CHAPTER XXXIII.
OUT OF THE PAST.

"Yes, dearest," he said, and he bent and kissed her hands, "and you may do so, I think, entirely. I must go and dress now."

"Wait a moment," she said, fatteringly. "I have something to tell you," and she told him of her meeting with the marquis and her visit to him.

"The Marquis of Stoyles!" he said, as she mentioned his name, and he let her hands drop suddenly. "The Marquis of Stoyles!" and his eyes rested upon her face with a curious expression.

"Yes," she said, her heart beating. "Do—do you know him?"

"No, but I have heard of him," he replied. "Who has not? He is the uncle of Lord Cecil Neville," and he watched her closely.

Her face flushed for an instant, then grew pale again.

"Yes," she said, simply. "And will you come with me to see him? He is very ill—worse than he thinks—and nearer death than he would believe."

"I will come with you, if you wish it," he said. "I will do anything you wish, now and always, Doris."

"Well, I do wish it. I don't know why," she said, with a smile that was rather troubled, "but I do wish it."

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Mrs. Phillips Sends an Encouraging Letter to Expectant Mothers

West Philadelphia, Pa.—"I too Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for four months before my baby was born and it has made me much better in health. I was always very ill when my other children were born, but with this one I had a much easier time. He is a big healthy boy now, three years old, and I believe it was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that made me so well. It is certainly a good medicine for every woman. I cannot say too much in its favor, and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. W. PHILLIPS, 5450 Kingsessing Avenue, West Phila., Pa.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such letters is that this famous old root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and illness.

For special advice in regard to such ailments write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its many years experience is at your service.

"Then we will go," he said, as a matter of course. "And now I'll go and make myself presentable."

With his change of clothes he seemed to have got rid of the gravity and melancholy which Lady Despard had remarked upon; and that evening he was the Percy Levant of old, causing Lady Despard to laugh until she declared that she was tired, and bringing a smile even to Doris's quietly brooding face.

Once or twice Lady Despard referred to the now rapidly approaching marriage-day; but when she did so he evaded the subject, and changed it as if it were too close to his heart to be spoken of lightly.

"After all, dear," said Lady Despard, as she came into Doris's dressing-room for a few minutes' chat before going to bed, "I don't know that you could have done better. He loves you to distraction, and he's awfully clever and lighthearted. You'll never know what it is to be bored for a single moment, and her ladyship, recalling the many wearisome hours she had endured in the society of her dear departed, sighed; "and he is really the handsomest man I have ever met. Yes, I don't know, dear, that you haven't done wisely in choosing him. But I wish he had some money and a title. I have a fancy that you ought to be called 'my lady.' There is something about you—a certain dignity—"

Doris swung her thick hair over her shoulders, and looked down at Lady Despard's pensive face with a smile.

"That 'spoke sarcastic,' as Artemus Ward would say," she said. "I 'my lady!' Plain 'Mrs.' would suit me better than anything grander, I think."

"I don't agree with you," said Lady Despard; "but it can't be helped now, and, after all, one is none the happier for a title; and I do hope you will be happy, dear! You deserve it so very much," and she put her arm round the slim waist and kissed her.

Doris slept little that night. The white, haggard face of the old man haunted her, and, strangely enough, the frank, handsome one of Lord Cecil, in all its bravery of youth and strength, mingled with it in an inextricable fashion.

At breakfast Percy Levant was still a bright humour, and jested even about their visit to the marquis.

"Not content with playing the Lady Charitable herself, you see, Lady Despard, Doris must needs make a district-visitor of me! What part do I take now? Am I to carry the basket with the tea and tracts, or what? Perhaps, when you get there, the marquis will have forgotten your existence."

"I am quite sure he is too gallant to do that," interrupted Lady Despard.

"Or perhaps he will regard my presence as an intrusion, and order me to be cast into the deepest dungeon. Anyway, I suppose we have got to chance it, so put on your things, Doris, and let us get it over."

Doris filled a basket with some flowers, and a bunch of grapes—just to keep up the character," Percy Levant remarked—and the valet received them in the villa with an air of respectful gratitude.

"His lordship has been enquiring for you all the morning, miss," he said. "He has spoken of nothing else, scarcely," he said, as he led them upstairs.

As Doris entered she saw, or fancied she saw, that a change had taken place even in the few hours since she had last seen him; and his voice sounded to her weaker, as if raising himself on his elbow, he stretched out his hand towards her with feeble eagerness.

"Thank you, thank you, my dear!" he said, his thin, wasted fingers closing over her soft, warm ones. "This is very good of you—very! And this—who is this?"

"This is Mr. Levant," said Doris, in a low voice.

"Mr. Levant," he repeated, in quite a different voice. "And who is—ah, yes, I remember. I thank you, sir, for granting my request," and he inclined his head to Percy Levant with stately courtesy. "I wished to see you, wished to see you very much. This young lady has been very kind to the old and feeble man you see before you. She has a gentle and a good heart, sir. And you are the fortunate man who has won her, it would seem."

"I deem myself very fortunate, my lord," said Percy Levant.

The keen, piercing eyes seemed to dart through him.

"That is the truth, if you never spoke it before," he retorted, in his old, cynical way. "Have I had the honour of meeting you before, Mr. Levant?"

"Never that I am aware of, my lord," said Percy Levant, "and my acquaintances are so few that I am not likely to have forgotten it."

"Ah!" said the old man, still eyeing him as if he were trying to gain some glimpse of his character. "You are ready with a repartee, I observe."

"One need be who would hope to be worthy of crossing swords with the Marquis of Stoyles."

The old man's eyes glittered.

"Good! good!" he said, in a low voice; then, to Doris, whose hand he still held as she sat beside the couch, "You will have a clever man for a husband, my dear, and that is better than having a fool."

Doris hung her head.

"And you, sir, will have such a treasure as falls to the lot of few mortals."

Percy Levant, as he stood with folded arms, bowed gravely.

"I am fully sensible of that, my lord."

"You should be," said the marquis. There was a moment's silence, during which his eyes lost their keen expression and grew absent and dreamy.

"Marriages are made in heaven," he said, as if to himself.

Yes, in heaven. Do you know, my nephew, Cecil Neville?"

Doris sank lower into her chair, and averted her face.

"I have heard of him, my lord," replied Percy Levant.

"Ah, no doubt! He is not clever, but he marries a clever girl! Yes, Grace is clever," and a smile curved his thin lips. "Cecil gave us some trouble, but we were too sharp for him. I think I told you, my dear?" he broke off to ask Doris.

She shook her head and tried to speak, to lead him away from further mention of the name which struck her heart, but with the persistence of old age he went on:

"It's a curious story, Mr.—forgive me, sir, but I have forgotten your name."

"Percy Levant; but it is of no consequence, my lord."

"Thank you, Mr. Levant. A curious story. My nephew—Cecil Neville—is the next in succession. He will be the marquis of Stoyles. We were never very friendly. My fault, no doubt. I plead guilty, my dear," to Doris. "All old men in my position have plans, and I have one. I wanted him to marry Peyton's daughter Grace. You see, Peyton and I were old friends, and Grace had a claim upon me. I thought she would make a very good match for me, and a capital match for Cecil. I'm afraid I weary you, sir," he broke off.

"On the contrary," said Percy Levant, in a constrained voice, and carefully averting looking in Doris's direction.

"No! You are very good. Well, I wanted Cecil to marry her. I expected some opposition; but, by gad! I didn't expect that he would thwart me to the extent of falling in love—engaging himself to another girl!"

Doris, white and trembling, laid her hand upon his arm.

"You—you will tire yourself, my lord," she managed to murmur.

"No, no," he said. "I want to tell you, my dear. It is a very good story. Where was I—"

"Lord Cecil was in love with another lady, I believe, my lord," said Percy Levant, in a dry voice.

"Yes, yes," murmured the marquis, feebly, "a young person by the name of—" He stopped and knit his brows. "I'm sorry, but I can't remember her name!"

"It is of no consequence, my lord," said Percy Levant, still averting his eyes from the spot where Doris sat with drooping head.

"I can't remember her name. She was an actress. An actress! Imagine it, my dear! A common actress to be the Marchioness of Stoyles! I thought Cecil had gone out of his mind, and that I could laugh him, or argue him out of his absurd fancy; but sarcasm and logic were thrown away upon him, and I admit that I should have been beaten, yes, beaten—I, who had never been thwarted in my life!—but, fortunately, someone came to my aid."

He stopped and dropped back upon the cushions; and Doris with an effort, rose and gave him some water.

"Thank you, my dear," he said, gratefully, his eyes resting on her pale face with an affectionate smile.

"Spenser Churchill!"

Doris rarely let the glass fall, and sank back into her chair.

"Mr. Spenser Churchill, the great philanthropist, my lord?" asked Percy Levant, in a dry voice.

The marquis laughed a sardonic laugh.

"Yes, the great philanthropist. The man who takes the chair at the annual meetings; the man who champions the cause of the widow and the orphan. Yes, that is the man. Everybody knows Spenser Churchill!" He stopped and smiled, as if he were revelling in some memory connected with the name. "That is the man. You know him?"

Percy Levant nodded.

GERMAN EAST AFRICA.
LONDON, Sept. 6. (Reuter's Ottawa Agency.) — Sir Arthur Byatt administrator for German East Africa is leaving England in a few days. Reuter is informed, for Darassalaam which will be the new headquarters of Government under the League of Nations. Considerable progress is being made in the appointment of Government officials for administering the new territory but it will be some time before the staff is complete. The necessity for developing the former colony to its utmost is being realized. Meanwhile all is going on smoothly the old German army has melted away and the Askaris have returned to their villages while the country is now garrisoned by three battalions of the Kings African Rifles from neighboring Colonies. The only Germans left are a few of the original settlers the majority having been repatriated. There is no native problem for the natives have settled down and taken kindly to the change of rulers. There have been no disturbances of any kind since the departure of the Germans. The excellent system of railways which were very considerably damaged by the Germans have been repaired and are in working order right up to Lake Tanganyika. The most urgent need is the resumption for shipping coastwise and with Europe for on this the prosperity of the country depends.

