The Mystery of Rutledge Hall

"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER XX.

"And yet he ran away, and Mrs. Rutledge disappeared at the same time!" the man remarked, with a smile. "Mrs. Daunt, I do not wish to distress you—on the contrary, my only object is to spare you pain and suspense. Let the matter rest; it will be better for Mr. Greville and for all concerned. He has had a wonderful escape from punishment; the inquiry and search after him must have been of a very awkward kind, or he would have been long ere this. The matter has sunk into oblivion now. Do not reopen it."

"You think his guilty," she said passionately, "but I am convinced of his innocence. Oh, sir—she stretched out her hands with a little appealing gesture—"you do not know how gentle he was, how incapable of such a crime! He was as innocent of it as you are. I cannot give up this endeavour to prove his innocence," she added so earnestly that tears rose in her beautiful eyes. "No one ever tried before; he had not one friend here to defend him. His father believed him guilty. I could do nothing then; and all these long months he has been hunted and in misery and concealment. But now I am rich, I have plenty of money, and I cannot remain passive. Will you help me? Ah, do not make up your mind to his guilt! Surely your experience has taught you how very often innocent people have been condemned, and that even proofs are not always to be depended upon! Do help me, sir; I am so powerless alone!"

"But your husband?" he said, gently, touched by her passionate distress and by the lovely appealing face.

"He will not help me," she answered weeping. "He believes him guilty; besides, was he—Frank—not my lover once?" she added passionately. "Can you expect my husband to help him?"

"An, true?" he answered, gravely.

"I had forgotten."

"Think what his life has been!" she continued, eagerly, feeling that her words had touched him.

"He is innocent, and he suffers as if he were guilty. He has no friends—no one whom every one liked once, for whom every one had a kindly word.

His father is wealthy, and he has been starving; his sister is fading away, dying from a broken heart at his misery; and he has not a friend—not a friend but me, a poor helpless woman, buffeted at every turn. Oh, do help us, do help us! You are so clever; you can prove his innocence; and we shall be grateful, so thankful!"

Her hand was on his arm now, the little trembling jeweled hand, and the beautiful impassioned face was raised to his in earnest entreaty. The keen sterner face softened as he gently made her sit down.

"I will help you if I can," he said; and, used as he was to scenes of distress and suffering, he felt his lip quiver as he heard her passionate, almost incoherent thanks.

"Thank me when I have proved your friend's innocence," he said. "If he is innocent, I will show his innocence to the world, Mrs. Daunt; do not fear. And now to business," he added, changing his tone to one of coolness.

"How much of your time can you spare me now?"

She glanced at the clock; it was only five, and the dressing-bell would not ring before seven; but she did not want her absence from the drawing-room to be noticed. She was beginning to dread the young barrister's keen inquiring glances, and she almost wished that his visit would come to a close.

"Will an hour be sufficient?" she said, timidly. "I dare not remain with you longer, lest my husband should suspect."

"Mr. Daunt is in the house then?"

"Oh, yes! But he is laid up from an accident in the hunting-field. We are safe from interruption."

"I wonder you were not afraid to receive me here?" he said, looking at her in some surprise.

"I was not very prudent; but I could not wait to be prudent," she answered, faintly. "And I am my own mistress to a great extent. But I am afraid of incurring my husband's displeasure and arousing his suspicions; he has a firm belief in Mr. Greville's guilt. Will an hour suffice, Mr. Hoppgood?"

"Half that time will be sufficient; and that space will not be longer than an interview with your dress-maker or tailor," he answered—"and I believe ladies have tailors now. I need not trouble you with many questions," he added, glancing at his note book. "I can easily obtain the newspaper accounts of the murder and inquest; but, as you were intimately acquainted with the parties, I may glean some information which may be useful. You will tell me all the truth," he added, seriously, "and anything I do not ask you, but which you think it would be advisable for me to know. Pray do not hesitate. You need not look frightened," he continued, with a reassuring smile; "you are speaking in confidence and I will not make use of any information you give me against your friend."

"Thank you," Sidney said, timidly. "The first question I wish to ask you is this, Mrs. Daunt. On what terms were you with Mrs. Rutledge?"

"I knew her but slightly."

"Before her marriage or after?"

"Both before and after."

"Was she a resident at Ashford, then, before her marriage?" She lived at Lambswold."

"At Lambswold?" he repeated inquiringly. "Is that in the neighborhood?"

"It is Mr. Daunt's residence. She was governess there in the neighborhood."

"It is Mr. Daunt's residence. She was governess there to his daughter."

"To your husband's daughter?"

"No, Sidney answered, with a faint smile at the thought—"to his sister."

"Ah, to his sister! She was a very beautiful person, I believe?"

"Yes, wonderfully beautiful."

"She was likely to have many admirers, I suppose?"

"Yes," Sidney answered slowly.

"Mr. Greville and Mr. Rutledge included?"

"Yes," was the faint reply from the parched pale lips. Sidney was beginning to dread the questions of the detective who sat opposite to her so keenly-eyed and impassive.

"And others, I dare say. Mr. Greville's attentions could not have been very marked, however, since you tell me that he was engaged to you."

The color rose slowly in the lovely anxious face. Remembering his earnest injunction to tell him the truth, she hesitated for a moment, then said bravely—

"We were not engaged until Miss Nell was engaged to Mr. Rutledge."

"Ah!"

The monosyllable was full of meaning; for the questioner was keen enough to read on Sidney's face that there was something more to hear.

"Mr. Rutledge was a wealthy man?"

"Yes, very wealthy."

"And the young lady preferred wealth. All this seems no doubt very trivial to you, Mrs. Daunt; but we are accustomed to the fact that trifles are most important. How soon after did you become engaged to Mr. Greville?"

"Immediately," murmured Sidney.

"And you accepted Mr. Greville,

WORKING GIRL'S EXPERIENCE

Read how She Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Arrisport, Ontario.—"I must write and tell you my experience with your medicine. I was working at the factory for three years and became so run-down that I used to take weak spells and would be at home at least one day each week. I was treated by the doctors for anemia, but it didn't seem to do me any good. I was told to take a rest, but was unable to, and kept on getting worse. I was troubled mostly with my periods. I would sometimes pass three months, and when it came it would last around two weeks, and I would have such pains at times in my right side that I could hardly walk. I am only 19 years of age and weigh 116 pounds now, and before taking the Vegetable Compound I was only 108 pounds. I was sickly for two years and some of my friends told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken a bottle of it I felt a change. My mother has been taking it for a different ailment and has found it very satisfactory. I am willing to tell friends about the medicine and to answer letters asking about it."—Miss HAZEL BUCKLEY, Box 700, Arrisport, Ontario.

knowing that his heart belonged to Miss Nell?"

"He was very unhappy."

"And you, as an old friend, wished to console him?" he said, the tone in which he spoke taking the sting from his words.

"It was not that exactly," she murmured.

"Will you tell me how it was, then?"

"Mr. Greville was very hurt and angry, and threatened to be revenged on Miss Nell, or—on her—lover, and when I tried to console him, he said, if I would accept him, he would forego his revenge."

"His revenge on Mr. Rutledge?"

"No," Sidney answered low.

"On Miss Nell?"

"No," Sidney answered low.

"On Miss Nell?"

"No"—in a lower voice. Then, looking up suddenly, she went on; "there was some mistake," she said, bravely. "I did not understand that Miss Nell was engaged to Mr. Rutledge; I thought it was to some one else."

"To whom?"

"The question was asked very quietly, without the slightest eagerness; but his calm exterior veiled strong excitement—her answer meant so much to the keen detective.

"To Mr. Stephen Daunt."

"Any relative of your husband's?"

"My husband," she said, faintly.

"Was he, then, among the lady's admirers?"

"Yes, he admired her. Who could do otherwise?" She was most beautiful," the girl said, with a sudden ring of pain in her voice.

"Ah, just so! But still the lady's desire for wealth was great enough to be the principal motive of her actions and she preferred Mr. Rutledge's wealth. I presume it was greater than that of either of her other suitors?"

"I suppose so, then—that is, unless Mr. Daunt had given consent to an engagement between Miss Nell and his son."

"Did Mr. Stephen Daunt seem to feel Mr. Rutledge's success as much as Mr. Greville?"

JUST FOLKS.

I have met the famed and mighty men of wisdom and of sense, and I never found them flatter with a vanity intense. They were simple in their manners, they were quiet, often shy, and they waved no gaudy banners to impress the passing guy.

"We're just folks," their whole demeanor seemed to say, in modest tones, and they called for kraut and wiener just like Smith or Brown or Jones. "We're just folks, we grieve or frolic like the unknown passerby, and at night we have the solace if we've eaten too much pie. We have made some small successes since the day when we were born, but the best of us confesses that he has an aching corn. We are told we may have places in the nation's hall of fame, but we're pimpled on our faces and the goit has made us lame. We are only common mortals, we have sorrow, hope and gloom; walking sadly to the portals of the pride-effacing tomb." I have seen the selling-plater, I have seen him in his den, and he fancied he was greater than the common run of men: He had gathered transient glory that would flaze in a day, and he thought in song and story he would shine and thro' away. And his bearing was so regal, it was quite a holy show, and he thought himself an eagle while he struck me as a crow. Tip-horns, pikars, scowl and grumble if we bow not and adore, but the truly great are humble—they're just folks and nothing more.

Fads and Fashions

There is quite a vague for printed velvets.

Grey kimmer is a fashionable trimming.

This is undoubtedly a season for clo' dresses.

Very smart is the black coat worn over a bright dress.

The plain black satin opera pump is excellent for evening.

Your bag might match your dress and your hat your wrap.

Clo'g-fitting velvet hats are generally turned off the face.

Pique collar and cuffs are used on two-piece frocks of tweed.

An applied circular apron may give the new look fullness.

The drop shoulder is good with the long, close-fitting sleeve.

All through the mode runs that "gay little metallic thread."

One high-necked fall gown has swinging panels at the sides.

Harmonizing kid trims a high-cut pump of suede for afternoon.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

LAZY.

The just lazy through and through, shirking tasks I ought to do, Letting fruitful hours drift by Like the white clouds in the sky; Caring little what is lost, Dreaming dreams at any cost.

Duty stamps her foot and shrieks; "You've been idling here for weeks; You have health and strength and should Rise and serve your neighbourhood." But I shake my head and say: "Let me waste another day."

Even profit some would seize; Strangely has no power to please; "Come," it shouts, "I've gold for you. If your work you'll only do." But I wave the chance away Just to dream another day.

I have no excuse to give For the idle days I live; No excuse save this, that I Let the golden hours go by Seeing nothing here which seems So important as my dreams.

It is nothing but a fit. Shortly I shall come from it, And perhaps regret the cost Of the golden chances lost; But I'm lazy and it seems I have only strength for dreams.

My Many Enemies

A GAMEKEEPER ON HIS JOB.

Some people seem to think that a keeper has nothing to do but tramp about the woods with a gun on his shoulder. Actually, his job is nearly as varied as those of the farmer. His hours are long, and his position is one of great responsibility. If he has any slack days they are just at the turn of the year, but from the time that the partridges and pheasants begin to lay there is little rest for him.

Pheasant chicks are not easy to rear. They must be fed four times a day for the first eight weeks of their lives, and three times after that. The food—biscuit meal, barley meal and game meal—needs careful mixing and preparing. And the feeding is the lightest part of his task, for all the time the young birds must be guarded against the many enemies that beset them, more especially against stoats and prowling cats. In August he gets busier than ever, for then human poachers begin their operations.

Keeping ferrets fit. In February the keeper has to catch pheasants and pen them for stock. In March he begins killing rabbits and opens a great campaign against vermin. Through May, June and July he is busy with young pheasants and partridges. In August he has to watch the birds that will soon be ready for shooting. In September partridge shooting begins, and in October comes the busiest time of all, when shooting is in full swing. This continues almost up to Christmas.

Then all through the year he has his dogs and ferrets to feed and train, and there is never a month when there are not vermin to destroy. He has to be an expert in traps and snares. The keeper's life is a healthy one and not unpleasant. But it is full of hard and responsible work.

LABOUR LEADER'S WARNING TO THE PUBLIC.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Oct. 14. Support of the American Federation of Labour was ordered the 158,000 striking miners in the anthracite field to-day, after President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, had addressed the delegates. Mr. Lewis said that the miners would not alter their stand, and warning the public that hundreds of thousands of homes would soon be without fuel, and that coal would be impossible to obtain unless the miners returned to work.

