Minister of Labor Says Company Failed to Keep Promise. ELGIN FOR RECIPROCITY

Great Mass Meeting at St. Thomas. Hear Address by Hon. Mr. Mackay and Supports Pact.

"That this mass meeting of the electors and others of East and West Elgin, assembled here today, desire to express their unbounded confidence in the proposed reciprocal trade agreement between Canada and the United States, which is now before the House of Commons at Ottawa and the Congress of the United States at Washington.

St. Thomas, April 21.—Elgin Liberals had a field day here this afternoon and evening. Not in a decade have two such gatherings been held here as those in the Grand Opera House, and the Engineers' Hall.

Hon. A. G. MacKay, leader of the Opposition, and Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, minister of labor, were the guests of honor, and both were in rare good form.

The Liberals of the riding showed unmistakably that they were solid on the reciprocity issue. A strong resolution was carried at the meeting, three only of those present voting against it.

The banquet in the evening was a splendid gathering. Over 300 sat down in the spacious hall, while a large number of citizens came later to hear the speeches.

Nothing at the afternoon meeting was more remarkable than the chairman, Mr. E. W. Cameron, of St. Thomas, past 80 years of age, he is (Continued on Page Twelve.)

THE SUM OF HUMAN KNOWLEDGE MADE ACCESSIBLE. The function of the (New Eleventh) Edition of the ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA is to enable a reader to learn, quickly, as much about any subject as anyone, except a specialist need know.

THE new Encyclopaedia Britannica is designed to meet the requirements of the present day. And it is quite as accurate to describe the present day as a period of general ignorance as to repeat the popular formula that heralds it as a period of general knowledge.

THE Limits of Individual Knowledge. NO one can know all that there is to know, all that specialists know, about his own body, about the language he speaks, the food he eats, the laws he tries to obey, about the air he breathes, about the mechanical devices his house contains or about the education his children need.

THE Uses of a Library. THE new Encyclopaedia Britannica is for convenience described as a library of reference, because no other phrase so clearly indicates its nature. The phrase is generally used to denote a collection of miscellaneous books of information such as very few persons can either possess or habitually use.

Information in the One Form Useful to All. THE distinguished specialists who wrote the articles in the new Encyclopaedia Britannica give the general reader information in the one form in which it is of use to him. An hour after he has desired to know something about a bridge, he desires to know something about a city, a law, a disease, a picture, a machine, a battle, an animal or a plant.

A Reservoir of Knowledge. THE new Encyclopaedia Britannica is one of the most valuable and original of modern achievements. The sum of human energy devoted to one purpose, the co-operation in the task of many of the foremost men in various parts of the world, and the incalculable usefulness of the result, combine to make the production of the work an event of the greatest international importance.

Advantage in Price. To those who apply at once, in advance of publication, there is offered a great advantage in price, for such advance applications will be accepted at the rate of $4.00 a volume (cloth), or $4.25 a volume for India paper, instead of $7.50, which will be the ultimate price of the new edition in its cheapest form, as it was the price at which the volumes of the 9th edition were originally sold.

Besides the musical numbers presented by the Seventh Regiment, there were some exhibitions of extremely clever dancing by Miss Gladys Carter, who scored an especial triumph in her "Middy Dance," and by the pupils of Mrs. Alice Henderson, Miss E. New York, April 21.—Optimism continues to be the prominent feature in the dispatches to Dun's review from the branch offices of R. G. SCARLET FEVER CASES

Board of Health Discussed the Situation and Passed a Batch of Resolutions.

Moved by Dr. W. J. Stevenson, seconded by Dr. E. Williams, the Medical Health Officer Hutchinson visited houses as soon as scarlet fever is reported, and get all available information regarding the outbreak. That he personally visit the house again at the expiration of the quarantine and see that it is thoroughly disinfected, and that he inspect all patients that leave Victoria Hospital.

The above resolutions were unanimously passed at the special meeting of the board of health held last night to deal with the prevalence of scarlet fever in this city.

The resolutions were proposed at the suggestion of Dr. Hutchinson before the meeting.

Ald. W. J. Stevenson was particularly outspoken in regard to the matter. He told of an outbreak in South London caused by a child that had the disease being let out of Victoria Hospital, and instead of another person being sent to another part of the city, and now scarlet fever is going through that house.

"The whole family has it now," said Dr. Stevenson. "There is another feature. The law states that the medical health officer shall take down after the quarantine term has expired. I am not supposed to do this. Dr. Hutchinson should keep track of these things. It is not the part of this board to do all these things, but of certain people who have been appointed to do them."

A Little Personal.
Dr. Stevenson said that Dr. Hutchinson did not see all the patients, as he had never seen at all.

Not Satisfactory.
Dr. Hutchinson said that he was very reliable, although sometimes when there were a number of cases he could not attend to them all, but he thought with the people.

There was bitter feeling on both sides, and the investigation revealed many illegal practices by individuals, as well as an amazing collection of forgeries. OUTGUESSING THE BATTER--BY CHRISTY MATHEWSON

No pitcher, no matter how powerful or agile, can hope to become a great performer without being thoroughly equipped from the shoulders up. It isn't the iron in the arm that makes a pitcher, because lots of longshoremen could snap a pitcher's arm in two with a single twist. It's the combination of brain and body, the perfect cooperation of mind and muscle, that make a man a successful major league pitcher.

MATHEWSON HAS A "HEAD" AND THAT'S WHY HE OUTGUESSES BATTERS AND WINS

Christy Mathewson has been pitching for the New York Giants for ten years. He has won 267 games and lost 113 at a percentage of 70. He is one of the best pitchers in the world. He is a right hander and a fast ball pitcher. He is a pitcher who can outguess the batter. He is a pitcher who can outguess the batter and win.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON.

Joe Tucker, of the Cubs, is a man with whom I have fought many a battle of wits, and I am glad to acknowledge that he has come out of the struggle with a clean conscience. There was a time when Tucker was partly in my hands. His weakness was a low curve on the outside and a fast ball on the inside. I had him looking for a while before he came to the plate.

Then Joseph went home one night and did a little deep thinking. He got a nice long ball, and took his stand at home a few times. He was in a bad way, not because his natural pitching ability had diminished, but because he did not know how to use it.

