CHAPTER XVII.

"No, no, I will not have that," he said, with grave playfulness. "No pitying me, please, when you have endured such anguish. And I will tell you nothing until you have finished your story, so go on, my darling."

She then told him of the advent of the strange doctor.

He stopped her and looked thoughtful. "Describe him to me, dearest," he said. "His face and eyes, his very expression, if you can."

She did so, and he looked puzzled. "No," he mused, "I cannot recognize the picture. Go on, my darling."

Then, hesitating, she told of her illness, then, with tears, of the dreadful epidemic, the daily funerals, the perpetual mourning.

"At last she came to the scene in her own room, when, overhearing the doctor and Miss Lucas talking, she had incautiously shown them that she had unmasked them."

"They sprang on me," she said, "and forced me down, a handkerchief was pressed against my face and I remembered no more, until—"

Clarence rose to his feet, his face livid with passion.

"Oh, Heaven!" he cried, "grant me this prayer that I may live to punish them? Oh, what vengeance, mortal can take, will outweigh this crime? The brutes, the demons, to dare to lay a finger on you. Oh, my darling, my darling!"

With his revolver grasped in his hand he dropped at her feet, writhing in the tempest of his rage.

Lilian's alarm was great.

"Not a word more! I will not tell you a word more if you are not calm," she said. "Oh, Clarence, if you love me—"

With an effort he restrained himself, and holding up his hand with a gesture that she might go on, sat like a statue gazing at the fire, but with quivering lips and a hand whose veins rose like knotted cords.

"The next thing I remember was waking, as it were, under a heavy covering, of waking and feeling that I was under something and that I was in some vehicle. I lay still for some time, and then gained courage to cry out.

Clarence almost started to his feet again.

"By Heaven!" he exclaimed, "I heard you!"

"Heard me!" she repeated; "how could you?"

"No matter, darling, go on; I will tell my story presently and you will see."

"When I cried out, some one, I could not see whom, came and gave me some water. I would not drink it, I said, until they told me where my father was, and took me to him. The man in a gruff voice bade me be quiet, and told me that I was being taken to Sir Ralph Melville, if that was whom I meant, and advised me if I wished to see him to remain silent. Thinking it best to obey, for I felt that there had been some foul play, and that I was in some Sultan's power, I remained quiet, but feeling very ill and weary, tried to turn. To my horror, I found that I could not move a single limb."

"I think I must have fainted after that, for the next thing I remember is finding myself lying on that couch, with an old woman standing beside me. She gave me a glass of wine, forced it through my lips, and helped me to sit up. When I did so I saw—" he calm, my own, be calm—that I was dressed in grave clothes, swathed like a corpse. Then as if with a flash of lightning, the truth burst upon me. They had drugged us both, papa and me, and passed us off for dead!

"I spoke to the woman, who commenced to release me from the dreadful things, but got no answer. I implored her to tell me where papa was, and offered her money—a hundred, a thousand pounds—if she would take me to him."

"Then when I had gone on for half an hour, and was crying till I thought my heart would break, she laughed, and pointed to her lips and ears. She meant that she was deaf and dumb!"

Clarence started.

"Deaf and dumb!" he repeated. "It is the same old woman. Go on, my darling!"

And he kissed her hand that trembled in his.

"For days and days I never saw anyone but her. I spent those days in walking up and down the room, in crying and praying."

"Sometimes, when I thought of papa and fancied that they might treat him cruelly, being a man, I feared I should go mad—don't groan so, darling, it is all over now, I know, for I feel, as if Heaven had whispered it, that you have been sent to save him and me. At last, after seven days, a man entered the room with the old woman. I knew him at a glance, although he was dressed so differently, and had light, golden hair, and was in the garb of a priest. Before he could get into the middle of the room I pointed my finger at him, and said:

"I know you, you bad man; you are Dr. Bromwell, and a scoundrel. Where is my father, Sir Ralph Melville?"

"He smiled, just as the false doctor had smiled at the Hall, and came forward with his hand stretched forth.

"Peace, my daughter!" he said; "cast for the the unclean spirit, I have brought two lowly women to administer to you."

"I laughed him to scorn, and told him if he dared to come near me I would strike him with the chair, and, oh, Clarence, I think I should, for my despair gave me such strength that I had lifted it up above my head and stood ready to hurl it at him. Perhaps he knew I should, for he drew back and opening the door, said, to some one outside:

"Enter, sisters."

"And two nuns entered with a basket between them. Giving them some directions, he went away. I kept the chair near my hand and they waited until I was calmer and looked less angry, then came nearer and said that they were to make some clothes like theirs for me, and got out some materials. I asked them what for, and assured them I wouldn't wear them if they made them. They hushed me and soothed me like a child, and looked at each other significantly. They were very quiet, and by degrees, I learned from them that I was to be a nun, that my father was an old gentleman of great property and a Catholic, and that he had consigned me to the care of a Catholic priest to prepare me for a French nunnery, despairing to effect anything with my refractory temper himself. As I listened to the plausible tale my heart sank within me. I felt that if they succeeded in so carrying me from England I should never see papa again. I told them that the man who accompanied them was no Catholic priest, but a designing scoundrel.

"They smiled pityingly and looked shocked. They had been warned that I should talk wildly and tell falsehoods of the good father, and they worked on, taking no more notice of my ravings, as they called my tears and supplications, than they did of the dumb walls. They made the clothes and left them, telling me that I was to be conveyed to France in a few days' time.

"Since then I have seen nothing of the man, doctor or priest, or whatever he may be, and I have been expecting each day to be carried away.

