A Great Intrigue, —OR, THE—
Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER I.

Mr. Head was an honest lawyer and a good fellow, and he did not rest contented with performing his legal duties. To begin with, the owner of all this wealth was virtually alone in the world. She could not go and live in that huge place which had fallen to her without a companion. He advertised for a middle-aged lady, and secured that pink of perfection and propriety—Mrs. Dalton. Then he thought that Lucille would need a companion of younger years and brighter mood, and he asked Lucille if there was any among the girls at the school whom she would like to take with her in that capacity.

There was one girl, as it chanced, with whom Lucille had been more intimate than the rest. This girl, Marie Verner, was like Lucille, an orphan. She was the very opposite of Lucille, and perhaps for that reason, as opposites attract each other, Lucille and she had maintained a friendship.

"If Marie Verner will come, I will take her," said Lucille, and Marie Verner had jumped at the offer.

In a week the preparations were complete, and now Lucille sat at the window of Darracourt—her Darracourt—looking out upon the park—her park, as it lay bathed in the bright June sun.

It was strange and wonderful, and with the novelty and interest of the thing was mingled another sensation; a feeling of loneliness and isolation.

A man placed in her position might have been pardoned for feeling lonely, how much more then a young girl, with all a young girl's tender craving for love and sympathy?

They had all been glad to see her—the tenants had cheered, the servants had prostrated themselves, her nearest neighbor, the marquis, had come to welcome her; yet, as she stepped out on to the balcony, and leaning over looked along the wide-reaching terrace, a feeling of loneliness, a yearning for something she could not put into words, smote upon her as distinctly as if the wind had suddenly chopped from south to east and chilled her.

An instant after she felt ashamed of the thought, and turning from the window went quickly across the room and rang the bell.

"I have everything I could desire," she murmured with a half laugh of vexation, "and, like the child with two many toys, I'm inclined to cry for the moon! If Marie were in my place, now, how contented and happy she would be! While I—now what is it I do want?" and she stretched out her arms and laughed again.

Susie came in response to the bell; she had been waiting on the stairs, as a matter of fact, and with all a girl's delight in the task, spread out the dresses which had been purchased in Paris, under Mrs. Dalton's guidance.

There was a plain white muslin with a black sash among them, and Lucille chose that, principally because it was the simplest. With the exception of the sash the dress was without ornament, and Lucille shook her head when Susie unlocked the brand new jewel casket, with its brand new suites of pearls and diamonds, also bought in Paris under Mrs. Dalton's directions; and Susie, although she would have liked to have decked her young mistress in all the glories of the Orient, and was a little disappointed, could not repress a little smothered cry of wonder and delight, as her eyes rested upon her handiwork. In all her life Susie had not seen anything—not even a picture in the Illustrated London News—so beautiful as her young mistress with the thick, golden-brown hair and lustrous, hazel eyes.

A great bell startled Lucille by its sudden clangor, and a moment or two afterward Marie Verner knocked at the door.

"That's the dinner bell, Lucille," she said. "Are you dressed? Oh, my dear, that muslin suits you!" and her keen eyes roved over Lucille's slim figure. "I thought I looked rather nice, but you—"

Lucille smiled. "I have got a very good little maid," she said. Susie blushed with pleasure and courtesy.

"Oh, miss," she murmured, "it's you, who are so beautiful, not the dress or me who put it on!"

"There!" exclaimed Marie Verner. "As a specimen of rustic compliment, that's unique."

They went down into the hall, where Mr. Head, in evening dress, stood waiting for them, and he gave Lucille his arm and led her into the dining room.

It was a large room, and the light from what seemed a forest of candles, for the heavy curtains had been drawn to exclude the sunset, shone upon carved oak and Venetian glass, upon the table glittering with some of the famous Darracourt plate, relieved by flowers in vases and plateaux.

Fresh from the bare dining room of the St. Malo school, Lucille felt awed, and stood motionless for a moment, looking round her; then the lawyer led her to the head of the table, the others took their places and the dinner commenced.

With grave faces and noiseless steps, the trained servants, presided over by the dignified butler, served the meal with the precision of machines. Marie Verner, upon whom the novel magnificence acted like champagne, talked and laughed with Mr. Head, and Mrs. Dalton occasionally put in a slow, grave word or two, but Lucille sat almost silent.

She was in dreamland still! Was this splendid room, these masses of gold and silver plate, these servants, really hers, Lucille Darracourt's, or would it all fade away presently, and give place to the bare schoolroom, with its dingy forms and soiled tablecloth?

The voices of the others seemed to come from a distance, and to be as impalpable as the rest, and it was not until the butler had left the room, and Mr. Head addressed her by name, that, with a slight start, she awoke to the fact that all she saw was real, and not a vision of the imagination.

"Lucille," said Marie Verner, "that is the third time Mr. Head has spoken to you! Come back from dreamland—just for a minute or two.

"I beg your pardon," said Lucille, with a faint blush. "I think I was dreaming."

Mr. Head bowed respectfully. "I hope I have not disturbed you," he said; "but Miss Verner insists that I should communicate a piece of family history."

"Oh, don't!" exclaimed Marie. "Pray don't begin in that way, or we shall all go asleep at the commencement. Let me tell Miss Darracourt, and if I go astray you can correct me."

Mr. Head bowed. "You will tell it much better than I shall, Miss Verner."

"At any rate I shan't put in any 'fore-saids,' as you would probably do," she retorted. "Lucille, we were talking of the marquis. I can't talk or think of anything else! That's because I've never seen a real live marquis before."

"My dear Miss Verner," murmured Mrs. Dalton, rebukingly. "If you will permit me, I really think that such terms are scarcely fitting."

"Well, you wouldn't have me say an artificial marquis!" retorted Marie Verner. "Having never seen one, alive or dead, before, I am quite absorbed!" she went on. "And such a marquis, too! If I had met him walking in Regent street I should have known him to be a nobleman of high degree. No one but a marquis at least could have such eyes and such hands! Darracourt is beautiful and wonderful enough, but to have such a marquis as next door neighbor is too delicious!" and her lips went into a curved thin line of red.

Lucille smiled. "worsnip," she said, in her musical voice.

"Wouldn't he? But I haven't finished with him yet! There is just one noble qualification lacking in him; he is very poor—"

"For a marquis," murmured Mr. Head, fingering his wineglass.

"For a marquis, of course," assented Marie Verner. "And now for the history. You remember my telling you that Darracourt once belonged to the Merles?"

"Yes," said Lucille.

"Well, it seems that the late marquis, this one's father, was one of those gentlemen who enjoy spending money, and that, like most men gifted in that direction, he spent too much. And so he sold Darracourt to your uncle, sold it with all the plate and the furniture and all the 'fore-said.' There, Mr. Head, I've got the word in, and you ought to be satisfied. Wasn't that an awful sacrifice? Fancy having to part with this lovely place. No wonder the present marquis looks so melancholy. If Mrs. Dalton would not be shocked I could shed tears of sympathy!"

Mrs. Dalton ignored this appeal with a dignified sniff.

"I was under the impression that such properties were entailed," she said, addressing Mr. Head, "and that they could not be sold."

"Only with the permission of the eldest son," explained the lawyer. "The late marquis had to get his son's permission before he could sell it. But as there was nothing but a sale or ruin, of course, he consented, especially as a portion of the money went to purchase the hall where the present marquis now lives."