Some batters, a few of the class, have a weakness that the most studious pitcher can detect. Men like Hans Wagner and Ladd don't care much what the opposing batter is up to. They start well back from the plate, and when the ball is on the inside they are ready for it. If you keep it on the outside, they simply reach out and catch it.

When I am facing a new batter for the first time, I pay particular attention to two things: how he stands, and how he holds his bat. If he holds his bat out and toward the middle, he is a right hander, and if he holds it in and toward the inside, he is a left hander. I can tell you that a batter who stands with his feet wide apart and his bat held out toward the middle is a right hander.

UNDERWOOD CLOSES TRADE DEBATE

Says Shackles of the Republican Tariff Must Be Cast Off.

TO REDUCE LIVING COST

Declares That Tariff Not Dare Impose Maximum Tariff on Canada.

Washington, April 26. (Herald) The question of honest competition, Representative Underwood, chairman of the ways and means committee, closed the debate on the Canadian reciprocity agreement in the House today.

"For fifty years," he said, "the Republican party has maintained the policy of excluding from the home market as far as it has been able to do so, competitive products from other markets. The beginning of this policy was inaugurated with the express decision that it was intended to stand upon to stand alone and free in the open, the markets of the world and the rivalry of our native competitors."

"We would be unwilling masters of production and industry in every way where free competition can be obtained, if we would but strike off the shackles that bind us to the dead system maintained by the Republican party, that creates false standards and wasteful conditions at home."

Mr. Underwood contended that the nation would turn from these standards, carefully avoiding the laws to meet new conditions without serious injury to capital or labor, in order to reduce the cost of living at home, and be prepared to dispose of surplus products to insure stability of prices and employment to labor.

Strike Off Shackles

"The Democratic party," he continued, "does not intend to abandon the custom houses, but favors a policy of levying custom duties for revenue purposes only at rates that will not destroy fair and honest competition in the home market. I say that this bill makes an error in the direction of the nation. Why? Not that the immediate results will be far-reaching, but it takes one step in the right direction."

How I Killed My Superfluous Hair

Even After Beauty Doctors, Electricity, Powders Pastes and Liquid Depilatories Failed.

[From a Correspondent.]
"Killed" seems a strong word to use, but that is just what I wanted to do to the hair that disfigured my face as I am. I wanted to kill it not and all, so that it would never live again. It spoiled my looks, made me seem old and masculine, and hence interfered with both social and business success.

I tried the ordinary depilatories and depilatories, but found them worthless— even dangerous. From a so-called specialist, I secured electrolytic treatment. It was both expensive, but I would have stood the suffering and cost had I not found that the needle electrolysis left my face scars that are even worse than the disfiguring hair itself.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Washington, April 21.—President Taft's Canadian reciprocity agreement, supported by all but a handful of Democrats and opposed by a majority of the Republicans, passed the House of Representatives early this evening by a vote of 265 to 89.

With nearly 300 Democrats in control, and their action endorsed by a large body of the Republicans, the bill to put the agreement in force was adopted with no amendments and in almost identical form in the session of the preceding Congress.

The bill seeks to put into effect the formula agreement reached between President Taft and members of the Canadian cabinet for a reduction of tariff rates on many articles and free trade in many other articles across the Canadian border. Added to it by the Democratic leaders is a section which "authorizes and requests" President Taft to make further efforts to obtain still freer trade relations with Canada in the form of additional reciprocal relations.

TAFT'S RECIPROCITY PACT PASSED BY THE U. S. HOUSE

Goes Through on Vote of 265 to 89, a Majority of Republicans and a Few Democrats Opposing.

The passage of the bill marked the close of a fight that raged in the House for six days. During that time the safety of the measure was at no time threatened, but the Democratic and Republican leaders working for its passage conceded all the opportunity desired by its opponents for debate and protest against it. Following the vote in the House today for almost every section of the bill, and in each case they were defeated by an overwhelming vote given by the friends of the measure on both sides of the House, on the theory that any amendment would nullify it.

Free Pulp Attack.
The section of the bill relating to free admission of pulp and paper provoked the sharpest discussion. Drawing from Representative Mann, of Illinois, the Republican leader, the statement that it was exactly in the terms agreed on by the two countries. Former Speaker Cannon bitterly attacked this section of the bill.

"Let's bring Canada down here and surrender the halls of Congress to them," exclaimed Mr. Cannon.

Representative Longworth, of Ohio, pointed out that any reduction of duties as proposed in the free list amendment would violate the relations between the United States and all other countries, as it would give Canadian goods a special preference in the American markets.

"I challenge the statement that we are going to pass the free list bill later on with the exception that it will not become law," said Democratic Leader Underwood in reply to statements from Republican opponents of the reciprocity bill. "The free list bill will become law or the Republican Senate that kills it or the Republican president that vetoes it will never be heard from again."

Chicago, April 21.—Resolutions opposing the proposed reciprocity trade agreement with Canada and protesting against any reduction of the tariff on paper, pulp and similar wood products, were adopted at an executive meeting of the American Paper and Pulp Manufacturers' Association today. Pledges were given by members present to begin a movement to prevent free trade with Canada.

"I can remember. It is a friendship growing out of a common stock," Bryce went on to tell the historic manifestations of friendly spirit between the two peoples.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he said, had pointed out a condition which has no parallel in the world today. He referred to the long line of frontier States, a line which has been free from the imposing array of armies and of frowning forts or menacing navies.

"Canada is a great and growing country and I have always considered myself as much the representative of Canada as of Great Britain," said Mr. Bryce.

Referring to the arbitration treaty which is likely to be concluded between the United States and Great Britain, he said, in part:

"I hope to see a treaty closed which will express in strong and clear terms the friendship and peaceful relations which exist between the two countries, one of which will be an example of confidence to the whole human race.

"Coming to his topic, 'The Modern City,' Mr. Bryce discussed the cities of ancient and medieval times, tracing the development of municipal government. Then he said:

"The functions of cities are five: First, public order; the safety of the individual is not a matter of being a Democrat or a Republican or a Conservative; it requires the cooperation of the citizen, which has to do with transportation, with the maintenance of public health, with education, with the care of the poor, with the care of the public utility and with the care of the poor.

"Not Matters of Politics.
"These are all matters which you will come to care for, not concerned with the points of difference between a Republican or a Democrat or a Conservative or a Liberal or a Jackson to do with public health."

