CHAPTER XXV.
A Game of Cards.

"Yes, Clare goes our way," he said, "and I know he sent his cab back."
Percy sauntered up to the table where the count and his victim were at play, and stood for a moment or so looking on.

The carpet was a thick velvet pile, the count was absorbed with his cards—a fresh hand just dealt—and did not see the handsome face looking down on him. With a little smile he arranged his cards and—what made Percy start as if he had been shot, then crimson with some fierce emotion, and with a stern frown dashed his hand on the young boy's shoulder.

St. Clare looked up, his blue eyes sparkling with excitement.
"Lord St. Clare," said Percy, "we are waiting to take you back."

St. Clare passed his hand across his hot brow, and hesitated. If it had been any one else but Lord Vering, he would have treated the words with indignant scorn.

"I—I can't come just this moment, Lord Vering, can I? I am just in the middle of a hand—"

"Yes, I think so," said Percy, calmly, utterly disregarding the count, who had turned scarlet with fury, and glared at him speechless for a moment.

Then in a profound silence, he said, with a sneer, repressing his passion: "Have you brought your young friend's nightcap, milord? Will you put him to bed, as well as drive him home?"

St. Clare flushed, there was an uncomfortable stir among the spectators, but Percy was as calm and unconcerned as ever.

"Come," said the count, with an aggravating smile; "milord means well, my dear St. Clare, but he is too accustomed to playing bear leader. Finish your game, my boy, finish your game. I'll give you a lift home."

Then Percy pressed the boy's shoulder, to keep him silent, and for the first time looked toward the count.

"Lord St. Clare will neither play another game of cards with you, nor go back to London with you," he said.

The count started to his feet, and glared around.

The Real Friend In a Large Bottle.

The greatest friend to sick people is the one that helps them toward health. But nearly every human friend had heretofore suggested a different means of regaining lost health due to nervousness, overwork, debility and worry. Now there are dozens of friends right here in your own town who will agree that the best friend to their health is Zoclic—the health tonic. This already famous remedy for "nerves" and their consequent ailments is a combination of glycerophosphates—the actual elements of the human body—with Cod Liver Oil and delicious tonic wine. A short two weeks of faithful trial will put you fair and square upon the path of bounding health. We know this so absolutely that if you cannot report real progress at the end of that time we will refund the purchase price. You who suffer and suffer and suffer should not delay beyond to-day. Sold by T. McMurdo & Co., Sole Distributing Agents for Newfoundland.

"Gentlemen!" he said, "what is the meaning of this extraordinary conduct? Why am I thus insulted? Vering, I demand an explanation!"
"You shall have it!" said Percy, sternly. Then keeping his eyes fixed on the now purple face of the count, he said:
"How much have you lost, St. Clare?"

The boy pressed his hand to his head, and stared up at his stern face pleadingly.

"Never mind, Lord Percy, it doesn't matter. Well—well—about—just—"
"Does milord mean to insinuate?" exclaimed the count, with an air of indignant virtue and astonishment.

"I insinuate nothing; I prove," said Percy, and as he spoke he made one stride forward, caught the left arm of the count by the elbow, and thrust him against the wall; then, with a twist of the wrist, he tore the coat sleeve right up to the elbow, and held it above the count's head. Thereupon the ace of spades gently fluttered out and fell to the ground.

There was a moment's silence of stupefaction, and then a deep cry and a threatening movement toward the discovered cheat.

The count struggled, but Percy, with the strength of a giant, held him against the wall, his arm bent back, transfixed, foaming at the mouth and livid as a corpse.

"That is the reason why neither Lord St. Clare nor any other gentleman will sit at the same table with Count Hudspiel again," said Percy; "and now let each of you take your lossings from that heap, and hand me the rest."

But no one moved; perhaps they all declined to touch anything the noble count had polluted with his fingers.

Then St. Clare swept the whole of the heap of notes and money into a salver and gave it to Percy.

Percy emptied the contents of the tray into the count's capacious pocket, and let his stiff and aching arm drop. This terrible incident, which has taken so long in the telling, was but the space of a few moments in occurring, and the count, having gained his breath and liberty, opened his lips to speak and to threaten.

Advancing close to Percy's stern face, he held out his clinched fist, cursing and foaming.
"Beware, milord, beware! Blood shall wipe this out, or something worse! Ah, you stand there proud and mighty, but I can get at you, milord, and I'll blight you for this night's work."

Percy turned away with ineffable scorn, and the count, made as if he were about to spring at him; but a strong hand seized him by the collar, and lifting him clean off the floor, Charlie pitched him through the door way, and out of society forever!

CHAPTER XXVI.
For Revenge.

Count Hudspiel reached London somehow, his torn coat sleeve hidden under his light overcoat, but with a bruise on his face that nothing could hide, and a variety of aches and pains which he would not thoroughly appreciate until the morrow, when the fury of his passion should have allowed him to contemplate them coolly.

