DIPHTHERIA!

USE STANDARD UNIVERSAL DISINFECTANT FLUID
For Drains, Closets, Sinks, Lavatories, Tender Feet, Washing Dags, Washing Paint, etc.
DIRECTIONS.
Infectious Diseases—Distribute by means of a spray freely over the sick room a weak solution (about 1 oz. fluid to 5 pints water). Bed vessels and other utensils should be thoroughly cleansed with a solution of about 1 part to 10.
All Infected Linen and Clothing should be washed in a solution (1 part in 100), and this can be done without fear of injury to the most delicate fabrics, and with the confident expectation of rendering them thoroughly aseptic.
A Wise Precaution in case of infectious disease is to shut off the sick room by means of a sheet saturated with a solution of about 1 part in 80.
For the Bath—If sufficient fluid to cloud the water be added the effect on the body will be found most exhilarating and refreshing.
For the Feet Bath—A teaspoonful of fluid added to the water will be found most beneficial to those troubled with tender feet.
Laundrymen and Others will find that for foul and dirty linen an admixture of fluid sufficient to make the water milky will prevent any noxious vapour arising therefrom.

Pains Quit! Back-Soreness Goes,
Torturous Lumbago Cured by "Nerviline"

This Wonderful Curative Linctant
Has "Most Magical Powers."

You can compare a congestive pain to a little fire. When congestion smoulders, pain comes and goes. Congestion grows into inflammation, but pain, now intense, grows excruciating and stays, too. There is an absolute antidote of pain—it is Nerviline. New, to you, perhaps is Nerviline, but known well in many lands as the most penetrating and pain-subduing pain remedy ever discovered. Not oily or ill-smelling, but pleasant—it rubs on. Not temporary action, but permanent in the control of pain.

Not an ache or a pain anywhere that it cannot reach. No soreness or strain that it has not the power to relieve.

Nerviline is the only remedy in the world old under guarantee—if it does not relieve you, you get your money back! Proof enough that Nerviline is a remedy that will fulfill absolutely every requirement of a pain-reliever, both for internal and external use.

Backache it cures like magic. For rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, stiffness, sprains or strains, it is the only thing. Large bottle, 50 cents; trial size, 25 cents; at druggists.

Love in a Flour Mill,

The Romance of Two Loyal Hearts!

CHAPTER XIII.

Dexter Reece replaced the miniature in the drawer, sank into a chair, thrust his hands in his pockets, and pondered. A footman entered with some newspapers and placed them on the table, murmuring an apology.

"I did not know any one was here, sir," he said. "Tea is served in the hall."

Dexter Reece nodded, and remained in the same attitude, lost in thought, for a minute or two; then, with a sigh and a shrug of his shoulders, he rose and went towards the hall. Evelyn and Cara were standing half-way up the stairs, looking at one of the pictures; and Reece, not seeing them, went to the table, on which a servant had placed freshly made tea. He poured out a cup and was raising it to his lips when Evelyn, chancing to turn her head, caught sight of him.

"Oh, I'm so sorry, Mr. Reece!" she said apologetically. "I will come and give you your tea."

He turned his head and looked up at them. Cara's back was towards him; she was examining the picture.

"Pray, don't trouble," he said. "Oh, but I will come!" said Evelyn. "I have Miss Raven here; I have been showing her some of the things in the hall."

Dexter Reece, with the cup in his hand, smiled, and inclined his head with polite indifference; and as he did so, Cara turned and looked down at him. The light from the great oriel window over the entrance door fell full upon her face, showing up, accentuating, every feature. Dexter Reece threw up his head, uttered a stifled exclamation, the teacup fell from his hand, and he stood, white and breathless, staring up at her, looking, indeed, very much as a man might look if he were gazing at a ghost.

CHAPTER XIV.

At the sound of the falling cup, Evelyn swung round.

"Oh, what have you done, Mr. Reece!" she cried, with a laugh. "You have broken one of the old Chelsea cups, and Mrs. Pinner, the housekeeper, will never forgive you; but I shall, for I think they are rather ugly."

Dexter Reece went down on one knee and began to gather up the broken pieces of the cup; his face was red now; there was a bewildered, confused expression in his keen eyes. The two girls came down the stairs; and Cara picked up a fragment of the precious china which Dexter Reece had overlooked. She placed it in his hand, and, as he took it, his eyes sought her face and scanned it with an eagerness which he was too agitated to conceal. For the face of the girl at the mill bore an extraordinary resemblance to that of the miniature which he had just been examining, the portrait of Sir Mortimer's wife.

"Don't look so upset," said Evelyn; "it is really not of much consequence; the house is overrun by old china, and most of it is deplorably ugly."

"I must apologize for my clumsiness," he said gravely. "I can't think how it happened; the cup slipped from my hand."

"Just as the cups always do," broke in Evelyn, who was almost distressed, as if he did not interest her. She glanced round the hall, then looked at Evelyn. "I must go home," she said.

"Yes," he replied mechanically. Then he turned to Cara, and said, with a banality unusual with him: "It has been a beautiful day."

"Yes," she assented, quite calmly, as if he did not interest her. She glanced round the hall, then looked at Evelyn. "I must go home," she said.

"Must you?" asked Evelyn reluctantly. "I'll tell them to bring the pony round. I am going up to get you that book of prints you were so interested in. I won't be long. Give Mr. Reece some more tea, dear," she added, as she ran up the stairs. Cara poured out some tea; Reece took up the cup, and, leaning against the heavy chair, looked at her, now calmly and with a conventional smile.

"This is the first time you have been to the Hall, Miss Raven?" he said half-interrogatively.

"Yes," replied Cara, walking to a cabinet, and bending over it. "You have seen the outside often enough, I suppose?" he said in a casual way; but his eyes, narrowed to slits, watched her keenly, and noticed the grace of her form, the ease of her movements.

"No," she replied, still bending over the cabinet. "That is strange," he said. "I suppose you have been living on the moor some time?"

"Since I was a child," she answered; "but I do not often leave the moor; my father does not like me to do so."

Dexter Reece pricked up his ears. Was he mistaken, was his imagination misleading him, or was there in reality a vague Italian accent in her voice?

"Since you were a child," he said, with an air of friendly interest. "Then, you were not born here?"

"No," she said, leaving the cabinet and coming to the table, where she stood with her fingers resting lightly on it, her eyes glancing from him to the fascinating objects in the hall. "I was born in Italy—I think," she added indifferently.

Dexter Reece's heart beat fast; his conventional smile became wooden on his face.

"You only think?" he said, stretching the smile still further.

"I don't remember," she replied as indifferently as before.

"But your name is English," he said.

"Is it?" she asked. "I did not know. My father is an Italian."

"You speak English perfectly," he remarked. "And where did you come from—I mean, before you came to the mill?"

As he put the question he glanced over the graceful form, at the beautiful face. With her now neatly done, hair and a plain serge dress which, because of its age, fitted her closely, she looked a totally different girl to the unkempt and roughly clad one he had seen at the mill. He could have cursed himself for having so completely ignored her at that, their first meeting.

"I don't know," she replied. She raised her eyes to his suddenly and looked at him with "Why do you want to know?"

