THE EXPOSTULATION.

Now, Charley, I ne'er Would have married you doar, Had I known of your passion for smoking;

Of that horrible stuff You've had surely enough-Put down-you are very provoking!

I've sat by your side Till I feel quito defied To speak for the vapour is choking, But 'tis useless to plead-You puff! puif! at "the weed," As if a man wore created for smoking,

Whiff! whiff! in the morn, Before breakfast, unshorn, Untidy-you know I'm not joking !-I'hen all through the day You are puffing away, And care not to me now provoking.

You'll tell me, of course, "I was not this made me hoarse, Caba first, and wife next, Twould an angel have vexed To mark your devotion to-smoking

That 'witching old pipe Im half tem; top to gripe, And east in the fire I am poking; And would, too, but bother, You'll still find another, And cleave to the habit of smoking.

Ah, well I I'll give way, For perhaps, as you say, You wed us "to cherish," And, lest we should perish,
