LAVAL TO ORGANIZE COMPANY FOR FRONT

QUEBEC, May 6.—Father Filion, rector of Laval University, this morning read the students a letter he had received from the deputy minister of militia, suggesting that a company of infantry, two hundred and fifty strong, be formed of young students of the institution and affiliated colleges. The suggestion was well received. Under this scheme the men enlisting in this particular unit will be entitled to complete for commission and non-commissioned officers' rank and will be allowed to select their own officers to serve in, once they are in France.

Major T. Paquet will organize the company along the lines adopted by the Toronto University.

CHICAGO CABARETS CLOSE.

CHICAGO, May 6.—With scarcely a flicker of the white lights to mark their passing, every cabaret in the city officially ended its existence at 12:01 o'clock tonight. At that hour the new ordinance divorcing intoxicating liquor and entertainment and dancing, and practically all forms of amusements, was put into effect.

HAIR COMING OUT
MEANS DANDRUFF

"Danderine" will save your hair and double its beauty at once.

Try this! Your hair gets soft, wavy, abundant and glossy at once.

Save your hair! Beautiful! It is only a matter of time before a little Danderine occasionally to have a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, wavy and free from dandruff. It is easy and inexpensive to have pretty, charming hair and lots of it. Just spend a few cents for a small bottle of Danderine.

Danderine now—all drug stores recognize it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and as you will, you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp.

Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

Roberts Denounces German Socialists as Kaiser's Agents

Allied Labor Will Not Meet Foe Workers.

LONDON, May 7.—(Via Reuter's Limited.)—George H. Roberts, minister of labor, speaking at Norwich yesterday, declared he was still strongly opposed to any conference with the laboring classes in Germany. The minister said he had been criticized in the House of Commons for his attitude towards the German Socialists. He could not differentiate between the German Socialists and the German Social-Democrats, and he could not differentiate between the German Socialists and the German Social-Democrats.

Lipovaccines the Newest Aids in Warding Off Disease

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG,
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins University.)

DR. HIRSHBERG

A vaccine is usually a watery mixture of killed or living germs. As a rule, vaccines are used to prevent the disease associated with the germ used. For instance, typhoid bacilli and paratyphoid bacilli are killed, counted and mixed with water, 1,000 million to each 15 drops, and to ward off these fevers are used in three different vaccinations, a week apart.

Smallpox is prevented by scraping a few glycerinated mucous of cowpox, weak cousin of smallpox—into the skin. A local cowpox, called the eruption, vaccines and makes you immune to smallpox.

At the army medical school in Washington, D. C., Lieut. Col. E. R. Whitmore of the department of pathology and Lieut. E. A. Fennel and W. F. Petersen have attempted to make a new vaccine for several human ailments, which have hitherto been failures both in the preventive vaccination and antitoxin treatments.

What They Are. Antitoxins differ from vaccines in many respects. They are made from the blood of animals or men, which has successfully withstood the bacteria or poisons of diphtheria, lockjaw, type I pneumonia, gas bacilli infection and other diseases. Antitoxins are useful both as preventives and as treatments. Vaccines are admirable preventives, but generally failures in the treatment of a disease. Whooping cough and apne vaccines, however, are useful in this latter respect. They diminish the intensity of these maladies.

The army doctors mentioned point out that oils and fats have proved to be better than water or salt solutions as a means with which to mingle germs to be made into vaccines. They call these lipovaccines, because wool fat or lanolin, soap fats, vaseline or vegetable oils may be profitably substituted for water in the manufacture of vaccines.

Oil vaccines have also proved to be less harmful as well as less powerful than the watery ones now in use—so much so, indeed, that vaccination may be completed in one big dose instead of three scattered doses over two weeks. The fats, it appears, diminish the disturbing effects sometimes evidenced. Moreover, they allow the vaccine to remain at the point of inoculation over a period of time with slower absorption, and thus immunize the individual gradually without the discomforts of the other method.

How They're Made. The opportunity to give the entire vaccination and immunity in one dose is a great advantage for all concerned. Lipovaccines, since they are absorbed steadily from one spot, may be used to protect human kind against such diseases as colds or pneumonia, immunity to which has been found to be of only a transitory value. With lipovaccines this slowly vaccinating from their fatty, walled-off cells at the point injected, this fleeting immunity can be greatly extended. Vaccines for pneumonia, gonorrhea, diphtheria, meningitis and colds hitherto have been failures, because their immunity is fleeting and evanescent.

Drs. Whitmore, Fennel and Petersen grow the bacteria from pneumonia and meningitis patients for 20 hours or so in a broth of meat, starch agar and rabbit's blood. This food bacterial soil is then scraped smoothly away and is planted to a flat dish, from which it is centrifuged in an oven over which a current of sterilized air is passed.

Some 45 minutes later the bacteria are dried and remain in the form of fine, glistening, brittle scales. The dry weight of these for a thousand million is easily estimated, and they are then ground up in a ball mill for 24 hours. A teaspoonful of ether and chloroform are mixed with them to insure the complete killing of any germ that might have possibly escaped.

Use by Army. Sterile lanolin—wool fat—enough to make a 10 per cent mixture, is warmed and half the value of olive oil is added to the mixture in the ball mill. Then the sticky mass is mixed a few hours and enough oil is added to make the amount you wish.

The germinations of pneumonia has a definite relationship to the type of pneumonia germ; there are four types, one of which has an anti-serum, in their own right. The army doctors made a first lipovaccine the army doctors made it contain types I. and II., omitting the others. According to a blood test used by doctors for this purpose, vaccination of some men with this mixture made them immune to pneumonia for six weeks. Meningitis vaccines were made with four different races of meningococci, which is the bacterium concerned in this disease. Ten thousand million of the different strains mixed together were allowed to the 15 drops. Thus whole companies of soldiers were saved from the long quarantine which is generally necessary whenever even one victim of the malady is discovered in camp.

