MOTHERS REJOICE AS THEY SEE THEIR LITTLE ONES MADE STRONG AND WELL BY KOOTENAY WHICH CONTAINS

THE NEW INGREDIENT. A sick child always appeals to our love and sympathy. It commands the tenderest care and watchfulness of its mother, who would gladly sacrifice anything to have her dian wool, and 11 cents on Eastern darling well. To mothers who have children suffering from any disease brought about by thin, watery or impure blood, Kidney Trouble following Scarlet Fever, Rheumatism, Ec zema or any other skin rash, or any condition in which the child is puny, weak and delicate, and does not thrive well, one would strongly recommend the use of Ryckman's Kootenay Cure, not because we say it's good for these conditions, but because Mothers gladly state under oath how it saved their darlings when everything else

One of these mothers was Mrs. Geo. White, who lives at 139 Stinson St., Hamilon, Ont. She says that her daughter Louisa is nine years of age, has always been delicate, and has had Eczema since birth. Since giving her Kootenay Cure the Eczema has gone, and her general nealth is greatly improved.

Another, Mrs. Isabella Sullivan, of Walnut Street South of the same city, has a little boy aged five, who was attacked with Rheumatism and pains in his back and Kidneys so bad that he could not stand or get out of bed without assistance. Despite the skilled medical attendance he grew very weak, and at times would faint. Kootenay has gladdened the heart of Mrs. Sullivan by restoring her boy, so that now she says he can play hard all day, and is as healthy a child as one could wish for. Instances like these are well worth the erious consideration of those having sick or suffering children.

A Perfect Piano.

Fifty years of close study and practice in piano building has given us this Jubilee year an instrument that well merits the term perfect-an instrument capable of the finest gradations of tone. None are more pleased with it than experienced musicians, as it fully meets their every requirement. From one end of the keyboard to the other is perfect, mellifluous harmony.

Mr. Zolburn, of Cologne, Germany. accompanied by Mr. W. H. Lauder, of Whitby, was in town last week, and while here conferred with President Thompson and other members of the ing Company. Mr. Zolburn is a beet sugar expert, and has been engaged in the a friend, and on his return plung-his feet, which were galled, in cold iter. He was immediately seized the viel of the condition making an effort to interest German capitalists in the proposed factory here, an important influence in this direction. With a view to securing capital, the company is putting out 1,500 pounds of beet seed amongst 400 farmers in this section. When the crop is harvested more accurate data will be obtainable as to the tonnage to the acre, and it can also be determined whether and it can also be determined who the high percentage of sugar found in the few samples previously analyzed holds good for the large number.—

PLEBISCITE VOTE. In the Toronto Globe, June 16, will should in some way be included in the plebiscite vote, as it would of necessity have to be resorted to. I Arthur Dutton, Pearl Fox, Martha Hilbert, John Jarvis, Alice Moore, Wilfred of great influence should aid the li-May, Gillean McLeod, Gertie Pate, Richie Ralph, David Ross, Chester liquor interests. We have nothing t say against direct taxation, licenses and stamps, and would prefer it to the tariff system. But in this case nothing could be more absurd. The tariff machinery is already set in operation to collect a revenue of $38,000,000. And son, Tom Boyd, George Gardener, Robbie Spencer, Ernie Quick, Willie Deacon, Russel Court, Gowan Boyd, Clar-facturers $75,000,000 more, and yet, beside all this enormous expense, we are told by a statesman of mature experience that another expensive set of offi-cers is to be set to collecting the deicit if any. Mr. Mills further says that t has been suggested to him by a very eminent financial authority beyond the sea, that the credit of Canada would be endangered in case of prohi oition. Does Mr. Mills presume to tel the good people of Canada that drunk enness enriches a nation? We are sure it has quite the opposite effect upon the individual. The whole question with Lane, Lizzie Moffatt, Walter Orchard, Harry Pace, Will Sanderson, George Talbot, Bell Wright, George Angus, Myrtle Black, Alfred Valentine, Alice Campbell Graham. The Day We Celebrate

Not for many a long year has Dominion Day dawned with so many reasons presenting themselves for thankfulness by Canadians that their lot is cast in a country with such bountiful natural resources, presenting so many opportunities to the industrious and the enterprising

It is a pleasure to celebrate the natal day of a land so advantageously situated.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell seems to imahis policy. The chances are that if Sir Mackenzie Bowell had been in a position where the country could have got now be framing his policies and doing his thinking in some other place than Ottawa.-Toronto Telegram.

It was fortunate for the opposition leader that he had a seat in the Senate, where no muddling of public affairs could bring him into disrepute with the people. If not, he would have gone down among the dead men on the night of June 23, last year. Always excepting he had been given one of tha constituencies gerrymandered to make it impossible to return a Liberal.

The Sarnia Observer has come to the conclusion that the Senate is Canada's vermiform appendix, and that it

Honored in His Own Country So great was the anxiety of the peo ale of Brantford and Brant county to appreciation of Pre-at the recent of tickets did not meet the demand. The sale had to be stopped because in the large hall room could not be found for the applicants. Several hundreds of yeomen and others who thus applied too late paid their respects to the premier and his colleagues at the reception prior to the banquet. Among those who sent letters of inability to be present was Mr. C. S. Hyman, of this city.

The reception of the new premier of Ontario was a most enthusiastic one. Round about him were gathered the pick of the yeomanry of Brant county men who had grown up with Mr. Hardy, who had known him from his boyhood, and who feel honored because their county has the distinction of giving to this banner province a prime minister whose undoubted abiltty is recognized on all hands.

But it is certain that the two republics will sooner or later be drawn into the orbit of English dom-nation unless they find in Europe pow-erful and effective support. The dream of English imperialism from the Cape to Alexandria is no longer a chimera. It becomes a reality. During the final years of the century about to close England will have succeeded in carving out for herself in Africa, from end to end of the continent, an empire of which the power of production and consumption will equal, if not exceed, in a near future that of her Indian

From a dispatch to the Toronto Telegram from the city of Mexico, we learn that there are good prospects for the opening up of trade between that now prosperous republic and the Dominion Under the new order of things, in Canada and the United States, it is stated the Mexicans would prefer to trade

We commend this matter to the atention of the minister of trade and ommerce, who will no doubt give every aid in his power, to Canadians who desire to extend their markets.

Substantial Progress.

Everywhere there is evidence that substantial industrial progress is assured in Canada. From time to time The Advertiser has supplied evidence of the change for the better and of the confidence which British and foreign investors have in the future of this country. Today we learn that a British syndicate has bought all the salmon canneries on the Fraser river (British Columbia) not already owned by English capitalists. A greatly increased output, for shipment by cold storage to Great Britain, is anticipated. The Hamilton Blast Furnace Company, which had been idle for having booked work to run night and various parts of the country, arrangements are being made to ship vast quantities of Canallan pulpwood to the old world. It is not good for any farmer to sell the cattle lean and export the fodder on which they will be fed in another country. Again and again we have seen Canadian store cattle shipped to western states, duty peing paid at the border, fed on western corn, and then sent to Great Britain to compete with animals exported direct from Canada. Another method was to sell lean cattle to be finished tory to learn that Canadian butter exports are steadily increasing. Costly Postage.

