Famous Fiction!

Two of the Best Sellers. Have You Read Them?
THE COMMON LAW.
(By Robert W. Chambers.)
A great love story of society and studio life in New York. It has all the interest and fascination of the best society novels and there is the added charm of the gay artist's life with its frank camaraderie, its witty small talk, its undisguised disregard of convention. Love triumphant over tradition is the concluding note of the story.

THE HAUNTED PAJAMAS.

(By Francis Perry Elliott.)
A pair of red silk pajamas created all the mystery in this fascinating story. They were sent to a New York clubman by a friend in China, and they proved the means of making a dignified young society man the wildest, maddest kind of a rascal, while a beautiful young lady was forced into pranks that were quite inexplicable to her friends. And so these bits of Chinese silk went on—leading to adventures that make up a story of continuous fun, sparkle and mystery.

Bound in cloth and illustrated, 50c. each; 2c. extra per volume if mailed.

CHAPTER XXXI.
The fire sunk. He was cold one moment and hot the next. Too listless to ring, he took the bulky envelope full of papers and absently stuffed them under the waning coals. Life is made up of such ill chances. If he had glanced at the document whose voluminousness had frightened him, he must have seen her name, and all would have been well. A cab would have whirled him to the lawyer's, and thence to Elm Square—and happiness. But the papers smoldered into ashes, and he sat and gazed at them and shivered with his cold, while not very far off the girl he loved so passionately, and who loved him, was weeping over his supposed neglect and coldness. Surely if the gods do laugh at us, they have plenty of cause for merriment! Presently, just as the last page fell into ashes, the door opened and the servant came in with a note. Vane took it listlessly and dropped it on the table, and it was not until an hour later that he caught sight of it and opened it. The thick, ivory-tinted paper was delicately scented and stamped with "Florence" in gold and violet, and there were just a couple of lines: "Will you dine with us to-night? We are quite alone."
"FLORENCE."
Vane twisted the note pensively; then he smiled with a kind of grim resolution.

Those Who Rely on the great home remedy which has proved its power to relieve safely and speedily the minor ailments arising from defective or irregular action of the organs of digestion, find themselves spared hours of suffering and able to ward off the attacks of serious sickness.

Enjoy Life

Prepared only by Thomas Beecham, St. Helena, Lancashire, England. Sold everywhere in Canada and U.S.A. In boxes, 25 cents.

"Why not?" he muttered, and twisted round in his chair, he scrawled: "Thanks, yes," in reply; and no two words were more hateful to the writer and recipient.
CHAPTER XXXII.
When he began to dress, Vane felt half inclined to send a note of apology to Lady Florence, and very much tempted to get into bed instead of an evening suit; but he finished dressing in an absent-minded, listless fashion and got into a cab—he had "put down" the brougham for the best of all reasons, as the man said respecting his umbrella, "because he could not keep it up;" and as the cab rolled and splashed through the wet streets, he leaned forward and gazed with anxious and yet mechanical scrutiny at every passing female figure. Once he caught sight of a girl something, only something, like Nora standing at a shop window, and his heart leaped as it had leaped so often before, and his hand went up toward the little trap-door in the roof of the cab; but before he had stopped the cabman the girl had turned full face, and another disappointment was added to the long list. She was not Nora, and with the weight pressing his heart down again he dropped back and sighed and coughed.
When the cab drew up at Lord Warlock's house, in Carlton Terrace, Vane felt so tired and knocked up that he could have wished that the journey were longer. The footman who met him in the hall glanced at him with the covert scrutiny which is all their well-trained respect permits, and the butler who announced him, when the drawing room door had closed upon Vane, turned to one of his satellites with the suggestion of a wink.
"Mr. Tempest's been going it pretty strongly, to judge by the look on him," he said. "Looks ten years older than when he dined here last. The cards, I suppose, for I never heard that he drank much to speak of."

The drawing-room was empty when Vane entered, and he drew a chair up to the fire and tried to warm some of the cold out of his bones. The door opened and Lady Florence entered. She stopped dead short as he turned his face to her and rose. The color slowly left her cheeks, and her eyes, usually so cold and impassive, grew large with alarm and sympathy.
"Have you been ill?" she asked looking at him with concerned scrutiny.
"Ill? No," he said, with a smile. "I'm never ill."
He laughed as he made the assertion, and, forcing a smile, she said "What, never?"
"Hardly ever," he responded, making use of the old and almost forgotten joke in "Pinafore." "I've got a bit of a cold, I fancy, but every once in a while, more or less, you are looking well."
His eyes—were they grave and thoughtful now, with none of the old bright, devil-may-care light in them—rested on her lovely face and the graceful form clothed in a soft, exquisitely draping silk of a warm yet subdued color—he thought it was called heliotrope—and he noticed how artistically its mauve shades threw up the faultless complexion and the straw-colored hair.
His heart was steeped in sadness—weighed down with care and unsatisfied longing—and, somehow, the sight of this beautiful, perfectly dressed woman with the violet eyes and soft speech and manners soothed him and gave him a vague sense of pleasure and repose. She went to the fire and pointed to the chair he had just left.
"Please sit down again," she said in a low voice tremulous with the feeling which only the sight of him—the sound of his voice—could arouse. "You look—yes, cold—actually cold."
"Well, I was cold—actually cold," he said, dropping into the chair, and holding his hands to the blaze.
Her eyes roamed from his careworn, haggard face to his hands, thin and drawn, like those of a man just recovering from a long illness.
"Have you been away of late?" she asked. "You have not been near me, and I have not seen you anywhere."
"Away?" He spoke without raising his head or his eyes from the fire. "Well, yes; I have been wandering about here, there, and everywhere."