PRESIDENT COSGRAVE TO VISIT ROME.

ROME, Oct. 15. President Cosgrave, of the Irish Free State, headed a pilgrimage of 700 leaving here to-day for Rome. He will be the first Chief of State to be received by the Pope during the present Holy Year.

"Nice old bear," thought the little rabbit as he hopped down the Shady Forest Trail, his knapsack full of lollypops, which rattled merrily as he went clipperty, clip tipperty lip over the fallen leaves that strewn the path. "Every time I go to see him he fills my knapsack with lollypops."

"What are you talking about?" all of a sudden, just like that, quick as the wind that blows off your hat, asked a voice. There on a limb right overhead sat Grandmother Magpie, her bonnet strings tied tightly under her chin and a pair of black silk mitts on her feet.

"What were you saying," she asked again, leaning over the limb to look into the little rabbit's eyes. "Oh dear," he thought, "why do disagreeable people always ask questions? Maybe it's because nobody asks them any?"

"Mercy me," exclaimed Grandmother Magpie. "Are you deaf?" "No, ma'am," at last answered the little rabbit. "I was only thinking. Mother told me not to think out loud."

"Oh, she did, did she," snapped the mischievous old lady bird, with a twitch of her tail. "But why don't you answer my question?" "Mother told me always to be polite, but not to answer questions," replied the bunny boy, lifting his khaki cap and hopping away. But, Oh dear me! The very next moment Old Man Weasel looked out of a crevice in the Old Stone Fence.

Goodness gracious, how the little rabbit's heart went pitter patter and his teeth clatter clatter! No one in the Shady Forest was more to be feared by little rabbits than this old weasel. Creeping slowly toward the bunny boy, he glared at him with his wicked little eyes.

"Oh dear, I'm a goner As sure as sure can be. If I were only safe at home How happy I would be," cried the poor, frightened little bunny. Just at that moment Old Grandmother Magpie dopped her vanity bag kerplunk! on Old Man Weasel's head. If that wicked old rascal saw a thousand stars, he saw a million, for the lady magpie's vanity bag had a strong brass frame, and it struck Old Man Weasel's head with a tremendous thud! "Ouch!" he cried, pulling off his little red cap to rub the injured spot. "Who hit me on the head?" "I did, you wicked person," screamed Grandmother Magpie, flapping her wings. "How dare you frighten Lady Love's precious darling little boy?"

Old Grandmother Magpie dropped her vanity bag kerplunk!

"Mother shan't lose her little precious boy," thought the little rabbit, and quick as a wink he hopped away. Old Man Weasel was too busy rubbing his head to follow him. Or, perhaps, afraid, if he tried to catch him, that Grandmother Magpie would call all the Friendly Forest Folk to arrest him.

"You go back to your bungalow in the Old Stone Fence," went on that brave, but meddling, old lady bird. "And don't you ever molest my little bunny friend again." And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

 With the possible exception of the automobile industry, probably no industry has been less indebted to science. Most of the refining op-has been based on the basis of supplying a limited number of products, most of which exist, as such,

 in nature. These several products are to be treated in such a way that the finished commodity is acceptable to the consumer. In many operations there are often products which have been considered as valueless, or for which there was no immediate need. It has been the purpose of the research to eliminate the production of material or to convert the so-called waste material into useful products. Many of the new products are the result of a demand specialized use or because of the need of the usual supply of the material. An example is the prod-

Balloon Tyres—Pro and Con
 MY EXPERIENCE ON A 4,000 MILE TEST.
 (By MAJOR FORBES-LEITH, F.R.G.S., in Glasgow Weekly).

I am often asked to express an opinion on the merits and defects of the balloon tyre compared with the high-pressure tyre. I have just completed 4,000 miles on a set of balloon tyres, travelling over every kind of road. I trust my comparison will not be taken in any way as a condemnation of this innovation, but as a frank and open criticism of these tyres as I find them.

It would appear that I have studied the tyre question—and care of tyres—in such a detailed fashion that I am regarded by my intimate friends as something of a crank on the subject! Nevertheless, I think I can claim that, by such care, I have saved many hours of unpleasant repair work when out upon the road.

Effect on Steering.
 On the old type of tyre, I have averaged, in fourteen years' running, only one puncture per set of tyres in every 6,000 odd miles of running, and I have always been an advocate of the hard tyre. I admit that the hardness may react a little on the general comfort of passengers when running on bad roads at speed, but, as this only occurs when emergency compels, it may be discounted as a real disadvantage.

In using low-pressure tyres the first obvious effect is a great increase in comfort and smooth running.

I had them fitted to a light 11 h.p. two-seater car, and they were over-size pattern. I used my pressure gauge continually and religiously to ensure that the exact pressure of 20lb. in front and 23lb. in rear was maintained. So nothing that I experienced can be ascribed to misuse.

I soon observed the effect they had on the steering, which was distinctly stiffer than with high-pressure tyres—so stiff, in fact, as to impose upon the steering gear a much greater strain than, in my judgment, is desirable, especially when making slow turns in a limited space. For lady drivers this must be a considerable disadvantage, since it also incurs a far greater strain on the body muscles to drive a long distance. I have distinctly felt the extra strain after a 200-mile drive, even on good main roads.

Skidding Considerations.
 It is claimed for the low-pressure type of tyre that the risks of skidding are greatly minimized, but I am afraid that my experience has been entirely the reverse. It is true that one presents a far larger surface of tyre to the wet ground, but I am of the opinion that the cut-pattern on the tread, which should help to grip the ground, is not nearly so effective as on the high-pressure variety. True, there is less tendency to side-skidding, but I have found that, with locked wheels on a slippery asphalt surface, one can slide forward straight for several yards when attempting to pull up at a speed of 20 miles per hour.

As regards punctures, my experience has been very unfortunate. I have had seven punctures in my 7,000 miles' test—a fact that has spoiled my average very considerably. Practically every puncture was caused by a small shoe nail, and one by a gramophone needle. A well-pumped, high-pressure tyre is much less likely to collect these unpleasant souvenirs.

Peculiar Punctures.
 The particular kind of punctures that resulted from these nails are well worth studying. Once, on a smooth and good road, my rear tyre was suddenly deflated, and I pulled up slowly, without severe breaking, in about fifty yards. When the tube was examined a small nail was found to be the cause of the trouble; but, to my intense surprise, I found a row of fifteen tiny punctures, spread over a length of nearly seven inches, which proved that the tyre had slipped immediately the pressure dropped at the time of the initial puncture.

I thought that this might be due to an error in the heading of this one particular tyre, but further punctures produced the same effect of a slithering cover, even before the car was pulled up before the tyre became flat. This shows a general tendency for the cover to slip under low inflation, which is seriously detrimental to the inner tubes and extremely hard on the pocket.

There is another important factor against the low-pressure tyre. Should a large front tyre burst at speed, one's chance of steering clear of trouble is only about half what it would be with the less voluminous and more substantial cover of the high-pressure type, and I have lately met several motorists who have had very narrow escapes from serious accidents in such circumstances.

Some Virtues.
 Against all these disadvantages, however, we can place certain advantages. Firstly, there is an enhanced comfort in running and less vibration over bad roads, thus minimizing wear and tear on the chassis. Secondly, when running in thick dust and mud away from the beaten track, it is possible to reduce the pressure to such a low poundage that the tyres give a long and wide tractor-like tread, enabling one to pull out of a

Borden's PURITY BRAND CONDENSED MILK

You do not require sugar in Coffee or Cocoa when you use Purity. It is rich, pure milk with sugar added.

difficulty. But, even so, there is the disadvantage of the tyre slipping round the wheels.

I am of opinion that the future has a lot in store for a half-way measure—the semi-balloon, with heavy, or, rather, heavy-tread. It will be a little bigger than the old high-pressure tyre, and will serve every purpose, both in comfort, safety, and efficiency. I am about to make an experiment with this type for the benefit of my readers, and in the near future I hope to give a report of my experience.

Fashions to Follow

Blue is to be one of the chief fashionable colours this autumn.

A perfectly straight front and a "flared" back is the correct "line" for smart street coats.

The waistline that goes up in front is a feature of many of the new frocks from Paris.

English cashmere is to rank among the foremost of distinctive materials for suits.

Sleeves will be very tight or very full.

Tiger and leopard skin furs will be more popular than ever in the winter. There is an excellent imitation of tiger skin in tiger-patterned velours which is being used to trim wrap coats.

Civet cat is reappearing among the smart furs; its white marks are dyed green, puce, blue or orange.

Blue lizard makes a very smart trimming for sports coats of wool and silk.

Clocks Without Hands

A new type of clock with a square dial and no hands is being tested at Waterloo and other London terminal stations.

The time is indicated by figures on two small panels, instead of by hands pointing to numerals on a round dial. A new panel is let down automatically as each minute passes, and the hours are changed the same way. The clock, which is driven by electricity, is controlled by a master clock of the ordinary type.

It is easier to read the figures than hands at a distance, and for that reason the timepiece is particularly suited to railway stations. On the new clock the time appears just as it does in time-tables. Thus, at 12.30, all that you see are the figures 12.30.

The Potential Wealth of Our Barrens

The white stones of Kimberley were playthings for children until someone discovered that they were diamonds; Bell Island rock was valuable chiefly as ballast for vessels before it was found to be rich in ore, and the lobster, which to-day is not, because we cared not how they were taken when once their value was proven, were formerly flung out of the salmon nets with the seaweed that became entangled in the meshes. Other instances might be mentioned in connection with the resources which remain undeveloped in this country largely through lack of enterprise, but at present we wish to draw attention, not to the potential wealth of our mineral areas or our seas, but in particular to the barren lands on which year after year immense crops of wild fruit grow and are left to perish.

In the Telegram on Tuesday appeared an account of the blueberry industry of Nova Scotia, in which it was stated that its value to the Province in 1924 was $200,000. To emphasize the importance which our nearest neighbours attach to this industry we re-publish the following extracts from the article in question:

So important has this blueberry industry become that the Dominion Government Department of Agriculture has, during the past few years, taken steps to foster and to aid its development. Perhaps the most significant and important development has been the experiment in cultivating the berry, that has been launched through the personal interest and effort of Paul L. Hatfield, ex-M.P. for Yarmouth, who suggested that a quantity of "Whitebog" Blueberry shrubs should be purchased and planted in local experimental plots. This has been done, and everyone is eagerly awaiting the result.

Nova Scotia has some three million acres of barren and entirely unproductive land. It is a profitable subject for speculation and research, and so far these lands can be reclaimed through the propagation of the common blueberry in the hilly districts, and the cultivation of the Whitebog variety in the boggy sections.—Morning Chronicle.

In this issue will be found an article on the Newfoundland blueberry. It is written by a gentleman who has given close study to matters which affect the industrial welfare of the country, and we regret that he prefers to withhold his name from publication.

Our correspondent makes it clear that not only is the Newfoundland berry superior to that found on the continent, but that in every way the development of the industry is practicable and does not call for the investment of any large amount of capital. He further points out that considerable employment would be given to the people in the outlying settlements during the winter time in making the crates and baskets in which the fruit is sent to market, and that the material required can be obtained locally. Surely the possibilities of the industry are deserving of more than passing notice.

Of course if public attention is to be called to some proposed development scheme, the most effective way is to talk of subsidies and concessions, and to speak with bated breath of the millions which it means (to the promoters). Minor affairs are passed unheeded, because with our eyes fixed on the glittering castles in the air, we fail to perceive the wealth which lies at our feet.

Spencer College Sale

Spencer Club's Annual Sale, yesterday afternoon in Spencer College Hall, was attended by more patrons than on any previous occasion. It was officially opened by Lady Allardice at 8.30, in the presence of a large gathering, including His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland, Chairman of the Diocese, and other members of the Diocese. Amongst those present were Rev. Canon Bolt, M.A., Rev. Jeeves, Rev. J. Brinton, Rev. Dr. Peasey, Dr. Arthur Carrell, Lady Bowring and Lady Herwood. The stalls were beautifully decorated and the display was most attractive. The proceeds were greater than ever—some twelve hundred dollars being realized the highest amount ever received. Many of the school pupils in their pretty uniforms were present, assisting in various ways, and those in charge of the grab bags did a wonderful trade. Spencer Club's prizes for the pupils who went in plain and fancy work for the sale were won as follows:—(1) Nancy Work, Florence Hayward and Marion Samson. (2) Plain Work by Gertrude Reid and Marie McGregor, Juniors. Plain Work by Joan Thompson. Cutting by Joan Stirling and Marian Cook and Millicent Anderson received honorable mention for their exhibits. Afternoon and six o'clock teas were served by the Club and were thoroughly appreciated.