Dexter Reece actually coloured. "Oh, for—for no particular reason," he responded, with a smile.

"Then it doesn't matter," she said calmly.

Evelyn came running down the stairs at that moment with the book of engravings in her hand.

"Come along! if you really must go, Cara," she said.

The two girls went out to the pony-carriage that was waiting. Dexter Reece followed them, and put them in; then, when they had driven off, he returned to the hall; but, after a moment or two, he went to the library, took the miniature from the cabinet and examined it with feverish eagerness. Yes; there could be no doubt about it; the resemblance was extraordinary. With the miniature in his hand, he sank into a chair, and, shutting his eyes, pondered over the problem which the resemblance presented.

This girl of the Mill, which stood within a short distance of the Hall, was the very image of Sir Mortimer's wife. She passed as an Italian, her face was that of an Italian; they had come to the place when this girl was but a child. Could it be possible that there was any connection between this Cara Raven and the child who had been stolen on the night Sir Mortimer had been murdered? Could it be possible that this girl's father, the miller, was in some way or other connected with the murder, the theft of the ruby, the abduction of the child?

The mere suggestion of such an idea sent the blood racing through Dexter Reece's veins. He tried to calm himself, to hold himself in hand, to argue against the possibility of such a connection. Was it likely, he asked himself, that the murderer, the man who had stolen the priceless ruby, who had abducted the child, would return to England and take up his abode so near the scene of his crime? It scarcely seemed probable—possible; but Dexter Reece, in his study of human nature, its foibles and its weaknesses, was aware that the extraordinary animal, man, will frequently do the unexpected, and that the criminal, by a strange and nameless fascination, is often drawn as if by an unknown power, to the scene of his crime.

He sprang from his chair and paced up and down the room, his thin lips working, his eyes glancing from side to side, like those of a wolf searching for a trail through a boundless forest. If this girl, this miller's daughter, were the stolen child of Sir Mortimer, she was the heiress not only to the great ruby, but to the vast sum of money realized by the other jewels and held in trust for her. She was not only a miller's daughter, not a waif of the solitary moor, but a girl of high birth, and wealthy to boot.

During his stay at the Hall, Dexter Reece had now and again regarded Evelyn Desborough as desirable prey; but Evelyn Desborough as a possible wife sank to insignificance compared with this strange girl, Cara Raven—if she were, in deed, Sir Mortimer's daughter. To put it shortly, our friend, Dexter Reece, was agitated by the emotion from which a man would suffer who stood before two caskets, either of which might contain the treasure he coveted.

He did not meet Evelyn before dinner that night. Mr. Lexham had gone, there were no other guests, and Sir Reginald, Evelyn, and Dexter Reece dined alone. As usual, Sir

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Reginald was absorbed in his own gloomy thoughts, and appeared almost unconscious of the presence of the other two; so that Dexter Reece could talk to Evelyn as if no third person were present.

"You took Miss Raven home?" he said, as he filled his glass.

"Yes," said Evelyn. "I am so glad that I brought her here. She is such a charming girl."

"Really?" he asked, with an elevation of his brows.

"Yes, really," she said emphatically. "I have never met any one like her. She is so—so original. It's a poor way of describing her; but I can't think of any other word for the moment."

"How is she original?" he asked.

"Well," replied Evelyn, with hesitation, for it is always difficult to explain an impression. "She is so unlike what one would imagine a girl of her position, in her situation, would be. She has lived all her life at that mill on the moor, and yet she is not at all gauche, not a bit shy or awkward. It is difficult to explain what I mean; but you will understand when I say that she is calm and unembarrassed as one of ourselves. You must have noticed that, Mr. Reece?"

"Yes," he said. "I did notice it. How do you account for it?"

Evelyn shrugged her shoulders. "I don't account for it. I can't. She is a very strange girl; but I like her immensely. I feel drawn towards her; she interests me more than any girl I've ever met. I am quite sure that if I saw more of her I should love her."

Sir Reginald lifted his head. "Of whom are you speaking? what girl is this?" he asked in his weary, listless fashion.

"The girl at the old mill on the moor, father," replied Evelyn; "the girl who stopped the cobs. You know; I told you."

Sir Reginald nodded, and apparently abandoned all interest in the subject.

Dexter Reece also changed the topic of conversation. He found it difficult to sleep that night, and the next day, soon after breakfast, he walked up to the moor. As he approached the mill he saw the sails were revolving slowly. He did not walk straight up to the door, but, seating himself on one of the granite boulders at a little distance, was apparently lost in studying the view; but presently he went up to the mill and knocked at the closed door.

It was opened by Cara, who was dressed in her rough, quaint, working attire, bespeckled with the flour, which powdered her dark hair.

"How do you do, Miss Raven?" said Dexter Reece.

Cara regarded him coldly. "I am very well," she said. "What do you want?"

"Only a glass of water, if I may beg of you," he said, with a conventional smile.

"Wait there," she said; "I'll bring it to you."

Dexter Reece seated himself on an old mill-stone outside the door, and presently came, not Cara, but Lenuel Raven. He had a mug of water in his hand, and he presented it with a courtly little bow to Reece.

The Eastern Trust Company.

A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator:

1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $331,000.00, and a reserve fund of $229,300.00.
2. It has a long experience in the work of administering estates; it is incorporated for this business of acting as a trustee, and, unlike many other trust companies, it does no other.
3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look to a substitute, and the work of administration is impeded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.
4. It possesses the confidence of governments, universities and prominent charities and administrators their funds.
5. A number of other advantages which will appear in due course.

Messages Received Previous to 9 A.M.

OFFICIAL. LONDON, Dec. 4. The Governor, Newfoundland: In Mesopotamia General Townsend is retiring on Hattelamara. He fought a rear-guard action on the night of the 29th against greatly superior Turkish forces. Our casualties are estimated at 122. River boats, disabled by shell fire, were abandoned and guns and engines had been rendered useless. The total casualties in the Tigris fighting is 4,667. In France were artillery actions and grenade fighting. A small post near Loubaertville was lost and recaptured. Nothing special in Russia and Italy. Serbia announces that Monastir has fallen.

BONAR LAW.

ADVOCATES NATIONAL SERVICE.

LONDON, Dec. 4. The principle of training for national service throughout the Empire as already adopted by certain of the Overseas Dominions, has been endorsed by the Council of the Royal Colonial Institute. The resolutions which were adopted with unanimity recognized the duty of adult males of the British race to qualify for bearing arms for the purpose of defence, and the first step would be to train all boys and young men, physically fit, in drilling and shooting.

It is explained that this decision has been taken with a view to meeting the desire of the Government that American securities held in this country should be realized in order to overcome the adverse rate of exchange. The bonds amount to about $25,000,000.

GENERAL JOFFRE IN COMMAND.

PARIS, Dec. 4. Premier Bland is authorized by the statement that his Government has no intention of appointing a successor to General Joffre in command of the armies on the French front. In reply to an enquiry from the Committee of the Chamber as to what would be the effect of the creation of the new post of Commander-in-Chief of all French armies, except those in Africa to which Joffre had been appointed, M. Bland is quoted as having said the sole object of the Entente Powers of the Generalsissimo is to insure single-mindedness of direction in military operations which has become more necessary than ever and at the same time to establish a close co-ordination between the command of our armies and the technical councils of the Allies which will be held at grand headquarters.

