Beautiful Cynthia;

Victory After Many Defeats.

CHAPTER IV. BOY-AND-GIRL LOVE.

Cynthia took several whiffs, but though she endeavored to obey his instructions, the smoke got down her throat, up her nostrils, and into her eyes; and though she endeavored to refrain from displaying her discomfort, she was presently obliged to emit a little cough and to draw her hand across her eyes. Darrel, who had been gazing fixedly at the stream so as not to embarrass her, turned his head at the sound of the cough. He knew it well.

"How are you getting on?" he asked presently, with affected carelessness, but with a touch of anxiety.

"Oh, first-rate," said poor Cynthia. "But I don't think it's very amusing or—very nice."

"Better throw it away," he said earnestly, as he noticed a slight pallor stealing over her face; "it's just as well not to go in for too much of it at starting."

Cynthia stuck to the cigarette manfully for another minute or two. Then it dropped from her fingers, and she stared in front of her with a troubled expression.

"There you are!" he exclaimed, with much concern. "You're feeling queer. I was sure you would; but I didn't think it would come on so quickly. I say, you're not going to be really ill, are you?"

Cynthia shook her head; she was incapable of speech; and Darrel watched her with a mixture of anxiety and remorse.

"I was a beast to let you try it," he said remorsefully; "but I did warn you, didn't I? I'm awfully sorry! Do you feel faintish and as if something inside you had turned upside down? Look here, I'll sit beside you, and you lean up against me. It will pass off in a minute or two. I felt just like you are doing the first time I tried, and—once or twice since. It's just a toss up, you know, and the kind of tobacco."

He seated himself near her; and, in quite a boyish way, would have drawn her toward him; but Cynthia put out her hand and pushed him back.

My Digestion Is Now Good

And I Feel Like a Young Man Since
Using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Prof. A. T. Smith.

What a horrible condition the digestive system gets into when the liver becomes sluggish and the bowels constipated. The poisonous waste matter is thrown back into the blood stream and finds its way into all parts of the body, causing pain and aches and feelings of fatigue and misery.

It is wonderful how quickly Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills sweep the poisons from the digestive system and enable the organs of digestion to resume their natural functions.

Prof. A. T. Smith, 1 Mt. Charles street, Montreal, and formerly of Boston, Mass., writes:—"I suffered for many years from bad digestion, constipation and horrible backaches. I have been treated by many doctors without any results. One day a friend in Boston advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. After using two boxes I noticed great improvement, and after the fourth box I was completely cured. My digestion is good. I never feel any pain in the back. My head is clear and I feel like a young man. I think Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are one of the best medicines on earth."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all druggists or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

"I'm coming all right now," she said, with an attempt at a smile; "I shall be all right in a minute or two; don't speak to me or touch me."

"All right," he said, not at all offended; and he sat quite still, his gaze averted.

Cynthia quite recovered within the declared time, the faint color stole back to her cheeks, she stretched out her arms and laughed.

"I think it's beastly," she said. "I can't think what you see in it. And that's the second one you've smoked this morning."

"How do you know?" he demanded quickly. "Why, you must have seen me when you stood on the bridge? Why did you pretend you didn't?"

Cynthia colored and bit her lip softly; but there was nothing for it but to out with the truth.

"I didn't know whether you wanted me to," she said. "I thought you were going to cut me; and I waited to see."

"Oh, that was it, was it? You thought that because there was a row on between you father and mine that I should shy off you? You must have thought me a cad; it's only a cad that cuts a lady without sufficient cause. I happen to be a gentleman—at least, I hope so. I say, you did it very well; I could have sworn you didn't see me. I'm awfully glad I saw you and followed you. You won't do such a silly thing again, will you?"

"I'm rather dull here, and I haven't my wits. I should like you to be a girl of mine, if you don't mind. O course, it would be better if you were a boy; but—with an air of noble resignation—"you can't help being a girl; and you're rather a jolly kind of girl, you know. We might go for some walks together; I'll teach you to fish, if you like. But I say," he broke off gravely, "your father won't mind, will he?"

"Oh, no!" replied Cynthia. "I isn't the who has quarreled with Sir Anson, but Sir Anson with him; and my father says that it is foolish to dislike a person, and that I might be friends with you—if I cared to."

"And do you care?" he inquired in genially.

Cynthia shrugged her shoulders. It quite the proper fashion; but, with masculine complacency, he took her silence for assent.

"Let's shake hands on it," he said. She slid her long fingers into his extended palm, and he gave her hand a boyish grip and a hearty shake. They sat and talked for some time; that is, of course, he talked and she listened, as is generally the way with men and women.

He told her about his school and schoolfellows, of his first fight, which he described with enjoyment and in detail; and Cynthia was requested to believe that his recent encounter with Sampson was nothing compared with it.

Cynthia listened with an intense interest; he was the first nice, really nice boy, she had met; and he was opening out vistas to her which had hitherto been closed.

At parting they arranged a meeting for the morrow; in fact, for a week or more they met every day and became real pals.

He brought a rod for her, and taught her to throw a fly; the lesson was by no means a gentle one or the teacher patient; but Cynthia bore the boyish masterfulness very well; and only looked sorrowful and penitent when he informed her, more than once, that girls were stupid things and it had always been a wonder to him why they were created.

Cynthia invariably told her father of her outings with Darrel Frayne; and Drayle listened and nodded with his queer, cynical smile; he knew that there was no harm in the lad and none in Cynthia; and to him their boy-and-girl friendship represented a pleasing ideal of childhood.

One evening, as the two were slowly ascending the road which led to the village—they were going to buy chocolate—they heard the roll of wheels behind them, and were overtaken by a post chaise coming from Dursley; they moved aside to allow it to pass, and stopped to look at it. The ramshackle fly was open, and seated in it was an old lady. She was such an odd-looking person that the boy and girl stared at her open-eyed for a minute.

Cynthia had never seen anyone like her. She was richly and extravagantly dressed, with a wizened face, the wrinkles of which showed through a thick coating of powder and paint; she wore a wig which had got shifted on one side; a valuable diamond ornament sparkled on the bosom of her dress; her fingers were loaded with rings, which flashed as she raised an old-fashioned eyeglass with a handle; warm as was the evening, a cloak of costly fur partly enveloped her, and a bearskin rug covered her knees.

She leaned back in the carriage with the serene air of an old-fashioned aristocrat, and she surveyed the surrounding scenery with a kind of complacent toleration, as if she were good enough to rather approve of it.

Her eyes fell upon the boy and girl standing by the roadside, and a faint smile curved her withered lips, as if the keen, shrewd eyes had noticed their youthful comeliness and grace. Cynthia still regarded her with wonder, but Darrel, who had seen grand ladies before, was, of course, not so we-struck. Suddenly the old lady said, sharply and imperatively:

"Stop!"

The coachman pulled up his sweating horses with a jerk, and she leaned forward very slightly and beckoned to the boy and girl with her gold yeglasses. Darrel advanced to the carriage and raised his cap; but Cynthia remained where she was, her interest increased, her color rising.

"Can you tell me how far we are from Summerleigh?" asked the old lady, in a clear, sharp voice which gave a trifle imperiously; but she wrinkled her face with a smile.

"It is quite close; at the top of the hill," said Darrel.

"I thank you," she said. "The river is an idiot," she added, without lowering her voice, "and I was afraid it might go the wrong way. You've here? Will you tell me your name?"

"Darrel Frayne," replied the owner of it, raising his cap again.

The old lady stretched her lips in a courteous grin and nodded.

"I know the name," she said. "You come of a good family, young man. Is that your sister?" Her glass fixed itself on Cynthia, who turned her head aside, and so unconsciously afforded view of the almost perfect profile.