"The modern city must have good government. These should be honesty, energy, business capacity, neighborliness, power to be in sympathy with and to understand the needs of the individual, and to have been the secret of the hold which Abraham Lincoln had on the people."

"President Taft seems to combine simplicity, friendliness and geniality. These, I presume, are found in equal abundance in both parties. The problems of the modern city are those things that the cities are attempting to solve."

"Statesmen and Democrats are concerned with the experiments in the commission form of government. Others are trying the referendum and recall. You will be able to solve these problems because you are watching the experiments with care."

Take Years to Decide.
"Some of these experiments cannot be determined for ten or fifteen years. These will bring us back to the problem of the city according to the circumstances."

"We are experimenting in England in doing many things that formerly were done by private enterprise or not done at all. The first thing the city must find in determining whether it has the men to do the work, or whether a private corporation can do it better."

"If municipal ownership he was not altogether so evident. In fact, his remarks against the policy were so emphasized that he got more applause for the negative side of the control."

ECHOES FROM THE ONTARIO EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

[Written for The Advertiser.]

This year the Ontario Educational Association celebrated the jubilee anniversary of its organization. Though an observer could scarcely find any occasion for jubilation in the general programme of work undertaken at the banquet at the rear of Convocation Hall on Tuesday evening, and the spirit of the occasion and good-fellowship which characterized its deliberations and proceedings, were excellently appropriate to the jubilee occasion. The spirit of the jubilee year was evidently abroad among the educationists of the Province.

From a small band of teachers gathered in 1861 for the study of educational problems, the association has grown to the present numbers of over 3,000 members in six departments, meeting in eleven sections, and presenting every vital educational interest of the Province. The men of faith and vision who first met to cheer one another in the lonely and difficult task of teaching could scarcely have foreseen the results which 50 years of heroic work has brought. They build better than they knew, because they built in faith. Through long years of toil, with varied effort, but with constant aim, with ever-increasing clearness of vision and deeper conviction of the truth, the educationists have been winning a place for the people of Ontario, and for the nation as a whole, in the history of education. Never in the history of education in Ontario were the educators of our youth so keenly alive to the magnitude of their opportunity and the responsibility of their position.

The work of the association has brought to the teachers of the Province a true and healthy self-consciousness. The teacher takes notice a true and healthy self-consciousness manifested itself in the other matters. Be that as it may, it was evident that memory dwelt lovingly on the incidents of the past, and clothed its fallings with the garment of charity. It was inevitable that the educationists should review their remembrance should review the history of educational legislation both earlier and more recent. The gentleman to whom fell the important part of the evening's address, Mr. J. W. D'Neen, in the spirit of wisdom and charity, knowledge, but in many ways more the fact that he or she is not merely an instructor in the child in all chastened by experience and mellowness, but a guide and a guardian of the soul. This is the quality of their work, not the mere recitation of facts, but the guidance and the training of the young mind. These are the things that were earnestly discussed. The association was specially privileged in the opportunity of listening to the address of Mr. J. H. McTaggart, Sec.-Treas., who in his instructive address of Mr. J. H. McTaggart, Sec.-Treas., gave us a share of the same criticism. Men and women in Canada at the request of Mr. Bryce, minister of education, to give theirs were put in the impartial per-

PEACE WAVE ROLLS ACROSS ATLANTIC

A Great Spring Tide, Says Augustine Birrell—Great Meeting at Whitefield's, London, Eng.—Soothing the War Fever—Resolution Unanimously Adopted.

M. R. AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, who was the principal speaker at a largely-attended meeting held recently at Whitefield's, London, in support of the movement for an arbitration treaty between England and the United States, made the following statement at the meeting...

Lord Coleridge, who presided, referred to the fact that the area of the dispute which should be referred to it. Mr. Birrell, who was received with loud applause, moved the following resolution...

Great Peace Wave. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

Today we rejoice to notice that there was a great spring tide in the relations of the two peoples. We do not regret, every one of us, to take it at the flood. Our relations with the United States today were friendly. They have not always been friendly. Not only was there the great war of the Revolution, and the bitter, ill-omened, and unfortunate war of 1812...

First Shot of Civil War Fired Fifty Years Ago

The Fatal Gun Fired at Fort Sumter Kindled the Spark—Story of the Incident at Charleston—Bastille of the Federal Union.

ON the 12th of April—mother month of wars and battles—in the year 1861, the first gun discharged in the civil war across Charleston Harbor against the "Bastille of the Federal Union" as it was called. There rolled a spark which blazed the trail of blood through State after State and east the lines of the Confederacy...

A silent tribute may be paid to the memory of that day which happened on April 10. Beauregard received orders from the Confederate government to demand the evacuation of Sumter. He refused. He was succeeded by Anderson. He was succeeded by Lincoln. He was succeeded by Beauregard. He was succeeded by Lincoln. He was succeeded by Beauregard. He was succeeded by Lincoln...

With presence of mind, Captain Douthett, who was in command of the fort, turned back his coat, hid his military cap, and removed the buttons, and directed his men to take off their coats, cover their heads with their caps, and assume such attitudes as would eliminate the suspicion that they were soldiers. Thus the fort was made to appear as a peaceful habitation of civilians...

Charleston in a Fury. Charleston was in a fury next morning when the news reached that the fort had been fired upon. The bombardment had lasted thirty-four hours, within which 3,000 shot and shell had been hurled at Sumter. Not a man within it had been killed or seriously injured. But by a perverse turn of fate one life had to be sacrificed inside her battered walls after the fighting was all over.

character that the terms of no treaty could keep us from each other's throats. Kill each other we must! (Laughter.) Well, if we must we will, but surely the chancellor must admit that there can be nothing but good in trying, as long as possible, to prevent our doing anything of the sort by raising up, as I have already pointed out, a barricade strong enough and high enough to prevent us from doing anything of the kind.

LOBO BOY AT GIBRALTAR WRITES OF HIS STEAMER TRIP

Lobo Boys Who Have Done Well in New York—A Study of the Passengers on the Cretic—Vivid Description of the Azores.