WILSON AND THE IRISH QUESTION.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 7. While private negotiations proceeded yesterday between senators favoring strong or mild reservations to the German peace treaty the foreign relations committee received a report of a spirited discussion of the Irish question at Paris last June between President Wilson and Frank P. Walsh and former Governor Dunne of Illinois who fought to secure a hearing before the peace conference for the Irish Nationalists. The report was transmitted by the Irish National Bureau supplementing recent committee hearings. It said Mr. Wilson declined to use his influence to get a hearing for the Irish representatives declaring that Messrs. Walsh and Dunne by intemperate speeches on Ireland had made it impossible.

SOLDIERS ATTACKED.

BELFAST, Sept. 6. A party of eighteen soldiers returning to barracks from church at Fermoy to-day was attacked from ambush, one soldier was killed and 3 wounded. The others were overpowered. The attacking forces which appeared to number about twenty used revolvers. They took all the soldiers rifles and quickly left the scene in automobiles which were waiting for them. Fermoy lies about nineteen miles north east of Cork.

A BITTER PILL.

VIENNA, Sept. 6. The Arbeiter Zeitung characterized the peace terms as bitter, spiteful and unjust adding "the Entente is using its power in a most shameful manner to ill treat and outrage defenceless people with a peace based on might." The Tageblatt says "in vain do we search for a sign of justice or regard for our utter incapacity to fulfill or consideration for the principle of self-determination for peoples." It adds that the reparations commission must begin work by constituting itself a revision commission.

AMMUNITION DESTROYED.

COBLENZ, Sept. 5. Property valued at approximately (10,000,000) ten million marks sold recently by the Americans to the Germans was destroyed by a series of explosions in ammunition dumps near Nieuweid. Among the material destroyed was ammunition worth 3 million marks which was sold Friday for commercial purposes.

DR. RENNER WILL SIGN.

PARIS, Sept. 7. The Austrian Delegation at St. Germain has informed the French peace mission that Dr. Karl Renner, head of the Austrian delegation has been charged with signing the document. Dr. Renner is now on his way to Paris. His signature will be affixed to the treaty at ten o'clock Wednesday.

SOLDIERS DEMOBILIZED.

LONDON, Sept. 6. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The war office announces that from the date of the armistice to noon on Sept. 3 last the following numbers were discharged or demobilized, 113,875 discharged as medically unfit; 21,379 other ranks demobilized; 2,751,372 discharged as medically unfit; 176,281 discharged from reserve class, 143,485, total officers and other ranks discharged and demobilized 3,216,042.

BEATTY SPEAKS IN DUNDEE.

LONDON, Sept. 6. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—In the course of his speech delivered on receiving the freedom of the city of Dundee to-day, Admiral Sir David Beatty said that throughout the war Scotland was the home of the Grand Fleet, the base of major naval operations and the headquarters of our naval strategy. Provision for the proper protection of Scottish harbors was a work of great magnitude, undertaken in the face of the enemy under high pressure and accomplished with Scottish energy and resource. Admiral Beatty concluded by saying that the same clear understanding and inflexible determination that had won the war were needed to regain prosperity and achieve in peace the crown of success we had won in the war.

Education.

Increasing attention is being paid to education by thinking men throughout the community, and while more attention is being focussed upon the subject, great stress is being laid upon interdenominational education.

The latest and most practical argument in favor of amalgamation is the offer of $25,000 by Mr. Dugald Munn, should the Protestant bodies amalgamate on this important question.

It is worthy of attention to note the different opinions expressed by different religious parties, and although the subject is very wide and requireth the utmost thought and consideration, let us hope that soon the many opinions expressed may resolve into some practical purpose.

With the inclusion of the fees and perquisites the highest salary offered will amount to but $700 or a very little better, and such a salary at the present time is really unequal to the cost of living, and especially to the teacher, (considering that the teacher must be more careful of dress and appearance than the ordinary working-man.)—Industrial Worker.

She Couldn't Take Off Her Rings, Says Mrs. Mary O'Neill

Hands Were Swollen From Rheumatism—This And Other Troubles Disappear After She Takes Tanlac.

"I had almost lost the use of my limbs from rheumatism and my hands were so swollen I couldn't take off my rings, but since I took Tanlac I have nearly forgotten I ever had rheumatism at all," said Mrs. Mary O'Neill, who resides at 18 Starr Street, Halifax, Canada.

"I don't talk all day and not even get started telling how I suffered with rheumatism and indigestion for the past four years," she continued. "I used to sit and would try to, but it didn't do me any good, for gas would form in my stomach and press up against my heart and put me in misery for hours at a time. Many a time I have had to stop work about the house on account of dizziness and shortness of breath. I would just have to lie down and get quiet until I could get up and go to bed. I had heartburn and a blinding headache would set in and when I would get up and start across the room, I would have to keep my hand on my forehead from falling on the floor. I was weak and felt too worn out and tired all the time to be anything, but my nature and self and the medicine I took didn't make me feel any better. Then rheumatism set in and the pains would seem to start in my shoulders and joints and go through my whole body. My joints would swell so that I could hardly move for the stiffness and pain. At night I would lay awake in misery and often wouldn't get any rest at all. Most of the pain would be in my left side, and I couldn't have slept on my left side, nor wouldn't have tried for a thousand dollars."

"I took the advice of a young man who is boarding at my house and tried Tanlac, and I am mighty glad I did. Tanlac is a wonderful medicine, for it has not only relieved my stomach trouble entirely, but the rheumatism is also a thing of the past. I can get up and go through my house just anywhere I want to, like I never had rheumatism at all. My appetite has come back like old times and I can eat and enjoy the biggest kind of a meal and never have a minute's trouble. The heartburn disappeared when I got relief from the indigestion and I can sleep at night long and wake in the morning feeling fine. My fingers have gone down to their natural size and neither myself nor anybody else could tell I ever had rheumatism. I'll certainly tell anybody that I see what Tanlac has done for me, and will be glad to recommend it in every way possible for any rheumatism."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative. —advt.

Street Confusion.

The article in the "Evening Telegram" on the confusion that exists on our streets especially on Water Street on Saturday nights is but too true.

On the nights in question, when crowds of shoppers are making their week-end purchases, it is nothing unusual to see or hear of collisions and spilling of parcels on the street, besides sundry bruises due from the policy of "give and take" so much in evidence.

There is surely some way of ruling so that the parties going in one direction may not collide with persons going in the opposite. The "rush" for tickets formerly so much in evidence at the opening of the doors of

Our American Letter.

Charleston, S. C., August 31.—The opposition to both the Treaty and the League of Nations in the United States is increasing and the recent hearing on the claims of Ireland has strengthened this opposition. The treaty will not go through without many amendments. The infamy of Shantung has stuck in the crops of the senators and will never be ratified, judging from present indications. Bourke Cochran, by far the greatest orator in America, led the fight for Ireland at the senate hearing and he now states that victory is assured, and that the people of Great Britain who are at heart among the most just in the world will demand that Ireland be set free.

Something sinister looms in the near East. The movement of German troops along the Baltic is very significant. There is no doubt that an understanding exists between Germany and the Bolsheviks, which portends disastrous consequences unless the rest of Europe is on its guard. Japan is ready to join forces with Russia and Germany when she is given the opportunity. Let the admirers of Japan talk as they will, this heathen nation was willing to break away from the allies during the war at the first sign of certain German victory. The only thing which prevents Japan from making war is lack of money and munitions. When she is ready, God help the world.

Horatio Bottomley, editor of "John Bull" publishes a very doleful dirge in a recent issue of his paper. He asserts that Wilson forced the League of Nations upon the allies for the purpose of securing the trade of the world. By what process of reasoning Bottomley arrives at this conclusion is not given; but that it is far from the truth is manifest to all. Certainly no person in the United States can see in what way the establishment of the League of Nations would insure the American commercial supremacy of which Bottomley appears to be so intensely jealous. Neither can the average person understand why Bottomley is instituting such a vicious campaign against America at the present time.

Old H. C. L. is beginning to feel some of the hard knocks which are being given him by the government and the press of late. Prices are beginning to come down to some extent as the profiteers are being exposed. One thing the high cost of living question has done and that is the exposing of that heavy old economic fraud "supply and demand." For ages when food soared sky high the dealers pointed to this economic fallacy as the reason. Now we know that no matter whether food stuffs are scarce or plentiful the profiteer manages to keep the prices up.

The majority fight in Charleston has resulted in the election of Hon. John P. Grace, editor of the American, as mayor for the next four years. It was one of the most bitterly contested elections, known in Charleston's history. Mr. Grace is a comparatively young man, and besides being editor of the leading Charleston daily, is one of the most brilliant barristers in the state. Charleston is now a city run by newspaper men, for out of 24 returned, fourteen directors and employees of the Charleston American will be members of the board of aldermen. I do not believe that this has ever happened anywhere before.

Charleston is undergoing a spell of tropical weather. The heat at mid-day is intense and one longs for a whiff of the life giving breezes from Signal Hill when the humidity is at its worst. The nights here, however, are usually cool and pleasant. There is never a case of sunstroke and the health records are exceedingly good. As far as I can learn, the death rate in Charleston is about 12 per thousand.

President Wilson begins his speaking tour very shortly. If he is heckled he will have some explaining to do as to why he sanctioned the despoliation of China by Japan and threw his fourteen points into the Seine—immediately after his arrival in Paris.

Wedding Bells.

Nld. Soldier Weds Lady From Land of the Heather.

Another pretty romance of the war was demonstrated last evening at the R. C. Cathedral when ex-Corporal Douglas Phelan of the Royal Nld. Regiment was united in Hymen's bonds to Miss Maisie Allen of Ayr, Scotland. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. Greene, D. D., the bride being attended by Miss Maude Field, and ex-Private Gus O'Neill being best man. Following the wedding the bridal party motored to the home of Mr. James Phelan, the well known mason, at Merrymeeting Road, where they were greeted with a flourish of trumpets from the bugle band of which the groom was a former member. Supper was served, only the immediate friends of the contracting parties being present; speeches were made by Mr. George Morris and Capt. Leo Murphy, music and recitations made up a pleasant hour or two and all enjoyed themselves thoroughly. We join in the general congratulations, and wish the young soldier and his bride every happiness.