"No," replied Darrel. "She is a girl—I mean, a friend of mine."

"Permit me to remark that you display some taste in the choice of a friend," said the lady. "Will you be kind enough to tell that fool on the box to go on? Thank you. Good evening."

The carriage disappeared in a loud of dust, leaving Cynthia and Darrel to discuss its occupant.

"Rummy old lady," he said; "wonder who she is? She looks like one of the old pictures in the hall at the court. Perhaps she is going there; but no, she would have asked for the court instead of Summerleigh."

"She looked like a very great lady," observed Cynthia; "but I wish she hadn't stared so hard; she made me quite uncomfortable."

"You should have stared back," said Darrel instructively.

"Well, I did try," pleaded Cynthia; "but she stared so hard, and her eyes were like gimlets through her glasses; and, of course, she's old and been staring all her life."

"Funny old person," Darrel summed up, and they let her slip out of their youthful minds.

They bought their chocolate after a quarrel as to whether it should be plain or with cream, and went down to the stream to eat it; they lingered over it, because it was such a beautiful evening and they were perfectly happy; but at last, declaring for the tenth time that she must go, Cynthia wiped her mouth, sprang up and went homeward, nodding her head in response to Darrel's shouted:

"Same time to-morrow, Cynthia!"

She was running through the passage to the kitchen to get the tea, when she was arrested by the sound of voices in the parlor.

She opened the door, and stood stock-still with surprise; for, reclining in the easy-chair, was the old lady of the post chaise; and opposite her, in his shirt sleeves and quite at his ease, sat Cynthia's father. He nodded and smiled at Cynthia; the old lady put up her eyeglasses, her face screwed itself into a smile, her lips stretched almost from ear to ear.

"This, of course, is Cynthia? We have met before, have we not, my dear? Now I come to look at her, how like she is to Emily!"

"This lady is a relation of yours, Cynthia," said Drayle. "She is your mother's aunt, Lady Westlake."

Lady Westlake nodded, and her sharp eyes ran up and down Cynthia, from top to toe.

"How do you do, my dear?" she said. "Come and kiss me." Cynthia hesitated; she hated the thought of kissing anyone, excepting her father. Lady Westlake's keen eyes noted the hesitation; and, with a grin and a slight shrug of the shoulders, she said: "Well, perhaps you had better put it off, for I'm all over powder and dust."

Cynthia, deeply grateful for the reprieve, said:

"I'll get the tea, father," and left the room.

"She is a pretty child," remarked Lady Westlake, when the door had closed. "Thank goodness, she takes after our family and not yours, Bradley! She is exactly what her mother was at her age, and I fancy—and, mind you, I am very seldom wrong—that she is going to grow into a beauty. All the more reason that you should accept my proposal. A plain, gauche girl might be left to vegetate here with you; but not a creature like that. Now, just consider: say that I'm right and that she is going to be a beauty; what on earth can you do with her here? She wouldn't have a chance. You would marry her to the village blacksmith or carpenter, or, worse, the curate or the local lawyer. You can't give her a chance. You say that you are poor, and, from what I know of you, I should say you always will be. You were always eccentric, you know, Bradley; and you appear to me"—she looked round the room and at his shirt sleeves—"as if you were living like a small farmer or squatter; and were bringing up this girl to correspond. That may all be very well for a Drayle; but you mustn't forget that the girl—what's her name? Ah, yes; Cynthia—has some of our blood in her. I don't want to hurt your feelings, Bradley."

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

9517.—A SIMPLE EFFECTIVE MODEL.

Women realize the importance of having a house dress that is adapted to its purpose. This one is simple in design and comfortable, a model that is practical and that will prove desirable and suitable. The waist may be developed with centre front plain closing, or with the extension, as illustrated. The skirt has the new back panel effect and closes at the centre front. This practical feature will appeal to every homemaker and laundress, as it renders the ironing of the dress easy. The sleeves may be made in elbow length or in wrist length. Gaiters, secateurs, gingham, percale, chambray and lawn are suitable for this design. The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 6 yards of 36 inch material for the 36 inch size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

9518.—A NEW AND PRACTICAL APRON.

Ladies' One Piece Apron.
This model affords protection and covering to the dress and is comfortable and neat in appearance. It is fitted by a dart under the arms, and has ample pockets in front. Gingham, chambray, percale, lawn, cambric, muslin, alpaca or denim may be used for this design. It is easy to make, and may be trimmed with edging, or the free edges may be scalloped and embroidered. The Pattern is cut in 3 sizes: Small, Medium, and Large. It requires 3 1/2 yards of 27 inch material for the medium size.

One Form of Vanity.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Vanity is a vice, or perhaps I should say a falling. It is great in a man, shows itself in a ways. Sometimes it appears frankly in its own proper form, and then again it puts on some more successful disguise. False humility is sometimes another. Self-consciousness is another. But the disguise I want to speak about to-day is an unwillingness to appear in any part in which one cannot hold the center of the stage.

Perhaps I should hardly call it a disguise at all, because to the eye that understands it is such a palpable form of vanity.

A friend of mine was at a summer resort last year where tennis was the favorite game. Everyone played, especially the double game. My friend played a fair beginner's game, and was promising herself a good deal of pleasure playing doubles during the week her fiancé should be with her. She knew he had not played much, but a good many of the players were beginners, and she felt sure he would pick it up easily. When her fiancé came, he played one game and then refused to play again. Not because he didn't like it or wasn't progressing well, but simply because he couldn't at once play so well as the crack players. He couldn't bear to be surpassed even by men who had been playing for years, and so he refused to enter the lists at all.

Can you beat that for absurd and childish vanity? And yet I don't doubt that he would be most indignant if anyone accused him of vanity. He would probably regard his act as a proof of humility.

Incidentally this man is an expert swimmer. He has spent years perfecting himself in this sport, and could easily outswim any of the men who outplayed him at tennis. One would think that superiority would have contented him, and that he would have been willing to show himself inferior in other sports. But he was like a spoiled child that won't play unless he can have his way all the time.

I hope few of us are so childishly vain as this, but I know that many of us have some touch of this weakness.

We hate beginnings; we are loth to try to acquire skill in any new direction. If we have a talent in any one line we are apt to cultivate that exclusively and let ourselves grow narrow in other ways. We want to be always complacently doing that which we do easily and well.

All this is not good for the soul; we need to do the thing that comes hard; we need to rub up against men and women who know more than we do. We need to join in the sports in which we are surpassed. Only so can we grow, and only so can we keep a proper idea of our relative importance.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alternative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless congested, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-around tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes Mrs. W. Dixon of New Brunswick, N. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "I had four different doctors and none did me any good. My mind I had completely, and I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to get up for six months, and was eating but a few shreds of food. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the "Discovery" I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 117 pounds."

Household Notes.

It saves time to cut the dough for baking powder biscuit with a sharp knife. The biscuits will be in pretty squares and there is no waste.

Good light is necessary for the person pressing men's clothes. Also the irons should be very hot, and a piece of cotton cloth should be very handy.

To save time in cleaning windows let a kettle of water boil in room till the windows are covered with steam. Then wipe with a dry cloth.

After making a hairbow work a small thread eye on the inside of each loop. Slip a hairpin through each eye and fasten to the braid of hair with its help.

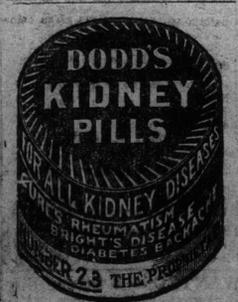

A good pearl button sewed to the back of a boy's collar band will do the same work as the regular collar button, and he will always know where to find it.

Test potatoes by cutting in two and rubbing the cut surfaces together. Then press the two parts together. If they stick, the potatoes are good.