At the Beginning of Victoria's Reign Only the Well-to-Do Could Afford Letters.

Some Saw in Cheap Postage a Scheme of the Pope "to Enslave the Souls of Englishmen."

When Queen Victoria ascended the hrone there were no telegraphs in this ountry and few railways. The mails ere forwarded by coach, says the Fortnightly Review, and the postage rates were to all but the well-to-do prohibitive. It cost from 4d to 1s 8d to send a "single" letter under an ounce in weight from one part of the kingdom to another. There were some 40 charges, varying according to distance, the average rate being 9d, or half the day's wage of a laborer. A "single" letter means, a single piece of paper (adhesive envelopes had not been invented), and the addition of a second scrap of paper made the letter a "double" one. The postage was paid on delivery by the recipient; and as no credit was given, the incursion of a postman into a poor neighborhood was watched on all sides wth fear rather than hope.

COLERIDGE'S FUTILE GENEROS-

Coleridge, the poet, saw a poor woman declining to accept a letter on the score of inability to pay. The good-natured bard (doubtless with some difficulty) found the required 9d, despite the woman's remonstrances. When the postman had gone away she showed Coleridge that the letter was but a blank sheet of paper. Her brother had arranged to send her at intervals such a sheet, addresed in a certain fashion, as evidence that all was with him, and she as regularly, after inspecting the address, refused to accept it. Some humorist on one occasion sent out large numbers of letters, each on a sheet as large as a tablecloth, all of which had to be delivered as "single" missives.

MIDDLE CLASS SUFFERED. This system practically stifled written intercourse among the working class, but the rich and highly placed entirely escaped postal taxation. The privilege of franking covered the correspondence not only of ministers. peers and members of parliament, but of their relatives, friends and acquaintances. While in one year early in the Queen's reign no less than 7,etters were franked, a single London firm paid annually £11,000 for postage, and a writer in the Quarterly referred flippantly to "so slight and rare an incident in a laborer's life as the receipt of a letter." Among the packets franked was a grand piano. An army of clerks was employed to fix the charges to be collected, and the postal revenue remained stationary between 1815 and 1835, although in the period the population increased rom 19,500,000 to 25,600,000. ITS MORALITY DOUBTED. Moved by this state of things. Pardament in 1839 adopted Rowland Hill's proposal of uniform inland penny postige, which came into operation on Jan. 1840. The writer possesses a copy of the Quarterly Review of 1839, in which a contributor (believed to be Croker) denounces the scheme. clerks," he says, "write only to their athers, and girls to their mothers? Will not letters of romance or love, intrigue or mischief, increase in at le equal proportions? We doubt whether social and domestic correspo will be more than doubled. A gigantic exemplification of the old proverb— Penny wise and pound foolish," etc. Macaulay says that the penny post when first established, was the object of violent invective, as a manifest contrivance of the Pope to enslave the souls of Englishmen. It was described as "sedition made easy." OPPOSED BY MOSSBACKS. The postal authorities, who in 1784 had opposed the institution of mail coaches, were implacable enemies of penny postage. The postmaster-general of 1839 (Lord Lichfield) based his obdections on the curious ground that the building at St. Martin's-le-Grand would not be large enough. The secretary, Col. Maberly, constantly re-peated: "This plan we know will fail." As we know, it succeeded, and the penny rate has been generally adopted in Europe, as well as in the United States. The number of letters rose from 80,000,000 in 1837 to 299,000. 1847; and for the year ending on March 31, 1897, they must be about 1,900,000,000. The postal surplus was in 1839, £1,659,-510, and in 1896-97, £3,632,133. The number of letters, which was in 1837 about per head, and in 1854 fifteen per head, is now 77 per head. DOES HOARDING POTATOES PAY? In order to satisfy his curiosity as what extent potatoes would shrink in weight from the time they were picked till taking out in the spring for planting, Mr. James Newson gave the anatter a test last winter. He put away 100 bounds in a barrel in the cellar under his house after they came from the field, and in the spring found they had lost in weight six pounds. Of course, if left in an open heap or perhaps a pit, the shrinkage would This will form a basis of calculation as to whether it is more profitable to sell potatoes in the fall a certain figure or wait till spring when prices may be higher.-Grand

Easy to Take A Trip With Eskimo Dogs

Peculiar "Holiday."

Camping and Cooking in Far North Canada.

Where Everything Had to be Thawed

Out Before It Was Eaten.

[Rt. Rev. Jervois A. Newnham, Bishop of Moosonee, B. N. A.] One does not generally expect hardship on a seaside trip, yet I expected some. I was to go some fifteen miles down a great river to the bay, then two or three days along the bay, and then ten miles up another big river. and to return the next week the same way. This I have done, traveling for two days, each way over the salt water, and yet neither seeing nor smelling it, and traveling over the water by a train. I traveled by train, yet not on wheels, a train which made its own track and did not use fuel or water, and only went at the rate of four or five miles an hour, and only from about 5 a.m. to 2 or 3 p.m. each day. The rest of the time we spent in camp. For those three days and nights we were in the open air, and at what a temperature! Always far below zero 45 or 50 degrees of frost by day, and as much as 60 or 62 at night! A strange seaside trip, surely! But before telling my story, let me explain the above riddle by saying that the "train" was a dog-train, composed of a sled drawn by eleven Eskimo dogs, and driver "Injun," not an injuneer-I mean an engineer; and that we travel ed over the ice, three feet thick, with two feet of snow on top, which entirely hid the salt water, that we could only travel by daylight, and had to stop at certain fixed places, where we could find wood for campfires, and that we slept on the ground, or rather snow, in our cotton tent, or in the wigwams or tents of poles and bark, erected at the regular stopping places. My home is at Moose Fort, and I wished to visit our mission at Rupert House, confer with the missionary there, and see the residents. On Feb. 26 the dogs from Rupert House arrived here and brought me an invitation to return with them, which I gladly accepted, and made my preparations. These consisted in getting suitable food cooked for three or four days, gathering a bundle of blankets, and rabbit-skin rugs to wrap around me in the sled and sleep on at night, packing a small box with clothes, etc., for use at Rupert House, and looking out my deerskin coat and snowshoes. The food needs to be very simple and ready cooked; for we do not stop during the day to cook, and at night we

HAVE TO THAW OUR FOOD. and again in the morning. I took a loaf and some scones, the latter mostly to carry in my pocket and eat at midday; some partridges ready cooked, a little cooked beef and bacon, and a packet of soup-powder; also tea and sugar, salt and butter, some frozen cream, frying-pan, kettle, cup, plate, Monday, March 22, I was up soon after 4 o'clock, only to find a snow-storm raging, so that I could lie down to await developments. At 7 o'clock the storm was so heavy that we abandoned the idea of starting that day. The snow fell all day, the worst storm snow was deep and soft, making heavy the season; so we in for a hard trip. Tuesday I was up at 5:30, and, after cold all day, and the wind right in our teeth. Well, here we are down on the ice, and the dogs impatient to the ice, and the dogs impatient to snowshoes, which were too short and the snowshoes are that I was sore sisted of a narrow box four feet long, the front half being covered or boxed in, mounted on a floor eight feet long resting on runners. In this box the passenger sits, wrapped in rabbit-skins so that he can hardly move, his head and shoulders only projecting. In front and behind and on top of the box is placed all the luggage, covered with canvas, and securely lashed, to withstand all the jolting and possible upsets, and our snowshoes within easy reach. An important item is the whip. terrible to the dog if used by a skillful hand and