KING-SWEETLAND.

A very pretty wedding took place at Christ Church, Bonavista, on Wednesday, Aug. 20th, when ex-Gunner John H. King, of the first Canadian Division, B.E.F., led to the altar Miss Gertrude Sweetland, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sweetland of Bonavista. The bride was charmingly dressed in a gown of blue silk with veil and wreath of orange blossoms, carrying a bouquet of white roses and maiden hair fern, as she entered the church leaning on the arm of her father. The groom was supported by Mr. Edmund Sweetland, brother of the bride, and Mr. Hubert Swires. Miss Sarah Sweetland acted as maid of honour while the bridesmaids were Miss Violet Prowse of St. John, and Miss Stella Ford, while the Misses Mary and Irene Sweetland, sister and cousin of the bride, acted as flower girls. After the ceremony the happy couple drove round town returning to the S. U. F. hall where a sumptuous repast was partaken of and a very enjoyable evening spent and dancing was kept up till a very late hour. Mr. and Mrs. King received a large number of handsome and very useful presents. The happy couple arrived in the city on Saturday by the S. S. Prospero and will make their future home in St. John's where Mr. King is at present employed.—Com.

EVANS—JEANS.

On Wednesday last, 3rd instant St. James' Church, Channel, was the scene of a very interesting religious function, when Rev. H. J. Read, Rector, spoke the words that united in the sacred bonds of matrimony Dora, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Evans, and Earle W., eldest son of Mary and the late James Jeans formerly of Cape Ray. The bride was given away by her father and was attended by a bevy of her girl friends, who looked after the arrangements most capably. The groom had the support of Mr. John Read and John Evans, brother of the bride. A very fine luncheon was served at the residence of the bride's parents after which the wedding party and guests were invited to the Fishermen's Hall, where dancing was indulged in and enjoyed by all. During the intervals between the dances refreshments were served, the bridesmaids being untiring in their assiduity in catering to the pleasure of those present. The many friends of the bride testified to their appreciation of her endearing qualities by the variety and number of the presents sent. With others the Telegram takes occasion to join in the felicitations accorded Mr. and Mrs. Jeans and to wish them a long and happy voyage over the sea of life.

SORENSEN—YOUNG.

The wedding of P. V. G. Sorensen, widower, of the Norwegian steamer Admiral, and Mrs. Olivia Young, widow, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cranford, of No. 5 Southside, St. John's, was held on Saturday, September 6th, 1919, at St. Mary's Church, by the Rev. A. Strling. The bridesmaid and best man were Miss Hilda Cranford and Mr. A. E. Bloss. Witnesses were Mr. Gabrielsen and Mr. Anslacken, respectively 2nd engineer and second officer of the same ship. Relatives were present. The guests of honor were Capt. Anousen, master of the ship, Mr. Isachsen, chief officer, Mr. Stenerson 3rd engineer, Mr. Engblom, steward and Mr. Birkenas of the same ship. The celebration was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride and groom are both thankful for the

HOW HE DOES
"How can he be so disagreeable and unreasonable," said my neighbor emphatically.
She was talking about the husband of another neighbor. The latter was making his wife's life wretched because on account of her mother's illness, she had to be away from home off and on for some weeks. This had upset his domestic arrangements and interfered with his comfort—and so when she came home, he would be so ugly and sulky that she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown from the double strain.
The Neighbors Hold a Caucus on the Selfish Husband.
"Would he have her do nothing at all for her sick mother?" said another of the caucus of neighbors who had his case under consideration.
"He says her sister ought to do more," suggested someone.
"But she has four children and his wife has only one, and his sister is very glad to look after their little girl when his wife is away," explained someone else.
"Well," said the first woman who had spoken, "I simply cannot understand how anyone can be so thoroughly mean."
I started to say "Amen" to that in my mind, and then that queer quirk came that insists I shall consider her other side of things got to working. "I suppose he must think that he is abused in some way," I thought and tried to imagine how he put the thing up to himself.

Of course he dwelt on the fact that he other sister doesn't do her share, and tells himself that he'd be glad to do his share but he hates to have things put over on him. HOW HE DOES SEE IT.

"How can he be so disagreeable and unreasonable," said my neighbor emphatically.
She was talking about the husband of another neighbor. The latter was making his wife's life wretched because of her mother's illness, she had to be away from home off and on for some weeks. This had upset his domestic arrangements and interfered with his comfort—and so when she came home, he would be so ugly and sulky that she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown from the double strain.

The Neighbors Hold a Caucus on the Selfish Husband.

"Would he have her do nothing at all for her sick mother?" said another of the caucus of neighbors who had his case under consideration.
"He says her sister ought to do more," suggested someone.
"But she has four children and his wife has only one, and his sister is very glad to look after their little girl when his wife is away," explained someone else.
"Well," said the first woman who had spoken, "I simply cannot understand how anyone can be so thoroughly mean."

I started to say "Amen" to that in my mind, and then that queer quirk came that insists I shall consider the other side of things got to working.
"I suppose he must think that she is abused in some way," I thought and tried to imagine how he put the thing up to himself.

The Case He Makes Out For Himself.

Of course he dwelt on the fact that the other sister doesn't do her share, and tells himself that he'd be glad to do his share but he hates to have things put over on him. (I've heard him express that feeling.) And then he probably pictures himself coming home dead tired at night to an empty house and indulges in an orgy of self-pity. And then he tells himself that his wife is apt to be over-conscientious, and that very likely she is doing more than she needs to. (He is always saying that.)

And just by dwelling on those facts and shutting out all others, he makes himself feel thoroughly justified—when, as a matter of fact, there is nothing else his wife could possibly do.

People Don't Make Up Their Minds To Be mean.

You see, people don't make up their minds to be thoroughly mean. They don't admit that they are going to be selfish and irritable. No, they build up a justification like the one this man built up, and then they turn their backs on the other side of the case.

One is reminded of the story of the newly made negro judge of carpet-bagging days who, having heard one side of the case, said that was all he needed to hear—that he would give a verdict at once for the plaintiff. He was persuaded to hear the defendant's case and scratching his head, he muttered, "Now, ain't that funny? He's the man that's right, after all!"
When you cannot understand the way anyone acts, fit this key and see if it doesn't work. Picture him building up such a justification and looking at it determinedly with his back to all other facts.

And don't forget to ask yourself when the one person for whose acts you are responsible, is dwelling on a grievance, whether he, too, is doing that sort of thing.

THE BOARDERS.

"What ho," exclaimed the boarders, "bring forth the measly lot of profiteers and let them all be shot." The boarders' grub is scanty, it's stilt and punk indeed, in hostility or shanty, wherever they may feed. Their eyes become a sickly slice of liver, a string bean and a pea. The boarders' cheeks are sallow, their eyes are full of woe, their waistlines show no fallow, they totter as they go. Their lean ribs clank together and ever, as they reel, they wonder, wonder whether they'll ever have a meal. "Bring forth," exclaimed the boarders, bent up with stomach ache, "the profiteers and hoarders, and burn them to the stake." The landlord says he's giving the utmost for the cash; and boarders still are living on air and onion hash. In vain the boarders forage for fodder they can eat; and there are tons in storage of eggs and pies and meat. The nation's bins are bursting with everything we need; and it is most disgusting that men for grub must plead, and pay unholy prices for everything they get; oh, let us in three trices, make some blamed lummix sweat. "Produce," exclaimed the boarders, bowed down by pain and toil, "the profiteers and hoarders, and let them boil in oil."

LIFE'S ALL
What more do you want from life than this—
The gentle thrill of a loved one's kiss, And the faith of all who love you?
Friends to share in your joy or woe, A home with laughter and peace aglow?
What more than these can the rich man know Who sets himself above you?
What more do you want from your stretch of years Than the many smiles for the few sad tears Which are born of the common sorrows?
Though you grieve to-day, you shall live to sing And the richest man or the proudest king Cannot truly say what the night shall bring Or fashion his own to-morrows.
If you sleep at night on your sheltered bed, If you have raiment and meat and bread, Then away with ceaseless fretting! If you can romp with your children small, Or sit with the friends who come to call, By the fire you build, then you have all That the richer men are getting.
So set your hopes on the simple things And the common joys which a good life brings. And the work for a few who love you, If peace abides in your home at night And you have strength for your daily fight, You have all that can come to the man of might Who sets himself above you.

Evening Telegram
W. J. HERDER, Proprietor
C. T. JAMES, Editor
Monday, September 8, 1919.

A Restatement.

Soon after the present Government of the Colony was formed, the Telegram stated its intention to give it support, so long as its conduct of public affairs warranted that support. It seems timely now to restate that decision, in view of recent political developments, and to show why the support of the Telegram will be continued.

It is, of course, true that the present Government was, when formed, made up of incongruous elements—men who had been opposed to each other, and to some of whom the Telegram had been hostile politically. But it is also true, we think, that they altogether make the strongest cabinet possible under existing conditions, and that therefore, it is in the public interest and welfare that they should be supported.

Not what members of the Government have done, as individuals, nor what has been done by other Governments of which they were a part, is the true measure by which the present Government should be judged, but what the present Government itself does is the real standard by which its record should be gauged, and judging it by that measure the Telegram is, so far, satisfied to stand by its original pledge of support. In the treatment of the Coastal Steamship Service, for instance, the Government showed courage, and the result has given public satisfaction. In its treatment of the question of a Telephone Service for the Peninsula of Avalon, the Government has displayed energy, initiative and prudence, and a modern up-to-date service is practically assured. It is taking a firm stand in certain other important matters, not yet ready to be made public.

Party men who began as Tories, so-called, under Sir Edward Morris. Under the circumstances, therefore, Liberal Reform is only the clothing of a sheep to conceal the body of a wolf.

Wood-Worker Drilled Arm.

One of the workmen in Horwood's lumber factory met with a very painful accident on Saturday when a drill that he was manipulating slipped and bored a hole about an inch in diameter, in the fleshy part of his forearm. He was taken to O'Maria's drug store where Dr. A. C. Tait attended him. The injury was not serious.

Donovan's Re-opening.

