These articles have contained considerable information which, I may add, has not gone unnoticed. I do not regret this widespread discussion, because it tends to a better understanding of a problem which is not generally understood as desirable. SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS IN ANCIENT MYTHOLOGY

Interesting Comment Suggested by the Recent Earthquake—Old Tales of Myth and Legend Recalled by a Clever Writer

The great cataclysm at the Straits of Messina recalls dimly to the minds of many a young man and woman, not yet young as they once were, old names and stories of the day's myth and legend of which our too young-forgotten school books were full. Writes C. J. Carpenter in the Boston Transcript. It sets one harking for his cyclopaedia, almanac and Greek and Latin terms—such a terrible book as this. And, truth to tell, only such a shock could drive most of us to that search. Yet it is well worth "brushing up"; indeed, the treasures it reveals to us are more golden and glorious than they were in our youth. In fact, it is a pleasure to me to renew my acquaintance with these old favorites Scylla and Charybdis.

THE DOWNFALL OF THE SIRENS

It was Cassandra, the prophetess, daughter of Priam of Troy, whom Agamemnon carried away captive to Mycenae, who had prophesied that, when it should so happen that a ship once passed the straits unharmed by the Sirens, the three sisters would leap into the sea, in their chagrin and despair, and be transformed to rocky islets. Accordingly, when the days of Odysseus, the Sirens' song has no more been heard in these straits, now rent with earthquake throes, Parthenope was seized by the waves and her bones cast ashore, so goes the legend, at the lovely bay on the Italian coast, where was erected a shrine in her honor, and where later sprang up a city called by her name, now the city of Naples.

THE VOYAGE OF AENEAS

Turning to the Aeneid, we read the story of Aeneas, cast upon shores in the African realm of Dido, hidden to her banquet, and by her asked to tell the story of his wanderings. The narrative proceeds to the unexpected meeting with Andromache, now the wife of Helenus. And he, the priest, gives to Aeneas advice for the continuance of his journey.

Following the advance of Helenus, as they came within sight of the narrow strait and saw far off the boiling waters of Charybdis, the steersman Palinurus veers to the left and leaves the dangerous place, only to come, a little later, upon the coast of the Cyclops, where "Rina thundered high in dreadful ruins, with a whirlwind's force, throwing them under a piteous cloud, reddened with cinders, involved in smoke and with roaring noise casting molten stones in air." Here the wanderer encountered Polyphemus, the giant, Cyclops whom none of us can ever forget. Him Ulysses and his men had themselves before encountered, to their distress, but saved themselves by boring out one eye with a sharpened hog's tusk. The narrative proceeds to the mountain side, a huge pine's trunk in his hand, directing his steps. Polyphemus, wading out to mid-sea, he takes the plashing of the oars and strives to seize the vessel with his huge hands. Pulling in this he raised a hideous yell, which he repeated over and over again, and they escaped the terrors and reach the domain of Dido.

ORPHEUS AND HIS LYRE

The most ancient of the tales of the Sirens and their alluring songs is that of Orpheus and his part in the expedition of the Argonauts, and the search under Jason for the Golden Fleece. It is said of the ship Argo, built for this expedition, that when it was finished and launched it glided down into the sea to the music of the lyre of Orpheus, the gift to him of Apollo. When the voyagers wished to turn back, Orpheus, with the sound of his lyre, lulled the Sirens and Charybdis, and the vessel was able to pass safely.

ODYSSEUS' SAILORS' EARS

Perhaps the most interesting of the tales of the Sirens is that told in the Odyssey. You all surely remember that when Odysseus and his followers, in their journey homeward, after the fall of Troy, came to the island of Aea, they were detained for a time by the goddess Circe, a portion of the party being thrown into a mystic spell and changed into the form of swine. Some who drank of her cup forgot home, friends and country and all else, save their present surroundings. But Odysseus, forewarned by Hermes, was prepared against the wiles of Circe; and at length she allowed the party to sail away and point their prow toward Ithaca. But it was Circe who warned them against the seductive power of the Sirens; and when the vessel approached the strait, and a great calm fell upon the sea, Odysseus, ordering his sailors to take to their oars, took a mean advantage of the seductive power of the Sirens' song, and ordered the sailors to bind him to the mast, with the strictest of cords, so stout that he would be unable to break his bonds, however strongly he might strain against them.