At nine o'clock an informal dance was held. Mr. G. R. Williams before the sale closed, thanked all those present on behalf of the Club for their patronage and presence, and announced that the next event under the Club's auspices would be held Friday, Oct. 30th, in the shape of a Halloween dance, at which a special orchestra would supply the music. The College has had splendid reports from ex-students. Grace Watson at Macdonald College, Que.; Marion Wood at Dalhousie University, Halifax, and Olive Wood at Delta Collegiate Institute, Hamilton, Ontario. Spencer Club wishes to thank everybody for their kind help in making it such a glorious financial and social success, and desires to thank especially former friends who donated such a splendid collection of vegetables. The College pupils on Monday afternoon at 4.30 p.m. will hold a Water Carnival at the Grenfell Institute Swimming Baths. Swimming races single and in pairs, a water basket ball match, fancy costumes swimming, obstacle races, etc., will be competed for by the class in charge of Capt. Thomeas, the new Physical Culture specialist and officer in charge of the Girl Guides at the College. An admission fee of 10 cents will be made to the public who may be interested in seeing the girls demonstrate the noble art of arts, which tends to be at times one of the most necessary things to know in life.—to swim. Capt. Thomeas hopes to train her pupils to qualify for the Bronze Medal offered by the Life Saving Society of London, Eng.—Q.

Possibilities of The Blueberry. Barrens More Valuable Than Farm Land—Details of the Industry.

A copy of a recent issue of the Telegram reached the writer to-day, and he was pleased to see therein a reference to the possibilities in our blueberries.

Many years ago the writer compiled figures of the potential value of our blueberries if properly exploited, and today the price realizable for blueberries in the United States and Canadian cities is at least 40 per cent. above what it was then, and our berries are unquestionably 40 per cent. better in size and flavor than those regularly marketed in those cities.

Time and again he has noted the size and quality of the berries sent to the American cities from New Brunswick and Canada, and they could justly be described as poor compared with ours.

In many parts of Newfoundland the berries in size, colouring, flavor and other attributes are away and beyond the berries offered for sale at St. John's. For the past month or so the writer has seen much of the Come-by-Chance Valley, at the extreme head of Placentia Bay, and he has seen there in the most lavish profusion such blueberries as he has rarely seen elsewhere in the country.

There is one patch, not far from Swift Current, that has an area of from 3 1/2 to 4 square miles. It may be worth while to estimate approximately the value of the fruit of a mile of this area.

From observation the writer has no doubt that one could gather a pint of berries from each square yard, but putting it at only a quarter of a pint one square mile would yield over 95 thousand gallons, as the berries are worth far more in its markets than the partridge berries that we export. It follows that even at the price paid, locally for partridge berries, a mile of blueberry barrens would yield fruit worth $2400.00, or just $37.50 per acre—equal to the average profit per acre from a well-cultivated farm and nearly double that received by a Canadian farmer for an acre of wheat.

As of late, there is an apparent tendency to develop minor industries and as those mentioned here are promising and would cost but little to try out, you will, I think pardon my trespassing on your space to such extent in connection therewith. It may be well to add that the boxes for blueberries are made 4 1/2 x 4 1/2 x 8 inches deep and they cube 60 inches each, and are thus 2 cubic inches in excess of the standard American quart which is 55 cubic inches. The crates are 13 1/2 x 18 inches and 21 inches deep and contain 84 boxes or 21 gallons of berries.—COM.

Mr. Stadler's Warning

Humber Manager Says No Workmen Required at Present--Discusses Price of Newsprint.

There is no demand for labour at the Humber at present, and men who are looking for work there should ascertain that it is available before going out. This important warning was uttered by Mr. John Stadler, General Manager of the Newfoundland Power & Paper Company, in an interview with the Telegram yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Stadler is in the city in connection with the action for trespass taken against his company by the Humber Valley Farms, Ltd.

TRAINING LOCAL HELP. Mr. Stadler said that the present output of the mill was around 50% of capacity, but he thought that the entire plant would be in operation within a short time. So far, only two machines have been working, and a third has just been started.

He said that the training of Newfoundland help in the Mill is progressing satisfactorily, and in time, he felt sure that local men will make satisfactory operatives. As he had previously intimated, in an interview last spring, it was the policy of the company to advance local men to higher positions when they were qualified to undertake them. During the training period over 1000 men will be employed at the Mill but when operative are fully trained, the number of men employed will be about 900.

POOR MARKET OUTLOOK.

Questioned concerning the condition of the paper market, Mr. Stadler said the present outlook was not very encouraging. The increase in the construction of Mills in Canada has led to over production and as a consequence, the price of newsprint is likely to drop 25% for. The present price is $70.

(At a recent B.E.S.L. Conference at Ottawa, it was decided that, throughout the Empire, Poppies should be recognized as the universal emblem of Remembrance. Appropriations of this Resolution, we have received the following short poem from the able pen of Mrs. Sarah Robson, whose husband, Colonel Robson, is the popular President of the West Hartlepool Branch of the British Legion. Mrs. Robson came home from New Zealand at the outbreak of War, and served as an officer in the Women's Legion and the W.A.A.C.—Our Empire, Sept., 1925.

Passed peacefully away, after a lingering illness, John Lloyd Chacey, beloved husband of Elizabeth Chacey, leaving a wife, three daughters, Anna, Ethel and Muriel, one sister and three brothers to mourn their loss. Funeral takes place from his late residence, head Pleasant St., on Saturday at 3 p.m. Friends please accept this the only intimation.—21

They passed peacefully away at her residence Kildrife this morning, a most respected person, Mary, aged 73 years, relict of the late Patrick Aylward (farmer), and only daughter of the late James and Margaret Walsh of South Side west, leaving to mourn 2 sons, Nicholas, (farmer), and Michael, Buffalo, N.Y., and one brother Michael Walsh, (Ship's Carpenter of the S.S. Silvia) and the last surviving member of that good old family of St. John's west; also an only daughter, Mary Aylward, who came from New York to nurse and comfort her in her last days. Funeral on Saturday at 2.30 p.m. from her sons residence Kildrife.—R.I.P.

IN MEMORIAM.

In ever loving memory of our dear son and brother, Pte. Charles Raymond Frost, No. 1514, W.C.F.P., who died at Sydney Oct. 15th, 1918. No one knows the silent heartache. Only those can tell. That have loved and lost a dear one Without a last farewell.—Inserted by his mother, father and family.

IN SAD BUT LOVING MEMORY of our dear mother, Elizabeth M. Dean, who died one year ago, Oct. 15, 1924. Today brings back memories Of that sad and bitter blow; That was cast upon you Just one year ago. You suffered much, you murmured not We watched you day by day; Until at last with broken hearts We saw you pass away. Friends may think we have forgotten When at times they see us smile; But they little know the sorrow That our smile hides all the while.—Inserted by her two daughters, Odessa and Eva Dean.

"The Bat"

A house crowded to the doors witnessed the performance of the famous mystery play, "The Bat," at the Casino Theatre last night. No play presented in St. John's in the past has created such a demand for seats as has "The Bat." The success of "The Bat" is not surprising, for it is a mysterious and dramatic, more-over, it is uproariously funny. These are the characteristics of "The Bat," that is, a characteristically the funniest character ever seen on the stage, no matter what the character of the play, and that the character of the play has been the mind zone in a play that has been called "the greatest mystery play ever written." The good-bye, Friday. At eight and a number of out-of-town residents, Mr. Harkins has decided to give a special matinee of "The Bat" on Friday afternoon, at 2.30. Reservations for all these performances should be secured at F. V. Chesman's, 100 Water Street. It would be well to secure them in advance, as there is sure to be a great demand for them.

Annual Poultry Show in December

The 12th Annual Poultry Show takes place in the C. I. B. Armoury on the second, third and fourth of December. The Executive Secretary of the Toronto Agricultural College, will probably be in charge. An exhibition of local bred fowls and Newfoundland dogs will be held in the same place last year but under much improved conditions, which should make it an attraction, especially for those who will be a number of very tame and interesting fowls which will be put through a series of tricks.

Special!—Matinee Friday at 2.30, by request "THE BAT," Casino Theatre. Don't miss seeing this wonderful play. Seats on Sale. —Oct. 15, 21

Kid by Auto and Rendered Unconscious

Yesterday afternoon, just as he had stepped off the sidewalk to cross the street in front of the Academy of Music, Military Road, Sister Mary Mercedes was hit by a passing motor car. The driver of the car, the ground unconscious, Sister Mercedes, in company with another Sister of the Community, ran out of the convent in front of the car. A motor car was parked, and she stepped from behind this car to a motor driven by Mr. Williams, coming down Military Road, hit her and knocked her to the ground. She was lying on her head striking the road surface. Messrs. James and R. Jackson, who were on the scene, picked up the victim and brought her into the convent, where a priestess was called in attendance. At 10.30 she regained consciousness. The injuries received are considered serious and in a few days it is expected the Sister will be well as ever.

The Halifax Road race on Saturday will decide the prize winners in the Halifax Marathon Sweep. Total prizes $6,450. Entries 1, 2, 3 and 4. We feel sure we will be lucky numbers. —Oct. 15, 31

Overloaded Boat

According to a message received yesterday afternoon, by Mr. Gerald, the drowning of Mr. Harry, his son and a hired man, on Monday last, was due to their boat being overloaded. The message, which was sent by Mr. Jerry Pettit, says the men had an overload of freight, at 11.30 p.m. on Monday, the boat was swamped when rounding the point. A message to the Deputy Minister of Customs, from Mr. J. L. G. of English Hr., gives the name of the hired man as Frederick Creamer. The bodies of the victims have not yet been recovered.

Car Falls 300 Feet

ONE KILLED IN CRASH OVER PRECIPICE. A car (Purka Pass)—Recently a car from Coire, carrying five persons, ran off the road below the Belvedere, near the Rhone Glacier, and fell more than 300 feet on to a section of the road winding beneath Dr. Lichtenhahn, of Arosa, leaped out before the motor car crashed over the precipice, but the four remaining occupants. Mrs. Lichtenhahn, Dr. G. of Coire, Mme. G. and Dr. Chatter, of Coire, were thrown out and instantly killed.—Reuter.

For even our enemies look to us, not as people of great virtue, perhaps, but as strong guardians of law and order. If we give way, the outposts of civilization will be driven in.

"Is such a thing possible? Yes, in my belief, it is possible. But only if forces of revolt on one side come to an absolute clash with forces of fear and cruelty on the other side. Only if there is no statesmanship, no sanity, no spirit of compromise and common-sense on all sides. I believe, as thousands of moderate men believe, that there is still time—but not much time—to stop the rot in our social state.

How to Stop the Rot.

"It will not be done by a policy of drift. Still less by forcing Labour to its knees by a general assault of lock-outs and wage-cuttings. It can only be done by the willing and generous sacrifice of all classes, not asking Labour to get back below the poverty line while we keep all our luxury, but reducing our standard of life from top to bottom.

"It can only be done by desperate economies in national expenditure which would ease the burden of taxation and release capital for business enterprise. It can only be done by withdrawing the dole from work-shy men; by abolishing the restriction of output under trade union rules and substituting piecework and profit-sharing; by getting a million people out of this country into the overseas Dominions; and by getting many other people out of the cities of England, Scotland, and Wales into the fields as a new peasantry producing some of the food which we now import.

"We need above all the call of great leadership to the old spirit of a race which is by no means done, but needs only some shock of fate, some strong emotional impulse, some honest and fearless truth-telling, to reassert its old courage, to unite its classes as in time of war, to make heroic effort by common sacrifice to recapture its old spirit of adventure and enterprise.

We Are Not Done Yet.

"We are not done yet: nor, by the instinctive common sense of the common man, shall be. The only thing we can bank on now is the sense of honour, the hatred of hot air, the underlying steadfastness, of that average man who showed his quality in the last war, and won it for us. It is the last hope of optimism, and still a good one."

"It is true that the selfishness of the richer classes has excited, and does not excite, indignation—and not unrighteous indignation—in the class of labourers who have hard work to make a living even though they may, like the miner, pursue an arduous vocation," says Bishop Weldon in an interview in the Daily Graphic. "There is far too much luxury in the higher social class to-day."

