It were not well that we the veil should raise
Of that thick curtain of futurity, Which veils from us the things that are to be
Amid the shadows of the coming days,
For who of us could tread the common ways
Of life, serene and hopeful if we saw
The sentence of the inscrutable law, Like the doomed king, where'er he trod
Kind the All-wise has kept that present lore
Beyond our reach. It is enough to know, (Ah! how hard to learn!) that a man may
They resp—nor worse nor better, less nor more.
Thus taught the Prophets with inspired tongue;
Thus nature warns and thus her heralds have sung.

Governing the World.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.
"You did not say so," replied Malcolm firmly. Then he passed as if waiting an answer. And again she was silent. He moved towards the hall. "I love you, Dorothy Gilbert," at him!" But nevertheless, she felt the impossibility of laughing at Malcolm Kirk any more. No true woman ever laughs at the honest love of a man, no matter how poor or unattractive he may be. And Dorothy Gilbert was a true woman at heart.

As for Malcolm Kirk, he went on board the steamer the next afternoon with a feeling that was almost contentment. It is true he felt a little uneasy to think he had told Dorothy Gilbert so plainly that he loved her. But then he was sure it had done no harm. It was the truth. And besides, when he came back, would he return the picture without a word? Might he not claim the right to keep it always?

He scarcely pretended to answer this question. He found his way to his room in the intermediate cabin, and came out on the deck again. As the steamer went down the harbor, he thoughtfully viewed his course and looked out into the new life before him with quiet hope. It was ten o'clock when he went down to his room. As he proceeded to arrange his few effects in the little apartment called a cabin, one of the stewards came by. There were two or three other men sitting at the table in the dining and lounging room.

"Any of you a clergyman?" asked the steward.

No one answered, and Kirk, after a moment, stepped out and said, "I'm a clergyman. What is wanted?"

The steward looked a little doubt-fully at the long, unattractive figure.

"There's a woman down at, here, in a poor way. She wants someone to pray with her."

"I'll go," said Kirk, quietly, and he followed the steward, not knowing as he went that this his first ministry of service, was to prove one of the most valuable of his life.

Meanwhile, the steamer had reached the limits of the harbor; the great ocean now lay wide and solemn before her, and the lookout on the forward deck was saying to himself, "It's going to be a beautiful sight."

On the promenade deck two men were pacing up and down.

"But how did it happen, Raleigh, that you took passage on the Cunard line? I thought you were planning to go by the Anchor line from New York."

"I did plan to go two weeks later, but circumstances changed my movements. I shall be glad to get to work again, and I'm thankful to be thrown in with you, Ed. We can talk over old college days."

They turned in front of the music room, and the light fell on Francis Raleigh's face. It was at this moment that Malcolm Kirk, down in the intermediate cabin, knelt to pray. The lookout on the bow was saying, "We shall have a quick voyage."

CHAPTER III.

When Malcolm Kirk entered the little cabin room to which the steward led him, he found the assistant surgeon of the steamer bending over the figure in the berth there.

A woman was sitting near by.
The surgeon rose and beckoned Kirk to step outside a moment.

"You are a clergyman?"

Kirk nodded.

The surgeon looked at him as doubtfully as the steward had done, but he seemed satisfied at last.

"Well, you might as well know the woman has consumption. She may last until we reach Liverpool, and she may go before Sunday. She ought never to have been allowed passage."

"I can tell how that is," said the steward. "I noticed the woman come on with her baby. She looked as bright and pretty as anyone. Seemed strong and about on deck until we left the dock. Then she came down here and went to pieces. I've known one or two such cases before."

"That's true," said the surgeon, gravely. "I'll be back before midnight. It will do no harm for you to see her." He spoke to Kirk and went away, leaving him standing somewhat awkwardly by the half-open door.

The woman called in a faint voice, and Kirk went in.

"Are you the clergyman?" she asked.

"Yes," replied Kirk, simply. "Can I be of service to you? Do you want me to pray with you?"

The woman nodded. Kirk knelt, and the other woman who had been acting as nurse bowed her head.

It was the first time Malcolm Kirk had been called on to pray by the side of a dying person. The first service he had ever paid to suffering and sorrowing humanity when he was asked to take upon himself the burden and the joy of comfort. His own life had been free from physical weakness.
His own family had moved away and scattered when he was a lad, and the death of both his father and mother when he was a child had left no impression on his early memory.