The lines in his face deepened as he recalled his journeyings in search of Nora, but he made an effort to free his mind and change the subject.
"How is it you are not at one of your country places?" he asked.
"I have been," she said. "But only for a little while. Papa had to come up to a Cabinet meeting, and I insisted upon accompanying him, not to the Cabinet meeting, of course, but up here. I always hated the country in the winter. What senseless folly it is to spend the best of the summer months in London, and then go to the country when all its beauty is dead; the trees bare and dripping, and the roads all mud!"
"So I think," he assented.
"Oh, you! You can shoot and fish," she said.
"Yes," he said.
He had not handled a gun or a rod since—since he had left Lubb. "I before him sprung the quiet hill-side, the pretty cottage, and Nora's happy face. He shuddered slightly.
"Are you still cold?" she asked and she bent over him with wistful tenderness. "Are you sure you ought to have come out to-night? I—I can not help thinking that you are really ill."
He raised himself and sprang to his feet.
"I am not in the least ill," he said forcing a smile. "Had you a large party in the country?"
"Why did you not come and see?" he responded, reproachfully. "I wrote, as well as papa, and you did not condescend even to answer me."
He looked down. Some of his neglected letters he had burned unopened; doubtless hers and Lord Warlock's were among them.
"I am very sorry. Pray forgive me. I have been very busy—"
"Busy!" She arched her delicate eyebrows and looked at him with gentle incredulity. "I can not imagine you busy; I wonder what story you would tell me if I asked you what you had been so busy at?"
His brows contracted, and he tugged at his mustache.
She rested her small satin-covered foot on the marble fender curb and looked down at him with a pensive smile.
"I wonder why men are always so mysterious? No one seems to know where you have been, not even your friend—there was scarcely perceptible hesitation—"your friend, Mr. Senley Tyers."
"You ought to say 'our' friend," said Vane, with a short laugh, and evading the question, "for you see a great deal of him, don't you?"
"Yes," she said, with constraint and coldness. "I think he is useful to papa—"
"Useful to Lord Warlock?" said Vane, with faint surprise. She gazed at the fire, her face impassive and set.
"Yes; don't ask me how or in what way. I imagine he is in possession of some statistics which papa requires, or—I really don't know. Does it matter? Let us talk of something else more interesting."
"By all means," he assented, though I must be allowed to remark that Senley Tyers is a really wonderful man."

That is What the People Say.

A Hard Thing to Do.
BY RUTH CAMERON.
Once upon a time an artist and a short story writer were discussing a story which had appeared in one of the last month's magazines. Said the short story writer, "What bully illustrations! I wish I could get the man who illustrates my work to do something like that. And the story is so punk that it's scarcely worth printing. That's just some people's luck."
Said the artist, "Well I'm glad you like those illustrations. I call them rotten. No technique and no imagination. But I like the story. Thought it was one of the best I had read in a dog's age."
"Queer, isn't it, how much easier it is to forgive merit and success in any line but our own?"
I know a pretty girl who is always talking about how clever and how talented this or that feminine friend is. Indeed she is so generously ready to concede all such virtues to her friends that she has the reputation of having a singularly sweet disposition. But try to make her admit that any given girl is pretty and you will certainly find yourself up against it. Not that she will be disagreeable about it. No indeed! She is far too canny for that. She will probably take particular care to profess her liking for the beauty candidate, but she will most regretfully point out to you some perfectly good reason why the latter just misses being pretty.
On the other hand, I know a clever newspaper woman, with no pretence to prettiness, who is always enthusing about some pretty girl she has met. But if you can make her admit that one of her sisters in the profession is a clever newspaper woman I will give you a five dollar gold piece.
And so it runs. The swimmer will gladly admire the good tennis player, but he is likely to depreciate the performances of the best of swimmers. The musician is most generous in his admiration of the artist or writer, but a brother musician, especially in his own particular line, must be wonderful indeed to win anything but grudging admiration from him. The woman who has a genius for stylish gowning will concede any virtue or ability under the sun to her sister, but she must continue to wonder why they dress with so little taste.
You remind me that there are some people big enough to be above such pettinesses. Yes I know that's true, and I'm glad to be reminded of it. Sometimes when one sees too many of the other kind of people one forgets.
There are such fine people, and I sincerely hope you and I belong to that class. And yet I suspect that even we occasionally slip over into the other type.
Ruth Cameron