"I am afraid the users of motor cars, when the use of them was limited to the rich, have been far too inconsiderate of the safety and welfare of their fellow-citizens. It is my opinion, too, that the members of the upper classes, by their flagrant neglect of religious duties, on Sundays especially, have encouraged materialism, which lies behind the selfishness that inspires the agitation for a greater share of earthly goods.

"Like Sir Philip Gibbs, I would appeal to the nobler spirit of the British race. I should like the coming generation to be trained in the spirit of a large, enlightened patriotism.

"When I read declarations against the British Empire I cannot help feeling—as one who has travelled all over the British Empire—that the Empire, with all its faults and failures, is the grandest human institution on earth, the most effective guarantee of justice, freedom and progress, all the world over.

"I hope, too, that the nation will recover not only its patriotism but its religion. I am afraid the disputes among the churches have done a great deal to reduce religious teaching to a level of inefficiency.

"After all, there is all the difference conceivable between the spirit of force and the spirit of Christ; and, believing, as I do, that the great majority of British people are at heart both patriotic and religious, I hope an appeal will be made to their patriotic and religious feelings. They rose to a high level during the war, and all that is needed is that they should maintain that level in peace."

Hints for the Household

Being exposed to the air causes a cut lemon to go mouldy, so place the unused portion under a tumbler for further use. It will keep in good condition for some days.

Use hot milk instead of cold when mashing potatoes, so they will mash smoothly and quickly.

An excellent soft soap for cleansing purposes is made by keeping a two-pound earthenware jar for three parts filled with water on the side of the sink in the scullery and dropping soap into it. The resulting soap jelly can be added in small quantities to cleaning water, or it may be mixed with sufficient powdered whiteness to form a stiff paste, which can be used for cleaning and polishing plate and glass.

Powdered borax with get rid of cockroaches if used every night for two or three weeks. Scatter it round

"Is England Done" Asks Sir Philip Gibbs

HE ALSO GIVES CONSTRUCTIVE SUGGESTIONS ON HOW TO STOP THE ROT.

Sir Philip Gibbs, in a searching article in the Sunday Times, asks the question, "Is England Done?" In a powerful survey he describes present conditions and deplores the apparent apathy and helplessness on the part not only of the Government but of the people. The author of The Middle of the Road, however, is not a pessimist, as the later portion of his notable contribution in the Sunday Times proves. Sir Philip Gibbs says:

Two Depressing Facts.

"Where one's sympathy slumps and all one's optimism falls in face of two depressing facts. One is the demoralization of men—and women—who do not want to work, and who refuse to work as long as they draw the dole.

"The other depressing fact is the insane folly, or the deliberate wickedness, of the Trade Union leaders who profess to believe that they can improve the lot of the working classes by revolutionary action of the Russian type leading to the dictatorship of the proletariat, the downfall of the capitalist system, and the ideal of Communism.

"Either they are grotesquely ignorant of what has happened in Russia, and of what would kill us quickly as a nation dependent for our life on export trade, or they are liars. Their lying, I think, is more likely than their ignorance: for they must surely know that Russia has abandoned Communism—all but a few rags and tatters of its creed—because of its hopeless breakdown after years of misery, when the industrial classes almost starved to death, and has long gone back to the rights of private property and private trading, still in wretched state because of the utter lack of credit and capital.

"I saw Russia in time of Communism, and it was diseased and famine-stricken. This country would be worse in quicker time if revolution broke out or Communism prevailed. In Russia ninety million peasants could scrape some kind of living out of the earth unless droughts blasted their fields, as in the region of the Volga. But in London, Liverpool, and other great cities our populations would get nothing out of the pavements except stones to kill those who had led the way to ruin.

"If our working folk are pauperized until they lose the will to work, or if they follow revolutionary leaders into ways of violence and destruction—I do not believe they will—then, in deed, we shall see the passing of England and all that was good and gracious in its life. Our Oriental Empire will be a flaming anarchy in which the weak and innocent will perish.

"The world will lose its strongest rock of defence against brutality and tyranny and the ethics of the jungle.

New lace curtains, prints and call-cos are troublesome to wash the most time, because of the time in them. They should be soaked all night in warm water in which two or three handfuls of salt have been dissolved. This frees the dressing and renders the washing easier.

To preserve mint for winter use gather it when dry, and then strip the leaves from the stalks. Wash them in a little vinegar and press lightly into a screw-top bottle. Add a little sugar, fill up with vinegar, cover tightly, and keep in a cool, dry place.

New hoods and shoes improve by being kept a short time before they are worn. If not too liberal with polish when cleaning them, as it is apt to dry on the cake, preparing the way for cracks.

Keep tinned foodstuffs in a cool, dry place; and never leave any for future use in an opened tin. As soon as the tin is opened, turn the contents into a dish.

If Halcolum is painted with a thin coat of varnish it lasts longer and is more easily kept clean.

Ink stains on colorful material are best removed with a mixture of sour milk and Fuller's earth. Great care must be taken to wash out the milk after the stains have been removed.

When glycerine is added to the gum with which labels are put on tins, the labels adhere without any trouble.

After taking a cake from the tin run a knife round the edge in the usual way, and place on a folded cloth that has been soaked in cold water. The cake will then leave the tin without sticking.

Tins should be put in a warm place to dry after washing, or the milk may rust at the seams.

Bible in Canada
LAST YEAR'S REMARKABLE FIGURES—FOLLOWING EMIGRANTS TO NEW HOMES.
The Canadian Bible Society forwarded last year to the British and Foreign Bible Society after meeting its own costs of organization $12,867. The parent Society in England sent out 396,570 copies of the Scriptures to Canada and Newfoundland, which is an increase of 46,400 copies on the previous year. This fact is stated in the Popular Report of the British and Foreign Bible Society which has just been published in England under the title of "The Seekers."
The Report draws attention to the fact that people from upwards of eight nationalities are being fused into the Canadian nation. The inflow of immigrants never ceases. These seekers after new homes are met at the ports by agents of the Canadian Bible Society (which is auxiliary to the British and Foreign Bible Society) who endeavour to place in their hands copies of the Holy Scriptures from which the highest ideals of citizenship are derived. Dignit Gospels containing the English and a vernacular text printed side by side, are particularly valuable in this work. At Quebec last year 54,957 volumes in thirty-three languages were distributed; at St. John (N.B.) 13,458 volumes in thirty-six languages; and at Halifax 17,188 in twenty-five. Rarely in a Gospel refused accompanied as it is by a hearty shake of the hand and warm words of welcome to Canadian soil. Moreover, the Society's workers seek to follow the immigrants to their new homes. They find out the communities of Russian Doukhobors and Mennonites, they visit the big Scandinavian settlements along the Canadian Pacific Railway in Alberta and the Norse fishermen who cast their nets into the lakes of Manitoba. Nor do they neglect our own kind and kin. Sad tales are told of the spiritual destitution of the settlers scattered over these boundless lands of the Far West. To do all that is needed is beyond the Society's power and scope but it is their aim to place a Bible in the Canadian home.

For two years in succession the Canadian Bible Society has sent a trusted agent, the Rev. Narcisso McLaren, to visit the hardy fishermen, hunters, trappers and lumbermen, along the Labrador coast. Last year he was provided with a boat so that he might reach otherwise inaccessible settlements.
"This old log-cabin is grandmother's home. She is ninety-two years of age, and has spent her long life on this coast. At six years of age she became a cripple. For forty years she has been unable to work, and has sat there in her chair, neatly dressed. She has taught the story of Jesus Christ to the uncared for children around. When I asked her to tell me of her life, she said that storms had been many and terrible, but that her anchor had held fast, for it had fallen on the thorned side of the rock of ages. Her eyesight has failed so that for fourteen years she had not been able to read her small-type Bible. It was my privilege to present her, in the name of the B.F.B.S., with a Testament printed in large type. How delighted she was to read again her favourite chapter, the 14th of St. John."

To Collect Waste Alcohol
One pint of alcohol, 65 to 85 per cent pure, flies up the chimney for every 100 pounds of bread baked, according to the Italian engineer, Andrusiani, who has invented a simple apparatus for collecting it. Andrusiani believes it is possible to collect it. Andrusiani believes it is possible to collect from the bake ovens of Germany alone, 20,000,000 gallons of alcohol yearly at the cost of first installation, which is not expensive. In Germany the new discovery means great conservation in a national food, potatoes, from which her supply of commercial alcohol is made. The new process, when installed throughout the country, will save at least 9,000,000 tons of potatoes, which are used to produce one-third of Germany's yearly alcohol consumption, as well as 3,000,000 tons of coal used in the conversion process. It also means that the Germans succeed in their attempt to emancipate themselves from the import food stuffs which now amount to about 20 per cent of their entire needs, and many acres now used for the potato crop can be converted into wheat, great quantities of which must now be brought from other lands.

Royal Mail Packet Company's Birthday
We are again reminded of the tremendous advances that have been made in sea transport during the last century by the announcement of the Royal Mail Line that to-day will be its 88th birthday.
The latest of these ventures is the introduction of two 22,000 ton motor liners, the Asuturias and Alantara, the former of which will leave Southampton on February 28th next, on her maiden voyage to South America.

These vessels will be driven by the largest marine Diesel engines ever constructed, developing 20,000 horse-power, and will represent the highest attainment in British shipbuilding.
The total tonnage of the original fleet was 29,237, the largest vessel being 2,070 tons. To-day the company's fleet numbers nearly 60 vessels, amounting to a tonnage of approximately 600,000, and together with its associated companies, controls over 2,000,000 tons of shipping, thereby being the largest shipping combine in the world.—Morning Chronicle, Oct. 10.

Dip thin slices of whole-wheat bread in melted butter, spread with chopped candied cherries, pineapple and mint, put together and cut into fingers.
Bake minced cooked ham with mashed potatoes in a buttered dish. Before putting in the break over the top a few eggs.

No Trace of Missing Woman Africa
The girl Bessie Barrett, who mysteriously disappeared from a King's Bridge Road on Sunday, has not yet been located. It is reported that a girl acting strangely was seen in that direction on Monday evening, but enquiries that day made in that direction were fruitless and the girl's whereabouts were a mystery. She is about 17 years of age and had no hat on when she was seen. An effort is being made by police to locate her.

C. L. B. Cadets

Brigade paraded as usual last night with Lt. Col. Walter F. Hendell, Major M. Outerbridge, Capt. Len Slick, Adj., and 200 all ranks.

The last report from Lamaline shows great progress. The attendance on the roll and an average of twenty-seven. During the summer the lads were mostly in the gymnasiums. They are now arranging their fall and winter programmes.

The C. L. B. Savings Bank, under the management of A. S. Lewis, reports that on deposit. The Bank pays interest, gives every C. L. B. its own book and all those members who have no accounts should get a book at once and learn to save.

The C. L. B. Athletic Association has held its annual Boxing and Wrestling tournament. All lads should train hard for the event as victory is always the goal to those who train properly.

Major Williams has reported that Harold Blackler, No. 1, the leader of the C. L. B. in Nfld. in 1892.

Blackler holds a responsible position in the Dept. of Zoology at Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass., and is well known in the American Ladies' College as a pupil of about two thousand years yearly for their education.

There the Brigade Major attended the christening of Serjeant Blackler's latest recruit, which was held at the Boston pier and the C. L. B. site was met. Pte. Joshua Blackler, A. Co. in 1899, now married and living at 60 Maple St., Providence, R.I., where he is happy and prosperous.

He especially wished to be remembered to his old officers and members of the C. L. B., and was glad to hear his old Regiment was going to Montreal.

Charles Whitten was also in Montreal. Charlie was former accountant with Lt. Col. Frank S. Johns. He has made good as now director of the Canada Paper Board Mfg. Co., a five million corporation as well as holding a directorship in two other one million dollar companies.

He spent his vacation on the St. John River, N.B., and is enjoying experience in September whilst canoeing with his wife and son-in-law. Neither of the latter had ever seen when the canoe up the river, but with great confidence in the man who was a good swimmer, they set out for one and swimming for the end of the canoe and encouraged them to hold on till they were rescued after holding to their frail raft for twenty minutes. Great work, Whitten—no doubt your C. L. B. training on Toppsall Beach helped you to save your wife and son-in-law.

All ranks of your old Regiment in Newfoundland are proud of your success and to know your name.