The situation, therefore, now impressed him strongly. But the impression was redeemed from painful egotism by his intense longing to be of help to this stranger. When he had told his seminary classmates that he loved people, he had spoken one of the largest truths of his great nearest character. So his prayer went out to the God of all comfort and to the God of all consolation.

That human hunger for Divine compassion. For when he finished, she thanked him with a sob, while the other woman made no attempt to conceal the tears that ran over her face.
She looked at Kirk as he rose with increased respect. He said a few words simply, but cheerfully, and then went out. The woman who had been nursing followed him and closed the door a moment.

"Thank you for coming in. It did her good. It's a sad case."

"Yes. Has she any friends or relatives on board?"

"No; as near as I have learned she has a sister in London. This sister has been writing her for some time to come there. This woman's husband died a few weeks ago. Since then she has been supporting herself in Boston by sewing. Her baby is six months old. She sold a few things, and with the help of her sister, who sent her a little money, she bought a ticket, and with a great effort reached the dock this morning. The ship's company did not know of her condition, or they certainly would never have let her come on board. That is all I know of the case. Of course, we will do all we can for her and the baby now. The sea air may be a help to her, after all."

The woman who spoke was only what some people call a "common" person. Kirk could see that. Yet she was one of the great army of quiet, unselfish women, who give the world true definitions of the term "mother hood."

She stepped to the door of her own room, which was close by, and beckoned Kirk to look in and see the baby.

He was sleeping in the upper berth, and Kirk looked at him gravely, wondering what sort of future awaited that bit of humanity. The woman shut the door gently and went back to the mother, while Kirk retired to his own narrow quarters, and in spite of the strange noises and the sights of the ocean through the little round port, he was soon fast asleep after a prayer for blessing on all who suffer and all who are in trouble.

The next day the woman sank rapidly. Everyone in the intermediate cabin wanted to do something.
There was no lack of care for the baby.
Every woman wanted to help. Saturday the mother sank yet more rapidly, but rallied, as is often the case, and when the passengers gathered for the little service which Kirk was asked to lead, she wanted her door left open so that she might see and hear the singing better.

This was a novel experience for Kirk. The intermediate cabin was not crowded as it would be on the return voyage. The passengers were mostly from what the English people call the "middle classes." We, in America, say the "common people."

This means the people out of the plain ranks of labor, not necessarily very poor, often well read, with love of home and, in most cases, with a religious life that flows deep through narrow channels, but is always true in its application to duty.

Kirk preached a simple sermon about Christ, the love of God, and the love of Christ to human kind, and his compassion for all sorts of trouble.
The sermon was easily understood.
It helped. Kirk saw tears in many eyes. Many of the passengers thanked him after he was through. He went in and prayed briefly with the sufferer. And the day passed on slowly, with an unbroken calmness, as Sunday on board ship at sea is so often. The ocean was quiet. The sun went down without a cloud abutting it. And the sick woman seemed to rest easier as the lights were turned on, and the great steamer with its freight of human tragedy and its uncounted value of souls sailed untrivally on towards the old world.

Near morning, the woman who was watching the sufferer, sent for the surgeon. He came down, and Kirk, who was awakened by an unusual noise, heard him going by and rose and dressed, going out into the large cabin.
The wind was roaring over the water and the vessel was beginning to rock for the first time since they left home.

"We are in for a storm," he heard one of the passengers say. He stepped himself and walked down to the sick woman's door and sat near, waiting expectantly as if he knew he would be summoned. In a moment the door opened and the surgeon looked out.

He beckoned to Kirk, who instantly rose and went in. The great change was coming. Kirk had never seen anyone die, but he knew at once what the look on the face meant. He knelt, and the woman feebly opened her eyes. He took the hand and prayed again, and knew that she heard and understood.

"We'll see that your baby is cared for," said Kirk very gently. "He's a fine boy, and we are going to pray that he may grow into a noble, Christian man. You don't have any fear to go, do you? We have talked about that. You can trust the love of Jesus. You know he has prepared a place for you?"