Answers to Health Questions

S. O. P. Q.—I live near a sanatorium for consumptives. Do you think this a safe place to live, and would you advise me to stay there?

A.—Near a tuberculosis sanatorium is the safest place in the world to live.

T. B. Q.—What can be done for a nervous, weak heart?

A.—This may be due to several causes. You should have an examination made to find the cause.

ANON. Q.—What can I do for a rash on my hands and wrists. It burns and itches painfully, and is very red also.

A.—Try a little of the following calamine lotion:
Pink calamine 2½ drams
Zinc oxide 2 drams
Glycerine 2 drams
Lime-water 30 drops
Phenol 30 drops
Rosewater 2 ounces

D. F. J. Q.—What can be done for a bad breath?

A.—Your nose, teeth, tonsils or throat may be the cause of this foul breath. If you are not at all constipated and are fairly active with your limbs, foul breath may be communicated by the use of a good tooth brush, a disinfecting tooth paste, dental floss or silk floss and a few times a day between the teeth, and a nasal wash something like the alkaline antiseptic solution. Peroxide of hydrogen swirled and sucked back and forth between the teeth, or milk of magnesia used for its mechanical effects may act as a makeshift. You may find relief from this annoying feature by taking half a dozen 5-grain charcoal tablets two or three times a day.

L. K. H. London, Ont. Q.—1. What can be taken for gas on the stomach?
2. Also please suggest something for itching thighs.

A.—1. Avoid all fried foods, pastry, cake, sweets, thickened soups and gravies. Be sure that your food is properly masticated and have dental defects remedied. Have your druggist make up twenty powders of subgallate of bismuth, each containing ten grains, and take one after each meal. If, after a week of this treatment, you find that you have not entirely recovered, you should consult your family physician about this.

2. Apply a little of the following to the affected parts:
Pink calamine 2½ drams
Zinc oxide 2 drams
Glycerine 2 drams
Phenol 30 drops
Lime-water 30 drops
Rosewater 2 ounces

PETE, London, Ont. Q.—Would you please tell what could be done for stiffness caused from rheumatism?

A.—Dry heat, hot applications, Swedish movements, electric battery, manipulation and massage, may help you.

An Interruption.
Ah, there it was! I caught my breath with sheer artistic pleasure as I flung saw it through an opening in the giant pines which jealously guarded it, completely hiding the inn and its outbuildings from the casual view. Only those who had been privileged to be its guests and the friends they had told of its charms knew of the existence of the inn. It never advertised and capitalized its quiet exclusiveness.

I walked slowly toward the house, entering to the utmost the vision it presented. Every appearance was in keeping with the main building. A few yards from the house an old windmill towered, outlined against the sky. It was like an old friend to me. It overlooked a little winding stream, and in previous summers there had been a rustic bench at its foot, upon which Dicky and I had often rested while waiting for our dinner to be cooked.

I was sorry to see that the Viennese proprietress evidently had decided that the windmill should be the decoration of its own rugged lines. The lower part of it had been screened, and the vines trained thickly against it, so that it must have been obtained at great expense from a greenhouse to give such luxuriant foliage so early in the season. And against the vines, flowered with scarlet blossoms made of the red and white, an exotic, unfamiliar thing.

The rustic seat had disappeared. Instead a decorative but strong iron fence separated the part of the grounds in which the windmill stood from those around the house. An ornamental gate instead of the fence into two parts, but instead of standing invitingly open.

I wondered vaguely at this arrangement, for one of the chief charms of the place had been this grassy slope bordering the little woodland stream. Now the place looked like an artificial park with its formal flower beds and its stately peacock spreading his glittering plumage in the sunlight.

My curiosity was aroused, and with it a wish to see the little stream once again. With the ambling in dignified fashion beside me, I walked toward the gate and tried to open it. It was locked. As I shook it slightly, to make sure, I heard a slight noise behind me.

I turned sharply, and saw in two of the windows of the inn scowling faces that were watching me, screened as they thought by the fluttering curtains. At the same moment a waiter came out of the door of the inn and advanced quickly toward me.

INCIDENTS IN THE LIVES OF FAMOUS WOMEN

BY ELOISE FARRINGTON.

How a Beautiful Heathen Princess Lost Her Kingdom and Yet Attained Biblical Immortality.

Caractacus was the most powerful of all the kings of ancient Britain. For eight years he withstood the legions of Rome only to be betrayed in the end by Cartimandua, Queen of Brigantes. When Caractacus heard that his wife and only daughter, Claudia, had been taken prisoner of Rome his misery was complete. He loved his only child with all the power of his great and noble heart. The thought that she was to grace a Roman triumph was almost more than he could bear.

Claudia, whom the historians describe as possessing the beauty of a Greek goddess, was the proudest descendant of a long line of kings. Caractacus longed, above all else, to pare her the humiliation of having to appear as a prisoner before Caesar and all Rome. But the Emperor Claudius demanded that Caractacus and his family come before him on the field of Mars.

"My Home Shall Be Rome."

On the day selected for this ordeal a vast multitude assembled in the streets and squares of the city to gaze upon the British captives. Claudia and his Empress the beautiful Agrippina, were seated on the tribune awaiting the coming of the barbarian who had resisted the power of Rome for eight years. Claudia wore the imperial crown and mantle, while Agrippina's golden hair was crowned by a diadem of gold and her white neck adorned with a jeweled necklace. She had heard rumors of the surpassing loveliness of the British maiden, and had taken particular pains to appear dazzlingly beautiful herself. At length there was a stir among the assemblage—the procession was approaching. The grave Caractacus was preceded by his brothers, his wife and the lovely Claudia. Her matchless grace, her proud carriage and flawless beauty seemed to cast a spell over the populace. Mothers held up their little ones that they might see more clearly the face of this wonderful maiden. Even Agrippina's eyes were riveted upon the captive, who without golden ornaments or royal robes, yet looked every inch a queen.