TERRIBLE TO THE USER if he be a novice; for he is sure to half-strangle himself or to hurt his own face with the business end of the The whip I measured had a nine inches long and lash 30 feet, and weighed four pounds. The lash was of folded and plaited sealhide, and for five feet from the handle measured five inches round, then for fourteen feet it gradually tapered off. ending in a single thong half an inch thick and eleven feet long. Wonderful the dexterity with which a driver can pick out a dog, and almost a spot on a dog with this lash. The lash must be trailing at full length behind, when a jerk and turn of the wrist causes it to fly forward, the thick part first, and the tapering end continuing the motion till it is at full length in front, and the lash making the fur fly from the victim. But often it is made to crack over the heads of the dogs as a warning. The eleven dogs were harnessed to the front of the sled, each by a separate thong of seal hide, all of different lengths, fastened to a light canvas harness. The nearest dog was about fifteen feet from the sled, and the leader, with bells on her, about 50 feet, the thongs thus increasing in length by about three feet When the going is good the dogs spread out like the fingers of a hand, but when the snow is deep they fall into each other's tracks, in almost single As they continually cross and recross each other, the thongs get gradually plaited almost up to the dog, when a halt is called, the dogs are made to lie down, and the driver carefully disentangles them, taking care that no dog gets away mean-They are guided by the voice. using "Husky," i.e., Eskimo words:

Standing or sitting with 50 degrees of frost, the mustache and beard heavily laden with icicles, so that it it difficult to open the mouth without bringing tears to the eyes, by reason of the hairs pulled out, the fingers freezing if they are kept out of the mittens for a few minutes for eating purposes, the bread frozen, or begin-ning to freeze the moment it is taken from the pocket-these are not the best constituents for a picnic. We never stop to cook in the middle of the day's and the visit generally, but must pass journey; but a jar of boiling tea has been stowed in the blankets, and has not lost all its warmth, and a sand-wich or a scone carried in an inner cket will not be frozen very hard. On again, and at 1 p.m. we are passing Natatishe Point, 22 miles from Moose. We reached the next point, Big Stone, before 3 o'clock; but as it was 25 miles to the next possible stopping place, we had to be content to go no further that day. We had a cotton tent with us, and a small portable stove, and first thing was to erect these in the shelter of the bush, and to get This took wood for the fire. some time, and I found the waiting miserably cold work, chilling me to Of course, the floor of our tent, which is also our bed, is the trampled surface of snow, with a few pine branches laid on top. My supper of bread and butter and a bird, ready cooked, needed only to be thawed, and water to be boiled for tea; but the thawing takes long, and it was half-past 4 before it was ready. I also found that partridge shot in December, frozen till March, then cooked and frozen again, thawed and so eaten, is rather dry and uninteresting food. men were busy cutting dry firewood, attending to the dogs and cooking their supper till later than this. The dogs are unharnessed and chained to trees, out of reach of each other. as they are very quarrelsome, and presently fed with frozen fish, rabbits seal blubber, as the case may be. They sleep in the snow, coiled up without any shelter, and get very little attention. A tent with a stove is more comfortable for us than the open wigwam fire in the middle, which is always very bad for smoke. The cotton almost too hot while the stove is in full draft; but everything in it, except the sleepers, freezes solid at night. It was too smoky for comfort, so, as we had to get up very early, we lay down at 8 o'clock. My bedstead was snow, mattress pine branches, bed of rabbit-skin, and blanket of ditto. I have learned to sleep like an Indian, with head under the blanket; but even so, one gets very cold before midnight, and that and the hard bed made my rest very much broken. I think that the men must have lit the fire very early next morning. About 3 o'clock I awoke (indeed I awoke several times before that, owing to the hardness of the bed and the cold), and put all my breakfast materials to thaw; but did not get up finally till 4 o'clock. It took us till 6 The day was fine for us, but the cession of ridges by the winds, so that it was like crossing a plowed field and started for the dogs. It was a sleigh, and very awkward snowshoeing Let me describe. The sled con-tight at the toes, so that I was sore and lame after half an hour. However, I managed two hours' more tramp after lunch, at 10:30, and we reached East Point at noon. It was too late to go on to the next camp (twenty miles at least), so we made for the tent here and were in it by 2 p.m.; very early to stop, but there no help for it. Here we used the "tent," i. e., not our cotton mercet "tent," I. e., not our cotton marque, but a fixture of logs and poles and boughs, about fourteen feet in diameter, and open at the top, through which opening the smoke is supposed

THE SMOKE WAS DREADFUL, and very painful to my eyes; I could hardly read prayers for the pain and tears, and was glad to turn into bed at 8 o'clock. It was a very cold night (about 65 degrees of frost, or 33 below zero); but I slept fairly well, only felt little rheumatic and sore from the hard, cold ground. Awaking in the night I found the hair on my forehead stiff with ice from my breath, and pillow and blankets ditto. Thursday, up at 4 o'clock, and off at 6:15. A bitmorning, and I found the hile preparing to start almost intolerable; but I got right under my sleigh robes and dozed. We had to cross two or three small bays, about twenty miles to Cabbage Willows. When half way across an Indian came out to meet us. He reported "no rabbits, and family starving," i. e., very hungry; so we gave him some food from our small store. We found afterward that he makes a regular business of stopping people passing with the same story, they being a lazy, shiftless lot. Reaching Cabbage Willows at 1 p.m. we determined to press Then came the hardest bit of all. Here the snow had drifted to a great depth; all had to walk, one man tramping a path for the dogs, which fell into single file, the leader being almost hidden in the snow. The second man and I walked by the sled, holding it up, and often helping to push it when the dogs stuck fast. We reached Black Bear Point at 6 o'clock and hastened to get tent fixed, wood cut, etc., before dark. We used our cotton tent and the stove here; the wood was rather green, and it took a long time to get the stove to burn and the food to thaw. The night and next morning were passed as before that we got up at 3 a.m., and made an early start. It still kept cold, with a strong wind in our faces, so that, but for a short walk, I kept down under the blankets. About a.m. we stopped to disentangle the dogs for the last time, and the leader was the system. Dr. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such troubles. The weather was fine while I was at Rupert House, and a high wind blowing all the time, so we expected the snow to be well packed and make the return journey easier. I had the Rev. E. R., native missionary, and his man with me this time as my crew, and they were naturally not as expert at camping arrangements as the men I had before. Also instead of eleven good dogs had only eight second-rate; so I did not expect to make such good time. The route was the same as that by which we came, but the division of it different. We started at 7 a.m., and managed to reach Cabbage Willows before dusk. Here is a fixed tent which we used instead of our cotton one. It was a mistake, for it needed more wood, which we had to cut, was very cold, and was the worst for smoke so far. However, we managed somehow. My pres-CREW WERE EARLY RISERS.