Household Notes
Beans are the most nutritious of all vegetables.
It is best to wash spinach under running water.
Every cellar should be aired and sunned very often.
Whiting and ammonia are best for cleaning nickel.
Potato water is good to remove mud stains from cloth.
Chopped chives lend a good flavor to salads; also a bit of color.
A few chopped dates added to apple sauce makes a very tasty dish.
Newspapers will give as brilliant a finish to window glass as chamois.
In the pantry the rubber band will hold tight the covers of cereals and cookie boxes.
When paring potatoes, do not waste a clean pan; a newspaper will hold all the parings.
It is better to clean meat by wiping it off with a wet cloth than to let water run over it.
When mixing beeswax and turpentine for floor polishing add a little spirits of ammonia.
When bacon comes from the market a pair of sharp scissors will quickly remove the rind.
To place ferns upon the window sill means their death, as they cannot stand a cold draught.
Sliced oranges and shredded coconut put into a dish in alternate layers is a delicious dessert.
Always wear a white apron when sewing on dark material, as this relieves the strain on the eyes.
Greasy and browned cooking dishes should be boiled with washing soda in a big kettle or boiler.
A good way to prepare cheese for luncheon is to heat it slightly, strain it and mix it with cream or butter.
Never put too many blooms in any jar or vase. Flowers are much prettier if loosely and simply arranged.
When a chicken is to be cut for fricassee, the disjointing can be quickly accomplished with a pair of stout scissors.
To keep radishes or lettuce, place them in a damp napkin in the ice box. They will keep fresh and crisp for several days.
The tea kettle should always be emptied at the end of the day, in the morning rinsed out and filled with fresh water.
Nothing so good for a sprain as bathing with hot water, to which turpentine has been added, an ounce to a quart.
To relieve the soreness of a painful soft corn, try binding it up each night with baking soda moistened with a little water.
To turn a boiled pudding out of its bag, hold it for a few minutes in cold water. This will prevent its sticking to the cloth.
Wood ashes are an excellent thing to clean kitchen utensils. Dampen a cloth, dip it in the ashes and scour the pans and kettles.
If your soup is too salty, try adding a few slices of raw potatoes and cook a little longer. The potatoes will absorb the surplus salt.
A generous piece of newspaper crumpled into ridges acts as an efficient drain to all croquettes, fritters, doughnuts and bacon.
Newspapers will make excellent padding for the winter carpets, and make warm interlinings when quilted between chintz for coverlets.
When running dates or figs through the meat chopper add a few drops of lemon juice to prevent the fruit from clogging the chopper.
Copper can easily be cleaned by rubbing with a wet lemon dipped in table salt, then rinsing with clear water and polishing with a soft, dry cloth.
Toronto, October 23.—Fur farming in Prince Edward Island is branching out into a wider field than fox breeding. Today the department of Lands and Forests received a request from the Secretary of the Fish and Game Association of Charlottetown for a number of young beaver for breeding purposes, the intention, as was explained, being to make them the beginning of a beaver raising industry. The department has decided to send five beaver to the Association and orders have been sent to the Algonquin Park to that effect.

Five Minute Cure
If Stomach Is Bad
When "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches stomach all indigestion, Gas and Sourness Disappears.
You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't fidget it with drastic drugs.
Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach troubles has made it famous the world over.
Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes, its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.
Tied at the end of the day, in the morning rinsed out and filled with fresh water.
Nothing so good for a sprain as bathing with hot water, to which turpentine has been added, an ounce to a quart.
To relieve the soreness of a painful soft corn, try binding it up each night with baking soda moistened with a little water.
To turn a boiled pudding out of its bag, hold it for a few minutes in cold water. This will prevent its sticking to the cloth.
Wood ashes are an excellent thing to clean kitchen utensils. Dampen a cloth, dip it in the ashes and scour the pans and kettles.
If your soup is too salty, try adding a few slices of raw potatoes and cook a little longer. The potatoes will absorb the surplus salt.
A generous piece of newspaper crumpled into ridges acts as an efficient drain to all croquettes, fritters, doughnuts and bacon.
Newspapers will make excellent padding for the winter carpets, and make warm interlinings when quilted between chintz for coverlets.
When running dates or figs through the meat chopper add a few drops of lemon juice to prevent the fruit from clogging the chopper.
Copper can easily be cleaned by rubbing with a wet lemon dipped in table salt, then rinsing with clear water and polishing with a soft, dry cloth.

Varicose Veins
and Itching Piles
Usually Arise From Same Cause—Relief and Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.
Nearly everybody knows of Dr. Chase's Ointment as the most effective treatment for piles or hemorrhoids that medical science has been able to compound. So much suffering and misery arises from this ailment that one is not long in telling his friends when he has found an actual cure. This accounts for the enormous sales of Dr. Chase's Ointment.
This letter tells of relief from the suffering of varicose veins by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Many suffer from this trouble not knowing the comfort to be obtained by the use of this great soothing ointment.
Mrs. R. J. Evans, 187. Murray street, Toronto, writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for years. I have been troubled with varicose veins, and it is the only thing that gives relief. For every part of the body, a soothing, healing ointment is needed there is nothing so good as Dr. Chase's Ointment. 60 cents a box all dealers, or Edmonson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto."

The Brick Mason
The brick mason can be found wherever man is congregated together in towns and cities and is civilized enough to wear suspenders and a porous plaster.
Five thousand years ago the brick-mason was a useful citizen and drove a roaring business. When the earth was still damp and new and the children of Israel had not yet escaped from Egypt, the brick mason was a power in the land and cursed exceedingly at the poor goods which the poor Israelite turned out after the straw supply was cut off.
The brick mason has a simple trade. It consists of piling bricks on top of each other and sticking them together with mortar. Occasionally also, he has to squint along the wall and see if it is true. This is the secret of his trade. It is all in the squint. Any citizen can pile brick, but very few are equipped with the proper variety of squint. Many a statesman is wise enough to run an entire nation and keep the national debt growing like a fungus on a damp stump. But if he were to attempt to erect a brick wall it would develop rickets, blind staggers and a list to port before it had gone up one story.
The brick mason needs few tools. He works with a flat, wide trowel and a full set of extra strong fingers. With the fingers he grabs the brick and with the trowel he anoints it with mortar and slaps it into place. Whenever the sun is busy broiling the earth to a genteel brown and the fervid summer is sending the idle rich fleeing to the seashore, the brick mason can be found perched half-way between Heaven and elsewhere, laying superheated brick with steaming mortar, and acquiring a complexion that would make boiled lobster look pale. Life is full of toil for him and his only pleasure is to work so fast that he sweats out of brick and gets a chance to yell in a hoarse, indignant voice at the hod carrier three floors below.
The brick mason draws big wages, and often makes as much in a day as the patient section hand does in a week. But he is not a magnate, for all that. He is one of the few workmen who take a longer vacation without pay than the school teacher does. The brick mason has to spend the winter reading good books and paying bills. When we think how the mason must forego the pleasure of laying brick on the windward side of a 11-story building, with the thermometer 27 below zero, it is hard to avoid dropping a tear over his sad lot.

