It is a Philadelphia man has written to the authorities of New York State offering to test the efficacy of the new electrical apparatus for executing murderers, providing that if the machine kills more than five thousand dollars is to be handed over to his wife and children. The authorities decline, properly considering that a man so reckless of his life has been specially designed by nature for the post of umpire at a baseball match. -Empire.

Poetry.

The Queen of Dreams. All day, where clouds flock through the sky, The Queen of Dreams abides on high.

She has peaks of snow and caverns of fire, Glittering castles and dungeons dire, And giants and dwarfs and monsters rare Follow her beck through the lucid air.

And the wavering train she dwells, Whose the wind forever sighs and swells, Singing its marvels, low or loud, Through foggy vapour or sunset cloud.

But at night, when shadows on earth lie deep, And woe's mortals are wrapped in sleep, The will-queen comes, with her mystic To cast her spell on the perished hour.

She bids a faded moonlight fall, Yellow once more on hot or fall, And conjures back their faded glare To the bowled form and the wrinkled face.

Hope that his starved and love that has slain, In her wondrous presence revive again; Earth smiles in her tender, unknown light, And this woeful waste is a garden bright.

Where the heavy burdens of wrong and care By a soft enchantment grow light as air.

Restless and sad, for her mercy pray Those spirits who pine for a vanished day!

The liveliest night, to the darkness akin, Like smoke from fire their prayers arise: The quickest time only 17 hours between Yarmouth and Boston.

THE FAST STEEL STEAMER "YARMOUTH."

Will leave Yarmouth for Boston every Wednesday and Saturday Evening, after arrival of the train of the Western Counties Railway, returning by Lewis's Wharf, Boston, at 10 a. m. every Tuesday and Friday, connecting at Yarmouth with train for Halifax and International Stations.

For all other information apply to F. CROSSKILL, Station Agent, Bridgetown, or to W. A. CHASE, Manager, Yarmouth, April, '89.

One day my heart was very sad, Oppressed with heavy sorrow, And thus a ray of hope I saw, To cheer me on the morrow.

I walked along the crowded street, A dull, distracted mourner, For I had thought her hand and cold, Of lover's art a sower;

But she was taken off her guard, As I turned 'round the corner. What eared I thought the skies were dark, And threatened stormy weather?

But regularly 'twas here, And oh! I bless the fate that turned My steps around the corner.

And thus I find it is through life— So full of wondrous phases— That when we walked amid the gloom, Of press'd and tangled masses, Feeling all friendless and alone, A hopeless, hapless mourner, And gloomings circle'd in his way, For as we passed the corner.

CASILLA 691 SANTIAGO DE CHILE, March 1st, 1889.

I will try and give your readers some idea of the city of Santiago and its life.

This is no easy task, unless one draws on the imagination or hearsay as Mr. Curtis did in writing to Harper's Magazine, and brings down on his luckless head the execration and ridicule of Chileans because of absurd misstatements and erroneous descriptions. The truth is never—strange to say—the easiest to tell. Imaginations and dreams make up the life of many, and the gentleman, who, as a 'bird of passage,' flitted across the sky of some of those South American cities, observing, with an American's eyes, what he happened to stumble against, committed a grave error in placing varnished and unfounded statements in the columns of a magazine, such as Harper's, that goes broadcast over the whole world.

He cast truth overboard and took as the goal of his ambition—a readable article. How well that readable article looked, when—collected in the flowery language—it was translated into Spanish and Portuguese and circulated among the poor people of Chile, the Argentine Republic, and Brazil can be adjudged by the keen sarcasm and ridicule it provoked. If such an able pen as that of Mr. Curtis failed, let me at least try to present truth, and so disarm criticism.

Of Santiago, the capital of Chile, I can speak from the experience gained by a doubling of my eyes, for they saw what men or angels, whether they were welcomed or cursed. They afterwards had good reason to curse them and their instruments of death. Since that date this rock that bears the name of 'Santa Lucia' has had its romantic history, for it became in after years the home of bands of robbers who would sail forth from their fastnesses and under cover of night, carry off according to old style of the highman—beautiful women and lots of booty. Then under penalty of death a ransom was fixed and hard the heart that would not pay when possible. Romantic and frantic stories are now whispered into childhood's ears by credulous servants and nurses of the day of the olden times when this rock and the caves was a Santa Lucia.