RAINS INTERFERE WITH FIGHTING.

PARIS, Dec. 4. (Official). The night was relatively calm. Some shells of large calibre were discharged to the east of Grenay, and in the region of Saigneuil. We exploded successfully a mine near Vauquois. Torrential rains interfered with the artillery fighting.

AWAITING REPLY.

PARIS, Dec. 4. (Official). Ministers of the Quadruple Entente conferred with M. Skouloudis, the Greek Premier, at one o'clock on Saturday, who later called on the King. The Entente Ministers were reassured as to a reply satisfactory.

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 4. The Russian War Office to-day gave out the following statement: Situation unchanged from Gulf of Riga to Pripiet. On the night of the 2nd the enemy, after a heavy artillery bombardment, launched an artillery attack upon the railway station at Old Podcherevski on the left bank of the Styx, southwest of Rafalovka. Our forces at first were repulsed, but regained toward the evening the lost position. Our artillery, by concentrated fire upon the village of Semki on the left bank of the Styx, above Czartorysk, threw the enemy into disorderly flight, causing them serious losses.

STILL WAITING.

PARIS, Dec. 4. The Entente Powers consider Greece is taking too long to reflect upon her answer to their demands and have decided to apply again the economy measures which were used with such effect a fortnight ago, says the Figaro. In Athens public opinion is veering towards the fullest acceptance of the demands of the Entente Powers. While the Government is hesitating in forming its reply thousands of refugees are arriving at Florina, after tramping through deep snow from Monastir. All the buildings are crowded and hundreds are without shelter; children are dying from hunger and exposure, the Municipal Treasury has been emptied, and appeals for aid have been made to Athens.

SERBIA'S FOUR HUNDRED.

LONDON, Dec. 4. Monastir became untenable for the Serbs on Wednesday, when the Bulgarians occupied Kanali on the railway between the Macedonian capital and the Greek frontier, cutting off the Serbian retreat to the south, says the Times.

FORD LEAVES FOR EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4. With bands playing and hundreds on shore shouting and cheering for peace, the ship Oscar II, bearing Henry Ford and his peace delegates for Europe, swung out from her pier at Hoboken this afternoon and headed toward the bay. With the departure of the liner one of the most unique peace missions in Europe was under way. The Oscar II will stop at Christiansia and Copenhagen, where delegates from other neutral countries will join the peace party. The journey will then continue to the Hague, where Ford plans to establish a peace tribunal, which will endeavor to bring about the end of the European war. One of the last persons Ford saw before sailing was W. J. Bryan, who went aboard the Oscar II, about half an hour before the liner's departure.

RETURNING TO BRUSSELS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. American Minister Whitlock is returning to Brussels when he sails from the United States on Dec. 28, on the Rotterdam, it was officially stated at the State department to-day. Last night despatches said that the German military governor at Brussels had recommended to his government that the American Legation be transferred to the seat of the Belgian the Salonika correspondent of the Times. Col. Vassitch's army is now retiring eastward over the only route open. Much of the credit for the long and heroic defence of the town is given Colonel Royaditch who placed himself at the head of 400 irregulars, who gallantly held back the advancing Bulgars. Whenever it became necessary for the main Serb forces to retire this small band of comatall greatly troubled the Bulgarians by its extreme mobility and knowledge of every inch of the ground. The impression was thus given that the Serb forces were much more numerous than really was the case. During the incessant day and night fighting, the brave 400 lost so heavily that by Tuesday only 100 remained, but by their stubborn resistance, they had saved the Serb army.

GRECIAN MACEDONIA.

LONDON, Dec. 4. Virtually the whole of Grecian Macedonia has been handed over to the Allies as a war base, says the Berlin Tageblatt, as quoted in a Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. Greece has agreed to give the Allies the free use of the railroad in this territory, as well as of Aegean harbors, including Kavali. Greece declines, however, to disarm the troops of the Central Powers if they pursued the Allied troops in the Grecian territory. The Tageblatt also is credited with the statement that the Central Powers have offered Greece southern Albania and islands in the Aegean on conditions that she decline to grant certain demands of the Allies, and remain neutral.

NOT YET RECALLED.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. The United States Government to-day looked to Germany for the immediate recall of Captains Kary Boy-Ed and Franz Von Papen, respectively naval and military attachés at the German Embassy here, in accordance with Secretary of State Lansing's request. The action of Secretary Lansing has the full approval of President Wilson and his cabinet. The President is said to have decided to get rid of all foreign officers whose activities are considered harmful to the best interests of the United States. The Government, it was said to-day, probably will ask the Entente Allies for safe conduct for the offending attachés. They are expected to leave at once.

SENTENCED FOR CONSPIRACY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4. Dr. Karl Buecz, George Kotter and Adolph Sachmeister, of the Hamburg American Line, convicted of conspiracy to defraud the United States Government, were sentenced to-day to serve one and a half years in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta. Joseph Peppinghaus's sentence was one year. The Hamburg American Line was fined one dollar. All defendants were admitted to bail pending the swearing out of a writ of error in their behalf.

READY TO FIGHT TO END OF WAR.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4. A cable from London this morning to the Herald says: An official German wireless announcement that the Imperial Chancellor will permit the Socialists in the Reichstag to interpellate the government on possible terms of peace is received here with contempt, which is intensified by the fact that Berlin's balloons are loosed at the moment when Henry Ford's modern Noah's Ark leaves New York in what the Allies regard as an impudent attempt to place the Allied powers in a false position. Every newspaper in London, this morning jeers at Germany's talk of peace, at the moment when Britain is now fully supplied with three million men, munitions and money, and is ready to fight to the only possible end of the war, victory for the freedom of Europe.

ATTEMPT TO DESTROY COMMERCE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 4. Baron George Wilhelm Von Bricken, who claimed immunity from arrest as a military attaché to the German Consul General here, surrendered last night to the Federal authorities. He was charged with attempting to destroy commerce with the Entente Allies. He was released on a bail bond of $10,000.

A BRITISH DEFEAT.

LONDON, Dec. 4. An official announcement was made to-day that the forces of General Townsend in Mesopotamia were retiring to Kutelamara. This British announcement confirms a Berlin wireless despatch of a few days ago to the effect that the British were being forced back in the direction of Kutelamara, 105 miles south of Bagdad. The wireless message quoted in the official Turkish report which said that the British had suffered a severe setback, losing 5,000 officers and men in three days' fighting in falling back from the vicinity of Bagdad. It was said the British attempted to make a stand at Azizi but were routed.

DENIES REPORTS.

BERLIN, Dec. 4. The Government has issued a statement denying reports that Germany is seeking peace.

CHINESE SAILORS MUTINY.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 4. Heavy firing was heard at 6.30 o'clock this morning from the direction of the arsenal. Soon after, the report spread that a revolutionary outbreak had occurred, and that the rebels had seized a warship, which was firing on another warship and the arsenal. Several shells have fallen in the forebay concessions. The outbreak appears to have been confined to the cruiser Chaoho, the crew of which mutinied. The arsenal authorities have notified the senior Consul at the foreign settlement, that they will shell and sink the Chaoho at daybreak.

