THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Take Father Morriscy's "No. 10" (Lung Tonic) And Be Sure that it will cure your cough, cold or lung troubles. It is the very same medicine which the priest-physician himself prescribed so often and so successfully during his lifetime, and thousands are the cases it has cured.

Take it—or give it to the children—with confidence, because it is absolutely free from opium, morphine or any other harmful drug. Many cough medicines are loaded with these dangerous ingredients, but Father Morriscy would not use anything that was not perfectly safe even for a baby.

"No. 10" contains nothing but Nature's own remedies—Herbs, Roots and Balsams—combined as only Father Morriscy knew how to combine them. Keep a bottle in the house as a safeguard against all troubles of throat and lungs. Trial size 25c. per bottle. Regular size 50c.

MY WARD AMYRIL

I was annoyed when a telegram summoned me suddenly to the Highlands, where my manager lay ill with a sudden attack of pneumonia. I went, of course, and was detained much longer than I had expected. I was impatient to get back to the city, and to Amyril.

"The Lenten season has always seemed to me a clever way to settle up past debts of commission and omission," I remarked to Hettie as I lounged in her pretty tea-room, the day after my return. "No one enjoys the church services, Lenten mass, and oratory more than I do. It is extremely uplifting. Then Lent gives you women of fashion a chance to pick up flesh again, and to regain your normal color. Amyril looks like a ghost, a charming, ethereal spirit about to take wing for a better world. I have never seen her with that soulful, spiritual look. What have you done to the child while I was away? What has happened? Is anything wrong with her?"

Hettie laughed amusedly.

"How in the world could anything happen to Amyril?" she asked, putting up a pretty hand covered with rings to conceal a slight yawn.

"Well, I am glad to hear the child is all right," I said, getting up to go. "That was a terribly sad tragedy about young Penrose. Did they find out how it happened? I heard he was quite dead when he was found in the woods, his gamebag and rifle by his side. I was quite shocked. He was an exceptionally fine young fellow. I liked him immensely."

"Yes. Wasn't it awful? Nobody can account for it," Hettie said abstractedly.

Coaching, like other so-called amusements, pulls on one after a bit. I have my coach and horses brought out occasionally when Amyril wants to vary the pleasure of motoring by getting up a gay coaching party.

Driving four horses is rather a bore as there are always a number of automobiles spinning by, and the country roads are not specially good, and my bays are mettlesome. There is very little pleasure in the performance. But it pleases Amyril.

I never saw the child in better spirits, apparently, than that afternoon. "All right. Get up your coaching party. But you are not to touch the lines, remember. And be ready by 5," I told her resignedly.

She was flushed, beautiful and laughing when she climbed up and took her seat on the box by my side, answering with brilliant bandinage what the men said as they crowded around.

I looked anxiously in her sweet face, but still found that lurking pain peeping from behind her long lashes.

"Isn't this delightful, Miss Amyril?" Fanning asked over her shoulder.

"Life seems worth while in the spring. Everybody ought to bud out and get new life and make promises and glorious plans for the future. What do you say, Miss Amyril? Can't you be stirred into sympathy with some poor devil. Will you listen—"

With a low cry Amyril snatched the lines from me, and leaning forward gave the wheeler a sharp cut with the whip. Of course, he reared, and bit.

"What are you doing?" I cried hastily, gathering back the reins and steadying the horses as they dashed recklessly along, avoiding with difficulty the deep ditch on either side, which meant death and destruction if we got into it.

Then I remembered the railroad crossing just ahead, and the prolonged whistle of a locomotive told me plainly enough that the express was coming, and whether our coach would cross first, or the train, or whether we would meet at the crossing was a problem to be solved in a very few seconds.

"Hold on with all your might," I ordered peremptorily. Then leaning forward I lashed the horses to the top of their speed, regardless of Fanning's horrified exclamation.

Well, we just did it.

We tore across the track and the train thundered past behind us, almost touching the coach, while terrified shouts greeted us from the passengers looking out of the Pullman windows.

After a mile or so of racing, I quieted the animals, and gradually brought them down to a standstill in the middle of the road, where they stood trembling and panting and foam-flecked.

Everybody climbed out, the women half hysterical with fright.

"We came within an ace of being smashed to pieces by a train. We would have been killed, every one of us. It was only Wadsworth's splendid driving which saved us." Fanning explained as we pulled up, to Hettie, who was waiting patiently for us in the hall.

"Was that what you wanted, you cruel child?" I whispered hoarsely to Amyril as I lifted her tenderly down and she clung to me.

"Oh, if I could only die!" she whispered back.

The day following was Easter—calm and solemn Easter.