Sergeant George Edgcombe writes from 1140 Warren Avenue W., Detroit, Michigan, where he is prospering and reports following: "The C. L. B. members living in that city—Ernest Ford, Cyril and Richard, Gus Snow—a brother of ex-serjeant Joe Snow—and Corporal Cyril Barnes. All are doing well. He reports that Jack Rendell is doing well at Minneapolis—Jack was one of the famous crews of the 'Old Star' winning the Coronation Medal. His younger brother Fred is also doing well, and they all unite in sending regards to all ranks at home."

Woman Afraid to Eat Anything
"I was afraid to eat because I always had stomach trouble afterwards. After taking Adierka I can eat and sleep. Signed Mrs. A. Howard." Adierka often brings surprising relief to the stomach. Stops that full, bloated feeling. Removes old waste material from intestines and makes you feel happy and cheerful. Excellent for obstinate constipation. Sold by all leading Druggists.

Can Husbands be Too Kind?

DOROTHY DIX SAYS: "SPOILED WIVES ARE NEVER HAPPY."

A man asks me: "Can a husband be too good to his wife?"
Yes. A husband can be too good to his wife. So can a wife be too good to her husband. Husbands and wives are just as easily spoiled as babies are, and they react to spoiling in exactly the same way that babies do. They become peevish, and fretful, and unreasonable. They howl for the moon. The more they are given into the more they demand, and the more unrelenting their tyranny becomes. They need nothing so much as to be turned across somebody's knee and given a good spanking, and made to behave themselves.

The Woman's Part.
All of us know plenty of men and women, with many fine qualities, who would have made splendid husbands and wives if they had not been badly spoiled by their over-indulgent wives and husbands. But instead of being disciplined and made to act like reasonable human beings, they had their weaknesses indulged, their selfishness encouraged, their exactions given in to until they became a curse to themselves and to those who had the misfortune to be married to them.

Of course, when my correspondent speaks of a man being "good" to his wife, he means it in the sense of being indulgent to her. No man can be too good to his wife in the way of being kind, and tender, and sympathetic, and just, and fair. But he is not good to her—in fact, he does her a cruel wrong—when he is too indulgent.

He ruins her life no less than his own because the spoiled wife is never happy. She is always discontented, restless, dissatisfied, wanting something she hasn't got and that is just beyond her reach.

A man is too good to his wife when he lets her neglect her end of the matrimonial partnership. His part of the contract is to work and make the money to support a home. Her part is to make a comfortable home.

There are many men who have to get up and get their own breakfast before they start to business, while their good-for-nothing wives slumber and sleep. There are men who have to come home after a hard day's work and help get the dinner, and wash the dishes, and bath the baby, and sweep the floors, and do all the housework that their trifling wives have left undone.

Nothing but a woman being a bed-ridden invalid excuses her for not doing her share of the work, and for not feeding her family on properly-cooked food, and any man is silly who puts up with slack housekeeping from an able-bodied wife.

A man is too good to his wife—or too bad to her—when he lets her ruin him with her extravagance. There are men of ability, men who are industrious, men who are filled with ambition and who were on the high road to success when they married. But they got wasters for wives, and thereafter their lives became just a frantic struggle to keep even with the bill collector.

The man who never says "No" to his wife's ceaseless demands may think that he is being good to her, but in reality he could do her no worse turn. For you can no more satisfy a greedy woman than you can a greedy child.

A man is too good to his wife when he makes all of the sacrifices and she monopolizes all of the privileges. He cultivates selfishness in his wife by never making her give as well as take. And his reward is his wife's contempt.

Oh, yes, a man can easily be too good to his wife. The really good husbands are not those who make spoiled babies of their wives, but those who help their wives to develop into self-controlled, helpful, useful women.

Facing the Facts.

INROADS OF FOREIGN COMPETITION—BRITAIN'S ONLY ROAD TO RECOVERY.

Noteworthy criticism of our present economic position, and equally noteworthy views on the road to improvement, were contained in the speech delivered by Mr. L. B. Lee at the general meeting of the Calico Printers' Association. One of his most arresting points was in regard to cotton exports. Before they were these actually paid for all our food imports. The balance is now very much the other way. This change might not greatly matter if some other export industry had been built up to take the place of cotton; instead, we find that many of our other export industries are suffering from a similar decline. Broadly speaking, in Mr. Lee's opinion, the trouble is due to increased cost of production at home, and diminished purchasing power abroad. By way of illustrating the former point, he mentioned that while, in 1913, the rates and taxes of the company amounted to £26,000, for the past year they were £256,000. In connection with this huge increase in overhead charges our governmental methods were arraigned.

Politicians, instead of confining their attention to the essential elements of good government, devote themselves to bribing the electors with the taxpayers' money.

Reduced taxation, improved management, and more efficient labour are all essential, in Mr. Lee's opinion, to the recovery of the markets abroad in which we were pre-eminent before the war.

Great Britain's consumption of raw cotton in 1924, showed a decrease of over 1 1/2 million bales as compared with 1913. Can we recover this lost trade? As regards the cheap, or bulk, trade, Mr. Lee thinks not, for the reason that in the low grades the countries which we used to supply now compete with us. In 1913 China had only 2,000 looms; in the early part of this year she had 14,000, and another 4,000 on order. Chinese workers are not yet as efficient as the textile workers of Lancashire, but the gap is gradually being bridged. In the spinning section a 12-hour day is the rule in China, and in weaving mills 13 1/2 hours is not uncommon; in both a seven-day week is often worked.

The low rate of pay is a further factor, the average wage being only 1/3 that of a day. Japanese competition is also an important factor. Between 1914 and 1924 Japan increased the number of her factories from 3,128 to 5,948. The imports into China from Japan increased from 500,000 pieces in 1913 to 4,000,000 in 1924. In the same period China's imports from Great Britain declined from 13,000,000 to 11,000,000 pieces. It is important to record that over a quarter of a million pieces of locally manufactured sheetings were exported from Shanghai to Turkey during the first half of 1924. The figures of the Indian cotton industry are equally instructive.

Between 1914 and 1924 the number of mills in India increased from 271 to 336; the spindles by over a million and the looms by 47,000. The output employed by 96,000, the output by approximately 16 per cent.

Japanese activity is being felt in India as well as in China. In 1913 Japanese imports of cotton goods into India, represented only a small fraction of 1 per cent. of the total; in 1924 they were over 8 per cent. Meanwhile the percentage of cotton imports from Great Britain fell from 96 per cent. to 89 per cent. While the Asiatic countries are thus making rapid strides, our European competitors are not marking time. Italy has doubled in two years her export of piece goods. The fact that in 1924 Italy imported double as much textile machinery as in 1922 conveys its own warning for the future. Side by side with the development of the cotton industry in foreign countries, which formerly depended solely upon external supplies, mainly British, must be set the handicap of tariffs. On piece goods the Indian duty has risen from 3 1/2 per cent. ad valorem in 1914 to 11 per cent. in 1924, and the Chinese duty by almost 300 per cent. All the time British firms, struggling desperately against these adverse factors abroad, are being rated and taxed at home almost out of existence.

Mr. Lee's final message is that to win back our old-time prosperity we must rely upon quality rather than quantity, quality derived from efficiency raised to the highest pitch.—News of the World.

Household Notes

If a bronze inkstand is lined with paraffin it will not become so stained. Apricot fritters are delicious served dusted with powdered sugar. Rooty vegetables for winter use should be stored in a clean, dry place. With chilled maple sponge serve a custard sauce flavoured with vanilla. Try candying a few cranberries as a confection and for decorating food cakes.

Wash That Itch Away

There is absolutely no suffering from eczema who ever used this soothing wash, and did not feel immediately that wonderfully calm, cool sensation that comes when the itch is taken away. It penetrates the pores, gives instant relief from the most distressing skin diseases.

Proof of Czar's Death Required

Russian Prince Seeks Personal Estate Dead Monarch Owned In U. S.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(A.P.)—The stories and rumors of the death of Czar Nicholas II. of Russia and his immediate family following the Russian revolution must be sifted until actual proof of death further than has been presented and the order of devolution of the members of the family is produced, before local courts will take action regarding the personal estate of the late Czar in this country. Surrogate John O'Brien yesterday named three requirements when Prince Serge Georgievitch Romanovsky now a resident of New York, applied for letters of administration for credits held in the United States. The prince claims to be a blood cousin and nearest living kin of the Russian monarch.

The court required the order of death of members of the family, stating that upon the point whether the Czar or the Czarina died first would rest the order of precedence of the heirs of the estate. No value was placed upon the estate and this information also was required by Prince Serge.

Opportunity for the Scholar

In the struggle of modern society for wealth the finer ideals are lost, and no one is better fitted to bring back these ideals than the college-bred man. It is a temptation for the scholar to hold himself aloof from action; but he need not yield to temptation, and he ought not. It is the scholar who is best fitted to grapple with great public questions. He ought to teach society that there is not so much need in the world of more charity as of more justice. Charity clothes and feeds the poor, but if there were justice between man and man in all the walks of life there would be but few poor to clothe and to feed. But the efforts of the scholar, and of every one who seeks the good of the world, must be based upon religion, or success will not come.—Dr. G. C. Lorimer.

If You Use Lamps—

You will find that if the wick is soaked in vinegar and dried before being used the lamp will not smoke. Camphor or a pinch of carbon added to the oil will make it burn brighter. The oil will last longer if a tablespoonful of vinegar is added to it. As the vinegar does not burn away it should be poured off occasionally and replenished with fresh.

Before using a new chimney it should be placed in a pan of cold water and brought to the boil. Allow it to cool before drying it. This will harden the glass and it will last much longer.

A smoky chimney is best cleaned by being plunged into warm vinegar and water to which a little salt has been added. This will loosen the soot, and it will be easy to clean and polish the chimney with tissue paper.

The new sweaters open down the front and have patch pockets.

Gas Cloud Attack

SEASIDE SMOKE SCREEN.

WEYMOUTH—Thousands of holiday makers here recently saw three warships take part in experiments with a new type of smoke screen containing a secret poison gas.

The three ships—the battle cruiser Tiger, the light cruiser Champion, and the destroyer Rob Roy—were enveloped in the poison smoke with the object of discovering what the effect would be.

The vessels anchored off the Admiralty Pier, on which 600 of the smoke and gas cylinders were lined up in rows, and a small group of Royal Engineers wearing gas masks waited for the signal to light them.

At 4 o'clock the smoke began to pour in a great white mass across the bay, completely obscuring the ships.

This screen, however, did not contain any gas. For 40 minutes it rolled across the bay, parts of which were obscured, widening and thinning as it approached the mainland. When it struck the cliff it spread over the land and caused some discomfort to the people near Lulworth Cove.

Two Fold Object.

At 6.30 another screen was set up. This time it contained some gas. This new smoke screen has a two fold object. It obscures the warship which sent it out and, enveloping the enemy ship with its deadly gas, penetrates to every part of the vessel. The heavy smoke creeps across of the sea until it reaches the object, when it rises.

The screen is so much like a thick

When Convicts Quarrel

LAW-BREAKERS AT LOGGER-HEADS.

In the exercise ground of Wormwood Scrubs there was recently a savage fight. The prisoners were walking in circles under the supervision of warders when one man, leaping from his place, sprang upon another and threw him to the ground.

So sudden was the attack that the man on the ground had a number of teeth knocked out before the nearest warder could reach the spot. Not one of the other prisoners attempted to interfere, and there were mutters of "Serve him right!" from most of them. The victim was that most unpopular of all prisoners, an informer, and his sentence had been shortened because he had turned witness for the Crown at a recent trial.

When Convicts Quarrel

LAW-BREAKERS AT LOGGER-HEADS.

In the exercise ground of Wormwood Scrubs there was recently a savage fight. The prisoners were walking in circles under the supervision of warders when one man, leaping from his place, sprang upon another and threw him to the ground.

So sudden was the attack that the man on the ground had a number of teeth knocked out before the nearest warder could reach the spot. Not one of the other prisoners attempted to interfere, and there were mutters of "Serve him right!" from most of them.

The victim was that most unpopular of all prisoners, an informer, and his sentence had been shortened because he had turned witness for the Crown at a recent trial.

An Informer's Fate.

In the Indian prison of Allpore a man named Goswami, who had turned informer, was actually shot dead by two other prisoners, who had somehow obtained possession of revolvers.

A well-known burglar or bank robber is usually quite a hero in gaol, and other convicts are as pleased to be noticed by him as an ordinary person would be if singled out by one of the Royal Family. But there are other convicts so hated by their fellow prisoners that they have to be constantly guarded by the officers.

