KING'S RAPID RECOVERY SURPRISES

Passed a Fairly Comfortable Day and Has Maintained His Strength—There Has Been Some Return of Pain in the Wound.

TOOK FOOD AT NIGHT AND SMOKED A CIGAR

Personally Wrote Several Telegrams and Notes—Queen Watched at His Bedside All Evening Till He Fell Into a Peaceful Sleep.

London, June 27.—(12.15 a.m.)—Buckingham Palace was closed up for the night rather later than usual. It is understood, however, that the King's strength and progress are maintained, and it is not generally expected that any further improvement of his condition will be seen before half past ten this morning.

MAINTAINS STRENGTH.
London, June 26.—The following bulletin was posted at Buckingham Palace at 11 o'clock to-night:

"The King has passed a fairly comfortable day and has maintained his strength. There has been some return of the pain in the wound." (Signed) Treves, Laking, Barlow.

TEMPERATURE NORMAL.
London, June 26.—The following bulletin was posted at Buckingham Palace at 6.15 p.m.:

"His Majesty passed a good day and has taken nourishment well, and his temperature is now normal." (Signed) Treves, Laking, Barlow.

MOST ENCOURAGING.
London, June 26.—(10.04 a.m.)—The Duke of Connaught called at Buckingham Palace this morning at 9.30 o'clock. Later he said concerning the King's recovery:

"The news is most encouraging. The King's pulse and temperature are normal and his condition on the whole is most satisfactory."

EVERYDAY IMPROVED.
London, June 26.—The official bulletin on the condition of King Edward issued at 10.15 o'clock this morning, is as follows:

"His Majesty has had a better night and has had some refreshing sleep. He has improved in all respects. His constitutional condition is quite favorable and the state of his wound also satisfactory." (Signed) Treves, Laking, Barlow.

London, June 26.—(Midnight)—Those around King Edward continue to be astonished at his rapid recovery. The slightly annoying symptoms mentioned in the bulletin issued at 11 o'clock to-night are quite inconsequential compared to the fact, which the Associated Press has learned, that His Majesty again took food to-night and was afterwards allowed to smoke a cigar.

Queen Alexandra sat with her husband all the evening, and only left him after he had fallen into peaceful sleep. Mention by the King's doctors of the care with which food is administered to the royal patient, and of the return of the pain in the wound, can safely be taken as merely an instance of their conscientious intention to make public the slightest adverse symptom, however unimportant.

The King's courage and good temper are remarkable, and to-day he personally wrote several telegrams and one or two notes.

INSPECTED HONOR LIST.
As evidence of the King's persistent refusal to efface himself from his connection with state affairs, and in corroboration of the statement that the physicians are satisfied with their patient's condition, the Associated Press learns that, besides personally opening telegrams Wednesday evening, King Edward then insisted upon a final inspection of the honor list. There was an appointment of considerable importance which had not been definitely decided at that time. The King approved this nomination, and gave the final order to the department.

These saving one of the recipients of honor from severe disappointment. As evidence of the King's persistent refusal to efface himself from his connection with state affairs, and in corroboration of the statement that the physicians are satisfied with their patient's condition, the Associated Press learns that, besides personally opening telegrams Wednesday evening, King Edward then insisted upon a final inspection of the honor list. There was an appointment of considerable importance which had not been definitely decided at that time. The King approved this nomination, and gave the final order to the department.

THE KING'S WISH.
Following the expressed desire of the Prince of Wales, the arrangements for illuminating the city, which involved the costly erection of net poles for electric and gas lights, will be allowed to remain, and will be utilized immediately it is authoritatively announced that the King is out of danger.

By the King's personal desire, the royal pardons of offences in the army will go into effect just as if the coronation had occurred. This last intimation suitably brings to a close the day which was to have been notable in English history.