He reached London, and instead of seeking refuge in the haven of his apartments in Harley Street—he could not show his face at any club, for fear the news of his exposure should have reached them, such news traveling fast—instead of going straight home, he bent his steps toward Queen's Gate, and stopping in front of the house occupied by Lady Devigne, waited long enough to satisfy himself that there were still lights in the drawing-room, and rang the bell.

"Pushing past the alarmed manservant with a half-muttered explanation, he made his way into the drawing-room.
Lady Devigne and Lillian had just returned from a fashionable reception, and were taking that half-hour's rest before retiring which seems so necessary and enjoyable after the crowd and excitement.

At the entrance of the count, with his haggard face and wild manner, Lady Devigne uttered a low cry of terror, as if she were looking on an apparition.

Piles

That Dr. Chase's Ointment actually cures even the worst cases of itching, bleeding and protruding piles we know for a certainty, because of experience with thousands of cases. Dr. Chase's Ointment

Lillian turned pale, but gazed at him in abhorrent silence.

The count threw his hat on the table, and sank into a chair.

Lady Devigne half rose, then dropped back again, with clasped hands.

"Oh, Eugene! what has happened?" The count looked up with an oath, his eyes bloodshot, his face distorted with passion.

"This has happened," he said, hoarsely. "I have been insulted—struck—yes, struck—kicked out of a room full of my friends—disgraced!"

Lady Devigne uttered a low moan, and covered her face with her hands.

"Look at this," almost screamed the count, tearing off his overcoat, and holding out his stiff arm, from which the torn sleeve hung limply. "And this!"—here he dashed his hand against the bruise on his face.

"Hush!" cried Lady Devigne, rising and going up to him, imploringly. "Hush, for Heaven's sake! The servants—they saw you come in, they may be listening! Oh, Eugene, for my sake, be careful!"

"For your sake!" sneered the count, throwing off her trembling hand passionately. "You think always of yourself; it is always for yourself that everything is to be kept secret! Secret! There's no more secrecy! I am degraded, I tell you, and all the world will know it by the morning!"

Lady Devigne stood near him, crying and trembling.

"Tell me, Eugene, tell me!" she said. "I am so terrified, I don't understand—"

"No!" he said, "all you think of is yourself and your prying servants. What matter it to you how I stand with the world, so that you can go on smiling falsely through it. I'll bear it no longer. I've sacrificed myself too long for you! Now, I don't care who knows that!"

She stopped him with a cry of alarm.

"Oh, hush, hush! Lillian, why do you not speak to him?" turning an imploring glance at the motionless figure beside the curtain.

Lillian Devigne shrugged her shoulders.

"It is no concern of mine, mamma," she said, with scornful eyes.

"No concern of yours, my fine, white beauty, is it?" said the count, rising and standing before her. "And hasn't it been for you that I've foreborne to claim my rights, that I've hidden the rest, and let you live as you do! No concern of yours! Wait until to-morrow—when the world knows that the man who was kicked out of the 'Star and Garter' is your mother's husband! Ah! that touches you, does it? Do you think you'll be able to go in with the rest as proudly and majestically? Do you think they'll allow the step-daughter of a disgraced man to hold her head so high among them? No, your cursed English will turn you out like a black sheep, as they have me! They'll show the house you and I, and she"—pointing to Lady Devigne—"live in, as if it had the plague, and you'll know what it is to feel as I do now!"

He sank down into the seat again, panting and cursing, wiping the sweat from his livid brow and snarling like a maddened wolf.

Lillian Devigne sat with her hands in her lap, motionless and calm.

"Hush! hush!" replied Lady Devigne, wringing her hands. "Won't you tell me what has happened, Eugene? Who has done this—who is it that has insulted you?"

"Who?" he answered, hoarsely, glaring at Lillian. "Who but the grim-faced lord you've been sighing and scheming for, Lord Percy Vering—curse him!"

Lillian Devigne moved slightly, and a smile of despairful, malignant satisfaction crossed her white face.

"He did!" she breathed.

"If she had loved Percy she adored him now! She could have crawled on her knees to kiss the hand that had punished the man who had been her torture, her daily and nightly horror.

"He did!"

"Yes—oh, you smile, but I'll pay him back, never fear! For this night's work I'll mar his whole life—I've sworn it, and I'll do it if it costs me my life!"

Lady Devigne shuddered. She had married this man in Germany some years back, believing him to be noble and wealthy; she never dreamed him to be a government spy, an adventurer, and a rogue, but she was aware that, vile as she knew him to be, she had not yet learned the depth of his black nature.

"Don't, don't!" she pleaded. "You make my blood run cold; you will kill me!"

He smiled like a fiend.

"Ah, always yourself! But it is for myself now! Look at me! Have I been hard on you—have I not yielded to your wishes—have I not concealed the tie between us—given up a home—he looked round maliciously—"given up my wife; all that you might go your way unfettered and unperturbed; and now you've no word for me, but all for yourself."

"It has been for your interests," sobbed the miserable woman. "You have had more than half of what belongs to me! Have I ever refused you money? You shall have some now, Eugene!"