But now Santa Lucia is splendidly fitted up with winding walks through and over, tarred and tarred walls with shady groves, where is heard the musical tinkling of playing fountains, and the air is sweet with the delicious perfumes of richly colored flowers, comfortable seats inviting the weary to rest beneath the grateful shade of thickly foliaged trees, marble statues, waterfalls so cunningly devised that one has no trouble in looking on them as natural. Indeed all that art can do to aid nature make this hill a delightful spot, a most pleasant resort has been done, and with admirable success. Would that some of our gentlemen-rovers who could see the way the granite hills along the sides of this steep hill and grow wild, clothing the rocks in verdure luxuriously rich in coloring and texture!

Climbing to the top of this rock by means of winding stairs cut in the solid rock the ambitious aspirant after high position is well rewarded. The invigorating breezes of a cooler region gently fan him and his lungs expand with pleasure to drink in the pure air. The clear transparent atmosphere of this climate permits the eye to wander off until every object from his feet to the distant horizon can be seen. All around and under him is the city with its low houses and flat tiled roofs, its straight streets, occasional church spire, its rich masses of foliage peeping out from innumerable small gardens. The river appearing as a silver line with the sun shining on it, winds in and out, now low to view, again showing itself by its bright sparkling, and so on its course to trace along the valley until it winds around a mountain spur and is lost in the confusion of the blue hills. The tall poplar tree marks the course of the road. The puff of white smoke shows us where the locomotive is moving along with its train of cars. And out in the country here and there can be distinguished small villas, the rich glowing green of the grape fields, the bright orange of the grain ready for the sickle, the large pastures with their herds, but these only lead the eye up and on to something more fascinating. Looking east the eye does not rest satisfied gazing on red roofs, nor yet again on green fields but is drawn as if by magic spell and becomes riveted in wonder on the myriad heights of the mighty 'Cordillera de los Andes.' Here the eye can explore among the rocks at will, wander up the great canons from valley to valley from peak and peak, until the snow line becomes lost in the distance and the eye weary of gazing. Right opposite Santiago are two great patches of snow, 'white like ermine' called the Great and the Little Dove's Breast, so pure and beautiful is it in its brilliant whiteness, like the venerable locks of old age. And how filmy and shadowy the fleecy clouds appear as they float lazily along, way below the snow line, or suggestive as they climb higher and shade the glaciers and snow fields from the heat of the sun. The sunsets on these mountains cannot be described and scarcely imagined. I have seen their bases, the lower groups of hills, and a more stopping stones at the foot of the main range, clouds as black and stormy as if a fearful tempest were raging, and yet rising a little higher these fantastic wreaths of dark vapor catching the last rays of the sun, become as burnished gold, and higher still, up to the heights, where the eagle and condor have their nests, above the clouds mass of rock, mocking in their indefinable light, their glorious coloring, any attempt at reproduction by the feeble aid of canvas or pigment. The dark sun tinted rocks glow like burning coals set in sparkling diamonds. The sunsets ever different ever new, the mountains' solemn 'singing' grand, sometimes terrible, as when the lightning bolt flashes over a scene of some dark winter night, changing these lonely sentinels into weird and awful spectres as the electric fluid darts across the sky—these are a few of the things that may be mentioned as preventing this city of the plains from becoming tame and commonplace, and really may be called a crowning glory. Can we wonder at the Indian locating his gods in the grand solitudes of the mountains for in such scenery we see literally the finger marks of Nature's great Sculptor, our God and Creator.