Thus ended my first dog trip. Some fun, some discomfort at least, toes frostbitten, nose and cheeks peeled from the sun and frost, well tanned, and with a fresh stock of health and appetite.

The Latest Microbe.

A New Way of Treating Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

Philadelphia Physician Uses Nuclein and Hydrozone, But He Admits That the Best Way to Attack Dyspepsia Is at Its Source, Which Is the Diet.

[Special Correspondence from Philadelphia.]

It is surprising to hear a physician say he does not believe so much in medicine as in other remedies for the cure of disease. Dr. John Aulde, of this city, says the present generation is too familiar with medicine and should be educated more in the direct tion of avoiding it.

"The present trend of the laity is to ward medicine," he said to me a day of two ago in conversation. "This is particularly true in cases of indiges tion or dyspepsia-for there is a slight difference between the two-and the sale of so-called remedies for the cure of these troubles is enormous. If peo ple would pay more attention to what they eat, they would feel the need o medicine less and they would be great deal healthier and happier." Dr. Aulde recently interested the medical world, and the lay world as well, by proposing a new theory of disease, or rather a new development of a theory which has been gaining acceptance of recent years. As it is estimated that every other man suffers more or less from dyspepsia, and that the man who does not suffer from it directly has to bear the burden of woo of all his friends, no subject could have wider interest. It is not surprising, then, that Dr. Aulde has had many inquiries about his recently published article in one of the medical magazines. I asked him to tell me in plain terms what the ground-work of his at the latest, but we only once got off before 6; yet I was afraid to lie on can," he said. "You have read or

Many diseases are introduced into the system by means of micro-organisms peculiar to those diseases. These miways. Nature provides the stomac with a protector against the microb gestion. But only a part of the diges of the stomach is acid, that of the intestine is alkaline. If the digestive organs are in bad condition, through abuse of any kind, the microbe may no acid to fear, and in the case of typhoid fever he settles down at a point in the small intestine near the right groin and breeds with marvelous rapidity. To prevent disease it is necessary to maintain the digestive or gans in good condition—in fact, a man with a good digestion need have little fear of disease; but when once the microbe has been introduced into the system he and all his kind must be removed if the patient is to live. If allowed to remain he destroys the red blood corpuscles and poisons the

"Located as he is in the lower intestine (in typhoid), it is difficult to get at the microbe. At one time phyreach him with corrosive sublimate, but that had to be introduced through the stomach, and very little of it into the circulation it is possible to destroy the microbe wherever he may be. This element is called nuclein, and is found in both animal and plant cells. I have found it in the thyroid gland of the sheep. It is to be found also in the germina area of the egg. Digest an egg by artificial ferments, and there is left the area-that little spot which appears as a black speck in the yolk when it has been kept until it is stale. The nuclein can be obtained also from barley during the process of malting. "There are in the blood about one white corpuscle to every 350 red corpuscles. It is the special function of these white corpuscles, or leucocytes, to build up and repair the system, to the water not six feet from the bo attack and destroy impurities in the of the canoe. blood, including bacteria, and so to drive out disease. This property is due plenty of trout and salmon in all thes poisonous antiseptic. If, then, we can introduce into the circulation, either through the stomach or through the blood directly, a quantity of this nuclein, we give the system the power to vercome and drive out the which is destroying the vitality.

"In connection with nuclein I have been using hydrozone to cleanse from the stomach, the mouth and the lower intestine the dead mucus or the dis eased mucus which is formed in connection with dyspepsia or indigestio the feeding ground of certain microbes Some years ago a Frenchman, whos special business was the bleaching of feathers, found, on applying the peroxide of hydrogen to a sore, that he was able to cleanse the spot. Out this discovery grew oxygen treatment which attracted the attention of the medical world a fe years ago. The compound oxygen omposed principally of the peroxide hydrogen, made familiar to newspape readers as the 'peroxide' with which women bleach their hair. A little o this peroxide diluted and taken int the mouth when the stomach is ou of order will cleanse from the tongue the mucus which always collects there will remove the diseased tissue and leave the stomach clean and refreshed there is one objection to the use of the peroxide. It deteriorates. After a time the nascent oxygen escapes from it and a chemical change takes place formic acid. In Central Africa the na ables, and tives who use poison-tipped arrows exclaimed make a mash of red ants and use it views." She could talk Darwin and virtues of the peroxide and is not open even 64 times, hydrozone may be taken injection introduced into the large in

When he whirled the carpet about the house seemed to whirl with it, and the family cat took a skip for the cellar to be prepared for emergencies. Mrs. Bowser returned to her rocker and Mr. Bowser braced himself for a new effort. His mind was made up to pull the wrinkles out of the carpet or pull the house across the street, and he kicked off his slippers, moistened his hands and made a sudden jump for the largest one to take it by surprise. He had scattered his tacks with lavish tion, a valuable recipe book on the art of hand, and as he jumped he landed on

Mr. Bowser was lying on his back with both feet hoisted up, and readily divining what had happened, she rushed over to him and went to work. He had a dim idea that at least 400 tacks were sticking into the soles of his feet, but he was away off. There were only six in the right foot and five in the left. Not a word was said while she was extracting them—not a word while he was hobbling into the other room to fall upon the sofa. When she had stripped off his socks and applied witch-hazel and followed that with salves, she said: did you come to do it?"

THE SUMMER VACATION

A Change Even if in Minor Things Will Be a Great Benefit.

In the July Ladies' Home Journal Edward W. Bok gives some sensible advice upon "Going Away in Summer. He points to the mistake that instead of a rest and change so many women need of recuperation, make of their a nurse from the neighboring town of Hungerford was brought to the place ety, every moment crowded with some excitement or pleasure. In conse quence, the woman who goes away was soon hammering in the tacks along one side of the room. He wanted to surprise Mrs. Bowser at the end of half an hour, but it came much sooner. She looked in at the end of seven or eight for a rest comes back tired and wor during the year-away from things which have occupied us, away from disturbing troubles, away from familiar places and people. Such a change means a change in ourselves, in our thoughts, in our ideas, in our motive in our outlook on everything. The idea that we must ever keep ourselves busy even in vacation, so that the mind may not become rusted, is all nonsense For those who cannot go away Mr. Bok advises a change in their mode of living, or in their daily work. need a change in our lives," he con-tends, "even if it is only a change of rooms; of merely not sleeping in the same rooms in summer as we do in winter, or even a rearrangement of the TRY SOME furniture, of the curtains, carpets o pictures in our room—any change. No woman is so humble of circumstance that she cannot make her life pleasanter and higher, bringng some change into it. A rest at home, with the mind anter and higher, bringing some change from day to day, is oftentimes as much needed and as beneficial as a long jour-ney to other places or in other lands. One's limitations are often of im-measurable good as they show us how to get personal benefit in spite of them. 'Going away' in the summer need not always mean leaving the city or leaving one's home. It is, of course, better if we can do so. But we can stay at home and yet 'go away'-go away from things as we have had them for a twelve-month, and make them differ-

when Queen Victoria ascended the hrone there were no telegraphs in this ountry and few railways. The mails were forwarded by coach, says the Fortnightly Review, and the postage rates were to all but the well-to-do prohibitive. It cost from 4d to 1s 8d to send a "single" letter under an ounce in weight from one part of the kingdom to another. There were some 40 charges, varying according to distance, the average rate being 9d, or half the day's wage of a laborer. A "single" letter means, a single piece of paper (adhesive envelopes had not been invented), and the addition of a second scrap of paper made the letter a "double" one. The postage was paid on delivery by the recipient; and as no credit was given, the incursion of a postman into a poor neighborhood was watched on all sides wth fear

COLERIDGE'S FUTILE GENEROS-ITY.