She could not speak, but they knew she understood. As the storm rose and the vessel began to pitch and toss under the resistless grasp of the heaving hand of the tempest under it, the woman shared her harbour of peace.
And she entered it gently, just as the grey dawn was creeping over the water, not lashed into great sheets of spray that went over the decks and fell in torrents on the hatchways.

A death on board ship in mid-ocean is soon known by all the passengers.
Before noon everyone knew that there was an orphan baby in the intermediate cabin. The storm increased as the day wore on. Nearly everyone was sick. One after another of the women in the cabins gave up the struggle and retired.

This was what led to an unexpected experience for Malcolm Kirk. The baby woke up, and for the first time there was no one to take care of him.
The three women stewards were busy with their duties, and one of them, who had prepared the baby's milk, suddenly came up to Kirk, who was standing by the long dining table, and asked him if he would take care of the baby.

He said, in great perplexity, "The women are all sick, and we have our hands full caring for them. You can hold him all right, can't you? He's the best baby you ever saw."

By this time the baby had developed a good, healthy cry that could be easily heard through the roar of the storm.
Kirk looked doubtfully at the steward-

"I'm afraid I'll drop him," he said, "Drop him! A great, strong man like you!" said the woman, who Kirk was sure was laughing a little at his hesitation. "He'll be all right as soon as he has some dinner, poor fellow."

"Well, bring him here, then!" said Kirk, desperately. And the woman quickly brought out the baby and placed him in Kirk's long arms.

If the few passengers still in the dining room had not been so miserable from approaching seasickness, they would have laughed at the sight of Malcolm Kirk holding that baby.
He really tried to be as gentle with it as its own mother ever was, but it seemed to him that he sprawled all over the cabin in his efforts to keep the baby where the woman said he ought to be.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAR. 9, 1899.

An Unbiased Opinion.

Our excellent contemporary, the Atlantic Weekly, which has for several years advocated the amalgamation of the schools of agriculture and horticulture in this province, and which is justly regarded as an authority in educational matters, has the following to say regarding the agitation that is now going on to establish an agricultural college, to cover all branches, in this valley:

The surprising awakening of the farmers of this province in the past year or so, is worthy of more than passing comment. The recent agitation regarding the Agricultural College and the School of Horticulture has shown what a wide spread interest the farmers are taking in the matter of technical education. This is most encouraging. It means material progress. The utterances of the Attorney General at Annapolis as reported in the press, demand a passing word.

That the government has decided not to carry on the government farm at Truro is to be commended. The location in the first instance was bad. The schools of horticulture and agriculture should be united, and a first class school suited to the needs of the province made out of them. Hon. Sydney Fisher and Mr. P. Innie are both correct in their statement that an agricultural college should not be expected to pay a profit on the cash outlay. Its profit comes in another form. But on the other hand it should be so located that the cash loss will be as small as possible. The location should be as far as possible in typical and contain several kinds of soil. As fruit growing cannot be so well taught anywhere as in the Valley and as fruit growing cannot be successfully prosecuted all over the province the college should be located there. Besides this the Normal School should not be lumbered up with an agricultural college any more than with a saw mill or a coal mine. The idea of adding largely to the scientific training which the Normal School shall give is excellent. The Normal School is needed. It is a valuable institution. It should be very much more valuable. We shall be glad to see it strengthened in every way, and the way suggested commends itself. But the agricultural college should go where it can do the most good at the smallest cost; and that is in the Valley.

Blithow, and Vicinity.

Mrs. H. Booth of Acadia, preached at Blithow, Wolfville and Centreville last Sabbath. Her sermons were highly appreciated.

Miss Winnie Card has left us for Boston for a season. She will be missed from the choir and in the social circle.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kinsman (brother-in-law) have just returned from their visit to their old home, but regret that the state of Mrs. Kinsman's health seems to forbid her remaining longer here.

Social gatherings seem to be the order of the day - rather of the night. A Crokinole party was held at the Hall, Lakerville, Wednesday evening, the 22nd inst. Fifty-five were in attendance. Various games were introduced and, from account, the evening was enjoyed.

The same evening there was an other party at Woodville. A few evenings previous, the young people were invited, to Mr. George White's, where they had a pleasant time. Last Wednesday evening a similar gathering was entertained at the home of Mr. Robert Bealey.