"And is the present marquis the only son?" asked Mrs. Dalton.

Mr. Head had his wineglass to his lips at the moment, and he paused a second before replying, while a very faint line wrinkled his forehead.

"The present marquis was the next in succession," he said, slowly, and with a certain gravity.

Lucille, who was listening intently, noticed the hesitation and the tone of the reply; and Marie Verner's sharp eyes glanced at the lawyer's face.

"There is something behind; tell us the whole of the story, Mr. Head."

He looked toward Lucille. "There is something behind," he said, gravely—"a dark shadow which rests upon the house of Merle. Some other time," he said, biting his lips.

"Well, as it is beyond the power of mortal man, to say nothing of three poor women, to force anything from a lawyer, I suppose we must possess our souls in patience," said Marie Verner, lightly. "But you have succeeded in throwing a still more romantic halo round the interesting marquis, Mr. Head. I'm more entirely lost than ever."

"I think we had better leave Mr. Head to the enjoyment of his wine," said Mrs. Dalton, primly, and Lucille rose and led the way into the drawing room.

Marie Verner ran to the piano and struck a chord.

"You don't mind my playing?" she asked. "Music is the only possible vent for my suffocating emotions! This lovely place, this dark and melancholy marquis with a shadow over his house, the excitement and the brass band have turned my head! And you—" pointing to Lucille, as she stood like a lovely statue in the centre of the splendid room—"you can be cool and collected! It passes my comprehension!"

Meeting of Committee for a New Regiment.

The Committee, recently appointed by His Excellency the Governor for the purpose of forming a Newfoundland Regiment, met at the C.L.B. Armoury last night.

Hon. John R. Bennett, referred to the object of the meeting, which was to make arrangements for the recruiting of 500 men for overseas service, and a similar number for Home Defence. His Excellency had already expressed his readiness to assist the committee in the furtherance of this object. He therefore moved that His Excellency be elected a member of the committee. This was seconded by Mr. W. J. Ellis and unanimously carried. On motion of Hon. M. G. Winter, seconded by Major Hutchings His Excellency was appointed Chairman. Hon. John Harris then moved that Sir Joseph Outerbridge be Vice-Chairman, which motion was seconded by Mr. F. J. Morris, K.C., and carried. On motion of Lt.-Col. Rendell, seconded by Captain McKay, Dr. V. P. Burke was elected Secretary.

A letter was read from Hon. Geo. Knowling regretting his inability to be present, and assuring the committee of his desire to aid in forwarding the movement.

Sir Joseph Outerbridge addressed the gathering and emphasized the necessity of unity, and urged all present to stand shoulder to shoulder in support of the Empire. He feared that we do not fully realize what the present position means to us, and drew an eloquent picture of what might have been had a German cruiser occupied the place of the Lancaster last week.

Upon the arrival of His Excellency the National Anthem and Rule Britannia was sung, and at the request of Hon. John Harvey, three hearty cheers were given. His Excellency then took the chair, and in thanking those present for the loyal reception accorded him, said that his services were now as always, wholly at the disposal of the Colony. He said that the first duties of the committee were to enlist, equip and despatch a regiment of 500 men for service abroad. In order to do this it was necessary to first appoint a sub-committee to draft a Proclamation whereupon the following gentlemen were nominated and appointed: Hon. John Bennett, Edgar Bowring, John Harris, John Harvey, M. P. Cashin; Mr. W. J. Ellis and Dr. Burke, Secretary. The following Committees were appointed:—

Proclamation Committee—As above with Hon. J. R. Bennett, convener.

Recruiting Committee—Major Franklin, convener; Major Hutchings, Major Carty and Capt. Montgomerie, who would communicate with outpost brigade officers and magistrates.

Physical Fitness Committee—Dr. Macpherson, convener; Dr. Paterson and Dr. Chater.

Equipment Committee—H. Outerbridge, convener; Capt. McKay, the Quartermasters of the C.C.C. and M.G. B. and J. McNeil.

Musketry Committee—Members of the Rifle Association.

Finance Committee—Hon. M. P. Cashin, convener; Hon. E. R. Bowring, Hon. John Harvey, Hon. John Harris, Hon. M. G. Winter, W. B. Griewe, W. D. Reid, J. M. Kent, K.C., Jno. Brownlie, C. P. Ayre, A. Macpherson, Hon. Geo. Knowling, Hon. J. D. Ryan, David Baird.

A discussion as to financial matters followed in which Messrs. W. B. Griewe, John Brownlie, W. G. Gosling, John Harvey, W. H. Franklin, W. W. Blackall and others took part. The committees will immediately set to work, and reports will be made, if at all possible, at the meeting to be held at the Armoury to-night.

All the committees have power to add to their numbers, and a nominating committee consisting of Messrs. J. A. Cline, W. J. Ellis and F. J. Morris was appointed to recommend additions to the General Committee.

How to Be Useful in War Time.

Advice and Suggestions—Practical Patriotism.

We are receiving a constant stream of letters containing suggestions for personal conduct or useful action in the national emergency. We publish a selection from them below. They vary, no doubt, in value and publication does not imply endorsement of any particular suggestion. But they all reflect the intense interest and desire to help which animates the whole population, and they will, we hope, encourage the spirit of duty, unselfishness, restraint, and consideration for others which it behoves us all to cherish to the utmost.

There are some simple things that all can do and others that all can avoid.

First and foremost—Keep your head. Be calm. Go about your ordinary business quietly and soberly. Do not indulge in excitement or foolish demonstrations.

Secondly—Think of others more than you are wont to do. Think of your duty to your neighbor. Think of the common weal.

Try to contribute your share by doing your duty in your own place and your own sphere. Be abstemious and economical. Avoid waste.

Do not store goods and create an artificial scarcity to the hurt of others. Remember that it is an act of mean and selfish cowardice.

Do not hoard gold. Let it circulate. Try to make things easier, not more difficult.

Remember those who are worse off than yourself. Pay punctually what you owe, especially to your poorest creditors, such as washerwomen and charwomen.

If you are an employer think of your employed. Give them work and wages as long as you can, and work short time rather than close down.

If you are employed remember the difficulties of your employer. Instead of dwelling on your own privations think of the infinitely worse state of those who live at the seat of war and are not only thrown out of work but deprived of all they possess.

Do what you can to cheer and encourage our soldiers. Gladly help any organization for their comfort and welfare.

Explain to the young and the ignorant what war is, and why we have been forced to wage it.—Times, Aug. 6, 1914.

IN TIMES OF WAR you cannot do without clothes any more than you can in times of peace; but at such a time it is necessary that you economize as much as possible; and in order to keep all our help at work we intend to make up Suits and Overcoats, until further notice, at the smallest possible margin of profit, but must be strictly cash orders. Red McGhee says:
 You take a bunch o' fans sometime, p o s s mortmain' the ol' spastime, an' ask 'em out o' hand, just who's the c kingpin seatin' man in that there league that's run by Ban. Then listen to the hand. They'll name you Speaker, Collins. Cobb an' tell you how those guys could rob a base without both eyes shut. Then tell 'em Maizel of the Yanks can beat their bets for yeggman's pranks. They'll tell you you're a nut.