At night when 'paseando on Santa Lucia' in the cool fresh air you will hear these impulsive light-hearted Chileans, fully appreciating the beauty of their favorite city, exclaiming, in their enthusiastic way, 'Tan preciosa' 'how lovely how beautiful,' and other similar phrases of admiration for their surroundings. And what a fairy enchantment the shades of night throw over a scene of this kind. The clear air atmosphere (it is never sultry here) acting on one's nerves as a brace strengthening tonic, stimulates the imagination, draws one out of self, and for a time there is enjoyment. Out to the westward over and beyond the busy city, the quiet country and the wild coast hills, the sun has sunk beneath the great ocean, yet adapted to the state of the sea, yet—bodily and mentally—at one time and not at another; while with another it may never agree. So-called 'another fitness of things' needs to be carefully studied before deciding an important question a wholesome! Oatmeal is unquestionably a wholesome food. If properly cooked and properly eaten, it is very generally well borne on the stomach. It is, however, disagreeable, if not really a burden to digestion. When dyspeptic symptoms are excited by it, it is very rarely, indeed, that the oatmeal itself can properly be blamed; there is almost always some fault in its preparation or the manner in which it is served or eaten. If oatmeal is well cooked it is unfit to eat, and taken into a delicate stomach will cause disturbance. So, too, will it even when well cooked if it is eaten with much cream and sugar; the trouble in that instance is with the sweets, and they would have the same effect if taken in any other way. Oatmeal is used almost exclusively as mush, which one naturally swallows quickly, without allowing it to remain in the mouth. To a considerable extent the malva is essential to its rapid digestion. Hence oatmeal should be kept for a dinner in the mouth, as a soft food, as well as a solid food. Carefully cooked and prepared, eaten as it ought to be, and in proper quantities, beyond all doubt oatmeal is agreeable, healthful and nutritious.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a child, she cried for Castoria. When she became ill, she clung to Castoria. When she had Colic, she gave her Castoria.

Well Mr. Editor I have wandered as usual far from the subject but have no hope of finding my way back in this letter; so please pardon me. I wished to convey some idea of the beauty of Chilean scenery. I will try and give you something more definite in my next if I can find time to write. For the present 'Adieu.' Humbly yours, A. F. TNOOR.

Care of Work Horses.

To me there is nothing so painful as seeing horses with sore shoulders, and necks bare and raw, so many devices applied to no avail, pads below and above this raw flesh.

Prevention is better than cure, and he is the wise man who adopts the latter, and I am grieved to say it is only in the farming class that we see this torture to animals; it is not from overwork, but negligence, or not knowing how to prevent it.

Go into any city and you will see valuable horses in express wagons, brewers' wagons, truckers' wagons, and with horse-leather fitting on the harness, thus protecting the neck and shoulders from rain, and excluding the water from between collar and flesh; drivers should always carry them. When I go into a farmer's stable and see such hung up with his harness, and a nose bag to feed his horses at their work, I mentally observe, this man is merciful to his beast and saves money.

The alighted one will let his mid-day oats from a basket, or throw it in the bottom of a wagon, and waste more feed in one year than would pay for a dozen sets of them.

You may scrape and clean your collar as you will, wash daily with salt and water or oak bark water, to harden the shoulders you will still have sore shoulders and necks; and my experience with horses and mules has taught me that any man who wants to make money out of either, at farming or any other work, must keep a collar on them every working day in the year; those that have them for fancy farming can let them hide their time as they do to other things; I offer these suggestions to those who wish to farm for profit. No bank will give you ten for a dollar; you look out for the small things, the big ones will take care of themselves.

An excellent and cheap remedy, and I can say a quick and sure healer of shoulder from neck wear, or any harness rubbing, is half an ounce of indigo put into half a pint of alcohol; stop this on with a spruce or oak bark water, to harden the shoulders you will still have sore shoulders and necks; and my experience with horses and mules has taught me that any man who wants to make money out of either, at farming or any other work, must keep a collar on them every working day in the year; those that have them for fancy farming can let them hide their time as they do to other things; I offer these suggestions to those who wish to farm for profit. The public roads in this part of the county have for a number of years been in a very bad condition, and in some districts where there was a little better than elsewhere they were fast becoming impassable.

But we are glad to know that a change is taking place in this respect, and in order of things is evident. Our local government is using every effort to put our roads in a condition equal to the best in any of the other provinces.

This county are under the supervision of Hector McLean, Esq., C. E., of Bridgetown, whose ability as an engineer is a guarantee of their excellent condition in the future. Foremen are appointed, who have charge of the work, subject to the order of the engineer.

The cheese factory at North Williamton, which has borne such a high reputation in the past for the excellence of its cheese, began operation on the 3rd inst. This factory has been running nearly every summer since its opening, and I believe is the only one in the county in operation.

The good quality of its cheese has become so well known that it finds a ready sale not only in this province but in other countries. It is under the management of Mr. Asa Heals, who has had charge of it for some years past. He is one of the best cheese-makers in the province.

NEW APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Thomas

Becker is the new appointee for the position of preventive officer at this port. Mr. Miles McMillan has been appointed jailor by the Sheriff of Annapolis County. I take the liberty of sending you a note or two though there is nothing of startling interest to report.

