Calendar for the Week.

- Oct. 15—St. Teresa. 16—Dissolved Victor III. 17—St. Hedwig. 18—St. Luke the Evangelist. 19—St. Peter of Alcantara. 20—St. John Cantius. 21—St. Hilarien, Ab.

The Grand Orient Freemasons of Franco have declared war upon the Government on account of the dismissal of one of their members, M. Montell, from the public service.

The Uxbridge Journal draws attention to an invention started by the Orillia Packet charging Mr. F. J. Gillespie of Uxbridge with using undue influence to secure the trade of Indians on the Mara reserve.

The progress of the Presidential campaign in the United States promises a close election. The claims of the Republican press that McKinley's majority will be the biggest on record are obviously senseless.

Prof. Beesley in the Positivist Review makes a timely comment upon the contrast between the attitude of the British press towards American-Irish and Armenian dynamiters.

There is room at Ottawa for the introduction of a good deal of the right democratic spirit. The proposal to superannuate the "gentleman usher of the black rod" is a move in the proper direction.

The rear guard of the Canadian delegation of the Irish Race Convention was banqueted in Cork on the eve of sailing for home by the committee of the local branch of the Irish National Federation.

Believing that the country was against them against the most commanding figure of the nineteenth century they had now the same right to stand up against any other figure or any other family or any other section to vindicate that stone by which they could achieve their object namely the right of the majority to rule.

Mr. O. David of Montreal has climbed a pedestal to deliver a lecture to the glory of the Province of Quebec. Our contemporary The True Witness takes advantage of this opportunity to address a timely word to Mr. David.

Putting aside the playfulness of Mayor Fleming and the protectors of the Sabbath, who contend that the street car gangs shall not be permitted to ring within 200 yards of any church at any time during the seventh day, even to warn an absent minded citizen to get off the track, there is only one hitch between the City Council and the company with respect to the conditions of the new service.

The life of a touring Czar is not a happy one; cannot in the nature of it be more than temporarily tolerable. His Majesty escaped with his life out of Paris. His abjects in the capital of that free republic would kill him with kindness—or cookery.

A Vindictive Sovereign.

The fitness of Mr. N. Clarke Wallace for the position which for a while he held in the Conservative Government of Sir John Thompson and Sir Mackenzie Bowell may be judged by the exhibition he made of himself in the House of Commons on the eve of prorogation.

Mr. Wallace could not be supposed to know anything about the administration of the department of Customs upon his appointment. Nor was he long enough in office to learn much from the heads of the permanent staff.

It would have been a great deal better for Mr. Wallace could he but suffer the period of his administration to rest in public forgetfulness. No; he must proclaim on the floor of the House of Commons how far he went in playing the part of an Orange boss in office.

Mr. Wallace instinctively opposed Mr. O'Hara's claim. He could be excused for that; perhaps he could not help it. Prejudice is blind. But that Mr. Wallace should undertake, under pretence of the knowledge he had gained of Mr. O'Hara while he occupied the position of Comptroller of Customs, to throw mud at as experienced and respected an officer as there is in Canada was an outrage.

tainly was a spectacle calculated to make even self respecting Conservatives devoutly thankful that the Conservatoracy, which had become so useful in its long enjoyment of power at Ottawa, at last was made to learn that some power higher than itself existed in the country.

Father Chiniquy in England.

That amiable pervert, Father Chiniquy, is in England just now. Catholics in Canada have wearied of refuting his abusive and ridiculous ravings against the Church of his mother and his race.

I read in The Rock of September the 25th, the following statement by "Pastor" Chiniquy, who, I understand, is on a visit to England.

"You in England do not know what Rome is, and so I am coming to tell you that I know her system is not Christianity. Why," continued the Pastor, "when I was in the Church of Rome I had to repeat every day the following prayer from my Brethren: 'Mary, thou art the only hope of sinners. That is not Christianity! It is Paganism and Idolatry.'"

Now, sir, I beg to challenge the statement italicized, and I defy Mr. Chiniquy or any of his friends to give chapter and verse, i.e., the place where the said prayer is to be found in the Roman Breviary, which, I suppose, the gentleman in question must have made use of in bygone days.

England and Russia.

The sensation of the week has been the resignation of Lord Rosebery from the leadership of the Liberal party in England, a step which he followed up with a speech in Edinburgh taking the opposite side from Mr. Gladstone on the Armenian question.

that the Sultan did not pause for an hour to tell England do her worst. Lord Salisbury had the satisfaction of hearing from the Sublime Porte that the government of Ireland is a greater blot on civilization than the government of Armenia, an opinion in which Mr. Gladstone almost concurs in his letter to Rev. R. R. Kane of Belfast, wherein he prays "God Save Armenia and Ireland."