Clarence rose softly and wound his arm round her waist. He could not trust himself to speak, and her sobs broke the silence.

It was marvelous how careful he was to avoid all mention of the scene attending his dismissal, and to speak of her father's name, when he had occasion, with a tone of deep affection and respect. But he avoided Sir Ralph's name as much as possible, for at every mention of it, Lilian's tears broke out afresh, and as concisely as he could, he went over the incidents with which the reader is already acquainted.

"And now," said he, "to unravel this dreadful plot and punish the plotters."

And then they fell to discussing this and discussing that point, Lilian telling of her suspicions of Kate Lucas being the female she had seen in the garden, talking with the false doctor, and Clarence dissecting the strange facts connected with the fortune supposed to have been left him, and his subsequent imprisonment.

DEPRAVITY.

DEPRAVITY.

Blow flows around like water from voters shot and torn, and grisly tales of slaughter confront us every morn; some pilgrim eloped to ribbon and robbed of his doobloons; what think the stately gibbons, what say the proud baboons? "The human tribes and nations are out with knives and guns; don't say that we're relations of such bloodthirsty ones. We monkeys in the jungle, whom you have doubtless met, may sometimes both and bungle the rules of etiquette. We have not all the graces that human people know, and on our mist faces unseemly whiskers grow. But we have rigid morals, though awkward be our port; we don't indulge in quarrels or murder just for sport. We strive to live together as friendly neighbors should, and you may tell us whether this rule of life is good. But oh, these human beings, they're always up in arms! We hear their hully-cheetings, excursions and alarms. They're shot and knited and wounded for any old excuse; the kangsters' warcyry's sounded, and death has broken loose. The hosts of killers sally from every dark retreat, there's murder in the alley, there's slaughter in the street. They say we are related to raging beasts like these; by savants it's been stated till it's become a wheeze. We patiently meander along our destined way; we stand a lot of slander before we seek a fray. But when the yarn is bruted that we are big to men, denial must be tooted again and yet again. In highly moral fashion we always have behaved; we are not slaves to passion, and we are not depraved."

PEARS' Used in the best circles.

Just Folks. By EDGAR GUEST.

THE BATTERED DREAM SHIP.
Oh, once I sent a ship to sea, and Hope was on her bow, But Time has brought her back to me and Wisdom's painted bow; Yes, Time has brought me many things, and some of them were good, And some of them were failure's stings I little understood.

When Hope set forth the dream was fair, the sea was calm and blue, I knew men met with storms out there and had to right them through; But still I dreamed my ship would ride and weather every blow. For hope tings many a truth aside which Wisdom comes to know.

The storms have come with bitter cold, I've prayed unto the Lord, I've had false cargoes in the hold and thrown them overboard; I've trimmed my sails to meet the gale, I've cut my journey short. With battered hull and tattered sail at last I've come to port.

'Tis not enough to hope and dream for storms will surely rise, However smooth the sea may seem, 'tis there disaster lies; And I have learned, from time and stress, that those who ride the wave and come at last to happiness, must suffer and be brave.

She Is Willing to Answer Letters From Women Asking About Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Halifax, Nova Scotia.—"I am a maternity nurse and have recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to many women who were childless, who to women who need a good tonic. I am English and my husband is a screen, and he told me of Lydia E. Pinkham while in England. I would appreciate a copy or two of your little books on women's ailments. I have one which I keep to lend. I will willingly answer letters from any woman asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. S. M. COLEMAN, 24 Ulnaick Street, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Could Not Sleep Nights
Dublin, Ont.—"I was weak and irregular, with pains and headaches, and could not sleep nights. I learned about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by reading the letters in the newspapers, and tried it because I wanted to get better. I have got good results from it and I feel a lot stronger and am not troubled with such bad headaches as I used to be and am more regular. I am gaining in weight all the time and I tell my friends what kind of medicine I am taking. You may use my letter as a help to others."—Mrs. JAMES RACRO, Box 12, Dublin, Ontario.

Strike of French Coal Miners in the Saar

Prospects of a Settlement of U.S. Miners Grievances Less Hopeful—Northern Outposts May be Short of Supplies Through Loss of Bayeskimio.

GENERAL STRIKE IN FRENCH MINE.
SARREBOURG, France, July 27. A general strike started to-day in coal mines here.

FEAR STRIKE OF AMERICAN MINERS.
WASHINGTON, July 27. Due partially to insistent renewal by the miners of demands for the check-off system, advices reaching Washington state that prospects of a coal settlement at Atlantic City are less hopeful than before. Growing apprehension is felt that the strike will develop.

KING AND PREMIER READY TO ASSIST.
LONDON, July 27. It is understood that Premier Baldwin will devote personal attention to the threatened strike of British coal miners. King George V being kept closely informed of every move in the negotiations, which seek to avoid the crisis, and it is announced that His Majesty will hold himself in readiness to give any assistance within his power should such be required.

FUNERAL SERVICES AT WASHINGTON.
WASHINGTON, July 27. The funeral services for William Jennings Bryan will be held on Friday afternoon and burial will take place at Arlington.

WILL BE BURIED IN VIRGINIA.
DAYTON, Tenn., July 27. The body of Wm. Jennings Bryan, who died suddenly here yesterday, will move on a special railroad car from Dayton to Washington on Wednesday morning. Burial of the political and religious leader will be in Arlington National Cemetery, Virginia, at a time to be determined later, it was said. The body is lying in state to-day.

