessurier repeated his lecture on Placenta for the benefit of the boys of St. Bon's College. Bro. Ryan the principal, introduced the lecturer and mentioned the prizes offered by the Society for the best essays on Newfoundland. Mr. LeMessurier opened his lecture by explaining how it was he selected this subject. In 1910 there were a series of lectures, in the T. A. Hall, on Newfoundland history and the late Archbishop Howley requested him to prepare a lecture on Placenta. This he did and last night's lecture was practically the same with some anecdotes eliminated. The lecturer's account of the corruption of the names of most places in Placenta Bay took up the next part of his discourse. Then came what was most interesting to the boys, a short account of Placenta town itself. The students, most of whom were boarders, enjoyed the lecture very much. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. LeMessurier at the close by Rev. Bro. Ryan.

"China's Sorrow."

China's sorrow is a river, the Hoang-Ho, or Yellow River, so called, doubtless, because it brings down such vast quantities of mud that its waters are discoloured.

It has cost China more lives during the past century, to go no farther back, than all the wars of all the world, for when the Yellow River takes a fit of flooding the country, it does it on a scale undreamt of by any other river, not even forgetting the Mississippi, its nearest competitor. It simply breaks all bounds, and starts out across country to find or force a new channel to the sea. Only a few weeks ago it flooded twenty thousand square miles of thickly populated country, with a loss of life which can only be guessed at, but more than once the loss has gone into millions of human beings.

It is the silt that is largely to blame. The mighty river keeps filling up its own channel, and the people who are subject to its floods keep piling up embankments till the sails of the boats on the Hoang-Ho are high above the fields through which it flows. Then comes a great flood which breaks down the embankment, and the waters pour across the country in a devastating flood, drowning tens of thousands before they can escape. No wonder, then, that the Yellow River is called "China's Sorrow."

Bloodshed in Egypt.

TROOPS FIRE UPON RIOTOUS CROWD.

Serious disturbances are again reported from Egypt, military force being required for their suppression. Alexandria was the centre chiefly affected. Native policemen, trying to prevent the people demonstrating as they came away from a service at one of the mosques, were attacked by the crowd, who used sticks, stones and bottles. The police retaliated with their batons. On the Governor of Alexandria appearing, order was restored for a time; but rioting broke out again later, and many policemen and rioters were injured. Two motor lorries filled with troops arrived, and they were pelted with missiles. When the firing of a volley into the air failed to disperse the rioters, the troops were obliged to fire on the crowd. Two rioters were killed and 10 injured. Twenty-seven policemen are reported injured. Next day two officers were chased by the crowd, and had to take shelter in a chemist's shop. A motor lorry was burned and some shots were fired. This second outbreak was subdued without bloodshed. Natives had put up barricades in some of the streets, but the soldiers compelled them to replace the paving-stones which had been torn up for this purpose.

The Nightmare's Return

THE GUESSES AT THE ORIGIN OF THOSE HORRIBLE VISIONS WHICH HAVE SCARED US ALL—SOME TIMES.

...which killed the nightmare, will continue for a time, but will finally slacken its hold upon the mind, and at Christmas, say rate, will so far relent of its rules and regulations as to make possible, plum pudding, roast turkey and stuffing a possibility, if not a probability, for every family in the land. Then the nightmare will retreat from the danger to the inner fastnesses of their domicile, they were liable to miss their way and lose themselves in the many windings of their caves, until they sank down, exhausted, and the cave became for them a sepulchre.

That Cave of Dread. Another form of nightmare, though not so terrifying, is still more distressing on account of the shame that accompanies it.

TOOTON'S,

The Kodak Store, 320 WATER STREET.

But whether it be an old or comparatively new dream—as new, at any rate as Christmas-putting—it is a tiresome and distressing nightmare. You are always getting more and more involved in dark passages, which ever grew narrower and lower. You never seem to think of turning back. Sometimes you get involved in frightful sloughs beside which that of Despond was but a dry ditch. But it is the ever-growing narrowness, straits, which distresses, and gives that sense of suffocation which eventually awakes the sleeper in a cold sweat.

Yes, the more one thinks about it, the more probable it seems that, perhaps after a right royal feed of mammoth ham and ichthyosaurus stew, one of our progenitors lay down in the mouth of his cavern and dreamt this dream, which had its prototype in fact for him, for these visitations still seem to follow gastronomic overdoes of plum-pudding gorgeous pastries, and strawberry ice.

The Clothes You Haven't Got. Another form of nightmare, though not so terrifying, is still more distressing on account of the shame that accompanies it.

The question the dreamer continually asks is: "What possessed me to leave my house, and actually enter my place of worship on the Sabbath minus my"—whatever articles of common wear one may have happened to omit?

You may be actually in church, or you are walking along "the public causeway of your respectable main thoroughfare where everybody knows you, and where you have a character to lose. Yes, and you are meeting every man-jack of them, too!

If you would rectify this terrible blunder, this inexplicable lapse of memory, it is necessary to "go the same way home," and you shrink from the ordeal. Better to stay and bear the ills you know than fly to others that you know not of. If you do make a start homeward, you never arrive there. You always awake and feel thankful you are in bed, even if you have a headache.