The crops are looking finely here especially grain and grass and the root crops are doing well. An abundant harvest is hopefully looked forward to on all sides except in fruit. Apples will be under the average without doubt, but the crop is still expected to be of considerable value. Pears being exceptionally good, and some factories in the district, butler is both plenty and good. I do not remember to have seen so much well made finely floured butter in any other June since I was born, and it is a curious fact that the price obtained here is equal to those in the leading American markets.

Rev. Mr. Mainwaring, on Sunday last, delivered a second lecture-sermon on the "Transfiguration." It was a poetic and eloquent discourse which is to be followed by at least three others on the same difficult subject. Next week I hope to have a few more notes worthy of the excellent "Morning" which with its budget of local and general news is an honored weekly visitor.

Miscellaneous.

Our Missed Babies. THE LIGHT AND JOY OF OUR HEARTS AND HOMES.

God bless the babies! What a world this would be without them. What a sorrow and curdling up there would be of the milk of human kindness for want of an outlet if they were not here to receive the love and be fed by it.

Some girls are said to object to take work in a family where there are children. They must be exceptional, as most people would prefer to live where there are one or two, as where there are children there is a roughness in a common saying, a "roughness" being north Irish for a liberal supply of provender, and an absence of that economy which is styled "cheese paring."

In many houses the supply of babies seems rather in excess of the demand, though I have never met a mother who admitted it; in others the baby is sadly wanted. I lived once with a young couple who seemed to have everything in this world to make them happy—youth, good health, good looks, plenty of money and a luxurious home. Yet one thing was missing in that grand house; there was no cradle there.

I am very sure that the sound of an infant crying in the night, and with no language but a cry, and the rocking of a cradle would have sounded sweeter than the warbling of a Patti. There is another place I know where the baby is of use. It is where grandpa and grandma sit together at the hearth and watch the blaring fire while the shadows gather around them and peep at them from far corners.

In that house the clock ticks very loudly and the cat purrs with a volume of sound that has something like the effect produced by the endless rising and falling of the big mill. The house is very quiet, and when grandpa wakes up with a little more and looks up to grandma apologetically, but the good old lady has been taking forty winks herself, and never notices it. There is not so much to talk about. Grandpa is not so warm now on politics now as he used to be and grandma does not follow up the fashion with the same eagerness as formerly. Grandma's cap is no longer red; there is little romance in life at 77. The Bible is more thumbed than it was in the times thirty years ago, and the world is slipping away from those two old people.

There is not much to look forward to but a green mound under the elms, and so the old people sit and perhaps picture to themselves a time when the quiet home will have a still deeper quietness upon it when the day comes when one shall be taken and the other left. But all this is changed when the baby grandchild comes and the busy feet and patter about the old passages and rooms. The clock is never heard ticking, for the shrill baby voice chatters and laughs incessantly, and the old cat flies around after a ball of string as if she were a kitten again. Grandma's cap is all away, for baby likes to do up grandma's silvery curls in her own fashion, and grandpa must leave his cozy armchair to see all the "annamalls" in baby's Noah's ark and name them one by one like an elderly Adam, and by and by he gets interested over the yellow canary and spotted pig and tells stories about them from Peter Parley and other writers of his youth, and forgets that he is seventy-seven and has the asthma of old age.

God bless the baby! he is a better tonic than all the bitters ever advertised. In another house I know where there is a little girl of 9 years of age, a spoiled only child, who is overruled and underbred, and is rapidly developing a selfish and vain disposition fatal to her future happiness. I should like to see a baby brother there. He would put her nose out of joint and improve her wonderfully. In six months' time she would be pulling off her prettiest ribbons to deck the baby's tiny sleeves and her cheeks to hang on his chubby arms, and would learn more from the baby of the great lessons of human life, of the being of self-sacrifice and the blessedness of giving than she would do from the best of her teachers. So many guinea's a quarter for his instructions. The baby has a mission, and he fulfills it. He has an object in life, and he accomplishes it. If ever it becomes necessary to this out the population I hope the process will not begin at the small end of the human race, for I affirm and maintain that there is not one baby too many in the whole world.