Coleridge, the poet, saw a poor woman declining to accept a letter on the score of inability to pay. The good-natured bard (doubtless with ome difficulty) found the required 9d, despite the woman's remonstrances. When the postman had gone away she showed Coleridge that the letter was but a blank sheet of paper. Her brother had arranged to send her at intervals such a sheet, addresed in a certain fashion, as evidence that all was well with him, and she as regularly, after inspecting the address, refused to accept it. Some humorist on one occasion sent out large numbers of letters, each on a sheet as large as a tablecloth, all of which had to be delivered as "single" missives.

MIDDLE CLASS SUFFERED.

This system practically stifled written intercourse among the working class, but the rich and highly placed entirely escaped postal taxation. The privilege of franking covered the correspondence not only of ministers. peers and members of parliament, but of their relatives, friends and ac-quaintances. While in one year early In the Queen's reign no less than 7, 400,000 letters were franked, a single London firm paid annually £11,000 for postage, and a writer in the Quarterly referred flippantly to "so slight and rare an incident in a laborer's life as the receipt of a letter." Among the packets franked was a grand piano. An army of clerks was employed to fix the charges to be collected, and the postal revenue remained stationary between 1815 and 1835, although in the same period the population increased rom 19,500,000 to 25,600,000.

ITS MORALITY DOUBTED. Moved by this state of things, Par-Hament in 1839 adopted Rowland Hill's proposal of uniform inland penny postige, which came into operation on Jan. 10, 1840. The writer possesses a copy of the Quarterly Review of 1839, in which a contributor (believed to be Croker) fiercely denounces the scheme. "Will clerks," he says, "write only to their fathers, and girls to their mothers? Will not letters of romance or love, intrigue or mischief, increase in at least equal proportions? We doubt whether social and domestic correspondence will be more than doubled. A gigantic exemplification of the old proverb— Penny wise and pound foolish," etc. Macaulay says that the penny post, when first established, was the object of violent invective, as a manifest contrivance of the Pope to enslave the souls of Englishmen. It was described as "sedition made easy.

OPPOSED BY MOSSBACKS The postal authorities, who in 1784 had opposed the institution of mail coaches, were implacable enemies of penny postage. The postmaster-general of 1839 (Lord Lichfield) based his obfections on the curious ground that the building at St. Martin's-le-Grand would not be large enough. retary, Col. Maberly, constantly repeated: "This plan we know will fail." As we know, it succeeded, and the penny rate has been generally adopted in Europe, as well as in the United States. The number of letters rose from $0,000,000 in 1837 to 299,000,000 in 1847; and for the year ending on March 31, 1897, they must be about 1,900,000,000. The postal surplus was in 1839, £1.659,-510, and in 1896-97, £3,632,133. The num ber of letters, which was in 1837 about three per head, and in 1854 fifteen per head, is now 77 per head.

Camping and Cooking in Far

of Moosonee, B. N. A.] One does not generally expect hardship on a seaside trip, yet I expected some. I was to go some fifteen miles down a great river to the bay, then two or three days along the bay, and then ten miles up another big river, and to return the next week the same way. This I have done, traveling for two days, each way over the salt water, and yet neither seeing nor smelling it, and traveling over the water by a train. I traveled by train, yet not on wheels, a train which made its own track and did not use fuel or water, and only went at the rate of four or five miles an hour, and only from about 5 a.m. to 2 or 3 p.m. each day. The rest of the time we spent in camp. For those three days and nights we were in the open air, and at what a temperature! Always far below zero, 50 degrees of frost by day, and as much as 60 or 62 at night! A strange seaside trip, surely! But before telling my story, let me explain the above riddle by saying that the "train" a dog-train, composed of a sled drawn by eleven Eskimo dogs, and driven by an "Injun," not an injuneer-I mean an engineer; and that we traveled over the ice, three feet thick, with two feet of snow on top, which entirely hid the salt water, that we could only travel by daylight, and had to stop at certain fixed places, where we could find wood for campfires, and that we slept on the ground, or rather snow, in our cotton tent, or in the wigwams or tents of poles and bark, erected at the regular stopping places.

My home is at Moose Fort, and I House, confer with the missionary there, and see the residents. On Feb. 26 the dogs from Rupert House arrived here and brought me an invitation to return with them, which I gladly accepted, and made my preparations. These consisted in getting suitable food cooked for three or four days, gathering a bundle of blankets, and rabbit-skin rugs to wrap around me in the sled and sleep on at night, packing a small box with clothes, etc., for use at Rupert House, and looking out my deerskin coat and snowshoes. The food needs to be very simple and ready cooked; for we do not stop during the day to cook, and at night we

HAVE TO THAW OUR FOOD. and again in the morning. I took a loaf and some scones, the latter mostly to carry in my pocket and eat at midday; some partridges ready cooked, a little cooked beef and bacon, and a packet of soup-powder; also tea and sugar, salt and butter, some frozen cream, frying-pan, kettle, cup, plate, Monday, March 22, I was up soon after 4 o'clock, only to find a snow-storm raging, so that I could lie down to await developments. At 7 o'clock the storm was so heavy that we abandoned the idea of starting that day. The snow fell all day, the worst storm so we knew we were in for a hard trip.