THE BAYESKIMO'S LOSS MAY DELAY MATTERS.
MONTREAL, July 27. The sinking of the Hudson Bay Company's supply ship Bayeskimio in Ungava Bay, on July 23, news of which was picked up by radio stations last night, may result in a shortage of supplies at some of the far northern posts on the Labrador and Ungava Coasts, and isolated trading stations in Hudson's Bay and James' Bay. The S.S. Nascopee, which rescued the passengers and crew of the Bayeskimio from the barren coast near Port Burwell, has her own round to make in the Arctic Ocean around Baffin Land, and further north, and the necessity for relief visits to the posts on the Bayeskimio's beat will possibly hinder the Nascopee from competing her round. The latter is now racing round posts, delivering supplies before resuming her scheduled journey to Baffin Land.

THE BRITISH LABOR CONFERENCE.
LONDON, July 27. A conference of representatives of the Labor Party of Great Britain and the Dominions opened to-day and will continue this week. Right Hon. J. Ramsay MacDonald, former Premier, presided at the opening. The Dominions as a policy of building a high wall against foreigners and a lower wall against Great Britain, but the latter never so low as to prevent the Dominions from extending their own industries.

QUIET IN THE RIFF.
FEZ, July 27. Calm reigns all along the front in Morocco where French troops are facing the rebel Rifian tribesmen. The Rifis are understood to have abandoned all idea of offensive, and the French are not ready to begin a move with a view to bringing the forces of Abd-el-Krim to terms.

S.S. RESTLESS ASHORE.
HALIFAX, July 27. The steamer Restless, owned by

W. N. MacDonald, Sydney, went ashore at Forchu, near Louisburg, this afternoon. The crew are safe. The Restless was formerly a private yacht and later used by the Government as a revenue cutter. She is now in commercial service for her owner.

SAAR STRIKE AFFECTS SEVENTY THOUSAND WORKERS.
SAARBRACKEN, Germany, July 27. A general strike of the Saar miners has broken out over the question of wages, affecting seventy thousand workers.

MINE OWNERS CONSENT TO WITHDRAW NOTICE.
LONDON, July 27. Proof of the Government's determination to leave nothing undone to effect a peaceful issue of the mining dispute was afforded yesterday when after a conference with the Trade Union Committee Premier Baldwin decided to take a leading role in the negotiations. The Ministry will be in a sort of permanent session through the week, and ready at any moment to deal with the trouble. A new turn of affairs seems to have been affected already, for it is unofficially stated that the mine owners now will consent to withdraw their notices of a termination of the existing agreement and their new wage proposals. This demand on the part of the country voiced by the Press and many public men is so insistent that the mine owners would likely be in bad odour if they continued to refuse, and if this report proves correct the way will be paved for success at the conference of the miners and owners Wednesday.

THE NAVAL PROGRAMME.
LONDON, July 27. Right Hon. W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty, has supplied Parliament with details of the proposed naval construction up to and including 1929-30. During the current year four cruisers will be laid down belonging to class A and one of class B will be built. The three succeeding years will have one class A and two class B each. The programme provides for twenty-seven submarines of the O type and of the fleet type, five gunboats and a number of other auxiliaries. The total estimated cost is fifty-eight million pounds.

SUGGESTS BRITAIN SHOULD GIVE UP GIBRALTAR AND SUEZ CANAL.
WILLIAMSTON, Mass., July 27. "Britain's hold on the Mediterranean Sea is endangering the very life of Italy," Count Antonio Cippico, an Italian Fascist Senator, said last night in his second lecture at the Institute of Politics here. One of President Wilson's fourteen points dealing with the freedom of the seas had foundered in the Atlantic, the speaker added. Picturing his country as dependent for existence upon the good will of those holding Gibraltar and the Suez Canal, Count Cippico urged that steps be taken in time to secure just settlement between the civilized nations on a basis likely to insure peace.

St. Joseph's Parish Garden Party and Regatta

St. Joseph's Parish Committee met last night to make arrangements for the garden party and races, which will be held at Quidi Vidi on Wednesday, August 12th. President Hon. W. J. Higgins was in the chair. After the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed, Rev. Fr. Pippy announced that he had interviewed the presidents of the boat clubs with regard to their co-operation and had been assured that they would do all in their power to help the matter along, placing the race boats at the disposal of the committee. Father Pippy also announced that Major Cashin had consented to act on the committee. Mr. Garret Brownrigg, President of the Cadet Boat Club, was added to the committee. A discussion took place on the Old Commodore Race, which was so interesting and closely contested in St. Joseph's Regatta last year. A Committee, consisting of Messrs. P. Brown, T. Kearsey and E. Churchill, has been appointed to look after this, and the Secretary of the committee will interview those in charge of the different organizations, with a view to assigning crews together, and asking them to co-operate with the above mentioned. For the Amateur Race, it is practically certain that the three crews rowing in the Annual Regatta will enter and it was suggested that a fourth crew might be formed from amongst the mercantile crews that are rowing next week. This was considered a splendid suggestion as amongst the mercantile crews are some excellent oarsmen and all of them will be eligible to row in the Amateur Race. A crew formed from the four mercantile crews would be able to put up a fine showing. The Regatta Committee will be asked to let the grandstand and buoys stand, after next Wednesday's event, and it was announced that all the medals have been ordered and will be in readiness on the required date. Lists of the various races of the programme will be made and permission of the boat clubs asked to post these in the houses for the information of crews interested. After the discussion of much other minor business, adjournment was taken until Thursday, August 6th.

