POLITICAL.

Scotch Advocacy of Irish Rights.—We have much pleasure in copying the following from the Glasgow Chronicle: "The town council of Irvine have resolved to petition the House of Lords to give the same measure of municipal reform to Ireland as is enjoyed by England and Scotland. A familiar petition is under signature by the inhabitants of Irvine; who are manifesting the deep interest they feel for their brethren of the sister kingdom, by the crowds that are pressing forward to subscribe their subscriptions—that justice may be done to a people who are their best and only customers in the coal trade, and with whom they reciprocate in the corn and provision trade, from Dublin along the east, north, and west of Limerick."

A great meeting of the inhabitants of Edinburgh, was held yesterday in the Waterloo Hotel, to consider the propriety of petitioning the House of Commons, in favour of the Ministerial measure for reforming the corporations of Ireland. There were on the platform—the Earl of Buchan, Sir Thomas Dick Lauder, Sir A. M. Gibson, Sir Donald Campbell of Dunstaffnage, Sir David Brewster, &c. &c. The speakers called upon the people of Scotland to come forward in support of the Irish at this time in gratitude for the past exertions of the Irish in order to carry Scottish Reforms; and a petition to the House of Commons was unanimously adopted.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

FRIDAY, MAY 20. The Assembly met this day at 12, when certain clergymen were appointed to preach before His Grace the Lord High Commissioner. The Assembly spent the rest of the time in devotional exercises, and adjourned about half past one, until three o'clock. The Assembly resumed sitting at that hour, when the answer to His Majesty's gracious letter was read and approved of, and the Moderator instructed to request His Grace the Commissioner to transmit the same. The following is the letter:—

"May it please your Majesty, "We, your Majesty's faithful subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, acknowledge with sentiments of deep gratitude and devoted loyalty, the gracious letter with which your Majesty has condescended to honor us.

"Convinced that the Christian religion is the true basis of national prosperity, as well as of individual happiness, we rejoice in your Majesty's continued recognition of this great principle, by the countenance bestowed by your Majesty on the successive Assemblies of this Church; and we thankfully receive the assurance of your Majesty's deep interest in the welfare of our national Church, and of your Majesty's determination to uphold it in the full possession of all its rights and privileges.

"Deeply sensible of the value of this favourable disposition towards our church, we entreat your Majesty to place the fullest reliance on our desire to pursue those measures by which the piety and morality of our fellow countrymen may be most successfully promoted; and in the prosecution of these great objects, we humbly trust that our discussions shall always be marked by the moderation and temperance which best becomes religious questions, and tend to advance the spiritual welfare and peace of those of your Majesty's subjects who are committed to our care.

"The experience which we have had of the zeal, fidelity, and other eminent qualifications of the Right Hon. Lord Belhaven, as your Majesty's Representative, in former assemblies leads us to regard his re-appointment to that high office, with unmingled satisfaction, and we view it as a distinguished mark of your Majesty's attention to the ministers and Elders of the Church of Scotland, that the object of your Royal choice is a Nobleman who has proved himself one of her most enlightened and steadfast friends.

"We receive with lively gratitude your Majesty's donation of £2,000 for the reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and it shall be our study so to expend this liberal grant as to confer further benefits on that portion of your Majesty's subjects, for whom former acts of Royal munificence have provided the means of being taught to fear God and honour the King.

"The Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may bless your Majesty, your Royal Consort, and all the members of your Royal House, that he may guide your councils, prosper your reign, and long preserve your Majesty to protect the interests of Christ's Church upon earth, and that he may at length admit you to the enjoyment of an unfading crown in Heaven, in the earnest united prayer of, may it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most loyal, and most obedient subjects the ministers of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

SAINT ANDREWS STANDARD, NEW-BRUNSWICK.

Volume 3. SAINT ANDREWS, THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1836. Number 37.

From the Montreal Morning Courier.

It is gratifying to learn that the inhabitants of New Brunswick are to lose no time in making the proper use of the £10,000 lately granted by Government for the purpose of effecting a complete survey of the St. Andrews and Quebec Railroad. A letter from Mr. Wilson of St. Andrews, (N.B.) to Mr. Auldo, of this city, explanatory of the steps the Railway committee are about to take is subjoined:—

ST. ANDREWS, June 14, 1836.

