WANTED—

For Her Sake; The Murder in Furness Wood.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"I do not see why Furness should be dear to you," Diana returned haughtily.

"From anticipation," laughed Evadne. "I anticipate so much happiness and enjoyment there that I love it already." Then, with a graceful gesture, Evadne took one of the hands of her sister and one of the hands of her own and held them. "What a strange thing it is," she said—"we three shall be sisters!"

"I do not see that at all," said Diana.

"Nor do I," added Thea. "It will be so," laughed Evadne. "I wonder how we shall like each other? I wonder how we shall agree—whether we shall be jealous of each other and quarrel and say spiteful things?"

"I do not think we shall agree at all," confessed Thea; "and I strongly object to any nonsense, such as calling each other sisters. I am quite sure that Miss Cameron cannot like us. If the position were reversed, we should not like her. We shall get on much better without any false pretences."

Diana rather liked this plain speaking, but Evadne resented it.

"How can you be so disagreeable, Thea?" she asked.

Diana turned away abruptly, for she had not been used to such vulgar exhibitions, and they jarred on her better nature.

It was strangely unlike home; the small dining-room, the incessant chattering of the girls, the heat, the novelty, all together embarrassed her. She looked at her father, seated at the head of this table so different from his own, and she wondered how anything could reconcile him to the change. At Furness his thoughts and interests had been concentrated on her alone; now she was but one of many. At Furness he had time to address her. At Furness it was she who sat at the foot of the table, led the conversation, and gave orders; here she sat at the side, and was treated as an ordinary member of the family.

"It is easier to fill it here than it will be at Furness." All the evening she had the same sensation of loneliness and of being among strangers.

"I shall never be at ease with those two girls," she said to herself. "I don't know which I dislike the more—the abruptness of the one, or the insincerity of the other."

In a few days Diana grew more accustomed to her new life, but only to dislike it more heartily.

One afternoon, when the two girls were absent, the heiress was with her father in the only room he could tolerate in the house. Diana had been, according to her old custom, writing some letters for him, when suddenly he opened his writing-desk and took out a parcel.

"Diana," he said, "I am always forgetting to give you this."

"What is it papa?"

"A present that I brought you from Paris. I hope you will like it. Open it, Diana, and see."

He watched the white taper fingers as they unfurled the cord; he watched the lovely face brighten as her eyes fell on the superb necklace.

"You bought this for me? Oh, papa, how good you, how kind! How beautiful it is! I have nothing amongst all my jewels so lovely as this."

"You really like it, Dian?" he asked.

"Like it? Why, papa, it is the most beautiful necklace I have ever seen, truly the most beautiful!"

"Lady Cameron expressed herself in the same fashion," remarked her father.

"Did she?" asked Diana, with cold indifference.

But he was so elated with her delight that he did not detect her change in tone.

"She admired it exceedingly," he said. "Indeed, to tell the history of the matter, it is her ladyship's present to you. I bought some few things for Thea and Evadne; she in return bought this for you." He did not add that he had been allowed the privilege of paying for it. "It is," he amended, "my wife's present to you."

Diana dropped the diamonds as though they had suddenly grown red hot, and they fell upon the velvet case. She could not control the expression of her face, and it told pretty plainly that she would rather wear a necklace of thorns than one of jewels given to her by Lady Cameron. She pushed away the case without another word and went on with her reading.

Her face flushed and her heart beat wildly in a tumult of passion.

Wear jewels that her step-mother had bought? No, never! The impulse was strong upon her to take the case from the table and fling it into the street. Once she half rose to do so; but her better nature prevailed.

There was an awkward silence, and Peter Cameron looked deeply grieved. He could not mistake the expression on Diana's face. At last he rose to quit the room, and as he did so, he pointed to the case.

"Diana," he said, quietly, "will you not take that away?"

There was a minute's terrible struggle in her heart; the hot blood rushed to her face; her whole frame trembled with angry passion. She longed to say, "No; I will never touch them again now that I know from whom they come!" She longed to say it; the words seemed to burn her lips. In another moment she would have uttered them—would have flung away the jewels and alienated her father's affection—when suddenly Sir Royal's face seemed to rise before her, and there sounded in her ears his noble truths about life and life's discipline. The angry flush faded, the clinched hand fell by her side, the light of passion died from her eyes. Never did human being make greater effort to attain self-control than did Diana at that moment.

Then she went to her father and kissed him.

"Yes, papa," she said; "I will take it away," and, raising the jewel-case from the table, she carried it off with her.

It was a great effort at self-mastery. When she reached her own room, her face was pale and her lips quivered; yet there was a sense of peace and satisfaction with it.

"My third victory!" said Diana. "I do not think even Royal would call me proud now."

She put away the necklace, and completed her self-sacrifice by thanking Lady Cameron for it. But she never wore it.

Although Diana was anxious to combat her pride, and thus give no cause of offense to her step-mother or pain to her father, there was one resolution she strictly adhered to—she would not be included in any arrangements made for Thea and Evadne. If Lady Cameron asked her to drive out with them, she answered that four in a carriage were too many. If Lady Cameron observed at luncheon or at dinner that she had made an engagement for "the girls," Diana always politely declined it.

"I am obliged to be with them," she thought; "but I am not compelled to be of them."

In everything she drew a line between herself and them. She was polite and well-bred in all her dealings with them; but they could see plainly that she merely tolerated and did not really like them.

Diana was very much annoyed by the almost servile affection that Evadne professed for her father. She would dart behind him, put her hands over his eyes while she kissed him, and then ask him to guess who it was. She pursued him with all manner of little attentions; she waited upon him continually. If he expressed a wish, she flew to obey it. She read to him, she sang to him; and it was all done so naturally and so gracefully that no one could find fault. She said to him one day, before the whole family:

"I do not like calling you 'Mr. Cameron.' I wish you would let me say 'papa.'"

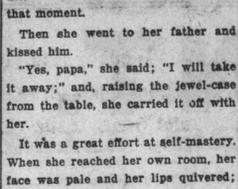

His eyes met Diana's, and she saw how embarrassed he looked. She waited anxiously for the answer. If he gave this girl whom she so thoroughly distrusted and disliked, permission to call him "papa," there would be an end of all her happiness.

"I am quite sure," continued the dulcet voice, "that no father could be kinder to his own child than you are to me. Why not let me call you 'papa,' as Diana does?"

"Innocent as she looked, sweet as was her voice, Evadne knew that every word she uttered was like a dagger in the proud heart of Diana.

From that hour the hatred against them deepened in Diana's heart. Nothing seemed to be left sacred to her. Her father, who had been the idol of her life, was charmed by these girls, one of whom would call him "papa."

2980—As here shown, serge and satin are combined. The design would also be good for crepe de chine and satin. Black satin and velvet with a bit of color used as piping, would be nice. Tulle gabardine with old blue, is effective, or serge with braiding. The dress measures about 1 1/2 yard at the foot.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 40-inch material.

