IN ICY NORTHLAND.

LABRADOR'S STRANGE PEOPLE AND THEIR CUSTOMS.

THEY RECOGNIZE NO CIVIL LAW—IN THE CANADIAN UNKNOWN LAND RESIDE A CURIOUS PEOPLE—THEIR MODE OF LIFE AND SUPERSTITIONS—THE ESQUIMAUX WOODS—THEY ARE INDEED—THE MARRIAGE.

Concerning the Esquimaux of far northern Labrador nothing has been written hitherto. They are so little known that the Bureau of Ethnology recently sent an expedition to that part of the world to study them. People of this race are scattered all along the coast, from the northward to the southern strait, and along the south shore of the latter to the Kokoak river, which is several hundred miles long, and takes its rise in a picturesque fastness of lakes nestled through the highlands of the west down to Quebec.

But beyond Ungava Bay, into which the Kokoak River flows to the north and west, dwells a distinct tribe of them, in a country wholly treeless, owing to the extreme cold, save for a few stunted willows and alders. The region is extremely rugged, huge mountain spurs and short ranges ramifying in every direction. These Esquimaux have seen but little of white men, and their mode of life is a trading post of the Hudson Bay Company, Fort Chimo, is so great that they send only four or five sledges thither annually to trade for the guns, ammunition, knives and other hardware. The furs they offer in barter are the finest skins of silver foxes, wolverines and weasels.

PEOPLE OF FINE PHYSIQUE. These people are tall and of fine physique. They are more than the average whites. Being shut away in such an inhospitable corner of the world it is not surprising that their ways should be exceedingly wild. For instance, the old men among them who become dependent on others for food are summarily disposed of by strangulation or are left to perish when the camp is moved. When an old woman becomes a burden to the community it is customary to neglect her until she is so weak from hunger as to be unable to walk. Then her friends are suddenly seized with a desire to remove to a distant locality, and she is discarded. Sometimes the four of the males retreat their steps on the presence of hunting for a lost whip or ammunition bag. If their track is followed the corpse of the abandoned person will be found bound with thongs and with stones piled around it.

In a country where sufficient food for the able-bodied is hard to get, such actions are commonly dictated by the instinct of self-preservation. However, unskilful or disliked women are often expelled from the camp and must take care of themselves until they find relief or perish. In times of great scarcity families have actually been driven to cannibalism, after eating their dogs and doing skinned. In one case an old woman had only one eye, and this was continually sore and annoying to the people with whom she lived. They proposed to strangle her. Next day the eye was much better, and the cure was postponed. Suicides are not rare. Strangulation or jumping from a cliff are the usual method. The causes of self-destruction are remorse and disappointed love.

The dead are treated with no ceremony. When a person dies the body is prepared by binding it with cords, the knees being drawn up and the heels placed against the body. The arms are tied to the sides and a covering of deer skin or seal-skin is wrapped around the corpse and sewn. On approach of dissolution the invalid is removed by the relatives to the outside of the house. If he should pass away indoors he must not be carried out through the door, but through a hole cut in the wall, which is then carefully closed to prevent the spirit of the defunct from returning. The body is exposed in the open air by the side of a large rock or taken to the shore or a hill top, where stones are piled around it to prevent birds and other predatory animals from getting at it. It is considered very desirable if a dog be seen eating the flesh of a corpse.

IDEAS OF A FUTURE STATE. These Esquimaux have very distinct ideas of a future state and believe that death is merely a separation of the spirit from the body. The soul goes either up to the sky or down to the earth, and spirits of these two classes can hold communication with each other. The place to which the soul goes depends on the conduct of the person while on earth, and especially on the manner of his death. Those who have died by violence or starvation and women who perish in childbirth are supposed to go to the region above, where, though not absolutely in want, they lack many of the luxuries enjoyed by those who go below. Everyone is anxious to go to the lower region and to enjoy the pleasures of communicating with the living, which privilege is denied to those who go above.

All the affairs of life are supposed to be under the control of spirits, each of which rules over a certain element, all of them being under the direction of a greater spirit. Each person is supposed to be attended by a special guardian, who is malignant in character, ever ready to seize on the least occasion to work harm upon the individual whom it accompanies. As this is an evil spirit its good offices and assistance can be obtained by propitiation only. The person strives to retain its good-will by offerings of food, water and clothing. Often the demon is carried about in the shape of a doll—in the amunition bag, if success in the chase is desired.