TRIED TO BURST HIS OWN BONDS

And so, as they drew near the island of the Sirens, and approached the narrow strait, the sisters three perceived the vessel and lifted up their voices in song. The sailors, hearing nothing, pulled steadily at their oars, and struck a passage midway between Scylla and Charybdis. But Odysseus, hearing the Sirens' song, strained hard to break the bonds and go to them, signing to his men to cast him loose. But, they, mindful of his orders, only drew the cords the tighter, and so they passed in safety.

The question of revenue to be paid by the company to the city after a certain period was discussed at length but the parties came to no decision. The city wants the basis of revenue fixed on gross receipts and the company wants it fixed on net earnings. No decision was reached on any of the points left over from last meeting.

BANKER REVIEWS THE CONDITIONS

What President B. E. Walker Says of the Year in the Maritime Provinces.

The following reference to the maritime provinces is from the annual address of President B. E. Walker, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce:

The prosperity of these provinces has not been more unevenly distributed than in any other part of the Dominion.

In fishing, because of the great length of the coast line, there has been the best variety of results in different localities.

Prices have now fallen to a level which should eventually put the trade on a sound basis.

The hope of improvement in the land crops is not so bright.

It is pleasant to record that despite general depression the trade in coal has held up.

Over the largest steel company has again had a successful year.

The Wisconsin Central dividend exclusively foreclosed by us many weeks ago is practically a feature now.

It is inconceivable that America has wasted all these years to learn so simple a lesson as Joseph Lee has taught us.

Play! The child's first and most persistent instinct. We have tried to suppress it all these years.

Play! With infinite variety of opportunity for activity and training we have looked upon it as wasted energy.

Play in which the child never finds mental fatigue or loss of relish, has been the one thing the school and church have sought to eliminate from his life.

Play! A child can get more mental discipline in learning a new game in the right way than in repeating an explanation of the reason for inverting the divisor and proceeding as in multiplication in fractions.

MEDICAL INSPECTION

Returning to a discussion of the question of medical inspection of schools, the Times desires to place before its readers a startling fact brought out by medical inspection in the cities of Montreal and New York. In Montreal it was found that 61.37 per cent of the pupils required some sort of medical, surgical or dental treatment.

Scarcely these are startling figures. To be more particular, let us quote from a report submitted by Dr. J. E. Laberge, medical health officer of Montreal. He says:

In regard to the general results obtained during the medical inspection of schools during the month of September, 1907, the following table will possibly afford you some useful information:

Table with 2 columns: Disease found in schools during the month of September, 1907; and Number of pupils attending school. Rows include: Badly nourished, Scabies, St. Vitus' Dance, Heart troubles, Skin diseases, Deformity of the vertebral column, Deformity of the limbs, Deformity of the chest, Defects of vision, Defects of hearing, Conjunctivitis, Trachoma, Difficulty in nasal breathing, Decayed teeth, Enlarged tonsils, Adenoids (growth in throat), Diphtheria, Scarlet fever, Measles, Smallpox, Whooping cough, Stomach, Chicken-pox, Erysipelas, Pediculosis (lice on head), Scabies, Impetigo (inflamm. skin, eczema), Ringworm, Pemphigus (skin disease), Worms, Abscess, Children sent away owing to infectious diseases at home, Neurasthenia, Headache from study, Children dismissed on account of uncleanliness, Gout, Hypertrophy of uvula (enlargement of uvula), Total number of children requiring treatment, Number of Children in good health, Total number examined, Medical inspection of schools in Montreal was begun in September, 1906, with fifty medical men to inspect 165 schools twice a year.

Under the new arrangement Montreal is divided into fourteen districts. A qualified physician is appointed to each district at a salary of $109 per month, and his duties are as follows:

- 1. To inspect twice annually, every child attending school in this district.
2. To vaccinate all those who are unvaccinated; or if the parents object to these precautionary measures, to notify the principal to refuse such pupil admission to the school.
3. To satisfy himself respecting the location and hygienic arrangements of the school.
4. To make as many additional visits to the school as the Board of Health, from time to time, may deem necessary.
5. To leave with the principal their addresses and telephone numbers so that the principal may be in a position to communicate with them should occasion require.
6. Should a pupil suffering from a contagious or infectious disease be discovered, he will recommend the principal to send such child home until complete cure has been effected. He will also notify the health officer of the circumstance.
7. He shall visit factories, and vaccinate those employees who can show no evidence of vaccination. In the event of refusal to submit to the operation, he is to recommend the removal of such employee. He shall assure himself that those employed are not suffering from any infectious or contagious disease. He shall particularly direct his attention to the discovery of cases of tuberculosis. He shall satisfy himself that the employees in factories and other similar establishments are sufficiently protected against any poisonous substances with which they may be brought in contact while engaged in their occupations, as white lead, acids, etc.

