It is said that in consequence "treating" has gone out of fashion; and the society has done more to check the drinking customs of the place than any efforts of the tectotal societies.

Fresh Air.—A neat, clean, fresh-aired, sweet, cheerful, well-arranged, and well-situated house exercises a moral as well as a physical influence over its immates, makes the members of a family peaceble, and considerate of the feeling and happiness of each other. The connection is obvious between the state of mind thus produced and habits of respect for others and for those higher duties, and obligations which no law can enforce. On the contrary, a filthy, squalid,noxious dwelling, rendered still more wretched by its noisome spite, and in which none of the decencies of life can be observed, contributes to make its unfortunate inhabitants brutal, and regardless of the feelings of each other.

Lecture on Prohibition.

On Thursday evening an able and in-teresting lecture was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Davidson, in the Good Tem-plars' Hall. Subject—"Objections to a Prohibitory Liquor Law Answered." The attendence was fair, but not as large

The revenue for a time might be affected; but an immense saving would be effected of the money now laid out for jails, magtst. ates, policemen, lunatic asylums, &c., &c., for the repression of the vast amount of crime that was caused by drink. Seven-tenths of those confined in asylums owed it to strong drink. Ought we to perpetuate such a thing? Let the strong arm of the law work the cure. Moral influence alone had been tried for over half a century, and to-day the black flag flies as defiantly as before. The only way of putting a stop to this curse was to throw a legal barrier in the way,—to "ding down the rockery, that the crows may a legal barrier in the way,—to "down the rookery, that the crows not build again."

Mr. Ferguson seconded the movement, and complimented the lecturer on his very able and interesting lecture.

The Half Holiday Again.

The Opposition wasted the greater part of the afternoon, and the whole of the evening, session on Friday in discussing a series of resolutions brought up by Mr. Cameron, condemning the action of the Government in reference to certain matters pertaining to the work on the Central Prison, and censuring Hon. Mr. McKellar for allowing the men employed there to have a half holiday on the day of the West Toronto nomination. We cannot afford room for all that was said on both sides during the debate, and it would not be very profitable reading even if we could. We must, however, refer to the remarks made by Mr. McKellar, in vindicating his conduct. He repeated what he had already stated before the Public Accounts Committee, that he did give the men permission to go to the nomination. Under the him for that. It was a matter of opinion whether he did right. He also stated that he not only not interfered with the men, but possitively refused to use his influence with employees of the Department where allowed to do so in behalf of Mr. Moss. Mr. McKellar closed McKella and manly avowal, which, whatever may be thought as to the propriety may be thought as to the propriety of the act itself, is honest, outspoken, and we fully believe sincere:—He had stated honestly and frankly whathe did in this matter, and he did it from the best and purest of motives. He had produced precedents for his action; he had produced the highest authority to prove that the same practice prevailed in England, and that almost under the very shadow of Buckingham Palace itself. (Cheers He left his case in the hands of the House and the countryfor them to deal with it just as they thought proper. He had only to repeat that he did it, believing that he was doing what was right. He might have done wrong, but he did not think so. He had precedents for it, and what was more, he had the interests of the lard working man at heart. (Cheers.) And when he had the opportunity of going before the electors of the country, who make and provide the money for the exchequer, he would be able to confront those gentlemen who attacked him now, and receive the approbation of his fellow-countrymen." The debate was adjourned, but we have little doubt Mr. Cameron's resolutions will be thrown out by a good majority.

Nova Scotia Legislature. - The third session of this Legislature was opened on Thursday. Governor Archibald in his speech refers with pleasure to the visit of Lord Dufferin to that Province last year. He states that every branch of Provincial industry has during the past year been marked by a fair measure of success; that the harvest was bountiful, and that the fishing and ship building interests were pros-perous. He favours further railway extension, refers with satisfaction to the adjustment of the Dominion sub-sidy, and congratulates the country on the large increase in the product of the coal mines of the Province.

A DARK DERD—A WELL-KNOWN VOICE—LONG JOURNEY—THE WITCH OF BEN-LAIR IN DANGER.

There was also, of course, less dan his being exposed to them here, i ough he had to keep in mind that und be visible to them where the auld be quite invisible to him, as the ure between him and the now slantiff of of the moon, and as he was still open and they were close to the se of the mountain.
But suddenly, as if the Po-open and they were close to the of the mountain.

ts suddenly, as if the Fates were him, a dark mass of clouds sailing as the sky suddenly obscured the and taking advantage of the oppory he darted forward quickly to the in which direction he had seen them.

tunity he darted forward quickly to the right, in which direction he had seen them turn.

He was now so near that he heard the sound of their voices, and among the sound of their voices with south the dofor two reasons—the first being that he would then discover whether Cameron was one of them; and the second, that he would be likely to gather from their talk whether the object of their journey concerned him.

In a little he had succeeded in getting within fifty yards of them, and then he was certain of one thing, that neither Cameron nor lan was before him. The voices were voices of strangers!