FACTORY BLOWN UP.

LONDON, Dec. 4. The destruction of a large ammunition factory at Halle, in Prussian Saxony, by an explosion, with the loss of several hundred lives, is reported. A message from Kolding, Denmark, to Copenhagen, says that discontented workmen are suspected of having caused the explosion.

TWO BRITISH STEAMERS SUNK.

LONDON, Dec. 4. Two more British steamers, have been sunk in the Mediterranean, by submarines, they were the Middleton and Clan McLeod. Four men on the Middleton were killed, one was wounded and 19 were landed at Malta. There are no records of receipt movements of the Middleton which presumably was in the service of the British government. The Clan McLeod was last reported at Port Said, Sept. 26th. She was owned in Glasgow.

SWEDISH STEAMER SUNK.

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district." He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the trinity of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them, I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is--well, mere child's play."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open for we pass it in almost every town--always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very unobtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness--all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances, by the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO X Lamp and GASTEAM Radiators fill all light and heat requirements.

MONDAY, Dec. 6th, 1915.

"The Hall is Not Told."

Last week we pointed out that the communication sent to the Daily News as a reply to the complaints from Our Boys in the Dardanelles on the face of it in no way extenuated the complaints, but that it aggravated them. The suggestion that the complaints were made before October 10th, and that the comforts had arrived about that time we pointed out was negatived by the time estimated for the transportation. We pointed out further that the comforts, prepared by the assiduous work of the noble women workers of the W. P. A. throughout the Island, were not due, according to the shortest estimated time until Nov. 1st, when it was suggested the official winter clothing would be given out.

The letter of Private Frank Lind published in the Daily News this morning makes it clear that the W. P. A. comforts had not been distributed on Oct. 30th, and he makes no mention of expecting any official supply two days later. The question is, one, and is not only a confirmation of complaints from other sources, but it establishes the facts completely. We call out the paragraphs which deal with this matter.

"It is a little warmer the past few days, but we dread the cold days and nights to come. Perhaps to-day it will change again, and then comes that rotten cold dampness for days and days. The people who fitted us out for a warm climate, when sending us here, had a poor idea of what it is like. I don't suppose there are ten men in the regiment who were lucky enough to have brought a pair of drawers with them. I hope you won't think I am complaining, but I am sure I voice the sentiments of every man in the regiment when I tell you that we feel disgusted on looking through the St. John's (Newfoundland) papers and read about so many thousands of pairs of socks, thousands of underclothing, etc., being knitted by the good women at home for 'our boys at the front.' The question some-body asks every day is: 'Where does it all go to?' for men in the Regiment are cold and wretched standing sentry at nights with perhaps one thin shirt under his tunic. I would shock you if I told the length of time most of the shirts have been on the men since being washed. Lots of them are wearing the same shirt put on either in Aldershot or en route. We have not received anything from the W. P. A. since we were at Fort George.

NO Y. M. C. A.'S THERE.

Now all along until we got to the front, none of the men bothered, as we were always in places where there were shops, and when a man wanted any clothing or anything he went and bought it, but here as I have already told you, we are isolated. Money is of no use, and if there were shops to buy things nobody would say a word. Are you aware that in the firing line in France the men spend, I understand, about 48 hours in the trenches and 96 hours out, but when out they have not dug-outs as we, but Y. M. C. A. canteens, stores and houses to go to, and have a good feed, a bath, and all sorts of luxuries, and buy anything you need. Yet they seem to be getting the clothing that is so badly needed amongst our men. Don't think I exaggerate when I say 'badly needed' for 'the half is not told.' I see things that would make your heart ache. Then of course, a soldier's life is rough, but why not make it as pleasant as possible, and the winter is set in here.

SENT BUT NOT RECEIVED.

All the different Regiments here have their packages time after time sent from the country, or city, as the case may be, which they represent; parcels of chocolates, cigarettes, and all sorts of things given by the people to their Regiment 'at the front.' For instance, the London Fusiliers have no end of stuff from London; the Royal Scots from Edinburgh, and so on. The Royal Scots were near us last time we were out of the trenches and when we met them they gave our fellows no end of cigarettes, candles, and in some cases pairs of gloves and mufflers, etc. They had more than they knew what to do with. Then the Australians, you ought to see the way they are looked after by their people. They need for nothing, and give piles of it away to whatever Regiments happened to be stationed near them from time to time, and those Australians are certainly 'gone' on the Newfoundlanders. ('Colonials, you know') they would do anything for our chaps. If we happen to meet up with any of them the word Newfoundlanders bears a charm. It is, 'Newfoundlanders ask what you will and you shall have it.'

We draw attention to the statement 'We have not received anything from the W. P. A. since the time we were at Fort George.'

In this connection, we would like to ask whether Sir Edgar Bowring drew attention to the state of affairs which existed at the time he arrived here, months ago, as to lack of W.P.A. comforts.

The important thing now for the authorities to ascertain is whether Our Boys in the Dardanelles are still without underclothing. If not, who were they supplied? Further, if the W. P. A. comforts have arrived, when they were distributed? Further, has provision been made to provide them with warm clothing as they need it through the cold weather?

It was following the Ypres battle Pte. Frampton was wounded. On a Sunday night while holding reserve trenches to be ready for Monday morning's work he was struck by shrapnel in the left shoulder and put out of commission. He was then removed to Thorncliffe Hospital, England. He says that conditions are excellent in the trenches for fighting and recites his experiences loosely. BALLARD BROWN AND THE ONE AND ONLY MADGE LOCKE.

The patrons of Rossley's will be on hand to-night to extend a hearty welcome to the great actor vocalist Mr. Ballard Brown, and the one and only Madge Locke. Scores of patrons have said to Mr. Rossley, why don't you bring us people like Brown and Locke. There are not many Ballard Browns and certainly less Madge Lockes in the business. They are no picture house singers but high class artists, and the Rossleys knowing the quality of their work booked them for the greatest production ever witnessed here, the 4th annual pantomime Beauty and the Beast. There are good pictures also, and the finest orchestra in the city.

At 11.25 a.m. to-day an alarm of fire was sent in from box 221, bringing the Central and Eastern companies to Rennie & Co's. confectionery store, situated at the junction of Prescott Street and Rawlins' Cross. The fire broke out in the top flat of the building, where Mr. R. Rennie kept his office. Excessive heat from the chimney of the stove there ignited the woodwork nearby. A blaze quickly followed and was in progress several minutes before the occupants of the store, beneath knew it. The firemen on arrival applied two streams of water and in a short time had the fire under control, but not before the flat was gutted and a few hundred dollars' worth of property destroyed. The under flat or shop was slightly damaged by smoke and water. The building is owned by Capt. Edward English and was insured in the Queen Ins. Co.

CONFERENCE AT CALAIS.

PARIS, To-day.
An official announcement was made here to-day of the meeting at Calais yesterday of representatives of France and Britain. After luncheon together the conference began at 2.30 o'clock and lasted until six, during which time the principal questions apparent at present were discussed. The English delegates returned to London during the night and the French representatives returned to Paris.

MORE PROCASTINATION.