- 1. He shall visit the dwellings of the poor wherein infectious or contagious diseases are expected to exist; night refuges, boarding houses and immigration offices.
2. He shall visit every house which he may have reason to believe is overcrowded or in an unsanitary condition.
3. He shall satisfy himself that quarantine regulations are strictly enforced.
4. He shall satisfy himself that the medical inspectors are counselled to act with the utmost tact and courtesy; to avoid all friction with their conferees in the medical profession, and never to discuss or criticize with the laity the diagnosis which an attending physician may have made, or the measure which he may have considered it proper to adopt, even if he should be in error.
I also submit the following additional headings of tables, which the health department requires to be filled in by its medical inspectors:
I. Schools exhibiting defective ventilation.
II. Schools wherein the tables and chairs are not adapted to the height of the pupils.
III. Schools which possess no cloak-rooms.
IV. Schools in which sweeping is improperly performed.
V. Schools in which the pupils receive light from the wrong direction.
VI. Schools or classes which are overcrowded.
VII. Schools in which there is a deficiency of breathing space per pupil.
VIII. Schools with defective drains.
IX. Schools with defective schools, e. g., noise, offensive smells, etc.
X. Fire-escape facilities.

In the words of the Toronto Telegram, in its comment, the Times believes that "the foregoing statement of so eminent an authority as Dr. Laberge should be read by every father and mother, by every member of the Board of Education, and by every one who has the welfare of the school children of this city at heart."

A FOOLISH PROTEST

The Times has received a copy of the Christian Science Monitor, the new Boston daily, with a marked article on the treatment of tuberculosis. This authority protests against segregation because it would inspire fear instead of courage, and compares proposed methods for the treatment of consumptives with the ancient treatment of lepers. So far as can be gathered from a perusal of the article the editor of the Monitor would have consumptives, diphtheria and smallpox patients, lepers and other victims of hideous diseases going about distributing germs with cheerful impartiality, at the same time assuring the people that such diseases existed only in their imagination. Happily the general public do not accept this view, and unhappily the clemencies bear silent but eloquent witness against it. The process of education will go on. The victim of a deadly disease who has not courage enough to segregate himself if he is given the opportunity, has very little of the spirit of true Christianity.

The Halifax Board of Trade has 533 members. Of new industries the board's report says: "A number of propositions were placed before the board during the past year, some of which were turned down because concessions asked were thought unreasonable. Others were investigated and assistance was lent where it was seen that the city would benefit. The Maritime Manufacturing Co.'s proposition placed before the council some months ago was vigorously pushed and it is expected the company will start operations here in a few weeks. This means the employment of about 50 hands at good wages, and no exemptions, bonuses, or financial assistance was asked of the city. The Anderson Furniture Co. to which the city generously agreed to loan $40,000 in course of organization and hope is expressed that the citizens will generously lend it what support they can."

Judge Mulqueen, of New York, contends that a drunkard is more of a menace to the community than a burglar. "With all his faults," says the Judge, "and, as a rule, he is easier to handle. But the drunkard allows his brain to become inactive; he is a real problem."

TREATIES OF ARBITRATION

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—With the signing of an arbitration treaty between the United States and Austria-Hungary at the state department this afternoon, conventions of that character, with more than twenty nations of the world, have been agreed to. The treaty now goes to the senate for ratification. Secretary Root also signed an extradition treaty with Honduras. Officials of the state department declined to say whether the treaty is retroactive.

HALIFAX AND THE LIQUOR PROBLEM

The Chronicle Commends the Movement to Consider Question in a Rational Way.

(Halifax Chronicle.) All true friends of temperance reform will be glad to welcome the movement which was inaugurated at the meeting at the School for the Blind, on Tuesday afternoon, as reported in the Morning Chronicle yesterday. It is an encouraging sign of the times when leading clergymen and other citizens, representing the best thought of the city, come together for the purpose of considering in a rational and practical way what steps should be taken looking to the solution of the liquor problem in so far as it relates to the City of Halifax. This meeting marks a decided advance for the cause of temperance reform.