The sky is supposed to be an immense dome of hard material reared over the earth, long from east to west and shorter from north to south. Presumably this difference is due to the fact that the people have not been accustomed to travel so far north and south as east and west. For the reason exactly similar the words "lonitude" and "latitude" were originally applied by the ancients who imagined that the world was flat and much longer from east to west than from north to south. These Esquimaux believe that the land and the sea are bounded by high, precipitous sides, sloping inward to prevent anything living from going to the region beyond. The vault of the heavens is very cold and at times is covered with crystals of frost which fall as snow. The clouds are controlled by two old women who run with them across the sky, and sometimes they leak at the seams. Thunder is their voice and lightning is their teeth. At each corner of the earth there is a spirit with an enormous head. When these giant breathe the winds blow.

WOMEN HELD IN LITTLE RESPECT. Women are held in little respect, though the men are very jealous of their wives, and unfaithfulness on their part is sure to be severely punished. A girl is married as soon as maturity as a male comes along who has the requisite physical strength to force her to become his bride. The marriage ceremony is very simple. Commonly the sanction of the parents is sought by gifts of skins, furs, and other valuables. In most cases the consent of the girl is not asked. Her lover seizes the first opportunity to abduct her forcibly, and keeps her away until she is thoroughly subjected to his will. In one instance, not long ago, a young woman was tied in a snowhouse for two weeks and was not allowed to go out. She revenged herself by pulling nearly all the hair from her husband's head. In fact, she was unusually obstreperous and another man, who subsequently took her to wife, was obliged to fasten her to a sledge in order to make her accompany him when he desired to travel.

A young Esquimaux starts out in life with a gun and ammunition. If he is a good hunter he makes for himself a little boat called a "kyak," with the aid of which he pursues and kills the marine mammals whose skins are required for the construction of a big boat, suitable for carrying a number of people on long journeys. If very energetic and successful he afterward procures skins for constructing a tent. By the time that he has got together these possessions he is able to employ others to assist in transporting them: from place to place. Thus he becomes the head of a gens, or family, including his brothers and sisters, with their wives, husbands and children. These move in a body wherever the head may dictate, taking everything they own with them. Some of the men are too improvident to prepare skins when they have an opportunity, and thus they are unable to own a kyak, which prevents them from providing themselves with the bigger boat and the tent. Such persons must live with others or dwell by themselves and pass a miserable existence, scarcely noticed by their fellows.

The tent of skins is the usual shelter during warm weather, and until a sufficient fall of snow occurs in early winter from which to construct a house of snow blocks. It is large and roomy. Its owner is rich enough to have two or more wives. It is considered an important individual, whose favor is to be retained by every means. However, a period of illness may cause him to lose all his belongings, and on recovery he has to start life anew. Several seasons elapse before a sufficient number of skins can be procured to make a tent, and this is immovable without a boat to transport it when there is no snow on the ground. In former times these people inhabited permanent winter dwellings like those used by the Esquimaux elsewhere, as is shown by the ruins of stone and sod houses to be seen in various parts of the country. The natives relate that their ancestors lived in such huts, but cannot explain why they were deserted or by structures of the same kind are not erected at the present day.

A Deal "Tale of the Blest"

"An Arcadian Island" with a population of four hundred simple Christians is pleasantly described by Adelia Gates in the Leisure Hour.

"This tale of the blest is one of the Lipari group, lying to the south of Italy, and between it and Sicily; and it is known to the world by the name of Panaria. Within its borders there is neither doctor nor dentist, yet its inhabitants live to a good old age, and keep their teeth well. There is no lawyer, and no prison; yet there are no disputes over boundary lines, no quarrels between debtor and creditor, and no theft. There is no liquor seller, nor tobaccoist, nor tea merchant; and yet the people are not un-social nor gloomy. There is no almshouse and no beggar. Each family wins from its own plot of ground enough grain, vegetables, oil and wine for home consumption, and of the two latter products sufficient is exported to procure from abroad the materials for their simple clothing, which the housewife makes up in complete independence of tailors. The sea yields them all their animal food, except perhaps a few chickens for great occasions, as at a christening or a wedding. In the whole island there is no carriage road, and few there have ever seen a horse."

THE WORK OF A SINGLE PRIEST.

