My soul is weary of its chain, As thoughts return from wandering far-O'er midnight sky, and blasted plain, Witbout a twinkling star.

" With earthly pleasures piled around, No pleasure fills my vacant breast,-O, give what I have never found-Rost - rest-eternal rest !"

And forth he went-that stern, dark man, To catch the glorious hymn of June-And learn if aught beneath the span Of Heaven his soul could tune

And birds that caroll'd overhead, And vine, and peach, and orange tree, And all the scented wild-flowers said No selfishness have we !" The sun pour'd down his glorious light

And ask'd the earth for no return : It beam'd through clouds of fleecy white, And did not blast and burn.

And seed fell from the forest tree, Contented in the dust to lies The germ of forests yet to be, It gave itself to die.

And brooks came bounding down the hills, In waves of silver, tlashing free, Refreshing with their thousand rills Each drooping flower and tree.

And weary men their temples cool'd, And cattle drank on every lea-Thus sang the waters as they roll'd :

And as the desert flowers droop'd, Unseen beneath the sun's red hue, The pitying skies above them stoop'd And sprinkled them with dew

And ask'd for no return again, But gave the precious drops so free-That thus they sang, with summer rain

The stern and scornful man he smote His throbbing temples with his hand-He reads the lesson Nature wrote, -

He cannot understand. "Tell me, ye sounds on every side, How shall I soothe this gloomy mood? And universal Nature cried :

" Do good !- Do GOOD-DO GOOD Why should I sacrifice myself, And part with comfort-goods and gold ?" Stop! grovelling devotee of pelf-

And sudden darkness smote the sky-A cross uppore a dving man-And from his side, down Calvary, Red blood and water ran

That victim dies that men may live-"And I, it I be lifted up, My Father will the world forgive He said,-and "drank the cup."

He dies-but dying, lifts His voice,-It says to earth "Rejoice! rejoice!

BY THE LATE LT. R. S. HOVE, U. S. N. My life is like the scattered wreck, Cast by the waves upon the shore, The broken mast, the rifted deck, Tell of the shipwrec't that is o'er, Yet from these relies of the storm,

The mariner his bark will form, Again, to tempt the faithless sea, While hope rebuilds no bark for me. My life is like the blighted oak, That hits its sear and withered form, Seathed by the lightning's sudden stroke, Sternly to meet the coming storm, Yet round that sapless trunk will twine The curling tendrils of the vine, And health, and beauty, there impart Not to the passion blighted heart.

My life is like a desert rock, In the mid ocean lone and drear, Worn by the wild waves ceaseless shock, That round its base their surges rear, Yet there the sea moss still will cling, Some flower will find a cleft to spring, And shed even there a sweet perfuir For me, no more life's flowers will bloom.

A PARABLE. "I said unto my little son, who was watching, with tears, a tree he had planted: 'Let it alone; it will grow while you are sleeping!'" " Plant it safe, thou little child :

Then cease watching and cease weeping Thou hast done thy utmost part; Leave it, with a quiet heart; It will grow while thou art sleeping."

"But. O father !" says the child. With a troubled face close creeping-"How can I but think and grieve, When the fierce winds come at eve, And snows beat-and I lie sleeping?

I have loved my linden so! In each leaf and future flowret: Watched it day by day with prayers, Guarded it with pains and cares, Lest the canker should devour it.

"O good father !" says the child, "If I come in summer's shining, And my linden-tree be dead-How the sun will scorch my head, While I sit forlorn and pining

Rather let me evermore Through this winter time-watch keeping Bear the cold, and storms, and frost That my treasure be not lost-Ay, bear aught !- but idle sleeping.

Sternly said the father then: Who art thou, child, vainly grieving Canst thou tend the balmy dews, Or the rich sap interfuse, That one leaf shall burst to living?

Canst thou bid the heavens restrain Natural tempests for thy praying Canst thou bend one tender shoot Stay the growth of one frail root? Keep one blossom from decaying?

If it live and bloom all fair, Will it praise thee for its blooming? If it die will any plaints Reach thee, as with kings and saints Drops it to an equal tombing

Plant it; consecrate with prayers; It is safe 'neath His sky's folding Who the whole earth compasses, Whether we watch more or less-His large eye all things beholding If He need a goodly tree

He will make it grow: if not, Never yet his love forgot Human tears and faith and patience Leave thy treasure in his hand-Cease all watching and all weeping.

For the shelter of the nations,

When its mighty branches wave Beautiful-above thy sleeping. If his hope, tear-sown, that child Garnered safe with joyful reaping, Know I not; yet unawares,

Years hence men its shade may crave,

Oft his truth gleams through my prayers, · It will grow while thou art sleeping!

MISSOURI IRON FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR -We saw last evening at the warehouse of Mr. E. Walsh, on Water street, a monster mass of iron ore, weighing considerably over a ton. It is described as a brown be matite of superior quality, containing 60 per cent, pure iron, and will next week be started on its way to New York, where it is intended to place it on exhibition as a sample of the mineral products of Missouri. I will no doubt arrest the attention of many of the visitors at the Crystal Palace, and excite further inquiry on a subject so interesting to our people as the mineral riches of the state.

The specimens mentioned above came from a tract of land on the Mississippi river, in the neighbourhood of Grand Tower, about one hundred miles below St where it lay among other rich boulders of the same mineral, and of different magnitudes. This tract of land displays immense quantities of this ore with every sign o extensive beds, which are easily workable.