The conclusion which was arrived at by the gentlemen who participated in the meeting seems to have been that the will of the majority in the City of Halifax should prevail, and, of course, nothing could be more reasonable or obvious. Rev. James W. Falconer, of the Presbyterian College, whose zeal in behalf of genuine temperance reform is well known, is reported to have said in the course of his address: "Mayors and aldermen are elected who are opposed to our ideas. If the temperance people of Halifax took united action and elected only men who are pledged to temperance, we would have the situation in our hands. There is enough temperance sentiment in Halifax to put in a council who will drive the liquor trade out."

In this declaration, which was strongly endorsed by Principal Magill, Convener of the Temperance and Moral Reform Committee of the Presbyterian Synod, Professor Falconer has made it plain that the decision for or against the sale of liquor in this city rests with the citizens of Halifax, and with no others. In other words, it is a clear-cut pronouncement for the exercise of local option under the statute. Professor Falconer's declaration is as reassuring as sound and in accordance with well-settled temperance policy the world over, notably in the United States, where the "wave of prohibition" which has been sweeping the Southern States has been virtually the exercise of "local option" in voting "no license." It is primarily and properly the duty and the right of the citizens of Halifax to determine whether the liquor traffic shall be controlled, regulated or absolutely prohibited in this city. The machinery is at their command. The traffic can be regulated and controlled by limiting the number of licenses granted under the Provincial Liquor License Act. It can be prohibited, in so far as provincial legislation can prohibit, by granting no licenses at all; or by the adoption of the Scott Act, a Federal law, which is the most drastic and effectual temperance legislation on the statute book of any country. A bare majority of the electors of this city can accomplish one or the other. This is the situation precisely, as it relates to the City of Halifax and it is a situation which up to this time the temperance people have seemingly not well understood.

Heretofore, delegations have come from various parts of the province, outside of Halifax, and have urged the provincial government to enact legislation, which, while no doubt well-meant, represented the views of people not familiar with the conditions in Halifax, and, probably, was too extreme to receive hearty endorsement by even the best temperance men within the city. The fact that thoughtful men in the city of Halifax have resolved to grapple with this problem in the proper way and at the proper place is a very promising beginning, and, from the representative character of the promoters, we feel satisfied that every phase of the question will be discussed on sound lines.

JURY FINDS THORNTON HAINS "NOT GUILTY"

After Twenty-Two Hours Deliberation Verdict is Reached and Prisoner is Acquitted of Participation in Murder of William E. Annis—Brother May Not Be Prosecuted Now

THORNTON J. HAINS.

On witness stand imitating brother's despair when he heard wife's confession. Flushing, N. Y., Jan. 15.—After reviewing the evidence for twenty-two hours and taking fifteen orders before all agreed, the jury in the trial of the author and magazine writer, Thornton Jenkins Hains, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, found the prisoner, not guilty as a principal with his brother, Captain Peter C. Hains, jr., in the killing of William E. Annis. For the second time in his life, Hains had been acquitted of the charge of murder, having been cleared of the charge of shooting a companion named Edward A. Hanington in an open boat in Hampton Roads seventeen years ago. Hains had an affecting greeting with Captain Peter C. Hains in the Long Island jail, whether he hurried in a motor car after the verdict to take his brother to the news. Old General Hains and his wife, who had been anxiously waiting to learn the verdict in the Hotel Astor in Manhattan since the jury went out at 5 o'clock last night, heard the news from Thornton, who telephoned his parents as soon as he left the court room. Mrs. Hains nearly fainted from joy at the tidings. After spending an hour with Captain Hains in the jail Thornton Hains went to the Hotel Astor, where he remained through the evening and night with his father and mother. "Under this verdict it is perfectly safe

No More Headaches

Suffered from Constant Headaches—Cured by "Fruit-tives" When Doctors Failed.

"I was a sufferer from fearful headaches for over two years, sometimes they were so bad that I was unable to work for days at a time. I tried all kinds of medicines, was treated by physicians, and yet the headaches persisted. I was rarely free from headache. A short time ago I was advised to try "Fruit-tives" and I did so with, I must confess, very little faith, but after I had taken them for three days my headaches were easier and in a week they left me. After I had taken a box of the tablets my headaches were quite cured. I had become thin and weak from the constant headaches, but my strength is growing up once more, and I feel like a new man. I have taken in all three boxes of "Fruit-tives." I am exceedingly grateful to "Fruit-tives" for curing me, and I give this unsolicited testimonial with great pleasure, as I hope thereby some other sufferer of headaches will be induced to try "Fruit-tives" and will be cured." me though of course the strain on me at times taxed me severely."

