LEO'S INDEPENDENCE.

THE HEAD OF THE CHURCH'S LIBERTY OF ACTION.

ARCHBISHOP VAUGHAN'S ABLE DEFENSE OF VIENNA—THE POPE'S GREAT WORK IN GERMANY AND FRANCE—THE THREE POSITIONS OPEN TO THE HOLY FATHER.

The following article is taken from a sermon recently delivered by His Rev. Father, Herbert Vaughan, D.D., in the pro-cathedral, London. The learned archbishop of Westminster treated most ably of the position and present of the Holy Father. He spoke as follows:

It is the custom of my eminent and venerated predecessor on the first Sunday in October, to address his flock upon the conditions in which the church, and especially the Vicar of Christ, are found in the present day. It is therefore not surprising that I should bring before you some thoughts connected with the Holy See. It will be my endeavor to attempt a modest answer to some of the objections which are not infrequently heard, not merely among non-Catholics, but sometimes among Catholics themselves, to the position which has been taken up by the Holy Father in relation to the kingdom of Italy. Surely, it is said, the Pope is a monarch, and he is a monarch more than at the present day. In years past, when he possessed a temporal sovereignty, his influence was not so widely felt as it has been during the pontificate of Leo XIII. The Pope is a monarch without a vestige of temporal power, and yet he has been requested to undertake the office of arbitrator between Germany and Spain in the matter of the Caroline Islands. The world has watched his efforts during the Kulturkampf, by which he has established a more peaceful state of things in the German Empire than has existed for many years. The Holy Father has gone far to settle the divided questions of French Catholicity so as to enable them to exercise their full rights of political influence and to bring about a better state of things in that country. The Pope, it is urged, is free from all great political power, and has acted on his own initiative. But the answer is that if the Pope seems to be free in the line which he has taken it is not because he has taken it, but because he has suffered entire and imprisonment because it was to be for the benefit of Christendom. The Pope was looked upon as belonging not to the people in Italy, but to the whole of Christendom. Up to the present time, third centuries have not declared against the treaty of Vienna. The second possible condition is that of spoliation, in which the Holy Father is now placed. He has refused to give up his territories, which have been invaded, and he has made himself a voluntary prisoner. He has refused to enter into negotiations with the spoiler, whose offers of wealth and protection he has declined, and as a consequence he has lost the exercise of his proper functions, he has been engaged in vindicating his rights, which are those of Christendom. He has been careful to free himself from the imputation of being merely the chaplain or subject of the King of Italy. The attitude has not been maintained without immense personal sacrifices and privations which tended to impair his health and to shorten his life. A third conceivable attitude for the Holy Father is that he should be reconciled to the King of Italy and accept accomplished facts. But what would be the real meaning of such a reconciliation? It would be the consent to Germany? Why, it would be said that the English Government had brought its weight in his councils so as to make the decision favorable to British ambition and interests. Again, it would be a question affecting the interests of French Catholicity upon which the archbishop was called upon to arbitrate, would it not be supposed that the decision was biased by hatred to the Bourbons, or by the jealousy of the Neapolitans? That would be the position of the Pope.

If he were to be reconciled to the King of Italy and accept the King's protection and embolism. The great international position of the Holy Father would be annihilated if he were to accept such a destiny. The conclusion is inevitable—either the Pope must live in a condition of perpetual hostility to the kingdom and government of Italy, and so make it clear that he is not the subject of any great power, or he must be restored to the position of an independent monarch. There is another line of objection taken to the course adopted by the Holy Father—Why does not the Pope, it is asked, the Catholic of Italy, form a strong Catholic party in Italy? I will ask—Would such a course be likely to succeed? I have some experience to go back upon, for the Parliament at Rome was the first Italian Parliament with which I was ever acquainted. There was the Piedmontese Parliament before the invasion of the states of the Church. It is that Parliament that was a strong Catholic party, which sustained many honorable public men. But that party failed to carry the revolution and the dominant force of the Parliament. Again, there was a Parliament in Florence which included a large number of Catholics devoted to the Holy See, but they were no match for the duplicity and the wickedness of the revolutionary elements. In France an attempt of the same kind had been made. But has it produced any great and noble result? It has not been able to secure freedom to private religion or even to protect those orders of charity who gave themselves up to the welfare and happiness of the people. On the other hand, look at Germany, which has had a strong Catholic parliamentary party. This party has done much to great advantage in which respect the Kulturkampf. But in Germany the church has had to deal with a Christian Government—Protestant it may be, but the Government of Berlin is a Christian Government, and the revolutionaries are not to be feared. The Minister of the Interior has secured the presentation of a bronze medal of honor to Sister Maria-Hippolyte, a nurse at Hopfen in the town, for the aid and devotion she displayed during the epidemic of diphtheria which raged in the parish in the years '90, '91, and '92.