We all know how unpopular the weak is at school. Any prisoner who complains to the officers of a fellow prisoner is from that moment a marked man. No one will speak to him. He is scowled at by all, and such a man is lucky if he is not sooner or later the victim of an "accident."

"Sent To Coventry."

Much depends upon the sort of offence for which a man has been committed to gaol. A certain man was sentenced to penal servitude for life for causing the death of his wife, who had succumbed to a long course of bullying and starvation.

As usual, every man in the prison knew all about the case, and not one prisoner would have anything to do with him. He was set to work with a farm party, but not one would walk or work near him, and in the end the Governor was obliged to remove him and give him a menial job inside the prison, where he could work alone.

Another type of convict who is generally loathed is the "receiver." When one is caught and sentenced there is sure to be someone in the prison who has been swindled by him in the past; the warden goes round, and the wretched man finds nothing but black looks from all. His punishment is a very heavy one.

Curd His Cough.

Prisoners do not like a man whose personal habits are dirty and objectionable. At Pentridge, the big convict prison of New South Wales, a man of this type was boycotted. The others refused to work when he came into the shop, and in the end the fellow had to be transferred to another prison.

In another case a man who coughed all night and so kept other prisoners awake became so unpopular that he was shifted to a solitary cell under the roof. He then speedily gave up coughing.

Prisoners will not tolerate hectoring or bullying. For some weeks a member of a quarry gang hounded and bullied all the rest. At last one, a quiet-looking fellow, turned and hit him. A fight followed, the warden in charge refusing to interfere until the bully was knocked out.

The 150th Anniversary

Of The Congregational Church.

From our advertising columns will be seen that next week is a very important one for the members and adherents of the Queen's Road Congregational Church. It is to be a week of special services and meetings in celebration of the formation of the Church exactly 150 years ago. The founder of the Church was Sergeant Major John Jones of the Royal Artillery, who was afterwards ordained in England, and returning to St. John's became the first regular minister. The original members were only seven in number, Jones himself, a sergeant of his Company, the sergeant's wife, three private soldiers, and the town-schooler! With daring faith these seven formally constituted themselves into an Independent Church, and drew up rules for their own guidance and government. Their first meeting place was Jones' room in the barracks. The beginning was thus very lowly, but the foundations were well and truly laid, for the Church has continued to this day and has been a force for righteousness ever since.

Next Sunday is to be observed as Anniversary Day, when the morning preacher will be the Minister of the Church, Rev. D. L. Nichol, and the special preacher in the evening will be Principal J. Lewis Paton, M.A. Mr. Paton has rapidly won his way into the affection and respect of the people of St. John's. We know him to be a man of many gifts—a great teacher of youth, a great educationalist, a great citizen. Sunday evening will provide an opportunity to see him in another role, that of a preacher, a setter-forth of the spiritual significance of life.

Bits of Science

Efforts to fix the date of the first appearance of man on earth have proved futile. We can only fall back upon the methods used in geology. Man as we find him now first appeared in the concluding phase of the Pleistocene period as the artist of the caves at a time when the British Isles formed part of the Continent of Europe.

The fastest woman swimmer can only travel 85 per cent. as fast as the fastest man. The reason is that, although her skill is presumably just as great, she cannot exert the same power as man. In running the maximum speed of a woman is 75 per cent. that of a man.

The world's record long jump for a man is 25.5 feet, and for a woman 15.9 feet. The high jump records are respectively 6.61 feet and 5 feet.

Thirteen years ago 125,000 tons of traffic passed by the "Elephant and Castle," London, every year. To-day the amount has swollen to 155,000 tons. Traffic at Hyde Park Corner has grown from 98,000 tons in 1912 to 140,000 tons; at Trafalgar Square from 85,000 to 127,000; and at Piccadilly Circus from 92,000 to 117,000.

Some fish move their teeth to facilitate the absorption of their prey. Their stomachs have almost an almost infinite capacity. One specimen caught contained inside a fish three times its own normal size. There was one extraordinary species which had developed bone to form a complete fishing rod, to which was attached a long line, and then a bait, and then actual fish hooks. Others had developed rows upon rows of teeth, and apparently the prey was passed on from row to row until it was engulfed in the stomach.

Fungus Disease of the Locust

The mysterious epidemic that recently freed the northern part of South Africa from most of its locusts in a few hours has been traced by Dr. S. K. Skiffie to a parasite fungus known as Empusa Gryllus. The infected locusts climb to the tops of stems of grass and twigs of bushes, and die usually in the late afternoon with their heads pointing upward. In an hour or two a white furry growth of innumerable threads appears on the dead body. On top of each thread is a characteristic pear-shaped spore containing a drop of oil, and as thread absorbs moisture it bursts, projecting the spore to a distance. In warm, moist weather, great numbers of the spores are shot out into space. This occurs chiefly at night, when the locusts are collected in great clusters, and those near the dead insects are struck by the spores. The skin is penetrated, a fine thread sent into the body soon causing death. Under favorable conditions, spores do not strike locusts develop secondary spores, which shoot in all directions, spreading the scourge near and far. Warmth and moisture are essential to the fungus, and thus far attempts to grow it artificially have failed. Locusts in all stages are attacked, although other insects are immune.

STOCK MARKET NEWS

Furnished by Johnston & Ward, Board of Trade Building, Water Street

Table with columns for 'NEW YORK, Oct. 15', 'TO-DAY'S NEW YORK OPENING', and 'Montreal Opening'. Lists various commodities like Wheat, Oil, and Metals with their respective prices and changes.

The next two years will see the most revolutionary changes in the history of motor cars. The overweight car cannot survive even in the limited quantities in which the highest priced automobiles are produced today.

The whole industry has recognized the arrival of the compact, light but high quality popular-priced car which caused an about-face in popular taste, and I unhesitatingly predict that within two years the most luxurious cars will have followed in the same path.

The new type in the higher price field will be a larger and roomier car than the existing successful models in the popular field, will contain all the quality and luxury that can be built into a car, and will offer extremes in performance that will surpass anything now manufactured.

The coming exclusive car will have 100 horsepower and be able to attain without heating continuous high speeds up to 90 miles an hour for sustained intervals. Riding comfort in this future car will surpass anything at any price which now moves on wheels.

An era in unexampled motor car performance is in the offing. These results will be brought about by superior design and a manufacturing integrity the secrets of which have only been revealed since the light, compact car came into existence two years ago.

This evolution in exclusive cars will also be accompanied by 25 per cent reduction in cost, Mr. Chrysler believes. The following is his prediction when asked: "What is the next important change to be expected in the motor industry?"

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

THE BIBLE AT WEMBLEY. LONDON, Oct. 15. "King George has let it be known that he reads a chapter of the Bible every day." Rear Admiral A. R. Elmdon said today in a speech at a Bible and Empire demonstration at Wembley. The Admiral condemned Bolshevism on account of its rejection of the Bible.

AN EAST END NEW YORK INCIDENT. NEW YORK, Oct. 15. The police last night found three men sitting about a card table in a little east side room as still as though a spell had been cast upon them while they played. It had been a friendly game they had been playing, but apparently only the winners had been gassed. The police went to the room in response to the report of the landlady that the gas was escaping.

GERMANY AGREES TO THE RHINE PACT. LOCARNO, Oct. 15. Germany today officially announced her adherence to the Rhine pact of mutual guarantees framed at the Security Conference here with the object of outlawing war. The pact will be signed by Germany, France and Belgium as principal parties, and by Great Britain and Italy as guarantors.

Misconduct at War Memorial TO BE PUNISHED BY FLOGGING. Four boys, whose ages range from 8 to 10 years, appeared before Judge Morris this morning, on a charge of loose and disorderly conduct at the War Memorial, on the evening of the 10th inst. The prosecution was brought by Constable Trickett, who stated that the boys were climbing on the statue and one had gone so high that he could not get down until the policeman helped him. A fine of $1.00 each was imposed.

Judge Morris, in imposing sentence, gave the youths a sound lecture and warned them that a repetition of their behaviour would be punished by flogging. He said they were all old enough to know the difference between right and wrong, but he believed they did not fully comprehend what they were doing. He pointed out that it was not a place to engage in play; that it was as sacred as the graveyards, and should be looked upon by them with pride and joy, as it is a memorial to our bravest and best, erected by the fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters of everyone.

Boys, he said, had no more right to play there than in the cemeteries, and he would not tolerate disorderly conduct by either old or young. His Honor then recounted how one of the Great Generals, Field Marshal Earl Haig, came across the Atlantic to unveil the Memorial, and how it was consecrated by the Bishops and Clergy of all the Churches, so that it was representative of all creeds and classes. He then told them that in passing the Memorial they should raise their caps as a mark of respect. As it was their first offence a fine of $1.00 was imposed. A warning was given to them for the benefit of others that in future, misconduct around the Memorial would be punished not by a fine of dollars and cents, but by stripes with a birch rod. The parents of the boys were present in court and paid the fines.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR SORE FEET.

Supreme Court

(Before Mr. Justice Kent.)

James Morgan, Plaintiff, vs. Wm. Morgan defendant.—Yesterday afternoon, Mr. Curtis, for defendant was heard in argument. Mr. R. Parsons, for plaintiff, was heard in closing.

Mr. High Garland appeared with Mr. Parsons for the plaintiff. Judgment for the plaintiff for $23.00 damages was given. The question of injunction was reserved pending a decision in the matter of Butler, Administrator vs. Wm. Morgan, Plaintiff; costs to be taxed and defendant is to pay plaintiff two-thirds thereof. It is further ordered that an injunction issue restraining the plaintiff from interfering with the defendant in the use of a well, and that unless defendant restores a door which he damaged to as good a condition as it was before, the amount of such damages is to be assessed and added to the above amount of $23.00.

Magistrate's Court A labourer convicted of a breach of Section 24, Sub-Section 3, of the Alcoholic Liquors Act, was fined $200 or in default three months imprisonment.

Two young women of disreputable character were arraigned before Court this morning, charged with stealing $130, the property of a taxi-driver, on the night of the 14th inst. Before answering to the charge, one of the girls admitted to having stolen the money. She was sent down for six months without the option of a fine. The other girl who had nothing to do with the larceny was discharged. According to the evidence submitted, $64 of the stolen money had been recovered.

A drunk was fined $1.00 or three days and blacklisted. A second drunk was discharged.

Seven parties summoned for non-payment of dog license fees made good the amounts.

Two Norwegian captains who imbibed too freely last night, made trouble for the occupants in a downtown boarding house, and it got so hot for a time that one of the men attacked the proprietor, besides damaging the locks on the doors. The police upon being called to the scene placed the trouble makers under arrest, but they were later released on a deposit of $25.00. When the case was called this morning the foreigners did not appear, but the Proprietor upon being called gave evidence of the rowdiness which took place.

The ringleader of the two who had bashed a bag of tomatoes over the Proprietor's head, besides damaging the lock, was fined $10.00 or in default 30 days imprisonment. The second man got off with a $1.00 fine.

Wet Weather Damages Potato Crop Farmers are complaining that the recent wet weather has played havoc with their potatoes. Rats, too, are also taking their toll. One farmer on the Cove Road caught within a week 20 rats by traps which he set in his potato fields. Blight is the immediate cause of the loss, and those with crops so affected state that on low land they can scarcely find a sound tuber. One farmer on the Thorburn Road out of 20 barrels found only two sound enough to put in cellar for the winter. It is the general opinion that there will be a shortage of local seed for next spring.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR COLDS, MARRIED.

Both Sides Find a "Kick" in the Church Dry Report

CHIEF CONCLUSIONS OF THE CHURCH "DRY" REPORT.

We cannot yet tell whether Prohibition is really successful. "Dry" and "wet" publicly matter is unrelaxable. Evils due to alcohol have been less during the Prohibition period than during previous years, but during the more recent Prohibition years they show a tendency to increase.

The abolition of the saloon is universally acknowledged as a definite gain, especially as benefiting the working classes.

The effect of Prohibition on crime can not yet be determined.

The effect on business is impossible to measure, although Prohibition is partly responsible for the increase of savings deposits and the diversion of buying power from alcoholic beverages to various forms of consumers' goods.

It can not be proved that Prohibition is responsible for the decline of respect for law or the revolt of youth against moral conventions.

Until the recent reorganization of enforcement agencies, no adequate effort had been made to enforce the Volstead Law. The Federal Government should be able practically to eliminate smuggling and large-scale bootlegging, and prevent illegal use of industrial alcohol and bonded liquor. The retail trade is beyond its power, and must be handled by State and local authorities.