He struck his pocket with a loud laugh.

"Money! who cares for it! Money! The fool left me all—plenty of it! Money! No, what I want, what I will have, is revenge! Revenge!" and he ground his white, dog-like teeth.

"You—you wouldn't do any thing—rash!" breathed Lady Devigne, recoiling.

THE SUMMER COLD.

In winter, when you catch a cold, it seems the same and proper thing; with hosts of coughers you're enrolled, and you can dance and smile and sing. The man who isn't barking then who doesn't sneeze and wheeze and yip, can't hope to class with other men who revel in the joys of grip. But when you have a summer cold, and cough a streak the long day through, you suffer agonies untold, and there's no sympathy for you. You sit and suffer in your flat, and feel like some back number dame, who wears around a last year's hat, and therefore can't get in the game. And e'en the druggist who'll dispense his cures, and collar your doubtless, will hint that there is little sense in having colds along in June. The doctor, who in winter days, would soothe you with a kindly smile, remarks he's tired of healing jays who have diseases out of style. The man who has a summer cold no comfort finds beneath the sky; if for a nickel he were sold, he'd think the price was rather high.

Barley is a much neglected grain—it makes a delicious cereal, and can be used for a garnish, just as rice is; also for puddings.

Bell Island's Welcome

To Rev. Fr. McGrath, P.P.

Sunday last, July 2nd, was a gala day at Bell Island especially for the congregation of St. Michael's R. C. Parish when an enthusiastic, warm and hearty welcome to their Pastor the Very Rev. James J. McGrath, P. P., was extended by the Catholic Cadet Corps, and the Bell Island Star of the Sea Association; after his absence of six months abroad with His Grace Archbishop Roche. St. Joseph's Hall, the headquarters of the Star of the Sea, and the C. C. C. Hall was bedecked with bunting, while flags flew to the breeze from many private residences both at the Mines and in the residential section. Rev. Father Galway, formerly of the West End of St. John's, but now attached to the large Cathedral in Wheeling, West Virginia, U. S. A., was present on the occasion as a guest of Fr. McGrath. Last Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Fr. Galway when the sacred edifice of St. Michael's was filled to overflowing. The C. C. C. under Lieut. J. M. Greene attended and a Guard of Honour lined the altar rails and gave the usual salute at the Elevation. Fr. Galway preached a most learned discourse and was listened to with great attention by the vast congregation; while the music for the occasion was entirely Gregorian and was of a high standard. After Mass the Star of the Sea assembled at St. Joseph's Hall and to the number of about 150 strong, under Grand Marshal John Connors formed up for parade and joined the C. C. C. The ex-members of the Brigade and Society numbering nearly a dozen—now attached to the Newfoundland Regiment at Headquarters also joined in the parade to pay their respects to their Pastor and were accorded the place of honour in the procession. The joint parade under command of Lieut. Greene then proceeded from the Hall going via Main Street to the Tramway Company when a turn was made and then proceeded to the Presbytery grounds where they were received by Rev. Fr. McGrath and Father Galway on the plaza. Magistrate P. F. Power, or behalf of the Star of the Sea, then read an address of welcome to Father McGrath, while Vice-President Billingsley on behalf of the same Association presented the venerable Pastor with an ebony silver-mounted walking cane; and Lieut. Greene, on behalf of the C. C. C., tendered their respects and hearty welcome to Fr. McGrath as the Chaplain of their Company. Both the President of the Star of the Sea and Lieut. of the Cadets took occasion to refer to the presence of Fr.

Galway and extended him a warm welcome to Bell Island. Fr. McGrath in reply thanked both organizations for the expression of loyalty and devotion shown him this morning. He assured them he was glad to be back again in their midst. He was surprised and pleased at the magnificence of the parade. He had left the Star of the Sea six months ago for an infant organization. He now beheld it as matured and well developed in a few short months. He had previously seen the C. C. C. but to-day he beheld them again in good form and large numbers notwithstanding the many enlistments in the Regiment from their ranks. He was glad to see so many from the Parish there to-day in khaki. He was more than glad to learn that the members of the Regiment who took part in this reception had done so voluntarily notwithstanding that they were on but week-end leave with their relatives. He thanked all for the splendid reception accorded him and introduced the Rev. Fr. Galway as an old St. John's boy, a comrade of his in school-days, who was spending his summer vacation in the land of his birth which he had done for the last 25 years. Fr. Galway made a very able address. His advice to the soldiers and the Brigade boys was such that they will long remember. His words to the Star of the Sea were those of an enthusiastic Priest and of a loyal son of old Terra Nova, which was best testified when he informed them that though stationed in far away Virginia he had every year visited the homeland when the opportunity occurred. Ringing cheers for Revs. Fr. McGrath and Fr. Galway rent the air after the conclusion of the ceremony. The spacious grounds of the Presbytery were crowded with citizens who thus joined in the welcome tendered the beloved Sogarth Aroon of Bell Island. Herewith we append the Address presented by the Star of the Sea:—

To The Rev. James J. McGrath, P. P., Bell Island.