INTERMISSION DAY.
The most striking feature of Coronation Day, as it is still called, was the universal substitution of services of intercession for those of rejoicing. The services occurred throughout the country and on board the great fleet that has been unreserved in Portsmouth harbor. Yet even these lacked patients and dramatic elements. In face of to-day's favorable bulletins, tears and litanies are obviously out of place. The crowds that packed the streets of the metropolis until midnight to-night evidently appreciated this: a general sense of rejoicing, which, even in the most unruly section, failed to become inordinate. All night long the Strand was thronged with crowds of people, who usually confined themselves to taking a farewell look at the decorations, gradually disappearing from the front of Buckingham Palace.

Only a slim gathering awaited the night service, and when that was passed the royal residence gave for a few stragglers, became deserted. Inside the palace, the members of the royal family spent a quiet evening, and the number of callers was smaller than any night this week.

With the favorable progress of the King, there is much discussion as to how the coronation will eventually be effected. While nothing has been definitely settled, it appears that King Edward is likely to celebrate this event very quietly and with merely the ceremony that attends the opening of parliament. This consists of a drive to Westminster Abbey, accompanied by a small escort, and a speedy return to Buckingham Palace, and it is rumored that no foreign princes or envoys will be especially invited for the occasion. Hundreds of visitors to London, especially American and people from the country, flocked to Westminster Abbey to-day, and late at night curious and awe-stricken crowds of spectators stood gazing at the place where Edward VII died have been crowded to the coronation annex, which is one of the few parts of the Abbey not hidden by the new building.

Shortly before noon the big western doors were swung open, sunlight streamed in, and the Duke of Cambridge, leaning heavily on the arm of an equestrian, walked to the chancel. At 12 o'clock struck, three acres from the far end of the nave the clear notes of the opening sentences of the Litany, chanted by four of the cathedral choir, their notes were in some degree softened by the organ. The choir, from one powerful voice, the choir took up the responses. At each plea, the Duke advanced a few steps and then stood still until the response was completed. Thus the kneeling congregation, the choir advanced to the chancel and behind them were 10 bishops, in gorgeous robes. Then came the Archbishop of York, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Frederick Temple, and the Lord Mayor, Sir Joseph Dimsdale, the corporation, and in full state, bringing up the rear.

Sang With Feeling.
With evident feeling their song the three Psalms of intercession, after which the Bishop of Stepney, the Right Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, read the lesson, Isaiah, chapter 28, verses 10: "In the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave; I am deprived of the residue of my years."

The Bishop of London, the Right Rev. A. W. Ingham, from the altar steps, read the prayer: "Lord, save the King." The prayer was sung out to the furthest recess of the dome, and brought a whole-hearted response from the choir and the congregation.

All Bowed in Prayer.
For a few moments complete silence reigned and all heads were bowed in prayer. The most blind of the congregation was carefully fully led down the steps, the procession re-formed, and the congregation went out into the sunlight, gladly discussing the wording of the latest bulletin from Buckingham Palace.

Simultaneously a similar service was conducted at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. It was largely in attendance by cabinet ministers, peers and members of the House of Commons, and was concluded with singing "God Save the King."

From India, Australia and Africa, the envoys where Britons congregated, the King and nation's guests to London approximate more than 210,000.

Even Her Majesty is not allowed to talk at length to the King's physicians, whose nervousness she is not allowed to soothe. The King wishes to read the newspapers. He hates immobility and constantly inquires about the people.

"What are they saying?" he asks. "How do they bear up under the dreadful disappointment? Try to let them know how sorry I am for them. I do not care for the pain myself, but when I think of them my heart fails me." Queen Alexandra answers with a gentle smile: "They love you, and they will love you again, and the quieter you keep the sorer you will be with them. ENORMOUS LOSS ENTAILED.
Rough Estimate Places It at One Million Pounds.