LONDON, To-day.
An Athens despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says that after President Poincaré had conferred with the French and British ministers yesterday, he called a meeting of the Cabinet and then visited King Constantine. It is reported at Athens, the message says, the subject under consideration by the Cabinet was a fresh proposal made by the Entente Powers.

NEW AGREEMENT FOR NO SEPARATE PEACE.

LONDON, To-day.
The text of the declaration, signed last week by the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, and the French, Italian, Japanese and Russian Ambassadors in London, engaging each of the five nations not to conclude a separate peace is as follows: The Italian Government, having decided to accede to the declaration between the French, British and Russian Governments signed in London on Sept. 5, 1914, which declaration was accepted by the Japanese Government, Oct. 19, 1914, and designated, duly authorized thereto by their respective Governments, hereby declare as follows: The British, French, Italian, Japanese and Russian Governments mutually engage not to conclude peace separately during the present war. The five Governments agree when the terms of peace come to be discussed no one of the Allies will demand conditions of peace without previous agreement of each of the other Allies.

ALLIES REINFORCING ON THE VARDA.

LONDON, To-day.
The Athens correspondent of Reuters Telegram Company sends the following: The conviction prevails here that the Balkan campaign will continue more energetically in order to check the German advance to Constantinople. From French sources, it is reported, the reinforcement of the entire line from the Cerus River to Krivelak continues. The positions east of the Vardar River have gradually been rendered secure, with a view to extending the zone for the protection of the railway.

STEAMER ASHORE.

LONDON, To-day.
A despatch received by Lloyds from Melbourne, near Ushant, France, says the British steamer Star of New Zealand, 46 men of her crew have been saved. The Star of New Zealand is a vessel of 4417 tons and belongs to the Star Line, Belfast. The last report of the steamer available in shipping records shows her sailing from Buenos Aires, September 21, for unknown destination.

THE LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, To-day.
Negotiations between Greece and Allied Powers still drag on at Athens. New hitches seemingly arising as old ones are smoothed out. One day it is reported a settlement has been reached, only to be followed the next day by denial of reports of fresh difficulties confronting the diplomats. The people of the Allied countries, particularly those of France and Italy, are becoming impatient over the continuing delay and the news is demanding stern action to be taken to demonstrate to King Constantine and his ministers the determination of the Quadruple Entente to secure the assurances demanded. New proposals are said to have been made by France and Britain in the hope of reaching an agreement. The attitude of Roumania also remains undecided. Since the despatch announcing the closing of Roumanian ports to foreign trade was received, silence has descended upon Bucharest. Europe is awaiting anxiously the next move, which will give the meaning of this order general.

SCHOONER ASHORE.

It is reported from Florida that the Bulgarian troops remain camped in the vicinity of Monastir at a place named St. Kieklak. A delegation of inhabitants went out to the Bulgarian outposts to notify the troops they could enter the town. The Bulgarian officer said that he had no orders to enter the town and recommended that the inhabitants organize a civic guard to maintain order. The Bulgarian deserters arriving at Florida say the great majority of Bulgarian soldiers think the war has been ended by the occupation of Macedonia and do not want to continue fighting in the interests of the Germanic powers.

PAPAL CONSISTORY.

ROME, To-day.
The Consistory being held to-day is important because it is the first since the election of the present Pope and also because it affords the Pontiff opportunity to raise his voice in the question of the war, doing so in as solemn a manner as possible for the head of the Catholic Church, namely in a consistorial allocation.

CALL FOR 500,000 MEN.

NEW YORK, To-day.
A correspondent of the New York Herald cables from London: Though the attitude of Greece is still the subject of solicitude to the Entente Powers, I am informed that negotiations have reached in one respect at least, a satisfactory end. This is evidenced by Greece permitting the elements of the Serbian army to form a junction with the Anglo-French. Further I am told that despite all reports to the contrary, the Serbian northern and southern armies, nearly intact, have retired into Albania, where, when they are succored and re-equipped by France and Great Britain, they will strike again.

LONDON, To-day.
The recruiting scheme of Earl Derby, Director of Recruiting, has not been as successful as had been hoped for, said James Henry Thomas, Labor member of Parliament, addressing a meeting of railway workers at Long Eaton, last night. Thomas said he had discussed the matter with Earl Derby on Saturday, that the Earl had expressed the opinion that his plan had not been as successful as he had anticipated or had a right to expect. Therefore the Earl declared a supreme effort must be made the next few days by those who valued their freedom and were opposed to conscription.

Disguising Warships.

Elaborate experiments are being carried out by the United States Navy to demonstrate the value of paint as a means of concealing or disguising warships. Recently the torpedo-boat destroyer McDonough appeared off Block Island disguised as a submarine. Black paint had been used over the grey sides of the destroyer to form the outline of a submarine, and the shape of a periscope was painted on the middle funnel. The illusion was said to have been effective at a short distance.

The Cats Toilet.

Cats, large and small, make the most careful toilet of any class of animals. Lions and tigers wash themselves in exactly the same manner as the cat, wetting the dark, rubber-like ball of the forefoot and inner toe, and passing it over the face and behind the ears. The foot is thus at the same time a sponge and brush, and the rough tongue cleans the rest of the body.

Fads and Fashions.

Twilight colors for evening gowns are favored. Pockets are still being used to some extent. Collars with cape effects are novel and attractive. All afternoon frocks are in gorgeous rich colorings. Afternoon gowns have collars either high or low.

Round and melon-shaped muffs are most prominent. Very few trains are used, even for formal functions. In street dresses, high collars are very much in evidence. Many smart suits have short and medium length jackets. Silk and velvet roses are much used on evening wraps. In the smartest new waists, color is combined with white.

New is the shoulder cape, separate and matching the suit. Metal lace or brocade is usually veiled with tulle to soften it. The trend of fashion is still for the simple and inconspicuous. Velvet and lace are effectively combined in the newer waists.

Black velvet is said to be as universally becoming as blue serge. The inexpensive evening wrap can be made rich by velvet trimming. Long transparent sleeves are often used for tulle theatre frocks. Brocade evening shoes always have a definite charm of their own. When metal lace is used in a tulle evening frock the skirt is entirely of tulle. The skirts of afternoon frocks should be much fuller than those of suits.

Like tight, old-fashioned collarettes. Like tight, old-fashioned collarettes. Red fox and gray squirrel are seen combined in some novelty sets of fur. Skirts of white broadcloth, serge and corduroy are considered chic for skating. Corsets are growing higher the bustless limp corset of last season is no more. Every color scheme is made more beautiful by being blended with soft dark fur.

A Night At The Front.