The present extent of violation is unknown. The total amount of liquor consumed has been greatly reduced, but this is no measure of the success of Prohibition, since the moral problem resulting from illicit traffic is out of proportion to its volume.

There are indications that the business community and industrial labor are hostile to the present form of Prohibition, while the majority of newspapers are favorable. Developments in certain States indicate election-time sentiment toward, rather than away from, rigid Prohibition. But the "wet" minority, especially in the great cities, is large enough to make thoroughgoing enforcement impossible. Since a large portion of our population is opposed to Prohibition, in order to make Prohibition successful, the churches and "dry" organizations must try to change the minds of the people by energetic and sustained educational effort.

Both wets and dry find a "kick" in the church report on Prohibition which stimulates them to increased activity in their perennial warfare. "Here," says the wets in effect, "is ammunition from the camp of the enemy that will serve us in our fight to modify or repeal the Volstead Law." "Here," says the dries, "is a rousing summons to greater effort in the campaign for enforcement, for the education of public sentiment, and for a non-alcoholic nation." In the main, neither side seriously challenges the report's accuracy as a record of facts, although the Rev. D. Clarence Wilson, general secretary of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Church, is widely quoted by the press as saying: "If the writer of the articles for the Federal Council of Churches is not getting anything from the National Association opposed to Prohibition he is a fool. It is exactly the kind of stuff that organization pays for," a statement that is roundly criticized by many newspapers.

But the suspicions suggested by Dr. Wilson are answered by Dr. John A. Marquis, general secretary of the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church and chairman of the administrative committee of the Federal Council of Churches, who states that the report was issued after a year of investigation, "in the conviction that the handling of great social tasks like Prohibition requires knowledge of facts, favorable or unfavorable." And the Anti-Saloon League, in its official comment on this much discussed document, admits its substantial accuracy and welcomes it as a challenge to believers in Prohibition to fight harder than ever for the cause. The candid and dispassionate tone of the report moves the Detroit News to remark that "what-ever the subject the Federal Council of Churches speaks on in the future, it will have a new note of authority for millions," and the Federal Council, the Norfolk-Virginian Pilot reminds us, speaks for a group of Protestant evangelicals churches whose membership totals 21,000,000.

The report of the investigators for the churches warns the Prohibitionists that their cause is still on trial, and that public opinion must decide the issue. Friends of Prohibition "failed to realize that the battle was only half won when the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted," remarks the Utica Press; and the Indianapolis News reminds them that "with the Prohibition statute in force, the need for education as to the evils of alcohol and the moral meaning of temperance is as great as it ever was—perhaps greater." "Only a tremendous drive of publicity can obtain the attitude of intelligent sympathy toward the law recommended by the Mysteries of the Deep.

The largest creature known, living or extinct, is the sulphur bottomed whale, which reaches a length of ninety feet. Its weight has not been determined, but a torpedo boat of the same length and of the same underwater contour would displace 37 tons.

All whales are carnivores, but all the fishes—cuttle-fish and smaller creatures—upon which they feed are dependent ultimately upon plant life for their existence. How much vegetable material does it take to support a whale?

If the approximate thirty tons represented by a very large whale were incorporated in the bodies of cattle, the latter would require for their support each day the amount of fats and carbohydrates present in the hay yielded by an acre of good meadow land in a whole season's growth.

The oceanic plants can only live to a maximum depth of about 650 feet, and at that depth only in the most transparent water; but the animals that feed upon them form the food of other animals which live deeper, in perpetual shade, and these again furnish food for other, though fewer, animals that live still farther down, in perpetual night. The oceanic animals extend downwards for an indefinite distance, becoming less and less varied and gradually scarcer and more uniform in size; probably, indeed, no level of the sea is entirely without them.

Well out of sight, but probably in the twilight zone, where food is most abundant and conditions are practically the same in all the oceans except the extreme north and south, live giant squids and cuttles of several kinds, the largest reaching a total length of at least fifty-five ft., with the body twenty feet long and twelve feet in circumference, and the jaws opening seven by nine inches.

The Halifax Marathon Sweep is a sports sweep. First prize, $2,500; 2nd prize, $1,000, and so on, the total aggregating $6,450. Ask for the ticket in the blue envelope, 10c. each.—oct15.31

Mid-Ocean Tidal Station

A submerged ocean station, on the plan of the "artificial island" proposed by Prof. R. W. Wood for observing deep-sea tides, has been used by Swedish oceanographers for fifteen years in studying the submarine tidal currents off the coast of Sweden. The station is a large buoy with a net buoyancy of about 650 pounds, and double anchorage by cable diverging about 120 degrees keeps it at a fixed depth of some 80 feet, just deep enough to avoid shipping. Recording current meters attached to this buoy at any desired depth take observations of the current every thirtieth minute for a fortnight without recharging. So far this submerged buoy has been employed only at depths of about 100 yards, and the weight of anchors and necessary wire-rope would be a difficulty to overcome in deep waters. For a considerable time, however, the Swedish hydrographers had had in mind the idea of a submarine hydrographic station with a complete equipment in the open sea. This would require two buoys anchored some distance apart, with visible flag-staffs to give a base-line; and in connection would be provided such apparatus as thermographs for indicating water temperatures, drifters and recording current-meters for taking horizontal movements, and balanced submarine floats and pressure-gauges for measuring the vertical rise and fall of the ocean tides.

Hints for Your Home

TROUBLE-SAVING TIPS. When baking small cakes or buns, flour the tins instead of greasing them. The cakes will not stick to the tins, and will bake quite as well. If the blue tag is twisted round the water in which glasses are to be washed, they will sparkle when dried and polished. To prevent a ladder in a stocking take a piece of damp soap and rub it on the place where the silk thread has broken. When putting cakes in airtight tins, do not put them in straight from the oven, but see that they are quite cold. A metal teapot will not become rusty if, after use, it is wiped dry and a lump of sugar put into it. When washing silk stockings use warm branwater instead of soap and water. One part of borax to two of honey or glycerine is an excellent remedy for a sore throat. Rusty irons can be cleaned with soft soap and bath-brick.

"Her Marriage Vow"

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Last night at the Majestic Theatre, "Her Marriage Vow," the Warner Brothers' screen version of the Owen Davis stage play had its premiere opening. This picture easily excelled many others we have seen here for pictorial beauty and clever acting. Beverly Bayne renewed her acquaintance with the moving picture camera after an absence of three years. And we are pleased to say that she has not lost any of her former beauty or acting skill. Monte Blue co-starred with Beverly Bayne and never before did any team of actors receive such prolonged applause for their wonderful acting. Their work throughout the picture was of intense pathos interspersed with subtle comedy. John Roche and Margaret Livingston were in the cast and both played their parts very well. Willard Louis, whose very appearance upon the screen puts everybody in a jovial mood, brilliantly portrayed his role. The story is a thrilling episode of a married woman who leaves her two small children home alone and visits her girl friend's apartment. There she meets her old sweetheart. They have a number of cocktails. Her husband comes home just in time to stop one of the children from taking poison. He immediately goes to his wife's friend's apartment, where he sees his wife being killed by his former rival. He orders his wife from his house and he keeps the children. During a great storm his wife steals into his house to see the children. She is about to kidnap them when he catches her. She pleads and begs to be forgiven, claiming she has not broken her marriage vow. Finally he forgives her for the children's sake. "The Marriage Vow" will be repeated to-night, whilst on Friday and Saturday, "The Cyclone Rider" is the feature.

PROVES KIPLING WAS RIGHT.

Kipling's first name is not Solomon, but posterity will call him a wise man just the same. It was Kipling who said "the female of the species is more deadly than the male," and every day brings fresh evidence to prove that he was right. From time to time the idea has been used by writers as a theme for a novel or a short story but it remained for Cynthia Stockley, famous woman author, to prove that not only is the female more dangerous than the male, but she is also more ferocious than the king of beasts. Miss Stockley's "Dalla, the Lion Cub," has been adapted to the screen by Agnes Christine Johnston and produced by Sam Wood for the Paramount organization. Under the film title "The Female," the picture opened at the Star Theatre last evening. Betty Compson has the stellar role and is ably supported by a superlative cast which includes among others, Warner Baxter, Noah Beery, Dorothy Cummings and Freeman Wood. Like most of Miss Stockley's stories, "The Female" has an African locale. It is a story of primitive love and savage hate—of an uncultured, madcap Boer girl who excites a strange fascination over the men she meets. Many men try to conquer her only to learn to their sorrow that she is well named "the lion cub." The man she loved looked up on her as an ignorant little savage. What she does when she finally realizes the gulf that lies between them furnishes some of the most thrilling drama ever flashed on the screen. "By all means see this picture!"

The Halifax Marathon Sweep Committee is defraying the entire expenses of O'Toole, Bell, Stone and Ralph, Newfoundland's Track Team in the big road race, which is to be pulled off at Halifax on Saturday.

Resolution of Condolence

At the regular monthly meeting of the Nfld. British Society held Monday, Oct. 6th, 1925, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

WHEREAS it has pleased the Great Ruler of the Universe to call to Himself the soul of our most esteemed Brother James M. Lawrence, who for fifty-two years (52) was a faithful and active member of the Newfoundland British Society; and

WHEREAS we have sustained an irreparable loss, but we bow in humble submission to the Divine Will; and

WHEREAS this organization feels deeply the great loss it has sustained in the passing from our midst of a beloved Brother. Be it therefore

RESOLVED that we tender to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and condolence in their sad affliction, and express the hope that He who doeth all things for the best will be their help and support; and be it further RESOLVED we ask the bereaved family to accept, on behalf of the Newfoundland British Society, and Albert Edward Branch, this expression of our deepest sympathy.

Signed:—Chas. W. Bowden, President; Harry Cowan, Vice-President; Arthur Miller, Secretary; George H. Cook, Treasurer; W. J. Bugden, 1st Committee Man; J. M. Carberry, Past President; George Hammond, Chairman Board of Guardians.

Markets With Eskimos by Auto For First Time.

Herd Lake, Man., Oct. 8.—Far to the north of here, a small automobile chug its way over the ice and snow the first vehicle of its kind to invade the land of the Eskimo.

It was taken into the Far North by John Harris, who has returned to his home there after marketing a large number of furs here.

On his visit to civilization, Harris brought his Eskimo wife and three children. "Just to give them a treat," and if wide and wondering eyes were a criterion, it was a treat for them. When he returned, he took with him the small automobile, besides a large stock of provisions and goods, to be used in trading with the natives. So far as is known here, it will be the first automobile in this section of the north.

Harris also took a power boat with him, which is built in sections, and when he left the railroad he planned to put the boat together, transfer the automobile engine to the boat, and proceed under that power as far as possible.

Harris said he would have no trouble running the automobile over the hard packed snow as he made his rounds in trading with the Eskimos.

Fads and Fashions

One frock features the long waists, lines with the skirt gathered on.

The circular sounce treatment is especially nice for chiffon velvet.

The high collar is not stiffened, but fitted with a turn-over finish.

Very tasteful is the three-strand bracelet of small, graduated pearls.

The circular skirt may be attached in a pointed or straight line.

The Penitentiary

MR. G. W. B. AYRE'S LETTER TO GRAND JURY.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—On October the 8th, I took to Mr. W. Knowling, Foreman of the Grand Jury the original of the enclosed letter. He read it in my presence. Last night I read in the "Telegraph" the Grand Jury's report re the Penitentiary and I see no reference whatever to the conditions outlined in my letter to Mr. Knowling, nor any recommendation as to bettering the conditions therein. Under the circumstances I think the interests of the public would best be served if you would publish my letter to Mr. Knowling so that the people of the country could know from one who can speak from experience, just how matters are, and then it is up to them to see that the frightful state of affairs is changed for the better.

I shall be obliged if you will also publish this note of mine.

Yours sincerely,
GEO. W. B. AYRE.

W. Knowling, Esq.,
Foreman of the Grand Jury, October, 1923.

Dear Sir,—I am anxious that certain reforms which I consider vitally necessary should be made in the running of the Penitentiary. I am therefore writing you as Foreman of the Grand Jury for this October term and, with your permission, will give you some ideas which, if placed before the other members of the Jury, must give them information which it is impossible for Grand Juries to glean from the usual inspection which they make, accompanied as they are, by the Superintendent, and other officials with whom, as a rule, they are engaged in conversation which may have the effect of diverting their eyes and minds from the many defects of the institution. I have spent 22 months as an inmate of the Penitentiary and feel that I am qualified to talk on the subject for I have had exceptional opportunities of knowing what I am going to write about.