Mr. H. P. Sweet has been confined to the house for a few days. We are glad to see him out again.

The young people of Blithow propose to have a social entertainment in the hall next Wednesday evening. Various games and music will be the order of the evening.

Dr. Chipman, Isaac N. Caldwell and A. K. Forsyth, revisors of electoral lists for revision Section No. 4, Wards 7, 8 and 9, Polling Districts Nos. 14, 15, 17 and 18, will meet in Town Hall, Wolfville, Monday, Mar. 6th, at 11 a.m., for final revision of lists. A. K. Forsyth has been appointed in place of J. W. Caldwell, gone to Ottawa to fill a position in militia department. Mr. Caldwell has been revisor for several years and has always been a most just and painstaking officer. We regret his removal and wish him success in his new home and work.

Next meeting of the Art Association will be held second Monday evening in March. Program will be as follows: Michael Angelo; Artist, Portrait of Angelo; Last Judgment; Fates, Holy Family.

Process: St. Anne's Chapel, Ceiling of St. Anne's Chapel, Creation of Adam, Fall and Expulsion, Daniel Prophet, Delphic Sibyl, Other Prophets and Sibyls.

Stanzas: Moses, Pieta, Tomb of Medici.

Voltura: Broken from Cross.

One year ago the Presbyterian church commenced work in the Yukon. Four men were sent to labor in the Klondike region, and good progress has been made. A congregation was formed at Dawson City on the 1st Jan., now ready to call a minister. This is the first one formed in connection with any denomination and will be self-sustaining.

Again Acadia Scores.

Very little has been talked of in the world of the Acadia student, since the momentous 24th, but the now famous Acadia-Dalhousie debate. The subject is certainly not half a bad theme for conversation.

Whatever difference of opinion may exist between the two colleges as to the merits of the decision, all are agreed that the event was in every way a complete success, and that the Acadia speakers and supporters succeeded in covering with glory their Alma Mater and themselves.

The debate was held in Orpheus Hall, Halifax, under the auspices of the Sodales Debating Club, of Dalhousie.

Mr. Anderson, the president of the society, presided, and many of the most prominent citizens of the capital, including Lieut. Gov. Daly, had seats upon the platform. By a happy arrangement the two Filipino representatives of Acadia, Gen. de Dios and Senor M. Rivera, who were then in Halifax, also occupied seats upon the platform and upon request favored the audience with a few remarks which were loudly applauded.

Over a hundred students and sympathizers accompanied the Acadia speakers to Halifax, and formed a solid square in the body of the hall, to which their favorites looked for inspiration and from which issued deafening applause whenever occasion demanded. The gallery to the rear was crowded with Dalhousians who quite as lustily supported their representatives and filled up the time otherwise unoccupied with the singing of college songs.

The resolution debated upon was: "Resolved that the re-imperialism is not in the best interests of the United States. In return for the privilege of opening, Acadia was given the choice of sides, and elected to oppose the resolution. Messrs Everett McNeil, S. S. Poole, Edwin Simpson and J. W. deB. Ferris spoke for Acadia; while Messrs C. H. Seelye, Avaril L. Davison, W. E. Outhit and Finley McDonald represented Dalhousie. Mr. McNeil and Mr. Seelye were the leaders of their respective sides and conducted themselves to the complete satisfaction of the colleges which they represented.

Prof. Keirstead, of Acadia, Pre-ident Allison, of Mt. Allison, and Prof. Russell, of Dalhousie, were the judges.

Throughout the debate the students of both colleges conducted themselves admirably. There was not a hiss or a jar from either side, and the announcement of the decision was met with not a murmur from the losing college.

Following is a digest, necessarily imperfect, of the arguments as presented on both sides:

Dalhousie's arguments were mainly the letter and spirit of the American constitution, and necessitated a direct denial of the position first taken by congress; (2) it meant the equipment and maintenance of a standing army and a navy at a time when peace was growing especially popular; (3) it was from a financial standpoint a gigantic blunder, involving a necessary loss of $107,000,000 per year to successfully govern and maintain the proposed colonies; (4) from a moral standpoint there was neither duty nor reason compelling expansion, but national morals rather opposed so despotic a policy; (5) the Filipinos should be given a chance to prove their own mettle.