Political Pars.

Voters of St. John's East, young and old, give the Squires candidates the frozen nict. Don't let them pull the wool over your eyes. Take this advice of the Telegram, the people's paper and you will never regret it.

Bennett, Mullaly and Martin are meeting with most popular enthusiasm in their canvasses of the district, and receiving genuine offers of support everywhere they go in contradiction to the cool reception given the Coaker-Squires trio.

Don't take the advice of the Squires heeler to split your votes for one of his candidates. Let Coaker and Squires fight it out among themselves. Have nothing to do with their faction fights.

Shades of our Liberal forefathers who ever thought that a Coaker Guppy-Squires combination should arise in this enlightened age and endeavor to get intelligent people to swallow them as representative Liberals.

The Coaker, Guppy-Squires candidates in St. John's West will receive such a trimming at the polls on the third of November as will cause them to hide from public view for many long days to come.

Electors of St. John's East, you are doing your duty nobly in ignoring the Squires trio. You were always to the forefront in studying by the principles of true Liberalism which Squires has always opposed.

Even the women in St. John's are interesting themselves to bring about the defeat of the candidates which Squires has foisted on the city. They desire that their husbands will throw down every Squires candidate.

Port de Grave will have no other but Crosbie, so the Coaker employee, George Grimes, will no longer represent that district.

Harbor Grace knows well the name of R. A. Squires and hence will not be fooled into supporting any candidate who offers himself on his behalf.

A vote for a Squires candidate in St. John's will be a vote wasted and thrown away, for not one of the unsavory leaders' teams will go near the record of the Liberal Progressive Candidates.

Hickman and Whiteway will be the winning ticket for Bay de Verde. Both are extremely popular in that district and will walk over the Squires nominees.

Arthur English, in allowing himself to be made a football of by Coaker and Squires, shows how utterly he disregards his sense of intelligence.

When you want Steaks, Chops, Cutlets and Collops, try ELLIS!

Wonderful Meeting!

Petty Harbor Will Give Sir M. P. Cashin's Candidates a Big Vote—Bennett Mullaly and Martin Will Carry West End With a Record Majority.

The biggest political meeting in the History of Petty Hr. was held last night. The gathering which included practically every voter in the settlement, as well as many from Maddox Cove and the Goules, assembled in St. Andrew's Hall, on the South Side of the Harbor. Upwards of 300 voters were present, and the attention given the different speakers was a complete answer from Petty Harbor that they will not allow outsiders from here, there and everywhere to rob Hon. John R. Bennett and his colleagues of their seats in St. John's West. At last night's meeting, some of the oldest men in Petty Harbor attended, as also did the young voters in full force. Mr. Thos. Whitten, one of the most highly respected among the fishermen of the Harbor was moved to the chair, and on taking his position was greeted with hearty applause. The chairman in his opening remarks complimented St. John's West in their choice of the Liberal Progressive candidates, and paid a splendid tribute to the work done by Hon. Mr. Bennett for the district during the last sixteen years. Petty Harbor has not been forgotten during that time and he was sure the voters of the settlement would stand shoulder to shoulder in again sending back to the House of Assembly Mr. Bennett and also his colleagues, Messrs. Mullaly and Martin. Mr. Mullaly was the first candidate called upon to address the meeting, and in a twenty minute speech he outlined the policy of the Liberal Progressive Party, and what it meant for the uplift of the fishermen and workmen of the Dominion. Sir Michael Cashin's Manifesto was not made up of a lot of useless words and empty promises as was the Coaker Manifesto. It was clear and concise. No promises were made that could not be fulfilled, while on the other hand the Coaker-Squires combination were holding out all kinds of promises, with neither desire nor intention of carrying them out. The only thing that he saw in the Coaker-Squires manifesto was a promise to keep further taxation on the fishermen, and take it off the wealthy, and it could not be expected otherwise, as Squires who is half blinded by drafting the manifesto, knew as much about the needs of the fishermen as did the man in the moon. Cashin has proven his worth when an attempt was made to devote the Colony's revenue to other sources than for which they were collected and he (Mr. Mullaly) desired to throw out a warning to the whole Colony to be careful, and not to turn the ship of state over to a crowd that were already bankrupt, and only waiting to get aboard to clean her from "keelson to truck" and then scuttle her. No money from the corporations was paying his way in the election. He wanted no job, and he asked no terms when he lined up with the Liberal Progressive Party. He was sorry to say, however, that such could not be said by those on the other side. Mr. Mullaly, after urging upon the voters to be true to their past traditions and guard themselves against being swayed by catch cries, and false promises, asked the voters of Petty Hr. on Polling Day to mark their ballots for BENNETT, MULLALY and MARTIN.

Mr. J. T. Martin was the next speaker and was given an enthusiastic reception when he came forward. Mr. Martin, who is known throughout the whole of St. John's, East and West, as the poor man's friend dwelt at length with the issues before the country. He was a follower of Sir Michael Cashin because he well knew that he stood for an honest and good Government. Government for the whole people and not for a few. An attempt at the present time, he said was being made by a gang of political desperados to get control of public affairs, and in their hand the country over to corporations after they had well provided for themselves. It was a poor policy to swap horses crossing the stream, and to change the men who had been in charge of the country's destinies for the last six months would be a mistake that probably could never be overtaken. Petty Hr. would send them back to where they came from by polling up a record vote for BENNETT, MULLALY and MARTIN.