Rarely in any court of law has such a demonstration been witnessed as that which occurred this afternoon when the jury made known its verdict. The packed court room rose and cheered and applauded with such vigor that the blows with his gavel by Justice Crane on his desk could not be heard. Before proceeding further Justice Crane ordered the trial chamber cleared and the spectators put out into the street.

Justice Crane had sent for the jury to learn if there were any prospects of agreement and word came back that the jury desired a few more minutes. Hains was brought into court by Sheriff Harway and seated beside his counsel. His swarthy face became pallid and the lines in his face became drawn with anxiety. None of his family was in court. He spoke nervously to counsel and watched with inquiring glance the file of tired jurors as they entered the room and took their places. Justice Crane asked the jurors if they had reached a verdict and foreman Hill, his voice trembling, though he could be heard all over the court room, said that they had.

"The jurors will rise and face the defendant," cried the clerk of the peace. "Gentlemen, what is your verdict?" "Not guilty," said the foreman, and with the words came an uproar. The court room having finally been cleared, there came a rapping at the door and Major John Hains, who had heard of the verdict outside, rushed into the room. An officer held him back from rushing into the court where his brother and counsel sat, until after Justice Crane had thanked the jury. Then he hurried to his brother's side and embraced him and kissed all of his counsel. Hains could scarcely realize the verdict for a moment and then he half rose in his chair, smiled and bowed to the jury, and brushed his tears away with his handkerchief. Justice Crane discharged the story writer, and Mr. McInnes, his chief counsel, who had quite completely broken down at the verdict, briefly thanked the court and jury. After telephoning his mother and father, Hains was escorted to a local hotel, while a throng of townspeople gave him a continuous escort en route. Later he took a motor car with his counsel for Long Island City jail to see his brother.

Mr. McInnes said: "I never worked harder for a client in my life and I am just about knocked out. They had to find Thornton innocent. When Thornton says he is the happiest man on earth I am the second happiest." Jurors said that the first ballot stood eight to four for acquittal and early this morning the ballot showed a gain of one for acquittal. Jurors Hecker, Johnson, Richmond and Boening voted for conviction. Juror Boening held out until the final ballot was taken just after Justice Crane had sent for the jurors, and then changed his vote to acquittal. Officials of the district-attorney's office in Queens county are quoted tonight as saying that the verdict probably means that Captain Hains will never be brought to trial and that he will be surrendered to the care of his family or to the federal government.

New York, Jan. 15.—When General Peter C. Hains, father of Thornton J. Hains, was informed this afternoon of his son's acquittal he said: "All I can say is that I am mighty glad. Both Mrs. Hains and myself are literally overcome by joy."

"The aged soldier's eyes were filled with tears but he had by that time full control of himself."

A moment after General Hains received the news of the acquittal he was called on the long-distance telephone by Thornton at Flushing. The message was brief. "Father," the son called, "they have acquitted me. Kiss mother for me."

The general said he expected Thornton to come to the city today and said that his son would remain in New York indefinitely.

THE EVENING TIMES, ST JOHN, N. B. SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1909.

The mystery and miracle of genius are again brought home to the world's memory, as we are celebrating the hundredth anniversary of Edgar Allan Poe's birth. There are those who account him as our greatest man of letters. In point of influence only Hawthorne and Emerson rank with him; in point of originality only Walt Whitman, who called him "poor, wonderful Poe." Seldom has an equal amount of biography and literary criticism been compressed into three words. He was one of the greatest of immortals and one of the most miserable mortals that ever trod this earth, and his own words may fittingly be applied to himself: The fever called living is over at last.

Poe was born in Boston, Baltimore is the city most closely linked to his life, where he was buried. Philadelphia is associated with his finest literary achievement, and with the posthumous denunciation of his character. New York saw his deepest misery and contains the most interesting memorial of his career, the cottage at Fordham. This poor shanty may be the chief literary shrine of America, like Burns' humble cottage at Ayr. It was here that his angelic Virginia, whom he had married when she was but 14, died of consumption on a couch of straw, where she had nothing but a coat and a cat to keep her warm.

