HARVEST HOME

A very successful harvest home was held Monday night at St. Stephen's church at Mitchell's Bay. The evening was fine and a large crowd was present. A fine supper was provided by the ladies, after which a good program was given. Rev. T. E. Higley acted as chairman, and speeches were given by H. S. Clements, M. P., G. W. Sulman, Rev. Mr. Hodgins, and R. A. Williams, of the Sovereign Bank. Songs were given by local talent, and recitations by Messrs. Harold Loyd and Chas. Bucks were much appreciated. The program closed by the singing of God Save the King.

A NARROW ESCAPE

John Maggs, mail collector, had a narrow escape from what might have resulted in very serious injury yesterday afternoon. He was making his usual rounds, and while passing the residence of Mr. Drew on Harvey street a large tree was blown across the roadway. Mr. Maggs was so near that the branches of the tree brushed his hat off and also slightly injured the rig in which he was riding. Another second later and I would have been under it, said Mr. Maggs, as it apparently seemed to fall without any warning.

TECUMSEH PARK WALK

SHOULD BE REMOVED

Regiment Wants Another Walk Which Will Take Its Place—Valuable Suggestion From a Citizen

A citizen from over the creek made a very valuable suggestion yesterday afternoon in reference to the granolithic sidewalk which at present runs through the centre of Tecumseh Park. The suggestion arose while watching a baseball game which was in progress on the park. The before-mentioned citizen is an ardent supporter of all athletic sports, and the splendid baseball games with which the citizens of Chatham have been provided on the park this summer, have all been a source of great pleasure to him. "We have here," said he, "the very finest playground in Canada. The people of Chatham do not really appreciate what exceptional advantages they have in Tecumseh Park. There is only one thing in connection with it that proves a detriment to sports, and that is the granolithic walk from the bridge to Murray street. Why this walk, which is very dangerous to the participants of football or lacrosse games, was ever put down, is a mystery to me. It spoils not only the park's beauty, but also its usefulness. "I understand that the Regiment authorities have sent in a petition for a granolithic walk from the Sixth St. bridge around the park to the armories and out to William St. at some point near the roller rink, and connected with the armories. Here is the city's chance to get rid of this other walk. In my opinion, the request should be granted for the new walk, and I have no doubt it will be, and the present walk complained of should be torn up, the ground should be sodded. "If the Council will do this, they will gain the gratitude of the citizens, ratepayers, athletes, and, in fact, everyone concerned."

STONE, POTTER AND SCULLARD FOR MAYOR

Announce Themselves as Candidates at Mayor's Fish Dinner Yesterday Afternoon—Austin and Bensen May Come Out

The race for the Mayor's chair for the year 1908 will have three entries at least, and the contestants will be the present Mayor, W. M. Stone, Ald. Wm. Potter and ex-Ald. Thomas Scullard. This prediction is based on the remarks made by these gentlemen while replying to the toast to the First Magistrate after the Mayor's fish dinner at the Bechard's inn at the Lighthouse yesterday. Mayor Stone and ex-Ald. Scullard both referred to the last campaign as one of the cleanest Mayorality struggles in years, and both hoped that it might be so in the future. There was a general exchange of compliments, and it was noted that the best of good feeling existed between Messrs. Scullard and Stone. Mr. Scullard laid his defeat to the fact that he had done no canvassing, and had not organized his campaign. He said that Mayor Stone showed him a trick or two in the matter of running a campaign. He definitely announced that he would be a candidate for Mayor for 1908. The Mayor paid flattering tributes to his friend ex-Ald. Scullard, and said that if there was any man that he would like to see grace the big chair in Harrison Hall during the coming year, that man is Mr. Scullard. The speaker said that he and Mr. Scullard had made a pre-election agreement that the victor was to turn in and give his support to the defeated candidate on the next occasion when he might run. Mr. Scullard would certainly have his support if he should make up his mind to enter any future campaign. Mayor Stone said that he had been approached by many of his friends, who pressed him to run for re-election. They thought that his past record made him deserving of it. Mayor Stone did not make any definite announcement, but it was gathered from his remarks that he will probably be in the field. He said that it was too early to make any announcement as yet. Ald. Wm. Potter referred to his long and useful record as a member of the Aldermanic Board, and said that he would certainly be a candidate for Mayor for 1908. He had been asked by many of his friends to come out, and he felt that he was in duty bound to do so. Both Mayor Stone and ex-Ald. Scullard were high in their praise of Ald. Potter. They said that he had always been most conscientious as an alderman, and was certainly deserving of the Mayor's chair before long. Pointing to Ald. Potter, Mayor Stone said, "There sits the man who has borne the brunt of the work of the Council of 1907. His committee work has always been thoroughly attended to, and this year especially the Property committee have had the heavy end of things. I must say that Ald. Potter has proven that he deserves the support and confidence of the electors." Toastmaster Walt Scane also took occasion to compliment Ald. Scullard, whom he said was a good alderman and a good citizen. In fact Walter wound up by complimenting everyone. It was a great pity, to Mr. Scane's way of thinking, that we cannot elect more than one Mayor at a time, and give all the good fellows a chance. It has been rumored that Aldermen Bensen and Austin will also be in the running next year, but as neither of these gentlemen were present yesterday, their intentions were not put on record.

BOY HORSE THIEVES

Dutton, Sept. 24.—A horse and buggy belonging to Mr. John Dean was taken from the Presbyterian sheds by two small boys yesterday forenoon. Mr. Dean left his horse in the sheds about nine o'clock Monday morning, and on returning a few hours later was surprised to find his outfit missing. Mr. W. H. Barnum, barrister, was informed, and after half an hour's work telephoning to every road in the township, the boys were captured west of Wai-lacetown by Clifford Killor. The boys escaped in a near-by woods, and the horse and buggy was restored to Mr. Dean. It is not at all probable that any action will be taken against the boys, since they are very young.

BOTTLE WASHED ASHORE

Blenheim, Sept. 24.—On Sunday morning, while strolling along the beach of Lake Erie, about eight miles west of here, Mr. James Webb found a bottle washed ashore and containing a note which read as follows: "May God bless you all, we all go down together. Notify my wife whenever gets this.—E. Escoffery, 128 East 14th Street, New York. The note bore no date but was written on the back of a receipted bill for a suit of clothes from Jack Weiner, importing tailor, 1443 Broadway, New York, dated March 11, 1907. Mr. Webb has forwarded the note to Mrs. Escoffery as requested.

LOCAL BOYS IN TROUBLE

St. Thomas, Sept. 24.—Police Constable Howard made a raid on a box car in one of the railway yards this morning and found "Jack" Ellis, of Detroit; Bruce Martin and Bernie Fielder, of Chatham, in a game of colored "spots." They were charged before the Police Magistrate with stealing a ride from Chatham and were fined $5 or 30 days each. They were taken to the county pen.

GETTING THE BEST

Toronto, Sept. 25.—Immigration improvement and reorganization of the factory regulations and inspection are matters to receive the early attention of the Provincial Government, according to Hon. Nelson Monteith, Minister of Agriculture, who returned to his duties this morning. In an interview, the Minister said he had collected a lot of valuable information with this end in view while abroad. "For the asking we can get the best in immigration," he observed, "and we must inaugurate a system of hand-picking. "Glasgow provided me with abundant material pertaining to factory inspection," he added. "The regulations there are made by the civic authorities in the form of by-laws." Hon. Mr. Monteith had a rough voyage home. The man who is governed by his good impulses can always govern himself.

A LOSS TO CHATHAM.

In the removal of Mr. C. H. Mills to Berlin, Chatham is robbed of one of her most valuable citizens, which fact is keenly and regretfully realized by every business man and ratepayer of the Maple City.

Although Mr. Mills was a resident of this city for a comparatively short time, he was not long in interesting himself in the affairs which effect the prosperity and advancement of the Maple City. The excellent and eventful record which he leaves behind him shows that he was busy all the time, and, as a result, this city will for years to come feel the benefits which have been derived from his public-spirited efforts.

When Mr. Mills came to Chatham, he had just left a city which was prosperous as a direct result of the efforts of its Board of Trade. There was no Board of Trade here, but Mr. Mills was always assured of an enthusiastic audience whenever he approached the subject which was nearest his heart. As a result, an agitation for a Chatham Board of Trade was soon started, and it was found that once it was started, the people here were just as capable and ready to work as any to be found in any city. The results have been good for Chatham, as everyone knows, and the future results will be just as beneficial. The Chatham Board of Trade is one of the most thoroughly alive organizations to be found in any city.

Mr. Mills was the unanimous choice for Secretary of the Board when it was re-organized, and he has filled that post with credit to himself and honor to the city. His successor in that capacity will not be easily appointed.

In business circles he was ever admired and respected, by every man on King street, and his record shows that he is in this respect thoroughly capable, energetic and honorable.

Mr. Mills is the type of man who is a credit and a source of benefit to any city. Chatham is sorry to lose him, and Berlin is certainly fortunate in again securing him among her list of citizens and business men. It is the sincere wish of his many friends that he may long live to enjoy the prosperity and happiness which he so richly deserves.

Life carries evil with it, but the remedy for the evil is not death, but more life, better life, higher life.

WIRELESS STATION READY.

Marconi Will Stay at Glace Bay Till First Message Goes.