I strolled through the cemetery, that home of the peaceful dead, because there are wreaths and bows I like to distribute, in loving remembrance of my own loved ones who have gone.

There was a mound before me which sprang, in her gracious generosity, was decking with light grasses and clover, coaxing the freshly planted violets around it to blossom. In the marble cross above it his name was cut.

Ah, child! child. The decking of graves—and kindly forgetfulness—all that Nature can do for you!

And I—I—must stand aside. A cluster of white blossoms lay where her hand had placed them and turning, I felt like an outcast, and envied his peaceful slumber.—New Orleans Times.

A falling tiny nerve—no larger than the finest silken thread—takes from the heart its pulse, its power, its regularity. The stomach also has its hidden, or inside nerve. It was Dr. Shoop who first told us it was wrong to drug a weak or failing stomach. Heart or kidneys. His prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—directed straight for the cause of these ailments—these weak and faltering inside nerves. This, no doubt, clearly explains why the Restorative has of late grown so rapidly in popularity. Druggists say that those who test the Restorative even for a few days soon become fully convinced of its wonderful merit. Anyway, don't drug the organ. Treat the cause of sickness is the only sensible and successful way. Sold by all dealers.

Was God in the Earthquake?

Sir Oliver Lodge, lecturing at Birmingham, the other day, said he mentioned the earthquake subject partly because he found people so much upset by the occurrences of those great catastrophes, and a certain number had been writing in the press and elsewhere saying it had undermined their faith, and that no longer could they believe in a beneficent Ruler of the universe because of these happenings. That was a result of ignorance, of want of thought. These catastrophes were not new in the history of the world, and if they had been a thoughtful people they would have adapted their ideas of the universe to those catastrophes long ago. It was part of their understanding of the universe to realize that they did occur, that they would occur, and why they occurred, and to readapt themselves to its circumstances from time to time. They must realize that the crust of the earth would settle down, and the people that were living in the immediate centre of the disturbance would suffer.

But, these things did not happen casually or accidentally. They happened in a perfectly law-abiding way, which could be allowed for beforehand, and against which precautions could be taken.

SCOURGES AND CHARACTER

They found the four great scourges of the days of the Old Testament were the sword, famine, noisome beasts, and the pestilence, but no longer did they subsist in this country. Apropos of the scourge of famine, Sir Oliver said that they might have a famine in England if they did not bring more land into cultivation and try to grow their own crops. So long as they were satisfied to be dependent upon foreign countries for their corn, it was possible there might be a famine in this country. As they had banished these scourges by their understanding of the universe, so they could banish others which still afflicted them.

He found that the hardship of their condition, the strenuousness with which they had to fight to overcome the warfare against natural evils must be good for them, keeping them strong, healthy, and energetic, developing the character, which after all, was the great thing. It was character they took with them through time and eternity. The manner of their death was not of any great importance; the important thing was what sort of people they were. If they had a strong, well-developed character, it did not matter whether they existed on earth or somewhere else. That was a thing worth remembering in face of these catastrophes.

All these things that happened were no doubt in the purpose of God. This must be called in some respects a secular universe. The things of daily life, their ordinary activities, were just as important as anything else. People sometimes thought that they were in a commonplace, workaday world, and that afterwards they would be in a more holy region where their activities would be entirely different. He did not believe it. He believed this place was just as holy as any other if they saw it and tried to make it so.

Gems of Thought

Tears never yet wound up a clock or worked a steam engine.—Wise Sayings. Dingy ye meddle, fair; it's niver no good a threshin' other folk's corn; ye always gits the flail agin' yer own eye somehow.—Ouida.

Honor is but the reflection of a man's own actions shining bright in the face of all about him, and from thence rebounding upon himself.—Wise Sayings.

I don't like to talk much with people who always agree with me. It is amusing to coquette with an echo a little while, but one soon tires of it.—O. W. Holmes.

Most people celebrate their birthday as only so many victories over time, with not a recollection of the many good and gentle hopes and thoughts they may have wounded or destroyed in the battle.—Wise Sayings.

The genuine alone are brave; honest souls dread a lie more than the frowns of a thousand despots. Mark his consistency. In spite of all the questions, cross-questions, and brow-beating, he never flinches from his first assertion. He is consistent throughout. His honest soul, though put through hottest furnaces, will come out nothing but metal. Truth is that subtle element which alone gives unity to all the varied parts of a man's life. Error makes a man contradict himself, makes his utterances and deeds jostle against each other like logs of wood on the dashing wave.—The Homilist.

Croup positively stopped in 20 minutes, with Dr. Sloop's Croup Remedy. One test alone will surely prove this truth. No vomiting, no distress. A safe and pleasing syrup.—50c. Sold by all dealers.

