HIDDEN WEALTH.

Let us begin with the pirates, by whom the treasure was buried. To put one's money by and make it breed, which financial people doing a more or less legitimate business in stocks and such things consider a prudent policy, seems, on the whole, to have been one of the most imprudent policies when the business was piracy. Wise pirates when they had taken a goodly prize, ran with it to the nearest safe port, and made themselves unrecognizably drunk on the proceeds. Unlimited rum and an occordence of the results and brought the rigging about their own hold, where they had time to prepare their speeches for their last public appearance in Execution docks. Nineteen of the twenty swung together on the island of Cuba. The twentieth contrived to get his neck leave and in due to proceeds. Unlimited rum and an occordence of the results and pluckily manned. Chapter the fourth is in course of interest; and, as far as the solid tumulus above the sunken hull.

But this is in all likelihood the chief down. Some selves unrecognizably drunk on the selves unrecognizably drunk on the proceeds. Unlimited rum and an occasional stabbing bout, to keep their hands in against the day when business would be resumed, made the pirates as happy as they wished to be; and when they had spent their booty, and recovered from the delirium tremens, they went on board again, ran up the "Jolly Roger," and waited for ano her prize. The folish pirates up the "Jolly Roger," and waited for ano her prize. The fo dish pirates were those who went and hid their stolen talents in the earth; for so surely as they did this, the next vessel they chanced upon was a man-of-war, which carried them home to be heared, and made careful working charts of the war, which carried them home to be heared, and made are the jewels lay hidden. He had made careful working charts of the ware from the southwest had carried hull of a vessel which some tidal wave from the southwest had carried by the carried had maked down the position of the treasure, with good cross bearings. war, which carried them home to be hanged, a dozen in a row. Deep sunk in many a desert isle, in many an ocean, there must be millions of pieces of eight, moidores and doubloons, and jewels and precious stones galore, which the gentlemen of fortune who hid them there, and who had them there, and who had them there, and who drawings; and the first chapter of the handed over to the home there, and who had the position of the treasure, with good cross bearings. But he could never raise suicient money to provide so much as a fishing smack, and worked on in merchant vessels until his strength failed. In this condition he handed over to a friend his charts, cross-bearings and drawings; and the first chapter of the southwest had carried up high on the shore. It is most strange, but the huge iron bar, wedged between two rocks, which believed to have been planted there by the pirates' own hands, to serve them for a land-mark; and if this be over problems so exceedingly knotty. have long since rotted in chains at harbor mouths, were never able to go back for. Hence the treasure-hunts of days more enterprising; but the spoil was never taken. The crew who laid away the loot that the new expedition is to search for seems to have been in all respects a typical gang of sea-robbers. The New Treasure-Hunt.

A Million Sterling Buried on an Island.

(Tighe Hopkins to the New Review for August.)

Toward the end of this month a little expedition will sail from Southham on one of those golden quests which for a good many years past none but the novelists have engaged in. The destination of the expedition will sail from Southham on the stakes, realized the swag, got fresh papers, sailed for home innocently, divided up and lived gallantly on the shares. The spoil of the Portuguese sloop would have made in. The destination of the expedition will share what treasures island of it, if such there ever were. But it was a fatuous business, this heaping up of bullion fastnesses of their island; immense foul birds flapped incessantly over their heads, and often beat them with their wings; and the crabs made a skipper, there are the rich chances to look for when the goal shall be reached. The sunken treasure has been stoutly with horrible protruding eyes, or waiting to feed on them.

And all this while the adventurers were tempted by the signs and tokens of buried treasures that strewed the gang thought as much, but the skipsorts, spars, casks and chests, and in the part of them all. Some of the sunken treasure they halted, and stared at them stuty with horrible protruding eyes, that amount would be a goodly prize, and those who share the risks of the expedition will share what treasures the sunken treasures that strewed the gard thought as much, but the skipsorts, spars, casks and chests, and there are the rich chances to look for when the goal shall be reached their wings; and the crabs made a skipper, there are the rich chances to bout hem; whenever they halted, and stared at them stuty with horrible protruding eyes, the papers, sailed for home innocently, divided up and lived gallantly on the stakes, realized the swag, got fresh papers, sailed for home innocently, divided up and lived gallantly o should use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing. It keeps the scalp clean and cool, and is by far the most exquisite toilet preparation in the market.

B. M. Johnson, M. D., Thomas Hill, Mo., says: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, and regard it as the best hair preparation I know of. It keeps the scalp clean, the hair soft and lively, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long time with most satisfactory results."

Mrs. S. A. Rock, of Anderson, Texas, writes: "At the age of 34, in Monroe, La., I had a severe attack of swamp, or malarial, fever. After I got well my hair commenced coming out, and so continued until it had well nich all gone.

Wasting Deseases Nothing Superior To It Can Be Obtained."

"I have been suffering from Pulmonary Diseases for the last five years. About two years ago, during an acute period of my illness, I was advised by my physician to try Puthner's Emulsion. I did so with the most gratifying results. My sufferings were speedily alleviated, my cough diminished, my appetite improved. I added several pounds to my weight in a short time and began to recover strength. This process continued until life, which had been a misery to me, became once more a pleasure. Since then Puthner's Emulsion has been my only medicine . As one who has fully tested its worth, I hereby recommend it to all who are suffering from affections of the Lungs and throat, and I am certain that for any form of wasting diseases, nothing superior can be obtained."   —Robert R.