Your Duty.
Nothing to do with the Custom House, good friend. Its only reference just now is to yourself. Let us suppose that you are a man of family with sufficient of the world's goods to keep them in comfort. Very well. You did not reach this satisfactory state of affairs without care and labour—few men do. Suppose you are awakened some night with shouts of alarm ringing in your ears. Too late then to talk of prudence; too late then to say: "If I had only, etc., etc." That "if" means too much to many forgetful people. Is it not always the duty of a self-respecting citizen to protect his home and thus provide for those within it. Is it any more than his duty to those depending on him to protect them as far as possible? Can you call your property your own when it is not insured? The answer to this argument is to carry insurance with Percie Johnson's agency, the most popular office in Newfoundland and the least expensive.

Election Returns.

Mr. Geo. Grimes, ELECTED IN PORT-DE-GRAVE BY BIG MAJORITY.

The election returns from Port-de-Grave District came in at an early hour this morning, resulting in the election of Mr. George Grimes, the Liberal-Union candidate by a majority of 174 votes over Warren, the Tory candidate. The count began in Brigus at 12 o'clock (midnight). Every quarter of an hour the counts were made known in the city. The telegraph lines were kept very busy, while scores of citizens assembled around the General Post Office and Anglo-American Telegraph Offices, eager to hear the results. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed as the figures were bulletined. The first count was:

Grimes	100
Warren	66

This announcement was hailed with delight by Liberal supporters and the opinion was at once expressed that Mr. Grimes would be returned by a big majority, and expectations were not disappointed. The next count was:

Grimes	200
Warren	127

Thus showing that Grimes was gradually creeping away from his opponent. The third count he continued to increase his lead thus:

Grimes	300
Warren	192

At this juncture, all Tory hopes were abandoned, while intense excitement and enthusiasm was manifest amongst Liberal supporters, who were fully convinced that victory would perch on their banners. The next five counts were:

Grimes	400, 500, 600, 700, 800
Warren	302, 399, 472, 567, 647

As the next report was to be the grand total, it was an impossibility for the Liberal-Union man, who was 153 ahead, to lose and the poll was declared as follows:

Grimes	871
Warren	697

Majority 174

The total was announced at 2.30 this morning, but despite the early hour citizens cheered vociferously for Grimes and the Liberal Party. In the congratulations extended to Mr. Grimes, the Party he represents, and its Leader, we heartily unite. Mr. Grimes' victory is doubly appreciative in view of the fact that it was the first time he stood for member and consequently was junior to his opponent (Warren) who was Speaker in the House of Assembly. We may say that Mr. Grimes is an excellent platform speaker and we have no hesitation in saying that he will make an excellent representative for Port-de-Grave in the Legislature, and that he will be true to the trust placed in him by his constituents. We again heartily congratulate Mr. Grimes on his victory and wish him further success in political life. The decided change in the people of Port-de-Grave is, we hope, a forerunner of what the whole country will be like when the results are received from other districts.

Appended are the election returns as they came in up to press hour—

Carbonar.

Goodison	600
Penny	524

It will be seen that the Government candidate defeated the Liberal-Union candidate by 66 votes, and it is also apparent that Goodison's majority is considerably less than half of Grimes' majority over Warren in Port de Grave.

Our Contributors

Now that the political campaign is over, our first duty is to acknowledge our obligations to our many friends who have contributed so many excellent political articles and letters during our absence north. The fight has been a people's fight, and an active public opinion has been formed and expressed itself during the campaign in no uncertain voice in honor of clean government. This fight, for right manifested itself strongly in our columns by many voluntary contributors coming forward and giving their services to help a people's cause. The volume of articles and letters offered was so great that only a part could be used in the space available. We thank heartily those who gave of their time and labor, whether or not, the contributions could be used. A special feature of this campaign was the activity displayed by our lady contributors. We had quite a number of them and the fact that the women of Newfoundland were taking part in the campaign for cleaner government, gave us a confidence which we believe the results of the polls will not disappoint. Outside their work as dress contributors, no one could go through a campaign in the north without being struck with the extraordinary interest displayed by the ladies in the campaign. If the men were not there to hoist flags, they hoisted them themselves. In many cases when men were out on the grounds fishing they took out the guns themselves and fired them for their brothers, fathers and husbands. They felt that this campaign was a campaign for the purity of politics and the welfare of the home, and they believed it was their duty to help along the cause, and they did so, and we thank them heartily for their assistance, and thus we leave it with great assurance. We are sorry that our opponents, now that the heat of

Those Challenges

The Tory team in Trinity Bay, at the eleventh hour, tried to work off a bluff in the way of issuing challenges to Messrs. Lloyd, Stone and Targett. Lloyd offered the opportunity to Squires to meet him either at Bay Bulls Arm or at Port Rexton. Squires did not accept. Stone offered to meet Dunfield and Fowlow at 4 p.m. Tuesday, at Trinity West, having to leave for St. John's by the night train. Fowlow agreed to this. At 4 p.m. Stone was present to meet them, but neither Dunfield nor Fowlow turned up.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 30.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 30.
The Cook Ministry was defeated yesterday in the House of Representatives by 28 to 27 on the Opposition motion to adjourn further discussion of Sir John Forrest's £3,000,000 loan bill. The Prime Minister adjourned the House after one of the most angry scenes with the Labor Party. The latter regard Premier Cook's refusal of their request is unreasonable, being responsible for the incident.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.
It will not do for pony ballets to attempt to perform at night in Philadelphia, if its members are under 21 years of age, for the new labour law will not let them. Neither may actresses of any degree under 21 years of age. They cannot stay out after 9 p.m.—that is on the stage. This law, affecting the employment of girls after 9 o'clock, will also affect girl ushers, telephone operators, moving picture and box office girls by hundreds. Even girls singing in Church choirs may not do so after 9 p.m.