DEAR SIR.—You will ere this have received a plan and Prospectus of our projected Railroad, from this place to Quebec, and probably have heard of our expectations having been so happily realized by our noble Government in England granting us £10,000 the fully to explore and ascertain the practicability of making the road. And we have the strongest assurances from Government, that on this point being ascertained, we shall not be disappointed in the grant of Crown lands through which this road will pass; as well as aid in money from our Casual and territorial revenue. With these high favors we are fully confident of ultimate success in this great work.

A Deputation is now at Fredericton advising with Sir ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, our Governor, so as to make the necessary arrangements for the exploration.

We purpose to begin at Point Levi and, from thence proceed the whole route to St. Andrews. As the season is advancing, we wish not to lose any time in commencing the survey, and the invaluable services of Captain Yule, we fully calculate on, and as many other scientific gentlemen to be selected at your City and Quebec, as may be necessary for the work; the object therefore, in taking this liberty is to ask the favor of your communicating with Capt. Yule, and should he be absent from your City, be pleased to address him advising him of our wishes, and that a Deputation will leave here in eight or ten days for Quebec via Montreal, with a view to the necessary arrangements for starting of the exploring party; when they will have the honour to wait upon you. I am, very respectfully, &c. yours,

JOHN WILSON,

GEORGE AULDO, Esq.

ST. ANDREWS RAIL ROAD.—Among the arrivals at The Albion, Palace-street, yesterday, was J. WILSON, Esquire, of St. Andrews (N.B.), agent of the projected Rail-way from that town to Quebec. Mr. Wilson as he has already been stated had left St. Andrews for Quebec. The very liberal support this undertaking has met on the part of Lord Glenelg and the authorities, will probably be supported by the Home and colonial public.

We have seen a Map & Plan of the Rail-way from St. Andrews, (a port open to Navigation all seasons of the year,) executed with skill. It indicates the exact line of route to be followed, which turns round the point of the monument of the North Eastern Boundary.

A prospectus of the proceeding in New Brunswick, with other information, is also in town. The reconnaissance of the route will be said, be commenced at Point Levi, and it is stated that Capt. Yule's services are to be again engaged.

Mr. Wilson came down by the Canadian Eagle yesterday.—Quebec Gazette July 11

From the Royal Gazette.

We have authority to state that replies have been received from the Rev. Dr. Buckland, Professor of Geology in the University of Oxford, and from Dr. Thompson, Professor of Chemistry at Glasgow, to the letters of enquiry some time since addressed to those distinguished gentlemen, respecting a Lecturer in Natural and Experimental Philosophy for King's College, Fredericton.

In consequence of an expected vacancy in the Professorship of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, a resolution was lately adopted by the College Council, requiring in the gentleman who might be appointed to fill the vacancy a thorough competency to give instruction in Experimental Philosophy; a resolution at the same time passed, requiring any gentleman who might be appointed to the Lectureship to be equally well versed in Mineralogy and Geology.

On Saturday a deputation from the students of our College, waited upon the Rev. Dr. McCawley, and requested his acceptance of a silver Cup as a mark of well merited esteem on his removal to the sister University. The Cup is of very beautiful workmanship; with in a wreath of flowers is placed an appropriate Latin inscription. We understand it had been the intention of the students to have presented it publicly to the Endowment, but in consequence of some delay the order was not executed before the commencement of the Vacation, when they had all returned to their respective homes. We have been favored with a copy of their address, as also of the Rev. Dr. reply, which we hear is subjoined.

King's College, Fredericton July 16, 1836.

REVEREND SIR,

In the name of the Alumni of this University, we beg leave to present you with a Silver Cup, on your retiring from the Chair of the Mathematical Professor.

Gratitude for the kind services which you have always been disposed to render us, and an exact respect for the consistency of conduct which you have invariably displayed in the discharge of your duties as a professor, demand on this occasion something more than a mere complimentary address.

As you are best acquainted with your own advancement to the high situation of President of the University at Windsor; and, being assured, that with our Alma Mater your name will ever be gratefully associated.

We have the honour to subscribe ourselves With the greatest respect

LOST AND WON.

OR THE THIRD SEASON.

"Yes! he shall possess this season, and then I shall have the gratification, the delight, the exquisite triumph of refusing him. It will only serve him right!"

Such was the language of Florence Neville's eyes as she contemplated, with no little satisfaction, the grateful reflection of her figure in the glass, before which she was standing for the first ball of the season.