Hector was annoyed at this discovery. He had all along believed he was 'following one or the other, if not both; and now, he was vexed when he came to rea isse that he had been upon a wild goose chase. And it was more aggravating when he reflected that the other figure which he had seen pass round by the end of the inn must have been Cameron. For he never questioned that it was Cameron's voice he heard when he rushed out of Murdoch M'Donald's hut. He almost stamped his feet with annoyance, but still, as if bound by a strange fascination to follow them, held on after the two men, who had by this time entered a gorge in the side of the mountain up which they were proceeding.

Little did he imagine that what annoyed and grieved him so much was rather cause for rejoicing, and much rejoicing, as the sequel will show. He had, by choosing to follow the two men rather than the one, escaped from Murdoch M'Dona'd's at almost the only moment possible for him to have done so, and in that manner had for the time been successful, although unknowingly, meluding the vigilance of his foes, keenly as they watched for him. And for other vital reasons was it well that he had ckosen as he had done—indeed, it seemed as if a Providential wisdom had directed his steps. But of this we need not speak

The Ontario Legislature. March 12.

March 12.
After disposing of some routine business the House went into Committee of the Whole upon the remaining clauses of the Ballot Bill. A clause was added declaring that the Act should not take effect until the dissolution of the present Accombly.

Assembly.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole upon the Bill relating to the Solemnization of Matrimony.

The Superannuated Teachers' Fund Resolutions were then considered in Committee, and reported.

The House then went into Committee on the School Bill, and having disposed of the several remaining clauses, resumed.

of the several remaining clauses, rosumed.

On the order of the day being read for going into Committee of Supply.

Mr. M. C. Cameron brought up the Central Prison affair and Mr. McKellar's conduct in relation thereto. He moved an amendment in terms which declared the action of Mr. McKellar to have been a misappropriation of the public money as well as an improper interference with the freedom of election, and deserving of the censure and condemnation of the House.

enry and Advertiser being nearly five times that of any other paper published in the County of Wellington, busi-ness men and others would study their own interests by advertising in the Mercury and the censure and condemnation of the House.

Mr. McKellar said that the evidence before the Committee did not sustain the charge formulated in the amendment. There had been no interference, coercion or pressure of any kind on his part or by his authority. The simple question was, whether it was proper to give the men a half holiday. He had himself been a working-man, and sympathized with that class of people, and, with perhaps too little reflection, had granted the hands at the Central Prison what he believed to be a customary indulgence. He went on to vindicate his course by British precedents of recent occurrence.

Mr. Fraser quoted a large number of British precedents to show that it was not unusual or improper for a Minister of the Crown to grant a holiday to Government workmen at the Government expense. In this, as in everything else, the best papers will command the best prices. It is cheaper to pay 5s. for inserting your advertisements in a journal having a circulation of 5,000, than to pay 2s. for one that has only a circulation of 1,000. Of this you may be sure, that any journal that inserts advertisements too cheap, is, in fact, an almost worthless medium. If it were really a good one, it would have no need to lower its prices, for its sheet would be better filled without the sacrifice. You may lay it down as a rule that every journal knows its value, and that if it adopts low prices it is because it is conscious that it has a low circulation in number or respectabilty.—Wilson's Handbook for Advertisers.

Government workmen at the Government expense.

After recess a number of private Bills were advanced a stage, and the debate was resumed.

Mr. Sinclair regretted Mr. McKellar had written the letter. Reformers should not only avoid doing wrong, but be above suspicion. But he did not believe there was any corrupt intention on the part of the Oommissioner. Mr. McKellar's public and private character had been the subject of the most remorseless and unjust attacks. Especially in connection with the Immigration Department, Mr. McKellar had been grievously injured. The same remark applied to the Proton slander and the Elgin Association business. It was not to be tolerated that an

The girls from one of the schools in Pittsburgh were out for a walk the other day, going two by two, when turning int a street on which saloons do much abound, all at once there was a clatter as of one universal feu-de-joic of small arms, caused by the sudden clapping to of the window-shutters of all the saloons. The supposition was that the women's temperance movement was inaugurated, and in five minutes not a saloon but was closed and ready for prayer and praise.

One dark night, the darkness of which was lighted by the moon, the immates of a quiet farm house in Ayreshire were startled by pitcous eries from a little stream running past the foot of the brae on which the nomestead stood. Out ran the gude wife in haste, thinking that the voice was not unfamiliar; and when she got to the burn, there she saw her ain gudeman, who had in just a little too much of John Barleycorn, on all fours in a foot of water, in which the moon was brightly reflected. "Gudesake, John, ye gouk, what are you doing there, standing like ar auld fule in that manner?"
"Oh, woman, Jenny, is that you? I'm glad to see ye, for I hae gotten aboon the moon, and hae been in this predicament for twa hours hanging on like grim death for fear I should fa' and be killed beyond a' recognition. I ken its richt noo' when ye's here, see we'll baith gang down thegither." Jenny lost no time in getting John out, and over a tumbler of toddy he vowed that nothing should ever make him soar so high again, even on market nights.
