GREAT BRITAIN PEACE DISTURBER.

So Says a Foolish German Prince.

Says the Foreign Policy Has Been Approved by German Press

(Special to the Star.)
BERLIN, Oct. 28.—A violent attack upon Great Britain is made in a book written by Dr. Henry Oberwinder, which is just out. Were it not that the author is taken seriously by his readers the tirade might be regarded as amus-ing. But the condition of affairs is ex-tremely shaky so far as the peace of the world is concerned. The leading Conservative journal, the "Deutsche Tageszeitung," recommends all Germans to read the book attentively.

Dr. Oberwinder begins with the declaration that Great Britain is a dis-turber of peace throughout the world. and then proceeds to enumerate a few of the troubles which he says she has ourposely created for her own pur

The author states that England has three powerful agents at work everywhere—the press, gold and cables. Liberal and Conservative governments are said to be alike. They have continued said to be alike. They have continued the same foreign policy of reckless, selfish brutality towards all other na-robber barons of former ages in having erected fortified places at Gibraltar, Aden, Singapore and other commanding points where peaceful travellers are waylaid.

Hunter succeeded in winning it four times and Major J. Twining Hartt six times, but never twice in succession. It is very improbable that the new cup will have such a record.

The old cup also bore the city arms on one side and on the other "Presented to the St. John County Rifle Association by the Common Council of the City of St. John, N. B." Its shape is entirely different from the new one, b ing an egg-shaped cup, supported by three crossed rifles, entwined with

BURGLARS DROPPED SAFE FROM WINDOW

Then Carted It Away With $10.000 in Gems.

Had Rolled Chest to Second Story Window and Let It Fall

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—While the servants in the household of Edward Hale Graves, who lives in Scotland Road, Graves, who lives in Scotland Road, South Orange, N. J., were on the first floor of the house last evening burglars took a safe weighing 250 pounds and containing about $10,000 worth of jewelry, rolled it to a window, dropped it out and made way with it. Despite a police guard at every road within an hour, they escaped.

Mr. Graves is a broker of No. 30 Broad street. His residence in the fashionable Montrose section of the Oranges is one of the handsomest in the community. It stands a short distance from the street, and there are other houses adjoining and across the time ago Mr. Graves bought the safe, which the dealer assured him was absolutely burglar proof. He said it would take a burglar hours to make a scratch on the lock. Mr. Graves himself said that it did look formidable and that sametimes even he had trouble in gat sometimes even he had trouble in get-ting the door open. It was kept in the bedroom on the second floor, and with perfect confidence Mrs. Graves deposited in it much of her jewelry, to which her husband added many important papers.

Mr. and Mrs. Graves were in this city yesterday and went home soon after seven o'clock. It is supposed that the robbery was committed some time after six o'clock, as it could scarcely have been done in the daytime. After six o'clock all the servants were down on the first floor. When Mr. and Mrs. Graves reached home and went to dress for dinner they found a window open in Mrs. Graves' room, and as the lights were turned on, it was seen that there were muddy footprints all over the room. The foot tracks led from the window to a dresser, the drawers of which had been broken open. There was nothing taken from them, however. Then the tracks ran to the corner where the safe had stood. The safe was heavy enough to tax the energies of a strong man who tried to carry it even a short distance, and it is assumed that there were two men. The safe had been rolled or carried across the room and then dropped out of the window. A deep hole in the ground shows where it fell. They had a horse and wagon waiting.

The police were notified of the robbery and men were posted at all the She was born in Balmoral October 24, 1887, and is the first royal child born north of the Tweed for three that he could not tell what was stolen Heretofore Miss Crosman has appeared here exclusively in plays of an historic period, or in poetic comedy, and therefore it comes as a bit of a surprise so see her sweep into the room in the most fashionable attire of the present day. She dresses with the greatest of elegance and good taste, and that starts her in the right direction toward making an unqualified success in her new line of character assumption. Her style as a comedienne is exactly suited to the character of Mary, and from the moment that she enters upon the scene until the final curtain falls she dominates the action.