This idyllic state of affairs is largely due to the work of a single priest, a sort of Catholic Oberlin, a personal epitome of the Civic Church. "When he came to Panaria he found no port, no post, no school, no church, no anything but a verdant and fertile island, and a people, not savage nor bad, but utterly illiterate—unfledged, as the Italians say. He has remained there to this day, devoting himself to their welfare as faithfully as Father Damien to his lepers, baptizing, marrying, burying, preaching, teaching, and growing old serenely in his consecrated service. Thanks to his untiring efforts Panaria has now a little port, postal communication with the mainland, a submarine telegraph to Sicily, a school, and a commodious church, where three hundred and sixty-five mornings of the year and fifty-two afternoons, there is a service. "All the public offices are united in one person. . . . Padre Michelangelo is . . . priest, mayor, harbor master, postmaster, and master of the marine telegraph, added in the last-named office, however, by his widowed niece. "If you would give aims at Panaria, there is no one to receive them."

The Mounted Police of Canada.

Scrivener's for October opens with an article on the Northwestern mounted police of Canada, magnificently illustrated by Frederic Lumington. This body is described by the writer, J. G. A. Creighton, as one of the most exceptional bravery, perseverance and hardihood, which qualities they have shown to a pre-eminent degree in their management of the unruly Indian tribes of the Northwest. The company was organized in 1873, consisting of only 500 men. Mr. Creighton gives some graphic accounts of the cool and yet audacious work of these soldiers. After the Custer massacre the police were especially busy. "The coolness and pluck of the police during that critical period was amazing. Their confidence in themselves is curiously evinced by a report from the officer in command at Wood Mountain, recommending that at least 50 men should be stationed there, as there were about 5,000 Sioux camped in the vicinity! On one occasion an attempt by the Sioux warriors to rescue by force one of their number who had been arrested was foiled and stopped by 28 troops. Such exploits were frequent in 1877. Inspector Walsh, with Dr. Kitten, a guide, and 15 constables, charged down at daybreak one morning on a war camp of 200 Assiniboines who were ill-manned and firing at some Salteaux, camped near by, had threatened to serve the police in the same way if they came. Surrounding the war body erected in the centre of the camp, he arrested and took away the chief, Crow's Dance, and 10 of the principal warriors. Then assembling the remainder of the chiefs in council, he warned them of the results of setting the law at defiance and ordered them to let the Assiniboines go in peace. "On one occasion a settler struck an Indian, whose comrades, some 500 in all, not understanding how such an insult could be atoned for by a fine, promptly proceeded to destroy the settler's property. Getting worked up into wild excitement, they soon began firing indiscriminately, and threatened to take the lives of all white men. Colonel Irvine and his Adjutant, Captain Cotton, happened to be near by. Though unarmed they rode straight into the infuriated band. Rifles were leveled at them from all sides, and their coolness told, and the Indians sullenly obeyed the order to disperse. Incidents like this, however, could be put up with by officers who have served in the Mounted Police, nor have the rank and file behind their officers in daring and firmness. It was then, as it is now, an every-day matter of duty for a single constable to enter an Indian camp and make an arrest. Momentary indecision, or the display of temper, would have often meant not only failure, but certain death. "A CURIOUSLY COMPOSED RANK AND FILE. "The rank and file are not surpassed by any picked corps in any service. A recruit must be between twenty-two and forty-five years old, of good character, able to read and write English or French, active, well-built, and of sound constitution. He is also supposed to be able to ride, and a man who knows something of horses is preferred, but these two requirements are broadly interpreted. The physique is very fine, the average of the whole thousand being five feet nine and a half inches in height and thirty-eight and a half inches round the chest. There has always been an unusual proportion of men of good family and education. Lots of the young Englishmen who come out to try their hand at farming in Manitoba, or ranching in Alberta, eventually drift into the police, or do also many well-connected young Canadians. Farmers' sons from Ontario, clerks tired of city life and poor prospects, immigrants who have not found their El Dorado, wait and strays from everywhere and of every calling, are to be found in the ranks. The roll would show many defaulters if no man answered to any name but his own. There was, and still may be, at least one Lord in the force; several of the men are entitled to more than the plain regimental number as a handle to their names, and many are university graduates. In these days of short service discharged soldiers are glad to take the Queen's shilling again, so that medals won in England's little wars at the other end of the world are not unusual, and not a few officers who have borne Her Majesty's commission now serve as simple troopers. In the adventurous infancy of the force these elements were even more numerous than nowadays, and many an odd rencontre has occurred between men who had last met at the mess table of some crack regiment, in a well-known club, or an English country house.