Motherly Love

Last among the characteristics of woman is that sweet motherly love with which Nature has gifted her. It is almost independent of cold reason, and wholly removed from all selfish hope of reward. Not because it is lovely does the mother love her child, but because it is a living part of herself—the child of her heart, a fraction of her own nature. In every uncorrupted nation, this feeling is the same; climate, which changes everything else, changes not this. It is only the corrupting forms of society which have power gradually to make luxurious vice sweeter than the ten trials and toil of maternal love.—Herder.

Opportunities

Let us not wait for chances for doing good to come to us, but to go out to meet them. Too many beautiful opportunities escape us otherwise. As charity begins at home, so should love. We don't care much for either the charity or love that would leave its nearest to wait for duty or affection, and go out into the world to work. We find it a delightful plan to make each one of our homefolks happy about some one thing each day of our life—plan little surprises for their delight, do little deeds for them, brighten a dull hour, or congratulate them upon some achievement of their own.

Of one thing we are certain, we are to glory of our commendations, too stingy of our praise, and alas! to lavish of our blame. "Thoughts are things," and words, if true, are their manifestations. How often have we thought favorably of many things, yet said no word. For all such sins of omission we must ever suffer deep regret. How easy it would have been to have said "That is so beautiful!" or "How well you do!"

We think of things like these when our opportunities are flown forever; when the dear head we loved lies low—when the brave hands are still. If we had only spoken, the way must have been more bright, the labor less dull and wearing!

The Girl That is Pale

She is in danger, her system is run down, weak—she needs nourishment, needs richer blood. More than all else she needs Ferrozene, needs it because it brings back the nerve energy which rapid growth and energy have exhausted. The old-time vigor, happy spirits and new strength return with Ferrozene. The delicate maid is energized, strengthened and rebuilt. Isn't it worth while using Ferrozene when it surely does so much. At all dealers in 50c. boxes.

Address
GREETINGS PUBLISHING COMPANY, LIMITED
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1909

We have received a pamphlet issued by the St. Andrews Town Council setting forth the claims of that town for a winter port. It contains an amount of data of much importance to those engaged in the commerce of the world, and a fund of general information of material value that can be studied with advantage by those who give thought to national trade problems. The facts are given in concise form, and the publication is most creditable to Mr. R. E. Armstrong of the Beacon, who is principally responsible for its issue.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY

The New York Outlook, noting how the danger call of the Republic was responded to by every ship which caught the cry, says: This is the first triumph of the wireless telegraph, a revelation of the heart of our fellow men. No other instrument ever so unveiled the spirit of modern humanity. The despatches that flashed from ship to ship and shore revealed, more impressively than words of flame on a fiery scroll in the sky could have done, the forces of sympathy that exist in these days among men. If sometimes, as we learn of corruption in politics and business and decadence in personal morals and family life, we think Christendom a misnomer, we need remind ourselves of these wireless messages. The indifference that allows a man to stagger and die unnoticed in the crowd of an Asian city is impossible in Christendom—because it is Christendom. The bits of paper on which the wireless operators wrote the messages of warning and guidance, of hope and courage, contain the convictions of men as truly as did ever any creed or confession. This is the first service of wireless telegraphy—the service of revealing the divinity that somehow through the centuries has been growing dominant in men.

TOWN AFFAIRS

The affairs of the town as administered by the Mayor and council, is a system of government that should approximate toward perfection, considering that the people have it in their power to select the ablest and best men in the community as administrators of town affairs. When the citizens are not interested to the extent of securing the best available men, it is hardly proper to exhibit a spirit of fault-finding and prejudice with those who are endeavoring to govern the town, and criticise their efforts if not attended with best results. Now, that the town accounts are out, it is the right and duty of every citizen to examine them carefully, and if it is found that town affairs have been administered at too much expense to take exception to what may be considered unjustifiable cost of maintenance. It may be that the tax rate is oppressive, but this can perhaps be accounted for by the valuation of taxable property being in excess of what it would be, if assessments were made by competent persons, rather than by any extravagance of the town government. If, as some think, the town is facing serious problems, which shows itself in the failure of any new industries to locate here, or of ones now here to develop in larger proportions, may it not be that one of the chief reasons for this is the apathy of the citizens themselves rather than the fault of the town government. The important question is, what is the burden of assessment required to maintain the municipal services that has been thrown upon the citizens by incorporation? If the burden is greater than the citizens think they are able to bear, it is up to them to make new propositions to carry on, at less cost, municipal affairs, and still have efficiency in all departments.

Thriving Village of Back Bay to Have Sardine and Fertilizer Plants. Company Formed

A sardine factory, to be one of the most complete of its kind, is to be erected at Back Bay. The sardine business is becoming more important each year, and the abundance of fish and unparalleled shipping facilities, make this an ideal location for this industry.