Rev. and Dear Sir,—

We, the members of the Bell Island Star of the Sea Association, beg to avail of this the first opportunity after your lengthy absence from us, to accord our great pleasure at having you with us again. After your years of labour in our midst, we seek your guidance and appreciate the wisdom of your counsel which is always available to our needs, both spiritual and temporal. You will, we feel sure, be pleased to learn that the membership of our Association has increased two-fold during your sojourn abroad, and we assure you it will always afford us great pleasure to forward any movement which you consider for the benefit of our holy religion.

We ask your acceptance of the accompanying slight token of our loyalty and devotion and as a souvenir of your safe return to the field of your faithful labours.

Wishing you many happy years as our Spiritual Director, and again assuring you of the loyalty of the Bell Island Star of the Sea Association.

Signed—
P. F. POWER, President.
WM. BILLINGSLEY, Vice-President
R. D. WALSH, Treasurer.

Vaughan a Smoker.

Notwithstanding his discourses against the "sins of society," Father Vaughan is not by any means an ascetic; as a matter of fact he is very contemptuous of the person who denies himself every good thing in life. The story goes that on one occasion Father Vaughan offered a good cigar to a very amiable and plous-looking minister who belonged to quite a different persuasion to himself, and who rejected the offer with horror.

"I was not sent into the world to smoke," he said, holding up his hand in protest.

"Ah," replied Father Vaughan genially, "I belong to a church that prefers to get its smoking done in this world. I hope you won't mind my lighting up."

A Good Fish Story.

Lord Buxton, the Governor-General of Saint Africa, "is getting a great disciple of Isaac Walton, and he tells many good fishing yarns. One of his favorites is about an angler who one day had a four hours' tussle with a huge salmon before he was able to land it. When at last he had made sure of his catch he took it home in ecstasy and related his triumph to his maiden aunt. Of course, like all fishermen, he made as much of the story as possible, and laid special stress on the time it took and the immense energy he had to expend before he could bring the salmon safely to land. When he had finished he waited anxiously for the praise due to his cleverness and heroism. For some moments there was silence, and then his aunt looked up from her knitting with a puzzled expression on her face. "But, my dear Tom," she said quietly, why did you not cut the string and get rid of the brute?"

A Mistake Somewhere

Shortly after the naval battle of Jutland, the Kaiser made a speech to the sailors of the fleet at Wilhelmshaven, and in the course of it said:

"The British fleet was broken. The first big blow was dealt to the British fleet, whose tyrannical supremacy was shattered."

It is nearly two weeks since the 'freedom of the seas' was thus gained and the world has been awaiting expectantly an announcement that the Teutons had followed up their crushing blow by restoring normal commercial connections between this country and Germany. But so far nothing has happened. No announcement comes of the triumphant departure of a merchant fleet from Hamburg; the German liners still remain interned in New York harbor. They are not even being fitted for sea. How is this? Doesn't Germany want our goods any more. Has it lost its desire for free access to our food-stuffs and to the output of our munition plants? Has it decided henceforth to exist a hermit nation? Or is it possible Kaiser Wilhelm may have been mistaken, over-optimistic in his diagnosis of the result of the skirmish off the Jutland coast? Can it be that the British navy after all survives in some fragmentary fashion?

LADY REID COMING HOME.—Sir W. D. Reid's private car went out yesterday evening attached to the mail and freight and will be at Port aux Basques early Friday morning to accommodate Lady Reid, who will arrive in town on Saturday afternoon.

A Volume of Truth

—in fact, many volumes would be required to tell of the purity, deliciousness and satisfaction that goes with every ration of the famous-whole wheat and barley food, Grape-Nuts.

Whole wheat is sweet but when malted barley is added then comes a nut-like flavor more tasty and satisfying than is possible in any food made of wheat alone. But the barley does more than heighten the flavor—it gives this food its great digestive qualities.

It is a fact that Grape-Nuts supplies, as does no other food in such splendid proportion, all the nutriment of the grains, including the vital mineral elements often lacking in the daily diet, but which are imperative for mental and physical vigor.

Grape-Nuts is especially processed for easy digestion and yields a wonderful return of sturdy brain, nerve and muscle energy.

Grape-Nuts is always ready to eat—just tilt the packet and add cream or good milk—a delicious dish, richly nourishing and highly satisfying.

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor
H. A. WINTER, B.A., Editor
THURSDAY, July 6, 1916.

PRO PATRIA.

Until the launching of the present drive upon the West front, the whereabouts of our Regiment, Cambridge, graduating with honors, and had nearly completed his training for the medical profession when war broke out. Like many another, he paused on the threshold of a brilliant career to obey the higher national call. He obtained a commission in the 8th Norfolk Regiment and his promotion was rapid to the rank of Captain. For a year he had been at the front. His letters were always cheerful and expressed between the lines the true soldier. We do not need to know particulars of his death to know that it was heroic. We know that he fell at the head of his regiment, with his face toward the enemy. His death is a stunning blow to very many in this city, and follows with sad and denness upon that of his schoolmate, Hal Chaplin. There is a great similarity between the two cases. Both young heroes were destined to the same honorable profession, both showed unusual promise and both were sons of our Methodist College. That school has two bright names at the head of its roll of honour. For Mrs. Ayre and Captain Eric the sympathy will be great and general. Their sorrow has one consolation in the knowledge that he died a soldier and a man. Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.