When the British prisoners had reached the foot of the tribune all prostrated themselves before Caesar, except Caractacus and Claudia. Both were thinking of Britain, of its ruined and desolate cities; of its half-clothed, half-fed people; of its comfortless homes and lonely marshes. Why should so great and rich a nation as Rome covet the barren lands of Britain? Claudia quickly recognized the power and heroism reflected in the personalities of the two standing before him, and, addressing Caractacus, said:

think you that all the world will welcome servitude?

"Had I not resisted your power, neither my capture nor your triumph would have won their present distinction. Condemn me to death, and my story will be forgotten. Release me and your clemency will live forever."

As the last word fell from his lips, Claudia again smiled proudly upon her father, knowing that he had not pleaded in vain.

The multitude shouted: "Spare him! Pardon him, because of his bravery!"

Claudia looked proudly at her father and smiled as his voice rang clear and rich as the tones of a bell through the field of Mars.

"Had my prosperity been equal to my noble birth, Oh, Caesar, I should have entered Rome as your friend rather than as your captive, and you would have welcomed me as a king—an ally. My misfortune is your glory. Your determination is to rule the world, but I wish I were equal to you."

Nowadays I never see a yellow primrose or get the fragrance of one without seeing again in the moonlight the face of the one I loved so dearly and hearing again her voice, that was always sweet to me.

What a dreadful thing it must be not to have any flowers or growing things in your memory.

I wonder if it doesn't make it harder to be kind and forgiving sometimes when the people are just much you wish they were or what you thought they would turn out to be.

I wonder if there isn't a reason for the fact that behind most of the men who have been great, this or any other country is the memory of some garden somewhere and the smell of the flowers that grew there.

I wonder if the patience that we learned when we waited for things to grow doesn't mean something to us in after life.

A Wonderful Opportunity.
I've thought sometimes that it would be a good thing for this whole nation if we could all of us go back a little to the old times, and at least to the ways of the old times, and live in simple little gardens and get back sometimes to the realities of life and make ourselves realize what is important and what is only a passive fancy.

This war has already done marvelous things for the people of this country. I have just crossed the continent for the thirtieth time in my life, and I never before saw so much kindness and courtesy everywhere as I have seen this time. Strangers speak to strangers. Little courtesies are exchanged. The tired mother finds someone to help her with her brood. The old man who is going to bid his grandson good-bye before he sails for France finds a dozen strong young arms to help him on his way.

The sweet girl who looks wistfully after the tall figure in khaki when the train moves out of the station—with what sympathy and kindly feeling every heart in the train follows her!

Oh, it's a good world and the kind world and the generous, loving world today, as it never was before since the great shift against Adam and Eve. And somehow I can't help hoping that this idea of the children's garden army is going to blow and all the trees in all the gardens round about seemed to be bowing to each other and giving and whispering invitations to a wonderful ball to be given that night in the moonlight when all the stupid human beings were in bed and fast asleep.

Things We Learn.
Did you know I saw a yellow primrose in your garden? We did in ours. And the evening primrose was the moon rose. "Pop," said the primrose, and there it was, like a yellow star in the moonlight, and the perfume of it rose and made the world an Eden, and someone you loved very dearly plucked a yellow primrose in her hair and leaned upon the gate and hummed under her breath an old song that you knew she was singing to someone very far away, and had forgotten all about you.

PLUNKETT TOO TRUSTING.

SIR HORACE PLUNKETT has advised that responsible home government be established in Ireland immediately, and has expressed the belief that after this is done the Irish themselves will pass legislation "to do their bit in the war." If his belief in Ireland could be generally accepted, how near an end would be the problem which confronts the British Government!

John Dillon, Nationalist leader, speaking at Ballaghaderreen on Monday, said he was against the sending of huge armies to the continent, and objected to conscription in any part of the United Kingdom. Does that attitude promise war legislation of a helpful kind by an Irish parliament? Does it tend to strengthen Sir Horace Plunkett's belief? To most people it spells a continuance of Ireland's present stand towards the war, which is not heroic.

Professor E. De Valera, head of the Sinn Fein, announced that his followers would unite with the Nationalists in their opposition to conscription: he might have added "and in anything which will weaken the Allies at the moment." Nothing is expected from the Sinn Feiners of a constructive nature and nothing will be offered.

It must be noted that Dillon is against big armies for the continent and conscription under any circumstances. He does not specify that his objection rests in connection with the British Government, and it must be taken that this is not his basis. His power in Ireland is undoubted and his following is strong. Can there be any real hope or anticipation of effective war effort by a parliament in which he would wield such tremendous influence?

ARE THERE EXCEPTIONS?

MAJOR-GENERAL E. W. Wilson of Montreal has denied that he said or intimated that farmers would be exempt from the new order calling up for service young men from 20 to 22 years of age, and his denial must be accepted, but there is a question still to be answered: are some of these young farmers being exempted while others are refused?

There are stories going the rounds in rural districts of one man and another receiving letters from Ottawa authorities informing them that their services on the farm are such as to make it expedient to keep them there, and that they will not have to answer the call. Are exceptions being made? If so, on what grounds? These questions the Government can answer easily, and if the stories are untrue the sooner they are so branded the better for the Government.

A BLUE LAW IN DISGUISE.