From childhood to infancy in all phases of the individual's life, political, physical, mental, moral, and religious, what I shall have to say will be in the nature of a study of a sociologist rather than a tourist's list of things seen and things done. At present I am engaged in a study of European peoples, and my text book is the passenger list of the White Star steamer Cretic, sailing from New York to Naples. We have aboard a cosmopolitan state, with its Italian, English, French, Portuguese, American and Canadian passengers...

My home was in the township of Lobo, in an offensive, neighboring hamlet. In the city of New York there are three men from that community doing excellent work. Robert Ferguson is the auditor of the Lackawanna Railroad; John Shotwell is professor of political history in Columbia University; W. C. Edwards is school committee of the United States. It was not many years ago, when these boys, for they are boys, ran around the farms of Lobo. These are but a few instances of Lobo's telling influence...

Money Czars of Wall Street

More Luxurious Than Babylonian Kings—Costs Nearly Half a Million Daily to Feed the Street.

ANCIENT Babylon was famed for her riches and extravagance. Her streets, New York claims, her share of splendours—pleasure seekers, gamblers and rich men who come from all parts of the world to win their spurs on the White Way; but Wall Street holds the palm for big spending, gambling and pleasure-seeking over any district of any city in the world.

Office furnishings truly surpass those of the palatial homes up town, and often the palaces of Europe. It should be remembered that just before A. O. Brown failed they expended $50,000 on the appointments and furnishings of a couple of large office rooms. The wood carving in some cases surpasses the best seen anywhere else. Walk into the largest banking firms' offices and note the rich marble interior work, the mahogany card desks, the gold and silver desk appointments.

Recently a well-known partner of an old brokerage house entered a furniture dealer's office on Fifth avenue and ordered $100,000 worth of tapestries which he had had his eye on for some time. He was accompanied by a number of his associates and the dealer's office was filled with the money kings between 10 a. m. and 3 p. m.

IN THE STREET OR IN THE CHURCH

A Discussion of Why People Don't Go to Church—Interesting Symposium in Great Britain—Artisans and the Churches—The Labor Problem.

"There is hardly any more vital problem of religion in the present day than to get the man in the street out of the street into the church." So said Bishop Welton in a lecture in Manchester Cathedral, which has just been published in another book under the title of "The Religious Aspects of Disestablishment and Disendowment."

Non-Church Going. Those two quotations contain in essence the religious problems of the day: Why do men and women in such large numbers leave the churches on one side? Why do the churches on the other? Of this there is abundant evidence in another book published, called "Non-Church Going: Its Reasons and Remedies." It is a symposium to which such men as Sir Oliver Lodge, President of the Royal Society, Mr. James Stalker, Mr. William Ward, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, M. P., and Mr. Hector Macpherson contribute. These, doubtless, are all church-goers, and their reasons for not going are not to be taken as reasons for not going.

PERISHED IN NORTHERN SNOWS; INSPECTOR FITZGERALD'S CAREER

Something About the Brave Northwest Mounted Police Officer Who With Three Men Died of Hunger—A Splendid Record of Service in the Northwest.

INSPECTOR Fitzgerald, leader of the Northwest Mounted Police, who perished in the Yukon territory in November, was a man of great experience. He had served in the Northwest Mounted Police for 15 years, and was a man of great experience. He had served in the Northwest Mounted Police for 15 years, and was a man of great experience.

When the South African war broke out the sergeant was one of those who volunteered to serve the empire in the Second C. M. R., which regiment earned its name of being one of the best fighting regiments amongst the forces of the British Empire.

On his return he was again drafted to the Maple Creek district, but was soon sent to the Yukon territory to investigate the rumors of trouble with the Eskimos of the Mackenzie delta and the American whalers in that neighborhood. The superintendent came back that fall to Edmonton, and left the sergeant in charge.

It was necessary, in order that the police work could be properly done, that the sergeant should be in the Yukon territory, where the natives were to be found in the summer, and the only means of getting there was by a large canoe that they had built themselves. All went well whilst the party prosecuted their journey on the river, but when they got to open sea, the boat was blown away by a storm.

It was necessary, in order that the police work could be properly done, that the sergeant should be in the Yukon territory, where the natives were to be found in the summer, and the only means of getting there was by a large canoe that they had built themselves. All went well whilst the party prosecuted their journey on the river, but when they got to open sea, the boat was blown away by a storm.

Two years later the sergeant was relieved by Inspector Howard and several men who had come up to do their share of the civilizing work. The party had been in the Yukon for 18 months, and were much of the time in the circles, the sergeant being promoted to the rank of staff sergeant. The sergeant of the wild had him in its grip, and in the following fall after a few weeks only of "outdoor" the sergeant and one other of his party, Constable H. Walker, who accompanied Inspector Fitzgerald to the Hudson Bay from Resolution several years ago.

mere affair of their preponderating numerical strength serves to give more prominence to the problem as it affects them.

"What, then, is the position of affairs as regards the workers? Simply that the churches have very largely lost touch with them. It is calculated, and there seems no reason to doubt the statement, that only three per cent. are directly influenced by the Christian faith." Professor Peabody, a very distinguished Harvard professor, declares that "the great mass of head workers nothing would seem more unreal or uninteresting than the ordinary methods and the concerns of the Christian church. On the day when Christians meet, Trade Unionists and Socialists meet to consider what they believe the most sacred themes of human fraternity and industrial peace."

Archaic Speech in Churches. "Even assuming that ecclesiasticism, caste, insincerity were nonexistent, there still remain barriers of sufficient strength to prevent the forces of modern industry entering the churches and heartily co-operating with the work. One is the archaic speech of places of worship. Their tongue is largely unintelligible to the worker. It is divorced from the actual life of today. Instead of treating the great questions of religion in language fresh from the mint of human experience, the average modern preacher is prone to indulge in the phrases of traditional theology. Christ spoke in homely parables which the common people could understand. Therefore they heard him gladly.

"I tell you what it is, gentlemen," said Wilberforce, Bishop of Oxford, turning round at a very dull mission meeting and addressing a number of clergy of his diocese, sitting in a solemn row on the platform, "the Church of England is being choked with its dignity. What you want is to leave off your neckties and shake the starch out of them; and the Bishop pretended to shake in the air an imaginary stiff neck-cloth, such as was at the time worn by the clergy."