It would hardly pay to go into the edifying subject of Poe's habits had not so much exaggeration provoked so fierce a controversy. On the one hand, the foulest lies and libels were given utterance and credence. "His life was one wild debauch," "he starved his wife and broke her heart," "he had no faith in man nor woman," "he was naturally unamiable, insatiable, envious," "he displayed a reckless absence of all the qualities of social rectitude," "self-willed, proud, passionate, with meagre moral sense, he forfeited success by his perversity and his vices."

And there is even less doubt about his poetic genius, although Emerson, in a conversation with Howells, called him "the jingle man." Mrs. Browning told of people who were haunted by the "Nevermore" of Poe's "Raven," and one of her acquaintances, "who has the misfortune of possessing a 'bit' of Pallas, cannot bear to look at it in the twilight."

Thomas Bailey Aldrich said that "this imperishable fame in all lands." Swinburne declared, over a quarter of a century ago, that "Time, the eternal enemy of small and shallow reputations, will prove the constant and trusty friend and keeper of a true poet's fullgrown fame."

PRODUCTIVE CAPACITY AND NATIONAL STRENGTH

Prof. Sexton's Plea for Technical Education in Canada—Learn to be Self-Provident—Enable the Worker to Train for His Occupation.

(Toronto News.) "I think the question of technical education is the most important proposition before the people of Canada, and God speed the day when a national system of technical education will be adopted throughout the Dominion," said Prof. F. H. Sexton, superintendent of technical education for the province of Nova Scotia, addressing the Canadian Club last evening.

NOT TRAINING RANK AND FILE

"Our Public School system, after its elementary training in the three 'R's', is maintained wholly for the instruction of the four per cent entering the professions; the other 75 per cent, are compelled to take exactly the same curriculum. The result is that they leave school as soon as the law will let them. As a nation we are not training the rank and file to earn a livelihood; we are not giving the boys a chance to study the vocations and find out for which they are most suitable. The schools do not train the boy to step out into actual life," continued the speaker, and he added: "Herein we are violating one of the greatest principles of democracy—the greatest good to the greatest number."

NEED NATIONAL ATTENTION

Thirty-four per cent of our citizens were employed at gainful occupations, engaged in agriculture and fishing; 36 per cent, engaged in manufacturing and mining. Surely this large proportion should re-

Have Wrong Verdict

AGED FARMER, HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM PREMATURE

The Dominion of Canada occupied the place of a spirit specter. It was evident to all right-thinking people that this country should adopt for the good of the people what has been done in other countries. Germany has, without national resources, secured national prominence through the adoption of technical education, and what can Canada do with all her wealth? Technical education is the salvation of Canada for an industrial country, and all Canadian clubs, having the development of Canada at heart, should take up this great question and advocate it.

CIVIC SCANDAL IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Jan. 15—Another sensation was uncovered at a city hall today when what may develop into a serious scandal was started. An alderman had tried to secure a bribe from a city contractor. The affair came up at the indignation committee, when J. Jacob, contractor for a city stable, declared that Ald. Lesperance had tried to hold him up for $1,000, but on his objecting to the amount of the bribe, had reduced his demand to $500. The money to be paid as the price of securing the contract.

THE SEASON OF FURS IS ON

The season dear to the heart of every woman—the season of furs—is now on. It may be an expensive one or it may not, but every woman manages to have some kind of a fur set, be it only a single piece. Needless to say, a woman cannot be too careful in selecting her winter furs. This season, more than ever, they must be ornamental as well as useful. Elaborateness rather than practicality seems to be the keynote.

GIVE BOY A CHANCE

"And it is pitiable to let a boy go out into the world unprepared to meet it. The question that now demands the attention of the Dominion was how to keep the boys at school between the ages of 14 and 18. Toronto has done much to establish technical education in this city, but the question was not one to be adopted locally. However, this city would in future years see that the money it had spent for that purpose had not been spent in

ITALIAN SAYS HE WAS ROBBED OF $1,000

Perth, Jan. 15—An Italian laborer named Kitchener, who worked in one of the contractor's camps at Sisson Bridge, near Plaster Rock, is reported to have been robbed this morning of $1,000 by a com-patriot who has not yet been captured.

CIRCUIT COURT AT DORCHESTER

Dorchester, N. B., Jan. 15.—(Special)—The civil case of Creighton et al. vs. Owen Sound (Ont.) vs. New Brunswick, Wire Fence Co., of Moncton, which has been before the circuit court here since Tuesday last, was settled out of court this morning.