Sydney, N.S., Sept. 24.—Signor Marconi reached Sydney yesterday morning and at once proceeded to Glace Bay to inspect his wireless telegraph station.

He said he intended remaining in Cape Breton till the station is opened, which would be in about three weeks. There was some testing to do and then they would get down to work.

"We shall have just a few friends present at the opening," he said. "We shall have some gentlemen of the press, but outside of these men we shall have no prominent men. We sent cables to the King of England and the King of Italy some time ago, when we first started, and when we begin commercial work we shall do by sending two or three messages to some of the more influential newspapers. We shall make no show about it, but go along quietly. The press people have been good to us and we shall now be good to them."

"Have you overcome all obstacles, and are you now sure of success?"

"Yes, we have surmounted all the difficulties, and we are sure of success."

The inventor said the continental Morse system would be used, but if the ordinary Morse code suited better that would be used. About twenty words a minute would be the speed.

The Canadian Pacific and Western Union have connections with the station, Signor Marconi said, and he hoped to do business with both companies. Asked if the cable companies would reduce their rates, he said he would not be surprised. If they did, it would be a good thing for the public.

"The wireless messages will be received at Clifden, Ireland, with the Cornwall station as a second string, to help out Clifden."

"Bad weather will have no effect on our system, provided it does not damage our masts and poles. Lightning storms will do us no harm," said Marconi.

After the messages reach Clifden the Government lines will take hold of them. The company has a contract with the British Government and the latter will look after the company's messages. The company has also a contract with the Canadian Government, and can use the I. O. B. wires.

WILL NOT PAY FOR WATER.

Ontario Government Objects—Service Shut Off at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The Ontario Government has made a protest against paying the regular water rates here. The auditor for the Ontario Government Educational Department was in the city yesterday, and will consult with the chairman of the waterworks committee.

The matter came to a head when the city solicitor shut off the water ten days ago, because the rates for this year had not been paid. On the understanding that there would be some arrangement made right away, and in view of the hardships which would be caused in the schools by lack of water, the collector and city engineer agreed to have the water turned on almost immediately.

One claim made by the Government is that it should be exempt from water rates on Government property. The city's reply to this was that only Dominion Government property is exempt, and that by a special agreement with the city.

DASH FOR NORTH POLE.

Dr. Cook 120 Miles Away From the Desired Goal.

North Sydney, Sept. 24.—The Gloucester yacht, John R. Bradley, which left here in July with Dr. Cook of New York and J. R. Bradley, the famous hunter, on an exploring trip in Greenland, is on the way here, and is expected this week.

The yacht left Dr. Cook and a Norwegian stevedore at Etah, 120 miles from the north pole, together with provisions. Both will take Esquimaux and dogs and make a dash for the pole.

Dr. Cook accompanied Peary on a previous trip north, and is confident of making good where Peary failed. Mrs. Cook and family are at Massena, N. Y.

HOW BLAZE WAS CAUSED.

"Picton" Fire Result of Pouring Oil Into Torch Can.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—A sensation was sprung last night at Coroner Wilson's inquest into the death of George Kleckie, who died on the burning steamer Picton last Saturday, when James Kane, a laborer, residing at 36 Sherbourne street, who had been hired as a wiper at noon on Saturday by Pettit, the second engineer, told in the box how he accidentally set the boat on fire.

The R. & O. Navigation Co. officials have been in Toronto since Sunday afternoon investigating the cause of the fire, and late yesterday afternoon, after close examination, Kane admitted what he knew.

He said: "I tried to fill my lamp lighted from a half pint of oil. The oil caught fire and a sudden blaze went up. I called to the engineer to bring a pail of water. I went there as a green hand and was not employed in this boat before."

The jury found a verdict in accordance with this evidence and added, "We find the company negligent in not enforcing discipline in the handling of the fire-fighting appliances."

Drowned at Driftwood.

Tobermory, Sept. 24.—Capt. Fitzgerald, mate of the steamer Alaska, was accidentally drowned at Driftwood Cove yesterday.

A boat in which he and four others were going ashore in captured. Fitzgerald sank in 70 feet of water.

May Send Smith Back.

Ingersoll, Sept. 24.—Harold Victor Smith, four months out from the old country, may be deported. Smith has been in the Police Court twice on a charge of theft and is now serving 30 days in jail.

TO MAKE THE BEST REMEDY

Fine Prescription for Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles Easily Mixed

Save This or Hand to Some Afflicted one, Which will be act of Humanity

A large health publication tells its readers of a number of simple and safe prescriptions that can be made at home. The following, however, for the cure of rheumatism and kidney and bladder troubles receives the greatest praise, viz., Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. These simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy at little cost and are mixed by shaking well in a bottle.

The dose for adults is a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime, drinking a full tumblerful of water after each dose. It is further stated that this prescription is a positive remedy for kidney trouble and lame back, weak bladder and urinary difficulties, especially of the elderly people, and one of the best things to be used in rheumatic affections, relieving the aches and pains and reducing swellings in just a short while.

A well-known local druggist states that this mixture acts directly upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys; cleanses these spongelike organs and gives them power to sift and strain the poisonous waste matter and uric acid from the blood which is the cause of rheumatism.

Cut this out and hand to some sufferer, which would certainly be an act of humanity.

Admissions Involve Hotel Men.

Belleville, Sept. 24.—A few days ago a young man named John Wilson was arrested here, charged with an offence. He pleaded in extenuation that he was intoxicated. He was only 19 years of age. As a result of his alleged admissions, information have been laid against the proprietors of the Queen's, Victoria, Dominion and City hotels.

EVER HAVE CRAMPS?

Kind of nerve to be tied up in a knot at midnight with cramps. Keep Nervine handy. Ten drops quiets cramps instantly. Used occasionally Nervine prevents this trouble entirely. From Stratford, Ont., Wm. Dea writes: "Nothing I know of will give such quick relief to cramps, colic or pain in the stomach as Nervine. If you feel queasy or sick just ten drops of Nervine in water and you're well next minute." Think of the protection and comfort contained in a 25c bottle of Nervine, and get it to-day.

MURDER TRIAL AT WHITBY.

G. P. R. Conductor Faces Jury For Myrtle Railway Collision.

Whitby, Sept. 24.—The autumn Assizes opened before Justice McMahon with a murder trial, and the further investigation of the G. P. R. collision at Myrtle last March, when two employees were killed.

The court room was crowded and the gallery filled with ladies. Adam Andrew, a Brock Township farmer, is to be tried for shooting the top of his wife's head off with a shotgun on July 20 last. From evidence recapitulated by the court in presenting the case to the grand jury the man must have been insane.

The Myrtle railway case, James P. Cook, conductor of train, whose failure to cross freight special 1488 at Myrtle caused the catastrophe, is charged with manslaughter. Kyle, the engine driver, and the train despatcher, who failed to repeat the order to the operator at Myrtle, are also likely to be indicted.

A Sample of What V.S.C. does.—Mr. Merrifield, I was so severely stricken with Joint Rheumatism that I was confined to bed for a long time with swollen and stiff joints; it even affected my stomach. I gave up all hope of ever being cured. The doctor finally told me he could "ease my pain but could not cure me." My sister heard of your Veteran's Sure Cure, and sent for a bottle. I took half of a 21 bottle. This enabled me to walk about as usual. This was about six years ago, and I have had no return of Rheumatism. Mrs. H. Privat, Williamsford, Ont., Sept. 11th, 1907.

Bird or Bee?

Two quaint observations about humming birds are published in "Early Long Island," by Martha Flint, both quoted from letters of the seventeenth century, written from the new country of America. Says one:

"The Humbird is one of the wonders of the country, being no bigger than a Hornet, yet having all the Demensions of a Bird as bill, wings with quills, spider-like legs, small claws. For Colour she is as glorious as the Raine bow."

Adrian Van der Donck, one of the Hollanders of Nieuw Nederlandt in 1642 writes of a—

"Curious, small, bird, conversing which there are disputations whether it is a bird or a bee. It seeks its nourishment from flowers like the bee and is everywhere seen regaling itself on the flowers. In flying they make a humming noise like the bee. It is only seen in Nieuw Nederlandt in the season of flowers. They are very tender and cannot be kept alive, but we press them between paper and send them as presents to our friends."

Value of a Constitution.

It happened in the spring of 1890, when Garibaldi was pursuing his expedition in Sicily and when the words "Constitution and Liberty" were on every Neapolitan's lips. "Why are you so anxious for a constitution?" asked a foreign tourist of his guide and donkey driver while they were travelling through the mountains of Sorrento. "Well, you see, your excellency," was the answer, "because I think we shall be all the better for it. It is now close upon twenty years that I am letting out my asses to visitors from all countries—English, French, Americans. All of these have a constitution, and they are all rich."

A "CURE" FOR CUSSING.

The Penitent Scotsman Found His

Lead a Heavy One.

A clergyman in Scotland observed with much perturbation that a member of his congregation was greatly given to the use of strong language. Over and over again he remonstrated with the man to give up the bad habit. In time the man himself came to see the error of his ways, and desired no less earnestly to break himself of the use of bad language. The difficulty, however, was to find a method of doing so. One day the clergyman hit upon a happy thought.

"Get a bag," he said to the man, "and every time you swear put a pebble into it. At the end of the month you will bring that bag to me. I will count the pebbles and see what the effect has been."