Donovan's, that well-known and popular country resort on the Topsail Road, will re-open next summer. It will be remembered that, during the war, certain interned prisoners were kept there, and it is now several years since other business was done at the hotel. The re-opening will be under new management.

Noted Athlete Returning.

Lieut. Fred Marshall, late of the London Pay and Record Office, who was so prominent in local athletics before the war, will return shortly. Fred has taken a special course in athletic training and hopes, on his return, to revive interest and enthusiasm in such sports as wrestling, boxing and running.

Snow at Catalina.

Possibly the first snow for this season to fall in Newfoundland fell at Catalina on Thursday last, when a thunder and lightning storm, accompanied by a heavy fall of hail, passed over the place.

Juveniles Hold Meeting.

The juvenile T. A. and B. Society held its regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon at which several candidates were admitted to membership. The society is now the strongest in membership since its inception.

Cricket.

On Saturday afternoon a cricket match was played between a team from H.M. ships and the Nondescript cricket club, which resulted in a win for the Nondescripts by a score of 85 to 62. For the ships, Smith's 17 and Gilbert's 10 were the only double figures, while for the club Alick Winter's brilliant score of 44 was the outstanding feature. The bowlers for the ships were Smith, Lawrence and Wrigley, and for the club, Peters, Reid and Johnstone.

Fisherman Drowned.

The Minister of Justice received the following message this morning from Dr. Wm. Hogan: "John Nolan, of Salmonier was drowned last Saturday near Point of Colinet Island, while traveling from dory. Body not recovered."

Football Notes.

The opening game of the Victory Cup Football Series takes place on St. George's Field at 6.15 this evening. The Saints and Star will be the competing teams and a fast and exciting game is looked forward to. The line up for to-night's contest will be: SAINTS—Goal, Lush; backs, E. Crawford, Carmichael; halves, Foster, Burns, Irvine; forwards, Young, Munn, Kendrick, Burridge, Pennell; reserve, A. Hammond. STAR—Goal, Delahunty; backs, Sullivan, Kavanagh; halves, W. Hart, Duggan, L. Kavanagh; forwards, Brien, Simms, E. Hart, Kavanagh, Power.

Players are requested to be at the field at 6 o'clock as the game will start at 6.15 sharp. In connection with the programme for Wednesday, arrangements have been made to have an eleven visit here and take part in the double header to be played that afternoon at St. George's Field. The games will be: Regiment vs City, which was postponed from early in the season, and Bell Island vs City. The men from there will arrive in town on Wednesday morning.

New Book by Local Author.

The Telegram learns that the public will shortly have something to talk of beside party politics and that Mr. Coaker will be particularly interested. Mr. Arthur English has prepared a little work dealing with Mr. Coaker as a diarist and traveller. The book is entitled "Invincible Ignorance" and will shortly be offered to the public. Just received, a large shipment Sunset Soap Dyes. DR. F. STAFFORD & SON—agents.

Grand Falls Win Reid Cup.

Exciting Baseball—Paper Town Pat It All Over City.

Special to Evening Telegram. GRAND FALLS, Saturday Evening. Crowded pavilion and baselines again witnessed the fifth game in the inter-town series, Grand Falls putting it all over St. John's amid great jubilation, thus winning Reid Cup. In the fourth innings Grand Falls started a batfist making Hall retire in favor of Canning. After batting Hall freely for five runs and the Canning for four, Hall went into the box again. In the fifth innings Grand Falls played well-nigh faultless ball, but the city's infield throwing and fielding was wretched and heartbreaking to behold. Canning at third and Fortier at second started. Foran at bases filled twice but did not allow the score. The first four innings were played in slight drizzle and Hall could not put over his usual stuff. Presentation of cup tonight in Town Hall. Duff and Shapleigh, umpiring, had a strenuous time as disputes were frequent and most vigorous. Cheesman's absence was greatly regretted by both teams. The score by innings was: Grand Falls . . . 0 10 0 0 2 0—13 City . . . . . 2 0 1 0 0 1 0 0—4 The scheduled team returns tomorrow night. PLAGIARISED.

Plagiarised.

Although the herring market has generally shown some improvement of late, Newfoundland Scotch cured herring does not appear to be moving in any degree better than at last reports. Only a hand-mouth business is reported for the week, and many factors are of the opinion that the trade is "awaiting further developments and the arrival of shipments of Alaska herring" before anticipating its wants for Newfoundland herring. This seems to be a logical deduction, but it must be considered also that Scotch herring is coming forward steadily, and the quality of this variety has improved steadily since the first lots arrived two months or more ago. The prevailing quotations of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring are $14 to $18 per barrel for large, while it is possible to purchase matfals at $12 on the spot, and matties at $10 in some cases. While the trade is asking higher prices for either, the outside quotations of $14@15 for these grades have been obtained only in rare cases, and where the quality was decidedly superior. The new goods arriving from Newfoundland is generally of better quality than that received earlier in the season, and it is fair to assume that this will bring better prices than the ordinary cure, of which there is a predominance held in storage here. As there are considerable quantities of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring to be marketed through New York it is presupposed that the market will see no marked change until the demand has assumed more liberal proportions.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Aug. 30.

New Fishing Craft For Labrador.

There was towed to Gloucester, Mass., from Essex on Sunday the tern schooner Beulah Mae, of about 270 tons gross measurement, built by A. D. Storey for W. and T. Hollett, of Burlington, Nfld. She is a very pretty vessel, and improvement of the Harry and Verna, built for the same parties by Mr. Storey in 1918. She is one of the first vessels built at Essex under British Lloyd's specifications, and when fitted will be classed A.1. She will be rigged by Harry Christensen, and when ready will sail for her home port to engage in the fish exporting from Newfoundland to Europe. Mr. Storey is to start another tern schooner for the same parties to be delivered in December. He is one of Massachusetts' foremost shipbuilders, and has now in his shipyards one steam trawler for Gloucester parties which he will soon launch, and a tern schooner for Tons. Wakely & Son, of Harbor Buffet, Nfld.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Aug. 30.

McMurdo's Store News.

MONDAY, Sept. 8, 1919. We have several new numbers to offer you to-day. McMurdo's Vanishing Cold Cream should make a distinct hit, combining as it does the advantages of the old-fashioned emollient cold creams, with the modern greaseless vanishing creams, and being well made of pure materials, and pleasantly perfumed. Price 6c. Then there is the new Rose Cold Cream, a cream of the solid variety which forms an excellent protective and healing cream worth trying. Price 4c. Chlorate of Potash Tablets are not at all a new thing, but it has been for so long nearly impossible to obtain them in handy packages, that they will quite naturally have a place in this list. Price 4c a box. Lastly there is a new cure—well worth trying in that obstructive corn or callous. Price 25c a bottle.

War Veterans Present Pipe to Provost.

At the Railway Station to-day, just before the express pulled out, a deputation of the G. W. V. A. met Provost Mitchell, of Arr. Scotland, and presented him with a handsome set of pipes as a slight recognition of his many kindnesses to the Regiment when in Arr. Provost Mitchell had there tendered a dinner to the boys of the 1st Newfoundland, who remember his generosity with gratitude. Present H. Mitchell made the address and presentation, the Provost replied in suitable language. As the train pulled out three hearty cheers for the late visitor were given with a will.

Shipping News.

S. S. Adolph is expected to get away for New York direct on Wednesday. E. S. Sachem is expected to leave Halifax to-morrow for this port. The schooner Bianca has arrived from Barbados to Bowring Brothers Ltd., with a cargo of molasses. S. S. Warwick arrived in port this morning from North Sydney with a cargo of coal consigned to W. B. Frazer. S. S. Neptune of the Nova Scotia Steamship Co., Ltd., is discharging general cargo at the Furness Withy wharf. The schooner Sevilla has arrived here from Iceland in ballast, for orders.

Cleanliness, Quality, Service

2 The number TWO looks big to us this month. It stands for our second anniversary and it represents two big years of hard work and exceptional success.

Of course we are happy. There is no greater joy than the joy of work well done—nothing surpasses the inner satisfaction which follows actual accomplishment. Happiness and gratitude go hand in hand. We thank all our friends for their patronage and friendship.

At top of this ad. we have spread three words which we might call the "Big Three" of Johnson Success. They are Cleanliness, Quality and Service, and our friends can count upon us to keep these ideals always in mind so that each new anniversary will show continued progress toward our chosen ideal of "Good Service to the Buying Public."

We're off to make the third year a record breaker for ourselves and for you.

Like all good business men we want to exceed past achievements, and we intend to do it by using the good old-fashioned plan of giving better service to the Buying Public. That has always been our idea. To keep on doing things better and better day after day. It is on that basis we are building our business and it's a plan that benefits everybody concerned including all those who do business with us.

So here's the slogan for our third year:

"Biggest Business Through Better Service." Johnson's, Bakers & Confectioners, 174 Duckworth Street. P. O. Box 1211. sep5,31

Train Derailed.

No. 2 Express which left Port aux Basques on time Saturday morning, was delayed for twelve hours by a derailment, and did not arrive in the city until 2 o'clock this morning. After leaving Humbermouth, on schedule, Saturday afternoon, engines having been changed at that divisional point, everything was going finely, when suddenly an ominous grinding sound was heard, and to the dismay of the passengers the whole train with the exception of the engine left the rails, the movement however being unattended by any overturning of the cars, and only for a moment was there any feeling of alarm, the same being speedily allayed when it was found that the cars were maintaining equilibrium. The wire was at once tamped and an emergency call for help sent East and West, and the train crew at once started to get matters fixed up. Working like trojans they soon had the tender, baggage, second class and dining cars on the rails again. By the time this was accomplished by the most superhuman efforts of Conductor Harry Shortall and his efficient side, Roadmaster Cobb arrived with his repair crew and the most difficult work of getting the day coach, which was completely off, and sleeper on was begun, the job being finished and track repaired by 2 a.m. Sunday. The accident was due to the weight of the fully laden tender, when passing over a tie which had become loose through the washing out of ballast by the recent heavy rains, spreading the rail. The shock of the derailment was not very great and as the couplings held firmly the cars kept upright. There were but few passengers on at the time and not one suffered any injury whatever. The speed with which the cars were replaced on the line, and the damage done the section of track torn up repaired reflects great credit on the train crew and the men under Roadmaster Cobb who was so quickly on the scene with his gang.