T OBACCONISTS ARE predicting an enormous decrease in the consumption of smoking material as a result of the recently increased Government taxes. Some believe that the influence of the moral reformer, to wit, Hon. N. W. Rowell, is seen advancing another stage toward the elimination of all things that are evil. Liquor has been virtually banished, and few have been heard to say much in its defence; yet the fundamental truth is that it has never been banished by the will of the people, as it might have been, but by imperial edict in the specially-arranged kind of Government now ruling at Ottawa and Toronto. Tobacco is the next great objective of those who follow in the train of Mr. Rowell, and while many members of the Government profess to believe that the revenue will make up for the loss of the liquor receipts, it is doubtful if the average smoker will pay the prices certain to be demanded for smoking tobaccos, cigarettes and cigars. These prices have gone high, and will go much higher. The man who has been paying ten cents for cigarettes will not buy as many or even half as many when the price has gone to 25 cents. It is difficult, of course, to predict the results, but if revenue falls to such an extent that no increase is attained, the Government will be no further ahead.

The point is that the whole burden of the war cannot be piled onto a few articles. The taxing of many other luxuries has been largely deferred, and although war's necessities are recognized there are many who wonder whether the recent tobacco taxes are revenue measures or Blue Laws.

TAKE THIS PLEDGE.

THE BRIGHTNESS of the paint on the "Safety First" signs that covered the country a year or two ago, has long since worn off. But the slogan has done much to arouse the people of the country to a realization of how many dangers may be avoided, and how many lives saved by the exercise of a little ordinary caution. Particularly among railway employees have accidents decreased, and while no comparative figures are available, it was stated by The Advertiser by a railroad superintendent the other day that railway accidents had long since ceased to be the oldtime butcheries of days gone by. He attributed much of the saving of life and limb to the moral effect of the "Safety First" campaign.

Every warning note helps to educate someone to the need for care. Death waits around the corner, more agile than ever before. To all the dangers that have stalked through life, the danger of the motor car has become by far the most serious. Scarcely a day passes but someone is killed in one or other of the few cities of Western Ontario, while the majority of negligence suits now heard in the courts have their basis in some motor car mishap. The danger of drowning is preached to everyone. The danger of the motor car should not be overlooked for a single day in any home. It would be well indeed if a daily talk could be given to children by their parents regarding the dangers of the streets. The Ontario Safety League, with its warning bulletins issued each week, does a great work in the conservation of human life. It recently called attention to the Safety Patrol idea, which means that older children are trained to look after younger ones on the streets.

Here is the pledge which the members of the Patrol take:

"I will work for the safety of others as I would want them to work for my safety."

"I will work for the public safety as I would want those appointed to safeguard our city to work for me and my family and friends."

"I will try to protect myself and those with whom I come in contact from the risk of unnecessary chances."

"I will do MY PART to help reduce the number of accidents and fires for this year."

As the writer of the O. S. L. bulletins asks, "Isn't that a good pledge for all of us?" We commend it to the attention of the school teachers and parents of London.

DOGS TO BE SACRIFICED.

DOG LOVERS and fanciers in Britain are about to suffer a severe blow if predictions as to the recommendations of the Government committee which is probing the canine situation are fulfilled. It is reported that this committee will suggest a large reduction in the numbers of dogs kept, and that not more than one of the animals will be allowed to be kept by one owner. Statistics have been gathered showing that there are between four and five million dogs in the United Kingdom, which consume enough food to keep half a million human beings alive.

When it comes to a choice between feeding dogs and allowing persons to want, or killing off the former and feeding the latter, there can be but one decision, but there will be an outcry against the destruction of the pets. Those ladies of fashion who were accustomed to having pet dogs to match or blend with their dresses and costumes are few and far between today in Britain, but even those who have cast aside the vanities and frumpies still keep a few dogs which rank among their friends. The wrench of parting with these will not be painless. For the breeders who looked to their kennels to provide much of their annual income the financial loss will be serious.

Horses consume much more food fit for humans than do dogs, but their utility saves them from meeting a similar fate. They provide the means of tilling the soil, drawing the loads, and are indispensable at the front. They may be said to produce foods in greater quantities than they consume, and, therefore, are valuable. The most fervent admirer of the canine race cannot claim as much for his favorites. They must go in the interests of humanity.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sunday and Monday brought smiles to the face of the iceman.

Germany's peace offensive, if successful, would result in a most offensive peace.

Austria has a dozen different crises at present which should be enough to keep her busy without any war.

The Germans call their tanks "sturmpanzerkraftwagen," and even so, they are not as effective as the British.

Tension between the Dutch and Germans is over—that is, officially. In the meantime, German submarines continue to sink Dutch fishing boats, etc.

That wholesale purchase of ladies' handbags and purses made it a foregone conclusion that the women's franchise bill would pass the Canadian Senate. The old dears!

Under the heading "For and About Women," a Toronto paper tells of the steps the central powers are taking to steal Ukrainian foods. Is it supposed to be a hint to Canadian women?

Perhaps the British announcement that peace suggestions from other sources than Germany herself would be ignored has something to do with the decision of the Pope to make no move at present.

Bavaria's food minister says there is hope that the people will be able to hold out, and that the Bavarian situation is far better than that of many other states. It may be inferred from this that there is little chance of the others holding out.

It has come at last: A farmer has been charged with making and selling wine without a license and has been found guilty by Windsor's magistrate. That he has been following the war news is evidenced by the fact that his "bar-room" was a dugout in a neighbor's field.

WELLINGTON FOUGHT AGAINST GREAT ODDS. (Hamilton Times.)

Wellington is said to have almost always fought against great odds. He declared that "At Salamanca I had 40,000 men, and the French perhaps 45,000. At Vittoria I had 60,000 men against 70,000. At Waterloo the proportion was still more against me. I had 68,000 to 80,000; Napoleon had 120,000. The whole army in the south of France under my command was considerably larger than the force of employed in that battle I had less than he." But armchair critics would like to know how it is that the Allies in France allow themselves to be attacked by superior numbers so often.