Rules for Weak Kidneys. 1. Always keep the feet dry. 2. Keep the skin in the best possible condition by bathing, rubbing, etc., in order that it may relieve the kidneys of as much work as possible. (Remember that one fifth of all the water leaving the body in twenty-four hours passes out by the skin.) 3. Wear flannel next the skin night and day, winter and summer. 4. Do not live in a damp house, or in a cold, damp climate. 5. A dry climate is the best for the subject of Bright's disease. 6. Do not indulge in alcoholic beverages. Their action proves destructive to the tissue structure of the liver and kidneys when they are taken. 7. Do not partake too freely of meat, which is not all burnt up in the body, as some suppose, and is excreted as urea by the kidneys. Meat one day is probably sufficient. 8. Do not use much coffee, tea, tobacco, etc. They seek to exert a prejudicial action upon weak kidneys. 9. Avoid drugs like opium, mercury, and cathartics, the use of which in all forms of Bright's disease is fraught with certain danger. 10. Sleep in an airy room, preferably facing the south; and live out of doors in the warm sunlight as much as possible. 11. Take plenty of sleep. 12. Avoid overwork and worry and be scrupulously regular in all the habits of life.

Eggs can be kept perfectly for six months, by coating each one with the white of egg. Apply it with the finger so that every spot is touched, then pack the eggs in a box, in any position you wish, putting a layer of paper between every layer of eggs, and let the box away in a cool, dry place. The white of one egg will coat from eight to ten dozen. I have tried this receipt for five years, and have never known it to fail. —Housekeeper.

It has been demonstrated in California that peach stones make excellent fuel, and they now realize $2 per ton. A sack of the peach stones will weigh eighty pounds and last as long as an equal weight of coal and give a greater intensity of heat.

The Travelling Merchants.

The old adage that "goods well bought are half sold" is a good one, and one that every merchant should keep constantly before him.

Years ago when a merchant had need to replenish his stock in trade he was compelled to leave his place and travel great distances to find the manufacturer of the goods he wanted, and this entailed much expense and loss of time. But the times have changed. Now the manufacturer or importer finds it to his advantage to do the travelling, and so he gets together small samples of his goods and sends his drummer, or travelling salesman, out over the country to do for the retail merchant what he formerly had to do for himself. Like all new systems, however, this one met with obstacles and was not looked on favorably at the first. The mission of the drummer was not thoroughly understood, as his reception in too many cases demonstrated, but the system has grown, and now the travelling salesman is a fixture, and has come to be looked upon as a valuable adjunct to trade. The drummer may be regarded as a necessary evil, or a blessing according to the man; but the merchant and the drummer are of mutual benefit to each other, and every travelling man should be entitled to a courteous reception and subsequent consideration.

How to Treat a Cold. A neglected cold is so often fatal that prompt treatment is always advisable; although there are obtinate people in the world who will have none of your or your remedies, and say they would rather cough it out, we will take the tractable patient, who, perhaps, without chill or fever, but simply hoarse, and if neglected may have congestion of the lungs. Begin by putting the feet in hot water, and in a tablespoonful of mustard is well rubbed in, keep them just as hot as can be borne, and return in a few minutes, prepare some volatile liniment by putting in a small tin cup a tablespoonful of sweet oil and placing on the stove until hot, then stir in a half teaspoonful of spirits of ammonia; it will foam and be unpleasantly pungent, but while it is in that state direct the patient to hold his or her nose, to avoid strangulation, and rub the liniment thoroughly on the chest, and, just as he or she comes in, also have ready a brown paper cut to fit around the throat and cover the chest, dress this with the remainder and apply it hot, placing over the two thicknesses of hot flannels. Internally give the homoeopathic preparation of phosphorus, two drops in one teaspoonful of soft water, or on a bit of sugar, once in two to four hours, until the hoarseness is better. It will generally be followed by a loose cough. This is an admirable treatment for children. In case of a cold, beginning with chills and a fever, acetone and bromina may be given alternately after the patient has had the feet in hot water and gone to bed; if there is pain in the lungs apply a mustard plaster or dried horse-radish leaves which have been moistened in hot water. With children it is frequently advisable to put onion draughts to the feet. If this home treatment does not promptly help the patient, call the doctor lest there may be something serious impending. —Good Housekeeping.