Fish on Labrador.

By letter from Spear Harbor we learn that boats there are getting from three to five quintals of codfish per day on hook and line, with plenty of herring bait. This is a hopeful sign that the Labrador fishery voyage may yet be a fair one and the gradual return of the herring to their old time waters is another evidence of coming good fortune.

Boy Meets Accident.

A seven-year-old boy named Spratt of Duckworth Street, met with a painful accident Saturday afternoon while playing with some other children. He climbed to the top of a pile of cases and fell from there onto the street, a distance of several feet. His head came in contact with the ground and he was picked up unconscious and taken to Dr. McDonald's Surgery, and later conveyed to the General Hospital. It is feared that he is suffering from concussion of the brain. Up to press hour his condition was much improved and his recovery should be fairly swift.

Admiral Baron Beresford died last night while on a visit to the Duke of Portland, at Langwell, Caithness, Scotland. Death was due to apoplexy. Admiral Beresford was created a Baron by King George in the New Year Honors, and was announced December 31, 1915. He assumed the title of Baron Beresford of Metemeh and Carraghmore.

[Charles William de la Poer Beresford, G. C. B., K. C. B., G. C. V. O., was born in Ireland in Feb. 10, 1845, being the second son of Rev. In 1916, for meritorious service he was created a Baron. Admiral Beresford, as a Captain, Commanded H. M. S. "Condor" at the bombardment of Alexandria, Egypt, in 1883 and was specially mentioned in despatches for gallantry. The first tribute ever paid a naval officer, was tendered young Beresford when at the bombardment of the Alexandria forts, on July 11th, alongside the most powerful of the enemy's batteries and by his pluck and the heroism of his crew, effectively reduced it, receiving from the Admiral in charge of the operations, the signal from the flagship "Well done Condor."

great problems, like the railroad situation, be solved while the suspense continued. Mr. Wilson defended the Shantung provision of the treaty and said the league covenant section referring to the Monroe Doctrine had been inserted to "give the Monroe Doctrine right of way in the Western hemisphere." He declared his conviction that it would do so.

To Workingmen, Soldiers and Sailors.

BY JOHN ANDERSON.

I appeal to you, and every true lover of a decent home. It is time you were removed from your pigsty houses to homes of health and comfort. Was there ever a company in the history of this country, deserved concessions from a government, with a better claim, read the following; then, do some thinking.

Cap. 1. An Act Respecting the Newfoundland Knitting Mills, Ltd.—By this Act the Company is guaranteed, on the certificate of the Auditor General, five per cent. upon its cash capital for 15 years from 1st Jan., 1917 and is granted for 20 years free importation of (1) original construction material, and (2) flannelette cotton, fleecy cotton, facings, threads, fine yarns, buttons, tapes, labels, soda ash, bleaching and dyeing materials, wool oils and wrapping materials.

Cap. 2. An Act Respecting the Riverside Woolen Mills, Ltd.—Under this Act the Riverside Woolen Mills, Ltd., has conferred upon it the same privileges as are granted to the Newfoundland Knitting Mills, Ltd., by the preceding Act.

Cap. 3. An Act Respecting the Public Electric Co., Limited.—This Act confers upon certain persons, who have formed themselves into a company called the Public Service Electric Co., Ltd., the following privileges: (a) The exclusive right to use the waters of Heart's Content stream and all its tributaries for the development of electric energy; (b) The right to erect poles and make trenches on Crown land and public highways; (c) The importation, duty free, of all goods and material required by the company for original installation and extension of plant; (d) The right to appropriate (by arbitration) private lands and property requisite for development of the power. Work must be commenced within three years and operations begun within five years from August 8th, 1917.

The Dominion Co-operative Building Association Ltd., ask from the government the same concessions as that given to other companies, i.e., five per cent. upon its cash capital for 20 years, and is granted for 20 years free importation of original construction material for the building of Workingmen, Soldiers and Sailors Houses not to exceed the cost of twenty five hundred dollars.

The Bill, is an Act to provide for the erection of Dwelling Houses and for the Incorporation of Housing Companies, we will then be prepared to build, rent or sell, at cost prices, the number and rates being: 200 Houses at $8.00 per month. 200 Houses at $10.00 per month. 125 Houses at $15.00 per month.

Better homes, better houses for the workingmen and his family, the above prices will be free from all taxation if the government will do their duty.

Police Court.

A young lady was charged with speeding, i.e., exceeding the speed limit set for vehicles while within the city limits. The evidence of Constable Humber was that the defendant was going at a very fast speed while another witness deposed similarly. Both were positive that the car had exceeded the limit, but the Court could not accept the unsupported word of either. "The prosecution must bring sufficient evidence before I can convict," said the Judge, "and the officers of the law should be provided with the tools with which to be able to prove their assertions." He was prepared to uphold the law and put down speeding, but he could not accept unsupported evidence. "As a matter of fact," he declared, "there is not one car out of every twenty in the city to-day that doesn't exceed the limit." Judge Morris's remarks constitute still another proof that the policemen are only wasting time in summoning speeders unless they have top-watches by which they may prove that there was speeding. I. G. Hutchings fought hard to get a conviction, but he was powerless without the proper evidence.

The Fall of Sevastopol.

In the night of September 8-9, 1855, the Russian forces evacuated the fortress of Sevastopol, and the long siege of eleven months ended. Although the English had failed to carry the work known as the Redan, the capture by the French of the Malakhoff, the real key by assault, on the 8th, had rendered the place untenable, and the Russians, even before darkness set in, were collecting and removing to the harbor under cover of barricades. Thirty-five of the magazines were blown up successively, the first at 11 p.m., and simultaneously fires broke out wherever anything combustible remained in the ruined city. The defence, by which the Russian engineer, Todleben, gained the one outstanding reputation made in the war, had been most stubborn and almost successful, for the Allies' chiefs of engineers and artillery, in view of the fact that they were brought round to the time of year at which the Allies first approached Sevastopol, had arrived at the conviction that, if the place were not taken before winter, it would be necessary, as a matter of course, to raise the siege. Fortunately that open confession of failure was averted, and the capture of the city paved the way for the discussion of peace. There was no more fighting in the Crimean War, and except for an expedition to Kinburn, which surrendered in a few hours, the Allied armies remained inactive all through the winter, until April 2, when the upland once again resounded with the roar of artillery. But upon this occasion it proclaimed the return of peace. Then the armies evacuated the Crimea, and the war, with all its record of valour, suffering, miscalculation, and mal-administration, passed into history.

William IV. Crowned.

On Thursday, September 8, 1831, William IV., King of England, was crowned in Westminster Abbey, and also his Royal Consort, Princess Adelaide, daughter of George, Duke of Saxe-Coburg Meiningen, in Germany, whom he had married on July 11, 1818, and who, after his death on June 20, 1837, outlived him till December 2, 1849. She had endeared herself to the British people by her numberless acts of public and private benevolence, as well as by her constant practice of all coronation was in this respect a complete contrast to that of his brother George IV., at whose death on June 26, 1830, he had succeeded to the throne, and who had married Princess Caroline Amelia Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke of Brunswick, on April 8, 1795. When George was crowned in Westminster Abbey with great pomp on July 19, 1821, he refused to allow Princess Caroline to be crowned with him, and when she requested to be present at the ceremony, she was repeatedly turned away from the doors of that church, and was not admitted. She had been accused of adultery by the Prime Minister, and penalty had been proposed against her; and though George III. had led a most virtuous life, it was a period of great immorality between the sexes, so that while George IV. had several mistresses, William IV. had but one, Dorothea Bland, known by the assumed name of Mrs. Jordan; by her he was the father of ten children, who with their descendants, were named Fitzclarence, because he had been created Duke of Clarence, and their eldest son became Earl of Munster, because that was a title conferred upon his Royal father while a Prince. After William IV. married he was faithful to his wife, but their only children were two daughters, who died in infancy. From fourteen years of age he had served his country in the Royal Navy, as Midshipman on board the "Prince George," and was treated as other youths of the same naval rank. He served with distinguished courage and humanity under Admiral Rodney in the West Indies and off the coasts of Nova Scotia and Canada, and under Viscounts Keith and Hood against the French. He rose to be Lieutenant and Admiral, and afterwards Admiral of the Fleet, and finally Lord High Admiral of England.

Why Don't You Write a Novel?

YOU CAN DO IT IN 150 HOURS—IF YOU HAVE A MIND.

In his engaging book "Truth about an Author" Mr. Arnold Bennett has related how some friends suggested that he should write a novel. Now Mr. Bennett had never previously considered the possibility of his ever writing a novel. But he was rather pleased with the suggestion, so he sat down and wrote a novel. It was very much in the same way that he came to write a serial "shocker," and later a play. The beneficial results, both to his fame and to his pocket, of these casual efforts, Mr. Bennett is one of the first to admit, are cheerful indeed.

Again, Mr. Lewis Hind has related how twenty years or more ago he suggested to Mr. H. G. Wells that he could write stories if he tried. Mr. Wells tried; he succeeded; he has continued to succeed.

Just one Hundred and Fifty Hours. Now, why don't you follow the example set by these excellent gentlemen?

What? There are a great many circumstances which stand in the way of your writing a novel? I simply don't believe it. You haven't the time, do you say? Nonsense! Do you know how long it does take to write a novel of average length? No, well, I will tell you and surprise you.

The question is, how long does it take an ordinary rapid writer who knows what he wants to say to complete eighty thousand words? The answer is, not more than a hundred and fifty hours, probably much less.

If your brain is fertile with ideas and your hand is itching to write, you may turn your attention to short stories for the magazines, and if you thus hit the public taste (as it is called, though how you can hit a taste I fail to see) you will acquire much good or its equivalent in notes. Having now disposed of your plea that you have no time, I am ready for the next objection. You don't know how to write or what to write about? Again you are deceiving yourself.