The directors of the company who are interested in the enterprise are: Wm. McNichol, David McNichol, John McNichol, Geo. Chubb, Herb. McLean and Andrew McGee.

The factory will be located near the public landing and have a capacity of twenty-five hogheads per day. Kippered herring, clams and scallops will also be put up in season. The industry will give employment to a hundred hands, and under the personal supervision of McNichol Bros., the goods will find a ready market, as they have had varied experience and training in the business, and their products in the past have always been noted for general excellence. The factory will be fitted up with modern apparatus and will be up to date in every particular.

A fertilizer plant will also be established. Lime rock, which is used largely in the manufacture of fertilizers is found here in abundance.

The directors of the new company are liberal and enterprising and take an active interest in all that pertains to the advancement of the village, and the success of the enterprise is assured.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Advertisers get increased results from our increased circulation.

The dramatic club in connection with the Division will soon put on a new play.

J. Sutton Clark purchased a fine looking Clydesdale mare, at the sale of horses in St. John last week.

Connors Bros. have received their spring caps. They are the latest shades and shapes and sell at 35c. to $1.00.

All our merchant advertisers have established a reputation for fair dealing, and as a result are drawing a good patronage from the surrounding country.

J. Sutton Clark has an attractive window display in connection with Sherwin-Williams paint. A window of this kind always draws the attention of the shopper, and is bound to sell the goods.

It is reported and generally believed F. J. Harding is to be reinstated in the position of agent of the Marine and Fisheries department, and that in a short time he will be superannuated as he is not in good health.—Globe.

H. V. Dewar has purchased a gasoline boat, and will put her in commission in the spring. The boat has a four horse power engine and is said to be very speedy. Quite a fleet of power boats will be on the river when the season opens.

Grant & Morin have been improving the appearance of their fine store, by a new show window, and a case for displaying cutlery. This enterprising firm are receiving new goods every day and are headquarters for hardware of every description.

Robert Loring, of Montreal, Canadian representative of Messrs. R. Hoe & Co., builders of printing presses, is at the Royal. Mr. Loring's errand to the city is to take up with the Standard newspaper people the matter of supplying them with a printing plant.—Globe.

Our ambition is to have all the news. Some items escape us. You can assist us by sending any notes of interest you can gather. Our outside correspondence are helping us make a newspaper, and we hope they will continue to furnish our readers with any local happenings. Send us all the news and great will be your reward.

The upsetting of a toboggan at the end of a swift run, on McLannachan's field, on Friday evening last, caused a number of minor injuries to the members of a merry party who were enjoying themselves immensely. Miss Annie O'Neill received several nasty cuts on the face and Mr. G. Sherman had a bone in his wrist broken. The others were thrown on the hard ice and severely shaken.

It is little use for the local editor to waste his lungs and sprain his spine in trying to boom a town when the citizens all stand around with their hands in their pockets and indifferently wait for something to turn up. If the capitalists or business men do not put their shoulders to the wheel and do a little boosting it is useless for the editor to try and boom things. He can write "boom" articles themselves do not take hold and push, the town will forever stick in the mud. Of what use is it for the local paper to suggest improvements and new enterprises if the suggestions are never acted upon? One man cannot boom a town. It requires the concerted action of the citizens. When one man shoulders a town and attempts to carry it there are always a lot of cranky kickers ready to jump on top of the load. Unity of action is what knocks.—Ex.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

The Government Break Water under process of construction, at Welch Pool, Campobello, has been stoned down to low water mark, at which point it has been raised some fifteen feet, upward toward sea level at high water mark. A crib work thirty by sixty was placed in position this week, reaching out beyond the point mentioned, sixty feet, and is being stoned to hold it in anchorage. Evidently E. B. Reed, contractor, is "up to snuff," and the log haulers are taking advantage of the good studding to make all this possible.—Eastport Citizen.

The grocery and provision store of Captain James A. Calder, located at Deer Point, Campobello, was broken into one evening last week, between the hours of six and seven o'clock, while the captain's son in charge, was at supper, and the money drawer rifled of its contents, between nineteen and twenty dollars. The entrance was made by breaking one of the large back windows. No arrests have been made, but it is said the owners are investigating a clew which may lead to the apprehension of the guilty party.—Sentinel.

