THE NEW PROPLE'S PARTY

BEN BUTLER OUTLINES ITS VIEWS AND POLICY.

A Workingman's Platform-The Tariff Issue—The Panama Canal Must Not Be controlled by England. LOWELL, Mass., Aug. 18.—General Benjamin F. Butler's letter of acceptance of the presidential nomination tendered him is given to the press to night. He explains that he has issued the address at an earlier day than he intended at the desire of many trusted and valued friends, He had hoped to have had the advantage of a distinct statement of principles by the democratic candidate for the presidency, and ascertained from his own declarations whether, recounting some of his public opinions, he might not show himself better than the official action of his party has shown itself by the platform. He gives a succinct account of his stewardship of the interests committed to his care at the democratic convention at Chicago of which he gives a grip if elected. Butler invites the co-opbut somewhat against his own judgment. opinions, he might not show himself better than the official action of his party has shown itself by the platform. He gives a succinct account of his stewardship of the interests committed to his care at the democratic convention at Chicago of which he says: 'I could substantially present but one plank, the most important of all, the protection of the American laborer and producer, without which in my judgment there can be no prosperity to this country. And this was voted down in the convention by a vote of 712½ to 97½. He presents a history of his connection with the committee on the platform and sub-committee on the tariff plank thereof, and states that the rejection of the section declaring 'That the faw imposing duties for revenue should be so adjusted as best to promote American industry, to cherish and foster American labor, and not create monopolies,' made his candidate and foster American industry, to cherish and foster American labor, and not create monopolies,' made his candidate and foster American labor, and not create monopolies,' made his candidate and foster American labor, and not create monopolies,' made his candidate and foster American labor, and not create monopolies,' made his candidate and foster American labor, and not create monopolies,' made his candidate and foster American labor, and not create monopolies,' made his candidate and foster American labor, and not come with us. The wind and the Alarm was manned by Rear-Com. Ander so an and a crew of nine, while the new some and a crew of nine, while the new some and candidates and holds them firmly in its grip if elected. Butler invites the co-operation and fusion in establishing a people of seven.

The vint and the Alarm had the honor, much to every one's surprise of "carrying the by opposite little themselves democrate the ministration and redress the wrongs done by opposite legislation. In cenclusion, the value rest is to every one's surprise of "carrying the voul of the world and the Alarm had the hand the Alarm had the honor, much to committee and their rejection and subse-quent adoption of a platform, which he describes as the resolutions of expedients to catch votes by indirection, deception and illusion, not the declarations of those people." He continues: "The country has nad no experience for nearly a quarter of a century of what democracy would do if they had the power so that the people are obliged to require most explicit pledges from them of intended action before we can put the government in their hands. But the farmer and laboring man do know that the democratic any other house of representatives has ever appropriated in time of peace. We also know that the democratic majority would have made a free trade tariff, conent war tariff so far as regards its monstrous inequalities, by a horizontal reduction of the tariff to break down very ition of the tariff to break down very industries, and ingmen and the home markets of American producers. Who does not know that very fear of the action of the democracy fear of the action of the democracy in congress has so paralyzed American enterprise and business that mills are everywhere closing, mines shut up, furnaces blown out and every kind of employment so curtailed that the mechanic and workingman are not earning enough to support life in comfort; so that the farmer is even deprived of a home market and crushed down by discriminating rates of transportation, finds his corn, wheat and wool lower than it has been within and wool lower than it has been within the present generation. Can the people therefore trust the machine democracy with power upon a shifting, evasive and deceptive platform?

He arraigns the republican party for consivance in the introduction of pauper contract labor, says its tariff legislation is claimed to protect and cherish American claimed to protect and cherish American labor but always as an adjunct to American capital, and adds that experience has shown that the laboring classes have nothing to hope from the republican party. The first and only object of protection in laying duties should be to protect labor and never to protect capital, which can be left to protect itself, as it is amply able to do. It should, moreover, be restrained from getting more than its fair from getting more than its fair share of the profits of production and transportation. He says further the republican party has in its ranks many good, true and conscientious men who followed its fortunes and carried its elections in its rights, and claimed to protect the laborer of the north in his wages. I call the attention of such men to the fact that that party has failed to do either. Laborthat party has failed to do either. Laboring men are out of employment and starving after a quarter of a century of republican rule. Nay more. It is well-known in Massachusetts and Rhode Island and how far in other parts of the north I leave the good and just-minded of these localities to speak, capital has coerced the votes of the laboring men to its own purposes by threats of ing men to its own purposes by threats of intimidation, and in some cases worse means. The negro of the south also cannot go to the ballot-box for fear of the shotgun, and if he does the ballot-box stuffer puts in two votes to neutralize his one. To the substantiation of these facts I call upon the laboring men of both sections to bear witness if it is not so. You know as I know, you feel as I feel upon the matter. I submit this matter to the producer, whether the farmer, the mechanic or the laborer, whether England seizes it by her immense navy, and from thence can ravage and blockade our whole pacific coast. This she sannot do now because she owns no