TRINIDAD, Oct. 30.
Violence among the striking miners of the Southern Colorado fields yesterday shifted from Ludlow to the immediate vicinity of Agualar, six miles north. Possible federal complications are precipitated at the office of the South Western Fall Company, where a battle was waged between strikers and a handful of mine guards. After defeating the guards, and capturing the mine offices in which the Post office is also situated the strikers charged. Having knocked over the stone, they set fire to the building, which was destroyed together with the mail, money orders and money. The post-mistress said the mail had been rifled before the building was fired, as opened envelopes were found half burned. After destroying the South Western offices the miners went to the Empire mine and riddled the boiler house with bullets. No one was injured in either camp. At the strikers' camp at Ludlow there was no display of rifles and revolvers. On Monday hundreds of men had gathered at the camp stockade all heavily armed. The Colorado National Guards to-day established a camp on the outskirts of the city. No trouble occurred between the mine guards and the strikers of Ludlow to-day. The mine guards and strikers at noon were given 24 hours to surrender their arms and ammunition to the State forces. Unless they comply, it is indicated that the troops will remain in quarters indefinitely.

King's Camp Bed.

King George always includes in his luggage when he goes shooting a little folding-up camp bed. For years he used to endure sleeping in the his toric "four-poster" especially reserved for him in the royal suite in great mansions, because it had been occupied centuries ago by one of his sovereign forebears. The King at last kicked against the unhygienic distinction with its feather tick and curtains. After domestic morality George V. makes a fetish of hygiene. Even at home in the various palaces he favors the small bed with the hard mattress and insists on his sons doing likewise.

When in the spring he was visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Ward, an old-fashioned housekeeper, who has been in the Ward family for years, thought she would make His Majesty more than usually comfortable, and without saying anything to anyone piled on his bed two feather ticks. She was amazed when a few hours later the King's valet arrived with his luggage and fixed up in the gorgeous room a bed from her point of view so comfortable that she promptly came to the conclusion it was intended for some attendant. "A poor sort of bed," she said, "for a royal servant. Were I to offer it to one of mine, he'd be out of the house in a twinkling of an eye."

Wrestler Killed.

By a band of Bulgarian bandits. Chicago, Oct. 25.—Yussiff Mahmout, a Bulgarian wrestler who has met a number of American mat men, including Frank Gotch, by whom he was defeated, was killed by a band of Bulgarian bandits in the mountains near Silistria, his home, according to a story told by two Turkish wrestlers arriving here to-day.

Mahout was a petty officer in the Bulgarian army during the late war, and according to their story went to the town to draw some money to pay off the men in his command.

Sixteen bandits learning the purpose of his trip waylaid him on his return, but because Mahmout had procured only orders instead of gold coin they killed him. The murder of Mahmout took place three weeks ago.

Sailors' Fight.

At 12.30 p.m. to-day, an altercation took place between two sailors named Greene and Kehoe, which resulted in the former being pushed through Phelan's window, on the corner of Adelaide and Water Streets. Greene is mate of the Gladys E. Whidden, and was endeavoring to get his crew on board in order to sail at 1 o'clock and it appears made some remarks concerning Newfoundlanders, which Kehoe resented. They argued for a little time, when Kehoe suddenly struck Greene, driving him through the window heretofore mentioned, smashing it completely. One of the falling pieces landed on Greene's forehead inflicting an ugly gash. He was hurriedly taken to the Central Pharmacy where the wound was dressed.

Ten in O'Leary's Room.

O'Leary, Mr. G. W. E. Russell, Professor Kettle and the "Irish Times" show some of the difficulties in keeping all the Ten Commandments in one Dublin Room in which Ten People Live.

"A case was heard recently in the Dublin Northern Police Court in which two men were charged with assaults on the police during a riot," says the Irish Times in a remarkable leading article. "They made counter-charges of a very serious kind against a sergeant and six constables. In the course of the hearing a bright and terrible light was thrown on the conditions of life in the tenement slums of Dublin.

An Irish Home.

"The brothers, William and Patrick O'Leary, are labourers. They live together in a front room on the third floor of 2, Marlborough Place. William O'Leary was asked to state the number of occupants of this room on the night of August 31. He replied: 'My wife, myself, six children of mine, my brother Pat, and one child of his, who is dying of consumption. There are ten of us in the room.'

"O'Leary's wife confirmed this evidence. She said that the ages of her six children ranged from thirteen years to twelve months. 'One of them was sick now, and Pat's child might die at any moment, as its lungs were bleeding.

Is It Economy?

"Here, truly, is an appalling indictment of the civilisation of Dublin," adds the Irish Times. "We ask our readers to consider that front room on the third floor of 2, Marlborough Place from the aspects of economy, health, humanity, decency, their personal interests, and the larger interests of the city. 'Is it economy to house the workers of Dublin in surroundings which make a clear mind, a strong arm a cheerful heart—the essentials of good work—utterly unthinkable? The two O'Learys admitted that they were not sober on the night in question. Who could expect them to be sober?" asks the Irish Times.