As Washington is splitting its sides to-day over a story of social tonics and misadventure which has just leaked out, Mr. George Barclay, of the British legation, has of late been sufficiently opined of Miss Leiter, the beautiful western heiress, who has turned all Washington heads this winter. Mr. Barclay is the attractive young gentleman who won fame and money at the Knickerbocker Club in New York, by backing himself to drive to the Brooklyn Hotel, from the city and return in a single ten minutes. He did actually accomplish this feat inside of seven minutes. It is undoubtedly owing to this nervous haste, abnormally developed in an otherwise rather slow nature, that Mr. Barclay has not to accept his present mortification. It seems that on Wednesday night Mr. Barclay felt the approach of the cold wave, and purchased some of those warm woolen garments which slide down from a hook into a cold man's leg. The same afternoon he ordered a box of roses to be sent to his lodgings. Late for dinner, as usual, he rushed home, dashed off a pretty note to Miss Leiter, saying, "Wear those this evening for my sake," and handed the note and the box containing the woolen goods to his servant, who duly delivered them, while the box of roses remained upon Mr. Barclay's table. Although, perhaps, no one could so grievously an international affront as Lord Saville put upon us, the views of the British Foreign Office upon this latest misfit in diplomacy is waited with some amusement and anxiety. As for Mr. Barclay's personal explanations, they are, of course, unobtainable.

Every Household Should have Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

It saves thousands of lives annually, and is peculiarly efficacious in Croup, Whooping Cough, and Sore Throat.

Relieved By. "After an extensive practice of nearly one-third of a century, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is my cure for recent colds and coughs. I prescribe it, and believe it to be the very best expectorant now offered to the people."

Relieved By. "For children afflicted with colds, coughs, sore throat, or croup, I do not know of any remedy which will give more speedy relief than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

Relieved By. "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has proved remarkably effective in croup and is invaluable as a family medicine."

Relieved By. "I must say another thing about your cough. It is too fine. Simplicity and exquisite freshness are more attractive in a girl's costume than any extravagance of fashion or costliness of material."

Relieved By. "I see young girls go out into society so much like our first parents in Eden, naked and unashamed, that my heart sinks and my eyes are dimmed at the sight; for we are not in Eden now; nor silent and ignorant in innocence. I cannot think a young girl is instinctively modest who wears a very décolleté dress, no matter who she is."

Good Advice to Girls.

Don't forget, my dear, that now is your time to establish your character for life as a well-bred, charming, modest girl; do not let me of you, lose the opportunity.

Don't go out driving or walking or sailing alone with any young man. Perhaps you will tell me that all girls do it. Not so! Well-bred girls, my dear; if you have no real chaperon take another girl with you.

Joker's Corner.

Why Dr. Hawkes Declined. HE DISMISSED HIS CHIEF-YOUNG LAYING-ESS AND HAWKES.

North Carolina probably never produced an able preacher than Dr. Francis L. Hawkes, who a quarter of a century ago was pastor of Grace Episcopal church, New York.

Well, gentlemen, other things being satisfactory, I have accepted of the proposition made to me by a business matter, said Dr. Hawkes. "What salary do you offer?"

"Dr. Hawkes, what a question!" we recognized that you have a high reputation and are willing to be liberal. Our recent pastor has received $2,500, but on account of your standing we have decided to offer you $3,500.

"My good man," cried the doctor, gasping, "do you know what salary I am receiving here?"

"No, sir," said $15,000 and this paragon, and as I have an expensive family I do not see my way clear to accept your offer."

"The spokesman looked rather sleepish, but made no objection to the proposition."

"If we had known that fact, sir, we would undoubtedly have looked elsewhere; you should remember that the Lord's will be done, and as for providing for your family, you know the story of the ravens."

"Now friends," responded the clergyman, quizzically, "I have made the Bible my study ever since I was twenty-eight. I have read it through at least five or fully over a hundred times. I remember the raven incident perfectly, but nowhere can I find any reference to the Lord's providing for young Hawkes." —Washington Post.

What Could That Fourth One Be. There is a very nice young lady in Washington who has a way of riding herself of horses that is not only unique but at least. She tells the first one she meets, and if the second one starts him, the third one is almost sure to. In one case the fourth never missed his man. She calls them her "Undertakers Series." They are as follows: "Oh, dear," said the beautiful daughter of a prominent undertaker, "I am afraid I shall be too late to Saratoga this summer. Papa says he never knew people to be so frightfully healthy. If some one doesn't die before long I shall have a new spring in my step."