Victor Dawe, a youth of 25, was a son of Captain Henry Dawe, of Bay Roberts. We understand that with remarkable patriotism, he left an American University to join a Canadian Regiment last year, and had been some time at the front. He too died in harness. Wide sympathy will go out to his parents brothers and sisters, but it will be a sympathy proudly given and proudly received.

We are glad to note that the casualties among our Regiment appear to be most of them of no very serious nature, and we hope to hear of speedy recoveries. There will be general regret that Major Franklin, who is, of course, with another regiment, has also been wounded, but it is pleasing to know that he is doing well and that his injuries are not serious. The next days will be a time of anxiety, but this is part of the price the whole Empire is paying, and it should be our pride to know that our boys are sustaining the fine reputation they won at Gallipoli.

When Shall Their Glory Fade?

Since we wrote the foregoing, the terrible casualty list, with its toll of so many of our bravest and best young officers, has reached us. The blow is so stunning that it is almost impossible of realization. Eight of the flower of our youth have fallen at duty's post; four others are missing. Among the former is Lieutenant Hubert C. Herder, fifth son of Mr. W. J. Herder, Proprietor of this paper, to whom as well to the parents and other relatives of all the young heroes, we offer a sympathy that cannot find expression in words. His Excellency the Governor informs us that the Regiment was foremost in the attack. This terrible death roll shows, but we need not to be told of it. These brave dead were among the best in our land. It is a national loss. Their places will never be filled, but their names will never fade. God rest their heroic souls!

Mrs. Rupert Morris was last night the victim of a very painful accident. Her husband was driving her, with a number of friends, along the Old Wilkes Road late yesterday evening, when the horse suddenly bolted, throwing all the occupants of the carriage to the ground. Mrs. Morris' leg was broken by the fall. Her husband had her conveyed to Top-sail, where at 2 a.m. this morning, he was fortunately able to secure Mr. W. J. Herder's motor car, kindly placed at his disposal, in which the suffering woman was brought to town. She was at once brought to the General Hospital. It is not yet known if amputation of the foot will be necessary. The poor woman suffered great loss of blood, and had Mr. Herder's car been available, the consequences might have been serious.

Ye Hills of France.

Ye hills of France, erstwhile so fair
With waving fields and orchards rare,
Now swept by devastating shell,
Wrecked past the power of tongue to tell;
Black ruin, red slaughter everywhere.

And one I love, my own, lies there
With blood upon his shining hair,
Ye know how gloriously he fell,
Ye hills of France!

Oh Lord our God, our souls prepare,
So that we patiently may bear,
That we resignedly may know,
The loss to-morrow's roll may show
Of sons of ours who claim your care,
Ye hills of France! NELL.

THE BIG OFFENSIVE.

Many Germans, Guns and War Booty Captured by Both French and British.

Wednesday's Messages.

HEAVY FIGHTING.

LONDON, July 5. Heavy fighting continued throughout the night in the neighborhood of the Ancre and the Somme, says an official statement timed 1 p.m., which was given out here to-day. We made further progress at certain points. German artillery has been intensely active in certain sectors in the neighborhood of Thiéval. Two determined attacks on our new trenches were beaten off with loss to the enemy. There were no important developments on the rest of our front.

FRENCH CAPTURE LINE OF GERMAN TRENCHES.

PARIS, July 5. The French have captured a line of German trenches east of Curlu, the War Office announced to-day. They have also captured Sormont farm, facing Clerly. This indicates that the French are moving eastward along the north bank of the Somme River in their movement toward Peronne, in the combined Anglo-French offensive in Picardy. Clerly, the most advanced point mentioned, is 1 1/2 miles northwest of Peronne.

WHOLE BRITISH FRONT BEARING THEIR PART.

LONDON, July 5. Reuter's correspondent at Presscamp in France points out that not merely twenty miles of main operations, but the whole ninety miles of the British front are bearing their full part of fighting. So well does the enemy know this, says the correspondent, that he dare not transfer a single gun or man from any part of the defensive between the Yser and the Somme, to try to stem the morning push. From the day that the British bombardment began, the knell of German initiative was sounded. An order issued to the German troops and found by British soldiers, continues the correspondent, proves it was known that the British intended to deliver their attack on July 1st, and it was thought that the attack would be directed between Roye and Lille.

KITCHENER'S NEW ARMY.

LONDON, July 5. Pride in the magnificent showing of Britain's new armies is mingled with regret for the nation's heavy losses, in the comments of the morning papers. The Graphic says: "The new army that Kitchener bequeathed to the country is not composed of professional soldiers but of men who are themselves an army of which any nation might be proud. It is now showing on the battlefields of France the stuff of which the English race is made."

