When he was within a few hundred yards of Dawlish Beach he anchored, in the desperate hope of holding on until the sea should a little subside. He had now attracted the attention of those on shore to hisperilous situation, but it was impossible to send him aid without too great a risk of hife. Nothing could live in the broken water, with occasional heavy rollers, except wife-boat, and the life-boat was at Teignmouth. The little fellow in the dungy made up his mind that she would soon swamp where she was; so he rapidly not up his mast and sail again, weighed he anchor and stood to the westward, his craft almost on her beam ends. With lightning "precision and decision" he selected the only spot where he could possibly have landed, and boldly boaring up, he, pushed his little boat into the foamy waters. Over the first roller she wont like a sea guill, but then she was suddenly becamed, so that it seemed in evitable that she must soon broach to, be rolled over and knocked to pieces. The small mariner, however, remained perfectly collected, with his tiller in one hand and his sheet in the other. Then the gad again caught his sail, and over the second roller he went right upon the beach. There was now no need of the circumstances, took the only course which afforded the least chance of escape, and showed to use the Admiral's words! that "courar, self-reliance and judgment are the chief elements of success on such occasions."

The state of the control in New Secretary of the Secretar These are my comments, not Mr. Arch's, Mr. Arch's is almo: too inoderate a man to make con. each. He confines himself to stating acts. It is hard for an American to compachend the condition of agricultural laborers; to understand why he should work for two dollars a week, or one kind of work he does not seek another. Live in England a while, see the competition for work, note the statistics of over-population, observe the routine spirit that enters into the lives of men much higher in rank than day-laborers; remark how close society and each class of society walls itself about, how every trade and craft closes its ranks against outsiders, how impossible it is, almost, for a man who falls out ever to get in again, what a lack of enterprise and force there is for any new experiment; feel, above all, how wealth tyrannizes over poverty, and you will give over wondering that such stories as Mr Arch's can be true. You will only wonder that there should be now and then an Arch strong enough to break loose and to exhort others to break loose and to exhort others to break loose from the serfdom in which they have been held. You will find Arch's speech full of instruction and suggestion. The whole meeting was remarkable. London each less than any other place in England for the country laborer; and understands him less, ad has hardly ever shown the slightest sympathy for him. It is a sign of a new awakening that such a meeting can be gathered in such a city. It is only the beginning of the end. The unions must not be put down—they will put down some other people and things first; and the agricultural laborer is taking the first step on the road along which the artisan has already advanced a long we.

THE PREL BONUS TO THE CREDIT VALLEY RAILWAY.— It seems that steps are being taken to set aside the bonus lately granted by the County of Peel to the Credit Valley Railway. The other day Mr. Bethune, on behalf of the plaintiffs in the case, moved, before Judge Galt, that the bonus granted be set aside on the ground that among those who voted for the by-law were many who were not qualified voters. It seems that the Corporation of Peel has taken this step, and it may be that the ratepayers in that County will have another opportunity of voting on a by-law, and deciding whether they will grant a bonus to the Credit Valley or the Hamilton and North Western Railway.

The rock shown to us looked more like effiver than anything we have seen, and that which is supposed to bear tin was so lean in the trace of this metal, if a trace of which represent the metal, that it seemed difficult to discover that enough of it existed to make good the pretence that such a metal existed in it.

Nevertheless, the fact is established that tin does exist in the rock formation at Otter Head bay, on the north shore of take Superior, and, if the locality was at first "salted" to make a good speculation of the property, there was some foundation that the nature of which will depend upon the result of the assays of the ore now in hand.

FAT CATTLE FROM ABERDEENSHIRE.—To give some idea of the extent of the traffic in fat cattle, &c., from Aberdeen, Scotland, to London, the Aberdeen Free Frees mentions that in the five days ending the 13th Dec., there were sent to London from three stations in Aberdeenshire, 293 car floads of fat cattle, sheep, and pigs, containing 1,752 cattle, sheep, and twelve pigs. Last year during the same days 241 car leads were dispatched with an aggregate of 1,551 animals. Within the memory of not very old men, no fat cattle were produced in Aberdeenshire, or in the north of Scotland generally. All were sent as mere skeletons to be fatted in England. Improved farming, and especially turnip husbandry, have revolutionized the whole state of matters, and most abundant sources of supply of fat cattle for the London market, and its farmers are among the most comfortable and enterprising in the who colfociland.