Tuesday I was up at 5:30, and, after a hasty breakfast, donned my "Huscoat of deerskin with the hair on and started for the dogs. It was a fine morning, but promised to be very cold all day, and the wind right in our teeth. Well, here we are down on the ice, and the dogs impatient to start. Let me describe. The sled consisted of a narrow box four feet long, the front half being covered or boxed in, mounted on a floor eight feet long resting on runners. In this box the passenger sits, wrapped in rabbit-skins so that he can hardly move, his head and shoulders only projecting. In front and behind and on top of the box is placed all the luggage, covered with canvas, and securely lashed, to withstand all the jolting and possible upsets, and our snowshoes within easy reach. An important item is the dogwhip, terrible to the dog if used by a skillful hand and TERRIBLE TO THE USER if he be a novice; for he is sure to half-strangle himself or to hurt own face with the business end of the The whip I measured had a handle nine inches long and lash 30 leet, and weighed four pounds. lash was of folded and plaited sealhide, and for five feet from the handle measured five inches round, then for fourteen feet it gradually tapered off. ending in a single thong half an inch thick and eleven feet long. Wonderful the dexterity with which a driver can pick out a dog, and almost a spot on a dog with this lash. The lash must be trailing at full length behind, when a jerk and turn of the wrist causes it to fly forward, the thick part first, and the tapering end continuing the motion till it is at full length in front, and the lash making the fur fly from the victim. But often it is made to crack over the heads of the dogs as a warning, The eleven dogs were harnessed to the front of the sled, each by a separate thong of seal hide, all of different lengths, fastened to a light canvas harness. The nearest dog was about fifteen feet from the sled, and the leader, with bells on In order to satisfy his curiosity as her, about 50 feet, the thongs thus increasing in length by about three feet. When the going is good the dogs spread out like the fingers of a hand, planting, Mr. James Newson gave the when the snow is deep they fall into cross each other, the thongs get gradfrom the field, and in the spring found ually plaited almost up to the rearmost dog, when a halt is called, the dogs are made to lie down, and driver carefully disentangles them.taking care that no dog gets away meanwhile. We never stop to cook in the middle of the day's journey; but a jar of boiling tea has been stowed in the blankets, and has not lost all its warmth, and a sand-wich or a scone carried in an inner pocket will not be frozen very hard. On again, and at 1 p.m. we are passing Natatishe Point, 22 miles from Moose. We reached the next point, Big Stone. before 3 o'clock; but as it was 25 miles to the next possible stopping place, we had to be content to go no further that day. We had a cotton tent with us, and a small portable stove, and the first thing was to erect these in the shelter of the bush, and to get some wood for the fire. This took some time, and I found the waiting miserably cold work, chilling me to the bone. Of course, the floor of our tent, which is also our bed, is the trampled surface of snow, with a few pine branches laid on top. As soon as the stove was burning, my bedding was laid in the tent, and, sitting on this, I proceeded to unpack and thay my food and to thaw myself. The stove had not be very well put up, and kept up a constant leakage of most pungent smoke, which soon caused me

a bird, ready cooked, needed only to be thawed, and water to be boiled for tea; but the thawing takes long, and it was half-past 4 before it was ready. I also found that partridge shot in De-cember, frozen till March, then cooked and frozen again, thawed and so eaten is rather dry and uninteresting food The men were busy cutting dry firewood, attending to the dogs and cooking their supper till later than this. The dogs are unharnessed and chained to trees, out of reach of each other, as they are very quarrelsome, and presently fed with frozen fish, rabbits or seal blubber, as the case may be They sleep in the snow, coiled up without any shelter, and get very little attention. A tent with a stove is more comfortable for us than the open wigwam fire in the middle, which is always very bad for smoke. The cotton tent gets almost too hot while the stove is in full draft; but everything except the sleepers, freezes solid at night. It was too smoky for comfort, so, as we had to get up very early, we lay down at 8 o'clock. My pedstead was snow, mattress pine branches, bed of rabbit-skin, and blanket of ditto. I have learned to sleep like an Indian, with head under blanket; but even so, one gets very cold before midnight, and that and the hard bed made my rest very much broken. I think that the men must have lit the fire very early next morning. About 3 o'clock I awoke (indeed, I awoke several times before that, owing to the hardness of the bed and the cold), and put all my breakfast materials to thaw; but did not get up finally till 4 o'elock. It took us till 6 to thaw or cook our breakfast and eat it, so that we did not start till 6:30. The day was fine for us, but the snow was deep and soft, making heavy traveling. It was also cut into a su cession of ridges by the winds, so that was like diagonally. It was hard on the dogs, hard on the passenger if he rode, owing to the constant bumping of the sleigh, and very awkward snowshoeing over the ridges. The drivers had to walk the whole way, and I walked for an hour. I had come with borrowed snowshoes, which were too short and tight at the toes, so that I was sore and lame after half an hour. However, I managed two hours' tramp after lunch, at 10:30, and we reached East Point at noon. It was too late to go on to the next camp (twenty miles at least), so we made for the tent here and were in it by p.m.; very early to stop, but there was Here "tent." i. e., not our cotton marque but a fixture of logs and poles and boughs, about fourteen feet in diame and open at the top, through which opening the smoke is suppos to go. One was roasting on the side ar the fire and freezing on the further side.

THE SMOKE WAS DREADFUL. and very painful to my eyes; I could hardly read prayers for the pain and tears, and was glad to turn into bed at 8 o'clock. It was a very cold night zero); but I slept fairly well, only felt a little rheumatic and sore from the hard, cold ground. Awaking in the night I found the hair on my forehead stiff with ice from my breath, and pillow and blankets ditto. Thursday, up at 4 o'clock, and off at 6:15. A bit ter morning, and I found the col while preparing to start almost intolerable: but I got right under my sleigh robes and dozed. We had to cross two or three small bays, about twenty miles to Cabbage Willows. When half way across an Indian cam out to meet us. He reported "no rab bits, and family starving," i. e., very hungry; so we gave him some food from our small store. We found afterward that he makes a regular business of stopping people passing with the same story, they being a lazy shiftless lot. Reaching Cabbage Willows at 1 p.m. we determined to press on. Then came the hardest bit of all. Here the snow had drifted to a great depth; all had to walk, one man tramping a path for the dogs, which fell into single file, the leader being almost hidden in the snow. man and I walked by the sled, holding it up, and often helping to push it when the dogs stuck fast. We reached Black Bear Point at 6 o'clock and hastened to get tent fixed, wood cut, etc., before dark. We used our cotton tent and the stove the wood was rather green, and it took a long time to get the stove to burn and the food to thaw. The night and next morning were passed as before only that we got up at 3 a.m., and with a strong wind in our faces, so that, but for a short walk, I kept down under the blankets. About a.m. we stopped to disentangle the dogs stripped of her harness and robed in a set gay with ribbons and colored and saw Rupert House a few miles off, and knew that they would at once see this feverish life we have round flat Moose Fort. I for- has that almost thresomely alert and got to say that all the morning and petulant expression, but her color and part of the day before, we had in sight, her brilliancy are both gone.

Moose. A gang of men and boys came down the bank and gave the dogs a help up it, so that we arrived in style, on the run, with a great team, human and canine, to receive a most hearty greeting from Mr. M., in charge of the post. On a journey like this toilet exercises are of the most meager kind,

UNDRESSING IS NOT PRACTI-CABLE: so the first thing to do was to get out of my deerskin coat, which was always shedding its hairs over everything, in cluding my food, and then to have a good wash and thorough change. cannot now tell of my pleasant stay at Rupert House, visiting everybody, whites and Indians, holding services in the church, and enjoying the rest and the visit generally, but must pass on to my return, which I must dismiss with a few lines. The weather was fine while I was at Rupert House, and a high wind blowing all the time, so we expected the snow to be well packed and make the return journey easier. I had the Rev. E. R., native missionary, and his man with me this time as my crew, and they were naturally not as expert at camping arrangements as the men I had before. Also instead of eleven good dogs had only eight second-rate; so I did not expect to make such good time. The route was the same as that by which we came, but the division of it different. We started at 7 a.m., and managed to reach Cabbage Willows before dusk. Here is a fixed tent which we used instead of our cotton one. It was a mistake, for it needed more wood, which we had to cut, was very cold, and was the worst for smoke so far. How-ever, we managed somehow. My pres-

CREW WERE EARLY RISERS, or we should not have reached home as soon as we did. They had the fire going by 2 o'clock, and I was up by 3; but they were so slow over their preparations that it was after 6 when we started. I was up each morning by 3 at the latest, but we only once got off before 6; yet I was afraid to lie on lest they should do the same, and we should be later still.