A table made on a gocart frame is a handy thing for an invalid. Attach it to the bed with a ribbon, and the invalid can push it away when through with it.

A clothes basket with two parts is convenient for keeping white and colored clothes separately. Or the division may be made small and used for clothes pins.

A kitchenette ought not to be larger than 7 x 10 feet, and placed, if possible, on the southwest corner of the house. Nothing saves the house-keepers steps so much.

An unused doorway makes a splendid bookcase in a small room. The door should be locked and treated as the back of the case—with burlap or picture matting. Shelves can be set in the entire door space or the lower half.

If a family numbers only two or three, it makes a pleasant change to have the simple luncheon on a tray. A delicious menu for such an occasion is sandwiches of whole wheat bread, thickly buttered and spread with raisins, cocoa and a lettuce salad with French dressing.

A delicious fish au gratin is made by buttering a pie dish and placing in it as many fillets of white fish as will fill it without placing one on the other. Sprinkle the fish with salt, pepper and nutmeg; then squeeze lemon juice over it, cover with butter and bake in a quick oven. Sprinkle parsley over the fish when served.

The Good Die Young

Beside the road that leads to town the thistle thrives apace, and if you cut the blamed thing down, two more will take its place. The sunflowers flourish in the heat that kills the growing oats; the weeds keep living when the wheat and corn have lost their roots. The roses wither in the glare that keeps the prairie alive, the orchards fall of peach and pear while cheap perennials thrive. The good and useful men depart too soon on death's dark trip; they just have fairly made a start when they must up and skip. A little cold, a little heat will quickly kill them off; a little wetting of their feet, a little hacking cough; they're tender as the blushing rose of evanescent bloom; too quickly they turn up their toes and slumber in the tomb. And yet the world is full of scurvy who don't know how to die, a lot of picaresque dubs, who couldn't, if they'd try. Year after year, with idle chums, they hang around the place, until at last their age becomes a scandal and disgrace. And thus the men of useful deeds die off, while no-goods thrive; you can't kill off the human weeds, nor keep the wheat alive.

Our Simian Relatives.

Tasmanian Aborigines' Great Resemblance to Apes.

Professor Arthur Keith, curator of the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, began there recently a series of addresses on the ortho-grade position of man. He stated that with our increased knowledge of the animal kingdom since the days of Darwin further conclusions could be arrived at.

Professor Keith showed to his audience seven skeletons—three of the primitive order of monkeys, and those of an orang-utang, a chimpanzee, a gorilla, and a primitive human being of Tasmania. The three anthropoid apes and the Tasmanian were so much alike when dissected, he said, that one might suppose they all come out of one common stock.

The anthropoid apes were evolved from the gibbon. They were distinct from any other animals, inasmuch as they were all upright, and the great problem was how the gibbon came by the upright posture.

Geologists were uncertain as to the date when South America came to be separated from Africa, but the separation of the fauna of the Old World from that of the New World dated back to the Eocene period. The form of upright ape came into the world at that period, and the gibbon had come right down from the Miocene period almost unchanged.

Discussing the evolution of the upright posture, Professor Keith said the first stage was the specialisation of the arms, attributed to the gibbon. After the gibbons came the anthropoid apes; then the specialisation of the feet.

Reduction Leads to Stagnation

ACCORDING TO THE MINISTER OF FINANCE.

"Reductions of the Tariff are all in place, but this enormous big slice of $400,000 ought to set our heads whirling. A thoughtful man said to me, there must have been something wrong in the past, or strange things to happen soon."

The foregoing paragraph, as will be noted, is printed in inverted commas, to show that it is not a statement of ours, but of another. It is an extract taken from a letter of Mr. J. E. Lake, of Portuena, a Tory, and a supporter of Sir Edward Morris and the People's Party. The letter was published in the Daily News this morning.

It will be noticed that there are two remarkable comments, the second alternative to the first, which are: "there must have been something wrong in the past, OR strange things to happen soon."

Let us take the first comment. "There must have been something wrong in the past." In other words, there must have been something wrong in the past four years with the Morris Administration, as it has waited until the end of the term before making these reductions.

This comment will bear further examination. Sir Edward Morris in his Manifesto of October 3rd, 1908, promised to put tea, sugar, pork and other prime necessities on the free list. He said it could be easily accomplished without in any way affecting the necessary revenues required to maintain the various public services of the Colony.

If it was so easy, why did not the Minister of Finance make the change in his first Budget in 1909? If it is said there was no time and that it was wiser to examine the situation carefully before the change was made, we ask why the change was not effected in the Budget of 1910, when everything was favorable. For there was a big surplus in view that year. Here is the evidence of it taken from the Budget Speech of the Minister of Finance delivered last year.

Here is what he said then:—"In the first year of the new regime, that is to say, from July 1st, 1909, to June 30th, 1910, the Colony entered upon a new era of prosperity, and its fiscal operations resulted in realizing a surplus revenue of $420,000, the greatest by far in our history, almost twice as large as in any previous year."

Here then was the opportunity. The Prime Minister, the Finance Minister, indeed the whole Ministry and party were pledged to place these articles on the Free List. But, if they had kept their word, there would have been less money to spend. There was the rub. They preferred to break their word and to have the $400,000 a year to distribute.

This was the revised policy and it was set forth clearly by the Minister of Finance last year in his Budget Speech. Here are some of his words: "Personally, under these circumstances, I should hesitate to assume the responsibility of advising a general reduction of taxation at the present time contending, rather, that such reduction, whenever made, should be gradual, and should depend upon the state of the revenue and of the public service, so that it might not dislocate our economic and industrial machinery."

The Minister has now assumed responsibility for a general and not a gradual reduction. Why? Is it because a General Election is near at hand? Why has he risked what he called last year, the dislocation of our economic and industrial machinery? Last year he said the inevitable consequence of such a reduction would be "that the present march of progress would have to be stopped and the pulsating energy and advance exhibited by the Colony the past three years give place to stagnation? Why is the Minister now marking his course for stagnation? Is the policy of the Morris Ministry now rule or ruin. Is that the key to the enigma in Mr. Lake's letter. "There must have been something wrong in the past, or strange things to happen soon."

OBITUARY.

At St. Bride's, on March 22nd, there passed away to his eternal reward Laurence Conway, leaving a wife and one son to mourn the loss of a faithful husband and kind father. The deceased passed away rather suddenly, but he must have had some premonition of his approaching death, because he called on the Rev. Father Fyde at the Presbytery, received the consolations of his holy religion, returned home and died. Larry (as he was familiarly known) was a good, honest, upright man, beloved by all for his wit and cheerfulness, he will be sadly missed in the community. On Easter Monday morning a Requiem Mass was celebrated over his remains, and he was laid away at the foot of the cross in the little cemetery on the hill, there to await the resurrection morn. May his soul rest in peace.

Coaker at Horwood.

Special to Evening Telegram.
HORWOOD, To-Day.
President Coaker came here on Saturday evening to hold a public meeting. On arrival he was greeted with volleys of musketry. At 7 p.m. the meeting opened at the Orange Hall, it being filled to its utmost capacity. Capt. John Blakey, Chairman of the F. P. U. here, occupied the chair. The President spoke for two and a half hours and delivered a splendid speech, which captivated the audience. He was greeted with thunderous cheers as he entered the hall, and when he arose to speak during his address he was repeatedly cheered. It was the best public political meeting ever held here.

At the Nickel.

The Nickel Theatre will re-open this evening in St. Patrick's, and patrons will be given one of the best and finest programmes ever presented here. The principal picture will be Thackeray's great novel "Vanity Fair" in three reels. This has been secured by Mr. Kieley at great cost, but it is just the picture that will delight and charm Newfoundlanders. It is a wonderful picture in every respect. The characters are taken by world-famed actors and actresses and everybody should see it. Miss Gardner will sing the latest ragtime, Row, Row, Row, and Miss Guerin "In the Vale of Dreams."