Her excellent supporting company comes in for its full share of the praise won by the comedy. Boyd Putnam being especially good as the globe trotting bachelor. Addison Pitt is another favorite, and George Woodward as the butterfly hunting naturalist could hardly be improved upon. THE HUMORS OF POLITICAL MEETINGS the stream of good stories is never allowed to run dry.

One of the latest is told of a certain elector in a West London constituency, who, in addition to being a keen poli-tician, has been twice confined in a lunatic asylum. On each occasion when discharged from durance he obtained a formal written statement from the pro-per authority declaring that he was With Great Success per authority declaring that he was once more in his right mind. At a recent political meeting he was extremely excited, and constantly interrupted the speakers. The chairman attempted the speakers. The chairman attempted to bring him to order by gentle means. They deserve success, for every person who has seen them has pronounced them the best fitting and most stylish coats of the season.

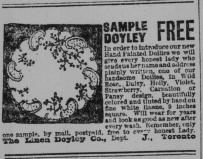

They come in three-quarter and seveneighth lengths, and are made in tight fitting and the popular Empire models, in Black, Fawn, Brown, Greys and Green. The sizes range from 32 to 42 inch bust measure.

the speakers. The chairman attempted to bring nim to order by gentle means, which falled, and then by stern and dignified reproof, which also falled. At last the chairman lost his patience. "Look here, sir," he said to the excited one, "you're behaving more like a madman than an elector." "Madman!" repeated the elector, with crushing scorn. "Twe got two certificates of sanity in my pocket, and I'll bet the chairman what he likes that he hasn't got one." Nor is that by any means a bad story that is told of a member of the United Club, which resembles the Eighty Club in being a nursery for parliamentary orators and candidates. Naturally, it happens occasionally that the men who are entity is the chairman of his meeting if he had ever before addressed an audience are relitive pleddly replied. "No, but I had ever before addressed an audie on politics, placidly replied, "No, but am practising." Mr. Birrell, who loves a joke, even if it is at his own expense, tells a good story of his candidature for West Fife, where his opponent was Mr. Erskine Wemyss, whose father and grandfather had both held the seat. Poor Mr. Birrell was quite at a disadin this connection, until h vaptage in this connection, until he had the good fortune to discover a moss-covered tombstone which revealed to him the fact that a remote ancestress of his lay buried in the neighboring churchyard of Abbots-hall. This discovery was varied for all it was boring churchyard of Abbots-hall. This discovery was worked for all it was worth. In time the tombstone cropped up at Mr. Wemyss's meeting. "I notice, sir," said a heckler, "two paragraphs in your address which seem to me to contradict one another. In the first you say that your father and grandfather represented the county of Fife in parliament, and that you hope to follow in their footsteps. In another paragraph you say that you are utterly opposed to the hereditary principle in legislation. Now, are you not at pres-tions from a man at the bask of the hall; but Nemesis was on his track. "Where," at last demanded the speaker, when dealing with the iniquities of the War Office, "where shall we look for an equal example of crass stupidity?" "Hear, hear!" bellowed the heckler. The speaker bowed to the gentleman at the back of the hall, thanked him for his enlightening answer, and sat down amid convulsions of laughter, in which the heckler felt unable to join. Few men have baffled the heckler more cleverly and effectively than the candidate who, at a recent meeting, candidate who, at a recent meeting, asked that all questions should be handed up on silps of paper, so that he might have time to consider his answers. And then he reeled them off in this fashion: To the first question my answer is yes; to the second, no; to the third, that I cannot say until I see the bill; to the fourth, certainly not—and so on, until he had exhausted the quesso on, until he had a soul in his audience knew what was the number of any particular question, the candidate es-following two stories, not of such re-cent date, but very little known. When Lord James contested Taunton in op-position to Serjeant Cox he made a clever speech, in which he ridiculed the idea of Taunton men returning his opponent, and at the conclusion of it said,