Churches and Labor Problems. Among other causes mentioned by Mr. Gray for the alienation of the workers from the churches are the belief that "organized religion is indifferent, and, in some instances, antagonistic to the ideals of labor. . . . The churches do not appear to be themselves to the task of enforcing the claims of social Christianity, they cannot hope to win back large masses of the people whom they should never have lost."

The divided state of Christendom is cited as another cause, and we are told that "the paramount duty of the churches is to thoroughly master the facts of the situation, then to summon all the moral, intellectual, and spiritual forces at their command, for an attack on the heartlessness of our cities. . . . Christianize the forces of industry and you Christianize three-fourths of the population."

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, M. P., the brain of the Labor party, declares that he does not know why workmen do not go to church is that they have ceased to take an interest in going to church. . . . The church has lost touch with modern life and the duties of modern life; the individualism of his first and hunger after righteousness; but society, with its materialist

Sir Hiram Maxim at 71 Making Flying Machines

Inventor of the Maxim Gun Talks With Grim Irony of His Career—How He Came to Invent the First Automatic Gun—His Present Interest.

SIR HIRAM MAXIM, who has tendered his resignation as director of the firm of Vickers, Sons and Maxim, of Sheffield, Eng., does not intend to spend his seventy-one years, to abandon his life-work of invention.

"I am going to have my last flutter with my old hobby—flying machines," he told a London Daily News representative, and he proceeded to explain the importance of his work. "I am making arrangements with Mr. Graham White and M. Bleriot to construct a purely military flying machine, suitable for long distance. In war other down faster than they have ever done before. If you can invent a gun that will out-shoot all other guns, your fortune is made."

PEACE WAVE ROLLS ACROSS ATLANTIC

M. R. AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, who was the principal speaker at a largely-attended meeting held recently at Whitefield's, London, in support of the movement for an arbitration treaty between England and the United States, made an appeal in the states, made an appeal in the states, made an appeal in the states...

Lord Curzon, who presided, referred to the Hague tribunal, and asked why it should not extend its area of dispute which should be referred to it. Mr. Birrell, who was received with loud applause, moved the following resolution: "That this meeting rejoices in the united action of the churches of America and Great Britain in support of the proposal for a treaty of arbitration between the two peoples."

Great Peace Wave

There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune. Today we rejoice to notice that there was a great spring tide in peace, rolling in across the Atlantic. We were not right, every one of us, to take it at the flood? Our relations with the United States today were friendly, but they were not as friendly as they should be. Not only was there the great war of the Revolution, and the bitter, blood-stained, and unfortunate war of 1812, but there was also the great war of 1861-65, which was the greatest tragedy of the world since the days of his boyhood in Liverpool to remember a time when a declaration of war between this country and the United States would have driven them to their knees with joy, and it was only a poor parcel of Nonconformists—Baptists, Congregationalists, and Unitarians—who have the courage at the risk of broken heads, to say outright, though their words were half-drowned in the savage cries of

MR. AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, principal speaker at a largely-attended meeting held recently at Whitefields, London, in support of the movement for an arbitration treaty between England and the United States, said in an eloquent appeal in the States, that should not extend the area of disputes which should be referred to it.

The proceedings were of an international and non-party character. Lord Coleridge, who presided, referred to the Hague tribunal, and asked that it should not extend the area of disputes which should be referred to it.

Mr. Birrell, who was received with applause, moved the following resolution: "That this meeting rejoices in the united action of the churches in support of the proposal for a treaty of arbitration between the two peoples, and that it believes that such an agreement would tend to kindle the bond of peace between the two nations, and give an invaluable impulse to the cause of international arbitration, expressing the hope that nothing will prevent the hope that nothing will prevent the completion of the proposed treaty."

There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune. Today we are rejoiced to notice that there was a great spring tide, a peace wave, rolling across the Atlantic. It is at the flood; our relations with the United States today are friendly, but they had not always been friendly. Not only was there the great War of Revolution, and the bitter, ill-fated, and unfortunate war of 1812, but he had only to go back to the days of his heroic deeds to remember a time when a declaration of war between this country and the United States would have driven that great city mad with joy, and it was only a poor parcel of Nonconformists—Baptists, Congregationalists, and Unitarians—who had the courage, at the risk of broken heads, to say, "I might as well be hanged for a half-drowned dog as drown in an unnecessary war."

First Shot of Civil War Fired Fifty Years Ago

The Fatal Gun Fired at Fort Sumter Kindled the Spark—Story of the Incident at Charleston—Bastille of the Federal Union.

ON the 12th of April—another month of wars and battles—sunlight in the East, and a gun discharged its contents across Charleston Harbor against the "Bastille of the Federal Union," as it was called. Then a spark, which blazed a trail through State after State and kept alive a fiercer and fiercer war, the lives of millions of blooded men and more than eight billion dollars worth of property.

When South Carolina seceded, Fort Sumter, rising like a sentinel in the narrowest neck of Charleston Harbor, was unharmed and unmanned. But within Fort Sumter, near by, were approximately seventy-five men under the command of Major Robert Anderson, a veteran of the Black Hawk, Seminole and Mexican wars. His post at Fort Sumter was indefensible from land attack and supplies transferred from land and sea supplies day after day. In the course of the passage the men in the boats were in danger of capture, and the project seemed on the point of being abandoned.

With presence of mind, Captain Pickens, who was in command of the fort, ordered the men to take to the hills and hide in the woods. He then ordered his military cap, and directed his muskets with their coats, cover the fort as they were soldiers. Thus the fort was hidden from the eyes of the enemy. The impression was created that the fort was abandoned. The men passed between the mainland and Fort Sumter, and General Clinch, who was in command of the fort, passed in a brief stop at a short distance from Fort Sumter, and ordered his men to take possession of the fort. Upon these he built batteries that were soon to bear their teeth to the Union garrison. A Washington, Bu-

character that the terms of no treaty could keep us from each other's throats. Kill each other we must! (Laughter.) Well, if we must we will, but surely the chancellor must admit that there can be nothing but good in trying, as long as possible, to prevent our doing anything of the sort by raising up, as I have already pointed out, a barricade strong enough and high enough to prevent us from doing anything of the kind."

LOBO BOY AT GIBRALTAR WRITES OF HIS STEAMER TRIP

Lobo Boys Who Have Done Well in New York—A Study of the Passengers on the Cretic—Vivid Description of the Azores.