London, June 26.—Now that the first effects of the paralyzing blow have worn away it is possible to get some idea of the tremendous loss which the postponement of the coronation entailed. A rough estimate of the losses that can be calculated upon with some accuracy makes the appalling total £1,000,000, and this does not include what has been spent for robes, jewels, coaches and horses, and for decorating and renovating houses by the nobility.

In the first place, Lloyd's, underwriters, lose, at a conservative estimate, £200,000 on policies which covered the risk that the festivities would not take place on Thursday and Friday, June 25 and 27. They stand to lose half as much again on those policies which covered the risk that the coronation would not take place on the 26th.

Next come the stock speculators. Innumerable policies taken out by them more than £200,000. Now, the erection of stands and the advertising and the paying for rights involved an expenditure of at least £500,000. Substantially £100,000 out of the money paid for tickets and they receive £100,000 in full state, bringing up the rear.

BURIED UNDER TUNNELS JOSHUA SANFORD DIES

Paris Well Digger Able to Communicate With His Rescuers by Tapping on the Wall of His Living Tomb While He Hears Them Working.

SECOND CAVE-IN SILENCED HIM FOR A TIME

Four Hours After He Again Made Himself Heard and the Excavators Redoubled Their Efforts—Man's Father Arrives From Galt Learning of His Plight.

Paris, June 27.—(3 a.m.)—Joshua Sanford still lives, and with chances of release considerably brighter than at any time since the well caved in on Tuesday afternoon.

At noon yesterday, the earth over the unfortunate man sank considerably, and all hopes of rescuing him alive were abandoned. Some time after, however, he began working again, and work proceeded more vigorously than ever to effect his release. He now taps on the brick wall of the old well, instead of on the pipe, as formerly, and can be heard quite distinctly by those at the bottom of the tunnel, through which, it is hoped, he will be brought.

At 10 o'clock last night it was thought they were about to penetrate the place he occupies, and preparations were made to penetrate the old well, which is about three feet from the vertical tunnel just dug. While these preparations were being made, his voice was heard, but so indistinctly that nothing could be gathered of what he was trying to say.

Heard His Voice Faintly.
After a little more digging, the words "Oh! Oh!" were feebly heard, as they were whispered. Still nearer dug his rescuers, and at midnight he was able to say that he was still alive, but he implored them to be quick. It is thought at the time of writing that about four feet yet have to be taken out of the bottom of the tunnel before it will be prudent to penetrate the old well, but it is hoped before many hours he will be rescued. Hundreds of people have been on the scene all day, and during the evening the road was lined for half a mile on each side with vehicles. Silence seizes the entire crowd whenever an announcement is to be made, and news is eagerly waited for.

Hundreds Visit the Scene.
The vicinity drove out to the Skelly farm yesterday to watch the proceedings. The liverymen did a rushing business, and all sorts of vehicles were brought out to convey the curious crowds. At 8 o'clock Thursday morning it was reported that the diggers had reached a point on the level with the imprisoned man, and that in two or three hours a tunnel would be excavated thru to him. This caused great excitement in the town, and scores of people hurried out to the farm to be on the ground when Sanford was taken out. It was, however, found that Sand-

Optimistic Opinions.
German Specialists Expect King to Pull Thru.

Berlin, June 26.—Medical men of Germany take a rather optimistic view of the condition of King Edward, and say that if the halting present the case his chances for recovery are more than even. One specialist refers to the experience of Dr. Sonnenberg of the Berlin Charity Hospital, who has operated most successfully upon 1810 of the King, and a prominent medical authority of Berlin said to-day that a specialist study of operations shows 80 per cent of recoveries.

Regarding the reported removal of an abscess, a specialist writing to-day from the Frankfurter Zeitung, says: "If such abscesses develop for several days, they then partially open into the surrounding parts, as has apparently occurred in the case of King Edward. Nothing approaches a pipe, however, after the operative removal of the abscess are very favorable. The fact that the King has lunged resumed their normal activity immediately after the operation warrants expectations of recovery."