"Gentlemen, if Serjeant Cox is successful at the poll, I'll carry him on my ful at the poll, I'll carry him on my back all the way to Westminster"; to which sally the learned serjeant immediately retorted that he had given up donkey-riding ever since he was a boy. In the other case a candidate for a mining constituency thought to introduce pleasing variety into his meetings by getting his young brother to sing to the electors. Unfortunately the singer had little idea of tune, and his vocal career came to an ignominious end when one evening a "Geordie" called out, "Ah doan't blame thee, laad; thou "Ah doan't blame thee, laad; thou didst tha best. opposed to the hereditary principle in legislation. Now, are you not at present engaged in trying to ride into parliament on the backs of your father and grandfather?" The candidate was not upset by the suggestion. His reply was instantaneous: "Well, I would fifty times rather ride into parliament on the backs of my father and grandfather than on the tombstone of my grandmother's second cousin."

It is not often that a heckler is so summarily and effectively disposed of as was the case at a recent political meeting in the North of England. The candidate's speech had been disturbed every few seconds by loud interruptions from a man at the bask of the

JOHN DEGAN NEARLY DROWNED.

John Degan, of Sheffield street, had a close call from being drowned in the harbor about 11.30 c'clock last night. He had a couple of sailors on have by calling on T. W. Pile, 77 Port-H. M. S. Cornwall and started for the east side in his small boat. At the time of the accident the ferry steamer was passing round the stern of the war-ship and Degan rowed in front of her, and before she could be stopped she was on top of the small hoat. Degan was thrown into the water, but managed to catch hold of the steamer's stancheons under the guard, where he held on until rescued. His boat was also sav-

HIS VICTIMS KILLED.

COATICOOKE, Que., Oct. 27.—A serious fatality occurred in a gravel pit belonging to the corporation at Coaticooke yesterday afternoon between and 5 o'clock, when three men were buried beneath about 2,000 tons of gravel. It seems Jean Richard and Jos. Rickney, corporation workmen, were working in the pit when they were joined by Frank St. Cyr, insurance agent, who started to talk insurance. The conversation had proceed ed but a few minutes, when the men observed the bank falling. They made a desperate effort to escape, but could not get clear. Cyr's cries attracted the attention of the man who was haul-ing gravel and he gave the alarm. Very soon a large gang of men were at work with shovels, but it was not until two hours later that the bodies were recovered. The roadmaster stated that he had repeatedly warned the men not to work in the section of the pit where the accident happened. Three victims are married, and St. Cyr had

WHY HE WAS THANKFUL.

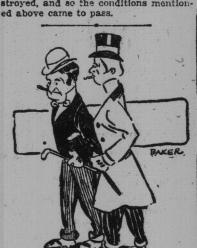

Wednesday, in view of the coming holiday a city school teacher started to impress a few lessons in thankfulness on the plastic minds of the youngsters in her room. "Now boys," she began, "there is not going to be any school morrow; who can tell me why?" Immediately there was a chorus— "'Cause it's Thanksgiving." "That is right," said the teacher. "Now I want some of you to tell me what you have to be thankful for." A number of waving hands denoted their owner's eagerness to tell their reasons for giving thanks. "Well, Albert, we will begin with you. What are you thankful for?"

Albert jumped from his seat, and with a voice vibrant with emotion replied,

DRESS SUIT CASE

MYSTERY DEEPENS. Another Case Found Con taining Missing Limbs,

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—The famous suit case mystery of Winthrop Thursday, Sept. 21, when the dismembered torso of a woman was found in a dress suit case floating in the harbor near the Winthrop shore, was brought into pro-minence again today when a second dress suit case was found floating in the Charles River, near the Charles-town bridge. The case found today contained the arms and legs, said by medical experts, to be those of a woman, and the police say there is no doubt they are the missing members of the torso found at Winthrop more than a month ago. On one of the hands there were three rings which, hands there were three ring, which, it is hoped, will give a clue to the identity of the wearer.

Today's discovery is closely linked with the Winthrop find of a month ago. The torso was wrapped in oll-cloth, and the limbs found today were encased in a wrapping identical to that wound about the torso. While investigating the Winthrop mystery the police located two nawn brokers

Many of the idle voyagers ventured the opinion that he would try to desert the boat in midocean if he saw a chance to get back to his club on a westbound steamer. But DeMille, big, indolent and indifferent, smiled carelessly and hoped he wouldn't bother anybody if he "stuck" "I'd net to the ship" until the end.