The following is an extract from a letter recently received from the Newfoundlanders who were in the trenches for a week's rest (so-called). In reality it is much harder out of the trenches than in, as one has to do such a lot of trench digging. The last time we were in the trenches, I had my first real encounter with the Turks. I was in charge of a covering party, that is, a party of engineers who were laying barbed wire in front of our trenches. We went out over the parapet as bold as brass, having been told that we could go to a certain bank about seventy yards in front, with safety. We no sooner got there when it was discovered that we were within five yards of a Turkish sap. The Turks opened fire and of course, so did we. This went on gaily enough for some time, when I saw the Turks bringing up more mortar on our rear and attempting to cut us off. I then thought it time to "beat it." So we all started crawling back pursued by the Turks. One Turk came quite close to me, being last man, and he and I had quite a duel, he firing his rifle and I my revolver. I think I must have got him as after a time he stopped firing. The party got in without a scratch, though one fellow got three bullets in his cap. We then went out again to about twenty yards in front of our lines, in order to let the engineers do their work. This time all went well, except for the fact that two men were wounded, one of my party, and one engineer. It was quite an exciting night for an amateur soldier! None of us were the least bit frightened as of course the excitement was intense. The party consisted of nine men and myself. I could hardly move the next day as I was so stiff from crawling, having spent about four hours on my hands and knees. The weather out here still remains fine and fairly warm, only the nights are chilly. Cigarettes are our chief need, so you can send some when you get the chance."

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Play is a most important factor in the mental as well as in the physical development of the child. Educators are spending time and thought on the varieties of play that furnish healthy amusement and accurate training of the mind and hands at the same time. The request for adult help in his play is the expression of the child's longing to develop himself. Putting a toy into his hands or telling him to amuse himself is like denying a hungry child bread. There are a very large number of simple games, all of which are adapted to home use, that will enable a mother to develop in her child dexterity, quickness of thought, accurate observation, and a retentive memory.

The Better Part.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Do you ever lose your temper and say disagreeable things?" I heard one of her admirers ask the lady yesterday. "I don't know," she answered. "I don't know," she answered for herself. "No, don't say you do. I'd rather keep on believing you don't. It would help me more to believe in you than to find you human."

There is a part of us that likes to find that the people we admire are only human and like ourselves after all. And there is a better part that likes to keep on believing they are not touched with earth, but are different and wonderful and all that we wishfully long to be and continually strive towards and continually fall of.

It is that better part which made Emerson write his "Had I a lover noble and free, would he were nobler than love to me."

It is that which stands behind Tennison's beautiful "I had liefer ye were worthy of my love than to be loved again of you."

If You Had Not Been Good I should Have Been More Wicked.

It was that part of her which made poor struggling Gwendolen cry out to Daniel Deronda—"If you had not been good I should have been more wicked than I am."

It is a poignant cry and one fraught with warning to those who are honored (and shackled) by the love and admiration of some other human being.

No man can live to himself alone. No man can afford to ignore what argument his life to his neighbour's creed may be lending. Everyone owes it not only to himself to live up to his highest lights, but to be true to the best he knows, but also to those who admire and idealize him.

"We are shaped and fashioned by what we love," says Goethe.

You Do Not Know The Good You May Be Doing.

Without giving a word of advice, without making any active effort to influence another, you may be shaping someone's character. Perhaps it seems to you that you are not doing much good in the world. You are trying to fill your small niche to the best of your ability, you are trying to be patient and courageous and kind, but the niche seems very small, you wish you might do greater things.

Fret not, my friend, you may be doing far greater things than you realize.

Peer in the Trenches.

Fighting The Turks in the Dardanelles.

Doing their bit in the trenches in the Dardanelles are three peers—Earl Granard, Lord Powerscourt, and the Marquess of Tullibardine, whose sporting proclivities have won for them many admirers.

There is no more popular peer in Ireland than Lord Powerscourt, who is a fine, soldierly figure of a man, standing 6ft. 4in. in his stockings. Formerly in the Irish Guards, he retired from that gallant corps on his succession to the title, eleven years ago.

It used to be an article of faith in Ireland that there was a curse on the house of Powerscourt, and that the holder of the title would never see his successor; but the curse was broken even before the birth of the present peer, who himself has two sons. Lord Powerscourt is the eighth holder of the peerage, which has been twice extinct. It was first created three centuries ago.

Extremely popular with the Royal Family, Lord Granard, who was Lord-in-Waiting to the late King Edward and is Master of the Horse to King George, saw service in South Africa with the Scots Guards. He has more than a passing acquaintance with the Kaiser, who gave him a statuette of himself after his last visit to London, when the Earl accompanied the "King of the Huns" to the Guildhall in the Imperial carriage.

As Master of the Horse, Lord Granard has one of the Royal carriages and a pair of horses always at his disposal for his private use.

Although he owns 31,000 acres in Ireland, Lord Granard was not particularly well off until, six years ago, he married Miss Beatrice Ogden Mills, one of the wealthiest heiresses in New York, and a niece of Mrs. White-law Reid.

"The Fighting Marquess" is the title which has been bestowed upon the Marquess of Tullibardine, who started his military career at the age of nineteen and has seen much service, particularly in Egypt. He greatly distinguished himself at Atbara and Omdurman, with the net result of two medals and clasps and the D. S. O. His special exploit was a gallant dash through the Dervishes in an attempt to save a couple of wounded troopers.

After the battle he and Mr. Winston Churchill went out to see what they could do for the wounded. Lord Tullibardine carrying a large water-bottle which brought relief to not a few. To one badly-wounded Dervish, who was shot through the knee, he brought lasting relief by deftly extracting the bullet with a button-hook.

WORRYING.

Disasters never leave us, there's always something grievous that we can worry over; there's something going on, there's always something rocky, to justify a roar. The parlor door is squeaking, the kitchen roof is leaking, there's trouble with the range; the cow is somewhere straying, the hen has ceased her laying, the dog has got the mange. There's always something trying, there's cause for tears and sighing, if you're that way inclined, if you are fond of weeping, if you are ever keeping a sore spot on your mind. If you are always searching for Worry, where she's perching, you'll find her, every trip; she will not try to lose you, she'll badger and abuse you until you lose your grip. But if you have decided that grief should be derided and chivied from your door, the little daily troubles will seem as thin as bubbles—too small to make you sore. When there's an all-wool sorrow, small comfort can we borrow from optimistic sharps, who say that woes don't matter, and bore us with their chatter, and twang their sunshine harps. But we can learn to laugh at the little griefs and chaff at the trifling sores and smart; our faith on goodness pinning, let's face the old world grinning, and carry cheerful hearts.

Practical Jokes on the Germans.

Despite Prussian tyranny, the inhabitants of Brussels are indefatigable in playing "zwanzes," or practical jokes, on the German authorities. The latest greatly displeased the Boches. The latter had installed machine-guns on the summit of the Palais de Justice, which commanded the Minimes and Marolles districts, where the rougher elements of the population reside. The inhabitants promptly retaliated by placing old metal stove pipes on every available roof, so that at a little distance the neighbourhood seemed to be bristling with artillery. This joke did not appeal to the humor of the Governor-General, who fined each exhibitor of a stove-pipe fifteen marks. The fine was levied, to quote the unconscious irony of the official announcement, because the jokers had "distinguished themselves so grievously by a method of rallying which could only be disastrous to the excellent relations subsisting between the civil population and the authorities." Surely lack of humour could not farther go!

An alarm of fire was sent in from box 225 last night, bringing the Central and East End Companies to the house of Mr. E. M. Jackman, Allandale Road, where a slight fire was in progress, caused through soot igniting in the chimney. The fire was put out before any damage was done.

Everyday Etiquette.

"How should I wear my napkin at a dinner?" inquired George. "I see so many different ways of doing this that I am somewhat confused."
"There is only one correct way," advised his mother. "A man should lay his napkin across his knee. To tuck it in his collar or high in his vest is very bad taste."

