uniting in their conductors to discover the most effectual at means of orangelising the world. Hence the late Missionary Conference as Liverpool. This commenced on the creating of the 18th March. Such a conference was a new feature in the history of modern missions. Although, especially since the outbreak of the Indian suttiny, the propriety of a meeting of this description had been suggested, yet it was not anticipated that it would so soon be realized. Many missionaries of high celebrity, and of great experience in the mission field, were congregated. A number also of persons holding high and responsible positions in the civil and unitary service of India, were present. The unset harmony and-good feeling prevailed throughout the Conference.

The Conference was opened on Monday evening, 19th March, at half-past ext, in Hope Hall, Liverpool. It was continued during Tucsday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. There were Morning and Abermoon Sitting, the Morning Sitting commenced at 4 o'clock and terminated at half-past seven. An hour each morning was speats in prayer, previous to estering upon business. In these meetings the public were not admitted. There was however, a short meeting held each evening, at 6 o'clock, to which they also access. We have this week the melancholy task of recording the death of the Ray. RICHARD KSIGHT, D. D. Wesleyan Minister, of the Sheffield circuit. The Rev. Gontleman died at Sackville, whither he had gone to be present at the annuaul examination in the Mount Allison Academy. Minister, of the Sheffield circuit. The Rev. Gontleman died at Sachville, whither he had gone to be present at the annual examination in the Mount Allison Academy. To those who knew the venerable Doctor, (and there are few here who did not) we need not speak of the sterling virtues of his character, or the pious and useful tenor of his life as a christian minister. Par beyond and above overy influence save those of his accred calling, he was immorably fixed in the precepts of religion, and as firm in their practice; while his highly respectable talents and remarkable energy, readered him both efficient and prompt in his administration as a preacher and a pustor. Its sustained the office of co-Delegate of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Eastern British America, in its Conference, and was most highly esteemed by his brothren, or rather sons, in the ministry; for we believe he was among the oldest of his associates, here or closwhere, having been a travelling missionary for upward of fifty years. He leaves a widow, with a large family of sons and daughters to lament a loss, which to them as well as to the church of his adoption, must be great indeed.—

"Among the various publications of its class, a foremost place is unquestionably due to the 'PRACTICAL AND DEVOTIONAL FAMILY BIRLE.' It is difficult to conceive of any substantial improvement of which it admits. The Marginal Readings and the Parallel Passages printed in fell are a superlative advantage. We cheerfully accord to the Book our most unqualified and emphatic recommendation."—British Standard. WILLIAM COLLINS, Publisher, Glasgow and London, GEO. T. HASZARD, Agent for P. E. Island.

RDWARE.

A later account states that Garibaldi has landed with his followers on the Sicilian coast at Marsail, a place diamons for its wine. It was previously known that the ships Piensonte and Lombardo, in which his forces were after leaving Genoa, had touched at Talomona, on the Roman frontier, and that Garibaldi had issued a characteristic proclamation against the Neapolitan Bourbon, the Pope, and the Austrians. The telegram from Turis states that four men were killed in landing, and it adds that other supplies of arms, which came from the Levents, for the use of the insurgents, had previously arrived on the southern coast of Sicily. The forces under Garibaldi amounts to about 2000.

malls to the favorable consideration of the tribunal by which they were to be abjudinated upon. He was on the proposed to hon. Mr Coles's resolution, and he trusted that hon members would feel themselves satisfied with the assumines of the Government that the Commission would go into effect, and would consequently feel themselves warranted in supporting the amendment.

Mr Hour would support the amendment. The hon assumber, Mr Coles in impugning the independence of the comparture of the Government as being servile tools of the administration, had judged them, probably, by the standard of independence which characterised the adherent to his own administration. He was there as an independent man, and would support the Government as long as he believed they were acting with a view to the public good, and whenever he should have cause to change his opision he would bid them farewell. It had been said that the Commission would never come into entersoo, because it had not yet been organized, and the Government were honest and pure they could not be justly consured for the failure. It lill became the opposition to impute insincerity to the present Government in connection with this matter, when it was ready, when they had not a tittle of groof on which to rest their assertions—and when the falsehood was subsequently brought home to them, they declared that they were not disappointed. He could see no reason for accusing the Government of misrepresentation, for the despatch did not refuse the Commission, it merely pointed out objections in order that they might be removed; and the letter from Mr Merivale to Sir Samuel Cunard, showed captusively that the Colonial Minister was willing to carry out the suggestions of his produces not. After having waited in vain for years on the opposite party for a settlement of the Land Question, so little time had elapsed since the present Government was into power, that they woulf not be baxing their patience underly if they gave them a reasonable period to complete the business, the ma

These periodicals ably represent the three great political parties of Great Britan—Whig. Tory, and Radical—but politics forms only one feature of their character. As organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Mornlity, and Religion, they stand, as they ever have stood, unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the profossional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class they farnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, throughout the world, than can be possibly obtained from any other cutree.

The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers gives additional value to these Reprints, inassuech as they can mow be placed in the hands of subscribers about as soon as the riginal editions.

TESTIMONIAL.

Boston, July 19, 1857. Musons. J. Bunnerr & Co. —I cannot refuse to state the salutary effect in my own aggravated case, of your excellent Hair Oil—(Cocosine.)

For many months my hair had been falling off, until I was fastful of losing it entirely. The skin upon my head became gradually more and more inflamed, so that I could not touch it without pain. This irritated condition I attributed to the use of various advertised hair washes, which I have since been told leasting manches smith.