The man accepted the idea with alacrity. He got a bag, and, religiously, every time he swore what Mr. Gilbert in the "Pinafore" calls a "big, big D," he duly put a pebble into it. At the end of the month he went to the clergyman, taking the bag with him. It was not an easy task, for, as any one might see, the bag was very full and very heavy. He went into the clergyman's study and put the bag on the table.

The minister looked up with a serious expression. "This is very serious, my friend. I am sorry to see you have so many pebbles in the bag."

"Toot, minister!" exclaimed the man cheerily; "this is only the devil's—the 'damns' are all at the diabolical in another bag. They were over heavy to bring up!"—Excelsior.

A CLEVER TRICK.

The Way Lord Cochrane Once Won an English Election.

When Lord Cochrane was a candidate for parliament in Hamilton he refused to give any bribes. As his opponent gave $5 a head, Lord Cochrane suffered defeat. The latter, however, sent the bellman round the town announcing that all those who had voted for Lord Cochrane would receive 10 guineas apiece if they called on his agent. In those prebaital days of course it was known how each man voted, and the happy minority marched off to the agent, each getting his 10 guineas. Naturally enough, the majority began to think they had made a mistake, and they resolved to rectify that mistake at the first possible moment. In due course an opportunity came. There was another election. Lord Cochrane stood again, and the voters, remembering his lavish methods, asked him no questions, but returned him with a roaring majority. Then they conveyed a delicate hint to the noble lord asking what he proposed to give them for this distinguished service. "Not one farthing!" roared his lordship. The unhappy men reminded him that he had paid 10 guineas a head to the minority at the previous election. A complacent grin brightened the face of the member as he gave this explanation: "The former gift was for their disinterested conduct in not taking the bribe of $5 from the agents of my opponent. For me now to pay them would be a violation of my own previously expressed principles."

In Gardening Time.

By ALICE LOUISE LEE.

Copyright, 1906, by Alice Louise Lee.

THEY lay side by side, two long, narrow strips of plowed land separated by a woven wire fence. Tall, well trimmed hedges at either end screened them from the two parallel streets of the village; tall, well kept hedges at the sides screened them from the houses of their owners. Facing each other in the side hedges were small iron gates, entrances to these prosaic plots of ground.

On May 15, at 5:30 in the morning, the gate in the south hedge opened with a squeak, and a trim figure of decidedly scant dimensions stepped briskly through. A short blue denim skirt, a bit faded and worn, barely reached the top of stout, thick soled, dew proof shoes. The sleeves of a blue calico shirt waist were pushed above the elbows, while concealed in the depths of an enormous blue sunbonnet was a small tanned face crowned by brown hair coiled tightly in convenient workaday fashion on top of her head. In one hand she carried a tin pail full of pieces of potato, "sets" for planting; in the other a hoe which had seen much service.

Beside the dividing fence she began work on the potato row, digging away so industriously that she did not hear the gate in the opposite hedge open and was unconscious of any disturbing element in her Eden until a cheery "Good morning, Ann," caused her sunbonnet to bob up hastily.

"Good morning," she returned in a faint and wondering tone.

On the other side of the woven wire stood a man, also in blue denim, but it was surprisingly new. So were his big straw hat and his bright tin pail, full of potato sets, and his hoe. So was his method of preparing for a potato crop on his side of the fence.

"I made up my mind," he began, vigorously thrusting his hoe into the dirt, "that this year I'd get outdoors more. It's not good for me, this staying in the store all day. I'm going to do my own gardening."

"Are you?" came in a faint voice from the sunbonnet. It was a troubled voice. Ann was afraid of Stephen Long because his eyes twinkled and danced to the accompaniment of a fun loving tongue. Belle could cope with him, "giving him back," in the parlance of Bridgeport, "as good as he sent."

For a few moments the only sound heard in the garden was the click of two hoes—one a loud, strong, but uncertain click; the other light, but sure. Presently Stephen wiped the perspiration from his forehead and looked with an exclamation of dismay into the regular shallow holes, the product of Ann's brown hands.

"Jerusalem!" he ejaculated. "Is that the way you do? See here!"

Ann glanced over the fence, and the slight caused her internal mirth. Next she inventoried the new tin pail, and her mirth became external. Their usual positions were reversed. All the "Good morning, Ann."

dance and twinkle departed from Stephen's gray eyes, and he sent a look of comic dismay into the capacious sunbonnet.

"I've made every hole deep enough to plant old Hickory in," he said ruefully. Hickory was an enormous cat that played havoc with the rats in Long's hardware store.

"And you're gone—and cut—the eyes out of your potatoes!" gasped Ann. Then she clung to a post supporting the wire fence and laughed. Her sunbonnet slipped back, revealing two pink cheeks and a small, delicate chin.

Stephen chuckled in sympathy and came nearer. "Why, confound it all, I cut the eyes out because—well, because they didn't look pretty, I suppose. Isn't that all right?"

At this Ann laughed until the sunbonnet collapsed in a heap into a potato hole back of her. Then she checked herself and explained: "The sprouts come out of the eyes. If you don't leave the eyes, you'll get no potatoes. See?"

"Yes, I see." His visual interest centered, however, on the speaker rather than on the eyesless potatoes. "Say," he suggested suddenly, "let's swap work this morning. I'll help you plant, and then you help me cut the sets."

"All right," agreed Ann. She turned to recover her sunbonnet and so failed to see the expression of satisfaction which overspread Stephen's face as he placed a hand on top of the post and vaulted the low fence.

When, an hour later, they sat beside the hedge over a basket of potatoes provided by Stephen, matters grew worse. He did not cut the sets correctly. His fingers were all thumbs, and he came perilously near having one less to get in his way while cutting his fourth potato.

Ann bounded up the cut dexterously. Then she "set her foot down." "You hand me the potatoes, and I'll cut 'em," she said, decidedly and fell to work with a will.

Stephen obeyed. "Seems to me you are rather little to be bossing your elders," he said, with a dash of his much dreaded fun.

Ann hung her head and blushed uncomfortably. She considered it a disgrace to be so small, an opinion shared by her dressmaker.

"It's much as ever that I can find where Ann Wright's waist begins or ends," complained the latter individual bitterly. "She's all waist. Might's well try to fit a broomstick. Best I can do is to hang her clothes on her and let it go at that. With her sister Belle, now, it's different."

So Ann meekly accepted the dressmaker's hangings and surveyed with longing Belle's plump proportions. She sighed the morning of May 16, at 5 o'clock, she donned her short blue denim skirt and looked at her small but muscular arms, white down to the elbows and brown beyond. She took pride and comfort in her garden, but she wished her hands were as white as Belle's.

Her face lighted as she opened the gate in her hedge and saw Stephen leaning on one of the line fence posts impatiently awaiting her. In his new role as gardener, with overalls and big hat and with that odd expression of dependence on his clean cut face, he did not seem to her half as formidable as the Stephen Long who had for years gayly sauntered through the hearts of half the girls in Bridgeport. His own untouched, danced at their weddings and stood godfather to their babies.

"I tell you what," he began as soon as Ann appeared, "I'm glad to see some one looming over the horizon who knows a trifle about gardening. What are you going to plant next?"

"Nothing," replied Ann promptly. "This morning I'm going to sow things—onions, for instance."

To her own surprise, her voice was mischievous. A strange feeling of buoyancy possessed her. The sun was sending red heralds up from the east to proclaim a perfect day. Belle was asleep, unconscious of the drama of the garden, and Stephen—well, Stephen's eyes were smiling at her, but not just as he smiled on the public at large. "Mother isn't up yet," he began hesitatingly. "So I brought along a rag and a string. He paused and held a hand out to her appealingly. It was the member wounded the previous morning. Ann promptly dropped her hoe and attended to her surgery.

"Watching," the operation, "do you always wear that bonnet in the garden?"

"Yes," returned Ann innocently, "always."

Stephen sighed. "I should think it would be awfully hot away back in there," meditatively gazing within as Ann raised her head.

But the bonnet slowly shaken was the only reply. In some ways its wearer could not see beyond its projecting sides. For fifteen minutes silence reigned in the gardens. Ann worked with her back to the wire fence lest Belle should chance to see her through the little gate. She drew the end of her hoe handle along the smooth top surface of her yard square onlooker and was carefully dropping the seeds when a voice of triumph sounded behind her:

"I've finished mine. Now what are you going to plant next?" There was a step beside her, and the voice of triumph became a voice of dismay. "Jerusalem! Is that the way you fix 'em?"

Ann turned and glanced into the next garden. "Yes. What have you done?"

Stephen stuffed his hands deep in his overalls pockets. "Me? Why, I sowed 'em broadcast." He removed one hand and motioned as though sowing oats.

Again Ann was convulsed with mirth. "How—how would you weed them if they came up thick all over?"

Stephen wormed a toe into the soft soil. "Weed? Why, I never thought about the weeding. I think," quite humbly, "that I better stick to the store and give up gardening."

Ann's heart unaccountably sank. So did her sunbonnet.

"No, I won't, either," with sudden energy. "If you'll bolster me up with advice, I'll stick to it."

Ann's heart unaccountably arose. So did her sunbonnet.

"Let's swap work this morning," proposed Stephen a moment later, and Ann agreed.

Next morning shortly after five she found Stephen smoothing over her carrot plot just south of the onions. "I thought I'd begin," he explained a little shamefacedly, "in your garden so you would help me. I don't know what to do with the pesky seeds. Either I'd plant 'em in a trench so deep they'd never hear the last trumpet or else I'd scatter 'em over the top to the four winds and the breezes between."