The second day we only reached East Point: the third, by starting earlier, and traveling later we passed Bigstone without stopping and camped at Natatishe Point. Somehow on the second day I sprained the sinews of my right hand, which swelled very much and became very painful and continued so all the journey. At Natatishe we used our markee and camped very luxuriously on top of a hard snowdrift four feet deep. The fourth day we started early and hoped to reach Moose before noon. But traveling was hard and the dogs tired, and we had a tedious time. I tramped a good bit of the way. So we struggled along, getting our dogs into a run here and there, where the snow was not deep, past Pilgrims, the tail of our island, the servants' houses, the factory, along the ox-track and then a scramble up the bank and through the gap in the fence into our field at the side of the house, and so at home just as the Indian chil dren were going into afternoon school at 2 o'clock. Thus ended my first dog trip. Some fun, some discomfort at least, toes frostbitten, nose and cheeks peeled from the sun and frost, well tanned, and with a fresh stock of health and appetite.

A New Way of Treating Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

A Philadelphia Physician Uses Nuclein and Hydrozone, But He Admits That the Best Way to Attack Dyspepsia Is at Its Source, Which Is the Diet.

[Special Correspondence from Philadelphia.] It is surprising to hear a physician say he does not believe so much in medicine as in other remedies for the cure of disease. Dr. John Aulde, of this city, says the present generation is too familiar with medicine an should be educated more in the direct tion of avoiding it. of two ago in conversation. "This is particularly true in cases of indiges tion or dyspepsia—for there is a slight difference between the two—and the sale of so-called remedies for the cure of these troubles is enormous. If ped ple would pay more attention to what they eat, they would feel the need of medicine less and they would be a great deal healthier and happier." Dr. Aulde recently interested the medical world, and the lay world as well, by proposing a new theory of disease, or rather a new development of a theory which has been gaining acceptance of recent years. As it is estimated that every other man suffers more or less from dyspepsia, and that the man who does not suffer from it of all his friends, no subject could have wider interest. It is not surprising, then, that Dr. Aulde has had many inquiries about his recently published article in one of the medical magazines. I asked him to tell me in plain terms what the ground-work of his history was and what its application. "I'll put it to you as simply as I can," he said. "You have read or Many diseases are introduced into the heard a great deal about the microbe system by means of micro-organisms peculiar to those diseases. These microbes are many, and they have been examined and classified in different ways. Nature provides the stomach with a protector against the microbe in the acidity which accompanies digestion. But only a part of the digestion is carried on in the stomach. The intestine does part of the digesting of the food we eat, and while the reaction of the stomach is acid, that of the intestine is alkaline. If the digestive organs are in bad condition, through abuse of any kind, the microbe may pass through the stomach unharmed When he reaches the intestine he has no acid to fear, and in the case of typhoid fever he point in the small intestine near the right groin and breeds with marvelous rapidity. To prevent disease it is gans in good condition-in fact, a man with a good digestion need have very little fear of disease; but when once the system he and all his kind must be removed if the patient is to live. If allowed to remain he destroys the red blood corpuscles and poisons the circulation

If, then, we can ntroduce into the circulation, either through the stomach or through the blood directly, a quantity of this nu-clein, we give the system the power to overcome and drive out which is destroying the vitality "In connection with nuclein I have been using hydrozone to cleans the stomach, the mouth and the lower nection with dyspepsia or indigestion— the feeding ground of certain microbes Some years ago a Frenchman, whos special business was the bleaching of feathers, found, on applying the per oxide of hydrogen to a sore, that I was able to cleanse the spot. Out of this discovery grew the compound oxygen treatment which attracted the attention of the medical world a fev years ago. The compound oxygen i composed principally of the peroxide of hydrogen, made familiar to newspaper readers as the 'peroxide' with which women bleach their hair. NO FISH THEREABOUTS. Youth's Companion.

Fine as are the salmon of Newfoundland, they are without honor in their testine (in typhoid), it is difficult to get at the microbe. At one time physicians had a theory that they could reach him with corrosive sublimate, siclans had a theory that they could reach him with corrosive sublimate, but that had to be introduced through the stomach, and very little of it reached the place where the microbe was breeding. Recently there has been discovered an element in the blood which attacks bacteria, and by introducing this element into the circulation it is possible to destroy the microbe tive who was handling the the stern, and inquired whether there were any fish in the pond. "Fish? No, sir, no fish. No, sir, no fish, sir."

Presently, when about half way up the pond, and just as the sun was peeping over the eastern horizon, aw, not six feet from the bow of the canoe, a magnificent salmon rise to th surface, and, with a swish of his tail. disappear. She vacated, and there was a rip! rip! rip! as he seized the carpet and heaved away, and sent most of the tacks flying to the ceiling. When he whirled the carpet about the house seemed to whirl with it, and the family cat took a skip for the cellar to be prepared for emergencies. A Lover's GERALDINE.

There was a dead silence when he nded, until Miss Eleanor's voice again broke in with a querulous objection:
"But James couldn't inherit the property, because he was under sentence of penal servitude for life; so I don't understand your motive." "But he had escaped, and my claiming the title and property would have set the police in motion after him again while he was actually under my

"Mr. Massey will be here before the week is out," said Lindley, triumphant. ly; "I saw him not long ago, and I have some letters of his here which will prove to you that he was one of the principal agents in establishing the claim of the present Sir James Otway. In the meantime, Eleanor, your sister can satisfy you, as she saw the certifi-cates of Charles' marriage and his children's birth in my hands on the night your brother died." "But that does not prove that this is one of his children," persisted Eleanor, encouraged by a look almost of approval from her sister, who was unusually silent and crestfallen.

"Ask Mrs. Symes. She was present when poor Charles acknowledged his "Then why didn't he proclaim himself at once?" questioned the old lady, in the silence of all the rest.