he has any hope as against the inroads of capital upon the rights of labor or the grasp of monopolies which absorb all the profits of production until we have in this country even in its youth life of nations richer men than in any coaling station nearer than the Sandwich islands, from which it will be quite impossible to supply a blockading fleet. Our three systems of railroads across the continent when run in competition and not in collusion can carry our productions to the western coast cheaply enough, and in that case at least freight will be paid to our own citizens. So in peace or war we must control that canal. The republican party has done nothing to the protect interests and the dignity of country in this behalf, and the democracy refuse to promise even to do anything. Experience, the best teacher, therefore established the fact that commerce, the industries, the laboring mar, the antimonopolist, the greenbacker, the farmer or other small producers, all of whose interest are identical, can get or hope nothing from either or both the present or ganized parties.

The republican marty is bound hand and commerce that left their moorings in Toronto harbor on Saturday. Mary Elizabeth Glenn, aged 23, who resides in Ameliasburg, being seriously affected by the heat, walked off an open door at the rear of the hall, which was formerly used for bringing in baggage from the hoist, and which opens into a passage between this and the adjoining building. A young man tried to warn her of her danger, but she paid no attention to his cry. Falling from a height of about forty feet she struck on her breast, instant death being the result. The coroner summoned a jury.

An Unfortunate Family. Scotland, Oxford Co., Aug. 18 .- As some children were passing through a ploughed field they were horrified to find ploughed field they were horrined to find a dead body lying in a furrow near the fence. The body was identified by the clothing as that of William Winegarden, a young man, who was last seen on Friday afternoon. A bottle of whisky in his pocket explains his sad history. This makes the third son suddenly called away in a short time, one by lightning and one howed to death. On this one the coroner burned to death. On this one the coroner considered an inquest unnecessary, and the body was buried this afternoon.

Not in Time to Save His Child. Brantford, Aug. 18.—John McGar-rell's daughter Mabel, aged 5 years, running along the canal bank this morning was tripped on a stick, rolled into the canal and was drowned. Mr. McGarrell is employed in the starch works close to where she fell in, and was notified as soon as the accident happened. He ran and jumped into the canal and found the child, but life natch, in which none of the yachts' powers were brought out, in the order, Cygnet, Aileen, Verve, Oriole and Alarm. Here the night was passed and anchors weighed on Monday morning for a start home. The Alarm was the first to start, followed by the Verve. The Oriole started shortly afterwards, and the Aileen and Cygnet moved off together about an hour behind them.

The wind was pretty fresh and a good trial of speed was expected. The yachts soon were separated, each taking what was thought the most advisable course. When off the Humber they had come together to a certain extent, and another surprise was in store when it was found that the Alarm was as near as pessible leading the fleet to windward. The race now lay between her and the Aileen, the Oriole gradually dropping off, the Cygnet and Verve having been quite distanced. The Queen's wharf was passed by the cutter twenty minutes a head of the Alarm, which was followed at an interval of ten minutes by the schooner. The Verve and Cygnet passed in this order, the first about an hour, and the second about eighty minutes afterwards. The cruise was pronounced by all as one of the most pleasant on record, and the success of the Alarm was thoroughly appreciated by the fleet generally.

Belleville, Aug. 18.—On Saturday night a terrible accident occurred at the salvation army barricks, situated in the running race at Gates' course, but that project falling through the Merchants' Driving club—a new organization—decided to make their debut. A couple of the members volunteered to give a suit of horse clothing and a whip to be competed for. Much interest was felt in the races, the articles being trotted for separately, and there was a large gathering of the fancy. Messrs. Alf. Brown, John Gillespie and Lem Felcher occupied positions in the stand. The first race trotted was for the clothing, which brought out half-adozen contestants, who finished according to the following summary: mile record of 8.03 made in 1853. The colt was foaled in 1854. In 1856 the hoof colt was foaled in 1854. In 1856 the hoof was presented to the veteran driver L. T. Mcquivy, by Edward Marshall. McQuivy presented it to John S. It may be doubted whether England ever had a prime minister whose home policy was more popular than Mr. Gladstone's is to-day. The course of events during the past few weeks has shown that in this respect he is most emphatically "the people's William." Next to him in popularity comes Mr. Bright, who is still "the tribune of the people," notwithstanding his undeniable opposition to trades unions and factory legislation. Speaking of the great liberal demonstration and "march past" of July 21, the Pall Mall Gazette takes note of the pronounced enthusiasm of the crowd satisfactory, features of the day's show. In home policy Gladstone carries all before him; and the strongest of the tory leaders are but as manikins in his path.