Letter-writer to Novelist. Much surprise was occasioned during the war by the high literary quality of letters from France and elsewhere which were published in the papers. Allowing for a little judicious sub-editing at times, it does nevertheless remain the fact that a general standard of letter-writing by British men and women is high enough for those letter-writers to become fiction-writers. You are a letter-writer, no doubt, even though you do not always reply to your friends by return of post. Well, then, turn your flow of language from the mixture of fact and fairy-story that most letters are, to the construction of honest fiction. You won't find the writing difficult even to begin with, but as thousands after thousands of words are tossed off from your pen, you will find your thoughts and your language coalescing in writing with ever-growing facility.

Compose Your Ideas. Your thoughts—yes! You say you don't know what to write about? Do you mean to confess that after living all the years you have upon this earth which is brimful of adventure, disasters, sudden satisfactions, and the whole medley of happenings and impressions which have crowded upon you, many of them peculiarly your own, you have nothing interesting to talk about to other people? Because that is all I am asking you to do. The only difference is that, instead of frittering away your ideas and your experiences in casual chatter, you shall compose them into an harmonious whole with an understandable drift of character or circumstance, or both. This does not mean that I am asking you to write the story of your own life in novel form, because transcribed exactly there would probably be no form at all about it, though this method is modern and popular. But every author must write out of his own experience; that is to say, that he must know enough of the circumstances and environment of his imagined characters and their adventures to know whether they are possible and probable.

It is exactly out of these ordinary experiences, with the observation of life and character they entail, that the greater novels are built up. You don't want to write about battle, murder, and sudden death, to produce fine work. Just take the simple experiences of your life and you will find in them plot and counterplot of intense interest, unexciting though they may appear.

A Few Models. Having discovered your plot and your characters, if you are still not sure of your ability to shape and mould them into a story, there is a simple, pleasant, and effective method of finding out how it is done. That method is to read the work of those who are acknowledged to be masters of the art. To see how the simple happenings of everyday life can be utilized to make wonderful fiction, carefully read Jane Austen. To see and feel the development and clash of character conducted through an intricate plot, full of incident, constructed with architectural firmness and the completeness of a circle, study Thomas Hardy. And to see how to cast autobiography into the loose, prolific form of the modern novel, read Mr. Wells' "The New Machiavelli," Mr. Compton Mackenzie's "Sinister St.", Mr. J. D. Beresford's magnificent trilogy, "Jacob Stahl," "A Candidate of Truth," and "The Invisible Event," or, above all, Romain Rolland's story of the life of "Jean Christophe," which you may get in an excellent translation by Mr. Gilbert Cannan.

What You Will Gain. But supposing that you do fail to get your work paid for and into print, you will nevertheless have acquired various abilities of no small value. In the first place, you will have gained a facility in self-expression, not only in writing but in talking also. You will find that it is much easier to put your thoughts into words and to construct telling phrases. There will be a verve and a point in your speech that were never there before. Secondly, your grasp, and understanding, and enjoyment of novel-reading are certain to have been augmented. And thirdly, fourthly, and fifthly—all lumped together as the most valuable results of all—you will have acquired a deeper knowledge of yourself, a better understanding of life and the world, and a keener interest in, and sympathy with, everyone you meet and know.—John O'London's Weekly.

The Lady Who Waited.

BY MAX PEMBERTON.

The policeman at the corner admitted that "the old cove had a coup de grace" and this was the very worst that could have been said of Nathaniel Colspike, M. D. and M. S.

We admit it without scruple. The kindly bachelor of mature middle age and sober habit, had—as the observing policeman remarked—partaken of light refreshment to the extent of an encore, and his rucund fowl and lightsome step did not conceal the fact.

Why should they have done so? Was there anything to be ashamed of; anything to excuse in the conduct of an old Merchant Glider who had attended the banquet of his Company upon the eve of Christmas, and there partaken of punch, hock, burgundy, champagne, claret, and port, to say nothing of brandy-and-sodas and three Corona cigars? Had not a Lord Mayor as a Chaplain been his neighbour at the board? "Eminently respectable," the doctor would have told you; although, to be sure, that phrase was a little difficult at midnight.

He did not attempt it. Rather he repeated the chorus of a blithe song which declared that he might have been the only girl in the world—a possibility which did not alarm him. A friendly little conversation with a pillar-box lacked that discussion which Dr. Johnson has told us is necessary to good talk. He passed on with some contempt for his adversary's silence, and, pulling himself together, he prepared to face his own doorstep. Here was his Stix, beyond which lay the shades and sleep. The doctor sat for quite a long time on the pedestal by the area gate, and it really was wonderful how the night air sobered him. He found that he could repeat "The Boy Stood on the Burning Deck" without any trace of accent.

The stairs were another matter. The whole reputation of the College of Surgeons was at stake here, and the goose-step did not serve it over well. Generally speaking, the Doctor's finger-tips helped him, and a crouching attitude as if one about to spring was safer under the circumstances. He was a little surprised to see a light in the drawing-room on the first floor, and he said with some severity that his servants must have been keeping Christmas prematurely. "Alcohol is the curse of the country," he reflected, "to say nothing of its effect upon the heartier"—a joke he ought to have made at the dinner. He determined to exert his paternal authority and to try the thing upon Mary the housemaid.

There was no trouble whatever about opening the door. He had merely to find the handle, which, absurdly enough, persisted in being on the side where he did not seek it. When, at last, he succeeded, it was easy enough to enter the room majestically and to ask, "What are you women doing here?" He did so with a gall worthy of Martin Harvey. The fact that there was but one woman there did not immediately disconcert him. He was about to call her Mary when something in her flashing eyes arrested the very word upon his lips.

"I beg your pardon," he said. She seemed to think that he had reason to do so.

"Such men as you," she cried, "are lower than the beetles we crush beneath our feet—though, God knows, I have never had the courage to crush one."

"You are quite right, madam," he said; "if anybody is to be crushed, crush me!" and he sat heavily in a gilt-backed chair and stared wildly about him. The beautiful lady continued to regard him with something that the earth should be ashamed to cover.

"When my husband stooped to employ you," she remarked, "I knew at once that he was in the hands of a blackmailer and a thief!—mild terms, but unfortunately I know no others. All your past should have warned him. The woman you basely deserted at Clapton; the money you got out of young Lord Dester—that horrible case of Margaret Anderson—do you think London knows so little that you can hide your crimes through all eternity? Detective indeed! Say rather villain, adventurer, and assassin!"

The Doctor bowed his thanks. "Madam," he said, suavely, "I perceive that you mistake me for another. I wish that I had such a reputation as you are good enough to indicate. Unfortunately, I am merely a nerve specialist—and this, madam, is my poor house—very much at your service. Should you be suffering from anything in particular of nothing in general, I shall be pleased to examine you—here and now, madam, if it is convenient to you."

The lady rose and looked closely into the stranger's face. "Good God," she exclaimed, and the words came prettily from her lips, "it is another man!"

"Too true," said the Doctor, "another man," and he shook his head sadly. "A man, madam, who this very night has for the good of his fellow-men partaken of punch, sherry, port, champagne, and burgundy. God help such a man, madam! Who knows whether he begins or ends—even, it may be, at Bow Street, in the cruel hands of the inexorable Law!"

He shed a few tears and wiped them away upon a handkerchief which smelt strongly of tobacco. The beautiful lady regarded him with a new interest. A smile gave luster to her wonderful face and she rang the bell for soda-water.

"How did you get into this house, man?" she asked.

He worked out the answer to that sum upon his fingers.

"In darkest London," he said, "One house is no better than another house. We are all brothers, madam. Your house or mine, what does it matter? Nevertheless, there are peculiarities. You, for instance, own an establishment which has no door. Upon that point my mind is irrevocably made up. You have no door and it was open. I perceived the fact and I entered. 'What is the Reason,' I asked myself, 'for the absence of that common ornament—a door?' My professional curiosity was aroused. I ascended your stairs—not without difficulty. I entered, and was in the presence of angels—"

"No," she said, slowly, "there is only one of us. And Reggie, it appears, was stupid enough not to close the door after him. Well, here is my husband at last. Thank heaven, he will protect me!"

"A tall and objectionably-strong man entered the room at these words, and took a good look at the doctor.

"Mildred," he asked, mildly, "who is this d—d scoundrel?"

She put her arms about his neck and told him.

"Alfred," she said, "this is the man who has been following me for a whole month past. You suspected me, darling, oh! so unjustly—you set that horrid detective to watch me. You might have spared yourself the trouble. I determined from the first to expose the villain—and there he is. Alfred, will you not punish him?"

The big man turned up his sleeves and looked at his boots.

"Joseph," he said, "you are about to leave us forever."

The doctor sat upon the kerbstones for quite a long time, wondering where the fellow bought those boots. A young man named Reggie, who appeared from nowhere, was quite sympathetic and offered to get him a cab.

"You shouldn't have turned your back to him," he said; always keep a straight left—he's a mass of flesh really, and if you had got one in on the splanx you would have grazed him immediately. But really, you know, you shouldn't be running after the girls at your time of life."

The Doctor agreed.

"It is not usually necessary to run in these days," he said. "I should not think of doing so at this time of night. Please get me a cab. I have forgotten the name of the street in which I reside, but no doubt the driver will remember it."

The driver, however, did nothing of the sort. He was eighty-two and the age of his horse about the same. The Doctor swore he would never leave him "till death do us part." It was a resolution that gave him no joy.

"Drunk?" he asked Reggie.

"No," said the bad boy, "happily married—that's all!"

And so the cab drove off to nowhere and London slept to the music of the Christmas bells.

Stirring Her Up.

The salesmen are the men who keep the world from falling fast asleep. The good old world would love to quit, and shut its eyes and snore a bit, and let the spiders please themselves by weaving cobwebs o'er the shelves. The world would like it well enough to nodder on with shop-worn stuff, and not buy anything that's new until its shelves were bare to view. No doubt if it could have its way, the world would drop the live-long day, and leave its business to chance, and gather midlow on its pants. But, ah! The salesman, keen and fit, he prods the world and chivvies it, and gladly squanders railroad fare to keep the moths out of its hair.

Pussyfoot, Prohibitionist

HAS ALL ENGLAND GUESSING AS HE SILENTLY "SAWS WOOD."