After the gardens were planted there was no reasonable excuse for arising at 5 o'clock until the weeds appeared. Therefore, Stephen, released from his early morning duties, often came up on the Wright porch yawn evenings and entertained himself gaily with Belle's chatter, while

Ann slipped away and wandered to the garden hunting weeds.

At last, after a heavy June rain, they came accompanied by the tender vegetable shoots—potatoes, beets, onions—and Ann arose again at 5 and repaired, sunbonneted, to the garden. Her heart fluttered a little as she unlatched the gate. "He will get some one else to do the hoeing surely," she told herself. But no.

He greeted her with a rueful face. "Say, I'm glad you're here," he proclaimed frankly. "Do you pull these weeds or hoe 'em out or put a charge of dynamite under 'em?"

Ann heard herself laughing happily. The hoeing season had begun.

On the Fourth of July the families Wright and Long enjoyed new potatoes and peas. Stephen's row of vines abounded in peas, while his potatoes were deficient. In Ann's garden the case was reversed.

"We'll swap," said Stephen promptly. Swapping had become a habit with him. Two weeks later both families regaled themselves on beet greens. They came from Stephen's garden, but no one knew save the two gardeners.

"My sweet corn will be ripe in two weeks," said Ann timidly as she took the greens. "There will be enough for us both."

Her predictions were correct, but antedating the ripening of the sweet corn was the picnic in the Bridgeport grove. "Will you girls ride over with me?" asked Stephen, coming suddenly around

"I thought you had gone to the picnic."

the corner to the porch the evening before, as Ann was watering the flowers and Belle swinging in the hammock.

Belle answered promptly in the affirmative. Ann tardily. After he had gone Belle yawned and remarked carelessly: "Three in that narrow buggy! How tiresome! If you'd not happened out to her gossiping, it was the member wounded the previous morning."

Ann made no reply, but swallowed hard at a big lump which would not go down. All her invitations were accidents and came because she "happened to be around" Belle. Nothing would induce her to go to the picnic.

Therefore, the following morning, although she donned the denim skirt, she did not repair to the garden until 9 o'clock.

"Belle, I've concluded not to go to the picnic. There's the hoeing that must be done in the garden."

"Better the garden, Ann," came back Belle's voice good naturedly. "You're wedded to that garden."

Ann did not hear. She had seized her hoe and fled down the walk and through the little hedge gate. No hoeing was needed, but she hoed desperately, checking the sobs and forcing back the tears until she heard Stephen's buggy roll down the road; then she dropped the hoe and retreated to the corn.

The great stalks towering above her head closed protectively about her. The rustling of their leaves drowned the sound of the released sobs. She sank down and, pressing the sides of her bonnet together over her face, wept as though she were thirteen rather than twenty-three.

There was an ache in her heart which was out of all proportion to its apparent cause. In fact, she would not acknowledge the real cause even to herself until she heard her name from the end of the row in the midst of which she sat.

"Ann, what is the matter? Are you hurt?" Stephen pushed rapidly through the corn and stood looking with perplexed eyes down on the slight figure hiding beneath the big bonnet.

"I thought you had gone to the picnic," replied Ann's muffled tones.

"Yes, I went, but more lemons were needed, and I volunteered to come back after them because I wanted to ask you why you wouldn't go. You see, I knew no work was needed in the—Ann! Why, Ann, dear, you are crying!"

Stephen dropped on one knee beside her and, gently opening the bonnet, looked in on a little wet face.

"What is it, Ann?" he asked tenderly.

Stephen took a firmer hold on the sides of the sunbonnet and, tilting her head farther back, forced her to meet his eyes. "Tell me, dear girl," he pleaded.

"I thought—you'd rather—take Belle—alone." Ann's tongue tripped in confusion over the words, while the blood reddened her cheeks.

Stephen laughed in sudden relief. His reply was irrelevant. "Take Belle alone! Why, Ann, dear, I confess now that I hate gardening, but I've tried every other way for five years to—"

His face, with the rest of the sentence, was lost in the depths of the sunbonnet.

LEGAL TENDER.

You Might Think Gold Certificates Are, but They Are Not.

"Gold certificates, silver certificates and national bank notes are not legal tender, but both classes of certificates are receivable for all public dues, while national bank notes are receivable for all public dues except on imports and may be paid out by the government for all salaries and other debts and demands owing by the United States to individuals, corporations and associations within the United States," says the treasury department.

"Gold coin is legal tender at its nominal face value for all debts."

"Standard or silver dollars are legal tender at their nominal or face value for all debts, public and private, except where otherwise expressly stipulated in the contract."

"Subsidiary silver is legal tender for amounts not exceeding $10 in any one payment."

"Treasury notes of the act of July 14, 1890, are legal tender for all debts, public and private, except where otherwise expressly stipulated in the contract."

"United States notes (also called greenbacks) are legal tender for all debts, public and private, except debts on imports and interest on the public debt."

THE TROUT IN HIS LAIR.

He is an Alert and Elusive Unpictured Beauty.

Whoever has had the privilege of lying at full length on some mossy overhanging bank while watching a large trout in his lair perceives that a true figure has yet to be drawn of him. Even photography can give no hint of the wary circles from the spotted dorsal fin undulating loosely athwart the broad back, of the perpetual fanning of the pectoral fins, of the capacious gills opening and closing, the half open round mouth, the luminous brown eye, the ceaseless slow vibration of the powerful tail, nor can pen adequately describe the startling suddenness of the dart at some idle fly touching the surface, the quick return to the old position and the resumption of the poised with head elevated at a slight angle, pectorals all tremulous and floating watery circles emanating from every slight motion of the body. It is also worth while to watch a trout rush four feet up a perpendicular fall of water, pause, tremble violently all over and in a moment throw himself clear of the stream and fall into the basin above at an elevation of about three feet more.—Arthur P. Silver in Outing Magazine.

Not less marvelous in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar affections, weaknesses and distressing derangements, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as is amply attested by thousands of grateful testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of catarrhal pelvic inflammation, irregularities, prolapsus and other disorders caused by weakness, displacement of uterus and kindred affections, often after many other advertised medicines, and physicians had failed.

Both the above mentioned medicines are wholly made up from extracts of native medicinal roots. The processes employed in their manufacture were original with Dr. Pierce, and they are carried out by skilled chemists and pharmacists with the aid of apparatus and appliances specially adapted and built for this purpose. Both medicines are entirely free from alcohol and all other harmful, habit-forming drugs, and full list of their ingredients is printed on each bottle wrapper.

"I Didn't Go."

"Lady, I'm out of work," explained the tramp, undismayed by the forbidding glare of the Illinois farmer's wife. "I'm a deep sea fisherman; but the fish is all fished out of the Atlantic ocean this year. Bein' a poor, unfortunate, but honest man, I'm now on my way walkin' to the Pacific coast where the fishin' is good. Can't you help a feller along a bit?"

"Yes, indeed," replied the farmer's wife; "I'll just unlodge the dog and help you run part of the way."—Lippincott's.

Extended Over Entire Body—Mouth Covered With Crusts as Thick as Finger Which Would Bleed and Suppurate—Disease Ate Large Holes in Cheeks—Hands Pinned Down to Stop Agonized Scratching—Three Doctors' Best Efforts Failed to Give Relief.

BUT CUTICURA WORKS A MIRACULOUS CURE

"When my little boy was six months old he had eczema. The sores extended so quickly over the whole body that we at once called in the doctor. We then went to another doctor, but he could not help him, and in our despair we went to a third one. Matters became so bad that he had regular holes in his cheeks, large enough to put a finger into. The food had to be given with a spoon, for his mouth was covered with crusts as thick as a finger, and whenever he opened the mouth they began to bleed and suppurate, as did also his eyes. Hands, arms, chest, and back, in short the whole body was covered over and over. We had no rest by day or night. Whenever he was laid in his bed, we had to pin his hands down, otherwise he would scratch his face and make an open sore. I think his face must have itched most fearfully. We finally thought nothing could help, and I had made up my mind to send my wife with the child to Europe, hoping that the sea air might cure him, otherwise he was to be put under good medical care there. But, Lord be blessed, matters came differently, and we soon saw a miracle. A friend of ours spoke about Cuticura. We made a trial with Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent, and within ten days or two weeks we noticed a decided improvement. Just as quickly as the sickness had appeared it also began to disappear, and within ten weeks the child was absolutely well, and his skin was smooth and white as ever before. F. THE MAYOR'S LAUNCH TRIP

A Day of Unalloyed Pleasure, Long to Be Remembered

Was Most Successful From Every Point of View

Gladsome autumn weather, quite in tune with the event about to be pulled off, prevailed for the Mayor's outing down the river yesterday. It was a merry good-natured crowd that got aboard the "Water Wagon," W. W. Seane's big and speedy launch, yesterday morning. At one o'clock this morning, the faithful "Water Wagon" arrived in dock with the self-same devotion, a little tired, but still merry and still good-natured. There were exactly fourteen aboard, just enough to break the alleged hoodoo, thirteen. The party was composed of Mayor W. M. Stone, Ald. Potter, Ald. McNell, Ald. Stephens, ex-Ald. Scullard, ex-Ald. "Doc" Radley, City Clerk W. G. Merritt, City Engineer E. B. Jones, W. W. Seane, John Fallahee, Joe McRener, George Hahn of the News, and Charles Jenkins of the Planet.