Dear Mrs. Morris.—As members of the Ladies' Aid and W.M.S. of Lower Island Cove we have met this evening to say farewell to you, our much esteemed President of both Societies. We very deeply regret the necessity for your unexpected departure, and wish to assure you that your services, given so unsparsingly, are not entirely unappreciated by us. We shall not soon forget your work among us during the past four years, your untiring zeal in the cause of Missionary work as well as in the Home Department. The younger mothers of this community especially owe a deep debt of gratitude to you for your unequalled work in the Primary Sunday School. May their children never forget while memory lasts the lessons of truth and beauty you have taught them. Your words will remain in the memories of all with whom you have come in contact, and we venture to hope that we may retain a place in some small corner of your heart. We ask your acceptance of this Life Member's certificate of the W.M.S. with pin, which in but a small way indicates the measure of our appreciation of your labour. As you leave us, and go forth to new scenes and new friends, we can

To the Members of the W.M.S. and Ladies' Aid Society of Lower Island Cove.
Dear Friends—In my labours among you I have found joy, and it gives me additional pleasure to know that my services have been so sincerely appreciated by you. If I have been successful in any small degree, in helping along the work of the Kingdom, it has been because of your hearty co-operation, and the blessing of Him whose approval I have always sought—"Whose I am, and whom I serve." In my work among the children I have been fully repaid by the results seen in their promotion to higher classes. It is only just to the parents of these children to say that their interest in the work and co-operation with the teacher have helped greatly to bring about the success attained. I can assure you that I place a high value upon your appreciation of my services, as shown by your gift of Life Membership in the W.M.S. with pin. I heartily reciprocate your good wish that the blessing of God may be with you. SUSIE MORRIS. Lower Isld. Cove, July 1, 1925.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

HE THOUGHT JANE WAS SATISFIED.

Some neighbors of ours were showing us their new car recently. They have had a flivver for two years; this spring they turned it in for an open car of a more expensive make, and it was that car they were displaying.

We admired the shiny instrument board with its fascinating dials and its clock and its cigar lighter. We felt the softness of the cushions and inspected its pretty grey upholstery.

The husband beamed at the car and at his wife alternately. "Jane hated the flivver," he said with obvious satisfaction in having satisfied Jane. "She doesn't like to go to the bridge club in it because none of the other women have a flivver. She can hardly wait for the next meeting to go in this."

"Yes," said Jane. "I think it's too sweet for words. Wasn't it dear of David to decide we could have it? We might have bought a... (naming a slightly less expensive car) but one reason I wanted this is because they say they have such a good turn in value and I hope next year we can get a good price for this and turn it in on a closed car."

He Looked Frightened.

You should have seen David's face. The shine went out of it and a look almost of fear took its place. It was evident that that was the first time he had heard that. And it was also evident that the realization that Jane was already reaching forward from her new toy for one more expensive gave him that conic fear that even the bravest men sometimes feel.

Three years ago those people had no car at all. They went about on trolleys and trams and in their friends' cars. Then they bought the flivver with some trepidation as to expense. Jane loved it for awhile. Then began the pressure of which David's words about the bridge club gave an unconscious picture. Now with the new car only a week old, Jane is reaching out again.

A Wonderful Waster.

David works hard, altogether too hard. Jane complains sometimes because he stays at that horrid old office in the evenings. But what can he do? He simply adores his pretty, clever, popular wife. He wants to give her whatever she wants and she is a marvellously good waster.

Each climb up gives her vistas of new climbs. I don't think she ever teases or nags David when she wants anything. She is too clever for that and too essentially sweet and devoted to him. But she just lets him know that she wants it and that knowledge pushes him on and on.

Of course there are women who make their husbands by pushing them that way. But I think there are more women who break them.

Some men need their ambitions stimulated, but more men need to have the economic pressure which any man must feel who has made himself the living bulwark between want and one or several people made as light as possible.

"I tried to get her what she wanted"—I wonder how many men who, worn out by work and money anxiety, succumb to some disease, have a right to have that printed on their tombstones.

Industrial Possibilities With Greater Initiative

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—Your editorial headed "Our Salmon" in your issue of July 23rd has interested me very much indeed. I had read with very deep interest an account of an interview with Mr. Chambers as published in the Trade Review of recent date and the subject has been arousing some very deep feelings in my breast. Mr. Chambers is to be thanked most sincerely for his observations and from my knowledge of the man by slight personal contact but chiefly from folks who know his high reputation in the west I view his expressions of opinion on our salmon supplies with the utmost respect. He has certainly brought a real live industrial possibility to our attention and there are no two ways about it but that your advice contained in your words "The remarks of Mr. Chambers are of sufficient importance to direct greater attention to this fishery and to justify a thorough investigation into its possibilities"—should be taken and acted upon promptly and properly having regard chiefly to the possible earning power of the people to whom this national source of wealth belongs. This industry represents a vast source of employment and the added wealth to Nfld. from this or any of her resources must come in the distribution of wages to the people who will build up comfortable homes and become live consumers of all other Nfld. products and who becoming property owners and good consumers will also become real contributors to the exceedingly great and onerous taxation of nine and a half million dollars per year. We often speak of our wealth of resources, but do we stop to think of the practical process by which our resources become wealth for Newfoundland? It must be derived through labour or employment and only becomes useful national wealth when these workmen convert it into homes, communities, towns, cities, roads, railroads, buildings, schools, factories, machinery, tools and all other materials and arrangements by which a happy, contented and economic system of social life is established. The basis of all wealth is labour and employment that is productive, and in its last analysis our greatest resource or that of any country is work, produce and receive and spend our pay.