THE PEEL BONUS TO THE CREDIT VALLEY RAILWAY. - It seems that steps are being taken to set aside the bonus lately granted by the County of Peel to the Credit Valley County of Peel to the Credit Valley Railway. The other day Mr. Bethune, on behalf of the plaintiffs in the case, moved, before Judge Galt, that the bonus granted be set aside on the ground that among those who voted for the by-law were many who were not qualified voters. It seems that the Corporation of Peel has taken this step, and it may be that the ratepayers in that County will have another opportunity of voting on a by-law, and deciding whether they will grant a bonus to the Credit Valley or the Hamilton and North Western Railway.

The Marquette Mining Journal of Nov 30th, says:

At last we have news from the fin mines of the North shore from an authentic source. Captain Harris and party arrived in Marquette e Monday morning, per schoener Shenans. They had several large bags containing the precious tin ore, or the racks supposed to contain the precious stuff.

That tin exists in the locality visited, the party claim there is no doubt. Some of their samples were partially assayed on Tuesday, and the product was found to be tin. How rich or poor was not ascertained, by reason of the assay not being fully completed. Further and more complete tests, ere to be made at Detroit.

The rock shown to us looked wore like.

more complete tests are to be made at Detroit.

The rock shown to us looked more like silver than anything we have seen, and that which is supposed to heart in was so lean in the trace of this metal, if a trace could be determined by the crystals, which represent the metal, that it seemed difficult to discover that enough of it existed to make good the pretence that such a metal existed in it.

Nvertheless, the fact is established that tin does exist in the rock formation at Otter Head bay, on the north shore of Lake Superior, and if the locality was at first "salted" to make a good speculation of the property, there was son; foundation upon which to by the "salt."

Further investigations are to be made the nation upon which to by the "salt."

Further of which will depend upon-the result of the assays of the ore now in hand.

THE SCENE IN THE INN.

"The darkest hour is just before the dawn," and verily it proved so now with. Allias Gibson. The very deasest point of the deep darkness into which she had been east had come, and she had resigned herself to be overwhelmed in its despair. In utter helplessness and apathetic hopelessness she lay, sobbing in her woo, and looking no longer for deliverance, when her name, pronounced in a low voice, caused her to cease her sobbing, and start half up from the couch on which she had thrown herself.

The room was but dimly lighted with a very small candle, and she wildly cast her eyes over its shadowy area, ag if half expecting to see the owner of the voice which she deemed she had heard. But she realised only total silence and utter solitude, and the crushing weight upon her heart grew heavier and more bitter.

"Oh, my very fancy mocks me now," she moaned. "Mothought 'twas Harry's voice I heart calling my name—Harry, whose coming. I have prayed for during these terrible days, and prayed in vain. Now, when it is impossible he can arrive to my aid, I am tantalised by the fancied hearing of his voice. Oh, woe is me—woe is me."

She was about to fling herselt back on the conch and give way to an acceleration of grief, when again her name, pronounced in Harry's voice, resched her ear.

"Lilias!"

"Oh, heaven!" she exclaimed, aloud. "My reason is tottering. My tottered brain conjures up that mocking sound."

"Nor Lilias... It is L. Harry."

The words electrified her. She spring up and dev to the closed door, from the olute side of which the sound seement to come.

"Oh, is this no delusion?" she cried. Cloths and Woollen. Goods of all Kinds. ARMSTRONG, McCRAE & CO'S FIRST PRIZE UNDERCLOTHING.

"Harry! Harry! If it be indeed you, speak again!"

"Hush, dear girl, or they will hear you in the room below."

"It is—it is Harry!" exclaimed Lalias, forgetting in her transport to heed, the caution which Harry had given her. "Oh, Harry, my brother, tell me you have come to save me?"

"Yes we have, George and I; both of us are here."
"George, too!" cried Lilias, hysterically, the greatness of her joy threatening to be more than the call, and here also, "Yes, dier Lilias, I am here also," and another voice, which thrilled her inmost being, for she recognised it as that of her lover, the tones of which to her were the dearest sounds on earth.

It is acknowl. edged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever in-troduced for the relief and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Threat, Pains or Sore-ness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lunga &c.