ON BOARD STEAMSHIP CRETIC, Gibraltar, April 8. TO THE EDITOR OF THE ADVERTISER: THE suggestion of one of your readers, I am taking pleasure in writing you a personal letter. The rapid growth of the modern city has necessitated frequent and numerous recruits from the country for her various trades, her schools of learning, her industrial life, and her professional activity. It is rather interesting to a Canadian, for such I was born, and hope thus to be in a position to recollect the great number of successful country men, who are adding to the lives of the great American cities, and who are finding in the United States a country man myself and having unconditionally found an opportunity in America's greatest metropolis, I take pleasure in knowing and watching these fresh enthusiastic energetic volunteers in the struggle for better things in our big cities.

Some sociologists have noted that the city of immense proportions must go to the hills and plains for its new blood. Whether the cities must or not is immaterial, but the fact of the case remains that they do. Lobo Boys Do Well. My home was in the township of Lobo, in an unincorporated neighborhood in the city of New York. There are three men from that community doing authoritative work. Robert Ferguson is the auditor of the Lackawanna Railroad; John Showell is professor of political history in Columbia University; W. E. Edwards is school committee of the United States. It was not many years ago, when these boys, for they are boys, ran around the farms of Lobo. There are but a few instances of Lobo's telling influence, not only upon New York City, but upon the United States. Knowing the paternal interest of Canada in her children, I have taken advantage of your kindness to inform my Lobo neighbors of some of my observations in American city life and travel in America and abroad. The representative of the city of Lobo, which I trust you will pardon, for I want my neighbors to get my observations. My work is that of a teacher of social pedagogy. People with their diverse social, racial and religious characteristics are my entire laboratory, equipment and all. The school committee of the United States, the best in the people is my work. It covers all ages of the individual.

Money Czars of Wall Street

More Luxurious Than Babylonian Kings—Costs Nearly Half a Million Daily to Feed the Street.

ANCIENT Babylon was famous for her riches and extravagance. Broadway, New York, claims her share of splendor and luxury. The pleasure-seeking of any district of the world to win their spurs on the Great White Way, but Wall Street holds the palm for big spending, gambling and pleasure-seeking of any district of any city in the world. It costs nearly $500,000 daily to feed Wall Street, and some of the largest banks and brokerage houses maintain their own kitchens at "remendous cost, where the clerks eat as best in season and the directors the richest land affords out of season. Some of the best chefs in New York are paid enormous salaries to pander to the tastes of these Wall Street epicures. Many of the offices are stocked with wines of rare vintages and winemakers make most of their profit selling their best wares to Wall Street brokers.

Office furnishings truly surpass those of the palatial homes uptown and often the palaces of Europe. It should be remembered that just before A. O. Brown failed they expended $50,000 on the appointments and furnishings of a couple of large office rooms. The wood carving in some cases surpasses the best seen anywhere else. Walk into the largest banking firms' offices and note the rich marble interior work, the magnificent carved desks, the gold and silver desk appointments. Recently a well-known partner of an old brokerage house entered a famous art dealer's office on Fifth avenue and ordered $100,000 worth of tapestries which he had his eye on, to be sent to his Wall Street office, where they now hang. Henry Clews is partial to artists' masterpieces and his offices resemble a first-class gallery.

Perhaps there is nowhere in the world where gambling for enormous stakes is done with so much sangfroid as in Wall Street, and when the market is closed gambling in cards and other games goes on in the private offices of many big firms, where the stakes are often high. The usual limit and checks written of a couple of hours' play. The firm of Charles G. Gates & Co., before it dissolved, was undoubtedly one of the great gambling centers of

A Discussion of Why People Don't Go to Church—Interesting Symposium in Great Britain—Artisans and the Churches—The Labor Problem.

There is hardly any more vital problem of religion at the present day than to get the man in the street out of the street into the church. It is not a question of the man in the street, but of the man in the street who is not in the church. The man in the street who is not in the church is the man who is not in the church. The man in the street who is not in the church is the man who is not in the church. The man in the street who is not in the church is the man who is not in the church.

SAID Bishop Welldon in a lecture in Manchester Cathedral, which has just been printed in book form under the title of "The Religious Aspects of Disestablishment and Disendowment." And being a man of large heart and wide outlook, he also said: "It is infinitely more important that the people of England should be religious in heart and life than that any one church should gain or retain a superiority over all others."

Non-Church Going. Those two quotations contain in essence the religious problems of the day. Why do men and women in such large numbers leave the church on one side? Why do not the churches concentrate on their work rather than on their rivalries? There can be no doubt as to the effect of one point of view on the other. Of this there is abundant evidence in another book just published, called "Non-Church Going: Its Reasons and Remedies." It is a symposium in which such men as Sir Oliver Lodge, Preliminary Curate, Dr. James Stalker, Mr. William Ward, Mr. H. Ramsay MacDonald, M. P., and Mr. H. C. Martineau contribute. Those, doubtless, are all church-goers, and some reasons by those who do not go would have been valuable. But this volume admits the facts, and seeks to explain them.

Mr. W. Forbes Gray, in an Introduction, summarizes the case. He says that "Sunday after Sunday the doors of the churches are closed to three-quarters of the population, the

PERISHED IN NORTHERN SNOWS: INSPECTOR FITZGERALD'S CAREER

Something About the Brave Northwest Mounted Police Officer Who With Three Men Died of Hunger—A Splendid Record of Service in the Northwest.

INSPECTOR Fitzgerald, leader of the Northwest Mounted Police patrol of four, who perished from hunger between Dawson and Fort MacPherson, was a man of great experience in Arctic travel. Shortly after joining the force, some 16 years or so ago, he was stationed at the post of Mackenzie, on the Mackenzie River, and was in charge of the good will of the settlers, but the good opinion of his superior officers was such that he was sent to a year of himself when on the trip that had to be made in those days, when settlers were few and far between.

Some time about 1897 he was transferred and made his headquarters at Fort MacPherson, where he was in charge of the police patrol of the Yukon River in the whole of the north. At the time of the Yukon rush he was working in connection with the Mackenzie commissioner, and was taken from that duty to act with Inspector Moody in collecting the stragglers of the rush from the Yukon to the Mackenzie. It was necessary that he be recalled by those who lived in Edmonton and the north at that time.