"Think of decency—two men, a woman and seven children, eating, living, and sleeping, in a single room. Think of humanity—the humanity which allows such conditions to exist, not in this case only, but among a large part of the twenty thousand families who occupy single-room enements in the capital of Ireland. The slums of Dublin are a physical danger, a moral degradation, a grave social peril for us all. We are chastened just now by industrial revolt and fears of violence. Let us be honest with ourselves," adds the Irish Times, "and admit that these afflictions are in some measure the result of our own indifference and selfishness. The strike agitators have a hopeless case; their methods are insane and ruinous, but they draw their support from material which we have all helped to prepare for them.

Abolish the Slums.

"The folly of the 'sympathetic strike' was hatched in the foul recesses of our city slums. If we are wise—apart from all questions of humanity and decency—we shall make up our minds without delay that the so-called Socialism of the Dublin working-classes must cease to find a breeding ground in the rotten tenement houses. The work is imperative in the interests of Christianity and social order. The expense, however huge, must be faced—it is inevitable. As soon as the present strike troubles are ended, the city's whole heart and soul must be put into the abolition of the slums.

"We still ask for a Viceregal Commission, because we want all the facts, and we do not believe that we shall get them from the Corporation," says the Irish Times. "When the facts are public united action will be possible, and, if the leading citizens of Dublin put their hearts, consciences, and money into a great scheme of reform, it can, and will be brought to fulfilment. The proper housing of the working classes of Dublin will be an insurance against disease—and against things even more perilous to their health. Let us remember that, if the thought of sick children gasping out their lives in the crowded horrors of a tenement room is not a sufficient stimulus to action."

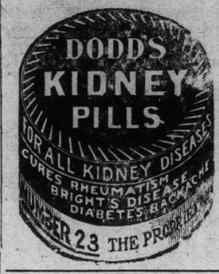

"Mr. T. M. Kettle, Professor of National Economy in the National University, himself a citizen of Dublin, thus describes the city he loves:

A Denial of the Ways of God.

"In average wage-level, in previous lack of organization, and consequently of skill and productivity, laboring Dublin is the blackest scandal of that Empire with which we are associated. And its housing? As a citizen of Dublin I read my arguments and cry for forgiveness at the word. The mansion-slums of Dublin go as close as any material fact can to a denial of the ways of God. You can walk through broken street after street of this proud capital, and as you absorb into your eyes—and your nose, the realities there presented, you will understand the degradation to which this city has condemned the Caryatides of labor.

"If you seek for a parallel to the houses in which so many of our fellow-citizens are endeavoring to enact the Ten Commandments on fifteen shillings a week, you must go to some city in the Balkans."

Professor Kettle adds: "We ought all of us to be ashamed to talk again of the twenty-one thousand single-room tenements of Dublin. Since I was a boy I have heard them talked about, and, in the region of action, from January election to January election all was a rhetorical zero.

Remember Tyre at Liverpool. Such facts as these go far to justify Mr. G. W. E. Russell's warning to "Remember Tyre."

"Into Liverpool after breakfast, and about the Docks. Ships lading and unlading for all the world. The Mersey beautiful with its full cohort of vessels—steam, sail and tug.

Such things fill the mind with thoughts of Tyre and England. "These words are taken from the diary of a famous man who visited Lancashire in 1868," writes Mr. G. W. E. Russell, in the Manchester Guardian.

"It is only on the last three words that I am inclined to dwell, Tyre—and England. The very collocation of the names suggests a note of warning. The commercial supremacy of Tyre, with all its resulting luxury and wealth, and the hideous fate which overtook it, are object-lessons of a kind which no one who believes in the Science of History can affect to disregard.

"Even Froude, who believed very little, believed this, and taught it as the one certain lesson of history, that for every false word or unrighteous deed, for cruelty and oppression, for lust or vanity, the price has to be paid at last; not always by the chief offenders, but paid by someone."

Four Miles Thro' the Alps.

"The Mont d'Or tunnel between France and Switzerland, on which boring operations began nearly three years ago, has just been completed," says the Mail.

"The tunnel, which is 3 3/4 miles long, bores through the Jura mountains from Frasne to Vallorbe, thus obviating an eleven miles detour by Pontarlier, and should have been pierced two months ago. The work, however, was delayed by the tapping of a number of unsuspected springs, which had to be pumped dry.

C.L.B. Boy Making Good.

L. R. Croucher, late of the C.L.B., who was transferred by the Commercial Cable Co. to their office at Canso, N.S., in April, is making a name for himself in athletics. At the Halifax Road Race he finished 9th man and in the 2 mile Race, at Guysborough, N.S., he took first place. He has also entered for the 10 mile race at Truro.

Draining the Zuyder Zee.

"The Zuyder Zee (Southern Sea) was formerly a lake surrounded by fens and marshes, its present extent being chiefly the result of floods which occurred in the thirteenth century. Its area is about 2,000 square miles, and average depth from 10 to 19 feet. It has always been the work of the Hollanders to recover as much as possible of the land lost to them in this manner in past ages, and in the liberal sense they can be said to have half made their country, having reclaimed over 3,000,000 acres from sea, lake, and river since the sixteenth century. Schemes for the reclamation of the Zuyder Zee have been at various times discussed, and a Bill was introduced in 1900, but afterwards withdrawn, to deal with, first, some 115,000 acres of the southern part at a cost of £7,917,000, and eventually 500,000 acres at an estimated additional cost of £24,000,000. The present measure before the Dutch Parliament is an extension and completion of those plans," says the Sphere.