Avowing veneration and unshaken friendship for Mr. Gladstone, Lord Rosebery said that he could not agree with the proposal made by the latter in his Liverpool speech to withdraw the British Ambassador from Constantinople or to threaten action which could not be effected if the powers did not approve.

This is very different talk from the boast of "splendid isolation" that was heard in England a short time ago. Lord Rosebery said he would fight tooth and nail any proposal that might involve England in a war.

There has never in our experience been a finer example of the complete smashing to pieces of a case than Lord Rosebery's destruction of the Armenian agitation.

There is nothing now that can happen to prevent Russia ruling in questions of Eastern diplomacy. England has yielded her right not only to dictate, but even to interfere. The Czar may have given promises during his visit to Balmoral to exert himself towards abating the excesses of Islam in Armenia and Crete; but if he has done so it is simply as a favor conferred upon his grandmother. The Czar has it in his power personally to tide Europe over the present dangerous crisis, to patch the Turkish question up so that it will hold together a few years longer. But he has not the power to prevent the expansion of his own dominions, an expansion which must sooner or later bring the empire of the north and the colonizing empire of the world—Britain—into deadly grips.

The Manitoba School Question.

The Ottawa correspondent of The Globe sent the following despatch on Tuesday to the Liberal organ:

The terms of the settlement of the school question will probably be made known within a week's time, and they are pretty certain to meet with the approval of all candid minded men familiar with the spirit of our constitution and the circumstances of the case.

It is our sincere hope that the settlement of the School question thus semi-officially announced will be found, in the words of the correspondent, worthy of the approval "of all candid-minded men familiar with the spirit of our constitution and the circumstances of the case."

The very remarkable fact is presented of the Government presently backing up Lord Rosebery's view. The question arises would Lord Salisbury have said as much as Lord Rosebery? Is Lord Rosebery indirectly speaking for the Government? His Lordship is supposed to enjoy the greatest measure of the royal confidence next to Lord Salisbury.

A Cabotian Wrangle.

The proposal to have a Cabot celebration was, as we innocently thought, a thing that could easily be kept clear of the sectarian spirit. The gentleman who made the first move in the matter hardly anticipated any trouble of this kind.

Archdeacon Dixon of Guelph, as pronounced an Anglican as might be, denies that he is the author of the story. He writes to The Evangelical Churchman to say so, and to deny the accuracy of the report which appeared in that paper and also in the Winnipeg press, that he had solemnly divulged the information to the Synod that Cabot was an "excommunicated Romanist."

An inventive genius as fertile as his... capable of great things in Canada...

Whether the allegation that Cabot was an "excommunicated Romanist" was started by a perfidious reporter...

The fact is that it was a hundred years later before England entered with any spirit on her career of colonization...

A boomerang certainly it is, if not an extravagant jest. John Cabot was in no sense an Englishman.

Being an adventurer by calling him, no doubt, visited England in that year for the sole purpose of securing the protection of Henry VII.

But whatever the character of Henry VII as a financier may have been he was at all events a good "Romanist."

Need we remind the Niagara memorialists that it was in 1621 the first copy of Luther's De Captivitate Babylonica reached the hands of Henry VIII?

This letter (Pace to Wolsey, date 21 April, 1521) was followed by another from the King himself on the 21st of May to Leo X., in which he expresses his anxiety to suppress the Lutheran heresy...

and he sends the ambassador directions how it is to be presented to the Pope... to deliver a copy of it privately to his Holiness...

We have gone into the historical quotation rather elaborately to show how great a lapse of years had occurred between the voyage of Cabot and England's quarrel with the Church of Christ...

Dr. Burns and the Hamilton Herald.

Elsewhere we reproduce a letter from the pen of Rev. Dr. Burns to The Hamilton Herald. A reply appeared in the editorial columns of that paper on Saturday.

If land laws are favorable to the tillers of the soil it is a safe conclusion that their fruits will be found in the better condition of the agriculturists.

Up to the time when Ireland's native parliament was destroyed the agriculturist flourished the same as his neighbors in business and commerce.

participate in English public life, to make themselves answerable to English public opinion. They took their rents out of the country, and their custom which had built up Dublin as a city of beauty, prosperity and solhrity...

The Herald is, we think, recognized for moderation and intelligence, but its views on the present condition of Ireland supply something in the nature of a contrast to its general reputation.

The Herald is wrong. The radical remedy is not to be wholesale confiscation. When the country recovered from the violence of the landlord war, when the campaign of the crow bar brigade was abated...

Pope Leo's Counsel.

Having sent his blessing to the Irish Race Convention in Dublin on Sept. 1st, Pope Leo followed up this friendly and fatherly act on Sept. 25th, when, by the Bishop of Ross, he sent the following verbal message to Ireland's representatives:

Let them work together, let them be united, and if so they can get and do anything they want. But if broken up by selfishness or faction they will lay their cause and their country in ruins."