Hon. J. R. Bennett being introduced by the Chairman, was given one of the warmest receptions ever accorded a public man at Petty Hr. Mr. Bennett, who has served the district well for almost sixteen years, in a speech of one and a half hours, gave a full account of his stewardship as representative of St. John's West during the last six years. After a splendid tribute to the work of the late M. J. Kennedy and Lord Morris, in the interests of St. John's West, he told of the great task which was laid upon him when he was obliged to personally look after the welfare of St. John's West. It was no easy matter, he said, but he challenged any man in Newfoundland to say that he ever shirked his duty. In the absence of Sir Edward Morris, while acting Prime Minister when the merchants complained there was not a ton of salt in Newfoundland, he made with Governor Davidson such an appeal to the Home Government that several steamers of large tonnage quickly arrived with a supply, and the situation was saved. Again, our local ships having been disposed of to the Russian Government, we were faced with one of the most serious matters in our history: We were unable to get our fish to market. But acting on strong representation being made to the British Government that if Newfoundland was to survive she should first market her produce, and again the situation was saved. Mr. Bennett also dealt lengthily with his work as Minister of Militia. He had nothing to be ashamed of in this connection. Everything that it was possible for a man to do he had done while head of the dept. He had been vilified and abused by the Opposition press, but without any justification. He was abused because he went to England and France in the interests of the Regiment. It was no easy time for him. He had to cross the Atlantic at the very time the submarine menace was at its worst, and while in England he spent his time in the hospitals and at the Convalescent homes, and at the War Office. While in France he obtained leave for the Blue Puttees boys, who were being refused every other Colonial regiment. Those who were abusing and vilifying him shirked and went to the tall woods when they should be giving some service to the Empire. His vilifiers took no part whatever in trying to help on the great fight. They were more contented hiding behind fat fees, and for that matter gloated over German victories. Mr. Bennett in continuing, reviewed the Cashin manifesto, which he considered a very sane policy, and one that could be easily carried out. The Squires-Coaker manifesto was nothing more nor less than a jumble of empty words, a mess of clap-trap which he was sure very few of the intelligent people of the country would go to the trouble of reading. At this critical period in our history a policy of reconstruction was needed, not a policy of destruction as the dual leaders were handing out. Their policy was the protection of the corporations and the monied interests, and it was probably from some of these concerns that they were getting the thousands of dollars they were throwing about in their political campaign. A lot of penniless men in their own right, were offered as candidates by the Opposition, but since they announced themselves as candidates they were talking in thousands. The country could not afford to trust its destinies at such a particular time in the hands of men who only a few days ago were at each others throats. Their only one desire was to get charge of the Colony's funds. If the electors of Newfoundland wanted to keep the Colony's credit sound and keep themselves at home and in comfort, they would elect the Liberal Progressive Government. If they desired to kill the Colony's credit, and wanted to see out an existence abroad, they could do so by selling out to the corporation and electing the Coaker-Squires candidates. Hon. Mr. Bennett in conclusion said he knew what the verdict was so far as St. John's West was concerned and particularly the voters of Petty Hr., who would mark their ballots on polling day for Bennett, Mullaly and Martin.

Bringing Criminals to Book.

DETECTIVES ADOPT FINGER PRINT SYSTEM OF IDENTIFICATION.

The local Detective Department has lately perfected a new system of detecting and bringing to book the criminals who will in future attempt to engage in their "avocation," and it begins to look as if they are in for a warm time of it. This is the fingerprint system, as used in America, Europe and other parts of the world known as the E. R. Henry system. It has been the means of convicting more criminals than any other known method. Inspector General Hutchings took a course in the system in New York about a year ago, and upon his return here undertook the training of Detective Head Constable Byrne and Detective Sgt. O'Neil. Later Sgt. O'Neil took a special course in New York, and by now all three may be called pretty expert in the use of the system. It was through the fingerprint method that the culprits of the series of burglaries that were going on during the last few months were found out and convicted.

When the Marshall office was broken into and the Police put on the case, photographs of finger-prints on the safe were taken and developed. When the finger prints of the employees of the office had been eliminated one was left. This was held, and when, last Saturday night, Michael Kane was arrested on a trivial charge, and his finger prints taken, it was found that the print photographed from the safe corresponded exactly with his. He was confronted with the fact and instantly confessed, also implicating the others.

The new system gives great promise of lessening the amount of investigation that hitherto had to be made in cases, and also of eliminating criminals' chances of escaping.

When people find that their houses, safes or offices have been entered and goods stolen, they should refrain from touching anything, so as not to smudge whatever finger prints there may be, and thus frustrate the ends of justice and help the thief or thieves to get away.

Poland's Fight for Independence.

Tadenz Kosciuszko, who died in Switzerland October 15, 1817, in his seventy-first year, was one of the most conspicuous figures in Poland's struggle for independence. Owing to Byron's line that "Freedom shrieked when Kosciuszko fell," it is a popular error that he was actually slain in battle; but, although he was severely wounded and taken prisoner at the battle of Racławice, he survived his release by the Emperor Paul in 1796 for just over twenty years. However, he busied himself to the last with vain efforts to re-establish his country. Born in 1746 at Sleschnowice, in Lithuania, he first saw service in America, where he fought under Washington and became the friend of Lafayette. In 1788 he returned home and soon found himself engaged in the war with Russia, with which the history of the Kingdom of Poland came to an end. The weak Poniatowski was then King, and in his final struggle found an energetic assistant in Kosciuszko, who distinguished himself particularly at the battle of Dabienka. But the internal condition of Poland made resistance hopeless, and when Russia formally annexed Poland he withdrew to Germany, where he settled at Leipzig. On the outbreak of the revolution of 1794 he returned and raised the standard of independence of Cracow. Becoming the director of the country he gained some early successes, notably by defeating the Russians at Racławice; but he was then shut up in Warsaw, which he defended for two months. By then all practically was lost, although honor was saved by the last battle in which "Kosciuszko fell." The remainder of his life, after his release, was spent in exile; for, though Napoleon's Russian expedition revived his hopes, he was too old to proffer his sword. He was buried at Cracow, but the present war prevented any celebration of the centenary of his death.

ANOTHER LONG FLIGHT.

LONDON, Oct. 14. (Reuter Despatch.)—The Australian aviator, Matthews, will start on Wednesday from Hounslow in an attempt to fly to Australia by the Australian Government prize of ten thousand pounds sterling. The route to be followed is a secret, but it is likely that he will touch at Athens or Constantinople and thence fly to Egypt over the Persian Gulf and India. Other Australian airmen intend to follow the same course a few weeks later. The flight is attracting a great deal of interest here.

"I saw the Misses yesterday," friend and she made me ache for just dreary weight. "You Miss R. been ill. I suppose asked. "No, I don't," said she. "I mean of sisters who has been supped and taking care of her. The has been sick looks twice as this one does." And after I had seen the heartily agreed with her. Do We Always Remember Friends?

It is hard to be sick, knows that, and sympathy rick has become a convenient. But do we always serve how much sympathy to serve on whom the burden rests? Take people like those my friend spoke. Miss R. ill for two years. She has or mother and the burden of port and care alike falls on hers. One of them has added of an almost helpless invalid busy life as a housekeeper, a dreamer; the other, working business woman, a chief burden of the cost of life and a lesser share of the burden. When the Well Almost Sick.

They show the finest count sheerness, but it is inevitable strain has worn them sometimes wonder if they ever catch themselves, among their sister when she is while they spur nerves and, completely wearied by work, into new effort on her. I say "almost," for no one really envy a sick person, but respect this fleeting ghost of ailments those on whom the the sick comes as extra weight.

"THEY ALSO SERVE."

"I saw poor little Miss R. yesterday," said a friend of mine, and she looked so miserable it made my heart ache for her. It's just dreadful the way she has lost weight.

"You mean the Miss R. who has been ill so long, I suppose," I asked.

"No, indeed, I don't," she said. "I mean one of the sisters who has been supporting her and taking care of her. The one who has been sick looks twice as well as this one does."

And after I had seen them both I heartily agreed with her.