Your tip is then to let 'em see the ol' dope book. They'll all agree that Fritz has got the edge. They'll hate to believe; they'll think they're stiff, but those ol' fleggers won't change if they go an' take the pledge. Fritz ain't stole quite as many sacks as Eddie Collins of the Macks but he ain't on as much. Fritz bats around 200 feet, while Eddie's educated bat banges three-hrees-three or such.

Fritz set the Inter League on fire before he got Frank Chance to hire his pair of flying feet. With Baltimore he couldn't hit but out there with a third base mitt his work was mighty neat. He still plays third in A1 style an' he may pick up after while that good ol' art of swat. At any rate the palm is his at this here lawful steah' biz. He takes the single spot.

United Action.

If any men know their business they are Lord Kitchener, the Secretary for War, who has charge of the Army, and Prince Louis of Battenberg, the First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, who is regarded as one of the most scientific and up-to-date Admirals in the Navy. The latter has asked for and obtained authority to add 67,000 men to the Navy, and the former has asked for and is enlisting 500,000 more soldiers for the Army. All parties are working for the common weal. Austn Chamberlain, the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the last Unionist administration is at work with Lloyd George, the present Chancellor, on financial provisions for the great struggle. John Burns, who has resigned office and his seat in the Cabinet, is at work in the office of the Board of Trade with his successor, endeavouring to do his best to keep trade going. In Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the leader of the Opposition, abandoned his tour to British Columbia, telegraphing his friends that his seat of duty was at Ottawa, and the Canadian Government have submitted their legislative proposals to him, and the Opposition intend to co-operate cordially with the Government in putting through speedily all legislation which may be needed in the way of authority for a Moratorium, amendments of Banking Acts, measures to regulate prices, and amendments to criminal law to cope with disloyal acts, and votes of money for the purpose of the war.

At home political warfare has ceased. Lord Kitchener, who belongs to no political party, has joined the Cabinet as a non-partisan. In announcing the appointment of Lord Kitchener to the House of Commons, Mr. Asquith said:—"I am glad to say that the very distinguished soldier and administrator, with the public spirit and patriotism which every one would expect from him, at my request has stepped into the breach. Lord Kitchener, as everybody knows, is not a politician. His association with the Government, as a member of the Cabinet for this purpose, must not be taken as in any way identifying him with any set of public opinions. He has in a great public emergency, responded to a great public call, and I am certain he will have with him, in the discharge of one of the most arduous tasks which has ever fallen to a Minister, the complete confidence of men of all parties."

All these illustrious examples will have their full effect on us in Newfoundland. It should induce the Government to trust the Opposition and the Opposition to trust the Government. We are pledged to respond to the call of the army for soldiers and of the Navy for sailors. The Government has made an offer which has been accepted. Newfoundland must live up to it. How the Government intend to finance their proposal, we do not know, for they have given no indication. But it must be met some way. It undoubtedly will entail a heavy burden on us. But it has been made and accepted, and we have to meet it. Everybody will have to economize and face hardship that is the common lot of a great war, and we cannot escape it. The Empire is at stake. Newfoundland is a stake in the war, and we must help the Mother Country to defend the Empire and ourselves. There is no other course open to us. Parliament should be called and provision made as in England and Canada and elsewhere to cope with the difficulties which are bound to confront us. Great Britain has set us the example. Canada is about to set us another example. We must follow these examples, and make similar provisions to see our business carried on and the people protected from high prices and perhaps starvation.

Beech Nut Chewing Gum is certainly some gum! It has caught on in St. John's as no other thing of the kind has in recent years. Its manufacturers maintain that it contains a larger proportion of chicle in its make-up than any similar thing in use. This no doubt accounts for its immediate and pronounced popularity. We carry it. Price 5c. a pkg.

Rossley's Farce Comedy

AND NEW PICTURES.
The farce comedy at Rossley's kept the crowd in roars from the time the curtain went up until the finish, for there is one laugh on top of another, and in those dull times what's better than a good laugh to cheer up and divert our thoughts a little. The pictures are simply great. Mr. Rossley has now a showing of films that can't be beaten. Among the newly imported ones are some both interesting and instructive, showing the big field and naval guns in action, the largest battleships of the world, German liners, English cruisers and many regiments in training.

The case of Cherry Purcell, a three reel drama by the Eclair Co., was the head liner of a record bill at the Crescent last night, and the large number of people present at the various performances were delighted. The second attraction was a fascinating ballad by the prima dona Miss Alice Clark who added another success to her list by singing "Rebecca of sunny Brook Farm." The two comedies "Baldy Belmont Secures a Society Job" and His new coat gave grand opportunities to the old reliable Belmont. Pearl White and Chester Barnett whose names are universal and in St. John's household words. Mr. Redmond's Fine Speech.

ALL IRELAND WILL REPEL INVADERS.
Mr. Redmond said: I hope the House will not think me impertinent to intervene in the debate, but I was moved to do so a great deal by that sentence of the Foreign Secretary in which he said that the one bright spot in the situation was the changed feeling in Ireland. In past times when this Empire has been engaged in these terrible enterprises it is true that it would be almost affectation and folly on my part to deny that the sympathy of Nationalist Ireland, for reasons deep down in the centuries of history, have been estranged from this country. But allow me to say that what has occurred in recent years has altered the situation completely. (Cheers.) I must not touch upon any controversial topic, but this I may be allowed to say: that a wider knowledge of the real facts of Irish history has altered the view of the democracy of this country towards the Irish question, and I honestly believe that the democracy of Ireland will turn with the utmost anxiety and sympathy to this country in every trial and danger with which she is faced. (Loud cheers.)
There is a possibility of history repeating itself. The House will remember that in 1778, at the end of the disastrous American War, when it might be said that the military power in this country was almost at its lowest ebb and the shores of Ireland were threatened with invasion, 100,000 Irish Volunteers sprang into existence for the purpose of defending those shores. ("Hear, hear.") At first, however—and how sad is the reading of the history of those days—no Catholic was allowed to be enrolled in that body of Volunteers. Yet from the first day the Catholics of the south and west of Ireland subscribed their money and sent it for the arming of their Protestant fellow-countrymen.
Ideas on these lines went on, but finally the Catholics of the south

Bread Cake AND Pastry

JOHN B. AYRE.

were armed and enrolled as brothers in arms with their fellow-countrymen. May history repeat itself. (Cheers.) To-day there are in Ireland two large bodies of Volunteers, one of which has sprung into existence in the north and another in the south. I say to the Government that they may to-morrow withdraw everyone of their troops from Ireland. (Loud cheers.) Ireland will be defended by her armed sons from foreign invasion, and for that purpose the armed Catholics in the south will be only too glad to join arms with the armed Protestant Ulster men. (General cheers.)

Is it too much to hope that out of this situation a result may spring which will be good, not merely for the Empire, but for the future welfare and integrity of the Irish nation? (Renewed cheers.) While Irishmen are in favor of peace and would desire to save the democracy of this country from all the horrors of war, while we will make any possible sacrifice for that purpose, still, if dire necessity is forced upon this country, we offer this to the Government of the day: They may take their troops away, and if it is allowed to us in comradeship with our brothers in the north, we will ourselves defend the coasts of Ireland. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

Celebrated Norwegian Jigger

Fishermen should use these Jiggers and rig them with swivels same style as in Norway, then the Jigger acts like a minnow and when spinning attracts the fish, so that instead of jigging they really snap the Jigger and in this manner you never fail to catch them. Ordinary leads can be used, but the Norwegian style seems more simple and easily made. Our fishermen should try this great Norwegian fish killer.