THE TRYST.

I seek you o'er a violet trail—
A little, ah, sweet, winding way—
Through mists of Spring's first golden green—
Where thorn trees, drooping-lowly, sway.

O'er little crumpled last year's leaves,
That kept the sleeping souls of flowers,
And over mosses and trailing vines,
All thrilling with Spring's magic powers.

Then you with grey eyes all a-dream,
Are bending o'er a violet blue!
Dear, in the loneliness of war—
I keep my Spring-time tryst with you!

By Their Fruits Ye Shall Know Them

How about it, brother? Is your town living up to the diet regulations of the Canada Food Board, or does it go along just as it darns along, fattening up as if there was no war?

How about yourself, brother? Are you still eating what you like, regardless of the fact that the men in the trenches and the civilian population in the allied countries are on short rations?

Let us get down to cases. Food will win this war. If the soldiers and the civilians in the United Kingdom and Europe are well fed, they can't be beaten. The United Kingdom and Europe can't raise enough foodstuffs to feed themselves. They must get food from Canada and the United States.

The fighting ranks and the civilian ranks across the sea, and they are in need of food. They need wheat, beef and pork, and Canada and the United States will supply them.

But the United States and Canada can't send them all they need. They need wheat, beef and pork, and Canada and the United States will supply them.

There's only one way to get the food that the fighting ranks and the civilian ranks across the sea need. It's to get it from Canada and the United States.

ECZEMA CURED

FOR ONE YEAR IN ONE MONTH

H. Martineau, Esq., Honorary Commandant of the Papal Zouaves, of 70 Villeneuve West, Montreal, writing to the proprietors of Zam-Buk, says:

"For over a year I suffered with an eruption on my skin, and notwithstanding the numerous remedies I used it got no better until I commenced using Zam-Buk. I applied the balm regularly, used only Zam-Buk Soap for bathing, and in a comparatively short time could see some improvement. After continuing the treatment for a month the disease, although of over a year's standing, had entirely disappeared. In my estimation Zam-Buk is the only remedy for skin troubles."

The reason Zam-Buk succeeds when other remedies fail is because Zam-Buk is all medicine—100% Its healing power is therefore much superior to ordinary

When a woman is getting into the thirties she would rather tell you her age than have you guess at it. Any husband can tell you that his wife gets off a joke about the same way she gets off a trolley car.

A heaped-up husband does as much crowing as the other kind of husband, but he does it all away from home. In some homes the family skeleton is the liveliest thing around the household.

A woman's indifference toward her husband never reaches the point where she won't listen when he talks in his sleep.

Sometimes a man sits down and writes a series of articles on how to live on $1 a day so he won't have to go to work for a living.

Don't worry because you have a great many responsibilities. It is a sign that you amount to something.

What has become of the old-fashioned string to tie up his packages?

Ten years after a girl wrecks your life by turning you down you are liable to meet her and thank her for the wreck.

The difference between being engaged and being married is that you kiss your girl when you want to and you kiss your wife when you have to.

If often happens that a girl who doesn't meet glasses has to go around with specs on her nose.

The trouble with following the crowd is that when you get there it is all over.

A man who thinks he knows it all had better stay single. He won't get a chance to tell it if he gets married.

A wife may not lack a sense of humor more than a husband. But she is afraid that if she laughs she will grow fat.

Treat your wife as you did when you were courting her and she will worry herself to death, wondering if you are too good to be true.

Detroit Bengals Hit St. Louis Slab Artists Freely.

NEW YORK CLEAN SERIES

Hand Boston 9 to 3 Beating White Sox Defeat Cleveland.

DETROIT, May 6.—Detroit hit three St. Louis pitchers freely this afternoon and won the opening game of the series 9 to 3. Davenport, who started the game, was responsible for their defeat, the four hits and four bases on balls he allowed accounting for the four runs.

YANKEES CLEAN UP ON SERIES WITH BOSTON

NEW YORK, May 6.—The New York Americans made a clean sweep of the three-game series with Boston, winning the last game of the series here today by a score of 10 to 3. The Yankees drove home three runs across the plate in the first inning, and hit Jones equally as hard. Pitcher Louth, who substituted at first base for Houlitz of Boston, drove his second homer into the right field stand in successive games. Score: N. Y. 10, B. 3.

TRIPLE BY SCHALK WINS FOR CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 6.—Schalk's triple, which sent three runs across the plate in the second inning, and a sacrifice fly, which netted another run, and bunched hits in the fourth inning, were enough to beat Cleveland in the first half of the game.

WASHINGTON TRIMS MACK'S ATHLETICS

PHILADELPHIA, May 6.—Washington pounded three Philadelphia pitchers today and won 11 to 7. Poor work by the local gardeners got Grege into trouble after the Athletics had gained a lead in the first inning. Ayers was three for five, with two home runs and a triple, two doubles and three singles for four runs. Score: W. 11, P. 7.

NO CHARGE FOR BOWLING MEMBERS OF ROWING CLUB

Tourneys Will Be of the Free Entry Variety, Decides Committee.

There will be no charge for members of the London Rowing and Bowling Club entering the tourneys to be staged by the club this year. At a recent meeting of the bowling committee it was decided to allow free entries to members. The committee also decided to allow the annual winner of the singles cup to retain the trophy.

Alterations to the tennis courts of the club are proceeding at good rate, and it is expected that the greens will be ready for play some days before the 24th of the month. A stretch of grass has been purchased by the club from John Collins in order that the tennis courts may be made the regulation size, and also to allow for a larger background. Tennis enthusiasts of the club will make arrangements for summer and fall tournaments next week.