Do We Always Remember the Next Friends?

It is hard to be sick, everyone knows that, and sympathy for the sick has become a conventionalized emotion. But do we always remember how much sympathy those deserve on whom the burden of sickness rests?

Take people like those of whom my friend spoke. Miss R. has been ill for two years. She has no father or mother and the burden of her support and care falls on two sisters. One of them has added the care of an almost helpless invalid to her busy life as a housekeeper and amateur dressmaker; the other, a hard-working business woman, bears the chief burden of the cost of her illness and a lesser share of the nursing.

When the Well Almost Envy the Sick.

They show the finest courage and cheerfulness, but it is inevitable that the strain has worn them out. I sometimes wonder if they do not ever catch themselves almost envying their sister when she lies resting while they spur nerves and muscles, completely wearied by the day's work, into new effort on her behalf. I say "almost," for no one could really envy a sick person, but I suspect this feeling ghost of envy often haunts those on whom the care of the sick comes as extra weight on shoulders all ready well burdened. A letter friend who for many years has had to earn her living by being a tower of strength for the weak ones of the earth to lean on, once wrote me that she was going to the hospital for an operation. I wrote back sending my sympathy and she responded cheerfully that she hadn't minded it a bit. "It wasn't serious," she said, "it gave me an experience I am very glad to have had and I didn't feel I must work for three solid weeks! Hallelujah! I felt just like that."

Making the Unbearable Burden Bearable.

Of course, I do not mean that one should withdraw one's sympathy from sick folk to give it their kin, but rather enlarge one's sympathies to embrace both. When you ask after the sick person, add a word of encouragement and sympathy for the one to whom you are speaking.

And when you take your turn at being the invalid, of course, you will not let yourself get into the habit of asking any more service than you need, or of forgetting to say the little word of tender appreciation that makes the unbearable burden bearable.

Film Play Writing.

NOT EASY LIFE, SAYS "POST."
 "Movie Authors vs. Stars," is the title of an editorial in the New York Evening Post. Note the acceptance of the word "movie" without quotation marks. "In no other art," runs the comment, "is it so hard for the artist to reach the public. Write a book, and if the publishers are obstinate you can spend a thousand and bring it out yourself; write a play, and you can build your own little theatre; you can hire a window for your painting or distribute your sheet music. To stage a film play and produce it costs a comparatively large sum, but by combination the authors hope to achieve their ends."

"Mr. Rex Beach led the resolve by suddenly blossoming forth not only as a film author, but as a producer, and, joining hands with an experienced manager, has invited all authors to enlist." The corporation formed by Rex Beach and Samuel Goldwyn is the Eminent Authors' Pictures, Inc., and now includes Gertrude Atherton, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Rupert Hughes, Basil King, Leroy Scott and Government Morris.

On the subject of stars, the Post says: "Your self-respecting author is likely to object to writing his play to suit the actress's personality, and insist rather that she mould her acting to suit his composition. On the crude level of the slap stick comedian it matters little where the scenario comes from. But this does not prove that pie-throwing should crowd writers off the screen. Moreover, most stars pretend to a more dignified histrionic talent. The popular actresses, exercising their spell in a crudely emotional melodrama, would appear to equal advantage in a well-written play."

To Your Tents, O Bachelors.

(From the Springfield Union.)
 Next year being a leap year, there is an ominous warning in the news despatches from London stating that 5,000 British women are planning to come to the United States for the more or less romantic or benevolent purpose of acquiring American husbands, the supply of marriageable males in England having been greatly reduced by the war. It may, however, be taken for granted that the American women and girls of marriageable age will take steps to meet this foreign competition, and that some of the disappointed hunters from abroad will be assigned in their quest, or at least have to content themselves with the left-overs and discards.

Fads and Fashions.

Peace-dove gray is a fashionable hue.
 Brown furs are especially popular. Many coats feature huge pocket flaps.
 Separate coats have large arm holes.
 Silk braid is still a favored trimming.
 Suede is much used as a trimming. Narrow kid belts are much worn. Suit skirts are simple and straight. The lingerie waist is having a great vogue.
 Burnt orange is a favorite tone in millinery.
 Plain and shorter skirts are favored for suits.

Might Be Contagious.

A young matron of Baltimore, upon entering her nursery, found her youngest in tears.
 "Why, what's the matter with Harry?" she asked the nurse.
 "He's mad, mum," explained the nurse, "because I wouldn't let him go to the Simmonses across the strait."
 "And why wouldn't you let him go, Norah?"
 "Because, mum, they're having charades, so he said, 'an' I wasn't sure whether he had had them or not.'"

Just Folks by Edgar A. Guest

A VANISHED JOY.

When I was but a little lad of six and seven and eight, One joy I knew that has been lost in customs up-to-date, Then Saturday was baking day and mother used to make, The while I stood about and watched, the Sunday pies and cake, And I was there to have fulfilled a small boy's fondest wish, The glorious privilege of youth—to scrape the frosting dish!

On Saturdays I never left to wander far away, I hovered near the kitchen door on mother's baking day, The fragrant smell of cooking seemed to hold me in its grip, And naught cared I for other sports while there were sweets to sip, I little cared that all my chums had sought the brook to fish, I chose to wait that moment glad when I could scrape the dish.

Full many a slice of apple I have lifted from a pie Before the upper crust went on, escaping mother's eye; Full many a time my fingers small in artfulness have strayed Into some sweet temptation rare which mother's hands had made, But eager-eyed and watery-mouthed, I craved the greater boon, Of being allowed to clean the dish and lick the frosting spoon.

The baking days of old are gone, our children cannot know The glorious joys that childhood owned and loved so long ago, New customs change the lives of all and in their heartless way They've robbed us of the glad event once known as baking day, The stores provide our every need, yet many a time I wish Our kids could know that by-gone thrill and scrape the frosting dish.

CONFEDERATION.

The Opposition stock (to use an exchange phrase), took another drop the past few days when the Confederation cry, the trump card as Squires thought, was explained through the medium of the Telegram and the other papers supporting the Government. It is noteworthy too, in this connection that the Confederation cry has been killed so far as it applies to the Government candidates, by Coaker himself. Coaker's outpourings and diarous writings have at last achieved something, for they have warned the voters of the shallowness of the accusation which the Opposition has brought against the Government candidates of aspiring to a Confederation of Newfoundland and Canada. Coaker's diary has done more than that, for it has revealed to the people (more clearly at this time because the subject is more widely talked of), those who may be justly suspected of trying to bring about that Confederation. Whether Confederation will be for our benefit or not, is not the question at issue just now. For the last few elections the question of Confederation has been employed as a political factor, and Squires, knowing that Coaker's mad scheme of guaranteeing the price of fish is ridiculous as well as impracticable, and probably through his connections with Reid, having secured some documents touching on the subject, has shown his hand by announcing that Confederation is aimed at by the Government and H. D. Reid, of course, for the aggrandisement of both parties, and Mr. Squires reads out documentary evidence (purported) in proof of his assertion.