But that the country has equal confidence in his foreign policy is something that not even his most enthusiastic supporter who is strong at all other points is weak here if anywhere. Be it remarked, too, that Mr. Bright, the statesman who most nearly approaches him in popularity, stands in about the same position with regard to the popular English idea of what home and foreign policy respectively shall

The coolness between England and Germany is increasing, so says a cable despatch. Now Englishmen certainly do not down to Bismarck; they would any day try "a spirited foreign policy" rather than submit to that. But they may question whether it be after all a wise thing to adopt in African affairs a policy calculated to bring England into collision with Gershould be ?" they will ask. As we have before pointed out, the English tories lean towards Germany, the liberals towards France. "It is certain," says the despatch referred to, "that if the tories came into possession of the government, England will speedily become a alliance was the very thing necessary to put a check on Russia. The smile on the girl's face wavered.

"I spoke thoughtlessly," she said; "but if Ralph Greeley is what you have hinted, my careless words will hold good."
"I am satisfied," her father said quietly.
A little later Idelle left the house and waadered down by a sunny dell, her thoughts filled with her father's words as well as her own.

"It was a foolish speech of mine," she said; "even if Ralph had been unworthy, that would be no reason why I should marry King Emerson, whom I almost shrink from, without really knowing why."

cousins, but King was the master of broad lands and sunny vales, while Ralph was little more than penniless; but idelle—well, Idelle loved him.

"My darling," she murmured, "they cannot make me believe ill of you."

She had said that King Emerson was almost as handsome as her loves but the most as handsome as her lover, but the the truth was he was the handsomer man of the two, but lacking the magnetic charm of Ralph's cheery face.

Both men were tall and finely featured, but King's face was more regular in out-line, his eyes deeper and darker, his mus-tache more silky and sweeping, his manner more distinguished; but there was a subtle charm in the other that made him the favorite of old and young—a charm in the honest eyes and kindly smile that went a long way with women in general, and with Idelle Meredith in particular.

Idelle walked on till she came to a grassy nook, and then she sat down to rest a few minutes, but she was scarcely sitting a moment ere she rose to her feet again, for a woman's voice, low and pleading, fell on her ears—the voice of Esther Haven. Scarcely conscious of what she did, Idelle peeped through the tangle of briarwood, and her face grew strangely pale. Esther's companion was her lover, Ralph Greeley.

Almost breathless she stood, while clear and distinct Esther's voice fell on her

"For God's sake, Ralph, give me the certificate. You will not do this. Oh, Father in heaven, what shall I do? Oh, Ralph, give it to me. I would sooner die than face—" That was all Idelle heard as, white and trembling, she sank back on her seat. All she had heard—but enough. Her father had spoken the truth. She sat there stunned and dazed for more than a quarter of an hour; then suddenly the voices fell on her ears again—at least, her lover's musical voice.

Esther Haven rang in her ears. She would be there as well—she would plead with him to do Esther justice.

A few minutes before nine Idelle stole out, and as the bell rang out the hour she stood on the bridge, and saw him standing

"No," he answered, quickly; then seeing the scorn and arger in her eyes, the quick gesture with which she shrank from him, he held out his hands.

How it happened, who has known of her being on the bridge, Idelle Meredith could hardly tell, but she was the principal witness against the man, who, no matter what he was, she loved with every chord of her heart.

Her anguish was pitiful to behold as she told her story, and sister-women wept in sympathy as, when all was told, with a low cry she had fallen back, white and senseless, and been taken from the court box, the prisoner looked at him with an expression it would be hard to understand, but King gave his evidence, which amounted to very little, coolly and clearly.

'You here?" he said. "Yes, I," she answered, and then she sank upon her knees. "Once more, and for the last time," she said, "I ask you to make me your wife. Have pity on me and my child, and give us a right to your name. For God's sake pity me in my anguish!"