Of whom was she speaking? of whom thinking? Why did that short rosy lip curl with such beautiful scorn as the last look was given at the snowy dress, which hung in its lace folds like summer clouds round the fairy form of its young mistress? Florence was at that moment picturing to herself the subjugation of one high heart which had obstinately refused doing homage at her shrine—of one being in the wide world who had denied her power, calmly gazed at her undoubtedly lovely countenance, and tranquilly disapproved her style. It was insufferable: so Florence determined that her third season should be distinguished by the conquest of the haughty, high, and handsome Earl of St. Clyde—not that she cared for him; oh, no! she was only determined to make him propose. Indeed there was a sort of playful wages between her cousin, Emma Neville, and herself on the subject, and Florence felt her credit at stake if she failed.

"Have you thought of your wager, Florence?" said Emma Neville, as they descended to the drawing-room together.

"To be sure!—You think I shall lose it. I can read your thoughts."

"If he is the St. Clyde of last season, you certainly will," laughed Emma. "That man is invulnerable, Florence."

"Nonsense, nonsense," said the beauty, and taking her father's arm, she sprang lightly into the carriage.

It was a brilliant ball! the rich and the noble, the young and the beautiful—all were there, and in the centre of an admiring circle dazzled the conspicuous young Florence. She was preparing to wait with a tall, dark, unassuming looking personage, who was apparently quite indifferent whether he supported her light figure of that of any one else. This was Lord St. Clyde. Florence, on the contrary, was all sparkling gaiety. She was dancing with him for the third time. Another moment and they were flying round the circle with rapid grace.

Things went on exceedingly well. Florence knew her ground and the game she was playing, and as she passed Emma, the cousins exchanged glances. That of Florence said, "He is won!" that of Emma, "Not yet."

"I'm afraid you are fatigued," said Lord St. Clyde, as he led his partner to a seat.

"Oh, no, not much," replied Florence; "but the rooms are very warm. It is impossible to dance, and still more to breathe—particularly here."

She was in one corner of the room—the most crowded and removed from either door or window.

"The conservatories are cool," said the Earl, but he did not offer to lead her there. Florence was perfectly aware that the conservatories, were cool, but she knew also that they had another advantage—they were perfect groves of the choicest flowers and orange trees, consequently no spot was ever better suited for a flirtation, perhaps for a proposal.

With experienced policy, however, she only leaned gracefully back and gently fanned herself. Lord St. Clyde stood by her side. He was anything but a bill-room man, for though his figure was faultless, and his dancing just enough to show it off, he had none of that charming fluency of conversation which a dancing partner should have; he could not pay a compliment if he did not feed it—he would not if he thought it was expected; therefore had he been Mr. St. Clyde, you he would have been a great bore in Society—as it was, he was a delightful young man—so much proper reserve.

The Earl persisted but Florence would not dance—he persuaded, but she would not listen—he condescended to repeat the request, and almost allowed a compliment to escape him—no, Florence was firm—the Earl said no more but drew himself up. Suddenly Florence rose with her brightest smile.

"I am too selfish, my Lord; that galloppe is so inspiring that I cannot resist it!"

A change came over the spirit of St. Clyde. He was another creature, and Florence was herself again, all triumphant. The next moment the dancers were thrown into confusion there was a rush toward the windows, and Lord St. Clyde was seen darting through the crowd toward the conservatory with a fainting figure in his arms—it was Florence Neville!

The cousin bent affectionately over the insensible girl, and the Earl knelt by her with a glass of water.

"It was my fault," exclaimed St. Clyde, in an agitated voice, "I made her dance—good God! how lovely she looks! she does not revive—what shall we do?"

"Has no one else?" cried Emma: "call my uncle, I think we had better go home—oh, who has any salts?"

The Earl was already gone for them. With a stifled laugh Florence opened her wide beautiful eyes and started up.

"Was it not well done?"

"Good Heaven, Florence!"

"Well my dear did you never hear of any one fainting before? You will lose the wager, Emma!"

"My dear Florence, how you frightened me!"

"Never mind—hush, here they come; now take papa to the ball room for my box, and leave the rest to me!"

Emma did as she was desired and forebore to ask any questions until they got home; then she anxiously inquired, "Did he propose?"

"No!"

"I will make him remember this is only the first ball of the season!"

Lady Monckton gave a fete at her villa at Putney, Mr. and Miss Neville were there of course. Florence had an exquisite bouquet, but she saw Lord St. Clyde advancing toward her; therefore, she prudently dropped it into the centre of a large myrtle bush.