Probably the natives of Borneo and other cannibal islands are the only human beings who are barred from this nightmare dream, because they cannot dream of leaving off an article, or articles, of apparel when they have none to leave off, but if fancy both Adam and Eve must have dreamt it after their expulsion from the Garden of Eden.

Why We Fall. The sword of Damocles dream is another form of nightmare. Something terrible is suspended overhead, suspended by a single hair which may break—nay, inevitably must break—at any moment. Poe translated this dream into actuality in "The Pit and the Pendulum." An even more terrifying nightmare is the sensation of dangling from some star-point over immeasurable abysses of space, supported only by your own clinging hands.

The impression on the harried mind is that the fall is inevitable. It is only postponed. Doom awaits you. The edict has gone out. You must leave go! But you are grimly determined to hang on as long as possible. When you drop you awake with a jump, and your poor heart nearly leaps out of your bosom, and goes on beating wildly for several minutes.

But you are thankful that it can beat at all.

The old, old dream of falling—falling through space—just as one is dropping off to sleep, is supposed to be an unwelcome relic of those days when our ancestors lived and slept in trees, and sometimes fell out of them.—Answers.

RAINBOW FLOUR is Wholesome

Rice, in order to make it attractive, has to be coated with Glucose and Talc, by which it gets its fine gloss.

Butter must be yellow to please the purchaser and is therefore frequently colored with yellow dye.

People demand White Flour and consequently Flour is often bleached to remove its natural creamy tint.

RAINBOW FLOUR is Not Bleached

The Largest Battleship.

(From the Westminster Gazette.)

Great interest will be taken by experts and the public in the Hood, the largest ship in the British Navy, of which the Times gives some of the main details this morning. It would be wrong to say that the Hood is as great a revolution in construction as was the Dreadnought, which embodied a new principle. She is a development from the Dreadnought type, and how far that development has gone we may grasp from the fact that the horse-power of her engines is nearly five times that of the Dreadnought. The new vessel has the speed of a cruiser with the armament of the largest battleships. With engines of 144,000 horse-power she will attain a speed of thirty-one knots, and her main battery is of eight 15-inch guns. Her tonnage is nearly 14,000 tons greater than that of the Queen Elizabeth. Whether she will have any successors in the navies of the world is doubtful. The controversy has to be decided between the experts who think that the day of the battleship has passed and those who believe that capital ships will always have the final decision in a naval war.

Navy serge dresses, trimmed with bands of bright plaid, are a pretty revival.

The Directorate style of coat or dress is one of the "picture styles" which scarcely ever goes out of fashion.

Angora cloths in Scotch plaids, or with blazer stripes, are used for skating coats.

WALTY MARSH

My ears are often sore and aching, my heart is on the edge of breaking, I hear so much of woe; the men I know are all complaining, their briny tears for ever rain in me, wherever I may go. In some poor chaps grief is abiding because the cars in which they're riding are made of tin and rust; it makes them sore when costly wagons whiz up the road like fiery dragons, and cover them with dust. Of course to swallow dust is hateful; but it were better to be grateful that they have cars at all, that they have boats in which to travel, at any speed, upon the gravel, and by the junkyard wall. The man on foot is feeling bitter because his neighbor, pompous critter, rides in a boat of tin; upon his tribles he goes toiling, and in his veins the blood is boiling, he scorns the cheer-up-grin. "Green envy, reader, is the answer; it's gnawing like a deadly cancer, in Harry, Tom and Dick; it takes the bloom from human pleasures, it turns to dross the old world's treasures, and makes the spirit sick.

No Complaints, But—

They were standing outside the front door, having a final chat after his evening call.

He was leaning against the doorpost, talking in low, dulcet tones. She was listening and gazing up rapturously into his eyes.

Suddenly she turned round. The door had opened; and there, just inside, stood her father, clad in a dressing-gown.

"My dear father," she asked, "what is the matter?"

Her dear father ignored her question.

"John," he said, addressing the young man, "you know I've never complained about your staying late, and I'm not going to complain now; but, for goodness' sake, stop leaning up against the bell-push. Other people want to sleep, even if you don't."

No Free List.

Here is one of many good stories told by Irvin S. Cobb, the American humorist, whose book, "Eating in Two or Three Languages," has just been published by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton.

A chap named Dave Lewis whom I used to know (says Mr. Cobb) went into the restaurant business. Dave had been "one of the boys," and his pals started to lick their chops in anticipation.

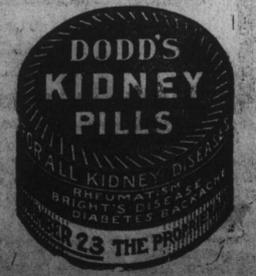

But he was beforehand with them. His first act was to publish a notice which read:

"Dave Lewis begs to notify that he has gone into business on his own hook and started a first-class restaurant, and hopes that his many friends will jolly well stop away and give him a chance."