"Don't make a fool of yourself!" he said, "I would not marry you were you the last woman on the earth. Besides, in a few days I wed the purest maiden in England—Idelle Meredith."

The girl rose to her feet, her face convulsed with anger and dark with new-born deadly hatred of this man who had wrecked

"You will never marry Idelle Mere-

The man laughed,
"We will see," he said.
"We will see," she repeated.
Late that night Idelle sat alone, thinking of the future and what it would be to her as King Emerson's wife.

"Better death," she thought in the anguish of her soul. anguish of her soul.

Suddenly the sound of a light tap at the window roused her, but before she could rise, the casement, which opened on the balcony, was pushed in and a girl young in years, but weary and careworn, stood before her.

"You are Idelle Meredith?" the stranger said, and then, in the silence of the night, she told the horrified girl a story that midd her grow fairt.

"You will tell this to morrow at the court?" Idelle said.

"I will," the stranger answered.

The next day rose bright and cloudless,

There is the proof of the marriage—the cause of the crime and—" King Emerson had leaped to his feet, but a hand had been laid on his shoulder and he had sunk back again, while the crowd in the court room swayed backward and forward in their excitement.

Then suddenly a wild cheer went forth, for Ralph Greeley was a free man.

The next moment, however, the cheers were changed to cries of horror, for, before they had thought of such a thing, King Emerson had drawn a pistol from his pocket, and pressing the muzzle close to his heart, had fallen, bathed in his own life-blood, at their feet.

"Can y' a give your answer to-day, let it pass. I must let it pass for a while. I have waited patiently; your lover has been patience itself, but we want your answer now."

"My lover!" the girl repeated. "King Emerson is not that, father."

"He is your lover—at least he loves you. The question is, Will you marry King Emerson or not?"

"You give me a choice," with a faint smile; "then I will not. Oh, father!"

"Then I will go as well," Idelle said. Ralph Greeley looked after her.

"If she believes ill of me, and mistrusts me with so little cause," he said, "I will let it pass for a while. I can make no explanation yet."

The next morning the wildest excitement prevailed in Mount Henry. The dead body of Esther Haven had been tound. She had been thrown over the little rustic bridge, and had fallen on the rocks below. A little later the excitement grew more intense, and it had reached its height when Ralph Greeley was arrested for the murder. Suspicion had linked their names to gether for some time before.

Best Goods Are Put in Smallest Parcels.

—The old proverb is certainly true in the case of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are little, sugar-wrapped parcels, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, containing as much cathartic power as is done up in the biggest, most repulsive looking pill. Unlike the big pills, however, they are mild and pleasant in their operation—do not produce griping pains, nor render the bowels costive after using.

The Precious Bables.

The Precious Babies. From the London Telegraph.

Miss Florence Nightingale has long ago pointed out the need of fresh air, and plenty of it, in nurseries and bedrooms plenty of it, in nurseries and bedrooms.

"It is all nonsense," she writes, "what some old nurses say, that you cannot give a baby fresh air without giving it a chill. Depend upon this, the less fresh air you give to its lungs, and the less water you give to its skin, the more liable it will be to colds and chills."

When King Emerson entered the witness box, the prisoner looked at him with an expression it would be hard to understand, but King gave his evidence, which amounted to very little, coolly and clearly.
Yes, he had seen his cousin and the dead woman together more than once.
Yes, he had heard rumor connect their name.

Yes, he had advised the prisoner to marry her.
At these words the prisoner leaped to his feet, his eyes blazing.
"You scoundre!" he cried.
Then his counsel interfered, and he sat down again.
Late that evening King Emerson was closeted with Idelle's father, and he held a paper in his hand.
"To-morrow week," he said, "the debt comes due. If Idelle is my wife on that day, you are safe."
"You have her promise."

DELITIUM TREMENS.

Experience of a Victim - Vagaries and Visions Buring Bellrium.

From the Denicer Opinion.