Sir Edward Grey's Struggle to Save Peace.

Historic Despatches---Germany's Devious Diplomacy.

GERMANY'S DEVI

(Daily Mail, Aug. 6th.)

An historic document of the highest importance was issued last night in the shape of a White Paper, entitled "Correspondence respecting the European Crisis," containing a large number of despatches telling the story of Sir Edward Grey's desperate fight to save the peace of Europe.

Telegraphing on July 27 to Sir Edward Grey, the British Ambassador in Vienna says:

I have had conversations with all my colleagues representing the Great Powers. The impression on my mind is that the Austro-Hungarian Note was so drawn up as to make war inevitable; that the Austro-Hungarian Government are fully resolved to have war with Serbia; that they consider their position as a Great Power at stake; and that until punishment has been administered to Serbia it is unlikely that they will listen to proposals of mediation.

Sir Edward Grey telegraphed to the British Ambassador in Vienna, July 27.

I said (to the Austrian Ambassador in London) that it seemed to me as if the Austrian Government believed that, even after the Serbian reply (to the Austrian Note), they could make war on Serbia anyhow without bringing Russia into the dispute. If they could make war on Serbia and at the same time satisfy Russia well and good; but if not the consequences would be incalculable. . . . Already the effect on Europe was one of anxiety. I pointed out that our Fleet was to have dispersed to-day but we have felt unable to let it disperse. We should not think of calling up the Reserves at this moment; but there was no menace in what we had done about the Fleet. . . . It seemed to me that the Serbian reply already involved the greatest humiliation to Serbia that I had ever seen a country undergo.

DEPRESSED HERR VON JAGOW.

Sir E. Goschen to Sir Edward Grey, July 29.

I found the Secretary for Foreign Affairs (Herr von Jagow) very depressed to-day. . . . He was much troubled by reports of mobilisation in Russia and of certain military measures, which he did not specify, in France. He subsequently spoke of these measures to my French colleague, who informed him that the French Government had done nothing more than German Government had done—namely—recalled officers on leave. His Excellency denied German Government had done this, but as a matter of fact it is true.

Sir R. Rodd (British Ambassador in Rome) to Sir Edward Grey, July 29.

The German Government are being informed that the Italian Government would not be pardoned by public opinion here unless they had taken every possible step so as to avoid war. He (the Foreign Minister) is urging that the German Government must lend their co-operation in this. He added that there seemed to be a difficulty in making Germany believe that Russia was in earnest.

In a despatch to the British Ambassador in Paris on July 29 Sir Edward

Grey says that he told M. Cambon (French Ambassador in London) that even if the Austro-Serbian conflict became a question between Austria and Russia England would not feel called upon to take a hand. If Germany and France became involved "we had not made up our minds what we should do. It was a case that we should have to consider."

PRIVATE AND FRIENDLY.

Sir Edward Grey to Sir E. Goschen, July 29.

After speaking to the German Ambassador this afternoon about the European situation, I said that I wished to say to him, in a quite private and friendly way, something that was on my mind. The situation was very grave. While it was restricted to the issues at present actually involved we had no thought of interfering in it. But if Germany became involved in it, and then France, the issue might be so great that it would involve all European interests; and I did not wish him to be misled by the friendly tone of our conversation—which I hoped would continue—into thinking that we should stand aside.

He said that he quite understood this, but he asked whether I meant that we should under certain circumstances, intervene.

I replied that I did not wish to say that, or to use anything that was like a threat or an attempt to apply pressure by saying that, if things became worse, we should intervene. There would be no question of our intervening if Germany was not involved, or even if France was not involved. But we knew very well that, if the issue did become such that we thought British interests required us to intervene, we must intervene at once, and this decision would have to be very rapid, just as the decisions of other Powers had to be. If we failed in our efforts to keep the peace, and if the issue spread so that it involved practically every European interest, I did not wish to be open to any reproach from him that the friendly tone of all of our conversations had misled him or his Government into supposing that we should not take action. . . . The German Ambassador took no exception to what I had said; indeed, he told me that it accorded with what he had already given in Berlin as his view of the situation.

THE GERMAN BID.

Sir E. Goschen to Sir Edward Grey, (Received July 29.)

(Telegraphic.) Berlin, July 29, 1914. I WAS asked to call upon the Chancellor to-night. His Excellency had just returned from Potsdam. He said that should Austria be attacked by Russia, a European conflagration might, he feared become inevitable, owing to Germany's obligations as Austria's ally, in spite of his continued efforts to maintain peace. He then proceeded to make the following strong bid for British neutrality. He said that it was clear, so far as he was able to judge the main principle which governed British policy, that Great Britain would never stand by and allow France to be crushed in any conflict there might be. That, however, was not the object at which Germany aimed. Provided that neutrality of Great Britain was certain, every assurance would be given to the British Government that the Imperial Government aimed at no territorial acquisitions at the expense of France should they prove victorious in any war that might ensue.

I questioned his Excellency about the French Colonies, and he said that he was unable to give a similar undertaking in that respect. As regards Holland, however, his Excellency said that, so long as Germany's adversaries respected the integrity and neutrality of the Netherlands, Germany was ready to give his Majesty's Government an assurance that she would do likewise. It depended upon the action of France—what operations Germany might be forced to enter upon in Belgium, but when the war was over, Belgian integrity would be respected if she had not sided against Germany.

His Excellency ended by saying that ever since he had been Chancellor the object of his policy had been, as you were aware, to bring about an understanding with England; he trusted that these assurances might form the basis of that understanding which he so much desired. He had in mind a general neutrality agreement between England and Germany, though it was of course at the present moment too early to discuss details, and an assurance of British neutrality in the conflict which present crisis might possibly produce would enable him to look forward to realisation of his desire.

In reply to his Excellency's inquiry how I thought his request would appeal to you, I said that I did not think it probable that at this stage of events you would care to bind yourself to any course of action and that I was of opinion that you would desire to retain full liberty.

Our conversation upon this subject having come to an end, I communicated the contents of your telegram of to-day to his Excellency, who expressed his best thanks to you.

SIR E. GREY'S REPLY.

Sir Edward Grey to Sir E. Goschen, (Telegraphic.) Foreign Office, July 30th, 1914.

YOUR telegram of 29th July. His Majesty's Government cannot for a moment entertain the Chancellor's proposal that they should bind themselves to neutrality on such terms.

What he asks us in effect is to engage to stand by while French Colonies are taken and France is beaten so long as Germany does not take French territory as distinct from the Colonies.

From the material point of view such a proposal is unacceptable, for France, without further territory in Europe being taken from her, could be so crushed as to lose her position as a Great Power and become subordinate to German policy.

Altogether, apart from that, it would be a disgrace for us to make this bargain with Germany at the expense of France, a disgrace from which the good name of the country would never recover.

The Chancellor also in effect asks us to bargain away whatever obligation or interest we have as regards the neutrality of Belgium. We could not entertain that bargain either.

We must preserve our full freedom to act as circumstances may seem to us to require in any such unfavourable and regrettable development of the present crisis as the Chancellor contemplates.