The trip down the river was a most delightful one. So entrancing was the view that Ald. Stephens and McNell insisted that the boat be stopped at Bagnall's Grove, that they might get off and view the scenery.

At Peckville John Fallahee was allowed to go ashore for about twenty minutes. He returned carrying a basket full of grapes, and other choice fruit, which he purchased from the wondering and admiring natives. Many of the ladies in the vicinity came down to the shore to watch the Mayor's party.

At Peckville John Fallahee was allowed to go ashore for about twenty minutes. He returned carrying a basket full of grapes, and other choice fruit, which he purchased from the wondering and admiring natives. Many of the ladies in the vicinity came down to the shore to watch the Mayor's party.

There were no stops from that on to the lighthouse, where Mine Host Ike Bechard and his merry men were busily engaged in preparing a wonderful fish dinner. Turtle, soup, fried bass and sturgeon, and other innumerable delicacies were heaped on the table in Ike's cosy club house, and a ruddy fire was blazing in the hearth.

"What more could mortal man desire!" was the involuntary exclamation of ex-Ald. Scullard, when the guests were all seated. Certainly, if the trip was to be a success, it went to no end of trouble to make everyone comfortable and at home.

"Is everybody happy?" asked Wm. Seane, to which query he was greeted with a chorus of "Yes." It was a feast long to be remembered. To chronicle the various interesting incidents of the day would require the services of a patient historian; and would probably necessitate the writing of several volumes.

After dinner, Engineer Jones went out in search of relics. Later in the day, the newspapermen came upon him digging up a small tree some distance down the water front. He returned with a large bag filled with ancient bones. Ike Bechard swears that the bones were none other than those of a beaver, and that his dog carried them down the shore and hid them. Mr. Jones, however, explained that they were part of the framework of a monster prehistoric beast, which one time roamed about this country seeking what it might devour. No one seems to know just what became of Mr. Jones's bones, but they mysteriously disappeared some time after the setting of the sun.

A number of the party, along with Mr. Seane and the reporters, went for a sail on the lake, but it became so rough that they had to return before going very far.

"Wouldn't like to risk going out on such a heavy sea, and endanger such a good fish dinner," commented Ald. Stephens, who was among "those present." No one said anything in reply, but the palor noticeable on the faces of many of them showed that they were all nearing the predicament which the genial contractor referred to.

Speechmaking commenced early in the afternoon, and lasted on till about ten o'clock in the evening. Walter Seane presided as toastmaster and general director of ceremonies. The toast list was a long and interesting one. Toasts were made to everybody and everything worth while. Everyone spoke and some spoke several times. Genial Walter said that there was no time limit, but there must be no mystery, and anyone found dreaming would be immediately fined, and shut up in the shed to the rear with the fishbats. John Fallahee was the centre of attraction a good bit of the time. In making the toast to Mr. Fallahee, Mr. Scullard referred to Bagnall's piling as the best on earth in his estimation. He said that he would be willing to have the brick torn up from in front of his property, and pay for the laying of bituminous in its place. This so tickled Honest John, that his almost forgot the speech he had memorized to reply to the toast to "the ladies." He was helped out, however, with this important toast by Joe McRener, and one of the reporters, who also found themselves down on the program to pay a tribute to the "eternal feminine."

City Clerk Merritt, City Engineer Jones, Ald. McNell—in fact everyone—made addresses, which it is to be greatly regretted cannot be reproduced in verbatim. There were no more of the reporters, who have no occasion to order anyone into the shed.

During the day, a heavy gale arose which drove the water inland, so that when the party made to return, they found three feet of water between them and the "Water Wagon." The party then returned and waited till eleven o'clock in hopes that the gale would die down, but at the hour of departure it was stronger than ever. The return trip from the lighthouse to Seane's dock was made in exactly two hours. Walt. Seane covered himself with glory as a valiant sea-dog, and the "Water Wagon" was roundly applauded on the fast time made. Everyone returned feeling certain that never in their lives before did they enjoy anything more than this most elaborate outing provided by His Worship Mayor Wm. M. Stone.

WAS DEMANDED

George Yott, the man who is charged with the theft of Dr. McFarlane's horses, appeared before Judge Houston this morning in the County Police Court, and was remanded until Monday. The remand was made at the request of the defendant, who wishes to secure the evidence of a witness who was not present this morning. Crown Attorney H. D. Smith is prosecuting and O. L. Lewis is conducting the defense.

THE INDOOR SEASON

The indoor baseball season in the armories will open to-morrow night, when a game of ball between the team from "C" Company and the team from the staff and Sergeants will be played.

The game will begin at eight o'clock, and a fast and interesting game is expected. After the game a meeting will be held and a league will be formed. A schedule for the winter months' proceedings will be arranged. The officers have donated a cup to be given to the team winning the most games during the series. The indoor game is bound to become popular this year in this city, as it is one of the best games in all the large American and Canadian cities.

The game to-morrow night will be free to the public, but it is the intention of the officers to charge a small admission fee when they get rightly started.

The following are the players from "C" Company: Brisco, Brundage, Guttridge, Parrott, Jinks, Barfoot, Gillies, Bell, Myland, Harrington and Morley. The staff and Sergeants team is composed of Smith, Reid, McCormack, Munter, Clements, Groves, Bechelder, Dunlop and Stephenson.

G. K. Atkinson Suffers a Second Attack of Stomach Trouble in Stettler Alta.

Mr. G. K. Atkinson, partner in the firm of Mercer & Atkinson, who has been suffering with stomach trouble for some considerable time, is still about the same; if anything there is perhaps a slight improvement in his condition since last week, though he is still unable to take any solid food, and is obliged to resort to morphine injections to get any sleep. On Thursday last his condition was so serious that Dr. Howson, who is in attendance, called in Dr. Staples to hold a consultation. His many friends in extending their sympathy to him during his tedious illness hope that the improvement which has now set in will continue, and in time make confinement to his bed unnecessary.—Stettler, Alta., Independent, Tuesday, Sept. 17.

Mr. Atkinson, mentioned in the above, is an old Chathamite, who left here for the Northwest in the hope that his health would be benefited. It will be remembered that when he was here, and just previous to his departure for Stettler, he was confined to his home, and later in the hospital with a serious illness resulting from the same trouble which now affects him. His many friends will be sorry to learn that he has taken a turn for the worse, and they all hope that he may soon be restored to health.

LAI D TO REST

New Sarum, Sept. 24.—The funeral of Mr. George Lister, who died suddenly in Chatham, took place from the residence of his son, Mr. Charles Lister, of that city, yesterday.

Deceased was the last of the family residing in New Sarum. He leaves to mourn his loss a devoted wife, Mr. Chas. E. Lister, of Chatham; Mr. Geo. Lister, of Chatham; Mrs. D. A. Palmer, Yarmouth Centre, and Mrs. Joseph Smith, of London.

MEN'S ASSOCIATION

A meeting of the executive committee of the Men's Association of the First Presbyterian Church was held in the offices of J. W. Aitken yesterday afternoon, when it was decided to hold one big meeting each month, at which every man of the congregation will be expected to be present. The first meeting will be held next Tuesday, when Hon. R. F. Sutherland, M. P., Speaker of the House of Commons will be present and will deliver an address on a question of importance. Mr. Sutherland is one of the speakers of the day, and it is likely his address will be along patriotic lines. It is expected that this meeting will be very largely attended by the men of the church.

CLARIFIED AND BOTTLED MILK

To clarify and bottle milk is the only sanitary and up-to-date way to handle such an important product of the dairy as milk, for while it is one of the best and most necessary
foods we use it properly cared for,
it is certainly one of the most dangerous if neglected or carelessly
handled, and should never be exposed to street dust, as is done in the ordinary way of peddling milk
from large cans with open measures.
The Steam Turbine Machine used
to clarify all the milk sold from the

Maple City Creamery

will certainly take all the impurities
out of the milk, thereby removing the danger of many cases of sickness, especially among children,
that can be traced directly to the milk supply. Don't take any

Montreal Live Stock.
MONTREAL, Sept. 24.—At the Montreal
Stock Yard: 23 car loads, composed of live stock for the week ending Sept. 21: were 2779 cattle, 2023 sheep
and lambs, 229 hogs and 747 calves, while the supply offered on the market for the local trade to-day consisted of 1850 cattle, 1200 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 300
calves.

The offerings of cattle this month showed an increase of 200 head as compared with a year ago, on account of the fact that pasturing throughout the country is poor, and with feedstuffs and hay ruling
at such high prices as they are at present,
farmers have evidently decided not to fatten their stock and are marketing
them freely, therefore considerable half-finished cattle are coming forward and runners who have been waiting to be scarce.

There was also considerable demand
from canners, and all the poor stock met with a ready sale at 4 1/2c to 5c per lb.
There was no demand from exporters, as calves on Saturday from Liverpool were weaker and noted a further decline in prices of 1/4c to 1/2c per lb. and, as they had ample stock on hand to fill their contract orders, they declined to operate. Choice heaves sold at 5c to 5 1/2c; good at 4 1/2c to 4 3/4c; fair at 4c to 4 1/4c,
and lower grades at 3 1/2c to 3 3/4c per lb.