The funeral of the late Henry Ford, took place at 2.30 p.m. yesterday from the Southside, and was attended by many citizens from that place and the city. The remains were enclosed in a handsome casket which was covered with floral tributes, and Mr. F. Bursell was the undertaker. The deceased was one of the most zealous Sunday school teachers of St. Mary's, and as the funeral procession passed the Church the Sunday school children lined up on either side of the street with bowed and bared heads, testifying their regard for the deceased. Interment was at the Church of England Cemetery where Rev. H. Uphill officiated.

A Poor Spec.

A sweepstake transaction occurred yesterday forenoon in a club room between two certain gentlemen, and, in consequence a party interested is lamenting today. He held a ticket, the Stephano for Sunday, which meant $50 to him a few hours later, but he sold it to his business-like neighbour for $10, not believing that the Stephano was homeward bound, and is therefore $40 out as a result of his poor "spec."

Holyrood Notes.

The Bishop of Harbor Grace, Right Rev. J. March, visited Holyrood on Tuesday, to hold a meeting of the Board of Education and to inspect parish affairs. His Lordship intimated to the meeting the new priest will be appointed about the first of May.
Capt. John F. Lewis left Holyrood on Monday for Harbor Breton to join his ship, the Frances Smith, to prosecute the Bank fishery from that port. The ship has been fitted up and baited, will take eight dories and will sail immediately. Capt. J. F. was fortunate last season and killed over 1,600 qtls. He expects to total 2,000 qtls. this season and may his brightest hopes be fully realized.
The popular drama "Con the Bhaughran" was repeated in the Star Hall, Easter Monday night, with good success theatrically and financially. The characters acquitted themselves in their usual good style. The musical part was enhanced considerably by the warbling bird-like songsters:—Misses McGrath, Carbonar; Laura Kennedy and Stella Mullenwey, and Mr. J. Durgan. The dance and supper that followed were fairly well patronized. Our amateur theatricals have now closed for the season and the Amusement Committee of the Star Association thank the public for their generous patronage.

BELGRADE, March 30.

The Serbian troops suffered great loss at Adrianople. The 3rd and 4th battalions of the 13th infantry column lost 1,000 men killed, and from 3,000 to 4,000 wounded, including 100 officers with the second column of Bulgarian infantry. The Serbian column received orders to join in an attack on the night of March 24. The Turks met them with terrific fire. The Bulgarians withdrew but the Serbians were ordered to take the position. They did so, and also took the fort itself. The spoils that fell into the hands of the capture of Adrianople, included 5,400 rifles, and 600 cannon. The men captured numbered 55,220, among whom are 1,320 officers, including 64 Germans, 18 Roumanians and 6 Bulgarians. The value of war material captured is estimated at $35,000,000. This will be divided equally among the Bulgarians and Serbs, according to an agreement arrived at.

DAYTON, Ohio, March 30.

Dayton awoke on Saturday morning wondering if the latest estimate of the number of its dead was accurate. With 82 bodies recovered and nearly every section explored by life-saving crews, newspaper men estimate that the tremendous loss of life had been cut by 100. After a meeting of seven-eighths of the undertakers of Dayton, on Friday night it was announced as their opinion that 800 were dead. They based their opinion on general conditions, and citizens to-day renewed their efforts to explore every recess in the city. The situation is serious. Sewerage, Gas, Water and Wire communications have been destroyed. Thousands of dead animals are lying about the streets. Two fertilizing firms began to-day to gather these animals. The Relief committee has sent an urgent appeal to the people not to dump refuse in the streets, but to dig cess pools, wherever possible. The sewerage system cannot be used for weeks, and it will be necessary to do without gas for some time.

ROME, March 30.

The Pope is now better. Up to a certain point he made remarkable progress, and statements that he was on the high road to recovery were well founded. Now most of his entourage are convinced that it is only a matter of time, as he had a setback through depression caused by the death of Cardinal Respighi, Vicar of Rome. Others make no secret of their opinion that he will never regain his strength. They do not expect any immediate collapse, but believe he will grow gradually weaker, and thus retire, more and more from public affairs. There are many here waiting to perform their service at the Vatican or to have private audiences, but that they will do so seems doubtful. Others have already departed, despairing of seeing the Pontiff.

LONDON, March 30.

By appearing to retreat in disorder the Bulgarians, operating in the vicinity of Birkok, at the southern end of the Tchatalja lines induced the Turks under Enver Bey to pursue them, says a Mail correspondent. The ground was carefully mined, and as the Turks advanced, exploded, causing heavy loss. During the Bulgarian attack on the Turkish centre last Monday, the Turks lost 1,700 killed.

LONDON, March 30.

The Bulgarians pierced the Tchatalja lines near Lake Derkos, on Saturday, and are pushing on to Constantinople, according to a Central News despatch from Sofia. The Bulgarian casualties at Adrianople are estimated at 14,000 killed and wounded. The first regiments, which advanced, lost 50 per cent. of their officers and men, killed or wounded.

The Freshet.

BY H. L. RANN.

The freshet is an annual increase in the supply of water and wet feet which comes in the spring of the year, just in time to overflow several thousand pairs of tan Oxfords. It is caused by a number of clouds getting together in one spot and leaking profusely in the general direction of the earth.

The first thing a freshet does when it strikes the ground is to settle in some creek which cannot be used for any other purpose, blow out a few bridges and then wind up in somebody's cellar. If it is headed off so that it cannot get into the cellar, it will back into the main streets and force pedestrians who do not wear hip boots to detour at least four blocks in order to get home. An aggressive freshet can stimulate the sale of rubbers even in a shoe store which doesn't believe in advertising.

The favourite occupation of the spring freshet is to climb under a wooden railroad bridge and carry it into the next township before setting it down. This compels the railroad company to put in another wooden bridge, which lasts until the following spring. It also causes the passengers to adorn the right of way with assorted epithets, as they walk four miles to the last station and root in the Grand Central Hotel. When they start back in the morning on the return trip, they will probably run into another freshet, which made away with all of the rolling stock except a one-armed flagman and a hand car.

Sometimes the freshet steals up at night and forces people to climb out of a third story window in evening dress and wander around in a row boat. The Ohio river produces several of these freshets a year and deposits white-robed tourists, chicken coops and feather beds as far south as the Gulf stream.

LLOYDSEN OFF.—The s.s. Lloydsen reached Channet at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after a good run from this port. She left for the Gulf this morning.

Stomach Misery Just Vanishes.

Time It! No Indigestion, Gas, or Sourness five minutes after taking Pape's Diapepsin.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch Gas and Eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fullness, Nausea, Bad taste in mouth and stomach headache—this is indigestion. A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach and leave you feeling about the best in cases some the else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Biliousness or Constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation too, if you ever try a little for Indigestion or Gastritis or any other Stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion.

Dog Buried In Casket.

Saved Lives of His Master and Family.

Montreal, March 18.—In recognition of his almost human heroism in saving the lives of his master and family, the remains of Carlo, a huge St. Bernard dog, enclosed in a silver mounted casket, were to-day laid to rest in the family plot of Thomas Westlake, of 125 Congregation Street, Point St. Charles.

Early yesterday morning the family was awakened by the hoarse barking of the massive dog, which had as usual been locked up for the night, in the grocery store beneath their home. "Snoko" was pouring up the stairway, and the family barely managed to escape in their night clothes, the aged mother of Mrs. Westlake being carried out in a blanket, unconscious. In the excitement the dog was forgotten, and choked to death in the smoke. The body was recovered and buried to-day.

Prince Baulk Blackmailers.