THE FRENCH OFFENSIVE.

PARIS, July 5. The French resumed the offensive during the night on both sides of the Somme. South of the Somme they made further progress towards the river, particularly at Sormont farm; this position is on the left bank opposite Clerly. All the region between the Farm and Hill 63 on the road leading from Flaucourt to Barleux, is now dominated by the French. After heavy bombardment the Germans captured part of the village of Belley en Santerre, but the French quickly expelled them, taking the entire village. The Germans still hold part of the town of Estrees, where severe fighting is still in progress. German attacks on French positions there were stopped by the French fire. The number of prisoners taken thus far exceeds 9,000; the number of cannon captured has not been ascertained.

GERMAN ATTACK REPULSED.

LONDON, July 5. A Reuter despatch from the western front says that the Germans made a counter attack on the new British positions at Thiéval after a heavy bombardment, but were easily repulsed. Prisoners are quoted as having stated that German units are being rushed to the Somme front as far as

Verden to the east and Lens to the north.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, July 5. North of the Somme we have received our offensive and captured during the night a line of German trenches east of Curlu. South of the Somme our infantry, following up their advance in the direction of the River, captured Sormont farm. The whole district between this farm and Hill 63 on the path running from Flaucourt to Barleux, is in our hands. During the night, after an intense bombardment, the Germans attacked Belley en Santerre, occupying at first the eastern part of the village, but an offensive return of our troops recaptured every inch of the ground lost. The Germans are still holding on to a part of Estrees, where the struggle is very stubborn, but every hostile counter attack has been shattered by our artillery and rifle fire. The total number of non-wounded prisoners taken by us amount to 9,000. The exact number of cannon captured is not yet known, but on the front of one of our army corps operating south of the Somme, six cannon were counted.

On the left bank of the Meuse, towards the end of the evening an attempt to capture Avocourt redoubt was completely repulsed by our machine guns. Between Avocourt and Hill 304 the Germans attacked with burning liquids, but were repulsed, suffering heavy loss. On the left bank was a very fierce bombardment in the Thiaumont and Chenole sectors.

GERMAN PRESS COMMENT.

LONDON, July 5. The Central News correspondent at Amsterdam says that the Frankfurter Zeitung refers to the French advance as "a remarkable and continuous." We know we are only at the beginning of the battle. First rushes usually are dangerous, but it stands to reason that the introduction of very important reserves by the attacking armies, which is expected to be a certainty, will impose a very heavy task on the defenders. There is no question that the British will attempt to profit in their new offensive by the experience they gained during the battle of the Loos. The Berliner Tageblatt correspondent says: Fighting north of the Somme has lessened the prospects of the German Allies for a quick and systematic advance. The Volks Zeitung of Cologne, says: In the widest circles of the German people the feeling prevails that if the Allied offensive is held up, Germany will have accomplished a great deal.

ENEMY LOSSES.

NEW YORK, July 5. The New York Journal has the following: The Paris Matin to-day states that the losses of Germans and Austro-Hungarians on all fronts during the past month amount to 500,000 men. Prisoners captured on the Russian front numbered 232,000, while 4,700 prisoners were taken by the Italians, and 14,600 were taken by the British and French. This makes the total prisoners amount to 251,000 men. The total killed and wounded equals another 250,000. The total number of prisoners captured by the French since the drive in the west began last Saturday, is more than 9,000. Our army corps captured sixty guns, but the total number of guns taken has not yet been counted.

HAND TO HAND FIGHTING.

LONDON, July 5. A British official, timed 5.15 p.m., says, hand-to-hand fighting is continuing between the Ancre and the Somme. Five hundred more prisoners have been taken by us since the number last recorded.

FRENCH SUCCESSES.

PARIS, July 5. The French have carried by assault the second German lines on a front of two kilometers, from the Clerly-Marcourt road to the River Somme. Also, they have captured the village of Hen in the same district. The French have captured the German second position south of the Somme on a front of about 10 kilometres. They have also completed occupation of the village of Estrees, where 200 Germans surrendered.

THIRD LINE TRENCHES REACHED.

PARIS, July 5. The full force of the French offensive is again being exerted, both north and south of the Somme, but principally southward. In this direction the French are now on the outskirts of Peronne, the great railway centre which is their first objective in their effort to cut the German communications. Sarmont farm, which has been taken by the French, is only two miles from Peronne, adjoining its suburban houses. The importance which the Germans attach to this point is shown in their fierce counter attacks on En Santerre, which they held momentarily. This village lies between Avillers and Estrees, both held by the French, so that the German rush temporarily made a dent in the English advance. This dent was quickly straightened out, when fierce hand-to-hand fighting placed the town again in French hands. The number of German prisoners taken now close to 10,000, while the extent of munitions captured is shown in the fact that sixty guns were taken by a single army corps.