For a time the sea and the sky and the talk of the crowd were enough for the joy of living. But after a few peaceful days there was a lull, and it was then that Monty gained the nickname of Aladdin, which clung to him. From somewhere, from the hold or the rigging or from under the sea, he brought forth four darkies from the south who strummed banjos and sang mate. By this time we were a mile ragtime melodies. More than once during the voyage they were useful.

On the pretext that the yacht required a thorough "house cleaning" Brewster transferred his guests to the hotel of a fascinating village which was near the sea and yet quite out of the world. The place was nearly empty at the time, and the proprietor wept tears of joy when Monty engaged for his party the entire first floor of the house, with balconies overlooking the blue Mediterranean and a separate dining room and salon. Extra servants were summoned, and the Brewster livery was soon a familiar sight about the village.

"zoout 100 years ago, that real Hawaiian history was first made. Kamehameha I, who was then only a rude though ambitious chief on another island, having determined to become master of the entire group of islands, eame hither to crush the rebellious Oahuans, and drove their army, step by step, up this valley and finally over this fatal precipice, where they all perished. After that the chief was acknowledged as master of all the islands and was crowned Kamehameha I. When we drive back through the city you will see his statue, showing him in one of his wonderful feather robes, in front of the State House."

Meanwhile we had approached within a rod or so of the Pali, and all of

"What a queer thing to do," exclaimed Jacky, "to give folks back their presents that way!"

"Queer, indeed. But doubtless they think it equally queer in us to keep the farewell presents that our friends make us," said his auntie.

"Hm! Catch me giving back the basket of fruit Cousin Jim gave us when we sailed from San Francisco," muttered Jacky.

The next half hour we spent on the starboard side, viewing the shipping of Honolulu and the setting of mountains and valleys, with the "Punchbowl" in the foreground, as we passed. Next we skirted Diamond Head so close that we could see the path taken by those who climb to the top. Then our steamer pointed almost due south, and the first thing we knew we were fairly in the channel between Oahu and Molokal, our vessel rolling and pitching in the rough waters and the waves coming so high that they washed the decks.

Jacky says Polly Evans gave up first. She thinks he began to look pale around the gills first; at any rate, both Jacky and his auntie lost little time seeking their staterooms, and there they lay very quiet and hûmble for several hours. Finally, when the steamer came into the more peaceful waters between Molokai and Launai, they crept out on a sudden the stiff breeze, of which we had for some time been conscious, became a sweeping, shricking wind! The horses cowered and were glad to halt or be tied to a fence post, while we elambered out of the carriage and, holding tight to our hats, made difficult progress against the wind up between two great rocks and out at last on the verge of the Pali. Ah, such a view as it was! At our feet the sheer declivity over which Kamehameha I drove his enemies—a place which Jacky regarded with solemn and respectful curiosity, and some hundred feet below a wide green plain, covered with sugar plantations, bounded on one side by a high range of mountains and disappearing on the other into the vast Pacific!

We were facing nearly east.

"Do you realize, Jacky," asked his 'Auntie, "that those waters roll on and on and on twenty hundred miles before they touch San Francisco?" Jacky drew a deep breath.

"Geel and yet we are still in Americal" he said.

That night we went to bed with the birds, for the next day was to be a short one as regarded sightseeing. Bright and early we roze, also, and first of all got all our necessaries for a week packed into two or three pieces of hand luggage, for a trunk would be in the way where we were soon to go.

Then we took a car for the park at Walliki, near the foot of Diamond Head—a very prominent mountain slope jutting into the sea a little way below Monolulu.

Here we visited the South Sea Aquarium. And oh! if you could only have been with us to see the various tropical fishes! Such odd shapes, such unheard-of beautiful colorings as words cannot describe nor pictures show, and such markings! It is said that some of the less beautiful varieties can also be seen in the Battery Park aquarium in New York.