Geneva, March 20.—Prince Louis Ferdinand of Bavaria recently invoked the aid of the Swiss courts to protect him from blackmail. The Prince, through the Bavarian Minister at Berne, claimed a Munich woman and her mother for years past had been extorting sums of money from him by threats of publishing certain incidents of the Prince's life, wherein the woman was concerned. His princely patience was exhausted when the woman demanded £8,000 sterling in order not to publish the book in Switzerland, and the Bavarian Minister secured their arrest, together with the German publisher, Krele. When the trio were brought to trial the court inflicted light sentences. Krele got three months, and the women three weeks, and the Prince had to bring a separate action to have the manuscript of the book destroyed. This action has just been won.

In Medicine Hat Gas Explosion. Medicine Hat, Alberta, March 20.—Five are dead and ten are known to have been injured in a gas explosion here last night. The fire department was called to attend a fire in the Western Canada Cold Storage and Packing Plant building and were working at the fire when the building, full of escaping gas, was blown up. Hundreds of curious people, drawn by the fire, flocked to the scene and were in close proximity to the building when the catastrophe occurred.

FIRST SEALER HOME

S. S. "Stephano" Returns With 37,000 Prime Seals.

Favorable Reports of Other Ships; Successful Voyage on the Whole.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon the good ship Stephano, Capt. A. Keen, arrived back from her annual sealing hunt, after an absence of seventeen days cruising in the northern fogs, having for 26,000 seals, comprising 22,000 young harps, 2,000 young hoods and 1,000 old harps and hoods.

On Saturday when it became known that the Stephano had left the ice and was bore up for home, Capt. Abraham, having previously wirelessly informed the owners of the steamer that the possibility of further success with the seals was anything but bright as the ice was all broken up and received a reply to use his own judgment. There was much enthusiasm and excitement amongst the town folks, whilst sweepstake holders were in their element.

At 2 p.m. yesterday Pouch Cove reported the ship to have passed that place and in less than an hour the hills on either side of the harbour were dotted with folks, young and old, while the waterfront premises and other accessible viewpoints were thronged with people who were eager to catch a glimpse of the look-alike of our sealing fleet as she approached the Narrows and to welcome Captain Keen and his hardy sealing crew back safely to port from the frozen pans. After she turned the northern head and entered the Narrows citizens showed their true spirit of welcome by thunderous cheers and the firing of guns. The steamer then moved up the harbour and anchored off the quarantine grounds where she was boarded by Dr. Campbell, who gave the ship a clean bill of health, after which she berthed at Bowring's South-side premises. Here hundreds of citizens visited the ship, which looked fine and trim after the rough experience, and congratulated Capt. Keen on his success. A Telegram report-

The two latter ships were not heard from for the spring, although the day after sailing Capt. Keen spoke to Capt. Khee, of the Ranger, which was going north at the time.

On Monday, St. Patrick's Day, the Stephano's crew killed and skinned about 8,000. The following day the seals were taken on board and stowed below. The patch contained 80,000 seals. Weather conditions up to this were all that could be desired. Tuesday, March 18th, commenced with a strong gale from the N.W. The Stephano then burnt down for the night while the gale increased to a hurricane. Early the next morning which was Wednesday, March 19th, Capt. Keen shaped his course and went N. E. The Florizel, Nascope and Bellaventure passed going E. N. E. and soon went out of sight. There was thick fog all the morning but it lifted at noon and at 1 p.m. Capt. Keen turned his ship round and went south until 5 p.m. then steered east for fifteen miles. About 8 p.m. she burnt down for the night and the next morning March 20th, the seals were scattered around us, said Capt. Keen, so we went on south for a bit and ran through the whitecoats to hunt the hoods. On March 21st killed and took on board 4,200 hoods. The ship then commenced her N. W. and having some about ten miles struck the main body of seals. Suddenly there was a thunder and lightning storm with torrential rain showers while the fog was so thick that one could not see the bow of the ship from the bridge. Capt. Keen did not put his men out and the next morning, Friday, the conditions were moderate and the crew killed 15,000 and on Saturday, March 23rd, 15,000 were slain. On Monday, two days later, 3,000 were taken. The next couple of days were devoted to taking the seals on board. At this juncture the Newfoundland and Sagona steamed into the patch and on Tuesday the Nascope, Florizel and Eagle came along. The crews of the latter five ships took part in the slaughter while the Stephano's men were picking up their pans. That night there was a heavy swell on the ice broke up and the seals took to the water. There was a strong gale of wind from the W. N. W., one of the worst said Capt. Keen in my experience. The Stephano lost 168 pans or 4,000 seals as a result of the ice loosening and seals slipping. Capt. Keen has no idea of how many seals were in the patch but is confident it was the main body of seals. On Saturday last the Capt. struck a patch of harps in company with his two sons in the Florizel and Newfoundland, out of which the Stephano got 320. The ship's position then was 152 miles E. N. E. of St. John's when at the advice of the owners Capt. Keen bore up for home. On Saturday morning last Capt. Keen spoke to Capt. Khee of the Bellaventure. The latter reported that neither of the Ventures had taken any seals since March 17th, and as they have no guns or ammunition aboard, it is not likely they will increase their catch. Capt. Keen reports the catches of the steamers now out as follows:

Nascope	30,000
Florizel	21,000
Eagle	15,000
Adventure	7,000
Bonaventure	8,000
Bellaventure	10,000
Newfoundland	10,000
Sagona	12,000
Bloodhound	6,000
Diana	3,000
Erik	3,000
Ranger and Kite	unreported.

Not a single accident of a serious nature occurred on board during the voyage, whilst there was almost an entire absence of sickness. One man had his collar bone broken by falling on the ice and another was ill of pneumonia. That was all the ailments amongst the crew. Both have been sent to hospital.

The S. Newfoundland is leaking and will likely be home shortly. The Stephano's seals are very heavy and the harps are some of the primest ever brought to the country. The ship will turn out about 750 tons of fat.

They Hate Salt.

Most people are in the habit of looking upon articles of our accustomed diet, and especially upon salt, as necessities, says V. Stefansson, the Arctic explorer. We have not found them so. The longer you go without grain foods and vegetables the less you long for them. Salt I have found to behave like a narcotic poison; in other words, it is hard to break off its use, as it is hard to stop the use of tobacco, but after you have been a month or so without salt you cease to long for it, and after six months I have found the taste of meat boiled in salt water distinctly disagreeable. In the case of such a necessary element of food as fat, on the other hand, I have found that the longer you are without it, the more you long for it, until the craving becomes much more intense than is the hunger of a man who fasts.

Among the uncivilized Eskimos of far northern Canada the dislike of salt is so strong that a saltiness imperceptible to me would prevent them from eating at all. This circumstance was often useful to me, for whenever our Eskimo visitors threatened to eat us out of house and home we could put in a little pinch of salt, and thus husband our resources without seeming inhospitable. A man who tasted anything salty at our table would quickly bethink him that he had plenty of more palatable fare in his own house.

Diamond Cut Diamond.

It falls now and then to a law officer to attend in order to keep members right on points of law, and a story is told about a remarkable conflict of wit across the table between Mr. Gladstone and an Attorney-General of the day who had been called in.

The Attorney-General was Sir Richard Bethell, who was never a very manageable man and was proving a thorn in the side of Mr. Gladstone, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, with some big schemes on hand.

Mr. Gladstone was determined to take a certain course, and Sir Richard Bethell was equally determined against it.

He told the Cabinet that it would be contrary to the law and, by way of supporting himself produced a bulky and forbidding book of law, from which he read at great length.

Mr. Gladstone asked to be allowed to see the volume, and turning over the leaves, began to read another passage which qualified away the one the Attorney-General had read and set matters right from Mr. Gladstone's point of view.