Were Squires coming before the public and making these assertions as one who had no stain on his escutcheon, and as one who had kept aloof from the Reids since being in political life, then it is possible that his address might have merited more serious consideration, but considering that Mr. Squires has never denied the taking of $5,000 from H. D. Reid, and the report that W. D. Reid financed the Star, his words are headed with suspicion. Furthermore the fact that Mr. Squires should have such private correspondence, is worthy of more than passing note. Add to this the fact that W. D. Reid, who is, and always has been an ardent confederatist, is stated to be directing as well as financing the Opposition campaign, and that W. F. Coaker, the ally of Squires was entertained by W. D. Reid at Ottawa, and we may well ask ourselves who are the real confederatists of today? If Squires had the principle of true manliness, would he not at once deny or acknowledge the truth of the reports circulated about him, before appealing to the people for their suffrages? Squires has not done so, and therefore has proved to the electorate his unfitness to be leader, and especially as leader of the old Liberal Party. As Squires has not acted the part of a man in the case of the reports circulated, it is not surprising that his talk of Confederation has been likewise doubted, and that the voters are rallying to the banner of the Liberal Progressive Party.

Whatever may be said for and against the Confederation of Newfoundland and Canada, one thing is certain, viz., that the beneficial results to Newfoundland of such a federation, will depend on the conditions under which the agreement between the two countries is united. Pursuing the subject further, it is evident to all thinking men that the conditions which a country is able to accede will depend in large measure not alone upon the men who are representing the land, but upon the credit of the land. We have had figures placed before us showing the annual surplus which has been over and above the annual expenditure, and we have the word of the Finance Minister, Sir M. P. Cashin, that our next year's surplus will be increased. This knowledge convinces us that the country is in a prosperous condition, (in fact it is well to note that even the Opposition concede that our general prosperity is more pronounced than it ever was). More than this, Sir M. P. Cashin, as the future Premier of our country, proposes to sustain the present prosperous condition, and at the same time make the necessary improvements in Newfoundland by retaining the present tariff rates, so that the country may not be forced into Confederation with Canada. The manifesto of Squires declares that taxation will be reduced, improvements carried out, and the country's credit still be maintained, which is impossible, therefore the only alternative is that Squires' policy, if it may be called such, means Confederation against our will, with our continental neighbor Canada.

The voters can now see for themselves what faces them if Squires is elected. As expected, Squires has not the manliness to declare that he is not favoring Confederation, and in view of his dealings, reported and otherwise with W. D. Reid, his declaration if forthcoming would be disbelieved. Admit, if you like, that Morine has expressed himself as being a confederate. Believe, if you like, the extract published by R. A. Squires, that Cashin is ready for it, but each and every reason brought by Squires and his colleagues against the Government is nullified by the unparalleled prosperity of our country at the present time, and by the statement contained in Sir M. P. Cashin's manifesto, that as yet no immediate reduction in taxation is possible. What a contrast is here presented between the two leaders. Sir M. P. Cashin is manly enough to say no reduction until we can afford it, and yet he says nothing of the fact that reduction of present tariff rates and an annual surplus make confederation unlikely, if not impossible, while Hon. R. A. Squires accuses the Government of confederatist plans, and yet proposes himself to reduce taxation, reduce our surplus, and bring Newfoundland to that state financially, where it will be glad to sue for confederation on any terms offered by Canada. That this is more than surmise, is borne out by all the facts given by different well-informed writers on the Squires revelations on the subject. With lawyer-like cuteness, Squires has accused the Government of the confederation plot merely to make the voters suspicious of Cashin, and to divert suspicion from himself, while he works in aiming for the success of that which he attributes to another. This may be termed by Mr. Squires as an attack upon him, but will not Mr. Squires acknowledge that he has laid himself open to such an attack by his conduct in the past, and by the many things which have been said of him and which he has not refuted, therefore giving all honest people just cause for doubting his present integrity or notions of reform. The taxation cry raised by Squires did not fool the electorate as he anticipated, and so the confederation cry was reverted to to bolster up the cause, but in vain. The confederation cry, like the taxation cry, has recoiled upon the head of the crier, and even as already the number of supporters of the Opposition has decreased, so will November 3rd publish to all the fact, that the Opposition are not wanted, for Squires can't be trusted.

For the Dependents

Of Our Soldiers and Sailors Who Died On Active Service.

We understand that the Government has decided to place the matter of the provision recently announced for the dependents of our soldiers and sailors who died on active service, in the hands of the Pension Board, and to associate with them in the framing of the regulations under which this financial recognition will be awarded, an Advisory Committee, consisting of the following gentlemen: Lieut.-Col. Bernard, M.C., Lieut.-Col. G. T. Carty, Major March, M.C., Fleet Paymaster Wells, of H.M.S. Briton (for Royal Naval Reserve), and Major Howley, Paymaster, Royal Nfld. Regiment. We feel confident that the public will agree that these gentlemen can be trusted to work out such a scheme for dealing with this problem as will commend itself to the country, and prove an assurance to the dependents of those who have given their lives for King and Country, that their claims will meet generous recognition. Meanwhile all parties who feel that they are entitled to consideration in this respect, are invited to forward their claims to the Pensions Board.

$20,000 Libel Suit

TAKEN BY SIR JOHN CROSBIE AGAINST THE "DAILY STAR"

Sir John Crosbie, this morning, instructed his Solicitors to take legal proceedings against the "Daily Star" newspaper for its charge last night that at the Royal Stores, on Saturday, he "used some very vile and offensive language concerning His Grace Archbishop Roche, and generally behaved himself like a drunken boozier." Sir John explains that this is only one form of the campaign which is being put up against him by certain elements of the Opposition Party. In the District of Port de Grave, the very contrary is being pursued, and it is being circulated everywhere throughout the Protestant sections of the District, that he is the unnamed Protestant who gave His Grace Archbishop Roche $10,000 towards the funds for the repairs to the R. C. Cathedral. Blackwood and Emerson are his Solicitors.

Leave for China.

Messrs. Kim Lung and Hong Chow, two Chinese gentlemen of the city, left by to-day's express for Hong Kong, China, where they will spend a holiday, returning probably next summer. Many of their fellow-countrymen were at the station to see them off. Messrs. Lung and Chow have been in the city for 7 or 8 years, and their holiday is well earned. There are now about 84 chinamen in the city.

VICTORY MESSAGES.

C. T. JAMES NOMINATED AT CHANNEL YESTERDAY.

Splendid Meeting at Burnt Islands Last Night—Government Candidate Will be Returned by Biggest Majority Ever Rolled Up in Burgoes and LaPelle.