The party of men which was collected and was sent to the north, for the determination of the Yukon River, known as Fort Solik. The corporal returned to his country, and was promoted to the rank of sergeant.

When the Northwest Mounted Police was organized, he was one of those who volunteered to go to the north. He was sent to the north, and was in charge of the police patrol of the Yukon River in the whole of the north. At the time of the Yukon rush he was working in connection with the Mackenzie commissioner, and was taken from that duty to act with Inspector Moody in collecting the stragglers of the rush from the Yukon to the Mackenzie.

Inspector Fitzgerald, leader of the Northwest Mounted Police patrol of four, who perished from hunger between Dawson and Fort MacPherson, was a man of great experience in Arctic travel. Shortly after joining the force, some 16 years or so ago, he was stationed at the post of Mackenzie, on the Mackenzie River, and was in charge of the good will of the settlers, but the good opinion of his superior officers was such that he was sent to a year of himself when on the trip that had to be made in those days, when settlers were few and far between.

mere fact of their preponderating numerical strength serves to give more prominence to the problem as it affects them.

"What, then, is the position of affairs as regards the workers? Simply that the churches have very largely lost touch with them. It is calculated, and there seems no reason to doubt the statement, that only three per cent. are directly influenced by the Christian faith."

Professor Peabody, a very distinguished Harvard professor, declares that "To the great mass of head-worked workers, nothing would seem more unreal or uninteresting than the ordinary methods and the concerns of the Christian church. On the day when Christians meet for prayer, Trade Unionists and Socialists meet to consider what they believe the not less sacred themes of human fraternity and industrial peace."

Archaic Speech in Churches. "Even assuming that ecclesiastical cases, insincerity were nonexistent, there still remains a barrier of sufficient strength to prevent the forces of industrialism entering the churches and heartily co-operating in their own work. It is the archaic speech of places of worship. Their tongue is largely unintelligible to the worker. It is divorced from the actual life of today. Instead of treating the great questions of religion in language fresh from the mint of human experience, the average modern preacher is prone to indulge in the stock phrases of traditional theology. He speaks in homely parables which the common people could understand. Therefore they heard him gladly."

Churches and Labor Problems. Among other causes mentioned by Mr. Gray for the alienation of the working classes from the churches are the belief that "organized religion is indifferent, and, in some instances, antagonistic to the demands of the day. Until the churches seriously address themselves to the task of enforcing the claims of social Christianity, they cannot hope to win back to their fold the people whom they should never have lost."

The divided state of Christendom is cited as another cause, and are told that "the paramount duty of the churches is to thoroughly master the facts of the situation, then to summon all the moral, intellectual, and spiritual forces at their command, for an attack on the heathenism of our cities. . . . Christianize the forces of industrialism and you Christianize three-fourths of the population."

If the higher classes are to be emancipated from the baneful influence of the thousand and one distractions of modern life, if religion is to become a permanent and paramount factor in their lives and to sweep away the last vestige of an enervating materialism, then the Christian pulpit must have the means to win back to its fold the people whom they should never have lost."

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, M. P., the brain of the Labor party, declares that "the reason why workingmen do not go to church is that they have ceased to take an interest in going to church. . . . The church has lost touch with modern life and the duties of its members. The individual still has his thirst and hunger after righteousness; but society, with its materialism, has quenched it."

Sir Hiram Maxim at 71 Making Flying Machines. Inventor of the Maxim Gun Talks With Grim Irony of His Career—How He Came to Invent the First Automatic Gun—His Present Interest.

SIR HIRAM MAXIM, who has tracked his invention as far as the present probably included in the number of Hiram Maxim, who the government will ultimately on its army ships and aeroplanes being built entirely in this country.

One feels in interviewing Sir Hiram that he combines a genuine, if a somewhat grim, humor with invention. "Before I invented the Maxim gun," he observed, dryly, "I was a man of peace. But one day in Vienna I met a Jew. That was in 1882, when I was engaged in electrical work. He said to me: 'If you really want to make money drop electricity and invent something that will enable Europeans to shoot at each other's throats, or to enable them to shoot each other down faster than they have ever done before. If you can invent a gun that will outshoot all other guns your fortune is made.'"

"So I was the first to invent an automatic gun. The late Lord Salisbury remarked to King Edward when the Prince of Wales, in my presence the inventor invented more men from dying of old age than any man who had ever lived." "They were not my invention," he said, "but I began to make a platinum lining, began to trouble me. I found I could not stand the English climate. I had my first experience of bronchitis, and eventually I succeeded, with the help of an expert in medicine, in making a contrivance for curing myself. "But the very thing that I cured myself and cured a lot of other sufferers has ruined my reputation," confessed Sir Hiram with a smile. "I am told now that I have cured more than 100,000 cases of bronchitis and saving their lives more than counteracted all the harm done by inventing a gun for mowing people down."

Augustine Birrell Speaks On Political Topics

A fervent prayer for the peace of the world—The Anti-Veto Bill—What the Referendum Means—The Irish Question—Bugbear of Religious Prejudice—His Heart is in His Job.

MR. GEORGE W. AGNEW, the president of the Manchester Reform club, gave a dinner recently at the club in honor of Mr. Birrell, the chief secretary for Ireland.

Sir George Agnew presided, and among those present were Sir Charles Schwann, M. P., Sir J. Cawley, M. P., Sir Edward Turner, Sir W. J. Crossley, Mr. G. Harwood, Mr. E. M. Taylor, Mr. W. A. Haworth, M. P., Sir W. Stephens, Mr. W. H. Adkins, M. P., Mr. C. H. Harvey, M. P., Mr. C. P. Scott, Mr. J. H. Thomas, Mr. B. Leigh, Mr. George Rhodes, Mr. W. E. Thompson, and Mr. William Bell.

The chairman spoke in praise of Mr. Birrell's work as chief secretary for Ireland and of his career in the House of Commons. The House of Commons, he said, could be a better place were Mr. Birrell to be transferred from another sphere.

The Political Situation. Mr. Birrell said: There are one or two things on which I gladly avail myself of this opportunity of saying a few words. First of all, you must have noticed how during the recent debates in Parliament on the navy estimates a ray of light irradiated the gloominess of a session.