"I have already explained that," re-torted Lindley, who was becoming rather restless, and who was much re-lieved when the butler entered the room with a request from Captain Morrison that Dr. Ledbury, Mr. F elding and the ladies would come to the

Eleanor excused herself, afraic of some scene which would disturb her nerves, already shaken by the revela-tion made by Lindley and by her own unusual display of energy in questioning the truth of it. The rest at once went to the library, where preparations had been made which showed that importance was attached by its occupant to the scene about to take place there. The bed had been taken away; the tall screen, which usually shut in a small space round the fireplace fro the draught, had been pushed back into a corner, to make way for chairs arranged for the expected visitors; Captain Morrison had forsaken his fato the light on the sofa, which had been placed by the fireside. He did not offer to shake hands with either of the gentlemen when they came in; but, ologizing in a grave voice for having to ask them to come to him, as he had sprained his ankle on the previous afternoon—and he pointed to his ban-daged foot—he said he believed they had come to make some important statements, and he should feel very much interested if they would let him Both gentiemen seemed astonished and somewhat disconcerted by this intimation that some inkling of their business had reached Captain Morrison's ears; but Lindley recovered him-self almost immediately, and at once took upon himself the office of narra-tor of a story the proofs of which, in letters and others papers, he produced

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Lindley's story began at the time when the late Sir Charles, five-andtwenty years before, had been stationed with his regiment in Ireland. Al-ready approaching middle age, he had fallen in love with a beautiful peasant the daughter of a small farmer, and privately married her. But she was a wild, high-spirited girl, very young and very fickle; she soon got tired of her prosy, middle-aged husband, and sought shelter in the family of a young Irishman in her own rank of life. Ten weeks later having her Ten weeks later, having been unable in the meantime to discover any trace of her. Sir Charles received a visit from her sister, who came with the news that Kathleen, his wife, had died in giving birth to a child, who was since dead also. The woman brought back to him some trifling trinkets he had given to his wife, together with the loving letters which she had scarcely been able to read; she also told him where his wife and child were buried, and, though, as there were no names over the graves which he visited by his sister-in-law's direction, and he could not see the register on ac-count of the absence of the priest, he had to take his sister-in-law's story on trust, no motive for deception had occurred to the simple-hearted gentleman, and he had never doubted the truth of it.

But Lindley now declared that Kathdeen had sent her sister to Sir Charles to cut off the last tie between them, that she might live undisturbed with the twin-children, a boy and a girl, who had been born to her, and with the man of her choice. It was only when a new family began to absorb her attention that it occurred to her to dispose of her two elder children, by bringing the girl to England and leaving it within sight of her husband's home, and by consigning the boy to the care of her sister who were to the care of her sister, who was well-married From a vague fear of the terrors the law might brin her, the ignorant Kathleen had caused birth of the children to be regis tered in her husband's name; and it of the story of his birth, that the bo was adopted by his aunt and her hus band. They were fond and proud of him, and as they rose in the world they gave him a good education, and finally sent him to Dublin University, with the design of making a doctor of him, taking pride in the fact that by their care they had restored him to the position of gentleman, of which his mother's rash flight had robbed him.

"It was on the occasion of my going to Dublin to visit our late unlucky relative, the other James Otway, who was then in prison," continued Lindley, "that I met the present Sir James by chance at a hotel, and was so much struck by the name and by his resem-blance to some of our family, that I never rested until I had unearthed the ole story. Although Sir Charles nephew was at that time under sen-tence of penal servitude for life, I could not induce Sir James to come forward and present himself to his father; it and present himself to his lather; it was only when I thought of pressing upon him the disadvantage under which his sister was placed by his silence, that he permitted me to break the tidings to Sir Charles. You all know the violent effect the announcement that he was the father to two nent that he was the father to two hildren, both of whom were alive, had pon him. lizabeth's lips tightened. "Sir Charle acknowledged him as his son in a will which has been kept concealed until this moment by Sir James, who, on the sudden appearance of his cousin, escaped from prison, refused to take his rightful place as his father's heir while the man who had always held that position might still claim it." Lindley produced the will which he said Sir Charles had made on the night of his death, in favor of his son by his wife Kathleen; it was in Lindley's own handwriting, was duly signed in a feeble, scrawling hand by Sir Charles himself, and the signatures of Mrs. Symes and of the butler, as witnesses,

Captain Morrison listened to the story with grave attention, examined the will, the certificates and certain letters which Lindley produced at different points in support of his state-ments, and said at last:

"I think your case is perfectly clear, and I acknowledge that, through a member of my household. I was not altogether unprepared for this strange revelation. Of course, Mr. Massey must be summoned over here—" "I have already written to him," in-terrupted Lindley.

"And, no doubt, Sir James, you will have no difficulty in calling witnesses to prove your identity?"
"None at all, Captain Morrison; my aunt and her husband are both alive and, though my mother died some years ago, the tarmer for whom she deserted my father is alive, and can give you all the details anyone can want.

"And for your later life I suppose there would be no difficulty in continuing the chain of evidence in your fathe least,"chimed in both claimant and supporter, together.

"Then I can say that the one thing in the whole story which remains as-tonishing is the disinterestedness which kept you silent so long, Sir James, in the interest of a murderer, an escaped convict, a heartless and-brutal-se-

For the first time his hard, dry man-ner changed, and his voice faltered. Sir James bowed slightly, but seemed rather uneasy; Lindley's eyes roved restlessly from his friend to the speaker, and back again; Elizabeth sat upright, but was cowed and silent; Geraldine drew a sharp breath of pain as her husband uttered the last words, but kept her eyes fixed upon him with an intent look of inquiry which was not without a suggestion of feverish trust

"It is a most singular and awful what people call the irony of fate that this undeserving wretch should have gone to his grave without knowing—I won't say appreciating, for that would have been beyond him—the

"Indeed, you are right, Captain Morrison; no one deplores his death so much as I do," said the new Sir James, composedly; while Lindley evidently grew more restless and Geraldine mor excited. "But you overrate my sacrifice as much as you underrate my unlucky namesake's good qualities. I had a position of my own—at least, I was rapidly making one—while poor James was too weak to have carved one out for himself, if he had been deprived of that one to which he believed

The divisional court, in a judgmen dismissed with costs the motion mad by Angus McLeod, the defeated rvative candidate, to have D'Alton McCarthy, Q.C., and Returning Office Bruce committed to the common for contempt of court in disobeying that injunction, which both courts held to have been void and of no effect.

CAMEGOCK ATTACKS A CHILD

Plucked at Her Hair and Drove Its Spurs Into Her Head-The Cock Killed.

Elizabeth, N. J., June 30 .- One of the most valuable fighting cocks in the city was killed, cooked and eaten to-day because it had developed a proclivity for attacking small children. The cock was owned by a man named Mackenzie, who lives on Ripley place.
Last Saturday a 3-year-old child of John Carpenter, 138 Ripley place, was passing through a vacant lot beside Mackenzie's yard, when the fowl flew over the fence and landed on the hild's head, seizing her hair in its The cock began sharp spurs into the child's head, in ttle girl put up her hands to defend elf, and received several gashes in

The child was taken home and her njuries were dressed, and then her father started out to get satisfaction. He compromised on the death of the

This Being Dominion Day

And the stillness that pervades this place of life and activity is in marked contrast with the commotion that is usually seen here from day to day.

This stillness means more than ordinary sentiment. It means that nearly one hundred helpers in connection with the Big Store are out in the bright sunshine, and in one way or other enjoying themselves and celebrating Canada's natal day.

And when the big doors swing open tomorrow morning every hand in the house will be at their post with a more cheerful face and feeling better than before.

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy. We like a day off and we always enjoy it, and there is no place under the canopy of heaven fairer or freer than our beloved Ontario to spend the national holiday.

The Big Departmental opens tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock.