Acadia's ground was taken on the following points: (1) The necessity of a trade outlet, present markets being over-crowded; (2) the only outlet was in the tropics; (3) to promote trade there must be navy and naval stations; and the Philippines were the natural stations for American occupation; (4) humanitarianism demand expansion, for the natives were absolutely incapable of a self-government; (5) territorial government was not only in this case a duty, but in all cases was a national gymnasium in politics and civic parity.

When the time came for the judges to retire to deliberate and arrive at a decision, much partially suppressed excitement was manifested, and the difficulty of the judges' task in deciding upon the superiority of either side was felt by all. The Rev. W. J. Arncliffe and Rev. Dr. Saunders, on moving and seconding a vote of thanks to the speakers, referred in complimentary terms to their mastery of control over the subject and the difficulty the judges would meet with in awarding victory to either side.

When after twenty-five minutes of deliberation, the judges re-entered the hall, both sides cheered their faces eagerly, but apart from traces of excitement which did not evidence complete harmony or unanimity, no hint of the nature of the decision was betrayed, and when Dr. Allison arose to announce the verdict the excitement was intense. The doctor explained that the judges were authorized to be influenced in judging principally by the arguments put forth with incidental reference to the delivery of the speakers. That in respect to the argument the judges found the two sides perfectly equal, but that in point of form and platform delivery the balance was in favor of Acadia. The Acadia supporters greeted the decision with thunderous applause, which was responded to by cheers for their speakers from the Dalhousians, and the first Acadia-Dalhousie debate was ended.

The N. S. Farmers' Association.

The 4th Annual Convention of The Nova Scotia Farmers' Association met in Annapolis last week, and during three or four days held several lively and interesting sessions, including a very successful public meeting, at which the Hon. Sidney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture for Canada, was one of the speakers. In many respects this was the most important gathering of farmers ever held in the province, and will doubtless tend towards giving the Association the importance and influence it should undoubtedly possess, not only in the estimation of the tillers of the soil, but also in the estimation of all classes of society generally. It has been well termed the Farmers' Parliament, and the fact that some 150 or more delegates, some from distant parts of the province, even into Cape Breton, attended speaks well for its future success.

At the mass meeting an address of welcome was extended to the delegates by the Mayor of Annapolis, to which Colonel W. M. Blair responded. There were other pleasing features, but the most practical one was the address of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture, which embraced: Economy of Farming, Suggestions on Agriculture, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry raising.

The position at which the Association started a stormy one. Following is the full text of the resolution as finally passed by the association:

Whereas, revolutionary changes have been made of recent years in every branch and detail of agricultural and horticultural industry, with the result that if we would hold our own against keen and world-wide competition, in intensified by cheap and rapid transportation facilities, we must conduct our business in accordance with the best improved methods, and educate our young people who are to adopt farming as a profession in those scientific principles on which successful agricultural practice is based, just as doctors and engineers are educated in the sciences which underlie their professions; and

Whereas, the so-called agricultural school at Truro, while probably serving a useful service as the science department of the Normal School, is inadequate to the needs of the country and has failed of its purpose as an agricultural school; and

Whereas, the horticultural school of Wolfville, while doing good work as far as circumstances will admit, is necessarily carried on under considerable disadvantage; and

Whereas, the Provincial Model Farm is situated in a locality that does not admit of its being operated in all departments to advantage and has failed of its purpose to afford practical and encouraging object lessons to our farmers and our farmers' sons; and

Whereas, our present disconnected institutions are behind the age and cannot do other than imperfect and unsatisfactory work, besides being carried on at an unnecessary waste of effort, time and money;

Therefore resolved, that in the opinion of this association it is expedient and necessary, both in the interests of agriculture and in the public interests, to forthwith establish a Provincial Agricultural College and Model Farm, efficiently equipped with all necessary accessories, for providing a combined scientific and technical agricultural education to our farmers' sons and others who propose to adopt farming as their profession and life work; that the said college and farm should be in a locality where scientific study and practical work can be combined and prosecuted under the best possible conditions and with the best possible prospects of success; and that a delegation be forthwith nominated to submit the views of the association to the government and legislature and to urge the importance of the subject and the necessity for immediate, effective and patriotic action.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President - Colonel W. M. Blair.