Another French religious has been decorated. The Minister of the Interior has secured the presentation of a bronze medal of honor to Sister Maria-Hippolyte, a nurse at Hopfen in the town, for the aid and devotion she displayed during the epidemic of diphtheria which raged in the parish in the years '90, '91, and '92.

A rumour—only a rumour, mind—is set going that the Holy Father is to be sent to the General of the Jesuits, to transfer his residence from Fiesole to Rome. Irresponsible secessionists, who are not troubled with scruples, think they are bound to invent something when it does not exist to fill out their space with.

The new Leonine Library, valued at £100,000, has been presented to the Holy Father by the Pope—has been formally inaugurated by Cardinal Capelato, librarian of the Holy Roman Church, in presence of the learned dignitaries of the Vatican and the representatives of foreign scientific institutions.

The Agency House now states that the Comptroller has been definitely fixed for the first fortnight of January. Mr. Dawson will be promoted Archbishop of Algiers. The Primate of the East will be filled later. The Cardinals will be named. The Cardinals will be named. The Cardinals will be named.

The fair tales circulated by Protestant papers with correspondents at Rome should be accepted with the caution. The Pope has been actively occupied for some months past with Eastern questions, but from that preparing an Encyclical inviting them to recognize the supremacy and proposing a European Conference to discuss differences. The original proposal was given the name of the Alban-Latin-Rome and the Bulgarian difficulties is a long story.

The Pontiff has made a present to Mr. Morguey's Gift, Bishop of Vich, of a superb mosaic painting of the Virgin of Epiphany, destined for that sainted shrine in the P. re. The original painting, by the Spanish artist, Serra, is so good that His Holiness reserved it for himself. Leo XIII. hoped that his gift would be acceptable to Catholic Spaniards. "The Madonna, dear brother," he said, "unless as if she were rejoiced at the veneration of which she is the object in Spain; and the Infant Jesus, who she carries in her arms, does He not look as if He were blowing young Spain?" The aged Bishop was profoundly touched, and protested that Spain was ever faithful to the Holy See, and esteemed whatever it received from the hands of the Pope as a most precious relic. At parting the Holy Father embraced him twice in sign of peace and amity and said, "You see I am a prisoner here, but tell the faithful in your land to visit me and console me in my captivity, and they shall be crowned with the affection I bear them."

Examination.

A large number of catechists and friends of the district assembled in St. Ann's School on the 27th ult. to take part in the half-yearly examination. Owing to the severity of the weather the number of pupils present was not so large as usual. The classes were examined by Rev. R. B. McDermott, P. P. of Piquette; Rev. J. E. McDonald, P. P. of Pope's River; Mr. F. D. McQuinn, Mr. John MacFarlane, member of the district, the Trustees and others. The pupils acquitted themselves highly satisfactorily to all present. The advanced class did their work in a manner which elicited much praise. The junior pupils by their readiness in answering the several questions asked, showed very careful instruction. At the close of the examination those present complimented the teacher and pupils on the successful close of the school. The work done in this school reflects much credit on the teacher, who is an energetic and painstaking instructor, and who, though only a short time in the service of teaching, will in the near future hold a foremost place among teachers of his class in this province.—Com.

Mr. Summers, M. P. for the Eastern District, died. He was born in 1825, and was a liberal home ruler of considerable influence. He was returned in 1888 the last general election by a majority of 211 over the conservative candidate.

Mr. MacCrea, of London, has visited the Vatican Observatory, and conferred with the authorities there with a delicate spectroscopic, which was most gratefully accepted.

The Holy Father has named the Rev. Domenico Paroli of Genoa a private Chamberlain superannuated, an appointment which is regarded as a great honor to the press of the priest, as he is a director of the Secolo d'Italia.