The official opening of the bowling season at the London Rowing Club is scheduled for the 24th of May. The bowling committee proposes to begin the season with doubles in the morning and rink games for the afternoon. W. J. Ashplant, chairman of the committee, is confident that with a continuation of the present weather, broken by intermittent rains, preliminary play may be staged before the 24th of the month.

GIANTS ANNEX THEIR FIFTEENTH GAME BY TRIMMING THE BRAVES

Hamilton Wins Fifth Straight, Defeating Pittsburgh.

PHILADELPHIA SHUT OUT

Brooklyn Does the Deed, Aided by Luderus's Error—St. Louis Wins.

BOSTON, May 6.—The Giants won over Boston today, 8 to 4, thus cleaning up the three-game series. Saliee was hit often and hard by Boston, but received much better support than Canavan, who was effective for six innings.

CRAWATH'S SINGLE PREVENTS NO-HIT GAME

BROOKLYN, May 6.—Bunching three hits and aided by an error by Luderus in the first inning, Brooklyn shut out Philadelphia here today, 3 to 0. Crawath prevented the game being a no-hit affair for Philadelphia when he singled to center in the ninth with two men out. Prior to that Philadelphia had been unable to hit. Wheat reported to Brooklyn today, and appeared on the coaching line.

CINCINNATI LOSES IN FATAL SEVENTH

ST. LOUIS, May 6.—Smith wavered in the seventh inning of today's game, and St. Louis scored two runs and beat Cincinnati, 3 to 1, in the first game of the series. Ames allowed but four hits.

CUBS' WINNING STREAK CHECKED BY PITTSBURG

PITTSBURG, May 6.—Earl Hamilton straight fifth straight game today, and his effective pitching coupled with hard hitting on the part of his team-mates enabled them to defeat Chicago, 7 to 2, thereby checking the Cubs' winning streak after nine straight victories. Prior to this, the Cubs had won 10 of 12 games.

EARL CRADDOCK AFTER WRESTLING CROWN

The Soldier Thinks Himself Worthy of Gotch's Vacant Shoes.

Sergt. Earl Craddock of the U. S. national army, evidently thinks he is a very worthy successor to the late Frank Gotch, as champion wrestler of the world.

This is indicated by the fact that the Anita, Ia., boy has contracted to throw two of the best wrestlers in the United States this summer.

The first match will be with Yusuf Hussain Monday night before the Scoville's National Athletic Club in Convention Hall, and the second will be with the champion, Wednesday night in Chicago.

Craddock has been signed for a finish match with Zhyzsko. This will make two finish matches for the champion in one night, and it will be all that he can take care of. It is a certainty that Craddock does not figure Hussaine to be an easy mark because he has been training for the Turk for about two weeks, and is in splendid condition.

KETONEN WINS BOUT FROM ERNIE ARTHURS

Fort William, Ont., May 7.—Walro Ketonen, who claims the middleweight wrestling championship of the world, last night successfully defended his title against Ernie Arthurs of Fort William.

The application was referred to a committee of the following: Chairman, Hammond, Ald. Meenan and Hammond.

DERBY TRIAL EVENT IS WON BY ESCOBA

Lexington, Ky., May 7.—The Derby trial, over a distance of a mile and a furlong, was won yesterday afternoon by Escoba, the second choice in the running of the historic event next Saturday.

Escoba did not meet the opposition he will run the Derby, but he defeated a fair field of 3-year-olds, and ran the race in good time, making the performance an impressive one.

NOTED HORSE DEAD

Calgary, May 7.—The horse breeding industry of Western Canada suffered a severe blow in the death of Philip, a year-old Percheron stallion, owned by Lavell and Parr, here, last night. Philip was considered one of the very best Percherons on the continent, was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show at Chicago last year, and had won many other prizes. He was valued at $12,000, and the owners paid $9,000 for him last January. He was insured for $5,000.

LIEUT. HENDERSON KILLED IN ACTION

LEAMINGTON, May 6.—Mr. and Mrs. James Henderson, Toronto, who are visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. Charlotte Fuller, here, last night, received word that their only son, Lieut. Henderson, had been killed in action in France on April 26.

Henderson enlisted in the imperial army, Queen's Regiment, 7th Battalion, Royal West Surrey, and had seen two years and a half of active service.

He was severely wounded a year ago, and had been back in the trenches since December, 1917.

WILL USE HOUSE AS TEMPORARY SCHOOL

LEAMINGTON, May 6.—The William Simpson home on John street has been bought for a public school. The board intends using the house, with little alteration, until after the war, when they will build a new school to accommodate the north-end children.

The I. O. O. F. Order observed its anniversary by attending services in the Baptist Church on Sunday afternoon, accompanied by the Leamington band and the Peaschland Rebekah Lodge. A splendid sermon was delivered by Rev. Frederick G. Burrell.

International League Teams All Set for Opening Tomorrow.

AUBURN, May 6.—President John M. Farrell this afternoon announced that everything is in readiness for the opening of the International League season in Baltimore, Newark, Jersey City and Birmingham on Wednesday.

Mr. Farrell said: "The continuation of a limited number of leagues is encouraged by national officials, both army and navy, as a means of relieving the public mind from brooding over the big business in hand of achieving a speedy victory. Any of our clubs that are fortunate enough to show a balance on the right side of the ledger at the close of our season will at once turn such surplus over operating expenses into the nation's Liberty Bonds."

The following assignments of umpires have been made for the opening games: At Baltimore, Westchester, John G. Smith; at Newark, New York, O'Brien and Pflman; at Jersey City, Westervelt; at Birmingham, Lewis; at Buffalo, Rochester, John G. Smith; at Toronto, Lewis; at Syracuse, O'Brien.