London.—It is a distinction for one more American to have thrown a scare into all of Great Britain, then surely some one is due to advance to the front and center and pin a medal on the expansive chest of one William E.—So-called Pussyfoot — Johnson, temperance worker and representative in Britain of the Anti-Saloon league back home. For Pussyfoot Johnson has done that little thing; he has the back hair of every honest drinker in these isles rearing up on end through fear that by some magic he alone and unaided is going to smother the obnoxious cup from British lips. And do that iniquitous thing right speedily, too!

The amusing feature of this little tale, lads, is that Pffend Pussyfoot hasn't done a thing to merit all this bogey-man stuff except to saw wood and say nothing. Only he had the misfortune to be discovered—to be discovered sawing wood and saying nothing.

Muckraker Starts Wheeze.

This week the Daily Mail sent out an enterprising survival of the muckraking age of fifteen years ago to write a series of scarey stories about how American prohibition spellbinders already were secretly at work to convert the British Isles to the present parched condition that inhabitants of the U.S.A. are enjoying. This belated muckraker was an industrious soul; he went at his job hard, and the very second person he picked on was Pussyfoot Johnson.

What he said—to the extent of a close-packed column in the Daily Mail—about the insidious methods of this same Mr. Johnson, how he moved into an area of wetness, pussy-footed around for a spell and suddenly made that area dry as a dog's back, was indeed a crime. The late lamented Guy Fawkes, who once, many years ago, plotted to blow up the house of parliament and all who happened to be therein at the time, was a babe in arms in comparison with the picture this Daily Mail man drew of Mr. Pussyfoot Johnson. He was a raving fanatic with the astuteness of a Machiavelli, was this American propagandist; he worked in the dark; he snatched honest liquor from honest men's lips without their seeing the hand that did the trick.

The day after the Daily Mail's broadside appeared Mr. Johnson had the bad judgment to go to Finland. Why Finland, no body knows. He might have chosen Kansas City or Timbuctoo. The smooth tongued sides he left behind him said he'd gone to Finland in answer to an urgent call from "influential people" in that distant land; they did not know just when he'd return.

This was a tactical blunder on the part of Mr. Johnson—perhaps. The Daily Mail exulted that it had "smoked him out." Publicity, it declared, was bad for Mr. Johnson's business. Therefore, having received the big bowl-out, Pussyfoot had been forced to flee.

Playing a Deep Game.

But perhaps—just perhaps, dear reader—Mr. Johnson, of Kansas, or wherever he hails from originally, was playing a deeper game than the Daily Mail wotted when he ducked for Finland after the "exposure." It is barely possible he believed that by playing up to the part attributed to him, by sustaining his reputation as a "pussyfoot," he could the better uphold that very reputation as a worker in the dark which the London paper had fixed upon him.

However, the scare was abroad in London. Other papers began to enquire into the mysterious menace exercised by this mild-mannered gentleman with glasses and an embonpoint. The Evening News took up the cry and sent out a young man to interview "a prominent American engineer" "at present in London." The news representative must have found this "prominent American engineer" in the Savoy bar; for his gloomy predictions as to what Pussyfoot Johnson would do to the well known demon over here had the prophesies of Jeremiah, of Holy Writ, looking like a real estate's prospectus.

Pussy Overturns Tipple.

The Evening News followed up with a cartoon by Poy—the kingpin of the pencil boys over here—on the front page. It represented a kitten wearing a Methodistical tie and silk hat tipping over the "mug of bitter" of the honest British worker while he was engrossed in his newspaper, and it was entitled "Pussyfoot."

Perhaps, in the first analysis, the joke is on the correspondent of Universal Service, whose office is one floor above that of Pussyfoot Johnson. The correspondent had hidden in the so-called "life" of Mr. Johnson, had talked with Mr. Johnson, knew he was some sort of a prohibitionist person—and let it go at that. So the correspondent had a "beat" pulled off under his very nose.

Editors of To-Day.

Mr. R. D. Blumenfeld and the "Daily Express."

In a quiet corner of the smoking-room of the Carlton Club there is to be seen on most afternoons a spare-built, dark, middle-aged man quietly chatting to a circle of friends.

"Might be" a Doctor.

He is editor of the Daily Express, but a stranger might easily mistake him for a doctor, since he has "the Harley Street manner," or the capacity of diagnosis without betraying his thoughts.

Mr. Ralph David Blumenfeld was born fifty-five years ago, the son of an American newspaper proprietor, so that he claims hereditary connection with the Press.

Early associations naturally directed his boyish ambitions towards journalism, but he was destined to wear the sword before taking up the pen, and entered West Point Military Academy, where, as a cadet, he occupied the room which was once the study of Stonewall Jackson.

An American Cavalry Officer.

He received his commission in a cavalry regiment when eighteen years of age and took part in many exciting incidents in the West and down South, but although he liked the service he availed himself of every opportunity to write for the papers, and at twenty he was a regular contributor to the Chicago Herald.

Those were the days when the late James Gordon Bennett—owner of the New York Herald—was at the zenith of his whirlwind career and eagerly searching for men of ability.

Young Blumenfeld attracted his attention, and within a surprisingly short time the future editor of the Daily Express was filling a responsible position in New York under the eye of his great chief.

In Fleet Street.

Promotion came rapidly, and perhaps the youngest arrived at the turning-point of his life when Gordon Bennett—familiarly known as the Commodore—decided to make his protégé the London correspondent of the New York Herald.

It was an occasion needing courage, as the Commodore spared neither himself nor servant, and the London Correspondent soon realized that he was "up against it."

He contrived to worry through until 1898, meanwhile making a host of friends in Fleet Street, where he had gained the distinction of a nickname, and has been known ever since as "R. D. B."

The following year he became superintendent of his paper, a position in American journalism which, fortunately, has no precise equivalent over here, since it is one of those highly-paid tantalizing offices where constant toil and anxiety deprive the holder of any form of enjoyment other than the sense of power.

A "Forlorn Hope."

R. D. B. joined Lord Northcliffe as news editor of the Daily Mail in 1900, when the South African War provided the great "Harmsworth" publication with opportunities which naturally appealed to the enterprising and instincts of an American pressman.

His success on the Mail brought him a tempting offer from Sir Arthur Pearson, who had launched the Daily Express.

At that time there was no comparison between the two papers, but R.

D. B. is never daunted by what others regard as a forlorn hope.

He did not actually occupy the editorial chair till 1904—the beginning of the transitory period when Fleet St. became alive to the change in public taste.

People were tired of ponderous lead-ers-writers and spiteful partisans. They demanded human stories brightly told and convincing photographs of passing events.

Fierce Competition.

Lavish expenditure was inevitable to combat the fierce competition, and from 1905 to 1908 there were more London dailies striving for public favour than at any other period.

Three of these—the Standard, the Morning Leader, and the Tribune have disappeared, the last-named brilliant journalists to be unemployed. R. D. B. and others came to the rescue and created positions on the Express for a number of the Tribune staff.

The "Wastrels" Campaign.

One of the greatest triumphs of the new editor was his ruthless exposure of the L.C.C. "Wastrels," which aroused the slumbering ratepayers of London and spread amazed consternation in the ranks of those who regarded their seats of Spring Gardens as freeholds.

R. D. B. favours what he terms "rational Trades Unionism," or the right of all to demand wages and conditions consistent with decency and comfort.

His leisure is spent in what he aptly describes as "strenuous ease" at his delightful country home near Dunmow, amid his collections of antiques and art treasures.

"Through German Spectacles."

His instinct as a news caterer has prompted him to make frequent and daring innovations. On the outbreak of war he realized that the public wanted to know the German view, and a column, "Through German Spectacles," for over four years daily reflected the most striking features of the enemy Press.

How these papers were procured is a secret known only to R. D. B. and the mysterious little man who prepared these remarkable translations, each one of which is duly authenticated by the originals.

Those who visit 8, Shoe Lane, have seen large placards displayed bearing one word—"ACCURACY"—a constant reminder to the staff of R. D. B.'s first rule in journalism.

So thoroughly is this drilled into the reporters that the accuracy of the Express war correspondents' despatches convinced the higher German Command that Percival Phillips was behind their lines, and orders were issued for his discovery and arrest.

For "The Cabman's Wife."

Another rule at the Daily Express is—"write so that the cabman's wife can understand it," but, curiously enough, the editor is most particular as to style and strongly resents the use of words such as "upon," "until," "commence," "unique," and other trifling corruptions.

He is a stern disciplinarian, without pity for those who fall to play the game, but ever ready to assist the deserving.

"Sir, It Is Impossible!"

On Thursday, April 15th, 1773, Dr. Johnson dined at the house of General Paoli, together with Boswell, Oliver Goldsmith, and Signor Martinielli, of Florence. During the talk Johnson made a remark which may well be taken as a text, or a subject for rumination. Boswell writes:—

A person was mentioned who it was said could take down in shorthand the speeches in Parliament with perfect exactness.

Johnson: "Sir, it is impossible." Here we have the case heard and judgment given right off in the very best "there's an end on't" manner.

It was the Lord Pembroke of those days who remarked: "Dr. Johnson's sayings would not appear so extraordinary were it not for his bow-wow way." But that decisive utterance, "Sir, it is impossible," used on the occasion mentioned and on many another, comes booming down through the corridors of Time.

Shorthand in Ancient Rome.

I am not much concerned with his views about the possibility or impossibility of successful shorthand, though the history of that art—and I think it deserves the name—is not without interest. For instance, it is related by Plutarch in his "Life of Cato," that when Cato delivered his oration on the Catinarian conspiracy—

Cicero dispersed about the Senate-house several expert writers whom he had taught to make certain figures, and who did, in little and short strokes, equivalent to words, pen down all he said.

This is the first instance, so far as I know, of Parliamentary shorthand reporting, and I hall the memory of those early forerunners of the modern Press Gallery. It must have been no joke to report Cato on the Catinarian conspiracy, but as they "did pen down all he said" it is obvious that what Johnson declared to be impossible had been done about a century and a half before the Christian era.

A £10,000,000 Prize.