Lambs sold at 5c to 5 1/2c, and sheep
at 4c to 4 1/2c per lb. Receipts of calves
continued fairly good to this time of year,
for which the demand is good, and prices
are maintained at $3 to $12 each, with a few very choice ones selling up to $15.

There have been no new developments
in the hog situation since this week,
prices having ruled steady on account of smaller arrivals, and the fact that foreign advice on Canadian bacon have been somewhat firmer. There was a good demand from packers and jobbers this morning, and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $2.50
to $3.00 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

WOMAN'S DARING TRIP

TRAVELS THROUGH LABRADOR
WITH GUN AND CAMERA.

Six Hundred Miles Across Unexplored
Territory—Completes Work That Cost Her Husband His Life—Thrilling
Adventures At The Rapids—
Visited Indian Camps—Migration
of Caribou—Pathetic Episodes.

There has recently arrived in London a woman who, when her remarkable story is told, will, without doubt,
be accorded by a nation of explorers a place almost without equal in the annals of travel.

The new heroine is Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard, jun. Her husband, who was slender and graceful figure, and the delicacy of her features are in striking contrast to the arduous and daring
nature of her accomplishment in a journey across 600 miles of unexplored
Labrador, accompanied by only three Canadian guides and an Eskimo boy.

As a mere achievement Mrs. Hubbard's story would stand alone. But it has another aspect—a wife's devotion to the memory of her husband.
The journey which this wonderful lady has made was projected and attempted by Mr. Hubbard, who was the editor of the "Outing Magazine," of New York. A great journalist, the mysteries of wild Labrador attracted his attention, and the price of his ambition was his life, sacrificed under most lamentable circumstances.

What death had prevented her husband from doing Mrs. Hubbard determined that she would accomplish
with almost incredible resource
and courage she carried out her husband's wishes.

Mapping a New Land.
She traversed the lonely and unknown wilds of the interior of Labrador, tracing and mapping the course
of two of its largest rivers, the Nacaupae and the George, thus completing the great undertaking which cost her heroic husband his life in 1903. Setting out from Northwest River
Post, at the head of Lake Melville,
on June 27, 1906, she reached Lake Michikamau on Aug. 2, and on Aug.
27 she arrived at George River Post
after a most exciting and perilous
canoe journey down the continuous wild rapids of the George River. She was accompanied by three Indian guides and a young Eskimo half-breed. The party had two canoes. The route she followed was never before explored. In the rapids of the great rivers thrilling adventures were frequent. She witnessed the annual caribou migration and visited the encampments of two bands of Indians,
one of Montagnais and the other the Nascaupae of the Barren Grounds.

"My husband," said Mrs. Hubbard to a press representative, "made the attempt in 1903. He started with a half-breed guide named Elson and a white man, and ascending the Susan River, landed in a barren region many miles from Michikamau Lake. On hearing the river the missionaries provision depot and pushed on. But their game supply gave out. Their provisions were exhausted, and the party decided to turn back. They were literally starving. It was on their return journey that my husband broke down. All three men were, more or less, exhausted, and as Mr. Hubbard was well-nigh exhausted, they decided to leave him in a camp and push forward in the hope of finding the provision depot.

Relieved Too Late.
"After wandering about they found
the provisions and started back to relieve Mr. Hubbard. The white man actually turned back within a few miles of the spot where my husband
lay dying, and when Elson succeeded in finding the camp relief was too late.

"In 1906 I determined to carry out my husband's plan. I decided to go alone—that is, without any other white companion. I wanted to get away from the world for a bit, and as I knew that my scheme would be opposed if it was published, I concealed
it even from my father and mother
until almost the moment of my departure.

"My outfit consisted of two tents
made of balloon silk, had each two canvas-covered canoes, 150lb. of provisions, two rifles, three 22-calibre
single-shot pistols, and a 22-calibre
revolver, the latter for my own use.
I was dressed in a short skirt over knickerbockers, a sweater, a heavy leather belt to which were attached
my revolver, hunting knife, and cartridge belt. I also had a pair of heavy oil tanned leather moccasins reaching to the knees. A narrow-brimmed soft felt hat completed the outfit.

"We had no hairbreadth experiences,
except that the passage of the rapids
was always dangerous. One day, I remember, we covered three and three-quarter miles in fifteen minutes.

Mrs. Hubbard is completing a narrative, in book form, of her travels,
and it should prove a book of the deepest interest.

East White Locusts.
A despatch from Vinita, Indian Territory, states that the country between Grand River and the Arkansas
line in the Cherokee nation, after 13 years' exemption, is now visited by locusts in great numbers, and the trees are so full of them that persons standing a few steps apart can hardly reach each other's peak.

The Cherokee Indians in that section gather in family groups with torches and gather buckets and baskets full of the insects, and carry them to the nearest house and enjoy a feast. Only the young jelly-like locusts are taken. The Indians call them white bugs. They wash them,
put them in a pot, salt them and eat
them on a fire and stir them while they cook. No grease or water is used in cooking them. They more resemble parched corn than anything else when ready to eat, but are larger than half a dozen grains of corn, and while crisp out the inside have a meaty taste, being greatly enjoyed by the natives.

FIGHT WITH JACKALS

MAN HAS FIERCE STRUGGLE WITH HUNGRY PACK AT CAPE.

Was Fourteen Miles From Home—
Mistook Them For Herd of Buck—
Assumed the Aggressive—Used Rifle As Club—Despatched Twenty-
One of the Vicious Brutes—Rescued Just in Time.

While he was on a shooting trip
about fourteen miles from his home
at Beaufort West, Cape Colony, the other day, E. Clarke Kuir, a British settler, had a terrible fight with jackals.

What he took to be a herd of buck approaching him turned out to be a pack of "Panne" jackals, the large variety so much dreaded by farmers and herdsmen. Instead of following the pack to pass unharmed, he fired and killed the leader.

The others advanced on him, and
before they surrounded him he killed three more and wounded two. Then a grim fight against overwhelming odds
began, for he was alone in the bush
using his rifle as a club. Mr. Kuir disposed of a few more of the brutes,
but his weapon broke and he was left with only the two barrels to defend himself. By this time he was fearfully torn and mauled about the neck, arms
and thighs, and was rapidly growing exhausted.

Just before he sank to the ground
unconscious one large jackal sprang
on his neck, and he remembered nothing more. When he recovered his senses he was in a sheep kraal with four friends, who had saved his life.
They came on the scene as he was falling, and as the infuriated beasts
were rushing on him to tear him to pieces a few shots and a combined
rush scattered the animals in all directions.

After taking him home, Mr. Kuir's rescue returned, and he found twenty-one dead jackals, which they skinned.
They sent him half a dozen of the skins as mementos of the incident.

What a splendid type of tireless activity is the man all the psalmist describes it as being like "a bridegroom from his chamber and rejoicing like a strong man to run a race." Every man ought to rise in the morning refreshed by slumber
and renewed by rest, eager for the struggle of the day. But how rarely this is so. Most people rise still unrefreshed, and, deciding the quantity and quality of the blood sup-
ply. This nourishes the nerves,
feeds the brain, builds up enfeebled
organs and gives sense of strength
and power which makes the struggle of life a joy. The "good feeling" which follows the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" is not due to stimulation, as it contains no alcohol. The ingredients are plainly stated on the bottle-wraps.

It does this by increasing the quantity and quality of the blood sup-
ply. This nourishes the nerves,
feeds the brain, builds up enfeebled
organs and gives sense of strength
and power which makes the struggle of life a joy. The "good feel-

President of Bee Growers' Association
Meets Tragic End.
West Selkirk, Sept. 24.—A fatal accident happened at Gonor, Saturday
afternoon, by which J. J. Gunn lost
his life, being gored to death by an
enraged bull.
Upon entering the stable to attend
to the stock he found the bull loose.
It immediately attacked and killed
him instantly.
Mrs. Gunn came along a few minutes later, and noticing what had happened, fought the bull off with
the pitchfork and dragged Mr. Gunn
out.

Mr. Gunn is widely known, especially in connection with the apia-
ry and his brand of honey. He
was president of the Manitoba Bee
Growers' Association.

Guns For Dreadnought.
London, Sept. 24.—At the Admiralty
it is said that all the vessels of the Dreadnought class now building
shall be armed with eight new type 13.5 guns, so disposed that they all
can be fired on either broadside.

The new weapon will be over 50 feet
long, and a shell from it, it is calculated, will pierce 20-inch Krupp steel
armor at a range of 3,000 yards.

Telegraphers Want Funds.
New York, Sept. 24.—The striking
telegraphers have appealed to the Central Federated Union for funds. An appeal for the same purpose was made
by Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, and met with the
hearty endorsement of the meeting.
For weeks there has been a strong
movement in one union to donate
$100,000 to the men now out.

Man Swept Overboard.
Montreal, Sept. 24.—Struck by a terrible wave, and swept overboard to death, was the fate of William Roberts, a seaman of the steamship Dominion of the Dominion Line, which arrived in port yesterday, after a stormy passage.

T. J. Rowlands, another of the crew, was hurled by the wave against the side of the ship and had two ribs broken.

Locomotive Explodes.
Orville, Ohio, Sept. 24.—The boiler
of a locomotive pulling a westbound Pennsylvania freight train, while running 20 miles an hour, blew up at Burton City on Sunday.