"You have no bouquet, Miss Neville," was one of his Lordship's first remarks, "are you not fond of flowers?"

"Yes, passionately," said Florence; "but I have lost mine. I am so sorry, for I fear I shall not find another so beautiful!"

"Will you allow me to endeavour to supply its place with this?" was the instant reply.

Florence smiled and blushed as she took it; the smile was art, but the blush nature, for she could not help it. Lord St. Clyde's eyes were fixed on her face, and the next moment she found herself walking with him whilst Mr Neville was speaking to the hostess, whose exact daughter was looking very spiteful.

Clarence played her part to admiration. Lord St. Clyde was in her power, for she had engaged him in an animated flirtation. They were standing on the brink of a beautiful fountain, when the Earl exclaimed, "Do you know the language of flowers, Miss Neville?"

"No," said Florence, "but it must be very pretty; do you know it, my Lord?"

"Yes, my heart."

"Then tell me what these flowers mean!" exclaimed the beauty quite innocently as she offered him his bouquet which was composed of a white rose, a pink rose bud, some myrtle, and one geranium. The Earl hesitated; and laughed, then suddenly recovering himself he said, "They speak in their simple language the sentiment that I dare not in words express."

Florence felt her heart beating, but she only laughed—that laugh encouraged the Earl,—Florence! forgive me if—

"Ah, Miss Neville, I have been looking for you every where, and here you are all alone; cried one of Florence's gay train, the elegant Sir Percy Hope.

"Oh, no, not alone," said Florence, rather annoyed, "Lord St. Clyde—why, where is—"

The Earl was gone.

"Florence, did Lord St. Clyde propose to-day?" said Emma to her cousin in the evening.

"Not quite, but as nearly as possible—I declare I will never speak to Sir Percy Hope again!"

"Time! Time! can nothing stay thee!" The season was passing rapidly, and Florence had four proposals; of course she had refused them, although they had not been tendered by Lord St. Clyde. Still she said, "He shall propose," until the last Opera of the season.

Pale, languid, but still delicately beautiful, the spoiled and petted Florence leaned back in her box, deaf to the strains of the syren Grisi—regardless of the adulation around her, and disgusted with every thing in the shape of gaiety. She leaned back in her chair and closed her eyes for a second; on opening them, she saw a pair of dark eyes fixed with more than common earnestness on her face. It was Lord St. Clyde—those wild eyes could only belong to him. What possessed Florence at that moment—she did not know—she did not smile—she merely bent forward and whispered the word of departure to her chambermaid; then winding her cashmere round her, she placed her arm within that of Sir Percy Hope and left the box.

The next morning Florence was really unwell. She said "not at home" to every one, and began to tune her harp. String after string gave way as she began to draw them out.—"Like me, poor harp," she sighed, "you are sinking, spoiling for neglect."

Suddenly the door opened and a visitor was announced.

"Not at home," cried Florence hastily.

"Pardon me for once, I disobey," and Lord St. Clyde entered. He continued—"I have intruded, I confess, but it is only for a moment. I come, Miss Neville, to wish you— to bid you a long, and perhaps a last farewell!"

"Farewell!" said Florence, dropping her harp key; "this resolution has been suddenly taken, has it not?"

"No," replied the Earl; "I am going to seek in Italy that happiness which is denied me here."

"Italy!" exclaimed Florence, turning her eyes like melting sapphires, on the Earl—"dear, bright sunny Italy! my own fair land!"

"Is it yours, Miss Neville?" said St. Clyde eagerly.

"Yes, my Lord, Florence was my birth place, and my home for fourteen happy years."

Lord St. Clyde paused—nothing is so awkward as a pause in a tête-à-tête; he felt this, and quickly rousing himself, he said hastily:

"I will not interrupt you any longer. Farewell! perhaps we may meet again."

"Perhaps we may—good-bye," said Florence, extending her hand; it was slightly, very slightly pressed, and she was alone.

For a moment, she felt as if the past were a dream; but glancing on the ground, she saw a white glove—it was the Earl's! She turned away, and leaning on the marble slab of beautiful mirror, she gazed at the faithful reflection of her face.

"Beauty! beauty!" murmured she—"pale as a ghost! since it could not win St. Clyde!"—A burying that young face in her hands, she fairly burst into a passion of tears.

"Florence! my own, my idolized!" said voice to her. She turned, with a reel, genuine, unartificial shriek.

The Earl of St. Clyde was at her feet!