After Jacky and his auntie had admired and exclaimed over all these gorgeous representations of the sea life surrounding the islands, then their friends said:

friends said:
"Now you must see the finest specimens of all—the squids!"
Do you boys and girls know what a squid is? Well, Polly Evans did not. Nor did Jacky. If their friends had said "cuttlefish," our suspicions might have been aroused, and they certainly would have been if "devil fish" had been mentioned. would have been been mentioned.

But "squids"! We thought they would prove to be the crowning glory of the aquarium, in colors, markings, size and You can imagine, then, what our feelings were when we came face to face with our squids! Ugh! Loathsome was no word for them, with their great, gruesome, slimy pouches, which seemed to take the place of noses; from behind which we could see tongues of yellow darting hither and thither, and their many wriggling, reaching, slipping, sliding, grasping, contortioning tentacles!

interesting stories about the two islands.

"Over on the windward (east) side of Molokai," said he, "is the small peninsula at the foot of a great cliff, where the leper colony lives."

"Oh, is that where Father Damien came to live?" asked Jacky.

"Yes, and other men and women who have given up their lives to make the lives of the unfortunate lepers a little happier—heroes of whom you have never heard, probably; but when you reach your Uncle Charlie's, in Maul, get him to tell you about some of them."

It was not long before we reached our second channel, between the two islands we had just passed and the next island, Maul. Here again, the steamer rolled and pitched and the waves splashed the deck, but Jacky and his auntie kept up through it all, while fully two-thirds of the other passengers—many of them natives, too—were direfully ill!

"The King of Maui" smiled approvingly.
"You are doing mighty well." said he, "for these channels are a dozen times worse than the English Channel, which most people consider bad enough."
Next week Polly Evans will tell you of Maui and the visit to Jacky's Uncle Charlie.

TWO CANDLE CHARMS DID you ever try to blow out a dozen candles at once? It is hard to do and funny to try, doubly so when the person trying is blindfolded. Arrange twelve candles in a row—they can be slightly melted and stood on an old lacquered tray, or a better way is to put twelve nails point upward through a board, fastening a candle to each.

Then each person present is blindfolded in turn and told to blow out as many as possible in three trials. According to the number of candles left lighted will be the years before marriage.

A HALLOWEEN BOUSE PARTY

THERE STOOD THE GREAT HALLOWEEN SUPPER TABLE

a great, great favor. Won't you please say yes?" cried Evelyn Sanborn, bursting into her mother's room late one October afternoon. "Oh, mother, you must say yes; we are just crazy to do it. Aren't we, Ned and Bert?" said Sally.
"You better believe we are!" replied Ned. "And, mother, can't I have Sam Bolton? Fraidcat Sally says he's too rough and plays too many jokes. You'll let me have him, won't you?"
"Tan't I stay up, too, Muvver? Evelyn says I'm too little, and the spooks 'd det me, but I'd shoot 'em wif my dun, I would, whimpered little Bert.
"My dear children, one at a time, please. Evelyn, suppose you tell me what is this great favor."
"It's a Halloween party, mother. We want the boys and girls to stay all night, and we'll try lots of tricks and charms, just as father used to do in Scotiand when he was a little child; do let us have it, please."
"And, mother, can't we stay up till after midnight, just this once? It's horrid to have to go to be before the elves and pixles really come out. It's no iwonder none of our things ever come true," interrupted Sally.

"My dear, I am afraid the sandman would be jealous and shut your eyes up tight so you could not see his rivals, all the little people of make-believe land. However, you can have your party, as you wish it, if you promise to be sweet-tempered as lambs the next day."

The following days were exciting in the old colonial farm house where the Sanborns had lived for more than a hundred years. The children were busy from morning till night getting ready, and many were the consultations with father about his boyhood Halloween. First, the cutest invitations, painted by Evelyn, were sent out—two red-gowned witches, each with her black cat, to hold up a great yellow pumpkin, on which was printed:

"Witches, gnomes and pixes bold On Halloween will revel hold At Sanborn farm. They bid ye mortals, girl or boy, Who would their mystic rites enjoy, With naught of harm, To meet them just as midnight sounds Its first alarm."