The debating club had an animated discussion Monday evening, the question being, Resolved: That capital punishment is justifiable. Some novelties were introduced by several speakers, the most amusing being the different interpretations of scripture bearing on the subject under discussion. Several surprises were sprung along these lines, showing that a careful study of the good book, had been made by some members who have never been suspected of using this excellent line of study before. Dr. Alexander led off for the affirmative side and the following array of talent ably supported him: Dr. Taylor, C. H. McGee, Rev. H. I. Lynds, Edw. McGrattan. The negative side was championed by K. B. Wathen, leader, with the following gladiators: H. McKeanie, S. L. L. Lott, H. R. Lawrence, A. C. Toy, Thos. Kent. The presiding judge, Mr. Leo McGrattan, performed his duties with a Chesterfieldian grace, and the soul stirring addresses evidently made a deep impression upon him. In announcing his decision he warmly complimented all the speakers, and decided in favor of the affirmative.

A Jacksonville paper of a recent date relates an unfortunate accident, of which the victim was a young man whose home was in Red Beach. He was a brother of J. E. Cook who resided here at one time, and is now mate of the S. S. Wm. Cobb. The schooner George E. McFadden, 936 tons, Capt. Meader, from Norfolk with cargo of coal, after experiencing a most tempestuous voyage, arrived in port with her flag at half mast, due to the loss of her mate, Mr. Helon Cook, who was swept overboard when the vessel was fifty miles northeast of Frying Pan shoals at midnight Sunday, Feb. 7th. While the vessel was riding the mountainous seas, a gigantic wave struck her, causing the port anchor to give way. The mate, who was under the forecastle searching for a piece of suction hose to take the place of one that had previously been carried away, hearing the anchor go, attempted to go aft on the lee side, evidently to report the occurrence to Capt. Meader, and this was the last seen of him, for, as he started, the vessel was sent into another heavy sea that broke over her, and the mate was washed overboard. Every effort was made to discover him in the angry waters, but all attempts were futile. Although the vessel was hoisted to immediately after the accident and Capt. Meader lay by until 10 o'clock Monday, nothing more was seen of the unfortunate man. In such seas it was impossible for anyone to live. When leaving Hampton Roads he met the schooner William Cobb, of which his father is in command, and through the courtesy of Capt. Meader anchor was dropped and Mr. Cook had the pleasure of seeing his father, the first opportunity in some months, and it is needless to say that his last meeting will always be a fond recollection to his father.

The Evolution of the Steamer

The cutting of the transatlantic record this week by the giant Mauretania to four days and 20 hours from New York to Queenstown, with an average of 25.20 knots per hour, emphasizes more than anything else the triumphant evolution of the steamer during the past fifty years. The best eastward trip previous to this was made by the same ship in 4 days, 22 hours, 29 minutes, but the best previous average sustained speed was 25.05 knots, made by the Lusitania last August on her record westward trip of 4 days, 5 hours. It seems a far cry from the great steel turbines that cover upwards of 600 knots in the 24 hours, back to the little wooden side-wheelers or single screw ten-knot craft. Yet iron hulls only began to be adopted in 1845, the change from paddle to screw was not made until 1888 (and slowly came into effect then) while the compound engine was first used in paddle steamers in 1856 and did not come into general use until 1870, triple-expansion engines being adopted later. It was about 1879 before steel ships came into vogue and the idea of twin-screws was not adopted in the transatlantic trade until the City of New York came out in 1888. But the gross tonnage of the world's steam shipping today more than doubles that of 1888, and the discrepancy is steadily growing greater.

Weak Kidneys

Weak kidneys cause pain in the back, the head, the eyes, the ears, the nose, the throat, the chest, the stomach, the bowels, and the bladder. They also cause a general debility, a loss of energy, and a tendency to catch colds and other ailments. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine especially prepared to reach these sensitive nerves. Among the Bravest of Queens

Queen Elena of Italy, who has been doing such splendid work at Messina, is one of the most unconventional of royalties, and innumerable stories are told about her.

The King and Queen and a large party had gone to Castel Porziano to shoot. It was an exceedingly cold day and luncheon was served round a big bonfire. One of the Royal equestrians, wishing to show how far he could jump, wagered that he could clear the bonfire.

He took a short run and leaped across the middle of the flames, but he had misjudged the distance. He stumbled and fell, and in a second his clothes were aflame. The women screamed and the men stood paralyzed with horror. Only the Queen kept her wits about her, she threw herself on the esquerry, and, heedless of the danger to herself, tore off the burning pieces of cloth with her bare hands and choked the flames with her skirts.

She was one of the first ladies in Italy to ride a bicycle. The King did not altogether approve of such a very democratic idea, and Queen Elena was careful not to let the King see her on the machine.

While the Court was staying at one of the country palaces Her Majesty was one day tempted to take a spin unaccompanied. She had an enjoyable ride, but as she entered the palace courtyard who should she meet first but the King. It may have been excitement or it may have been a guilty conscience, but somehow or other the wheels skidded, and the Queen was thrown from her machine.