Mr. Balfour's Opinion of Life Insurance

The Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, who was through Canada a few months ago, expressed the following opinions upon life insurance some years ago. He said: "I hardly understand what it is that you expect from me when you desire to have my opinion with regard to the desirability of enforcing the claims of life insurance on the community. That it is every man's duty to provide for those who are dependent on him in the case of his death is so obvious, and that there is no safer or more convenient method of attaining this object than by the method of life insurance, are truths so well known that nothing which I can say would give them greater weight than they already possess."

Can any man guarantee that after the war is over he is going to have more cash to spare for life insurance than he has today? Fill out and return the coupon below and we will send you rates and particulars without obligation.

THE FARM OPPORTUNITY

SUBJECT TO PREVIOUS SALE

Advertised last week, has changed a little since then, the personal property having been sold, and now the 103 acres, with buildings, may be had for only $600 down and $700 on mortgage. The buildings cost more than the price asked, and wood enough can be cut and sold off this farm to nearly pay for it, while there are 70 acres of good level, tillable land of gravelly loam soil. The farm lies in a favorable location for the markets of large cities and in an excellent dairying section.

Think it over—a farm of 103 acres, improved, for $1,300. But think quickly if you want it.

Buy Good Dividend- Paying Securities----

On the Partial Payment Plan

Buying securities on the Partial Payment Plan gives every man and woman who is earning an equal chance with the rich man or woman who keeps money regularly employed earning more money.

As a rule the poor remain poor because they are improvident or fearful with what they have earned. Money must be planted (or invested), to bring a new crop. Renting out your money gives you only about 60 per cent of what it really earns. Why should you lose the other 40 per cent? What the large investor does with a lot of money you can do with a small amount, and buy exactly the same securities he does on the Partial Payment Plan.

If you have bonds or stocks you would like to sell, if you are interested in a bond or stock you would like to buy, we shall be glad to hear from you and will give you the benefit of experienced service for which you will not be under any obligation, to us unless business is transacted, when usual commissions will obtain.

SOME FACTORS THAT HAVE CAUSED THE INCREASED PRICE OF COMMODITIES.

One of the most valuable results of this war promises to be a more general and better understanding of the fundamentals of economics and finance. The confusion, for instance, which seems to exist in many quarters as to the causes underlying the precipitate rise in commodity prices, and particularly that which erroneously attributes the present price level solely to the expansion of banking credit, will probably be dispelled. In the great laboratory which the world-wide war is affording for the testing of practically all such theories it will be established conclusively that there are many factors which contribute to the advance of prices, not the least of which is the well-known law of supply and demand.

Price movements, in fact, sum up in themselves the results of the bewildering and immensely complex interplay of all economic factors. The attempt to analyze the causes of price movements involves a study of all the various complex phenomena of our economic life. Since price changes result from many and diverse economic factors, it has come to be felt by many that any attempt to explain such changes solely from the standpoint of the increase or decrease in the circulating medium leaves out of consideration many other important factors. In the case of the increase of general prices during the present war, the most important of these factors are greatly increased demands, the disruption of distributing processes, a shortage of labor and the decrease in production of various products.

The increase in wholesale prices of 81 per cent, and the increase in retail prices of 57 per cent for January, 1918, as compared with July, 1914, creates a serious problem in our economic life. In making readjustments to the new level of prices, various classes of people have been differently affected. During the period of falling prices, the debtor class and businessmen feel the burden of change, while the creditor and those with fixed incomes are benefitted. During a period of increasing prices, the creditor and the fixed income class feel the burden, while the debtor class and businessmen are benefitted.

From a history of world prices it would appear that our economic life is one of constant change, and that the problem of a changing price level has ever been with us. The measure of this changing price level consists of index numbers, which for many purposes may be considered as an imperfect test of change in price levels. Various systems of index numbers differ among themselves in measuring the changes in the price level. The following table shows the periods of world-wide changing price levels:

1789-1809 general prices increased approximately 86%
1809-1849 general prices decreased approximately 60%
1849-1873 general prices increased approximately 34%
1873-1896 general prices decreased approximately 40%
1896-1914 general prices increased approximately 47%

A nation at war is an insistent buyer of commodities. At the outbreak of the European war, several such buyers entered the market. Their insistent buying power led to an intensification of the market demand. Industrial plants in laying plans for expansion to take care of war contracts went into the market bidding for capital in the form of building machinery, raw materials and labor. In order to get this additional supply and to shift it from other lines of production, it was necessary to pay higher prices. Other industries, not working on war contracts, found that it was more difficult to retain their skilled labor and to get raw materials at usual prices, and as a result they were compelled to offer higher prices or reduce their output.

The outbreak of the war disrupted the normal distributive system, so that the supply of important commodities in the countries at war was restricted. The demands upon available shipping for troop movements combined with war losses further disrupted the machinery of distribution. A short-sighted failure to provide adequate industrial production to meet the increasing commercial and industrial needs of the country resulted in restricted supplies and increased costs. This has greatly curtailed the shifting of many commodities from points of production to places of most insistent demand. As an example, the surplus of wheat at the end of the present season in Australia is estimated to be about 150,000,000 bushels. If shipping were available, the transfer of this supply to centres of demand would lower prices.

There has also been a decrease in the production of certain important commodities, particularly agricultural. For instance, thirty-cent cotton in part is due to decreased production as indicated by the following figures for the United States:

1911	16,100,000 bales
1912	14,100,000 "
1913	14,600,000 "
1914	16,900,000 "
1915	12,000,000 "
1916	12,500,000 "
1917	12,200,000 "

Under normal conditions, two or three short crop years in succession lead to a higher level of prices. It is a well accepted principle of economics that a decrease of 10% or 20% in the supply of a product is likely to lead to a much greater increase in price.