In my opinion the object of a Penitentiary should be to fit erring men and women for citizenship so that when leaving the institution they are able to take their place in society, to be an asset to the country and not a liability. In other words they should come out virtuous and not vicious. Anything which conduces to the former should receive your commendation, anything conducing to the latter, your condemnation.

Acting upon that principle, I should like you to notice the clothing of the prisoners. When I was there some were clothed in rags that a self-respecting scarecrow would scornfully object to wear. The black and white costume should be discarded altogether and the clothing of prisoners should be such that the sense of degradation should be as far as possible removed.

The food of the prisoners should be of greater variety than a dinner of fish and potatoes three times a week and soup four times a week, while tea with molasses but without milk for breakfast and tea hardly seems the proper thing to give a person who may be there for some criminal, political or similar offence. Porridge is also given for breakfast. The method of serving and eating is brutalizing. Prisoners have their meals in their cells. No knives or forks are supplied, consequently their table manners are not such as would be accepted in the most select circles, and unfortunately they have no means of learning better so they either remain stationary or retrograde from what they were when they entered the sacred precincts. Illiterate prisoners should be taught. Those not having a trade should be taught one. They should be made useful members of society.

When I was there the cells were unlighted, but I understand that recently electric light has been put in. If so, that is one of the reforms I advocated already effected. Can you imagine any worse way to keep a man than to have his cell in winter so dark that from 4.30 until 8 the next morning it was impossible to read? The prisoners should be allowed from 7 till 10 for reading, recreation, study and general improvement; not, as in my time, sending men, fathers of families, to bed at 7 o'clock.

The men should get systematic exercise and plenty of fresh air. We were not allowed outside the door from November till May. From then till the following November one hour a day, and then only when fine. You can understand men putting on useless flesh, becoming irritable and nervous wrecks when confined for months without exercise in cells 11 feet by 7. It is an outrage and should be remedied.

There is one bath for the 60 to 80 prisoners who are usually there. The bath is in a place where coal is kept. The fish-boards and other kitchen utensils are washed in it. The men come in from the gardens, manure heaps, coal-bins, etc., and use it; consequently it is often filthy dirty and you can understand a prisoner telling me that he had not had a bath since he came into the Institution. He had been there seven years, and was the cook. Very few of the prisoners get their first bath, when they arrive, ever get another. There is no compulsion to bath, and even those who would like one, check the impulse when they take a look at its condition. There should be at least 5 or 10 baths for such a number of prisoners, and prisoners should be compelled to bath regularly.

The bath-room is also used as a place for shaving and cutting hair. The same mug, soap, brush, razor, is used by the prisoners operating, who may or may not be an expert, consequently there is at times much blasphemy when men are butchered. In spite of many prisoners having skin disease, a roller is used in which they all wipe their faces, some not troubling to wash off the soap previous to using it. Some cells have four prisoners, others three, the others are two men cells. If two vicious prisoners are together the consequences are terrible. During my stay there, there were instances of men criminally assaulting their cell mates. There should be but one prisoner in each cell. The men should be encouraged to exercise. There should be a recreation ground where they could play games.

In Sing Sing the prisoners have an athletic association, a musical association, a band. If illiterate, they are taught. If without a trade, they are taught one. If they have one, they are put to work at it. They are paid so much a week for their work. They buy their own food and clothing and consequently are careful of it. They do not have the same food twice a week. They are allowed anything they wish to eat for. They can get tobacco but not drink. Their clothing is not distinguishable from that of any free citizen. There is no sense of degradation. Prisoners are rewarded for good conduct, and the prison is practically run on the honour system. The prisoners themselves almost take charge. Prisoners are taught and encouraged to be trustworthy. They are fitted for citizenship.

The system pertaining to the Penitentiary when I was there seemed hard to beat for brutalizing a prisoner; nothing to put hope in his heart or give him ambition to be better. The consequence was that men were continually in trouble. They were continually being punished by being put on bread and water. I have seen them handcuffed, leg-ironed, chained to the floor, beaten, put in the dark cell. To experiment, I got permission from the Superintendent to have them out of their cells from 11 to 12.30 each day and I did my best to entertain and instruct them. The result was instantaneous. For the first nine weeks there was not one infraction of the rules, so that at my request the Superintendent restored the four ounces of hard-bread which, for punishment, had been deducted from their allowance. For the twenty-nine weeks I conducted my classes, the conduct of the men was exemplary. This clearly shows that all the men required is to be usefully occupied, doing something to divert their minds and attention from thinking of the terrible position in which they are placed. There may be many more things calling for reform, but what I have outlined will give you some idea of the conditions in the Penitentiary clamouring for improvement.

The institution is behind the age. Reform, and not punishment, should be the guiding principle. Your recommendation would be a great factor to bring this about. If so, you would have more than justified your confidence, and done something for your country the effect of which would be almost incalculable. When you consider that on an average twenty prisoners headed for Hell of Heaven each month leave that Institution, when you consider the effect of twenty virtuous or vicious men or women disseminated throughout the Island and what they can do to make or mar the country, then you can understand how great is the privilege and the opportunity you have to do to help in what must undoubtedly be one of the greatest reforms ever effected in this country, one with the most far-reaching results.

Trusting that you will bring this letter before your fellow-Grand Jurymen.

I remain,
Yours sincerely,
GEO. W. B. AYRE

INTER COLLEGIATE FOOTBALL.
St. Bon's Defeat Felldians 2-2.
With ideal weather conditions prevailing and with a large number of college students in attendance, the St. Bon's and Felldians' faced off for honors in the Inter Collegiate League football game yesterday, the game ending in a victory for the St. Bon's by 3 goals to 2. Both teams appeared in their strongest formation and, as was expected, a good game resulted. There was no wind and no bright sun, so that neither of the teams had any advantage in either period of the game.

First Half.
St. Bon's won the toss and decided to defend the eastern goal for the first period. As soon as the ball was centered, play was confined to St. Bon's territory, but the Felldian forwards found it difficult to get beyond the backs. Exciting play then followed near middle field, with the forwards of both teams trying hard to beat the opposing halves. Monahan, for St. Bon's, took control, and passed the leather to the left. The wing man made a splendid run up field, but the ball was captured by Rendell, who cleared down field. From then on the game grew very fast, with the Felldians mostly on the ball, but try as they would they could not get past St. Bon's back division. The result was that the brand of football was such as to keep the boys and girls keyed up with excitement. The first goal came after 15 minutes of play, when Tucker, for the Felldians, beat the St. Bon's backs, and sent in a slow-rolling shot for the corner of the goal, which completely fooled the goalkeeper. St. Bon's then put more vim into their play, and made several good attempts to equalize, but the shots sent on Smith were taken too far out to bring the desired results. A vigorous attack was kept up with Monahan keeping the play to his forwards, and on a long drive from middle field to the Felldian goal, White followed through and evaded matters with a shot which was too difficult for Smith to handle. Upon re-centering, Ellsworth took control and made a splendid run down field, eluding three of his opponents, but the ball sailed over the crossbar on the try for goal. The defence lines of both teams were playing splendidly before the half-time whistle sounded. The period ended Felldians 1; St. Bon's 1.

Second Half.
After a brief rest the teams changed over, and as soon as the ball was centered, St. Bon's brought it to the Felldian goal, where scoring was barely prevented. St. Bon's kept up the attack, and earned two corners in rapid succession. On each occasion the ball was nicely placed across, but by the good work of Rendell, and Smith, the goals, no scoring resulted. Play then advanced to middle field from there to the western goal, where the Felldian forwards made several good attempts to score. The ball was then carried to the other end of the field where a corner resulted against the Felldians. Cotter placed it to the mouth of the goal, and in a scrimmage which followed, Bailey scored No. 2 for St. Bon's.

SCOTSMAN BEATS CHAMPION.
LONDON, Oct. 9.—(C.P.)—Johnny Brown, the Scottish welterweight, defeated Harry Mason, the British light-weight champion, on points in a 20-round bout at Albert Hall last night. The opening rounds of the bout were tamely contested, Brown doing most of the leading and Mason proving very elusive. At the tenth round the Scotsman had a slight lead, but at-wards the lightweight had the better of the exchanges, frequently landing right jolts to the head as Brown bowed in. In the nineteenth round Mason staggered the Scotsman with a terrific right hook to the jaw, but Brown quickly recovered. The last round was the most exciting of the contest and saw the combatants standing toe to toe in a fierce slug-test, and they continued fighting after the sounding of the gong ended the bout, and had to be parted by their seconds. The decision of the referee, awarding the bout to Brown, was received with a storm of booms, which lasted for several minutes.

"KID" LEWIS DISQUALIFIED.
LONDON, Oct. 8.—Ted (Kid) Lewis, of England, former welterweight champion of Europe, lost to the Frenchman, Marcel Thuru, in the first round of a 15-round fight at Albert Hall to-night. He delivered a low blow and Thuru fell to the floor in agony. Lewis was disqualified.

"STRANGLER" LEWIS DEFEATS MUNN.
TULSA, Okla., Oct. 8.—"Strangler" Lewis, claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling title, defeated Wayne (Big) Munn, two falls out of three here to-night. Lewis took the first fall in 28 minutes with a head lock, Munn the second in 12 minutes with a crotch hold, and Lewis the final fall in 19 minutes with the head lock.

"Gentlemen: I noticed in your advertisement for organist, and music teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I offer you my services."
Some folks' tongues are like the clocks as ran on strikin', not to tell you the time o' the day, but because there's sommat wrong i' their inside—George Elliot.

First Landlady: "I manage to keep my boarders longer than you do."
Second Landlady: "Oh, I don't know; you keep them so thin that they look longer than they really are."
Jones: "So your friend is poverty-stricken?"
Smith: "Yes, absolutely penniless. You see, he lost his health in getting wealthy; then lost all his wealth trying to get healthy."
Mose Sampson had been arrested for helping himself illegally to a white neighbor's Wyandottes.
"Guilty or not guilty?" demanded the judge.
"Not guilty, suh!" answered the prisoner promptly.
"Have you an alibi?"
"Al-lal—say which, please, suh?"
"You heard me! Have you an alibi?"
"Oho! Yassuh! Don't onnerstan' yo at fust. Yu means de alley by which Ah 'scaped wid dem chickens!"

A composer, in setting up the toast, "Woman, without her man, would be a savage," put the comma in the wrong place, making the sentence read: "Woman, without her man, would be a savage."

Noted Director Now Appearing in Film

WM. WORTHINGTON PLAYS PART IN FILM VERSION OF "THE AWFUL TRUTH"
William Worthington, director of many screen successes among the most recent of which in "Beauty and the Bad Man," is now about to resume directorial duties after a short excursion into the acting field.

Worthington, at the moment unoccupied since he had already finished his last assignment and was not yet ready to begin on the next one, was approached by a brother director, Paul Powell, and asked to assume one of the minor roles in "The Awful Truth," the Elmer Harris production on which Powell was then working. Although for the past few years Worthington has been busy directing, before that time he played dozens of parts both on the legitimate stage

CITY OF ST. JOHN'S Municipal Council PUBLIC NOTICE

POLL TAX.

The attention of the public is called to the following sections of the St. John's Municipal Act, 1921:
Section 249: Every male person of the age of twenty-one years and upwards who has resided in the grounds of the City of St. John's for a period of twelve months immediately preceding the first day of October in any year, and who is not an owner or indirectly as tenant, payment of the city tax or property rated in the appraisal of the Council at an annual value of forty dollars or upwards shall pay to the City a Poll Tax of five dollars per annum.
Section 250: The said Poll Tax shall be due and payable without notice by or from the owner of the premises within the fifteen days of October in any year at the office of the City Clerk.
Section 251: Any person who fails to comply with the provisions of the foregoing section shall, in addition to the payment of the tax, be liable to a penalty not exceeding five dollars, or a default of payment to imprisonment not exceeding ten days.

All persons liable are hereby notified to govern themselves accordingly.

October Investment List

A new investment list, containing offerings of securities of Canada's Governments, a number of her important cities and other municipalities, and a number of odd amount bonds is now ready for distribution.
The securities of the Dominion Provinces and Municipalities are a most satisfactory type of investment, giving a maximum of security. There is, in addition, a number of attractive corporation securities included in the list, which give the investor larger incomes.
The yields vary from 4.25% to about 7.12%.