"That is what comes of being too independent," he told her severely. "You are covered with mud; how can you go through the main entrance in such a state?"

Queen Elena looked ruefully down at her soiled garments. "You are right," she said, meekly. "Will you take the bicycle?"

While the King wheeled the bicycle away the Queen went round the courtyard and entered the palace by a back staircase.

One day in the course of a walk she entered a peasant's cottage. To the surprise and alarm of the carbiniers, who always followed her, she failed to come out again, and, after waiting anxiously for over an hour, they boldly knocked and entered. There was no one there but the peasant's wife, who declared positively that the Queen had left some time before. The guards had seen no one leave the cottage but an old, bent woman in the ordinary dress of a Savoyard peasant, but the woman persisted that the Queen had gone, and the men hurried back to the villa.

Here they found the Queen, seated at a window, laughing heartily at the trick she had played on them, for she herself had been the old woman in the peasant's dress.

On another occasion, when she and the King were walking in the country the Queen became thirsty. They found an old woman by the roadside minding a cow, and the King civilly asked if she could give them some milk. The old woman, having no idea who the strangers were, bluntly refused, but after a short persuasion she agreed to go to her cottage and fetch a glass of water.

Immediately she had gone the Queen picked up a bowl she had left behind and herself milked the cow. Having satisfied her thirst, she put a gold piece in the bowl and retired with the King behind a hedge to see what happened.

The old woman came back in a little while with the water, and, after an indignant glance round to see where the strangers had gone, she espied the gold piece in the bowl. Then, to the astonishment of their Majesties, she fell on her knees, under the impression that she had been visited by saints.

Have you a pain—of any kind, anywhere? Stop just a minute and think! It matters not whether it be womanly pains, head pains, or any kind of a pain, one of Dr. Shoop's Little Pink Pain Tablets will surely stop it in 20 minutes. Formula plainly printed on the 25c. box. Sold by all dealers.

CLEAR THE FILTERS!

Your Health Depends On It.

In its course around the body the blood is continually gathering up waste matter—worn out tissue and other impurities.

Then it flows through the kidneys which should filter out all this poisonous material and empty it into the bladder. But sometimes the kidneys get sluggish and clogged up with waste matter and fail to do their work properly. Then the trouble begins. Instead of leaving the kidneys pure and life giving, the blood comes out still loaded with Uric Acid, which it carries as every part of the body. Settling in joints and tissues, this Uric Acid very soon causes Rheumatism, with its untold suffering.

The natural, sensible course then is to clear the filters—the kidneys—with "Father Morriey's No. 7." One-half three times a day, followed by a glass of cold water, will bring relief in a very short time. Joints will limber up, if blood will be purified, and the Rheumatism cured. Get at your druggist or from Father Morriey Medicine Co. Chatham, N. B.

Know His Business

A wanderer, wearing a suit of the kind that might have been in the height of fashion in 1879, ascended the steps of a dwelling a few mornings ago and as for the lady of the house.

"May I trouble you for a glass of my ma'am?" he said, removing his hat in her appearance.

"Certainly," she replied, "but household could have—"

"I beg your pardon, ma'am," he interposed. "You were about to say the household could have supplied with as simple a thing as a glass of water but this is a case in which a glass could hardly be trusted. I am indebted to the lady of the house next day," continued, feeling, "for a collared stewed mutton and rice pudding peculiarly grateful to the palate of a hungry man, and this is why I ask you for the remains of the ham, evidently a masterpiece of those whose rich fragrance still lingers in air of your kitchen, if I may take liberty of so expressing myself. I trespass on your kindness for a glass of water, however, you will pardon if I make a stipulation which could be met at the house of your neighbor next door. Do you me water?"

"We do," said the lady wonderingly. "That is good," he rejoined, emphasis. "One question more: filtered?"

"No sir; it is not," he said, shaking his head. "You will pass if I withdraw my request for a glass of water, but I am a little particular," he concluded with a hollow cough.

"The operation of boiling," he continued, "destroys the life of the harmful germs that render your city water at this season of the year, as at all others, dangerous to the system, yet leaves them floating in the liquid itself. They are a human consumption and also eliminated."

"And this leads me to remark, went on, placing his begrimed hat to his coat pocket and drawing small brass object, "that I am in possession of a filter which can be attached to the nozzle of your tea-kettle, and is guaranteed to—"

Clearing-up Shower

When mists have hung low over hills, and the day has been dark with intermittent showers, at length you begin to hurry across the sky, if it rises, and the rain comes pouring then we look out and exclaim, this is the clearing-up shower when the floods have spent the clouds part to let the blue sky through them, and the west wind then away seaward, and though yet black and threatening, we see silver edges as they pass, and just behind them are shining the glittering dew-drops, and lo! we look the sun bursts forth, and then up in the eastern heaven the glory of the rainbow.