In the meantime the movement north of the Somme is necessarily retarded in order that the French left wing may act simultaneously with the British left wing. The British have been facing extremely heavy resistance. Large German reinforcements hurried forward yesterday by the Cologne-Cambrai railway which runs to the very centre of the German front, were attacked by the British and stubborn resistance all along this front, prevents the British from keeping pace with the French advance south. The tenacity with which the Germans are holding their positions in the face of the British attack, particularly around La Boisselle, while the French menace Peronne, which is comparatively neglected, leads to the belief that the military authorities of the Germans are chiefly concerned in breaking the British offensive even at the sacrifice of some ground to the south. The French have now, in some places, pushed through to the third and last line of German defences as they existed before the attack began. The Germans are hastily constructing a new line, but are manifestly unable to make it as strong as the three lines perfected after twenty months of labor.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, July 5. A British official issued at 10 tonight reads: No special incident of importance occurred to-day. Fighting is continuous all along the front, but mostly in the nature of local struggles for possession of certain strong points, the result of the day being that our troops have gained ground in certain sectors, and lost no ground gained. German casualties, during their ineffective attacks, were very heavy, and many of the men fell into our hands. The total number of prisoners taken in the last five days now amounts to over 9,000. On the rest of the front there was the ordinary trench war.

POPULATION LEAVING LEMBERG.

LONDON, July 5. A Budapest despatch says that considerable numbers of the population have been fleeing from Lemberg in the last few days for Hungary and Cracow.

NEARING LEMBERG.

LONDON, July 5. According to a despatch from Petersburg, the steady advance of general Brusiloff's left wing, despite desperate resistance by the Austro-Germans, indicated that in a few days his front will assume the form of a regular arc centered on Lemberg. The semi-permanent fortifications of the Austro-Germans, these despatches say, have now all been captured and destroyed on this front, where they were planned to hold the Russians until the Italian campaign progressed. It is not believed that any of the second or third line fortifications have been constructed on this front.

ITALIAN SUCCESSES.

ROME, July 5. (Official.) A new success had been won by the Italians in their offensive on the Trentino. They have occupied the summit of Monte Coron, northwest of Focicab, and have captured the crest of Monte Selligis.

THE QUESTION OF RATIONS.

LONDON, July 5. The position of British prisoners in the camp at Ruhleben, Germany, whose rations are said to have been reduced, was raised in the Lords today by Baron Devonport. Lord Westford and other members opposed the idea of instituting reprisals on the ground that it would not influence Germany, who they said, would be glad of any excuse to starve British prisoners. Baron Newton announced that the Foreign Office had at last received a reply from Germany to the proposals made by the British Government. The reply had not yet been examined, but it is not a categorical refusal. Baron Newton therefore asked that the discussion be adjourned.

DENMARK'S PROPOSAL.

LONDON, July 5. A new project for the ending of the war in the time of naval encounters, is reported from Copenhagen. It says a number of prominent Danes, actuated by the idea that many of the ships had been saved during the North Sea battle, if boats had been sent out, intend to organize a fleet of several hundred motor boats along the west coast of Jutland. These boats, lying the Red Cross, will be sent out to pick up the wounded after each battle. The work of organization will be undertaken as soon as possible.

CENSORING OF LETTERS.

LONDON, July 5. In answering a long question in the Commons to-day in which Laurence Ginnell, Nationalist, alleged that letters between Ireland and America had been stopped and confiscated by the censors, Mr. Tennant said that when once it was established that correspondence between Britain and the States was innocuous, it was subjected to no censorship whatever by the authorities in this country. No arrangement had been made with the American Government in this connection. Tennant added, as the censorship of correspondence was one of the universally recognized rights of sovereignty, but caution and tact were used in dealing with the matter.

THE BLOCKADE.

LONDON, July 5. Neutral diplomats express the belief that existing orders in Council will be superseded by the declaration of an actual blockade, in pursuance of Britain's avowed intention of strengthening her legal position. No evidence of any actual change in the administration of the blockade has been procurable since the announcement of the abandonment of the declaration of London, however. The increased economic pressure on Germany, which has recently become apparent, according to the best informed neutral diplomats, to the British campaign in Holland and Sweden, resulting in the purchase of products which, otherwise probably, would have found their way into Germany.

THE IRISH QUESTION.

LONDON, July 5. The outlook for a compromise settlement of the Irish question is improved, it is announced to-day. Walter Hume Long, President of the Local Government Board, has received assurances to this effect, which are of such a nature as to justify him in withdrawing his resignation. A meeting of Unionists to consider the matter will be held at the Carlton Club on Friday. Earl Selborne resigned the Presidency of the Board of Agriculture in order to consider the matter, and it was rumored that Long and the Marquis of Lansdowne had presented their resignations. The Marquis also considered the matter, and his resignation, which he has not withdrawn.

THE STATES-MEXICO CRISIS.