Conductor Rockhill, Brakeman
Crum and Engineer Bray were killed,
and Fireman Frank Riffe was probably fatally hurt.

KAIDS DESIRED PEACE

Make Overtures to Gen. Drupe
After Successful Attack.

Hostilities Now at an End—Agree to Terms of French Commander After Strenuous Objections—All Arms to Be Surrendered—Camp Broken Up
and Moors Dispersed—Terms to Be Carried Out.

Casablanca, Sept. 24.—The destruction
yesterday of the Moorish camp at Sidi Ibrahim, south of Casablanca, and the dispersal of the tribesmen have resulted in new overtures for peace.
Nineteen Kaids, representing the Ouleicayan, Senate and Zyaida tribes,
presented themselves at Gen. Drupe's
headquarters during the afternoon
and lengthily discussed the conditions which the French commander proposed for their submission. His terms include the unconditional surrender
of the Moors with all their guns,
against which the Kaids are holding out, but upon which the French authorities insist.

Paris, Sept. 24.—An official despatch received here from Gen. Drupe confirms the unofficial advice from Casablanca that fresh overtures for peace
had been made by the Moors, but the French Government announced that it was improbable, after the previous experiences with the hostile natives,
that hostilities could be suspended,
pending the result of the negotiations.

Peace in Morocco.
Paris, Sept. 24.—(Later.)—Peace has been declared in Morocco.

The delegates of three important
tribes have accepted the French peace overtures inaugurated yesterday, and will see that the terms of the agreements are carried out.

Hostilities are now at an end.

COLLAPSED IN FEW SECONDS.

Says Witness Who Saw Quebec Bridge
Totter and Fall.

Quebec, Sept. 24.—Five to 15 seconds
was the time occupied in the collapse of the Quebec Bridge, according to the evidence of witnesses of the catastrophe heard yesterday by the Royal Commission.

F. B. Cudworth, engineer in charge of the field instruments, being asked to describe the occurrence, said that at the time he was in the little house
at the approach, a thousand feet away from the collapsed section. Hearing a peculiar rumbling noise, he turned about and looked over, his notice being then first attracted to the movement of the tops of the main posts
and of the main post peaks.

He did not happen to have time to notice the anchor arm at the moment.
The main posts assumed a succession of curved motions. They moved sideways and then towards the river.
Then the peaks followed towards Quebec, and the posts seemed to sink straight down. The peaks apparently kept the same distance apart as they went down.

President of Bee Growers' Association
Meets Tragic End.

West Selkirk, Sept. 24.—A fatal accident happened at Gonor, Saturday
afternoon, by which J. J. Gunn lost
his life, being gored to death by an
enraged bull.

Upon entering the stable to attend
to the stock he found the bull loose.
It immediately attacked and killed
him instantly.

Mrs. Gunn came along a few minutes later, and noticing what had
happened, fought the bull off with
the pitchfork and dragged Mr. Gunn
out.

Mr. Gunn is widely known, especially in connection with the apia-
ry and his brand of honey. He
was president of the Manitoba Bee
Growers' Association.

Guns For Dreadnought.

London, Sept. 24.—At the Admiralty
it is said that all the vessels of the Dreadnought class now building
shall be armed with eight new type 13.5 guns, so disposed that they all
can be fired on either broadside.

The new weapon will be over 50 feet
long, and a shell from it, it is calculated, will pierce 20-inch Krupp steel
armor at a range of 3,000 yards.

Telegraphers Want Funds.

New York, Sept. 24.—The striking
telegraphers have appealed to the Central Federated Union for funds. An appeal for the same purpose was made
by Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, and met with the
hearty endorsement of the meeting.
For weeks there has been a strong
movement in one union to donate
$100,000 to the men now out.

MAY AVERT A STRIKE.

Leader of Railway Employees Anxious to Find Peaceful Solution.
London, Sept. 24.—The indication yesterday rather favored the idea that a strike of the railway employees will be averted. M. Bell, M. P., the leader of the strike movement, addressing a large body of railway men at Cardiff on Sunday, adopted a very moderate tone. He explained that, even if a ballot of the workmen favored a strike, the men would not be called out immediately, but renewed efforts would be made to induce the railway directors to reconsider their decision not to grant the demands of the men. He realized, he said, that a strike would be a terrible calamity and declared that he intended to exhaust every means to arrive at a peaceful solution of the trouble. Large meetings of railway men were held throughout the country on Sunday to discuss the situation.

A bookbinder was putting a binding of lead on a book.
"Why lead?" a visitor asked.
"This," the binder answered, "is a naval code book for use on a battleship. All such volumes are bound in lead."
"But why?"
"So that in the event of the ship's destruction the books will sink with it, for they contain secrets of immense value, and every precaution must be taken to keep those secrets dark."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Dignity is a good four flusher, but it does not hit very hard in a scrap.

The philosophy of the fundamentalists of life is not worrying the man at the motor end of the pick.

He is a good one who can acquire religion by singing in the choir.
It is annoying to try to lose yourself and then have some officious friend find you and present you, with a flourish, to your rightful owner.

Children may occasionally tell lies themselves, but they don't approve of the habit in grown people.

There may be a divinity that shapes our ends, but it is usually a strong arm guy that puts the finish on us.

The less a man is able to the more he insists on singing it himself.

When you try to throw care to the winds the contrary breezes often insist on bringing it back and pasting it on you.

Some people's idea of recreation seems to be balling themselves up the first round and dopping the rest of the time.

Soon as a man finds himself he ceases to care who lost him.

The less egotism a man has the harder he is to manage.

Minor Tribulations.
When a man is safely married, he would like as not suppose that his troubles being over. He had entered on a duty crossing. But just then he hears his lovely murmur questions such as these: "Is my back hair flying, dearie?" "Will you put my comb in, please?"

Maybe he is in a hurry. Rushing out to catch a train. When he's stopped by some one calling in a voice that's full of pain. Notwithstanding he is flying in the hottest kind of haste. "Will you kindly wait a minute, dearie, and button up my waist?"
Sometimes when he takes her walking. Spick and span and quite at ease. In his newest suit and necktie. Feeling happy as you please. Stopping on a dusty crossing. Where the breeze is busy, too. She comes at him in this manner: "Won't you kindly tie my shoes?"

Often when his thoughts are busy With a great and dazzling scheme He is rather rudely awakened From his brilliant get rich dream By his wife, who dares before him In a sad and soulful pose. Saying, "Tell me, tell me truly, Is there powder on my nose?"

Necessary.
"Do you believe in an income tax?"
"You bet I do, and something else too."
"What else?"
"That everybody be provided with the income."

Mr. Buttinski.
"What is that man's business?"
"Yours."
"What do you mean?"
"He is a voluntary adjuster of everybody's affairs."

His View.
"CHEER UP, PERCY, ALL IS WELL."
"HOW?"
"When a likely girl comes along."

Willing to Experiment.
"Water the garden, Johnny; the sun is baking it all up."
"Why not let it alone and then we can raise a crop of baked beans."

Always Throwing It.
"Nothing could make cold water popular."
"Oh, I don't know; some people have lots of use for it."

First Aid.
He tried to pop the question. But the question wouldn't pop. So he had to drag it out of him. When one day she got the drop.

Street Arab.
"That child seems simple minded."
"Indeed? I had not noticed that he minded at all."

Too Much.
"Why don't you think for yourself?"
"How can I when I have to think for all you dubs?"

HINTS ON HOME BUILDING.

The man who is thinking of building a home (and who is not, in these prosperous times) must have prominently in mind, economy, durability and appearance.

The wise builder will select materials that are good and inexpensive, as well as handsome in appearance. Take the roof, for instance. It should be proof against lightning, fire and water, and should also possess a handsome appearance.

Wood shingles have had their day. As now manufactured, they soon rot and crack, thus making it necessary to reshingle.

"Safe Lock" Galvanized Steel Shingles solve the problem in every way. They lock at the top, bottom and both sides, so that they are absolutely proof against every element. Being heavily galvanized, they cannot rust and are practically indestructible. Moreover, the smooth surface of the shingle will not permit dust or dirt to lodge on the roof, and defile the rain water.

The Metal Shingle & Siding Co., Limited, of Preston, Ont., offer to send you, free, their literature containing names of those who have used "Safe Lock" Shingles in your own locality. 47

Switchman Snuck Acquitted.
Brantford, Sept. 24.—George Snuck, 63, P. R. switchman, charged with criminal negligence, causing the death of a trainman here, was honorably acquitted by Judge Hardy.

Cartierhall, Nfld.
Dear Sirs.—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes, so badly that I thought I would be disgraced for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation, and preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes.

Yours truly,

Executed Without Trial.
Lodz, Russian Poland, Sept. 24.—Seven workmen and one girl were executed by shooting here yesterday without trial, for participating in the murder of Marquis Silberstein, owner of a large cotton mill, who was killed by his employees Sept. 13, because he refused to pay them for the time they were out on strike.

PHILLIPA'S SIMPLE LIFE

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay.

Copyrighted, 1917, by E. C. Parcells.

"And so you are going in for it in dead earnest, rusticity, breakfast foods and all?" teased Keith Hilliard, smiling as he spoke, for Phillipa Ramsay, in the role of reformer, was a person to confute with. She wore an air of finality that had always been before, and in her dark eyes was the gleam of an unalterable purpose. The box of chocolates that he had brought her remained untouched on a table near by—a silent witness of Phillipa's change of heart.