Peace With the World. First, I should like to say that this is a branch even of an olive tree may, if improperly used, become as much a weapon of offence as an Irish thorn in a shield.

What the Referendum Will Mean. And one thing is common between them all, and that is the referendum. How, when you read the newspapers, you are told that the referendum is a great thing, because really this is an important matter.

Suffered Greatly From Heart Trouble. NERVES WERE VERY WEAK. Mrs. John Farrell, Rose Hill, P.E.I., writes: "It is with the greatest pleasure I write you stating the benefit I have received by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills."

The proper action of the nerves, so important to the well-being of the heart, depends entirely upon the general condition of the nervous system. If there be nerve derangement of any kind, it is bound to produce heart derangement.

CLEVER TACTICS OF LONDON THIEF

Disguised as Phone Repairer He Robbed Hotel Guests.

The clever tactics of the thief who has carried out many successful burglaries in several large London hotels have at last been discovered by a detective. The principal articles in this thief's outfit were a peaked cap, a bag, and a roll of copper wire. Thus equipped, he obtained permission to ascend the grand staircase and repaired the telephone. Having reached the top floor he set to work using his wire in plugging locks, and by the time he reached the ground floor he had already printed the contents of several jewel cases.

King George is to entertain 100,000 of his court at a magnificent ball to be held at the Crystal Palace, London, in celebration of his coronation. Each child is to be presented with a special souvenir of the occasion, and for this purpose the Royal Doulton Pottery, Barrow, has been honored with his majesty's commission to manufacture 100,000 of these "souvenir" pieces. The King has chosen the same historic shape which was given for King Edward and on the occasion of the jubilee of Queen Victoria.

A remarkable story comes from Cornwall. The other evening after the express from Preston to Kendal had passed through Carnforth Station, a railway official discovered that a lady had been thrown out of a carriage 120 yards south of the station. The lady, Miss Townsend, subsequently stated that she had returned to the compartment at Lancaster and tried to strangle her, afterwards throwing her through the window into a goods yard where she was found.

A man died at Hanley under very unusual circumstances lately. RAT CATCHER GETS A RAT A MINUTE

Some interesting facts about his profession were given the other day by Mr. Thomas Burrows, when he was appointed as official rat-catcher to the British Corporation. He stated that the firm as the biggest contractors for rodent destruction now in existence in the world, and that he had caught the largest rat he made, which was found on a troopship after it came back from South Africa. There were more rats on that ship than on any other vessel, and soldiers going out to fight. We caught within a few days as many as 1,011. Sometimes we have taken as many as sixty rats in one hour, and had better performance a rat a minute."

The most beautiful garden of roses which has ever been seen in London is the great metropolis will flower in the centre of the Coronation Exhibition in London early this summer. Fifteen million roses have been planted in the garden, which will recall the floral glories of Persia amid the smoke of London, and transform the exhibition grounds into a garden. A pig, red like a bullet, which was recently stolen from Col. J. W. Wray, late of the Indian army, was returned to him a few days ago under circumstances. The pig was the one with which he shot a tiger in India, thus saving the lives of his wife and himself. While watching a race some time ago he was flung by a gang of racing men, and a gold watch and chain, the latter having the bullet attached, were stolen. The pig was named the "bullet" of the race, and the obliging thief the other morning returned it to him by registered post. It seems that Jersey is to produce a veritable Treasure Island. Other urns bear the monogram of Vespasian, the Roman emperor.

An appeal is being issued for funds to restore St. Alkmund's Church, Shrewsbury, which in a few days enters upon its fourth year. The church, the Great, the church has passed through many vicissitudes. From its first days, when it had twelve consecrated graves, it has since been the scene of many vicissitudes. It was a fine building, but the tower was pulled down, and the church was left in a state of ruin. It was not until 1870 that the church was restored, and it has since been a place of worship for the people of Shrewsbury.

Since her passing was the patients and older brothers and sisters have been amazed to discover the extent of her influence and nobility. Without a word to anyone at home, and when supposed to be at play in a park, the little girl, beginning when about the age of six, had been in the habit of seeking out and visiting the sick, to whom her quiet earnestness and bright words formed cheerful and helpful ministrations. It is believed that the child had taken an example from some thing she had heard when first she was introduced to the nurse, Florence Nightingale.

PREMIER ASQUITH ON THE BIBLE
King James' Version Produced in an Age of Giants—It Was the Work of a Syndicate.

The great meeting at the Albert Hall, London, in connection with the celebration of the centenary of the publication of the King James' Bible was remarkable for a striking declaration by the premier on the subject of the proposed treaty of peace between Great Britain and America.

There surely cannot be a worthier, more appropriate, a more splendid monument to this Tercentenary year, than that which shall witness the sealing of a solemn pact between us which shall for ever put an end, once and for all, to the hideous and unthinkable possibilities of fratricidal strife. This declaration was received with enthusiasm.

A message from President Taft and speeches by the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mr. Whiteley Reid, the American ambassador in London, gave further evidence of the desire for a union of the Anglo-Saxon peoples.

Mr. Asquith, who was received with cheers, had scarcely commenced his speech when there was a Suffragist demonstration. He had only uttered the words "I am glad to see you, ladies and gentlemen, I am here to-night as an Englishman," when there was a chorus of hisses from women in all parts of the hall.

PREMIER ASQUITH ON THE BIBLE
King James' Version Produced in an Age of Giants—It Was the Work of a Syndicate.

The great meeting at the Albert Hall, London, in connection with the celebration of the centenary of the publication of the King James' Bible was remarkable for a striking declaration by the premier on the subject of the proposed treaty of peace between Great Britain and America.

There surely cannot be a worthier, more appropriate, a more splendid monument to this Tercentenary year, than that which shall witness the sealing of a solemn pact between us which shall for ever put an end, once and for all, to the hideous and unthinkable possibilities of fratricidal strife. This declaration was received with enthusiasm.

A message from President Taft and speeches by the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mr. Whiteley Reid, the American ambassador in London, gave further evidence of the desire for a union of the Anglo-Saxon peoples.

Mr. Asquith, who was received with cheers, had scarcely commenced his speech when there was a Suffragist demonstration. He had only uttered the words "I am glad to see you, ladies and gentlemen, I am here to-night as an Englishman," when there was a chorus of hisses from women in all parts of the hall.