Now, to the Christian whose been dark with brooding care would not lift themselves, and chilling rains of sorrow have intervals through all his year with its sudden blast and storm the clearing-up shower; and just as it is the songs of angels, and the glory of heaven.

RHEUMATIC TREATMENT

Some Simple Precautions Which Will Prevent a Recurrence of Attacks.

A prominent citizen, who had for years suffered from rheumatism and friends the benefits of his experience, and incidentally a copy of the prescription which was of material assistance in effecting a cure.

In the first place, he found that every time he partook freely of acid fruits his old trouble returned; and, secondly, he learned that it was absolutely essential to keep the kidneys active. To do this it was necessary to drink plenty of water. Occasionally he would dissolve a lithia tablet in the water to assist its action on the kidneys.

The treatment is as follows: Procure from your druggist: Fluid Extract Cascara, 1/2 oz.; Compound Syrup Rhubarb, 1 oz.; Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla (Compound), 1 oz.; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, 5 oz.

Take one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

This is valuable information. This can be mixed at home. Save the prescription.

Soldier and Minister

The retired Archbishop of York, Dr. MacLagan, was born on the anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo. He was educated at Edinburgh High School, but instead of proceeding to the university, he joined the army. As a young soldier he was sent to India, and there served for five years, from 1847 to 1852, and retired with the rank of lieutenant. It is said that the fact of his birth being on such a date had something to do with his military career in early manhood.

"That was a great birthday, and you must make a soldier of him," said one old soldier to the father.

"But it was Sunday, and you should make him a minister," rejoined the nurse.

He became both soldier and minister.

Nothing in the way of a cough is quite so annoying as a tickling, teasing, wheezing bronchitis-cough. The quickest relief comes perhaps from a prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And besides, it is so thoroughly harmless that mothers give it with perfect safety even to the youngest babies. The tender leaves of a simple mountain shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its remarkable curative effect. A few days' rest will tell. Sold by all dealers.

Loving Words

Who will cost but little,
You, lying on the hill of life;
At they make the weak and weary
Stronger, braver for the strife?
Do you count them only trifles?
What on earth are sun and rain?
Never was a kind word wasted,
Never was one said in vain.
So, as up life's hill we journey,
Let us scatter, all the way,
Kindly words, to be as sunshine
In the dark and cloudy day.
Grudge no loving word, my brother,
As along through life you go,
To the ones who journey with you;
If you love them, tell them so.

It had its Limitations

"Madam," said the young man who had called at the door, "I have the pleasure of introducing to you our new automatic house-cleaning machine—a simple little thing which does the whole work of house-cleaning leaving you merely the general supervision."

"Does it do all, eh?" demanded the woman of the house. "Will it wash the outside of the upstairs windows?"

"Why, no, madam, but—"

"Will it take down, wash stretch to dry, iron and hang up the parlor curtains?"

"Well, of course, this machine—"

"Will it paint the kitchen, and make my daughter help with the dishes?"

"Oh, madam, this machine—"

"Will it wash the winter bedding and put it away; lay down the furs with moth balls, sew on flutons, set three meals a day, and pacify the household?"

"No, madam. You have misunderstood the limitations of my machine."

"Limitations! It will be a long time before any man will get up a machine to do all a woman has to do in her house."

The agent silently faded away.

Men and Events

A pleasing feature of the Lincoln Centennial has been the readiness of prominent Canadians, lay and cleric to identify themselves with the notable and solemn occasion. Several clergymen have pronounced eulogies upon the great Emancipator from the pulpit, instead of offering the usual sermon—thus happily illustrating the fact, which has not always been recognized, that moral worth is not confined to boundaries or nationality.

In the popular mind Lincoln is regarded as the Great Emancipator, but, of course, the freeing of the slaves was simply a war measure. The Civil War was fought, not to free the slaves, but to save the Union. At the same time, it was slavery which jeopardized the Union; and those who see the hand of Providence in human history, insist that back of what seemed a mere incident of the campaign, were irresistible currents of tendency, divinely directed toward the consummation foreseen and prepared for—the liberation of four million slaves, maintained under a system the cruelties of which so obsessed the young man Lincoln, that he vowed, when present at the auction of a beautiful slave girl, that if he ever got the chance he would hit it and hit it hard.

There is, at the same time, a sardonic mockery in the account of the banquet held in connection with the celebration of the anniversary of Lincoln's birth. Each of the gentlemen sat down to a dinner which cost $25 a plate. The man whose memory was being honored was, in his lifetime, one of the most simple men alive. He was born and brought up under circumstances which forbade the notion of comfort, not to speak of luxury. Abraham Lincoln was well on to greatness before he had accustomed himself to a white collar. His wife, indeed, had much trouble in inducing him to wear a collar and tie.