Coming away from the meeting, a member of the Cabinet asked Mr. Gladstone how he came to know that such a passage as the one he had read was in the book.

"It was not," said Mr. Gladstone, "and neither was the passage which Bethell read."

Missionary Sunday at Cochrane St. Church.

The missionary anniversary services were held in Cochrane Street Church yesterday. The morning service was conducted by the Rev. C. A. Whitmarsh, after the singing of that well-known hymn "O Worship the King," the President of the Conference, the Rev. C. Lench, offered prayer. The preacher was the Rev. W. Grimes, B.A., of Bay Roberts, who delivered an earnest and practical sermon from the words found in Genesis, "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him." What is religion and why man is a religious being, was ably dealt with. At the evening service the Rev. Dr. Fenwick read a portion of the scriptures and made the opening prayer. The pastor of the Church next introduced the Chairman, Edwin Murray, Esq., of the Presbyterian Church, who made a model chairman. The report was given by the Rev. C. A. Whitmarsh, M.A., which showed that Newfoundland Methodism had raised for missions last year, the sum of seventeen thousand dollars, of this amount the Cochrane Street congregation had contributed one thousand dollars, and the ladies of the Women's Missionary Society nearly eight hundred dollars additional. The ladies were heartily congratulated on their good work, by the Pastor; it is earnestly hoped that this year, the Cochrane congregation will contribute at least two thousand dollars. The Rev. Wm. Grimes was the speaker of the evening, his remarks were based on the words "Ye therefore shall be perfect even as your Heavenly Father is perfect." The Rev. gentleman in a learned and scholarly address, referred to the chief factors in the moral and spiritual elevation of the human race. There must be a true conception of man, a true conception of sin and a true conception of God; then comes in Redemption and the power of the Christian religion. The singing was hearty and inspiring. The two anthems rendered by a well trained choir under the leadership of Mr. Mews, added much to the brightness of this service.

Prospero Arrives.

The s.s. Prospero, Capt. Connors, arrived back from western ports at midnight Saturday. After leaving her fine weather was experienced and good progress was made, although a considerable lot of slob ice was met along the coast and which prevented the steamer from making some of the ports of call. The Prospero reached Channel, the terminus, on the 19th inst., and left the following day for home east. Going into Hermitage Bay the ship got her rudder damaged, which was temporarily repaired. She brought a full freight and about twenty passengers. The Prospero reports the codfishery around Rose Blanche being impeded by adverse weather.

BUSINESSLIKE EQUIPMENT OF THE HOUSEHOLD.

An appeal for a businesslike equipment of the household—the domestic business in which the wife is the honorary director—was made last evening by Mr. F. W. Goodenough in a Centor lecture before the Royal Society of Arts.

"Whilst most men," said Mr. Goodenough, "are ready enough to put in telephones, typewriters, ventilating fans, or any other labour-saving or comfort-increasing appliances in their offices or business premises, how many of them ever consider the fact that a business of considerable magnitude is being carried on every day in their homes, and that those who conduct that business are as much entitled to consideration in the matter of the saving of unnecessary work and drudgery and the increasing of comfort and convenience as are those who carry on business for a profit in business premises?"

"Household management" added the lecturer, "is the industry which employs more persons than any other single industry in the world, not excepting agriculture. If only kitchens were constructed with just an ordinary fireplace in which the servants, when they have finished the day's work and want to sit down and be comfortable in the evening, can light a fire—whether it be of coal, gas, peat or logs—and a tiled or cemented recess were provided in which the tenant of the house could at his or her option have installed either a coal range or a gas cooking stove there are very few households that could not with advantage in every respect use gas for cooking throughout the year.

Mr. Goodenough's answer to the question: "Is gas economical for cooking as compared with coal?" was: "There are now in London alone somewhere about 750,000 gas cookers (and the number is constantly increasing) used by consumers whose means are so limited that it is a convenience and an advantage to them to buy their gas a pennyworth at a time through automatic metres. If gas had not been proved by experience to be more economical to use than coal, it is likely that the housewife who has to look at both sides of every penny before she spends it would have adopted and continue to use gas for cooking whenever she can possibly dispense with her coal fire for other purposes?"

ECONOMY IN GAS COOKING.

The costliness or the economy of cooking by gas, added Mr. Goodenough, is all a question of common sense and ordinary care. The whole trouble of excessive cost in the use of gas for cooking where it occurs lies in ignorance or thoughtlessness. With a view to correcting this ignorance the lecturer gave several rules for observance when using gas for heating and cooking purposes. He pointed out that although domestic cookery centres were doing good work too little attention was still being paid in many cookery schools to practical points, and the gas companies still found it necessary to employ a staff of trained women advisers to advise and instruct both the mistress and servants in the economical use of the gas cooking stove. As a check against wastefulness by servants, Mr. Goodenough recommended the use of a check meter.

GAS REFUSE DESTROYERS.

The advantages of gas heating for hot water purposes, for the laundry and for such operations as coffee roasting, water distilling, and sterilising were all discussed in detail, together with a comparison of the costs of cooking by gas and electricity. One of the most interesting and novel points, however, was the use of the gas refuse destructor. Mr. Goodenough pointed out that the kitchen fire can be entirely dispensed with, as gas-heated refuse incinerators were not obtainable. "These appliances," he said, "have been adopted to a small extent in America, where cooking by gas is so general that a gas cooker is fitted in every flat by the landlord as being as much a necessary item in its equipment as a door handle or an electric bell."

Received Offer.

We understand that by Saturday's mail, Mr. A. H. Allen, organist and choirmaster of the Anglican Cathedral, received an offer of an appointment in England. Mr. Allen has the offer under consideration, and in the event of its acceptance he will be leaving St. John's at the end of the year. This is the third offer that Mr. Allen has received from England during his seven years residence here.

BELGRADE, To-day.

The first trainload of wounded Servians arrived here from Adrianople. The story told by them shows the fighting which preceded the capture of Adrianople was the most terrible in war. The Turks fought with the courage of despair, but the perseverance of the Servians and the excellent leadership of the commanders resulted in their gaining the day. Some men were severely wounded, but the majority are suffering only from slight bullet wounds.

CONSTANTINOPLE, To-day.

The Bulgarians left a thousand dead on the field after the engagement at West Blyuk Ohekmeyre, according to official reports. The Turks also found 400 rifles and a large quantity of entrenchment tools. Since their engagement all has been quiet along the Tchatalja lines as well as at Bulair. The Turks are of opinion that the Bulgarian offensive action at Tchatalja was intended to prevent any Turkish demonstration during the attack on Adrianople and that the Bulgars will not attempt to pierce the lines which recently have been strengthened by addition of heavy siege guns.

MONTREAL, To-day.

A London cable to the Star says that a large British shipbuilding firm which have been considering plans for starting a Canadian ship yard for constructing big ships have after fullest deliberations abandoned the idea as unprofitable. They intend to confine themselves to construction of commercial and smaller war vessels. The high complexity of large warships of latest type, dependent as they are upon an old group of elaborately organized, trade was found to make the idea impossible, except upon assumption of large subventions over long series of years which no Canadian Ministry would contemplate. G. B. Hunter, chairman, another leading British shipbuilding firm, Swan and Hunter, who went to Canada extremely anxious to lay down ship yards for dreadnoughts, even at great risk declare in the Westminster Gazette that any Canadian bonuses would have to be very heavy and permanent to enable ship builders to recoup themselves for very large expenditure in building machinery, etc. These are hardly likely seeing the stupendous cost which could be more profitably employed in the construction of railways and the development of agricultural industry.