I had been on an ununually protracted jamboree, and it frightens me now when I recall the immense quantity of mixed drinks I absorbed during its continuance. For about three weeks I had been industricully putting one drunk on .pop of another, but during the odd fleeting moments of partial sobriety thought of "letting up" and "swearing of" for a season. One mights a shadow passed swiftly before my face, preceded by a peculiar dull sensation in that portion of the cranium, which is allotted by phrenologists to the organ of veneration. The numbness (which in the main very nearly expresses the nature of the sensation) from this point spread gradually downward. Its progress was salarmingly apparent to me that I hastily made my excuses to the party, bade hem good night, and repaired to my room, hoping that an application of cold water and a good night's rest might to such an extent that all objects had to my room, hoping that an application of cold water and a good night's rest might to such an extent that all objects had to my suison the letters in the name of the thoroughfare by any knowledge gained from the sign. Arrived at my room I saturated a towel with ice-cold water, enveloped my head with it, turned the such an unreliable, go as-you-please manner that I wouldn's have known the name of the thoroughfare by any knowledge gained from the sign. Arrived at my room and the cities of the contract of t ner that I wouldn't have known the name of the thoroughfare by any knowledge I gained from the sign. Arrived at my room I saturated a towel with ice-cold water, enveloped my head with it, turned the light low, and retired. While walking along the street, when my sight began to be affected, several times a shadow seemed to flit pass me to the right and left and sometimes directly across my face—very similar to the flight of a hat. Now, while lying on the bed, this singular experience was often repeated, the shadow seeming to pass between my vision and the ceiling, completely obscuring it from view for the instant. I was perfectly aware that this peated, the shadow seeming to pass between my vision and the celling, completely obscuring it from view for the instant. I was perfectly aware that this was a vagary of a disordered brain, but still hoped and believed that rest would bring relief. Confident in this conviction, I endeavored to compose myself to sleep, but the nubness increased rather than diminished, the bewildering shadows continued to annoy my vision, and I was sono convinced that sleep, under such circumstances, was out of the question.

At last the uncanny thoughts and feelings consequent upon my delirium became too much for my nerves to stand, and disturbed me to such an extent that I arose and repaired to the nearestall-night barroom, hoping, amid the cheerful convivial company I was sure to find there, toget rid of the oppressive sensations. I took a seat near a party who were engaged in some game of cards and endeavored to divert myself by watching them plays. While doing so I imagined I saw a monstrous rat scoot across the floor. The sober second thought which I was enabled to evolve from my reasoning facuities by an extraordinary exertion of will, demonstrated to me satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea, and I was now pretty well satisfactorily the utter abs pulse of the moment, realizing fully the cause to which was attributable my deplorable condition, firmly resolved that not another drop of liquor of any description should pass my lips as a beverage Some of my intimate friends who were in the bar-room, and who had noticed my singular conduct, engaged discovered the more and from the conversation, and from the conversation of th friends who were in the bar-room, and who had noticed my singular conduct, engaged me in conversation, and from their remarks I discovered that they, too, were satisfied that I was in the early stages of the "horrors." I had now been without sleep for forty-eight hours, and while my reduced physical condition (I weighed only eighty-five pounds) as well as n.y mental disquietude sadly demanded rest, still I had not the slightest inclination to sleep. The next day and night passed in a similar way, and the fourth, fifth and sixth. Tawny little devils, about three inches in height, sat upon my shoulders, and peered into my face with the most horrible grimaces. Every now and then troops of them would make marvellous leaps from the ends of my fingers, vanishing for the time being, only to reappear in some of their horrible and repellant uglinees during their temporary absence. Then strains of music greeted my ears, as if rendered by a liliputian brass band, and raising myself in bed and resting my body upon my left arm I beheld a multitude of the tawny tribe marching in military order and keeping step to the minature music—their tramp being as distinct to me as if caused by the tread of elephants. On their heads they wore tin hats or helmets. As they passed along on the floor, regiment after regiment, brigade after brigade, and keeping step to the minature music—their tramp being as distinct to me as if caused by the tread of elephants. On their neads they wore tin hats or helmets. As they passed along on the floor, regiment after regiment, brigade after brigade, they greeted me by name, and vociferously invited me to come down and "fall in." While I gazed upon this grotesque vision, suddenly every one of those tin hats began to rise slowly from their heads—up, up, up, until they almost touched the ceiling; and while marveling upon this remarkable transformation, and leaning for ward to secure a better view, the phantasm vanished in thin air. Now my attention was called to the odd conduct of the lower window sash, which was rapidly moving in and down in its frame, and of the door, which was swinging to and fro. bear story. the beginning of the fifth day I first experienced the distress and suffering arising from loss of sleep, but in spite of all efforts to compose myself, not one moment's slumber came to my relief.

If any one had assured me that the sacrifice of a hand or an arm would insure me a nap of fifteen minutes' duration I would gladly have submitted myself to the tender mercies of the most unskilled sawbones in that behalf, and could have undergone the operation, too, without the administration of chloroform. My suffering from want of sleep was now so intense that I made two deliberate attempts to destroy myself—once by gunpowder and once by the water route—but was circumvented by watchful friends.