Of course, it is the fact that many a man other than Johnson has reached that remark, "Sir, it is impossible," about many and many a proposal. As a rule, however, this confident remark has been made about things it has been proposed to do, or things predicted, and not about that which had been done centuries before. It would be interesting to know how often anything of the nature of flying in machines has been thus dismissed, and it would be even more interesting to know what was the most recent expression of scepticism as to the possibility of such triumphs. I am led into this train of thought because of a certain paragraph from a paper which one of my friends had framed only a few years ago. He is an engineer, and he framed this bright and merry paragraph, feeling sure that before very long events would make the paragraph appear even more amusing than its light-hearted author intended it to be. It was in 1906 that the Daily Mail offered a prize of £10,000 for the first man, who flew from London to Manchester, and on November 17th, 1906, my cheery contemporary the Star published the following paragraph:—

A morning paper makes the trivial offer of £10,000 to the first aeroplane that flies from London to Manchester. Our own offer of £10,000,000 to the flying machine of any description whatsoever than flies five miles from London and back to the point of departure still holds good. One offer is as safe as the other.

Here we have the "Sir, it is impossible" decision given not in a bow-wow way of Sam Johnson, but in a lighter style. The meaning is obvious, and it was because of the merry certainty of the writer that the thing was done, that induced my engineering friend to preserve that paragraph and to await events.

Nor had he to wait very long, as the £10,000 prize was won on April 23rd, 1910, less than four years after the much larger offer. And this was toward the end of 1906, not very long ago, though anything that took place before August, 1914, seems so far removed from us as to belong to medieval times. It was, however, long before 1914 that the London to Manchester prize was won, and the other and larger stake was in danger. Probably in 1906 most of the people who read the light-hearted paragraph took the view of its writer, and regarded the aeroplane experiments as cranks and faddists. I cannot say when I began to take them seriously, but I confess there was a time when I thought that heavier-than-air flying machines could never be made to keep up in the air more than a minute or two. But I would never have offered ten millions against a "flying machine of any description whatsoever" doing a trip of ten miles. The other day I was reading a learned treatise written in 1845 on the history of Aeronautics, and was amazed at the adventurous spirit shown by some of the pioneers—John O'London's Weekly.

Sunkist Orange
Marmalade.

Sunkist Orange Marmalade is a so-called sweet marmalade, but distinctively individual in its sweetness. It provides the flavor that most people who nourish a sweet-tooth probably will prefer.

The citric acid of the orange tempers the sweetness and imparts the tang that distinguishes real marmalade from the usual preserves and other marmalades.

Everyone who likes preserves of any kind will be delighted with this luscious marmalade.

Sunkist Grapefruit
Marmalade.

For the lovers of "bitter" marmalade our Scotch connoisseur-cook makes a limited quantity of Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade after a special recipe which she brought from Scotland.

Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade has that piquant tang that the connoisseur always seeks in marmalade.

Sunkist Orange Jelly.

Sunkist Orange Jelly is distinguished from ordinary jelly by a very delicate tang combined with the full flavor of fresh-picked oranges.

It is a stiff, clear jelly of beautiful, natural color. It contains oranges, lemons, water and pure sugar. Nothing else is added.

This jelly is also characterized by the real "home taste." You will want to serve it often.

Where Smoking is a Crime.

WHIFFS THAT MAY CAUSE DEATH.

Giving judgment in an action arising out of the dreadful explosion at the Rainham Chemical Works, Lord Justice Scrutton said that the fire was probably due to reckless smoking by a workman. Smoking by workmen in the most dangerous circumstances was, he said, notoriously common. His lordship had very good grounds for his assertion. Not many years ago a hat factory at Denton was blown up and utterly destroyed through a workman smoking. The man appears to have gone with a lighted cigarette in his mouth into a room charged with petrol vapour.

All through the war the trouble was to prevent workers smoking in munition factories. In most cases every man was searched for tobacco or matches on entering the works, but some hid their tobacco in the most ingenious way.

Many of the worst of modern colliery explosions have probably been caused by reckless smoking. Men go into the "gob," the old doused workings, to enjoy a pipe, and if there is gas about they do not live to tell the tale. The worst of it is that other lives besides their own are sacrificed. Smoking is forbidden behind the scenes in theatres. Quite rightly, for the place is full of inflammable stuff.

While the amount of tobacco smoked increases year by year, the number of places in which smoking is forbidden also increases. One of the latest is the Vatican at Rome. The Pope refuses to allow any smoking in that vast palace.

Perhaps the most remarkable case is that of a man who, whenever he sees a picture of a haystack, immediately proceeds to sneeze his head nearly off!

Splendid Record of Grand Falls
R. C. Academy.

Things seem to be coming our way in this Paper Town this season. On top of the result of the first series of games for the baseball cup, comes the great news from the C.H.E. Exams. The writer is not acquainted with the list from the High School, but the success of the Roman Catholic Academy appears marvellous. The total of thirty-one pupils who entered passed. Of these, seven won scholarships and nine honors.

Four Jubilee Scholarships of $100 were won by—Intermediate—James V. Nugent with a total of 785 marks; Mary E. Walsh, with a total of 763 marks.

Preliminary—George C. Power, total marks 826. Hilda M. Walsh, total marks 786.

Three other Scholarships of $10 each were won by Patk. F. Nugent, total marks, 764; Joseph M. Lamb, total marks, 757; Margaret M. O'Flynn, total marks, 738.

Honours Intermediate were two out of four entered.
In the Preliminary Grade there were seven honours out of ten entered.

The Distinctions were as follows:
Intermediate—Latin, two out of four; Arithmetic, three out of four; Algebra, three out of four; English Literature, three out of four; Shorthand, two out of four; British History two out of four.

Preliminary—Arithmetic, nine out of ten; History, five out of ten; Geography, two out of ten; Algebra, six out of ten; Latin, seven out of ten; Shorthand, seven out of ten; Geometry, six out of ten.

As the marks for the drawing papers have not yet come to hand, the total for each candidate cannot be given.

We are sure that the wonderful success of this school will be a source of great satisfaction to the many friends of the candidates all over the country. On looking back over a period of 23 years when the writer first saw the forest around what is now the town of Grand Falls, one's mind can hardly grasp the fact that such a change could have taken place in such a short time. Then, except for the occasional presence of some of the employees of a small lumber concern operating at what is now Botwood, the only inhabitants were the wild animals. To-day the town is a marvel of industry and mechanical ability, and its future is assured when we see such splendid promise in the youth of both sexes.

In congratulating the pupils of this splendid Academy, we must in justice to them and their parents not forget how this magnificent result has been achieved. Coming as they did from settlements all over the country, they were placed by Providence under the guidance of a series of teachers who were devoted and enthusiastic exponents of their art. To the teachers, Mr. Young, who worked here for a couple of years, prior to enlisting in the Regiment, where he was wounded, and especially to the present professor, Mr. Conran, who is one of those born to the profession, the writer begs to extend his heartiest congratulations. Their efforts, however, could not have succeeded nearly so well were they not ably and self-sacrificingly (if I may use the word) seconded by the Sogarth Aroon, the true Father of his flock, Rev. W. Finn. As in all their works for Grand Falls, every assistance possible was also always extended by the officials of the Company. The Manager, Mr. Scott, and the Superintendent, Mr. Thos. F. Judge, as well as the other officials, have always courteously placed at the disposal of this school as well as the others any assistance in their power. We trust this is but a prelude of greater things to come in the future.—Com. Grand Falls, Sept. 5, 1919.

Pictures That Make Him Sneeze.

Some people sneeze for curious reasons. There is a clergyman who can never cross the road on a very hot day without carrying an umbrella. If he does, he is immediately taken with a violent fit of sneezing. Another man is similarly affected by exposure to bright gas-light.

Clergymen seem to be particularly sensitive in this direction. Another wearer of the cloth used to sneeze whenever he came near to a dead hare. A similar case is that of a young man who could never go near a horse without sneezing.

Peculiar odours have to be known to cause sneezing. A chemist's wife always sneezed when ipecacuanha was being used in the shop, and another person always found sneezing necessary whenever he entered a room where there were violets. And there is an account of a well-known physician who was fond of chocolates, but could never eat one without suffering spasms of sneezing.

Perhaps the most remarkable case is that of a man who, whenever he sees a picture of a haystack, immediately proceeds to sneeze his head nearly off!

Foreign Countries' Absurd Punishment.

In the Central Prison at Constantinople Colonel W. Nickerson of the Army Medical Corps has just found a girl who had served three years of a sentence of a hundred years' imprisonment.

In this country the heaviest sentence that can be inflicted (is penal servitude for life, but in practically every case such a sentence is reconsidered at the end of fifteen years, and usually the prisoner is released.

Yet there are other countries besides half-savage Turkey where frankly foolish and impossible sentences are not uncommon. Italy is a case in point. The tribunal of Modica in Sicily had before them a man called Lupu Salvatore of Comiso who, passing himself off as a lawyer, had committed no fewer than sixty-three separate frauds.

He was found guilty upon all the different counts, and sentenced to three years' imprisonment on each, bringing his total sentence to 189 years. Had the court decided upon the maximum sentence the aggregate terms of his imprisonment would have been 630 years.

Two of the Mafia criminals tried at Taranto, just before the war, received sentences of sixty and ninety years respectively.

It was a child murderer in Germany, who was tried at Griefswald in 1906, who received the strangest punishment on record. He was sentenced to be beheaded twice, then to receive two years' imprisonment, and to suffer loss of all his political rights—in other words to be outlawed.

How 'Twas Written.

The late William Harris, Sr., one of the shrewdest men in American theatricals, was sadly in need of a play a few years ago. And he wanted it from Bayard Veiller. This young author had written "Within the Law," and then on several other attempts had fluffed. Theatrical men figured Veiller had shot his bolt in "Within the Law" but not so Mr. Harris. He sent for Veiller.

"Bayard," Harris said to the author, "I want a play—a big play. I know you can write it. Here's a check for $1,000. Get out of New York. Go anywhere and don't come back until you have the play I'm after."

Veiller went and didn't return for months. Eventually he came, and in a short time "The Thirteenth Chair" appeared on the stage. It was Veiller's supreme triumph. It ran for more than a year in New York, and now it has been produced as a motion picture. The production was made by the Acme Pictures Corporation, and will be distributed by Pathe.

Leonce Perret, noted French director, made the adaptation. Creighton Hale, Yvonne Delva and Marie Shotwell have the principal parts.