Greatly to the Englishman's disappointment, German opinion for the most part scoffs at Churchill's old branch naval school, whose leader is Admiral Tirpitz, whose opinions to guide German policy seems to accept Churchill's project of a year's naval holiday as proof that Britain is in a phase of exhausted senility, while Germany enjoys aspiring adolescence. The anticipate entirely the day when Germany will rival or even surpass Britain as ship builders, and finally they point with triumph to numerical superiority of fifty per cent. in population which under system of universal service enormously simplifies the question of manning their fleet. Naval editor of the 'Lokal Anzeiger' says that our maritime position to England has substantially improved is as clear as the day. We shall only begin development, we wish to attain, when we have carried out our naval law.

Discharging.

The crew of the s.s. Stephano refused to start unloading seals this morning at Bowring's Southside premises, unless they got an increase in the price of fat. This morning they were demanding $4.75, an increase of 25 cents the cwt. The request was not acceded to by the owners of the cargo, and a general tie-up followed. At 10.15 a.m. the men came to a settlement and commenced discharging. Up to dinner hour 2,000 seals were landed weighing 49½ lbs. The crew of the Stephano will make approximately $90 each.

By to-day's express the dead body of James Glyn was brought here and taken charge of by Undertaker Martin. The deceased was a body of 45 while working at the steel works at Sydney last week and died on Friday. He was a native of Bay Bulls and will be sent to his relatives this afternoon. ### A Source of Worry.

Premier Morris and the member for St. Barbe had it out in the Assembly on Thursday afternoon over the unfitness of the S. S. Duchess of Marlborough, and generally on the present inadequate and irregular coastal passenger and freight service on the N. E. Coast. The oratorical powers of the Opposition this session are clearly a source of much worry as well as wonder to Government members who have a wholesome dread of publicity for such matters as affect the Reid Nfld. Company's contractual relations with the Colony.

If Sir Edward entertains the opinion that the case on the part of the people of St. Barbe District, who are compelled to endure the hardships complained of by Mr. Clapp can be disposed of in Glistening Generalities, then we must insist that the whole business of the coastal system, as at present operated by the Reid Nfld. Co. is the cause of infinite annoyance to the people who have to do business over the system. A remedy must be found. No disguising or concealing the actual condition of this inadequate and irregular freight and passenger service as it applies to St. Barbe District can be much longer tolerated, and in bringing home the evidence of the Government's remissness and guilt, as well as reminding the Picnickers of their duty to the people, Mr. Clapp has so far played a man's part.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Miss Bessie Tetford, who spent her Easter holidays with friends at St. John's, returns home by to-night's train.

Mr. Max Duff, of the Bank of Nova Scotia, St. John's, left for St. John's yesterday, having spent his three weeks' vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Duff, of this town.

The British Society's Band is going to give use something new on Wednesday night next. It is an old-time tea-night and dance, with a band concert as an appetizer. All except the latter part will be conducted on the same lines as they were 40 years ago.

We beg to offer our congratulations to Miss Isabella Davis, and Mr. Christopher Pike, both of the Simons' grocery, on the announcement of their engagement, as well as to Miss L. Downing and Mr. John Biekham, also of this town. Merry bells will ring in June, and may their happiness continue for long years.

Mr. E. L. Oke, lately of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Carbonear, has been transferred to St. John's, to be attached to the Bank there. Mr. Geo. Foote, of the Hr. Grace Branch has been transferred to Sydney, C.B.

The apron sale by the ladies of the Methodist Church, held at Coughlan Hall, on Wednesday night, was a very successful event, and the sale and sociable turned the holders in the nice sum of $120.

Master R. Guilfoyle, of Riverhead, caught a fine salmon in the brook near his home, last Wednesday evening, fish weighed over seven pounds.

Ex-Head Constable Williams, passed his 34th birthday on Wednesday last. We congratulate our old friend and wish him many more years to move about among his friends.

The young lady friends of Messrs. George Foote, Thomas Hanrahan and A. W. Parsons gave a dance and tea in their honor at St. Patrick's Hall on Thursday, these young men being about to leave town, the former for Sydney, the latter two for Winnipeg. A very pleasant time was spent, and the young men will take away with them pleasant recollections of their parting soiree. Mrs. J. W. Hunt, Mrs. R. M. Duff and Mrs. R. J. Parsons acted as chaperones.—COR.

The Irishman.

The savage loves his native shore
Though rude the soil and chill the air,
When well may Erin's sons adore
Their isle, which nature formed
That flood reflects a shore so sweet
As Shannon sweet, or pasture
Bann?
Who a friend or foe can meet
So generous as an Irishman.

His hand is rash, his heart is warm
But honesty is still his guide,
He more repents a deed of harm
And none forgive with nobler pride
He may be duped, but won't be dared—
More fit to practise than to plan
He dearly earns his poor reward,
And spends it like an Irishman.

Strange or poor, for you he'll
And guide you where you safe
Be,
If you're his guest, while'er you
His cottage holds a public
His inmost soul he will unlock,
And if he may your secrets scan
Your confidence he seems to mock
For faithful is an Irishman.

By honour bound in woe or weal
Whatever she bids he dares to Try him with bribes—they we Prevail,
Prove him in fire—you'll find
True.
He seeks not safety, let his post
Be where it ought—in danger's
And if the field of fame be lost,
It won't be by an Irishman!

Pardoned After Thirty Seven Years

Convicted of Murder, but Still Claiming Innocence.

Waupun, Wis., March 18.—Edward Eckart, of Pennsylvania, was pardoned from the Wisconsin Penitentiary after 37 years of actual confinement behind the bars. He was convicted of murder when 21 years of age. Eckart's victim was Charles Peterson, also of Pennsylvania. The two were trapped in Wisconsin during an excessively cold winter of 1875. A quarrel over a fire started beside railroad track near Jefferson, Peterson was killed and Eckart was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder. He never has admitted his crime, maintaining that Peterson was killed by a tramp.

In the thirty-seven years of imprisonment never a mark of demerit has been placed against Eckart. He cannot leave Wisconsin and his conduct must be exemplary in every way. In the third of a century of imprisonment his kin have deserted him. He does not know the whereabouts of his wife and daughter.

Romantic Legacy.

A wealthy man died in Brussels leaving nearly the whole of his fortune to a young woman who was very unacquainted with him.

He was a very eccentric man, and, like Diogenes, in search of an honest man. His "tub" was an omnibus, and his lantern a small electric light. He took his seat in the conductor, and always showed himself very obliging, passing up money of passengers and returning the change, but to the latter he always managed to add a franc or half-franc. Then he would choose to whom it came. They count it carefully; notice the coin, and invariably slip it into their pockets. No one thought of the conductor, whose meagre salary

The Irishman.

The savage loves his native shore,
Though rude the soil and chill the air,
Then well may Erin's sons adore
Their isle, which nature formed so fair.
What flood reflects a shore so sweet,
As Shannon sweet, or pastoral Bann?
Or who a friend or foe can meet
So generous as an Irishman.

His hand is rash, his heart is warm,
But honesty is still his guide.
None more repents a deed of harm,
And none forgives with nobler pride.
He may be duped, but won't be dared—
More fit to practise than to plan,
He dearly craves his poor reward,
And spends it like an Irishman.

If strange or poor, for you he'll pay
And guide you where you safe may be.
If you're his guest, while e'er you stay
His cottage holds a jubilee.
His inmost soul he will unlock,
And if he may your secrets scan,
Your confidence he seems to mock,
For faithful is an Irishman.

By honour bound in woe or weal,
Whate'er she bids he dares to do;
Try him with bribes—they won't prevail.
Prove him in fire—you'll find him true.

He seeks not safety, let his post
Be where it ought—in danger's van,
And if the field of fame be lost,
It won't be by an Irishman!

Pardoned After Thirty Seven Years.