As a further illustration, it may be mentioned that the high wheat prices of the past year were caused by a short crop in the United States which followed a practical failure of the Argentine wheat crop. The losses through the sinking of ships and inability to move the surplus crop of Australia further intensified the effect of the short crops in those two countries. It is questionable whether the price of wheat, due to limitations of supply, would have been forced to much higher levels if the Allied Governments had not established a certain level of prices.

These four economic factors—intensification of demand, disruption in distribution, shortage of supplies of certain commodities and shortage of labor certainly must be considered as forces generating an increase in prices. This view has the support of Professor Nicholson, a staunch exponent of the quantity theory of money when he states: "It often happens that a rise of prices begins with a rise in demand for important commodities, the rise being accelerated by speculation. Such a rise, however, cannot be maintained or advanced beyond certain limits unless there is an increase in the currency required for cash payments."

In this country, the rise of prices was made possible by the fact that the demand was backed up by purchasing power. Other countries have sent us a net addition of over $1,000,000,000 gold which has been added to our monetary supply.

The increase in the price level, occasioned by the causes enumerated above, has necessitated more money to do the same volume of business, as judged by the amount of commodities. As an example of this, increased wages and increased value of inventories have made it necessary for businessmen to increase their working capital. In addition, we find that the volume of business has increased. During the period of the present war, according to the estimates of Professor Anderson, the volume of business has increased 30% as measured by units of commodity. Railroads have carried increased quantities of merchandise. Pig iron production, a usual barometer of the volume of business, has increased from 30,722,000 tons in 1913 to 39,043,000 in 1916 and 38,155,000 in 1917.

And we should not overlook the fact that the increase in price has aided in the expansion of American industry and augmented the total amount of production. In fact, under the conditions obtaining during the first three years of the war, the necessary expansion in industry could be secured only by a rise of prices and a concomitant increase in the volume of money.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C. S. D. CHATFIELD—Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad runs through a very productive soft coal region. Over 70 per cent of its traffic is in bituminous coal originating along its lines. The stock is of greater interest because of its fixed income now guaranteed by the Government until two years after the close of the war, than for its speculative possibilities. The stock pays 4 per cent dividend, and since this means nearly 9 per cent on present average of price, one could hardly expect an investment to do better. I do not see any advantage in making the change you propose simply because C. and O. is not as active on the board as some other issues. There is a difference between the speculative and the investor. One seeks action without much anxiety about safety, the other income with safety.—ED.

THE LIBERTY LOAN LOTTERY

$50 Liberty Bonds are being sold in a small way in Wall Street, New York, through the sale of "chances" in about the same way as goods are raffled off at country fairs. Tickets selling all the way from one cent to one dollar are placed in a hat, and the numbers are drawn out, the winner being the one who holds a number corresponding to the first number on a duplicate set of numbers, which are drawn from. In the Liberty Loan campaign last fall this same plan was followed on a big scale. Tickets were sold for $500 each, and the lucky individual, in some instances, won as much as $75,000 worth of Liberty Bonds. Under agreement the winner had to give a dinner for all the other participants, but he could well afford to. The question whether this sort of thing is close to the heart line of a lottery drawing has been heated yet, and the question has not been raised. It is quite conceivable, however, that, in the name and under the guise of patriotism, the system of drawings for Liberty Bonds might be greatly abused and develop into a serious evil.—Selected.

WALL STREET CONDITIONS

The past week has been one of good promise for increased values of securities.

The Third Liberty Loan has been oversubscribed; the United States Steel Company's statement was most assuring as was also that of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and confidence in these securities was soon reflected, steel closing at par yesterday, and C. P. R. reaching 141%. Since C. P. R. was closing at par yesterday, and C. P. R. reaching 141%, the holders of hanging around 133 to 134 have been readily encouraging the holders of shares to what they had and buy more as ability developed. Canadian Pacific is a wonderful property. Great fortunes have been made in the stock of this company, and many more will be made in it. Large Government contracts have been let for railway equipment, running into thousands of dollars, and many more will be made in it. All wage earners are getting good returns for their labor, and money is in free circulation. The war continues with daily development favorable to the Allies which must continue to the end, and it is reassuring that Lloyd George says "no compromise with wrong."

Telephone Economy
Talk No. 12

How It Grows

WHEN, on a street on which there are 100 telephone users, fifteen telephones are added, it means that we may have to provide an additional distribution cable to serve that street.

When the same thing happens on six or eight nearby streets, served from the same cable terminal, it requires, besides additional cable facilities on each of these streets, new main cables from terminal boxes to the exchange.

Such increases in main cables from several localities soon call for additions to the switchboard and terminal room facilities until the capacity of the exchange is reached.

Then a new exchange, the site for which has been chosen far in advance, must be built, with its elaborate and costly equipment, and extensive re-distribution made of the outside plant.

It is very desirable that we avoid such expenditures in war time. To reduce to a minimum the need for costly additions to our plant, we ask that you practice telephone economy by ordering only such equipment and service as are indispensable.

BLAZING GASOLINE MADE
MOST SPECTACULAR FIRE

Tank Explodes at Petrolia Refinery
With $15,000 Loss.

PETROLIA, May 6.—In one of the most spectacular fires in years here tonight a big tank containing 150 barrels of gasoline was burned, causing a loss of $15,000. The tank was an underground structure owned by the Petrolia of the Canadian Oil Refinery Company, and the fire followed an explosion. The blast was terrific and flames shot many feet in the air, while dense volumes of black smoke made the work of the firefighters difficult. The refinery fire brigade was assisted by the local department.

PRAIRIE CROPS GOOD
IF RAIN COMES SOON

Winnipeg, May 7.—Reports received by the Manitoba Free Press from one hundred and seventy-seven of its cor-ately. All three of the provinces are in need of rain, which in the case of Manitoba is most urgent.