1st Vice President - William Corning.

2nd Vice President - William Young.

Directors - C. B. Ryan, G. C. Lawrance, J. A. Starr, A. J. Moore, F. H. Moore.

Auditors - S. C. Parker, W. H. Blanchard.

Exhibition Commissioners - J. R. Wynn, J. Malloch, Stubbenscaid.

Death of James Stewart.

The death of Mr. James Stewart occurred on Sunday last at the residence of his father-in-law, Captain Barberie, of this town. Mr. Stewart was formerly engaged in journalistic work in this county as publisher of the Nova Star, and was well known throughout the province. Although of an active and energetic temperament, the deceased, has not enjoyed good health for some time, and about eight years ago retired from journalism, buying a farm at Lakesville. Some months ago he came with his family to Wolfville since which his health continued to fall until the end came as stated above. He leaves a widow and three children to whom the ACADIAN extends sympathy. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, the interment being at the "Oaks," Kentville.

The death occurred at her residence, Bedford, Monday night, of Mrs. Priscilla DeWolfe, wife of J. E. DeWolfe, of the firm of T. A. S. DeWolfe & Son. The deceased lady, who had been a great sufferer for months, was a daughter of the late Henry Found, and was about 45 years of age. She leaves several children. Mr. DeWolfe and family will have the sympathy of a large circle of friends. -Halifax Chronicle

Contra is a great shield in every department of human life.

The number of God's noblemen and noblewomen is sufficiently large to shut the door against the satan in every hamlet, city and state of the Union.

The eternal dilemma confronts every strong soul born into the world.

Household Hints. Flannel that has once been spoiled from bad washing will never be restored to its original beauty.

To clean enameled saucepans, dissolve half a teaspoonful of chloride of lime in a saucepan of water and boil till all the stain is removed.

The unsightly white marks on tables, caused by standing too hot dishes upon them, may be removed by the application of a little paraffin rubbed on to them with a piece of flannel.

Peppermint. The preparation of peppermint is especially an American industry.

The Growing Girl. A very enjoyable parlor meeting convened in the interests of the W. C. T. U.

It had been happily arranged that Dr. Elizabeth Mitchell would give an address, and her subject, "The Growing Girl."

A Bit of Mothering. Whatever comes to the child in later life, the remembrance of a gentle mother's loving caresses and soothing words is a balm to the suffering and careworn heart.

Thomas Ball, the sculptor, says of his mother, "My dear mother lived only long enough to guide her boy by the quicksand and over the stumbling stones of his early youth to the fairer more open road of life, then leaving him the compass—the memory of her holy, loving life and precepts—went home to her rest."

Dr. Norman MacLeod says that when he was a boy he was often discouraged, and to a fit of petulance once said, "I wish I had never been born."

PAINS IN THE BACK.

Are usually the result of imperfect working of the kidneys.

Mr Albert Mintie, of Woodstock, Ont., now engaged in the insurance business, is well known in that city and surrounding country.

At first he paid but little attention to them, thinking that the trouble would pass away, but as it did not he consulted a local physician, and was told that his kidneys were affected.

Medicine was prescribed but beyond a trifling alleviation of the pain it had no effect.

In addition to the pain in the back Mr Mintie was troubled with headache and a feeling of lassitude.

He was in this condition, weak and despondent, he decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Half a dozen boxes and was not disappointed with the result.

Before they were all used Mr Mintie was feeling almost as well as ever he had done.

The pain in his back had almost disappeared, the headaches were gone, and he felt greatly improved in strength.

Two more boxes completed the cure, and he returned to work hale and hearty as ever.

Mr Mintie asserts that his return to health is due entirely to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and he still occasionally uses a box if he feels in any way "out of sorts."

The kidneys, like other organs of the body, are dependent upon rich, red blood, and strong nerves for healthy action, and it is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills supply these conditions that they cure kidney troubles, as well as other ills which have their origin in watery blood, or a shattered nervous system.

Sold by all dealers or sent postpaid at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Things Not to Do. Don't fail to study yourself if you would know others.

Don't judge a man by his nose; perhaps it is only sun-burned.

Don't imagine you can make soft pillows from Capid's wings.

Don't wait until the good things of life get past before looking after them.