Then apples were polished rosy red. Chestnuts were gathered from the woods, great ropes of acorns were strung, the boys took a special trip to town for candles, lemons, tiny mirrors and blue yarn, while Evelyn and Sally made a "dumb cake" of flour and water containing a ring, thimble, coin and button.

At last Halloween arrived, and with it the expected guests—nine in all—Mary CUTE INVITATIONS ontaining a ring, thimble, coin and with it the expected guests—nine in all—Mary and Rebecca Watson, Jack, Betty and Paul Harding, the Smith twins, Kathryn and George; Frank Brown and—yes, Sam Bolton.

"Hurry, boys and girls, with your unpacking. Supper will be served early to allow plenty of time for games," said Mrs. Sanborn, when all had arrived.

Hurry they did! Soon all were marching to supper to the weird music of Saint-Saens' "Danse Macabre," which Saily asked her mother to play, because it always made her feel so creepy and Halloweeny.

"Oh! oh! how lovely!" cried the children when the procession finally led down the steps into the old kitchen.

When mother said the Halloween party must be held in the kitchen the young Sanborns were quite disgusted; but now how glad they were! From the great oak rafters black with age hung ropes of vivid autumn leaves and jack-o'-lanterns in pumpkin, squash and cucumber; in the open fireplace huge logs crackled and flamed, while in the centre of the room stood the Halloween supper table.

You never saw such a table!

In the centre was an enormous scooped-out pumpkin filled with deep yellow chrysanthemums and boughs of red maple trailing down over the polished mandgany boards; dozens of witch candies and droll lanterns shed the only light; at each plate was a jolly looking gnome in green, sitting on a big red apple, and at either end was a huge pumpkin ple, with strings of popcorn leading from it.

Those pies were the greatest fun. They looked so real that you can imagine the surprise when Evelyn said:

"Every one of you must pull a popcorn string. Wait till I count three. Now—one, two, three; pull!"

Then from that pie (which was made of bran) jumped the queerest, merriest elves, each bearing a rhymed fortune. What sport it was to read them, and how every one laughed when little Bert, drawing one that read.

"Little boy, little boy, You'd better go to bed; Or the gob-e-lins will ketch you. And beat you till you're dead," gave a yell of fear and scampered off to his crib, as fast as he could go! He could not be coaxed down again till Evelyn told me she had written the verse just to tease him.

What fun that evening was!

Of course, every one bobbed for apples or tried to catch them in their mouths as th

Jack Morner's Pie.

A MAKE-BELIEVE GHOST

"They should come this Halloween, Sally, if they ever do, for there are thirteen of us. The clock is going to strike—Oh, Sally! what's that? Look! look!"
Sally took one look at a tall, ghostly figure in white that moved slowly from a dim corner, then gave shriek after shriek, which were echoed by the other children, little Bert fairly howling with fear.

"Why, why, what's the matter?" called father, as he rushed into the dark room, alarmed at the outcry.

"Fadder, fadder, tate me quick; my spock has tome to beat me dead!" howled Bert.

As Mr. Sanborn quickly lit the gas a white figure was seen trying to escape by the hall door.

"Sam Bolton," said Mr. Sanborn, sternly, "take off that sheet and mask instantly and show yourself the mean boy you are! It is only a coward who tries to frighten little children. There, there, Sally dear; don't tremble so. See, it is no one but Sam."

Then Mr. Sanborn made them all laugh by a jolly story, so that the scare was quite forgotten when mother announced bed-time.

"Sally." said Rebecca Watson, on the way upstairs, "those pixies never came at all."

"Of course not," replied Sally. "We yelled so loud we scared them off. Oh. dear, now we'll have to wait another whole year to know if there really are any."

Then there was the yarn charm, when a girl wound her ball of blue yarn on Halloween, and holding one end in her hand, went out alone and threw the ball into an open window of an empty house, saying over and over, "I wind, who holds?" fully expecting before the end was reached to see the face of her future husband. Or each girl can wind different colored yarns around each toe at night, as for example, a blue one for a doctor, purple for a minister, orange for an artist; the one that works off will show what is to be the business of her husband. Then, of course, the girls all walked backward down the ceilar stairs, with a mirror and lighted candle in their hands.