ROSE BLANCHE, To-day.

Mr. Charles T. James was nominated at Channel yesterday, his principals being Capt. John H. Pike, Michael Forsey and James M. Currie. A splendid meeting was held by Mr. James in the Orange Hall at Burnt Islands, last night, when the Liberal Progressive candidate was given a hearty reception. The report of Mr. Small's meeting, as published in Star, Post and Advocate, altogether misleading. The Coaker-Squires candidate did not have sufficient attendance to warrant continuing his address, and consequently closed proceedings with an indefinite promise to come back later and finish. Mr. James holds meeting here to-night, and already there is a spontaneity of approval which insures him of being elected by the biggest majority ever rolled up for any previous candidate in Burgoes and LaPelle district. Cashin commands confidence and the man who will look after our interest is the man whom we intend to elect. Our choice is James, and no other need apply.

MORINE, WINSOR AND FORBES STORM BADGER'S QUAY, THE CENTRE OF UNIONISM IN BONAVISTA BAY.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)
BADGER'S QUAY, Oct. 14.

Morine, Winsor and Forbes canvassed this section to-day and held a meeting at Badger's Quay at night. The hall was crowded to overflowing, and great excitement prevailed. Mr. Morine had received a telegram warning him not to speak here and Capt. Winsor had received a letter to the same effect; both were signed F.P.U. Council, but who sent them it is impossible to find out. That these threats had been made was generally known and considerable tension prevailed as to what would happen. If, however, anybody here was behind these threats their sober second sense prevailed and not a single thing occurred to indicate any organized disorder. A bunch of boys and a few bedlamers started at the outset to interrupt, but Mr. Morine appealed to the audience to guarantee an orderly hearing, which they emphatically did. All the speakers were well received and made good speeches. Mr. Abraham Stratton acted as chairman but was not called upon at any time to maintain order. A better meeting was never held in this place and it was a marked contrast to the meeting in 1913. Even opponents admitted that the Government candidates were fit and proper men, though they objected to the side they were on. This locality will give them splendid vote. Publish over my name.

This bill, it is alleged, was made out and presented to the Reid Newfoundland Company for payment by Mr. Squires early in November, 1916, and whilst he was Minister of Justice. The facts in connection with it are said to be that one of the officials of the Reid Newfoundland Company called on Mr. Squires at his law offices about the 1st November, 1916, to get from him a statement of account of monies collected by that gentleman for the Reid Newfoundland Company, and also to ask him for a settlement of his electric light bill, which had run up to something over $1,000; that Mr. Squires in the course of the conversation remarked that the Reid Newfoundland Company owed him something for professional services, and took a sheet of his letter paper off the desk and proceeded to make out a bill; that just as he commenced to write he paused, and, in the presence and hearing of the official of the Reid Newfoundland Company, above referred to, discussed his position as Minister of Justice and stated that he would date the bill for services back to the time before he took office as such; that he then proceeded to write out the bill as above, and that when the bill reached the Reid Newfoundland Company, Sir William D. Squires' $1,500 Bill to the Reids for Professional Services.

On several occasions it has been stated in the public press that Mr. R. A. Squires, whilst he occupied the position of Minister of Justice, presented a bill to the Reid Newfoundland Company for $1,500 for alleged professional services. The following is a facsimile of the bill:—

$1500.00

This bill, it is alleged, was made out and presented to the Reid Newfoundland Company for payment by Mr. Squires early in November, 1916, and whilst he was Minister of Justice. The facts in connection with it are said to be that one of the officials of the Reid Newfoundland Company called on Mr. Squires at his law offices about the 1st of November, 1916, to get from him a statement of account of monies collected by that gentleman for the Reid Newfoundland Company, and also to ask him for a settlement of his electric light bill, which had run up to something over $1,000; that Mr. Squires in the course of the conversation remarked that the Reid Newfoundland Company owed him something for professional services, and took a sheet of his letter paper off the desk and proceeded to make out a bill; that just as he commenced to write he paused, and, in the presence and hearing of the official of the Reid Newfoundland Company, above referred to, discussed his position as Minister of Justice and stated that he would date the bill for services back to the time before he took office as such; that he then proceeded to write out the bill as above, and that when the bill reached the Reid Newfoundland Company, Sir William D. Reid was in Montreal, and those in charge of the Company here at the time knew nothing about it or about the services alleged by Mr. Squires to have been performed, so the matter had to be referred to Sir William D. Reid before it could be dealt with. Mr. Squires' answer to these allegations has not yet been disclosed, but one fact does appear from the Reid Company's official records, namely, that this account was settled with Mr. Squires in October, 1917, eleven months after it is alleged that the above bill was made out, and seven years after the alleged services therein set out performed, and also just about the time that Mr. Squires received the $5,000 in Bank Notes when he was Chairman of a Committee of the Executive Council to arbitrate on Reid claims. Mr. Squires, in his public utterances and writings, now claims that the Reid Newfoundland Company is a burden and imposition upon this Colony with the assent and connivance of the Government; and that the Government is controlled by men who are associated with and in the pay of the Reid Newfoundland Company. He also claims that he is the one fearless, independent, incorruptible patriot, who will relieve the Colony of this burden and who will not, to use his own words, "permit himself to be bribed, bullied or blackmailed into departing from his loyalty to the interests of Newfoundland in dealing with this Reid octopus."

This is very fine talk, but we think it not unfair to claim that before Mr. Squires can expect any intelligent voter to swallow it, he must explain and disprove the reports in circulation with regard to his connection with the Reid Company, and more particularly with Sir William D. Reid. The allegations against Mr. Squires are:—
(1) That Mr. Squires, whilst Minister of Justice, presented to the Reid Newfoundland Company for payment, a bill for $1,500 for professional services; and that the above print is a facsimile of the said bill, and that the circumstances under which the said bill was presented are as detailed above.
(2) That whilst Mr. Squires was a member of the Executive Government and member of a Committee of the Executive appointed to deal with certain differences that had arisen between the Reid Newfoundland Company and the Government, he was given by the Reid Newfoundland Company the sum of $5,000 in Bank Notes.
(3) That Mr. Squires afterwards asked Mr. H. D. Reid to sign a letter or statement designed to deceive the public into believing that he had never received this amount of $5,000; and that Mr. Reid refused to do so.

Mr. Squires has taken proceedings by way of libel for a variety of alleged causes of action within the past year or so, but of all the alleged libels on Mr. Squires there is none more damaging to his character and reputation than the statement with regard to the receipt of $5,000 above referred to, so long as he refrains from explaining it or from taking action to vindicate his character. We take the position that this matter ought to be dealt with and cleared up in the interest of this Colony and of the public. Mr. Squires is presenting himself to the electorate as a fit man to be entrusted with the care of the Administration of the Government of this Colony. We say that he cannot expect the public to consider him a fit and proper man to be entrusted with the conduct of the public business while he lies silent under this charge, and we say that whilst he has held office in the past he has by this transaction, as illustrating his relationship with the Reids, raised justifiable doubts in the mind of the public as to whether he could be relied upon to uphold the rights of the public in future. To sum up we say that for the reasons above stated, with others that we may state later, if necessary, SQUIRES CANNOT BE TRUSTED.