Sir Edward Grey declares that the present crisis safely passed, his own endeavour will be to promote some arrangement to which Germany could be a party assuring her and her allies against any aggressive policy by France.

IF GERMANY WANTS PEACE.

In a despatch to Sir Edward Goschen, dated July 31, Sir Edward Grey suggests that England, France, Germany, and Italy might offer to Austria to undertake to see that she obtained full satisfaction of her demands or Serbia provided the demands did not impair Serbian sovereignty and the integrity of Serbian territory. Sir Edward Grey points out that Austria has already agreed to respect them, and says that Russia might be informed by the four disinterested Powers of their offer, all Powers, "of course," to suspend further military operations or preparations.

Sir Edward Grey authorises the Ambassador to sound the German Foreign Secretary about this proposal, and adds:

I said to the German Ambassador this morning that if Germany could get any reasonable proposal put forward which made it clear that Germany and Austria were striving to preserve European peace, and that Russia and France would be unreasonable if they rejected it, I would support it at St. Petersburg and Paris, and go the length of saying that if Russia and France would not accept it his Majesty's Government would have nothing more to do with the consequences; but, otherwise, I told the German Ambassador that if France became involved we should be drawn in.

You can add this when sounding Chancellor or Secretary of State as to proposal above.

Telegraphing to Sir Edward Grey on July 30, Sir Edward Goschen says that the Foreign Secretary told him he had heard with regret if not exactly with surprise the substance of the communication to Prince Lichnowsky, to which Sir Edward Grey's despatch quoted above refers. Prince Lichnowsky's telegram had only reached Berlin very late; "had it been received earlier the Chancellor would, of course, not have spoken to me in the way he had done."

GERMANY WITH AUSTRIA.

Sir M. de Bunsen (British Ambassador in Vienna) to Sir Edward Grey, July 30.

Although I am not able to verify it, I have private information that the German Ambassador knew the text of the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia before it was despatched and telegraphed it to the German Emperor. I know from the German Ambassador himself that he endorses every line of it.

On August 4 Sir Edward Goschen was instructed to demand the immediate release of British ships detained in Hamburg, Cuxhaven, and other German ports on the grounds that their detention was totally unjustifiable and in direct contravention of international law and of the assurances given by the German Imperial Chancellor.

Sir Edward Grey to Sir F. Villiers (British Minister at Brussels), August 6.

You should inform Belgian Government that if pressure is applied to them by Germany to induce them to depart from neutrality, his Majesty's Government expect that they will resist by any means in their power, and that his Majesty's Government will support them in offering such resistance, and that his Majesty's Government in this event are prepared to join Russia and France, if desired, in offering to the Belgian Government at once common action for the purpose of resisting use of force by Germany against them, and a guarantee to maintain their independence and integrity in future years.

Nerviline just rubbed on, lots of it, will ease that drawn, tight feeling over your ribs, will destroy the pain, will have you smiling and happy in no time.

I caught a cold last week while motoring," writes P. T. Mallory, from Linden. "My chest was full of congestion, my throat was mighty sore, and I had the fiercest stitch in my side you could imagine. As a boy I was accustomed to have my mother use Nerviline for all our minor ailments, and remembering what confidence she had in Nerviline, I sent out for a bottle at once. Between noon and eight o'clock I had a whole bottle rubbed on, and then got into a perspiration under the blankets. This drove the Nerviline in good and deep, and I woke up next morning fresh as a dollar and absolutely cured. Nerviline is now always part of my travelling kit, and I will never be without it."

 Don't sniffle and sneeze with a nasty cold. Kill it at once by "Catarrhazone." It's the surest thing on colds ever known; simply knocks them out in no time. The medicated vapor of CATARRHAZONE spreads through all parts of the breathing organs, and its beneficial action is felt instantly. Doesn't matter whether the cold is in the head, chest or lungs, Catarrhazone will reach it and cure it quickly.
 Easy to use—you bet it is—not a single drug to take because you simply breathe in the most healing and soothing of phlegm vapors that come from the wonderful Catarrhazone inhaler.

"I can cheerfully testify that Catarrhazone is simply a magical cure for colds," writes P. P. Clement, of Augusta. "For days last winter my head was completely filled up with cold. My eyes ran water, I sneezed and coughed constantly. I took many medicines. I was sick of the sight of them. Finally, I tried Catarrhazone. Its effect was magical. It soothed the inflamed membranes, stopped the sneezing, and cured in no time. I never met anything to kill a cold like Catarrhazone."

As the Germans were heavily entrenched their artillery from the outset played havoc with the French. The French wing at Dinant had been badly cut up, and nearly routed, when suddenly the strains of the Marseillaise resounded through the French lines. The men rallied and reformed and with splendid gallantry charged hurling themselves on the German troops, breaking through their lines and putting them to flight. Several Austrian army corps invaded Russian territory, according to the Vienna correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Co. The Russian advance on Zalosse, Brody and Sokal, in Galicia, close to the Russian frontier, north east of Lemberg, has been checked. A despatch from Cetinje, Montenegro, by a correspondent of Reuter's, says Montenegrin forces have been engaged for the last two days with a strong detachment of Austrian troops in the neighborhood of Grabave. The Montenegrin casualties in dead and wounded were forty-five. On August 16th, the Austrians attacked the Western frontier of Montenegro from Kriveski, Grabave, and for some time the Austrian vessels bombarded Montenegrin troops who crossed the Bosnia frontier and occupied the town of Tschinitzau, after a fierce battle.

Will Do Their Best.

Birmingham, 5th August, '14. The following letter has been handed to us for publication:—
 Dear Sirs,—You will already have received full reports of the serious crisis existing in Europe at the present time, and that England, notwithstanding her efforts for peace, has been drawn into the war.
 This must necessarily cause a great disorganization of business. The Government have taken over the railways, and have also commandeered a number of steamers, so it is impossible to tell at present what freight, if any, will be obtainable. The exportation of many goods is prohibited, including Motor Cars, and we have also had an advance of 25 p.c. on all freight rates from London. We have therefore in the interests of all our customers considered it advisable to suspend all shipments for a time waiting further developments.
 The Banks are closed until the 7th inst., the usual Bank Holiday having been extended to that date in order to relieve the financial situation.
 The Government are arranging a State Insurance against War Risks, and if this shipment should work satisfactorily we hope to be able to resume shipments before long.
 We may say some steamers are completing their loading and it is hoped they will sail as previously arranged.
 We shall, however, keep you advised, and you may rest assured we shall do the best we possibly can in our friends' interests in the unfortunate circumstances in which we are all placed.
 We are, Dear Sirs,
 Yours truly,

The United Front.

By ALFRED NOYES.
 The Kaiser, in his reply to Belgium, has definitely placed it on record for all future ages that the destiny of Germany depends absolutely upon his right to violate guarantees, tear up treaties, and dishonour his own word. He himself has now definitely stated it in language which does not admit of any other interpretation; and the duty of nations that respect law, honour, and righteousness is quite clear.

I.
 Thus only should it have come, if come it must;
 Not with a riot of flags or a mob-born cry,
 But with a noble faith, a conscience high
 And pure and proud as heaven, wherein we trust.
 We who have fought for peace, have dared the thrust
 Of calumny for peace; and watched her die,
 Her scutechons rent from sky to outraged sky
 By felon hands; and trampled into the dust.