"Well, Florence," said Emma Neville to the Countess of St. Clyde, one day, "you must really give me a lesson on proposals—how well you managed your husband's—teach me your art!"

"No, no, you are quite mistaken," laughed Florence; "no one could be more surprised at St. Clyde's proposal than myself, for I had given him up. Art failed, my dear Emma, and nature gained the day in the case. Take care how you make nets, they never answer. Men are shockingly sharp sighted now!"—London Court Journal.

The Barrister and Lady of the Bar:—

The marriage of the fair daughter of a respectable Inn keeper of this city with the son of a country banker has been a subject of much remark for some few days past. It is stated that the young gentlemen's friends were very strenuous in their opposition to the union, and resorted to the usual expedients breaking off the match. But the hero was too deeply smitten to be removed by the paltry consideration of what are called prudential motives, and true to his early vows and the lovely object of his adoration, he became in spite of all obstacles one flesh. He probably thought that it was not derogatory for one who was studying for a subordinate walk in the legal profession to execute a deed of co-partnership with one who practised at the bar with so much success and with the encouragement of silk gown. Never was leading counsel pressed with more suits, and never was cause ever brought more honourably out of Court than this, in which there was an attachment issued against the person. The friends of the young gentleman remonstrated with mine host against the progress of the suit. The latter took the high ground which became a man whose avocation was precisely equal to that of the father of the right reverend and most respected Bishop of this diocese, Lord Philipps. He did not want to thrust his daughter into any man's family, but if young people were determined this he would do—he would pay down for her marriage portion as much as the brother of the young gentleman had received with the daughter of a civic functionary whom he had lately led to the altar. The upshot of it was that the young people put an end to the strife which their courtship created, and that the Inn has lost one of its chief attractions. The potency of the ale still remains, but the fair hand that drew it mild has departed. The charm is vanished. Leda hath deserted her Swan. —[Enter Times.]

THE ALBION.
PROSPECTUS OF THE FOURTH VOLUME OF A JOURNAL OF THE NEWS, POLITICS, AND LITERATURE OF EUROPE.
The fourth volume of the New Series of THE ALBION commenced on the first Saturday of the present year, 1836.

This Journal, which embodies the News, Politics and Literature of Europe, more particularly of Great Britain, has been established nearly Forty Years and has obtained a reputation and circulation far surpassing the most sanguine expectations of its founders. This flattering encouragement has enabled the Proprietor, on three separate occasions, to improve the Journal, and to publish it in a more agreeable and useful form, and to throw into its pages such an increased quantity of political, literary, and scientific matter, as to render it, in the estimation of its friends, one of the most efficient and valuable journals in the English language.

In its details, the ALBION will be found to embrace Notices and copious extracts from all the new publications of value, issued from the British Press; the Debates in both Houses of Parliament, with the most remarkable speeches at length; and the general intelligence of the British Empire, the Continent of Europe, and other parts of the globe. In its high and dignified tone, its most interesting and agreeable Tales of the British Periodicals, which are so remarkable for their liveliness and sparkling talent selected with a diligence and care that has drawn forth the most unqualified approbation. Any thing that tends to the comfort, degree to shock, female delicacy, or to offend national affection, is carefully excluded, by which course the paper has become an inmate of the most respectable and intellectual families, and may be found in the Drawing Rooms and on the tables of the most literary persons on the North American Continent.

Poetry, History, Biography, Music, and the Drama receive distinct and proper attention, while social and domestic intelligence, together with the most interesting and useful facts, are faithfully recorded. The Wanted and Lost notices of the great European World—the London and Parisian fashions, and a weekly summary of the Miscellaneous intelligence of the day complete the ALBION.

Each yearly volume contains about five and twenty pieces of new and fashionable English, French, and Italian Music, together with frequent Maps, Plans, Notices, and Diagrams, illustrative of subjects treated of in the general scope of the work. At the end of each volume, a handsome Title Page is engraved and well arranged Index is presented to each subscriber.

The ALBION is published every Saturday morning in the Quarter form, on a large Imperial sheet of exceedingly fine paper printed with beautiful type, at No. 77, Colver Street, near Broadway, New York Agents for the ALBION,—New Brunswick, Messrs H. Pettit, St. John; J. E. Beal with Frederick, George Kerr, Miramichi, Keweenaw, Peter S. J. St. Stephen; St. Andrews, Mr. Bonnell, Georgetown.