Were You Not There?

(Pends-toi, brave Crillon, Nous avons combattu Arques, mais to n'y etais pas.—Henri Quatre.)

A RECRUITING CALL.
We heard our mother calling afar:
"Come over, O my children, to the war."
And, home again, wear proudly every scar.
For we were there,
Yes, we were there,
Battling the Huns by land and sea and air.

It was a fight of fury, West and East,
The Kaiser clawed brave Belgium like a beast.
We choked him off. We tore him from his feast.

For we were there,
Yes, we were there,
Did you not help us drive him to his lair?

Sea-dragons, too, we hunted night and day,
We kept the murderers of babes at bay;
All Hell we fought in that long, mad, dinned fray.

Were you not there?
Were you not there?
In that great struggle—speak—had you no share?

Don't you remember those who fought and fell
At Mons, the Marne, Langemarck or Neuve Chapelle?

Have you no story of the fight to tell?
Were you not there?
Were you not there?
You do not answer! You but stand and leer!

Did you not see at Stamboul or Suez
The German helmets or the Turkish fez?
Surely that chap is lying when he says:
You were not there,
You were not there.

Stand up and say he's lying if you dare!
The war is over. Battle-flags are furled,
The Great Betrayer from his throne is hurled.

It was the Fight of Ages for the world
And we were there,
Yes, we were there,
But you—go hang yourself—you didn't care!

—R. Stanley Weir.

In Milady's Boudoir!

ROUND SHOULDERS FATAL TO BEAUTY.

If you have round shoulders look first into the condition of the general health and see if there is any serious cause for the deformity. If the round shoulders are the result of carelessness, simple corrective exercises should be begun before you are a day older.

The "swirl" is an excellent corrective exercise, and is accomplished by placing the hands before one together in the front. The hands are then lowered, moved backward and upward over the head and down to the first position again. This causes a swirl that beautifully exercises and flattens the shoulder blades. Both feet should be held together, soldier fashion, during this exercise, and the chest should be thrown well forward, with the head up. Perform this swirl ten times when arising in the morning.

An exercise that can easily be performed during the day, without calling attention to what you follow humans might construe as imbecility, is that of locking the hands at the back of the neck. This is particularly for tired muscles after you have been bending over a desk or sewing. During this exercise rest the head rather far back upon the hands and straighten up the shoulder blades.

When the shoulders are rounded, always select a straight backed chair. The easy chair may be comfortable but it is not corrective. If you have difficulty in finding a chair with a sufficiently straight, high back in your home for practice, place a board at the back of the chair and force the shoulders to touch it for at least five minutes.

DETAINED BY FREIGHT.—Owing to the large quantity of freight offering, the S. S. Stephano did not get away for Halifax and New York until 8 a.m. yesterday, the work of loading being continued all night.

Veteran Recruit.

Captain Marston, 6th East Surreys, told some amusing recruiting stories at a Chertsey meeting.
An old man came to his office at Kingston and was asked his age. "Thirty-nine," he replied.
"Sure?" said Captain Marston.

"Yes," was the reply.
"Been in the Army before?"
"No."
"Sure?"
"Well, yes"—reluctantly.
"Got your discharges?"
"No."
"Sure?"
"Well, I left 'em at home."

"Look in your pocket," said the captain.
The veteran, with a smile which spoke volumes, handed over his discharge papers. They showed he had left the Munster Fusiliers in 1871, and was in his seventieth year.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES GAR-GET IN COWS.

Boys.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Swash."

After a baby has grown out of long clothes and has acquired pants and freckles and so much dirt that well-meaning relatives do not dare to kiss it between meals it becomes a boy.
A boy is nature's answer to the claim that there is no perpetual motion. He is a man, minus pride, ambition, pretence, greed and about 110 pounds. When he grows up he will trade romance, energy, bashfulness, warts and a snag-proof stomach for these other possessions. A boy is always getting the worst of it in some trade or other.

The world is so full of boys that it is impossible to touch off a hand or a ball game without collecting a thousand of them. Boys are not ornamental but they are useful. If it were not for boys the newspapers of the country would go undelivered and unread and a thousand "circus" elephants would die of thirst. Boys are also useful in running errands. The zest with which a boy does an errand is only equalled by the earnestness with which an old fashioned minister approaches the conclusion of his sermon. With the aid of five or six adults a boy can readily do all the errands for a family of two.

The boy is a natural spectator, spectating is his passion. He watches parades, fires, fights, ball games, dogs, ice wagons, mud turtles, bumble bees, automobiles, presidents, plain drums, hand organs and aeroplanes with equal fervor. But he will not watch the clock. The man who invents a clock that will stand on its head and sing a song with its strikes, will confer a great boon on millions of families whose boys are forever getting home to dinner about supper time.

Boys are not popular except with their parents, but they have many first points. One of them is the fact that they will grow up to be men some day. Another is their entire trustworthiness. You can rely absolutely on a boy if you know what to rely on. Trust him to get into trouble every day and he will never disappoint you.

Boys are abstemious, seldom eating, except when awake. They are also very durable. This accounts for the fact that the world is still populous. A boy, if not washed too much and if kept in a cool, dry place for a while after each accident, will survive fire-works, broken bones, swimming holes, hornets, runaways, flat fights, pirate bands, Indian massacres and nine pieces of pie at a sitting. If only some method of making a boy's clothes as durable as he is could be discovered, life would become more attractive for boy growers.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Nov. 9th, 1915.

INDUSTRY AND THE WAR.

The most important passage of the Prime Minister's great speech on November 3rd in the House of Commons in the opinion of members for industrial constituencies was that in which he gave the cost of the soldiers at £300 a man per year. "Supposing," said one member, "that we are to raise another million men. That means in cost of maintenance £300,000,000 a year. Supposing each man's product in industry amounts to only £2 a week, that would bring the cost up to £400,000,000." The serious warning as to the financial position in the speech has been much discussed. It is not thought by those best qualified to judge that it foreshadows anything in the nature of a forced loan, for the Government will be able to employ all sorts of inducements to encourage or press the loan. But it is agreed that the population of these islands had better prepare itself for a new mode of life, or life on a war footing. At present there is no sign of any realisation of this, either by the people or (apart from words and warnings) by the Government.

A DECLINING PEERAGE.

It seems probable that for the first time for some years the membership of the House of Lords will show a decrease at the end of the present year. The death of Lord Welby serves as a reminder of this shrinkage, for he is the fifth Peer who has died without an heir during 1915. The others whose names no longer figure on the roll are Lords Ardilaun, Estcourt, Glantaive, and Gurdyr. The New Year's honours contained no new creations, while the King's birthday was marked by two new barons, and there has been one other promotion to the Upper Chamber during the year. In addition to the five members of the House whose peerages have lapsed, the Irish Earl of Mountcashel has disappeared. It is interesting to note that in the case of Ardilaun, Estcourt, Glantaive and Welby, the late peers were also the first holders, and as there are a large number of recently created Lords Haldane, Alverstone, Milner, Morley of Blackburn, Gladstone, Southwark, Loreburn, Pirrie, Eversley, Courtney, and Fitzmaurice, to give a few examples—the wastage in the future is likely to be appreciable, despite the war honours that may be expected.