Now, sir, the deeper feelings that have been aroused in my breast are derived perhaps from a pride (perhaps a false one) in my nationality as a Newfoundlander and in a sense of our feebleness of originality. We seem always to sit back and wait for "something to tug up" for somebody to come in and do us we are "turning" as we used to be told when playing "blind bull" as children when we were approaching our prize. We treat all our own friends and neighbours as being "blind-folded" and treat their admonitions as so much hot air. Mr. Chambers must be amused on finding that he has to tell us, and that it is news to us, that here in our rivers and bays is abundance of labour and employment for our people. One of those days some other honest and observant visitor (and the sooner the better) will tell us of the thousand workers we should be employing to make all our short and long rubbers, the four hundred more to make all our cotton twine, the thousand or two more to make all our men, boys and childrens clothes, the two hundred more to make our caps, the two hundred more to make our hats, the five hundred more to make our shirts and drawers, the thousand more to make our boots and shoes, the several thousands more to make our stockings, the hundreds more to make our drinks and beers, the five hundred more to make our leathers, the hundred more to tan our seal skins, the three hundred more to make up bags and purses from these skins, the thousands more to make our wood into paper, the scores more to put up our cod liver oil into bottles for the world consumption, the thousands more to pack our squid, salmon and herring, the hundreds more to make our increased demands in biscuits and bread, the many hundreds more to make our butter, tobacco, nails, lumber, casks, mouldings, doors, and scores of other necessities, the hundreds more to cart, handle and transport the materials and finished products to and from our factories, and thus turn our railroad into a real paying proposition to help reduce our burden of taxation.

And the funny thing about all this is that we will not remove the hood-wink from our eyes until a friend from a foreign or outside land comes in and tells us what is most obvious to him. He who comes and brings us to the light is indeed our friend and let us hope that the near future will bring a whole shower of such helpers and beaters of this economic disease into which we have fallen and lain for an exceedingly long period.

Our own sons and daughters seem to quite readily take their places in the front ranks in the many and various trades abroad, and our own experience is that we can always stand shoulder to shoulder with Canada's best in her universities. Why then do we refuse to open up the ways and means by which this undoubted ability of our men and women can be utilised to build up our own country's industries and professions?

Our salt fish men have somehow or other persuaded themselves that there is only one industry in Nfld. and that is salt fish. They being the leaders of our public activities have cast everything in their preconceived mould.

The Telegram seems to have long ago seen the error of our ways and has struck out on the greater field of our general industries. We want a real active campaign, a sort of a drive properly organized and tuned up to a certain definite objective. I do not think it would be too much to expect to double the purchasing power by doubling the industrial earning power in two years. Let the Telegram take a strong lead, organise a big convention of all producing interests, industrial, fishery and agricultural to be held at St. John's during exhibition week and let loose a campaign that will be irresistible. Here is a place for Rotary principles: here is the place for clarity that creates that employment by which the poor may become comfortable, well fed and clothed. This is not the business of the Government it is the business of the people and the Government can then show their constructive powers by doing their proper part at the will and demand of the people.

We appeal to the Telegram to convert their lead into a positive programme it will mark the beginning of a new era for this little land we love. Yours sincerely,
H. HERMAN ARCHIBALD.

The Keppie Kid Again Makes a Big Hit

This little kid, at the popular Star last evening again won rounds of applause for herself, being obliged to respond to encores. She is certainly a little wonder and when one comes to figure her age—ten years—she is almost marvellous. Her every action denotes the finished actress, and as was stated in this paper, she has a brilliant future.

Her numbers last evening were a distinct change. Clad as a bootless street boy, and playing a Ukelele, she rendered in a captivating way, "Bare-footed Days" and in a way that won for her the admiration of all.

For to-morrow night is a complete change, as well as a change of pictures, including a State Right Special entitled, "Should She Marry An Artist?"

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

Goodness me, Little Readers! I forgot to put the little rabbits to bed in the last story. How careless of me! But we need not worry, for Lady Love the bunny boy's pretty mother, didn't wait for your Uncle Dave to telephone that it was bedtime. No, indeed. In a few minutes she looked down at her little rabbit son and whispered:

"I think it's time to go to bed, my little Bunny Sleepycake."

The next minute the tiny Cuckoo Bird opened the door of her little clock house on the wall of the neat little kitchen and sang softly:

"Stars are shining in the skies; Time to close your sleepy eyes."

"Thank you, pretty birdie," answered sweet Lady Love. "You are a faithful little weather watch. I like your song better than a ticky, tick, tick, and lifting her bunny boy in her arms, the pretty lady rabbit, carried him into the kitchen. Setting him down in the big rocker, she looked the back door and turned out the light. Then both together, hand in hand, they hopped upstairs to dreamy land, where grow bright colored lollypops and ice cream cones and candy drops.

The next morning, when Mr. Happy Sun looked in through the window to wake the little rabbit, he found him already up and dressed. As soon as the bunny boy had parted his hair down the middle of his back, he hopped into the kitchen to eat a nice breakfast of clover cereal and carrot cakes, lettuce leaf marmalade and turnip tea. Doesn't that seem good, Little Readers? No wonder your Uncle Dave likes to visit Rabbitville when such delicious food is set on the table—especially the little table in the white bungalow in the dear Old Bramble Patch. The red table cloth is dotted all over with big white roses and the tea kettle on the bright polished stove sings a song as the water boils.

"Now feed the canary and polish the front doorknob," advised Lady Love, as her little rabbit folded his knapsack.

one. I shall be busy all morning, for Cousin Cottontail is coming to lunch and the lady grasshopper postmistress," and the busy little rabbit lady took a pumpkin penny out of the old blue teapot and handed it to her little rabbit. Slipping his knapsack on his back and hanging his red-striped candy cane on his left paw, he put on his khaki cap and kissed his mother goodby.