II.
 They challenge Truth. An Empire makes reply.
 One faith, one flag, one honour, and one might.
 From sea to sea, from height to war-worn height,
 The old word rings out—to conquer, or to die.
 And we shall conquer. Though their eagles fly
 Through heaven, around this ancient isle unite
 Powers that were never vanquished in the fight,
 The unconquerable Powers that cannot lie.

III.
 We trust not in the multitude of an host.
 Nations that greatly builded, greatly stand.
 In those dark hours, the Splendour of a Hand
 Has moved behind the darkness, till that coast
 Where hate and faction seemed to triumph most Reveals itself—a buckler and a brand,
 Our rough-hewn work, shaming o'er sea and land,
 But shaped to nobler ends than man could boast.

It is God's answer. Though, for many a year,
 This land forgot the faith that made her great,
 Now, as her fleets cast off the North Sea foam,
 Casting aside all faction and all fear,
 Thrice-armed in all the majesty of her fate,
 Britain remembers, and her sword strikes home.

Stars Win From Collegians.

The first match of the final round took place last evening, and resulted in a victory for the Stars. The game was the fastest and most exciting for the season and was witnessed by 1,500 spectators. It may be said that the Collegians had the best of the game and an outstanding feature was the remarkably good saving displayed by Phefan, the Star goal-keeper. The Collegians were greatly handicapped because of Fenwick, their fastest forward, being unable to play his usual game as he was stricken with cramps. At the opening, the Collegians, who played against the wind, became aggressive and made some furious rushes into Star territory, the latter's back division clearing the goal each time. Some fast play was then served out, both teams giving a good exhibition. About a half minute before half time, Brien, off a pass from Phefan, sent in a goal, which proved to be the winning one, for the Stars. During the next period the Collegians rushed matters and kept their opponents busy. Play was confined to Star quarters, the Collegians doing their utmost to score but the Star backs put up an admirable defence. Shots were rained at Phefan, who saved brilliantly and without doubt saved his team from defeat. Fenwick, who was out of regular commission, as already stated, then changed places with Quiek, the latter going in the forward line and Fenwick keeping goal. Just before the close of the game excitement ran high, as the Collegians made a continuous bombardment of the Star goal. Ayre, Barrett, Noonan and the Barnes brothers each had a try for goal but were unsuccessful in scoring and the game ended Star 1 goal, Collegians 0. The teams were:
 COLLEGIANS—Quiek, goal; Ayre, Barrett, backs; E. Barnes, H. Barnes, Pike, halves; Smallwood, Fenwick, Hutchings, Noonan; Maddock, forwards.
 STAR—H. Phefan, goal; Hart, Thompson, backs; Kavanagh, Vinnicombe, Christopher, halves; Brien, Power, Caul, F. Phefan, Murphy, forwards.
 Mr. Bert Tait acted as referee.
 The C.E.I. and Collegians will try conclusions on Thursday evening. If the C.E.I. win they will face the Star, and if the Collegians win they will again play off with the Star. Again if the Collegians win from the C.E.I. and the latter defeat the Star all three teams will be equal.

Divorced Life

By Helen Hessing Fuarle

"Never Again"

Marian spent an almost wholly sleepless night after her odd dialogue with Meadows. His wistful plea that she marry him and save him from that other matrimonial fate for which his family had scheduled him, kept weaving itself through her mind. As she looked back upon it, his abrupt proposition seemed almost incredible to her. She had never divined that he was sentimentally interested in her. Had she acted according to good judgment in turning a deaf ear to his proposal? The question harassed and troubled her. Her heart was sad and sore. Yet back of her uneasiness, she felt instinctively that she had acted rightly in refusing to re-embark upon the high seas of marriage.

She cared a good deal for the rich young fellow — there was no doubt about that. She liked him for a companion. Her jaunts with him, during that brief period of their association, would always be golden memories for her. She recognized the fact that in time he might indeed have laid hold of her affections and awakened her love. But thus far, she felt certain, this event had not come to pass. She felt satisfied with her refusal to marry him, yet strangely dissatisfied when moments of flashing retrospection showed her drab glimpses of the harsh experiences which had assailed her since she had undertaken to correct the error of her former marriage with divorce.

She fell into a troubled sleep, a sleep fretted by snatches of strange dreams. She dreamed of a plunge into another marriage, unhappier than her first. She dreamed of bitter regrets at her failure to marry this man who had romped so oddly into her life, regrets which tore her poignantly. She caught forbidding visions of further single-handed battles with a hostile world, and of a final, bitter haven in the almshouse.

Stratled out of her troubled sleep, she awoke, to consider and reconsider the events of the past day, and to conclude with tired satisfaction in the end that her judgment had been correct.

Next day came a wonderful box of lilies of the valley, with Meadows' card. Turning the card, she caught sight of the written words: "Forgive me for my absurd folly. I didn't know I was such an egotist. Leaving for the West to-night. Good-bye, J. M."

The flowers filled Marian's room with funeral sweetness. She spent the morning in an effort to write. But again her pen lagged disobediently. Words and sentences refused to take their places in orderly, effective array. After a while she gave it up in despair and dressed for a stroll.

She crossed to Riverside Drive, and walked as far as the place where Grant's Tomb stood at soldierly guard. She dropped wearily into one of the benches, and moodily watched the passing pedestrian and vehicles.

"It's a funny world," she said to herself. "Anyhow, it's taught me not to get married purely as a matter of expediency. Never again," she added with stern emphasis.

Poor Fishery at Hermitage.

From parties who came from that section we hear that the fishery in parts of Hermitage Bay is a very poor one and that prospects are not bright. Between Gaultois and Hermitage the catch thus far is approximately 1,500 quintals which is away below an average; besides, we learn, that haddock are more plentiful at present in Fortune Bay than codfish.

August.

This is the month of August, according to men's talk; and now the sprightly toggiest lays in his winter stock. His heavy clothes he's getting, big shipments every day, while yet we're sorely sweating and shooting flies away. The urbane, genial geezers who run the hardware store, are chucking ice cream freezers where they'll be seen no more; and from dark hiding places, in attics or in sheds, they bring, with cheerful faces, last winter's skates and sleds. The corn is turning yellow, the grass will shortly die, the pumpkin's growing mellow, and almost fit for pie. So let us prize and cherish fair August's sizzling heat, for it will shortly perish, the warmth that can't be beat. The gladsome flies that cheer us will seek another clime for Autumn's drawing near us, and good old Winter time. It's surely rather funny that o'er free heat we fret, for soon we'll pay out money when we would raise a sweat. Around the old base-burner all abiding we'll squat, and wish we could return or relapse to August hot. So let all lads and lassies enjoy this happy month; in every year that passes it cometh only onte.

Wasted Energy.

By RUTH CAMERON.

One of the worst habits a human being can get into is that of doing things in the mind before he does them in reality. The other night as I lay on the couch I saw a magazine lying under the chair. I must pick that up when I get up," my mind registered. Then I went on reading. But presently I found my mind was not entirely on my book. A part of it was picking up that magazine. Now I hate to stoop over. Those portions of housekeeping such as making beds, using a dust pan, dusting the lower parts of the pantry, etc., which involve stooping, I dislike the most. Therefore the thought of picking up that magazine was an unwelcome one and hence it obsessed my mind.