The Irish people are not blind to the conviction that prevails everywhere. These appeals of Pope Leo, of their own kin and kin throughout the world, and of the friends of their cause in every clime throw on Irish electors a plain responsibility.

LITERATURE.

In the Days of the Canada Company.

The joint authors of this book, "In the Days of the Canada Company" have given us a faithful picture of the life and of the men and women who lived it, in the early days of settlement of that part of Upper Canada known as the twenties and thirties as the "Huron tract."

From a mass of authentic and original matter official documents private letters and diaries, as well as from the recollection of many rotund memories of tales and anecdotes in which the first settlers bore a part, they have produced not only a readable book but a volume of great value to the history of Canada.

Formed in the days of great confusion, the Canada Company was one of the greatest and most far-reaching in its influence. It numbered among its originators and promoters men of note, of literary ability and fame, and men of genius, of birth, of eccentricity; men whose education and upbringing fitted them to handle a pen or a sword rather than to wield an axe or guide a plough; men who were fired by a spirit of adventure or a desire to wrest from the now world the prosperity denied them in the old; men who brought the tastes, fancies, or fancies of learning and refinements of the height of civilization into the incongruous setting of an untamed primitive forest—cast in their lot with the Company, crossed the Atlantic to endure privations and hardships not included in their expectations, and became an important factor in the settlement of the land. Their experiences and individuality have provided many an attractive picture or racy anecdote to grace the pages of this delightful chronicle.

The records and stories are strung together with the kind of genius one expects to find in the pen of an artist. One is depicted neither better nor worse than they were in life; the situations, the incidents of life in the forest, the friendly intercourse, the quarrels, the practical jokes, the rivalries which were inevitable among such a clientele of characters, the successes, the failures, the refinement, the roughness so oddly mingled are neither diminished nor exaggerated in the recital. Here and there a keen appreciation of the humour of the scenes described flashes from the author's pen, rendering them more realistic, and we are carried back to the past by the vivid portraiture until we see and know the men and women so cleverly placed upon these pages. The lover of nature will find delight in the many exquisite descriptive passages that abound in the book, and for which the glorious sunsets of Lake Huron and the many picturesque spots in that section of the province offer tempting subjects for brush or pen.

The numerous illustrations scattered throughout the volume will add much to its value. Many are reproductions of old portraits or sketches that would otherwise have been lost. The letterpress and binding too, will be made worthy of the subject-matter.

The October Century contains "A Study of Mental Epidemics," by Mr. Boris Sidis, which has a close bearing on American affairs past and contemporaneous. He gives an analysis of the social conditions of the period of the Crusades and the nervous epidemics of Europe, and explains the theory of mental suggestion or hypnotism, by which the susceptible portion of a tribe or a people or a group of peoples, give themselves up to a popular movement.

The October number of Donahoe's Magazine presents to readers a varied table of contents including articles of contemporaneous interest, historic sketches, short stories, and poems of marked literary merit. The issue opens with a deeply interesting study of the life and works of Cardinal Taschereau, the Canadian prelate, whose falling health precipitates a national loss, all too imminent. The writer Wm. Ellison, portrays the characteristics of the man, scholar and priest, whose death will remove "one of the strongest supports of the Church in Canada."

Rev. Dr. Foley Welcomed Home.

HALIFAX, Oct. 12.—At the regular monthly meeting of St. Mary's Young Men's A. & B. Society yesterday the members presented to their spiritual director, Rev. Dr. Foley, who arrived from Rome on Friday an address, in which he said:

Your mission abroad was a noble one, and when the Irishmen of your native city selected you as their representative to the Dublin convention we felt that the duty could not have been entrusted to one more capable or worthy. We watched with a sense of pride and interest your movements abroad, and when the news reached us of the opening of the Convention and we read your wise and manly words addressed to the Irishmen of the world, we recognized the sincerity of a prolific mind the firm and worthy utterances of a noble heart.

We learned with pleasure of your visit to Rome, and trust that while in the Papal city you had the honor of an audience with the Holy Father. The address was signed by Thomas Brown, president and the members of the committee.

Dr. Berglin's Condition.

CORNWALL, ONT., Oct. 12.—Dr. Berglin was apparently as recovered yesterday morning that he was assisted out of bed to take breakfast, despite the attending physician's instructions to the contrary. This resulted in him taking a bad turn, but he reacted well last night, and today seemed more the worse. His condition is much the same as it was last week. The improvement, if any, is slight.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien were returning to their home, and when descending a hill a bolt is supposed to have broken loosening the whitestones, and the horse ran away, the occupants being thrown out. They were found at the side of the road in an unconscious condition. While Mr. O'Brien recovered, Mrs. O'Brien became worse, and only rallied a few times for a short period.