DOING HIMSELF WELL.
The novelty of having his hair trimmed by a lady barber appealed to a mildly intoxicated Londoner who entered an establishment where girls are employed as tonorialists.

Loath to leave the chair after his hair had been trimmed, the Cockney said to the girl:

"Now, gimme a shave."
The girl performed the task and awaited further instructions.

"You may put on a couple of hot towels," said the customer.
After the hot towels had been applied he enjoyed a face massage and permitted his hair to be anointed with perfume.

"Anything else?" sweetly asked the maid.
"Yes; you may pull a couple of teeth."

AN ESSAY ON HENS.
Here is a schoolboy's description of hens—"Hens is curious animals. They don't have no nose, nor no teeth, nor no ears. They swallow the vittles whole, and chew it up in their crops inside of 'em. The outside of hens is generally put into pillows and feather dusters. A hen is very much smaller than many other animals, but they'll dig up more growing plants than anything that ain't a hen. Hens is useful to lay eggs for plum pudding. Hens has got wings, and can fly when they are scart. Hens sometimes make very fine spring chickens."

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.
There is little change in Newfoundland Scotch cured herring values since last reports, despite the fact that one local dealer is anxious to see 1919 medium winters go down in this column (or rather, up!) to the modest figure of $22.50. According to this "authority," 500 lbs. were recently disposed of at this price, but confirmation is still sadly lacking. As a matter of fact, those goods have even dropped a little below last week's quotations, and are in fair demand at $9@12, whilst large winters are quoted $11@14. Matsuls and matties remain about a level with last week's figures, being quoted $11.50@13 and $10@12, respectively. No heavy arrivals of fall herring have been reported.

Mrs. Purcell Had to Stay in Bed Many a Day

Was So Run-Down Her Condition Was Alarming—Husband Praises Tanlac.

"Before my wife took Tanlac her health was so completely broken down that I would go home every night expecting to find her down in bed," was the statement made by Christopher Purcell when he called at Kinley's drug store in Halifax, the other day. Mr. Purcell and his wife, Mrs. Stella Purcell, reside in Portuguese Cove, N.S., where Mr. Purcell has been in the fishing business all his life.

"My wife," continued Mr. Purcell, "was subject to terrible headaches, and when these spells would come on her she would be in such agony that she could not do a bit of her household work for nine or ten days at a time and many a morning she was not even able to get out of bed. The aching and pain was right above her eyes and she said it felt just like her head would split wide open, and nearly all the time she was badly constipated. Her appetite was poor and she lost about fifteen pounds in weight and got so weak she could barely drag around and hardly a day passed that she wasn't complaining about her awful condition. Many a night she would be so nervous and restless that it would be one and two o'clock before she could go to sleep, and her condition became so alarming that any day I was expecting to see her break down completely, and suffer a long spell of sickness."

"We had been reading in the Halifax papers about Tanlac and how it was helping people so much, and we decided to try it. My wife has taken three bottles of Tanlac and you just ought to see how much she has improved, why, she never has a sign of those headaches now, does all her household work and is feeling stronger and better than she has in years. She has a splendid appetite and is picking up in weight right along, and is not nervous or constipated and can sleep fine every night that comes. My wife is looking better and feeling better, and it is just simply remarkable how Tanlac has overcome her troubles and put her on her feet again, and I join with her in praising Tanlac and recommending it to other suffering people."
Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative. —adv.

THE BADGE OF RESPECTABILITY.

The silk hat is to-day in its early nineties. It has been the mark of the gentleman, the climber, the dandy, the politician, the Sunday churchgoer, the undertaker, the negro minstrel, the financier, the gambler, the book agent,
the professor. And it has been worn by thousands of meek men who thought it was the thing to wear. It is dying, not of old age, but of a final appreciation of its ugliness and discomfortableness. —New York World.

REAL AND SHAM UMBRELLAS.

It is said that Jonas Hanway, the first man who carried an umbrella in England, was ridiculed and almost mobbed. The prejudice is evidently not dead yet. The umbrella is gradually disappearing; it is now diminished to the size of a lady's parasol, and will soon be no larger than a hat. The manufacturers have freed their minds of the vulgar idea of keeping off the rain, and it is easy for one carrying the ornamental device to be drenched to the skin in five minutes. Some modern Hanways may startle the fashionable world by sheltering himself with a real umbrella. But it will probably have to be made to order. —Toronto

ADMIRAL JELICOE'S ADVICE.

Admiral Jellicoe is taking the view
which might naturally be expected, when he foresees the end of British sea supremacy "unless the United Kingdom and the Dominions are prepared to put their hands in their pocket-ets."

The Admiral need not be alarmed.
The British people have no intention of allowing the fleet to decrease to a point that would be unsafe. There will always be a few vessels in stock,
and a watchful eye will be kept on the round world to see what any prospective enemy may be doing.

But this is not at all the same thing as keeping in commission an enormous navy which will have no occupation except to wander around the seven seas or become an obstruction in harbors wanted for purpose of commerce.

To keep on building vessels of existing types, is a mere tautology. Why not give the taxpayer a rest? Supremacy is a relative matter. As long as no other nation starts building a big navy, the British might very well use their money for something else during the next few years.

Admirals are excellent men in their way, but their view is apt to be one-sided. They do not have to foot the bill. —Vancouver Sun.

SPENDING TO AVOID TAXES.

In an indirect way, one of the causes of the present extravagant expenditure in this country is the fact that the Dominion government is deeply in debt.
This debt of course must be paid,
principal and interest, and the only place to get the money is from the pockets of those who reside in Canada. Consequently a lot of men are saying to themselves that they might as well spend it, because if they don't the government will come along and take a good deal of it away from them.

In so far as this spirit leads merely to the trying up of an over-proportion of capital in buildings or plant, no great harm may be done. The visit of the tax gatherer may thereby delay
but is not eventually escaped.

The case, however, is quite otherwise if the needless expenditure is for luxuries which are consumed and disappear. Men who are over-indulging themselves and their households in order to escape their fair share of the public burden, are falling in their duty. They are in the same class as the shirkers and slackers who took to the bush so as to avoid going to the trenches.

In fact the tax dodger is rather the worse of the two. There is some excuse for a reluctance to incur physical danger, but to be too fond of money is notoriously the root of all evil. —

Alarming Gifts.

Our Monarchs are Often Recipients of Useless and Startling Presents.