Finally I got up, picked up the magazine and went back to my book. But I was ashamed of myself for doing that. I should have been able to put the matter absolutely out of my mind until I was ready to attend to it. Next time I shall try to do that, for, as I say, I think the habit of permitting one's mind to be as obsessed by something you are going to do later is extremely dangerous to one's happiness and efficiency.

It is this habit that often tires housekeepers more than their actual work. A neighbour of mine lay in the hammock on her rose screened veranda swinging idly to and fro. It was a beautiful afternoon; her work of the day was done; she had on a becoming gown; she should have been happy and at peace. But I noticed every now and then an anxious look came into her face; and I enquired the reason.

"I am thinking about that fruit I am going to preserve to-morrow," she answered, "and wondering where I will put it when it's done. My pantry is so crowded already."

You see she was doing in her mind work that she would actually do on the morrow and thus doubly tiring herself.

A friend of mine who hates to get up in the morning says that while she lies in bed dreading to start she thinks about it so intensely that she seems to project an imaginary self out of bed. "Again and again I can feel myself get up and go over to the chair where my clothes are, before I actually do get up."

Now don't you think such a process must tire her?

A similar habit is to have several things one wishes to remember seething around in the back of one's mind and to torture one's self by going over them every little while.

For instance, there are a half a dozen little things you want to put in your bag, when you go away. You think of them; try to recall them a few hours later, and you have forgotten, remembered them; and then forget them again.

Now that is all needless wear and tear on the mind. Free your mind of it at once in one of two ways. Either get those things together ready to put in the bag, or make a list of them.

A tired mind is worse than a tired body, because it is so much more difficult to get it rested. So do not lessen your efficiency by making your mind do the things that your body should do.

Ruth Cameron

Fads and Fashions.

The fashionable woman is now pretty well accustomed to fuller effects.

The latest pattern silks show enormous flowers and fruit decoratively treated.

A charming finish to the ends of a towel is elongated peacocks worked in cross-stitch.

The all-round tunic should be avoided by the woman who is either short or stout.

All the new tissues and brocades are largely used in the construction of evening slippers.

Yoke skirts for fall are being looked upon with favor. Some of the skirts have belts.

Sometimes the hip yoke of a skirt merges into long ends, which practically form a sash.

Boots are still made with suede or cloth tops to match the dresses they are worn with.

Full tunics of lace over satin skirts are finished at the waist with silk or velvet sashes.

The woman who likes the straight-line skirt with the long coat will find herself in luck this fall.

Flounces are immensely popular; frequently they are seen on skirts, narrowing toward the ankle.

Khaki color is once more in evidence, and will probably be seen during the next few months.

The new waists or blouses are bagues almost without exception. Some even have fitted backs.

Assyrian girdles knotted in front with heavily embroidered and fringed ed ends is seen on the new gowns.

The cape costume will probably be as much of an institution in the future as the coat and skirt costume.

Some of the new satin afternoon gowns have tunics lined with white silk, to show when the wearer moves.

Young girls' sports coats are made of brightly-colored blanket material, with striped borders and fringe.

The skirt buttoned all the way down is still in favor, and is one of the best possible styles for the short woman.

The conservative wedding gown of to-day has a certain resemblance to the noble Venetian dress of old times, which outlined the figure smoothly and fell in rich sculptured folds.

One of the prettiest of the new cafes is a raven's-wing silk that reaches to the hem of the gown, falling in long straight folds and gathered into an upstanding frill around the neck.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm.

Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office—its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is masterfully and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO."

When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world-famous firm in Newfoundland. ap17,11 Habits.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

A habit is an action with a self-starter.

Most actions have to be begun by the man who produces them. But a habit attends to the starting itself. It goes wherever it pleases and carries its unfortunate owner along with it.

A habit is produced by repeating an action over and over again. Some habits are very difficult indeed to produce. It is distressing to watch a man patiently pouring gallon after gallon of whiskey down his throat in the hope that some day he will get the habit and can get drunk without putting any care or thought on the process.

It usually takes a man as long to acquire this habit as it would to acquire a university education at half the cost. However, there is one consolation—the habit will last much longer than the education would. One can forget Greek and Latin but it is as hard to overlook the drink habit as it is to ignore a case of jumping appendicitis.

There are many different habits. Some of them are very meritorious—such as going to church, getting to work on time, breathing through the nose and swatting flies. Among those habits which should be removed by the aid of gas if necessary, are those of swearing, chewing tobacco, looking up while driving, sleeping on the back and voting the ticket straight because father did it before the war.

There are also many peculiar and harmless habits. Some men always put on their left shoe first. One of these men once lost his left leg and had to go barefooted ever after.

Other men get into the habit of drinking their coffee with a loud bartone gurgle. This harms no one but it keeps the performer very lonesome during his meals.

William J. Bryan once got into the habit of running for the presidency. However, he broke himself of it by a great effort. It takes a strong-minded man to break himself of a habit.

We should all strive to run ourselves and not turn the job over to a few habits, picked at random. Some times they do a good job, but more often they run us unsuccessfully and recklessly as a nineteen-year-old boy runs a racing automobile.

Prescription 'A.'

CURES:

INDIGESTION and DYSPEPSIA in all its forms.

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: "Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headaches. I feel too tired to do anything. I have no heart to exert myself, and at times I care for nothing."

"I often have a pain in the pit of the stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a feeling of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems not worth living."

Why suffer from all these symptoms when STAFFORD'S PRESCRIPTION 'A' will cure you? Try a bottle.

Price: Small size, 25 cents; postage 5 cents extra. Large size, 50 cents; postage 10 cents extra.

OUR TROOPS GAINING GROUND IN ALSACE AND LORRAINE--GERMANS ABANDONING WAGONS AND FOOD SUPPLY--VERY HEAVY GERMAN LOSSES.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, To-day.

An official statement issued, says: "Situation continues good. We are making methodical progress in Upper Alsace. The German forces are retreating in great disorder, some towards the north, others to the east. This is proved by the enormous amount of shells, wagons and provisions abandoned. The Germans also lost much more heavily in this region than we at first thought; this is proved by the number of bodies found. We are making the same progress in the Valleys of Saint Marie and Ville. Our troops, strongly based on the Don position, are marching down the valley of the Druche towards Strasburg. Everything goes to show that the Germans in this region are completely disorganized. Our troops are gaining ground all along the line of Lorquin, Adendange and Marsal. We have gained ground varying from six to twelve miles all along the frontier from Belfort to Chambrey and have established ourselves solidly both in Alsace and Lorraine."

AUSTRIANS BOMBARDING BELGRADE, THE SERBIAN CAPITAL--3,000 SHRAPNEL SHELLS THROWN INTO THE TOWN THE PAST WEEK.

LONDON, To-day.

A despatch to the Reuter Telegram Company from Milan, says the Corriere Della Serra has received an account of the conditions in Belgrade in consequence of the bombardment of the city by Austrians on the opposite banks of the Danube. The streets are silent and deserted, says the article, and the people of the town are living in cellars. Three thousand shrapnel shells have fallen in the city during the past week. As yet little damage has been done to property, but the shells are falling on the central electric works and put half the town in darkness. Up to the present fifteen citizens have been killed and many others injured.

GERMAN CRUISER REPORTED SUNK BY BRITISH OFF THE CANARY ISLANDS.