RELIGIOUS DIFFERENCES ARE NO BAR TO CO-OPERATION

President Eliot of Harvard Cites Case of Catholic Boston to Convince His New York Audience that Prejudice Can be Overcome.

New York, N. Y., Jan. 15—President Chas. W. Eliot, of Harvard, in an address tonight before the Public Education Association, took occasion to declare that religious differences did not prevent harmonious co-operation of great bodies of electors in this country. It was in speaking of the improvement of municipal boards of education that Dr. Eliot made this point. The city of New York, he said, with its cosmopolitan population and enormous school attendance, was a particularly fine field for the development of the ideal board of education and then he pointed to the school committees of Boston and St. Louis as examples of the modern experiments in this direction.

SCHOOL GARDENS

(Toronto World.) H. L. Hunt, B. S. A., professor of horticulture in the O. A. C. Guelph, has been chosen to co-operate with school boards and inspectors in carrying out the policy of the education department respecting the improvement of school grounds and the laying out of school gardens. An important illustrated pamphlet has been issued by the department, setting out the objects in view, and giving examples by photographs of what has been done in this way. The beautification of schools and school grounds is regarded as one of the most important methods of planting in the young a love of rural life and of order and simple neatness. It is a mistake to suppose, it is said, that the children will injure such grounds as are put in good condition. When the grounds or gardens are made worthy of respect the scholars respect them. The department looks to the school trustees for co-operation in carrying out this policy.

Undigested Food

When any portion of food remains in the stomach and refuses to digest, it causes the torments of indigestion. This undigested food rapidly ferments, irritating the sensitive coating of the stomach, while other parts of the body, particularly the head, suffer in consequence. So long as this undigested food remains in the stomach, the discomfort continues. A few doses of BEECHAM'S PILLS stop all fermentation, sweeten the contents of the stomach and give natural assistance that relieves the stomach of its burden. The action of Beecham's Pills gradually strengthens the stomach nerves and soon restores them to a normal, healthy condition. Beecham's Pills positively cure all stomach troubles, while their beneficial effects on the liver and kidneys greatly improve the general health. Beecham's Pills have been used and recommended by the general public for over fifty years. Prepare only by the Proprietor, Thomas Beecham, St. Leonards, Lancashire, Eng. author. Through the marvelous translation of Bandelair, himself a word wizard, Poe has become as well known as any French poet, and galvanized portraits of Poe are not uncommon, in which he looks weirdly Frenchified. Poe is almost the only American author well known in France.

THE POE CULT

Poe's salary during his editorial labors on the "Southern Literary Messenger," where he first won a prize of $100 for a story on "Graham's Magazine," whose circulation he raised from 8,000 to 40,000; on the "Mirror" of N. P. Willis, in which "The Raven" appeared, was probably never more than $10 a week. Today the slightest scrap of his handwriting commands a higher price. His letters have a market value twice that of Shelly's, five times that of Byron's, a hundred times that of Longfellow's. The original manuscript of "The Bells" bought for $275 some years ago, would probably bring ten times that price today. A single copy of Poe's first book, "Tales from the Crypt," published in 1842, has been sold at auction for $2,000. It looks as if the admirers of Poe might go as far as did Lafayette to express his veneration of Poe's revolutionary grandfather, and kiss the soil upon his grave. During this week of memorial address, monument unveilings, special numbers, and even a Poe drama, it is worth while to read William Winter's noble poetic tribute, penned almost 33 years ago:

Gold is the peer hour sign, And child's glory's joy's breath, And pale the garland Memory brings To grace the front doors of Death. Fame's echoing thunders, jock and loud, The pomp of pride that decks the pall, One word of love is worth them all. With words of grief our eyes are dim; Ah, let the tear of sorrow start, And hushes around this tomb we weep, The great and tender human heart! Through many a year his fame has grown— Like midnight vast, like starlight sweet, Yet his kind disaster laid him low, And Heaven reclaimed its wayward child. Through many a year his fame has grown— Like midnight vast, like starlight sweet, Yet his kind disaster laid him low, And Heaven reclaimed its wayward child. One need of justice long delayed, One crowning grace his virtues crave— Ah, take, this hour, this hour we weep, The love that sanctifies the grave! God's mercy guard in peaceful sleep, The sacred dust that slumbers here, And, while around this tomb we weep, God bless, for us, the unborn's tear! And may his spirit hovering high, His benediction on the living shed, And know, with fame that cannot die, He has the world's affection, too!