"Don't you lose the pumpkin penny, sang the Canary Bird as the bunny boy hopped out to the Sunny Meadow. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

WOOLRIDGE-CRANE.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Anglican Church of Topsail, on June 27th, when Elsie Blanche, the youngest daughter of Mr. John Woolridge and the late Mrs. Woolridge of Trinity, became the bride of Eldred, the eldest son of Mrs. Crane and the late Mr. Crane of this city, the ceremony being performed by Rev. A. B. S. Stirling. The groom saw active service overseas, being one of the First Five Hundred. The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, W. A. Woolridge. Her gown was of celice blue ruffled satin French beaded and trimmed with marabou. Her shoes and hat were to match and she carried a mixed bouquet of carnations, sweet peas and asparagus fern. Mrs. Leslie J. Coultas acted as matron of honour and wore a gown of rosewood Canton crepe and fox fur, with shoes and bandeau of silver. Her bouquet was of mixed sweet peas and asparagus fern. The groom was supported by D. Harvey. After the ceremony the bridal party motored back to their future home, 109 Quidi Vidi Road, where a light luncheon was partaken of. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Crane bon voyage over the matrimonial sea.

Sportsmen And Gladiators

The British method of choosing and training athletes to take part in international sports has often occasioned surprise and criticism, but although victory has not always crowned their efforts, they have refused to adopt hard and fast rules, or to make a serious business of what really should be pleasure.

In our Sports column to-day appears an account of the success won by Oxford and Cambridge in the race track and field team contests with Princeton and Cornell Universities, and the striking contrast between the British athletes' go-as-you-please methods and the system followed by Americans is commented upon by a writer in the Boston Daily Globe, who shows that he has thoroughly grasped the ideas of the British sportsman, and frankly acknowledges that the American muscle bound system leaves much to be desired as far as the spirit of sport and the general effect are concerned. He says:—

After their own haphazard fashion. To be sure, the comparison has not extended all down the line. It is not made in football or baseball, because English football is different and English baseball is cricket. But it is made in three sports: in track and field athletics, in tennis, and, once in a while in rowing. On the running track and in the jumping pits the English do just as well or better. The Oxford-Cambridge tennis players now in this country have broken even so far. As for rowing, most authorities agree that only an exceptional American college crew can hope to compete with an ordinary English variety boat.

It looks very much as though we were being beaten by our own game. Our boys are made to play themselves out, with the probability that they will be played out long before the Britisher, obedient to the tradition that a man should keep himself fit.

A representative of Leeds University in England has just returned home after a tour of inspection of higher institutions in this country. His report expresses horror at our over-athletism. He found one case where "a town's butcher had been recruited as a member of the university because he had exceptional ability as a footballer." It is a wonder that he found only one. He must have failed to make inquiries at the coal mines, the boiler factories, and the lumber camps. Practically everywhere the stadium was pointed out to him with more pride than any other structure. He was told that the individual responsible for sports in a great university received more money than any academic member. No one told him about the "jackpot" subscribed by wealthy graduates to help out this stipend in the case of many a prominent football coach.

With great bulgingiceps, our college athletic system is becoming muscle-bound. There is evidence of a considerable degree of inefficiency between the ears, and besides the overtraining has reached a point where it cannot be counted on to bring victory when opposed to sport for sport's sake. It is all very well to talk about a sound mind in a sound body, but that is more English than American. We are nearing a point where a sport-mad mind is about to play havoc with an over-trained body.

Improvements at Bowring Park

His Honor the Mayor and Councilors visited Bowring Park yesterday morning and were shown through by Superintendent Canning. The Park was certainly at its best and those in charge were complimented by the city authorities on its excellent appearance. The new toilet arrangements which have just been installed were very favorably commented on. The work was performed by Mr. J. H. Lakin, plumber, with every satisfaction. The materials are the best procurable and the service is as good as could be desired. It is hoped that the public will take every care of it and we again impress on citizens to protect their property. A young lady in charge of the ladies' department and every effort will be made by the Park authorities to keep it in excellent condition. A new copper boiler has been installed in the kitchen which will greatly facilitate matters in that department.

The prizes won at the horse show at the C. of E. Orphanage Garden Party were presented at the Board of Trade Rooms last evening. Mr. R. B. Job presided and called on His Honor the Mayor to present the trophies, which he did in his usual happy manner. At the conclusion a vote of thanks to Mayor Cook was proposed by Mr. Reg. Dowden and carried unanimously. The prizes were donated by the following gentlemen: M. Walsh, W. Mitchell, Dr. Furneaux, T. H. Stevenson, M. Butler, J. C. O'Driscoll, W. Joy, J. Hookey, J. Bishop, J. In Memoriam

(Daily News).

DUNCAN TAYLOR, Carbonear.

Last night one of Carbonear's most respected citizens passed away. Duncan Taylor suffered much during recent years, but amid physical inability and the sorrow of losing his only son, he faced life with a smile; and it takes a real man to do that. With a nature "sloping on the sunny side," there was ever a kindly word, a pleasant glance, a happy story. Mr. Taylor had a large circle of acquaintances, and it is a safe assertion that every one of them was a friend. During recent years his illness assumed an acute form, and he has resided with his youngest daughter in Heart's Content. He will be laid to rest in the old Methodist cemetery of Carbonear, whither many generations of his family have been borne during the last two or three centuries. The funeral will take place at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

There remains to mourn the loss of their beloved husband and father, the widow, and two daughters, Mrs. Job Roberts, of St. John's, and Mrs. Allan Rowe, of Heart's Content; and two sisters, Mrs. George Bemister of Carbonear and Mrs. Mary L. Taylor of Chobies; and several grandchildren. The only son, Captain Augustus Taylor, one of the finest young men who commanded a foreign going vessel out of the home port was lost at sea with all hands several years ago. The passing of Duncan J. Taylor removes another of those fearless, jovial, kindly citizens, who did so much to retain for Carbonear the reputation for hospitality and comradeship, which they received as a heritage from their sires, and have passed on unimpaired to their descendants. Taylor's death will occasion many a sigh in passing tribute. His pleasant greetings and sunny smile will be missed. He served his day and generation well, the friend of all, the enemy of none. Be it ours, who knew and admired him, to recall in gratitude.