LONDON, To-day.

A Paris despatch to the Daily Telegraph says it is reported that an engagement between a British and a German warship has occurred off the Canary Islands. It is stated that a German cruiser has been sunk and also that a British cruiser has captured a German ship, containing munitions of war.

UNITED STATES NEUTRAL.

WASHINGTON, To-day.

The Japanese sudden entry into sailed north from here last night, for that might quickly increase the range of the great conflict to the Far East, commanded wide attention both among officials of Washington, the Government and diplomats generally. The attitude of the States, it became clear, would be one of non-interference in the controversy between Japan and Germany. This was reflected somewhat in the studied reticence of both President Wilson and Secretary Bryan.

LADY STRATHCONA PROVIDES HOSPITAL SHIP.

LONDON, To-day.

Besides contributing to the Prince of Wales' Distress Fund, and $5,000 to the Red Cross Society, Lady Strathcona offered and the War Office accepted the use of the Glencoe for a hospital ship, fully equipped and maintained by herself. Hon. Donald Howard, who will in future be Lord Strathcona is with his regiment the Third Hussars.

JAP CRUISER TRAILING THE GERMAN CRUISER LEIPZIG.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., To-day.

The Japanese cruiser, Idzumo, sailed north from here last night, supposedly trailing the German cruiser Leipzig, now coaling in San Francisco Bay. [San Diego is about 350 miles south of San Francisco Bay. The Leipzig is a cruiser of 3,200 tons completed in 1905. The Japanese cruiser is six years older. Her tonnage is 9,720 tons. She is an armored cruiser, and therefore can bear much more punishment than the Leipzig, which is not an armored cruiser. The Idzumo carries much heavier guns than the German. Her armament consists of four 8 inch and 14 six inch guns as against ten 4.1 guns which the German carries.]

CANADIAN PARLIAMENT MEETS TO-DAY--ALL MEASURES ALREADY SUBMITTED TO OPPOSITION LEADER--BOTH PARTIES WILL CO-OPERATE.

OTTAWA, To-day.

Parliament opens this afternoon. The measures to be submitted by the Government have all been submitted to the Liberal Leader. Both parties will co-operate in passing all necessary legislation without delay. An appropriation for war purposes will probably be $50,000,000, although it may be as high as $75,000,000. Other legislation to be introduced will include bills empowering the Government to declare a moratorium, to regulate food prices and supplies, to amend the criminal code so as to cover more specifically acts of disloyal character, to amend the Bank Act in regard to emergency notes issues and in regard to gold payments. The session is likely to last a fortnight.

Predicted This War in 1910.

Remarkable Prophecy Made in Toronto Four Years Ago.

A writer to the Toronto Globe points out that Captain Carlyon Belairs, speaking on "The Impending Naval Crisis" at the Canadian Club, Toronto, Sept. 29, 1910, made a remarkable and deliberate prophecy which at the present moment it is very interesting and illuminating to recall. These are his words as recorded in the 1910-11 volume of the "Proceedings of the Toronto Canadian Club."

"I believe that the world is in for a crisis—a world crisis—about the year 1914. All conditions, I think, point to that conclusion. The reasons are many, both direct and indirect. Among the indirect reasons may be mentioned the growth of Socialism in Germany. The Austrian-Hungarian agreement also ends in 1915, and any movement resulting from its termination will be felt a year in advance. The German army, it is fair to assume, is being fashioned for war at a definite date in that it is being financed by borrowed money, and the whole preparation will reach maturity about the year 1914. There is also another issue that is likely to have an important bearing upon conditions. The Japanese alliance ends in 1915 and the termination of that alliance is likely to be anticipated.

Further on he says: "I believe absolutely that the year 1914 will see the crisis. Six times already has England been the breakwater to turn back the aspirations of one ruler struggling after world supremacy and world-dominion. We have got to see to it that Germany does not make the seventh, the successor of Philip of Spain, Louis XIV., of Napoleon as a would-be ruler of the world."

It is interesting to notice also what he says in regard to Canada's part in the present crisis:

"England depends absolutely on her freedom and control of travel on the great sea-roads. Canada, with her great railways east to west, depends upon this trade across the seas. No Monroe doctrine will defend shipping and trade upon which England and the Empire is dependent." He further says: "The protection and defence of the Indian frontier from 1914 would be largely in three great transcontinental railways ready to carry British and Canadian troops to its defence."

Col. Unsworth's Lecture on Sunday.

The lecture delivered by Col. Unsworth on the "Salvation Army in the Mother Parliament" at the T. A. Hall, on Sunday last, was largely attended. Several hundred of the Army Officers and Soldiers paraded to the hall from the Citadel, accompanied by their band. Hon. D. Morison occupied the chair and with him on the platform were Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen, Staff-Capt. Cave, Messrs. J. Whiteaway, J. W. Taylor and J. Cowan.

After the opening hymn, prayer was said, after which Brigadier Morehen referred to the loss sustained by the Army in the death of Commissioner Rees and so many of the Army's officers and soldiers paraded to the hall from the Citadel, accompanied by their band. Hon. D. Morison occupied the chair and with him on the platform were Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen, Staff-Capt. Cave, Messrs. J. Whiteaway, J. W. Taylor and J. Cowan.

After the opening hymn, prayer was said, after which Brigadier Morehen referred to the loss sustained by the Army in the death of Commissioner Rees and so many of the Army's officers and soldiers paraded to the hall from the Citadel, accompanied by their band. Hon. D. Morison occupied the chair and with him on the platform were Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen, Staff-Capt. Cave, Messrs. J. Whiteaway, J. W. Taylor and J. Cowan.

Hon. D. Morison then expressed his pleasure on the honour conferred upon him in asking him to preside at the meeting. He stated that he was a friend of the Army because of its great work, the full extent of which cannot be estimated. He referred to the war and voiced the sentiments of all in hoping that England would sheath the sword only in victory. He made a touching reference to Commissioner Rees who had so nobly died while on the way to duty.

Col. Unsworth then introduced his subject and held the closest attention of his audience for over an hour. He felt that though the Army was not affiliated with any party, it was the duty of every member to study political matters and vote according to the dictates of conscience. He showed how some 27 years ago when a great cry was raised in England over the moral depravity of the country, the Army assisted by Mrs. Josephine Butler who first took up the fight, W. T. Stead, Cardinal Manning, Benjamin Scott and others had been instrumental in having remedial measures passed, such as the enacting of laws prohibiting children under fourteen years from getting supplied with liquor; also preventing children of the same age from smoking, the Army was a valuable asset. By assiduous self-sacrificing efforts the Army had placed $22,000 on the budget this year to the reclamation and advancement of abandoned children. With the assistance of Queen Mary, wondens had been achieved in combatting the White Slave Traffic and legislation had been passed respecting the sending away of girls and young women, ostensibly to good positions abroad, but in reality to houses of ill-fame. All shipping is now properly guarded for the protection of female passengers. Col. Unsworth told some humorous and interesting stories of his work in the Parliament where he advances the claims of the Army.

A vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. J. Whiteaway and seconded by Mr. J. W. Taylor was accorded the learned lecturer. Several hymns were sung during the evening with band accompaniment.

Special services were conducted by the Colonel on Sunday morning and evening.

A record season is promised for tulips and velvet.