RECRUITING AND BUSINESS OFFICES.

The transformation that is proceeding in the appearance of the normal city office is significant of the extent to which enlistment has depleted the ranks of commercial clerks. It is now no uncommon thing to find women and girls constituting the whole staff of a London business office subject to the direction only of the elderly chief, and occasionally of one or two clerks, also over military age. Some employers tell me that for some time they have abandoned any attempt to find junior clerks, having found that the candidates for the vacancies, by reason of their ineligibility for army service, were likewise ineligible for commercial pursuits. Many business offices, indeed, are now unable to fill their requirements by the engagement of girl clerks, owing to the rapidity with which employment is secured, even by the inexperienced. In some instances the whole female staff vanishes at six o'clock, and leaves the employer, and sometimes a confidential clerk, to continue for several hours to wrestle with unfinished correspondence. Some firms are adopting the device of returning letters to the senders with brief pencilled replies on the margin. Others are taking their work home, and dealing with it until midnight or throughout Sunday. The situation is the more difficult because the female clerical market is influenced in its ideas of remuneration by the standard set up by the munition factories for shell-filling.

THE EMMETS.

Lieutenant Robert Emmet, of the 1st Life Guards, whose funeral with military honours has taken place in London, at which the pall-bearers included the Duke of Abercorn and Lord Kilmorey, was a collateral descendant of the Irish patriot whose name he bore. Robert Emmet, who was executed for high treason for his share in an abortive insurrection, will always be remembered for his pathetic love story, immortalised by Thomas Moore in two of his Irish melodies ("She is far from the land" and "O breathe not his name") and by Washington Irving. Emmet's elder brother, Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet, also an Irish rebel, settled in New York, where he achieved fame. His statue stands in one of the great thoroughfares of the city to-day. It was from this Dr. Emmet that Lieut. Emmet was directly descended, his grandfather, Dr. Thomas Emmet, of New York, being a grandson of the original Thomas Addis. Lieutenant Emmet's father settled in this country, and lived at Moreton Paddock, Warwickshire, and in London. He is now fighting in the Dardanelles with the rank of Major. The story of the Emmets makes an interesting footnote to Irish history, but it does not end here. Another member of the family emigrated to South Africa. Some years ago when the late Michael Davitt visited South Africa after the war he met General Botha. During the meeting the latter said to him, "Let me introduce to you Mr. Robert Emmet." It was his own brother-in-law. Thus Botha's sons, who have been fighting for the Empire, can also claim collateral descent from the family of the famous Irish rebel.

A FIERY CROSS COMEDY.

The story of how the fiery cross was held aloft at a meeting of London Scots held on November 4th for the purpose of stimulating recruiting for their own splendid regiment, is interesting. Behind the incident there is also a story well worth telling. The cross was cut from the oldest yew tree in Scotland, a hoary adjunct to Fortingall Church, around which historic memories cluster. It was explained by the sender that the cross must be sanctified by a sprinkling of goat's blood before use. Accordingly Lieutenant Martin, upon whom devolved the important task of preparing the rite, set out to procure an adequate supply of the necessary fluid. He speedily found that goat's blood was as rare in London as lilies in Sutura. Leadenhall Market, for all the richness of its game supplies, contained not a single drop. Nor did Deptford Cattle Market, Smithfield, or any other of London's chief centres of butchery. The situation grew desperate. There was an anxious council of war at the London Scottish headquarters. Various suggestions were made, but all proved useless, till at the eleventh hour one resourceful councillor recollected that their next door neighbors and keen rivals, the Queen's Westminsters, possessed a pet goat, and Lieutenant Martin crossed to interview the adjutant of the regiment. He laid the case before him in all its urgency and pathos. The Queen's adjutant was astonished beyond expression. He confessed frankly that weird as his ideas were of Scotsmen he could hardly bring himself to credit their deep-seated belief in such a rite as they proposed, and it required much persuasive eloquence from Lieutenant Martin before the adjutant was convinced that this was no joking matter. In the end, however, he gave his bewildered consent to the Scottish request. The regimental goat was duly led to the operating theatre. A slight incision was made—much against the animal's will it may be said—and the cross well and truly sprinkled.

GERMANY'S ILLICIT DUTCH TRAFFIC.

From a Dutch source I learn that of late great efforts have been made by Germans to obtain from Holland goods that are on the British contraband list, and thus defeat the operations of the Netherlands Overseas Trust, which guarantees the bonafides of all shipments to Rotterdam and other ports across the North Sea routes. It has been discovered by the Dutch Government that German women were being sent to purchase in any quantity, new and disused cotton goods from the households and shops in the Dutch towns and villages, but this traffic has been

Stomach Acts Fine! No Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn, Acidity

"Pape's Diapepsin" fixes sick, sour, upset stomachs in five minutes.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain, unflinching action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

stopped. Further during the transport of some heavy pieces of stone which were about to be sent across the frontier a Custom House officer, on tapping one of them, heard a hollow sound, and on investigation it was found that each piece contained nearly fifty litres of benzine, all of which were confiscated. Another ingenious case was that of a consignment of glass bottles ready to be forwarded to Germany by rail. It was however, discovered that they were lined with leather, which resulted both in the seizure of the goods and the fining of the exporter. Not many weeks ago, however, a clever ruse succeeded. Some seventy wagons loaded with lined oil were ready for despatch under a misleading declaration, the export of this commodity being forbidden. The trick was found out in time, but the soap was made out of the oil, needless to say not for washing purposes, and as there is no regulation against its export it was allowed to go through. There is every reason to believe, however, that all goods which Germany badly wants and the export of which is prohibited, are being traced by an army of special detectives, with the result that very little trade of the kind is now being done.

DEARER FURS.

Contrary to general expectation, the furriers are experiencing a record season, and the price of furs, as buyers who seek to renew their depleted stocks are now finding out to their cost, are steadily rising. The October fur sales, which are just over, were full of surprises, even to those most conversant with the conditions of the market, and compared with the March prices there were some extraordinary advances. American optimism for which there has been a very good demand this season, and raccoon increased in price by 75 per cent. Skunk is possibly of all furs the most used at the moment, not only for collars and muffs, but for trimming all kinds of gowns—street, afternoon, and evening—and this is up by about 60 per cent. Practically every variety of fox—white, grey, black, Japanese, red, and cross—brought a price equal to half as much again as that of last March. In the case of musquash, another fur for which prevailing fashion has a variety of uses, the advance has ranged from 20 to 40 per cent, according to the variety. There has been a revival in favor of beaver, a fur regarded as old-fashioned of recent seasons, and its value has risen by 25 per cent. In fact the only furs of any importance which do not cost considerably more to-day than they did last season are ermine, bear, sable, chinchilla, and squirrel. There are many reasons, according to the experts of the trade, why women will have to pay more for their furs. The quantity of pelts available is not large owing to the fact that America, too, is experiencing a very excellent demand and retaining skins which would otherwise be shipped to this market, but there is also the difficulty of obtaining skilled labor. The trade is a very highly specialized one, and many of its most expert workers have joined the colors.