Convicted of Murder, but Still Claims Innocence.

Waupun, Wis., March 18.—Edward Eckart, of Pennsylvania, was to-day paroled from the Wisconsin Penitentiary after 37 years of actual time served behind the bars. He was convicted of murder when 21 years old. Eckart's victim was Charles Peterson, also of Pennsylvania. The two were tramping in Wisconsin during the excessively cold winter of 1875. In a quarrel over a fire started beside the railroad track near Jefferson, Peterson was killed and Eckart was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder. He never has admitted the crime, maintaining that Peterson was killed by a tramp.

In the thirty-seven years of prison confinement never a mark of demerit has been placed against Eckart. He cannot leave Wisconsin and his conduct must be exemplary in every way. In the third of a century of imprisonment his kin have deserted him and he does not know the whereabouts of his wife and daughter.

Romantic Legacy.

A wealthy man died in Brussels, leaving nearly the whole of his fortune to a young woman who was entirely unacquainted with him.

He was a very eccentric man, and set out, like Diogenes, in search of an honest man. His "tub" was an omnibus, and his lantern a small coin. In the omnibus he took his seat near the conductor, and always showed himself very obliging, passing up the money of passengers and returning the change, but to the latter he always managed to add a franc, or a half-franc. Then he would watch those to whom it came. They would count it carefully; notice the extra coin, and invariably slip it into their pockets. No one thought of the poor conductor, whose meagre salary of Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

COLLINS,

299 and 301 Water Street.

Three francs a day could ill spare such a loss.
But at last a young woman passed hers back with:
"Conductor, you have given me half a franc too much."
"Diogenes," delighted, followed her home, made inquiries, and as the answers were satisfactory, made his will in her favour, though he never gave her warning that her half franc was going to bring her a million.

Fellowship.

If I can have it said of me,
When ended is my time of toil,
That I have fought to helpful be,
And have not labored just for spoil,
I'll greet death's angel with a smile
And take his hand and journey on,
Believing that I've been worth while
And still shall live although I've gone.

If friends of mine shall only say
That I was friendly to them all,
That I had time for them each day
And answered every piteous call
For help that fell upon my ears
And stretched my hand out here and there,
I shall not, when Death's form appears
Hold back, afraid with him to fare.

If I can have it said of me,
That I have borne my burdens well,
That good in man I've tried to see,
That good in men I've tried to tell,
That I have faced my time of strife
With patience, and have been a friend,
That helpfully I've lived my life,
I shall not fear to face the end.

If I can strow along my way
The roses of remembrance sweet,
Can leave a few friends here to say
That I have cheered them in defeat,
If I can leave in human hearts
One trace of me when I am gone,
When God the veil of mystery parts
I need not fear to journey on.

The Mission at Conception.

Last evening's devotions were again largely attended. Rev. Fr. McAndish recited the Rosary, after which Fr. Holland ascended the pulpit and preached a touching sermon on "Death." It was a masterly effort and was not only concise and simple but eloquent and impressive. The children's mission closed this morning when about four hundred received Holy Communion. After Mass Fr. Holland again gave instructions on Confession, which were listened to with great attention by the large congregation present.

After Rosary to-night, which was recited by Fr. Holland, Fr. McAndish occupied the pulpit and took for his text, "God now declares unto men that all should everywhere do penance, because he hath appointed a day wherein he will judge the world in justice."—Acts 17: 30.31. In that eloquence, impressiveness and fervor that all should everywhere do penance, because he hath appointed a day wherein he will judge the world in justice. He clearly pictured the rewards and happiness which would be the portion of the elect on that last dread day; while on the other hand he showed that hell's fire was awaiting the unrepentant sinner. He exhorted the congregation to do penance while there was yet time and thereby avoid eternal damnation, and be amongst God's chosen ones, to whom He will say "Come, ye blessed of My Father, and possess the kingdom prepared for you." The sermon was soul-stirring and one which will leave a lasting impression on the minds of his hearers.

Rev. Fr. Erick arrived to-day to conduct a Mission for the Sisters of Mercy. Other Nuns have arrived to-day to benefit by the retreat.—Com.

The Tabloid Co's Repertoire of Plays.

The Tabloid Company are coming by the City of Sydney, and will open at the Casino on Thursday night. Each member of the company is bringing the highest qualifications, having played in many of the leading theatres of New York, while Mr. Barr the director, is well known both in the old and new worlds. The following is a list of their plays: "The Train Robber," "Whose Baby," (Farce Comedy); "Slavery Days," (Stirring Melodrama); "Mixed Up," (Farce Comedy); "Chimney Corner," (Domestic Drama); "A Night Off," (One of Daly's most successful comedies); "When we were Twenty-one," (Nat Goodwin's Big Hit); "All the Comforts of Home," (A Frohman Comedy); "Light House by the Sea," (A pleasing Melo-Drama); "The Private Secretary," (Farce); "The Third Degree," "The Suffragette," (Comedy); "Young Mrs. Winthrop," (Domestic Drama); "Twitters Troubles," (Comedy); "The Virginian," (Western Play from famous novel); "Via Wireless," (A nautical comedy); "The Spy," (a military Melo-Drama); "Snowball," (Farce Comedy); "Japanese Nightingale," (from celebrated novel); "Jane," (a Frohman Comedy); "Arizona," (well-known military play); "Schoolmates," (Comedy).

BARN BLOWN DOWN.—A couple of nights ago, in the high wind which prevailed, a barn on the Topsail Road owned by Mr. Dyer, blew down and a lot of hay, which it contained, was scattered about and lost.

Outport Teacher

ON THE MORRIS GOVERNMENT AND TEACHERS' SALARIES.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Sometime ago the editor of the Evening Herald stated in his paper that on account of the Morris Government's generous treatment of the teachers, nine-tenths of their number would support the Morris Government next fall. The learned and Honorable editor is laboring under a misconception, for there is a strong sentiment prevailing amongst teachers that they have little cause yet to be grateful to the Morris Government. 'Tis time that he modified or extended the principle of the Teachers' Pension Fund Scheme, but many teachers believe he is in a large part handing back to teachers with one hand what has been taken from them, compulsorily, with the other, their own money, and that instead of providing for the future of teachers, their salaries should be substantially increased at the present. Teachers' salaries are practically the same as when the Morris Government came into power. The teachers are as miserably paid as ever, excepting his beggarly increase in the Augmentation Grant of $30 to A.A.'s, and $10 to third grade teachers. Some few years ago the Teachers' Association petitioned the Government to double the Augmentation Grant for each grade of teachers and the response came as the beggarly increase above noted. Now, Mr. Editor, an efficient and experienced Associate Grade teacher should be receiving an augmentation not less than $300; a like first grade not less than $200; a second grade, $150 and a third $100. Morris doubtless has increased the Education Grant six months or more than Bond, but with this to the latter's credit; Bond's increases reached the teachers, while Morris's increase has practically failed to reach them at all. What is the Newfoundland Teachers' Association doing for the teachers? Have the Executive approached the Government upon the burning question of increasing teachers' salaries? The importance of this question to teachers cannot be over-estimated, and one to which the Executive should devote both time and energy. If not, then let the Association disband, for what is the good of it if it doesn't agitate, advocate and press this question upon the Government. Again there are the school inspectors—a host of them! What are they doing for the one important factor in education—the teacher? Simply nothing. On the contrary they are now all engrossed in trying to get their own salaries increased. We shall watch and wait. The Government that boasts so much of its education policy which is abstract so far financial condition is concerned, will have to do something concrete for the teachers by substantially increasing their salaries, and this they will have to do off their own bat. Then and not till then, can they justly lay claim to the support of nine-tenths of the teachers.

Yours thankfully,
OUTPORT TEACHER.