Even her house dress had a touch of earnestness. The trailing, shimmering gowns that had always seemed part and parcel of her personality were replaced by gray homespun. Her hair was drawn back smoothly from her brow and coiled low on the back of her neck. Most significant of all—beneath the edge of her skirt peeped forth a pair of slippers with low heels.

"Life," said Phillipa seriously, "is altogether demoralized. We spend too much time over fuss and feathers. We are hampered by all this—a wave of the hand included the unobtrusive luxury of the Ramsay drawing room, its books and pictures and rosiest shades lamps. "If we had just the simple necessities and no more, think how quietly and sanely we should live. From this time on I am done with the frills of existence. And tomorrow I leave for the mountain camp where I shall spend the summer with half a dozen people who share the same point of view."

Hilliard's lips twitched a little. "Isn't this rather—rather sudden?" he queried.

"It's none the less sincere," returned Phillipa spiritedly.

"And that means you are done with the city and the things of the city forever?"

"Forever!" echoed Phillipa solemnly. "Oh, Keith, think how beautiful it is going to be! Dawn and sunset and storm and a glimpse of the stars through the open tent flap! And to sit around a blazing fire, and eat the things prepared with our own hands!"

"And where do I come in in this new and splendid scheme? Am I never to see you again, or am I to subsist on letters?"

"If you would only join our colony!" Phillipa glowed with enthusiasm. "Mr. and Mrs. Marsden and Richard Fenwick and—"

"It sounds alluring, but meantime what would become of my clients?" "You could give up the law altogether," said Phillipa serenely, "and become a woodsman."

"This is only June. Perhaps I'll run up two months later," said Hilliard, lingering over his goodby.

"Do!" urged Phillipa, apparently unaware of the look he bent on her, for her eyes had the far-off gaze of one who was seeing visions.

It was a clear morning on the 1st of August that Hilliard walked briskly down the slope leading from the Hillcrest hotel to the lake and boathouse below. On one side stretched the velvet expanse of the golf course, where a chattering group were starting an early game; on the other was the tennis court, the rackets of the players flashing in the sun. Sounds of "Fifteen love!" reached Hilliard as he stepped into the launch that was waiting at the boathouse landing. He gave his directions and then settled back on the cushioned seat.

Camp Idle Base was five miles away, at the other end of the lake, a place rendered secluded by reason of its rocky approach, which required the coolness and precision of a well trained boatman. The launch flashed through the water at full speed, but not fast enough to suit Hilliard's impatience. It was weeks since he had had more from Phillipa than a hasty postal card, and his blood raced at the thought of seeing her. As the launch neared the landing, steered in and out between the moss green bowlders, he scanned the shore for a glimpse of her. Some one in a gray walking skirt was stooping over a smoldering fire. She raised her head. It was Phillipa.

"Oh, Keith," she cried, "you've come at last!"

The hand she held out to him was brown and hard. The mark of a burn ran from wrist to elbow. She was worn and thin, and a tiny furrow showed between her brows. On the ground lay a pile of pots and pans and what seemed to be the charred remains of a day's baking. But Hilliard tactfully ignored the signs. He chatted of mutual acquaintances, of all that had transpired since he and Phillipa had last met. It was only when he mentioned that he was stopping at the Hillcrest hotel that Phillipa paused to refer to her present mode of life.

"It's beautiful!" she declared in a tone that held more of challenge than of comment.

"Sure!" he agreed heartily. "The air is simply great! But where are the others?" he asked, with a glance at the seemingly deserted camp.

"Oh, two have gone for a walk and one to pick flowers, and two are writers and have a place where they work farther up in the woods."
"And one does the dishwashing and baking and tends the fire," said Hilliard, with a keen glance.

Phillipa flushed.

"To each his portion," she quoted.

"And to some a triple portion. Apparently this is one of those camps where there is one worker and five shirkers."

"If you came here to criticize"—began Phillipa.

"Far be it from me," said Hilliard hastily. "By the way, the day after tomorrow we're having a hop at the hotel. It promises to be quite an event."

"I suppose there are a lot of girls there," said Phillipa, bending to stir the fire.

"Stunners!" cried Hilliard, with enthusiasm. "Well, goodby, Phillipa. I'm awfully glad you're so happy, and I'll see you soon again."

"Won't you stay for luncheon?" urged Phillipa in a tone which implied that he had better not.

"Thanks, no. I've got to get back. Sky looks as if it might have a bit of a squall, doesn't it? All prepared?"

"We can take care of ourselves, I think," said Phillipa, with dignity.

Hilliard's weather prophecy came true with a rapidity and violence that kept the guests at Hillcrest housed for two days. "The squall," as Hilliard expressed it, "settled into a good long cry," with the rain coming down in torrents and never clearing till the night of the dance, when Hilliard set off in a sailboat to see Phillipa.

When he reached Camp Idle Base it was all in darkness, with every evidence that its occupants had retired for the night. The sagging canvas of the tents was sodden and blown awry, the campfire was a dreary smolder of damp wood and ashes, and as Hilliard stepped gingerly forward the ground oozed and sizzled underfoot. Suddenly from some place on his right came the sound of a muffled sob, and, peering through the blackness, he saw a huddled figure on the rustic bench the camp possessed. There was no mistaking that dark head bowed on the circled arms.

"Phillipa!" cried Hilliard. She raised a startled, tear wet face.

"I thought you were at the hop," she quavered, her voice falling and breaking on the last word.

"Without you? Not much!" "But those other girls"—Phillipa's tones were still muffled.

"Girls!" For a moment Hilliard was utterly bewildered. Then a light broke in on him. He laughed outright.

"Why, Phillipa, surely you know there never was and never will be any one else but you! As for the hotel—your aunt and uncle are waiting there for you now. And they've brought your trunks—all of them. I thought," he went on, "that if you knew how much it meant to me you'd change your mind and come. You're not angry with me, are you?" he added as Phillipa turned away her head.

Phillipa's voice held something strangely like a sob.

"Angry! Oh, Keith, before you came tonight I was the most miserable girl in the whole wide world! I find the simple life isn't what I planned at all. I'm tired and sick and disgusted. Somehow the brunt of it seems to come on me. All day long I work, and at night I dream of greasy dishes to be washed, and a kettle that won't boil, and tents that let in the rain, and—"

"There, dear, I know. But remember it's over and done with. And it's getting late, and your aunt will be anxious, so hadn't you better run and tell those other campers that you're coming with me?"

A few moments later Hilliard's sailboat was skimming in the direction of the Hillcrest. Phillipa sat in the stern.

"When a woman," she mused, "has to choose between a mode of life and the man she loves, it doesn't take her very long to make up her mind. Rusticity and simplicity may be all very well, but felicity is best, after all!"

What Hungarian Partridge is.
A writer in Die Woche warns tourists against the temptations of the bill of fare and commends the old German adage, "What the peasant knows he will not eat." "Special or national dishes," he says, "should be avoided because in order to appreciate them one must be accustomed to them. We always form an idea as to what these dishes should taste like, and our first experience with them is always disappointing. If you must eat these national products of the kitchen, order them in the best hotels or at the first class restaurants, for there they are idealized by careful preparation and superior ingredients." The writer gives special warning against the dishes with queer names which are served in Austria and advises tourists to ask what these preparations are before ordering and eating them. "As an example he quotes 'Hungarian partridge,' which may be found on nearly all bills of fare. This is really a dish made of pork 'leavings'—namely, ears, tails, muzzles, etc., and as little like the name as the Englishman's cheese preparation is like a Welsh rabbit."

Artificial Freckles.
The tobaccoist started guiltily. On a table before him lay a row of cigars, a row several yards long, which he was spraying carefully with a brush dipped in a clear liquid with an ammoniacal smell.

"But you are a connoisseur," he said blandly. "You know that the little brown specks on a cigar wrapper mean nothing; hence I don't mind telling you what I am about."

"The stuff I am spraying on these weeds is a patent acid that costs $2 an ounce. I mix it with ammonia, and every drop of the mixture that I cast on a cigar wrapper makes a brown freckle—a brown freckle exactly like those natural ones that raindrops and the sun form on the growing tobacco leaves of Cuba."

"You see, many smokers ignorantly imagine that a cigar's excellence is determined by the freckles on its wrapper. I am pandering to this ignorance now. It is disgraceful, but it pays."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

An Enthusiastic Astronomer.
So great was the enthusiasm of the French astronomer La Caille in the cause of science that he restricted himself to the use of one eye, resting the other solely for his telescope. It is almost incomprehensible that a man should thus voluntarily deprive himself of one of his most useful members, but it is recorded that by these means he was able to achieve many very interesting results.

Shop Without a Name.
In the Devonshire Town of Modbury there is a butcher's shop which has no name, nor has it had one for the last 120 years. The reason affords a striking illustration of the superstitious nature of west country folk. When this particular business was started, the owner for some reason or other did not have his name inscribed on the premises. Whether this fact had anything to do with the success of the business or not it would be difficult to say. Trade, however, was brisk, and the butcher duly retired, leaving the nameless shop to his son. The business has been handed down from father to son for more than 120 years, but none of these into whose occupation it has come would have his name put up on any consideration, fearing—as, in fact, the present owner does to-day—that such a procedure might break the spell of good fortune with which the business has been favored.