Having reached this condition of mind and body, I was at length prevailed upon to seek medical advice, but before I enter upon the details of my visit to the doctor and its results, I propose to describe some of the regentless and suffering arising from was a submit to take refuge in a tree when the bear attacked him from the opposite side of the tree. KANGAROOING IN AUSTRALIA. Exciting Sport Enjoyed by Huntsmen at the Antipodes. Interview in San Francisco Chronicle. "What is your most interesting sport in Australia?" exciting sports in the world. Large meets organized, parties from twenty to thirty joining in these hunts. They ride to the kangaroo grounds and as soon as one is sighted the two dogs are released and the horses are given their heads. If the Australian horse is well up in his business and if you let him take you instead of you trying to take him, he will carry you safely, avoiding the trees and underbrush. A good strong kangaroo will give you a long chase, and very often the dogs cannot follow him. In this case, when the horseman gets up to the kangaroo, he takes off his stirrups and strap and knocks the animal over the head, which effectually stuns him. He is then killed and skinned. The him. He is then killed and skinned. The hindquarters are given to the dogs. Yes, it is good enough eating, but too strong to be palatable to those of delicate taste. The tail, on the contrary, is considered by epicures to be delicious when made into soun."

"Poes the kangaroo ever kill the dogs?" "Yes; the kangaroo is very powerful with his hind legs and will strike at the

with his hind legs and will strike at the dogs with them, cutting them into pieces. You know the spring they make is from the tail and the hind legs. They are wonderful creatures, for they travel just as rapidly when they carry their young with them in the pouch."

"How high are they?"

"The average size is about four and a half feet high, but the 'old-man kangaroo' is often six feet high and is very fierce when cornered and is known to have ripped men open with a single kick from one of his hind legs. You know we imported foxes from home into Victoria just for sport, and they have become a horrid nuisance, especially around Greelong and Ballarat, and the most ardent votaries of sport have no hesitation in shooting them whenever they have the chance."

"Do you ever shoot kangaroos?"

"Do you ever shoot kangaroos?" "Yes, sometimes; but of course there is not so much sport as there is in riding. We take well trained dogs, which round dumb. She talks little, and never speaks back. She does all kinds of work, taking hold of what a man only does in America. On her back is a high basket in which you could put a family washing; in it she carry immense loads very easily, such as wood, coal, vegetables, diothing, small trunks to the depot, or a child when it's tired. She fills it with books for the student to carry home, and in the "dorfs" she thus carries the harvest to the lofts. With her hands she scrubs, washes, polishes, irons, cooks, bakes, dusts, sews, knits, darns and does Lord knows how much housework of other sorts. In a few words, she works from early to late and for everybody, and for all this labor receives $4 or $5 a month. For all she works like a slave, a more, happy, jolly, laughing girl you never saw. She has good morals and a kind, loving heart—just such a woman as makes the lot of a poor man one of peace and happiness "in a cottage." Work makes her strong, and the short sleeves it is the custom to wear show a muscular development that would be no cheering sign to the heart of Sullivan.

Transparent bonnets are most a la mode. I have seen them in black chenille, in straw, in gold and many varieties, the interpleting so far apart that the hair was plainly visible through. THE GENUINE PIANO. RAINER & CO.,

Guelph, Ontario. The undersigned respectfully announce that on the 9th day of April, 1884, Joseph F. Rainer dissolved partnership with Frank Sweetaam and John Hazelton, as piano manufacturers, and that said Joseph F. Rainer, in connection with his son, will continue to manufacture the original cross-scale Pianos, of which the said Joseph F. Rainer is the sole inventor.

These Pianos have now been before the public for 23 years, and have always ranked among the very best, and are celebrated for quality of one, great power and durability of action, prompt elastic touch, fine finish and elegant style of case, combined with every known improvement. The most complete and unbroken list on record, embracing a period of 30 years, and made up of 23 first prizes, medals and diplome's received at the principal exhibitions in Canada—Montreal, Kingston, Toronto, Hamilton and London. At the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia, in 1876, we secured a medal and diploma for our plano. The great favor with which the cross-scale pianos have been received for so long a period, and the reputation they bear, has induced others to imitate them. We therefore caution intending purchasers and dealers wishing to obtain the original cross-scale piano to see that the name of "Rainer & Son" is on each instrument. We gake the Urright and Square Grand Pianos.