Wanting Amendment.

Two Portland swordfishermen discovered last week that the old proverb about a pen being mightier than the sword is a fallacy and should be supplanted by something a little more modern. Their reason for believing this is based on an experience neither experts soon to forget. They were pursuing what, according to actions and appearance, bid fair to be a giant swordfish, worth so much per pound in the Portland market. But, when having been harpooned, the monster turned toward them his frontal view, their spirits sank first into gloom and then to the deeper throes of horror. Upon them was fast projecting no threatening "sword" but a hungry cavity flanked at the sides with something like a picket fence. Their minds had not been loaded for this particular species of fish, and they hoisted sail and beat a hurried retreat. The next time they harpoon a swordfish they decidedly intend to look twice.—Fishing Gazette, Sept. 27.

Dredge the Harbor for Dead.

SAYS CORRESPONDENT. A correspondent writes: "On Sunday night last the Dominion Coal Co's steamer Wabana collided with and sank the schooner Annie Roberts near Petrie's Ledge in the harbor mouth, the latter vessel going to the bottom and carrying four of her crew to death with her.

"A couple of days later I read in the Post a notice to the effect that a captain of a Newfoundland schooner at North Sydney, would make an effort to locate the bodies of the unfortunate victims from their nameless grave in the ocean.

"I have watched the papers carefully but have seen nothing further on this matter, so, I presume that, after all, nothing was done. I should imagine that this charitable Newfoundland captain would not have the necessary apparatus to conduct a search of this kind, and for this reason the laudable scheme was dropped.

"Now, Mr. Editor, supposing the drowned persons had been members of the Coal Company staff; or, suppose, some of Sydney's citizens had gone down on that ill-fated schooner, would there not be a hue and cry and scurrying in hot haste to get a fleet of dredgers out to scour the sea in an effort to locate the sunken ship and her cargo of dead?

"But the men lost were only four poor Newfoundlanders, and, apparently, they do not count for much with the powers that be.

"And yet they (the dead) have wives perhaps and little ones at home who would be just as glad to have news to the effect that the bodies of their dear ones had been taken from the water and if not sent home at least given decent burial in some Christian cemetery, as the highest in the land.

"It seems to me that some person or persons are gravely at fault in not having this matter attended to long before this. However, it is better late than never, and I hope to see some effort made this week to locate the bodies and the vessel."—Sydney Post, Oct. 28.

THE ROYAL WEDDING.

Very interesting recollections center about the Chapel Royal of St. James' Palace, London, where the Royal wedding ceremony was performed to-day. It contains certain tangible memorials of recent Royal marriages closely connected with the bride and bridegroom. The east window is in three divisions, the central containing the original Tudor window lengthened to its present scale for the marriage of Queen Victoria in 1840, and the two side divisions of the same pattern added for the marriage of the Princess Royal in 1858. The Duchess of Fife and her sister Lady Maud were both baptized in this chapel. The Queen and her brother Prince Adolphus of Teck were confirmed there. William of Orange and Mary of York were married in a bedroom of St. James' Palace instead of the Chapel Royal and although the bride wept for two days when her destiny was announced, that was a happy wedding. There have been many unhappy weddings there, including that of George IV. to the Princess Caroline. The happy union of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, however, must have driven away all the ill luck of the place. The next marriage was the union of the Princess Royal to Prince Frederick of Prussia, and then the marriage of our present Sovereign. The building like the gateway of the Palace, is usually attributed to Holbein, particularly the design of the ceiling, with its rich coloring, on which are the initials of Henry and Anne of Cleves and the date 1540.

THE WEDDING PRESENTS.

A correspondent who had the privilege of seeing the display of wedding presents at St. James' Palace writes: It was interesting, apart from the other excitements, to have the chance of walking through these long, sober-colored saloons, all dill crimson and blue-tinted gilt, so rarely seen by anyone outside the court. In the Queen Anne saloon itself, where the presents were displayed (as one wandered round one caught glimpses of the yellowing trees of the park and heard snatches of the music of a regimental band in the court), one's first attention was given perforce to the famous portraits on the walls only seen hitherto in engravings—the wonderful Van Dyck Henrietta Maria, the Lily pictures of Charles II's pathetic little wife, the complacent Georges, the beautiful Reynolds portrait of some German princeling. These things were mellow and took the mind back over the past in almost absurd contrast to the glittering newness of the astonishing array of presents which made the old room look like a completed by the Board of Trade for the conference which is to be opened here on November 12th in order to bring about as far as possible uniformity of regulations for the greater safety of life and property at sea. This will be attended by the official representatives of all the principal maritime countries, who have already received instructions from their respective Governments. Informal consultation took place at Whitehall Gardens last July with American and French delegations; and, in addition, communications have passed between all the parties concerned, who are by now fully conversant with each other's views on the different subjects that will come up for consideration. The United States authorities, for example, having agreed to recognize as equivalent to their own the British rule respecting life-saving appliances. Among the questions to be discussed, the compulsory installation of wireless telegraphy on all passenger and cargo steamers, the water-tight sub-division of ships, and protection against fire at sea, are considered of greatest importance.

EUROPEAN RELATIONSHIPS.