Don't think a man who is always on the run wins the most of life's races.

Don't attempt to determine the gender of your chickens before they are hatched.

Don't envy the man with the wonderful memory; he remembers much that he'd rather forget.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

The man-whose wife chased him with the frying-pan said the spider made him fly.

General Director (to gentleman)—Are you one of the mourners? Gentleman—Yes; he owed me $500.

What makes a heap of trouble in the world is that so many people spend their income before they get it.

"Is Glistor so wealthy?" "I should say so. Why, he is rich that he doesn't have to pay his bills."

Nash—Why do you call your dog Drugg? Merritt—Because he can be dispensed with.

Ask for Minards and take no Other. "It's a good town, and it's like your bald head, Weary," said Dusty Rhodes to his partner; "there's no lock up there."

A recent marriage of Mr Day to Miss Field, presented this singular anomaly, that although he won the field she gained the day.

Ethel—Was that young man I saw you with yesterday the one you were engaged to last year? "Of course not. This one is a '99 model."

Father—Why, when I was your age, I didn't have as much money in a month as you spend in a day.

Son—Well, pa, don't scold me about it. Why don't you go for grandfathers? "What did you do with your puzzle editor?" asked the friend of the editor.

He couldn't guess where his salary was to come from.

"I suppose," mused Miss Wellalong, gazing at herself in the mirror as she applied the first coat of putty to the crown in her checks, "this is what might be called prime my face—evidence of an intent to deceive."

Reason—"I like to see a man stick by his word. Now, for instance, if I said to you I was an ass, you wouldn't jump right in with him would you?" Dilby—"No, sir; I'd rebuke him. I'd tell him that the truth should not be spoken on all occasions."

First Lawyer—I thought you were retained to defend Gory Dick, the wife murderer.

Second Lawyer—I was asked to, but my conscience wouldn't let me. It was such a brutal crime. And, besides that, he has no money.

"I'd like to know why it is," said young Brokethigh to his tailor, "that every time you make a pair of trousers for me you get them a little short?" "I don't know," was the reply, "unless it's because I usually 'give you the way I present the bill.'"

Keep Minards Liniment in the house. Pretty Polly!" said the visitor, approaching the cage. "Want a?" "My name," interrupted the parrot, speaking slowly and distinctly, "is Mary, not Polly, and I require nothing, sir. I am meditating. How dare you address me without an introduction?"

O'Brien—Well, this bates everything all out.

Mrs O'Brien—What does? "Murphy told me that if I smoked a piece of glass I'd be able to see spots on the sun. Sure, and ain't I fairly killed with trying to make me piped raw. He opened it and read: "If from your name you take the letter 'P,' then Page is age and that won't do for me."

A Dutch Trick.—Dutch fishermen make astonishing catches by means of the following very simple plan: They put a number of live worms and insects in a bottle partly filled with water, and then cork it securely. The bottle is dropped into the water, the fisherman sinking his line alongside. It appears that the sight of the wriggling contents of the bottle excites the appetite of the fishy tribe that they fall easy victims to the baited hook.

DR. E. N. PAYZANT

Minnards Liniment is Used by Physicians. Mrs De Shaddy, Rich, to new house boy: "Now, Robert, when you take up the Lord Bishop's hot water, in the morning, be sure you knock and say distinctly, 'Boy with the hot water, my Lord.'" Exit Robert, repeating as a text, "Boy with the hot water."

Minards Liniment is Used by Physicians. The American says that in an Irish court recently an old man was called into the witness box, and being old and a little blind, he went too far in cross-examination, and instead of going up the stairs that led to the box, mounted those that led to the bench.

Minards Liniment is Used by Physicians. The judge took the mistake good humoredly. "Is it a judge you want to be, my good man?" he asked.

Minards Liniment is Used by Physicians. "Ah, sure, your honor," was the reply, "I'm an old man now, and maybe it's all I'm fit for."

Minards Liniment is Used by Physicians. MRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO., YARMOUTH, N. S. GENTLEMEN.—In January last, Francis Leclair, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing his feet. He was, when found, placed on a sled and taken home, where grave fears were entertained for his recovery, his legs being badly bruised and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet.

Minards Liniment is Used by Physicians. We used MIN. ARD'S LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain, and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.