Even when he could afford personal gratifications, he lived the life of an anchorite; and to the committee who came to notify him of this nomination for the presidency, he presented a jug of water and some glasses. At the White House, he was abstemious to a degree. Indeed, his Spartan simplicity was a cause of offence to the bon-vivants of the time.

To honor so direct and simple a man with a $25 per plate dinner seemed somewhat incongruous; but magnificent banquets are given, and monuments erected to the memory of "Bobbie" Burns and Edgar Allan Poe in many parts of the world, although in the lifetime of these men of genius their portion was neglected.

When, however, the name bulks and posterity approves, everybody is anxious to be associated with the name which is on the general lip. This illustrates the ingrained snobishness of human nature. Burns and Poe, in their poverty and recklessness, were passed by unheeded. With their works and their memory acclaimed by the world, it is incumbent upon those who would be accounted social or intellectual leaders to identify themselves with movements and demonstrations which would honor those who needed bread and shelter in their lives.

It is curious, too, to note how confidently certain people will ally themselves with genius, when genius is long dead and fittingly appraised. Men who are at home in the mart, but have not hitherto been suspected of intellectual sympathies, eagerly range themselves with those who might appropriately claim comradeship with genius.

When greatness is universally admitted, it is easy to hold a $25 per plate dinner. There is no risk of social loss when the world acclaims; and the humble cabin is forgotten when fame blows its trumpet.

Bronchitis

Catarrhizone cures Bronchitis of three years' standing after four doctors failed

A Remarkable Case

"I feel it my duty," writes Mrs. Boyd, of Leonardville, N. B., to let you know that I have been cured of Bronchitis of three months' standing by Catarrhizone.

"With the least change in temperature, or exposure to inclement weather, I was attacked with bronchial discomfort, wheezing in the chest, hoarseness, sore throat, partial loss of voice, and stiffness of the head. I consulted four doctors and was treated by them all without any benefit.

"Catarrhizone was strongly recommended to me by several persons whom it had benefited, and I was induced to give it a good trial.

"It quickly relieved my difficult breathing, so I got the complete outfit, hard rubber inhaler, etc., and I began systematically the Catarrhizone treatment.

"In a few days the huskiness and hoarseness disappeared and my voice became stronger. The running of the nose and 'stiffness of the head,' feverishness, difficult breathing, were all done away with before I had been using Catarrhizone very long.

"About six weeks' treatment was sufficient to do more for me than four doctors failed to do in three years' time. It cured me and I don't believe there is another such remedy on earth. Its action is speedy, pleasant and permanent.

Catarrhizone is a new, scientific treatment, and is guaranteed to cure Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Cold, etc., or money refunded. It contains nothing injurious, and can be used by the infant as well as by the adult.

It is both a local and a constitutional remedy. The Inhaler supplies abundance of medicated air, which spreads through all the air passages, killing germ life, and healing sore spots as it goes.

The impurities in the blood are driven off by Ferrozone tablets, which strengthen and build up the system to such a healthy condition that disease simply can't exist.

Catarrhizone is recommended by doctors and druggists for all respiratory diseases. It relieves quickly and cures permanently. Complete outfit costs $1.00; trial size, 50c. At Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. Buy Catarrhizone to-day.

Inside Grandfather Clocks

Thomas Lister, a famous clockmaker, pasted inside his clocks a sheet, on which was printed a Quaker-like reminder of the rapid flight and proper use of time, as follows:

"Lo! here I stand by thee upright,
To give thee warning day and night;
For every tick that I do give
Cuts short the time thou hast to live.
Therefore, a warning take by me,
To serve thy God as I serve thee;
Each day and night be on thy guard,
And thou shalt have a just reward."

A Wonderful Cold Cure

Just think of it, a cold cured in ten minutes—that's what happens when you use "Catarrhizone." You inhale its soothing balsams and out goes the cold—sniffles are cured—headache is cured—symptoms of catarrh and grippe disappear at once. It's the healing pine essences and powerful antiseptics in Catarrhizone that enable it to act so quickly. In disease of the nose, for irritable throat, bronchitis, coughs and catarrh it's a marvel. Safe even for children. 25c. and $1.00 sizes at all dealers.

To-day

Youth has so long to live—so it thinks—that it can dream and defer. But the lesson of To-day is even more important for youth than for age, for youth is the foundation time. Concern yourself but with To-day: Woo it, and teach it to obey. Your will and wish. Since time began To-day has been the friend of man. But in his blindness and his sorrow He looks to Yesterday and To-morrow.