The recent visit of Abyssinian nobles to London, who are bearers of silk and ivory from their empress,
and who will take back to their monarch on their return gifts from King George and Queen Mary, only serves to emphasize the fact that the gifts given and received by rulers have not always been so fitting or so welcome.

Washington society was greatly amused just before the war by the singular present the late Mr. Roosevelt made to a bride of that city.
This was the tail of a rhino, unmounted—a hunting trophy, and doubtless highly prized by the donor.
It was, moreover, a gift which had cost more than mere cash.

Pipes for the Queen's Use.
Even the presents which Royalty bestow upon Royalty sometimes cause embarrassment. In 1883 Queen Victoria sent Sir Richard Burton on a mission to the King of Dahomey bearing various presents, including a silk tent and a handsome silver pipe.
The King was grateful, but added that, as the tent was too small to sit under in that climate, and he preferred a clay pipe to a metal pipe, he would have been better pleased with a carriage-and-pair and a white wife.

However, to show appreciation of her Majesty's kind intentions, he sent in return some native pipes and tobacco for her own smoking, a collection of loin cloths, and an imbrella
to be held over her head when drinking.

Some years ago, King Edward,
when taking his usual summer holiday at Marienbad, received in twenty days over three hundred presents, including jewellery—from studs to gold watches—cigars and cigarettes,
and an assortment of other articles
from gloves, ties, and walking-sticks to sweets and scented soap. These were never accepted.

One of the funniest presents King Edward ever received was a prize Potato weighing over five pounds. The sender evidently imagined that the King of England lived at Westminster, for the potato was addressed to "House of Parliament, England," and the postmark was "Vermont."

But the weirdest present to Royalty surely is the mummified hand of an Egyptian prince who lived three thousand years ago. It was presented to the king by a famous Egyptologist,
and is mounted as a paperweight.

Cured Herring.

Recent reports indicate an unusual scarcity of Alaskas this season, estimate of the probable pack running all the way from 25,000 to 35,000 barrels. The few arrivals on the New York market are going into consumption just as rapidly as they appear.
Southeastern Alaska cure, in 1,200
count barrels, are being quoted $12.50
while Prince William Sounds, Scotch cure, are selling around $18.50 in standard barrels of 500-550 count,
and 15.50 in barrels of 700-800 count.
It is the consensus of opinion that this year's pack will not greatly ex-has ever heard Mr. News orate in the

 have been a valuable acquisition to Squires on the political platform; and on the other hand, anybody who has ever listened to Mr. Salter, popularly the best political meeting ever held would not compensate him for leaving the one, the George Street Methodist people are now to be asked to give the other. The Campaign opens to-

HR. GRACE, Oct. 13th, 1919.
 Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—For some time past I have been somewhat amused in watching the antics of the the Coker-Squires political firm in their endeavors to select three candidates to oppose the invincible Government Trio,
 the big-hearted Hon. Arch Piccott, Edward Parsons and Josiah Goss, men
 in every sense of the word, mentally and physically. It is true we hear Mr.
 Piccott has been somewhat unwell
 for some time past, but with his robust constitution and strong will-power he will soon be on deck again, take his trick at the wheel, and pilot the ship safely into port in the House of Assembly. In this he will be ably assisted by his tried and trusty chief officers, Messrs. Parsons and Goss, backed up by two thousand of the bone and sinew of the District from Coley's Point to Murphy's Wall on the Carbonar Road.

The Cokerites have had a hard time of it in their endeavors to form
 up their "Three Tailors of Tooley Street Combination," but it is said that they have at last managed to lick
 the affair into shape by putting a stitch here and a patch there, etc. The last patch they put on, was in the shape of Mr. Dugald Munn, after they had removed Mr. Frank Archibald. It may be that Mr. Munn will stick on, or perhaps, they will try another patch.

The chief of the leaky combination is Mr. Arthur Barnes, school-teacher, or ex-school-teacher, bearing the title of "Doctor." I am really unaware of the great benefit conferred upon humanity in general, or the District of Harbor Grace in particular, by Mr.
 Barnes, that caused him to be burdened with part of the alphabet after his name. Certain I am that he did not trouble himself about this district while he was in the House of Assembly. He was not in his seat twenty four hours before he was "muzzled"
 and remained so during the whole time
 he (mis) represented Harbor Grace District. During those and succeeding years Mr. Barnes, never troubled himself about the district. We have never seen him, and I am sure other portions of the District can say the same.
 Time and again the people of this district required all the assistance that every well-wisher could give it, but where was Mr. Barnes? Some of his cronies say that he possesses a wonderful flow of oratory, that he is master of the English language, etc.
 Well all I can say is, that if so, he has kept it all to himself. No part of this district has ever heard his voice raised to benefit the people, but that is, one thing evident he took good care to benefit himself. Honestly, now, Mr.
 Barnes, have you ever been the means of benefitting any object started in this district, or have you ever benefited any individual to the amount of a five cent peice?

What a contrast to the jovial, big-hearted Hon. Arch Piccott! When any of us were caught in St. John's short of our passage, required a berth to the ice, or were seeking advice or assistance of any sort, was not Piccott always to be found, only too ready and willing to do all in his power for us.
 He never turned from us because we were rigged out in our fishing clothes.
 We were always given a seat in his office, made welcome and invariably left him fully satisfied with the result of our visit. Can the same be said of Mr. Barnes? Skipper Ned Parsons is one of ourselves. He is ever ready to do all in his power for us. He cannot do everything, but who can we get to do more, that is what I would like to know. The poorest of us can approach him and make our troubles known, because we all know skipper Ned as we affectionately call him, being one of ourselves. Then there is Josiah Goss. Who does not know Josiah, from Cape Chidley to Harbor Main? He is an all round good fellow, and will well represent us in the Assembly.
 His very appearance will command respect, but what respect can we have for the whipper-snapper, Arthur Barnes, who, has never deigned to notice us or trouble himself about us—till now, and now the people of this district won't trouble themselves about him. Squires-Coker Party, how are you? We have enough of the Squires sample in our poor relief expenditure,
 and how it was not done, when poor people were permitted to go from absolute want and starvation, without a hand being raised to save them. Oh!
 yes, Squires Party, is it? We have enough of the Squires benefaction and interest in our welfare already, to our grief.

I remain Sir, Yours truly,
 MORE ANON.

Who's Who

AND WHY IN NEWFOUNDLAND AND CANADA—1919-20.

"Who's Who and Why" is designed to provide a record of the men and women who in one capacity or another are contributing to the building up of Canada and Newfoundland.

In the brief account of their career in these pages their relation is shown to the outstanding events of the history of the sister dominions, and the book, therefore, has a value for the historian quite beyond its use as a current work of reference. Included also are portraits of persons dealt with in the biographical sketches, thus adding to the permanent value of the book. Only a few copies on sale.

PRICE $8.50.