WASHINGTON, July 5. The crisis between the States and Mexico virtually came to an end to-day when a friendly conciliatory note from the 'de facto' government was handed to Secretary Lansing. The formal statement of the attitude of the United States towards the 'de facto' government was issued. There is no doubt in the minds of officials, that the way is opened for an amicable settlement of the Mexican question. The officials are much impressed with the complete change in the tone of General Carranza's new note. It was described as "a more conciliatory." There seemed to be no disposition to doubt that the States, on its side, would be willing to arrange a treaty with Carranza, and to send an expeditionary force from Mexico.

STEAMERS IN COLLISION.

RIO JANEIRO, July 5. The American liner, Wilhelmmina from New York, for this port, via Barbados, was sunk this morning in collision with the Brazilian naval transport, Rio de Janeiro, near the entrance of the harbor when she collided with the Wilhelmmina.

NEWS BY CABLE.

Heavy thunder storms and torrential rains have accompanied the recent offensive operations on the West Front. Major Baird in the Commons emphasized the demand for flying machines. He said that the new positions, regular air in one day. In one case a British aviator by mistake took his machine to a German hangar. These mistakes also have occurred. The Germans had, in a similar way, recently presented the British with a brand new Fokker. Capt. Laing, eldest son of the Rt. Hon. Andrew Bonar Law, has been seriously wounded in France and brought to England for treatment.

BATTERIES CAPTURED.

PARIS, July 5. The Germans are making no attempt to interfere with the French troops consolidating the new positions. In addition to the batteries already captured, three more have been taken, two of which were composed of heavy guns. The French artillery is proving most destructive. In one dugout which was wrecked by a shell 40 corpses were found. The Germans, it is said, are suffering enormous losses in the fighting near Herbecourt, which the French have captured. At one point between the Avie and the Somme, the French retook the position. The French retook the position. The French retook the position.

TUESDAY NIGHT'S OFFICIAL.

LONDON, July 5. A British official of Tuesday night at 10.55, reads: On the southern sectors fighting continued throughout the day. At some points we made slight progress. The remainder of a whole German battalion surrendered in the hands of our troops yesterday. At La Boisselle was fierce fighting, and a bombing continued during the past 24 hours. Our troops are now in complete possession of the French retook the position. The French retook the position.

GERMANS RECAPTURE THIAUMONT.

PARIS, July 5. Thiaumont work, against which the bloodiest fighting of the war has taken place, has been captured by the Germans for the fourth time. The French have advanced south and east

Celebrates Birthday In Trenches.

Private John J. Reardon, son of Fire Constable J. Reardon at the East End Fire Hall, celebrates the twenty-first anniversary of his birthday in the trenches in France, as when last heard from, which was recently, he was "somewhere" in the western front. Jack enlisted here more than two years ago and was a member of "A" Co., 1st Nfld. Regiment. He came through the Gallipoli campaign unscathed and it is earnestly hoped that he will be equally fortunate in surviving the present gigantic struggle. His many friends wish the young soldier and hero many happy returns of his birthday.

Uncover.

May we not pause a moment—with our hats doffed—and think of the men who are dying. They went out from among us not so very long ago. We saw them first, in multi, taking their initial march through our streets. Then they appeared in smart uniforms and the smart and precision of their march had grown smarter, too. They swung by to the dull monotone of the drums or the shriller call of the patriotic air; and we gazed at them from the street side, with throats a little full and eyes, perhaps, a little moist. But we hardly realized all that it meant!

Large Funeral.

BURIAL OF OLD TIME LIBERAL.

All that was mortal of the late Jas Malone of Logy Bay, one of the most popular and esteemed planters in the East End of St. John's, and who had always been a staunch, loyal and true supporter of the Liberal Party, was laid to rest at Mount Carmel Cemetery yesterday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Greene officiating. The funeral was one of the largest witnessed in the city for some time. All the residents turned out and amongst the mourners also were a large concourse of people from the city, including some of the new Councillors. Undertaken Carnell had charge of the arrangements.

Uncover.

Then there was the day of the final hurry and departure—the farewells that saddened homes, just like our own—perhaps, saddened our very own. And now they are dying, cut off in the vigor and hope of youth, under a distant sky; but fighting for the same old flag and the same old freedom for which generations of our fathers have fought and died through the centuries which have moulded the British Empire under the fires of sacrifice and made of its banner the symbol of liberty the world around. — Montreal Daily Star.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Dear Sirs,—This fall I got thrown on a fence and hurt my chest very bad, so I could not work and it hurt me to breathe. I tried all kinds of Liniments and they did me no good. One bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT, warmed on flannels and applied on my breast cured me completely. C. H. GOSSABOOM, Rossway, Digby Co., N.S.

Household Notes

When bleaching linen or lace keep it in the bright sunshine. To keep dust out of the bowl place a piece of glass over it. An excellent omelet is made in the usual way, with two cups of cold boiled and chopped cabbage added to every two eggs. When milk, soup or other foods boil over on the stove, cover the spot quickly with salt. It will do away with any unpleasant odor. Rust spots on clothes are sometimes due to the bluing used in the washing, and may be prevented by using a blue without iron in it.