"Girls, I'm just scared to death," confessed Sally, when it came her turn; but she started off bravely.

Soon there was a wild reflect and be interested to the stairs of the lights and sit beford to the stairs of the lights and sit beford to the stairs and the lights and sit beford to the stairs and stairs

FIRST the invitations must, of course, be appropriate. Tiny note paper, with fairles and hobgoblins on it. can be bought; but any girl or boy with a very little trouble can make nicer ones. You might write the invitations on silver paper half moons, on which you can sketch (or paste, if you cannot draw) owls, gypsy fortune-tellers or horseshoes. Or, take pieces of red cardboard about four inches square; then cut out of black paper funny little goblins, witches and fairles like this:

Arrange them on the red card as artistically as possible, and print the invitations in black or gilt paint. If you can put it in rhyme, all the better.

The decorations should be of autumn leaves or bunches of wheat, jack-o'-lanterns, strings of popcorn, or pine conestied from narrow strips of deep yellow cheesecloth or bunting. The little gourds or squashes, deep yellow, striped green and ruddy brown, make cunning favors for each child's plate. Cut off the top and fill them with the old-fashioned round, red peppermint drops. If you can find one of the very long gourds (sometimes they are a couple of feet long), they are very attractive scooped out and filled with trailing vines or autumn leaves.

For refreshments be sure to have sticky molasses taffy, popcorn balls, doughnuts and hot green pickles, if you have nothing else. The ices can be bought in witch moulds, but if that is too expensive, serve it in a huge scooped-out pumpkin set on a platter surrounded with a wreath of ivy or autumn leaves.

That for them Love's dream would not prove a foe.

But where ripples show in the river's flow, It began to blow with a flurry of snow; There was no one in sight to take them in tow.

For the games, you can have any of the tricks which Polly Evans has told you elsewhere on this page. But if you prefer something different, why not have a phantom party? Tell all the boys and girls to come dressed in sheets, with their heads covered with a pillow case hood and a white mask. This is great sport. One of the nicest Halloweens Polly Evans remembers of her girlhood was a phantom party at her grandmother's. You can all unmask at supper and have other games later. It is great sport to fix up a tent in a corner and have some one dressed as a gypsy tell the phantoms' fortune.

If you like games for prizes, why not have a winter four-leaf clover party for good luck? Cut any amount of three-leaved and a few four-leaved clovers out of green tissue paper and numbered on the back. Hide them everywhere, the more out-of-the-way places the better, so long as a tiny edge is in view. When the hunt is over each boy and girl adds up the numbers on the back of the leaves found, counting twenty-five for every four-leafed clover. The person having the highest sum total wins the prize.

Or you might try tossing peanuts. Each player in turn is given fifteen peanuts, and standing about eight feet off tries to throw as many as possible into a small round basket. The one getting in the most nuts wins the prize.

Flames Threaten Powder and Dynamite Magazines in Halifax Fortress-Plucky Soldiers and Sailors.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 27 .- One of the strongest and oldest forts which protect Halifax harbor is Fort Charotte, on George's Island, its frowning embrasures facing the seaward, commanding the approaches. It is the centre of the submarine mining operations which are carried on extensively in the surrounding waters. In the oil on this island fire broke out this even ing and for two hours the flames licked the building, devoured a great deal of valuable property, and threatened the submarine mines building. In this building was a vast quantity of submar-ine mine supplies, officially estimated as worth a quarter of a million dollars. Had the wind been a few points more to the eastward, this building could not have escaped, but as things turned out, it was not perceptibly damaged. The main store building, where the fire originated, and where it burned itself out. was completely destroyed. In this building, which formerly was a baroil department, the carpenter shop, the general mechanical department, the cook house and a large space devoted to stores. The light, inflammable material furnished just the kind of stuff for a rapid spread of the fire and the flames licked their way along so quick-ly that in a few minutes after discovery they were rising in red forks and great sheets through the roof.