That best portion of this good man's life, His little, nameless, unremembered acts Of kindness and of love. VIATOR.

A Successful Student

By yesterday's English mail the Principal was informed that N. S. Noel of Queen's College, who a year ago passed Part I. of the General Ordination Examination of England, had at the examination held here in June successfully passed Part II. thus completing the whole examination. This, we understand, is the most searching examination taken by candidates seeking Holy Orders in any Diocese of the Anglican Church, and that a Newfoundland student can be prepared for it in this country speaks eloquently of the standard and efficiency of the work done at Queen's College.

Work Commences at New Hotel

The preliminary work in connection with the new hotel began yesterday under the direction of Mr. Cameron, superintendent of operations, and about twenty-six workmen were employed. The demolition of the old foundation was accomplished by means of dynamite, but as this was not found satisfactory, it was decided to undermine the walls and pull them down. The hotel will be rushed to completion and it is believed that it will be in readiness for visitors next summer.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES

CARDINAL BEGIN'S SUCCESSOR. ROME, July 28. The successor of Cardinal Begin, Archbishop of Quebec, who died July 18, will be the Most Rev. Paul Eugene Roy, Coadjutor Archbishop of Quebec. It is officially announced.

PRESSURE BEING BROUGHT TO BEAR ON MINE OWNERS. LONDON, July 28.

Members of the Government and others interested in the coal crisis were busy until a late hour last night and again this morning making inquiries and engaging in a discussion with a view to composing the difficulties between the mine owners and the miners, and then to prevent the strike called for the end of the week unless a new working agreement is arrived at. Premier Baldwin is to meet the mine owners this afternoon when, it is officially stated, he will appeal to them to withdraw their notices terminating the existing agreement or suspend the notices for two months, pending further investigation into mining affairs.

SECRETARY OF DOMINION AFFAIRS ON EMPIRE SETTLEMENT. LONDON, July 28.

Lieut. Col. Right Hon. C. S. Amery, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, in presenting the Dominion and Colonial estimates in the House of Commons last night, said part of the reason why the Empire Settlement Act could not be worked to its full extent, lay in the fact that public opinion overseas had not yet sufficiently grasped the effect of the settlement policy in building up national lines. Immigration, he continued, was far too often regarded by one class overseas as a means of securing cheap labor, and by another section of a potential source of labor competition. There was also an ever increasing inducement to stay at home because of our health, unemployment, and now our widowhood insurance. He suggested the consideration of a reciprocal empire arrangement to prevent these measures from exerting a retarding influence to the free movement of people within the Empire.

Grand Falls Meet

The following message has just been received from the Grand Falls sport meet:—

Delightful weather and record crowd marked the opening day's programme. The track was crowded at night. Good boxing witnessed. Pond, Shallow Jr., victors for Grand Falls. Rose and Chaney for the Guards. Honours even in tennis. E. Evans, crushed, denied, scratched. The drab people in "Babbitt," as Mary Alden, who plays Mrs. Babbitt, puts it, all have the souls of singing madrigals, until the inner life, suppressed, crushed, denied, scratched. This tragedy is a mental one, yet terribly intense in its simple background of dining room, real estate office and tennis drawing room. Many a battle scene has stirred you less. Willard Louis, whose performance of the Prince of Wales in "Beat Brummel" is one of the sensational successes of the year, plays George F. Babbitt with the double psychology Sinclair Lewis gave him. You laugh at him, then a tear comes, for you say, "He's a few, well, so am I. Here's to both of us!" Dorothy Farrum has been equally as careful in bringing over to the screen every nuance of the book. "Are the movies" really advancing to genuine interpretative art away from distortion and destruction of the great classics? Well, "Babbitt" as it reveals itself in production, is at any rate. Miss Marjorie Hutchings, again scored big in her faithful, scorching, Miss Hutchings certainly possesses an unusually beautiful voice which she uses to excellent advantage. Tonight she will render the same programme.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

July 27th—To-day fine although it did rain so hard yesterday, and indeed, is still hot to the point of discomfort. Up and meeting with Mr. Cook, the Mayor, to learn from him how he will again be a candidate at the Municipal Elections in December and whether also, that Councilor Outbridge will also stand again, although it was at one time reported that he will not. Talking with Povey this day he tells me how he did a few days since travel on a local train that went north twenty miles without stopping, which makes me ask him what frightened it being how there can be no other explanation of it. A letter from Corner Brook tells me how there are great preparations made for the opening of the Mills there, and among other things, are bringing a Brass Band from St. John's and like to be another also from Canada. My correspondent, do beg of me that I should visit there for the opening which, indeed, I shall try to do if I may take that much time from my work.

Race Boat Christening

This evening at 8 o'clock the ceremony of christening the new race-boat, Blue Peter II, will be performed at the Lakeside by Mrs. W. F. Randall, the wife of Lieut. Colonel Rendell, the officer commanding the C.C.E.C. Regatta of the various boat clubs and Regatta officials will be present as well as many other citizens interested in the event.