It certainly looks as though Franco-German relations are getting distinctly more friendly. The newspapers of both countries certainly give one this impression. Fault-finding and rancour have given place to sweetness and courtesy. A semi-official article in the Koelnische Zeitung, was the overture to the concert. It talked in the pleasantest fashion of President Poincaré's solicitude for Major von Winterfeldt, the German military attaché, who was hurt at the French Manoeuvres, and of the courteous treatment of the German airman who strayed into French territory. The response of the French press was extraordinarily gushing. Without an exception the Paris newspapers began to talk of Franco-German friendship. Even the Temps, which for years has been systematically and bitterly anti-German, pleaded almost for an entente. The great "outstanding question between France and Germany," it said, would always remain, but that apart there was no reason why the two countries should not be excellent neighbors. The new spirit of friendship, it declared "had brought a two-fold security to Germany and to France," and it added, "neither we nor they now have the right to alarm Europe by piling up ever more armaments." The German papers which are always for an entente with France are equally cordial. It would be a mistake, perhaps, to build very much upon these sudden amenities, but at least they are a fact of considerable significance.

A FOOLISH LITTLE COUNTRY.

The little two-by-four Republic of San Marino has ordered a battery of Creusot field guns. As the range of these guns is about nine miles and the Republic itself only about four miles across, it is obvious that they are being acquired merely as a fashionable military adornment, and not for use. But if ever one of these guns goes off accidentally or not, the Republic will find itself face to face with an angry and outraged Italy. These obscure little European States get themselves in queer positions. The independent principality of Liechtenstein, between Switzerland and Austria, is scarcely bigger than San Marino, but it is technically at war with Prussia. Forty-five years ago it joined Austria against Prussia. When the peace was made, Liechtenstein was completely forgotten by the negotiators, and so it remains to this day in a state of war. This fact, however, does not prevent Prince Lichtenstein, one of the richest and most influential men in Europe, from being on terms of cordial intimacy with his technical enemy, the Kaiser.

SAFETY OF LIFE AT SEA.

Woeful Waste.

A 11 summer long the land was dry, no moisture from the clouds deriving; we saw a 11 vegetation die, and yet our whisksers kept on thriving. We didn't need a whisksers crop, we needed oats and wheat and barley, and yet their growing didn't stop, they wouldn't die, so help me, Charlie! When Autumn comes the flowers fall, they perish when cold winds are blowing; the vines all wither on the wall—but human whisksers keep on growing! And what becomes of all the bales of whisksers grown on many faces—the one great crop that never fails, no odds what weather freaks it faces? The one great crop that laughs at drouth, defies the frost king and his legions, that prospers West, or North, or South, on desert sands, in Arctic regions? Do we conserve this great resource, this crop that we can count on always? No! Science plods along her course, and finds no use for human galvays. She's making paper out of straw, and nutmegs out of elm or willow; she's forming cigarettes of slaw, and drawing salt from ocean bilow. She's locking ever for new ways o utilize the waste, and save it, but for your beard no market prays, when with a butcher knife you shave it. Our handgowns glitter in the sun, we sadly sigh whenever we lose them; we're raising whisksers by the ton, and cannot find a way to use them.

Margaret Roper.

There were some great women in the age of Elizabeth as well as great men who adorned that remarkable period of adventure and literary activity, but few of whom had their names passed on to future generations. Perhaps the greatest of these was Margaret Roper, the daughter of Sir Thomas Moore, who was well skilled in Greek, Latin and other languages; proficient in the sciences, as them known, and as remarkable for determination and strength of character as the great Queen herself. Tradition records that Queen Elizabeth offered her a ducal coronet, which she refused lest it should be considered as a compromise for what she considered the judicial murder of her father by Henry VIII. The head of Sir Thomas Moore was stuck on a pole and placed on London Bridge, where it remained fourteen days. Margaret Roper determined to gain possession of this gruesome trophy. Aubrey tells how she proceeded: "One day as she was passing under the bridge looking up at her father's head she exclaimed, 'That the head has lain many a time in my lap; would to God it would fall in my lap as I pass under.' She had her wish for it fell into her lap." Aubrey's account of this "miraculous" happening is thus explained: She bribed a bridge keeper to throw it over the bridge when he should see her passing under in a boat, and the exclamation that she made was a cue devised between her and the bridge keeper. When summoned before the council for having the head in her possession she boldly declared that her "father's head should never be food for fishes." For this she was imprisoned, but was soon liberated. She retained the head which she had inclosed in a leaden box and preserved with the tenderest devotion.

Mr. Geo. M. Barr.
Dear Sir,—I am well pleased with my motor engine which I got from you, and would not change it for any other engine that I have ever seen. It gave great satisfaction when it was put in order. I easily learned how to get it to go when it was put in the boat. I would not sell my engine for what it cost.

The Children's Encyclopaedia.

"An Encyclopaedia might at one time have been described as a book which people buy but do not read, but that was before the publication of the 'Children's Encyclopaedia.' Mr. Arthur Mee is the editor and 'only begotten' of this wonderful Encyclopaedia," says Mr. R. B. Suthers in an enthusiastic article in the Clarion.

"I have not heard that Mr. Arthur Mee has received at Balmoral, or been touched with the King's sword, or been presented with a casket by any Mayor and Corporation, or even mentioned in Old Moore's Almanac, for his services to the nation. But I am sure I should have all the children with me, if I were King, and I propose that we should present that gentleman with the King and Lord's Cricket Ground, and the freedom of all the Picture Theatres.

"To have conceived and carried out so efficiently a work of this kind, to have missed and to have hit the bulls-eye, is an achievement, ladies and gentlemen. An achievement besides which the cheapening of the price of soap by one-eighth of one penny per pound sinks into the insignificance of ludicrousness."

Fairbanks Morse engines (Fishermen's models) run cheerfully, with water pouring over them.