Trout Dying

During the past few days numerous trout have been noticed floating half dead in Long Pond and many people are wondering what is the cause. Some large size fish, evidently from Long Pond, were picked up dead in Rennie's River on Monday, and it has been suggested that an overabundance of the fish might indicate the cause.

S. P. A. Receipts

The total receipts of the S.P.A. Tag Day amounted to the large sum of $493.75; also an additional amount of $4.00, the proceeds of a little garden party held by Misses Virginia Burke and Mary Collingwood. The Association wishes to thank Miss Margaret Furlong and Mrs. W. B. Frazer, the organizers, and also the girls who sold tags.

Capt. Knocked Overboard and Drowned

The following message was received today by Deputy Minister of Customs from the Collector at St. John's:—"Schr. Gondola arrived here with 100 tons coal to the Newfoundland Whaling Co. The vessel was reported to have been knocked overboard by main boom at 4.30 o'clock Saturday evening when the vessel was about 3 miles from Marshean. No account of body."

"Babbitt" is a Strong Picture

Willard Lewis Leads Cast in Screen Version of Lewis Novel.

"Babbitt," the Warner Brothers picture which opened yesterday at the Nickel Theatre to a packed house, proved to be a faithful mirror of Sinclair Lewis' towering novel. The drab people in "Babbitt," as Mary Alden, who plays Mrs. Babbitt, puts it, all have the souls of singing madrigals, until the inner life, suppressed, crushed, denied, scratched. This tragedy is a mental one, yet terribly intense in its simple background of dining room, real estate office and tennis drawing room. Many a battle scene has stirred you less. Willard Louis, whose performance of the Prince of Wales in "Beat Brummel" is one of the sensational successes of the year, plays George F. Babbitt with the double psychology Sinclair Lewis gave him. You laugh at him, then a tear comes, for you say, "He's a few, well, so am I. Here's to both of us!" Dorothy Farrum has been equally as careful in bringing over to the screen every nuance of the book. "Are the movies" really advancing to genuine interpretative art away from distortion and destruction of the great classics? Well, "Babbitt" as it reveals itself in production, is at any rate. Miss Marjorie Hutchings, again scored big in her faithful, scorching, Miss Hutchings certainly possesses an unusually beautiful voice which she uses to excellent advantage. Tonight she will render the same programme.

Meigle From Labrador

S. S. Meigle arrived from Labrador shortly after noon, making a splendid round trip. She has four carloads of freight for here. An improvement in the fishery north of Tinker Island is looked for as fish had begun to strike in there when the ship was leaving. From Domino south there is very little doing. At Salmon Light hook and liners are doing well. From Dominion Tinker's Harbor the fishery so far has been fairly good. Salmon is reported scarce and the Meigle brought up only 85 tierces. These were shipped from Venison Island and Francis Harbour. The following passengers came: General Davis, Miss H. L. Pippy, Mrs. E. M. Chadwick, Miss D. G. Gilmore, Mrs. Walker, Walter Clothier, Mrs. B. Coolidge, R. White, wife, two children and maid, W. A. Brown, Mrs. M. Heppburn, Miss A. Whipple, Samuel Legge, Charles Pearcey, Howard Harris, D. Elliott, B. E. Manuel.

C.E.I. DEFEAT THE STAR BY 4-1.

Last night's game, which resulted in a victory for the C.E.I. over the Star by a score of 4 goals to 1, failed to draw much of a crowd, and play was not of a spectacular nature. In the first half the Star team defended the western goal and although they were in C. E. I. territory for a considerable part of the time they failed to score, chiefly owing to poor shooting.

In the second half the game improved somewhat but fifteen minutes elapsed before the C.E.I. availed of an opening and scored first goal and a few minutes later repeated the trick. This had the effect of waking up the Star players, who making an attack on their opponents' goal, managed to beat Knight and their one and only result. The C. E. I. during the balance of play again scored twice, and also secured a penalty which they failed to convert. The game ended C.E.I., 4; Star, 1.

BEAVER BOARD

We Sell "Genuine"
BEAVER BOARDS

4 feet wide and 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12 feet long.

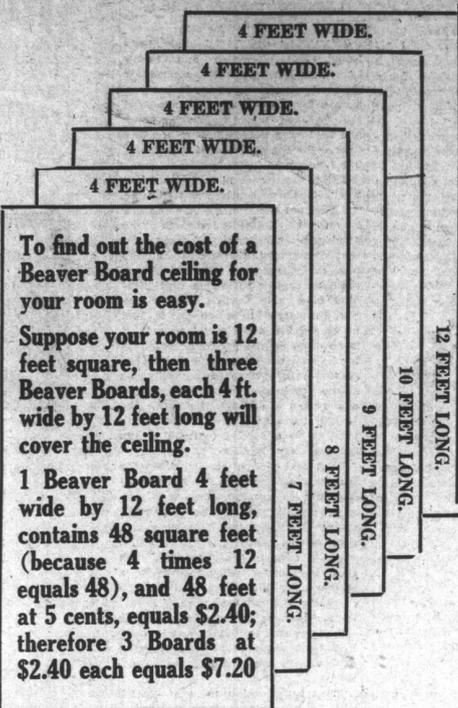

Our price is only Five Cents per square foot.

You'll know the Genuine Beaver Board by the Red Border on every board.

Boards which have not the Red Border are not Genuine Beaver Boards.

About Seven Dollars' worth of Beaver Board will cover the ceiling of an ordinary size room.

About Fifteen Dollars' worth of Beaver Board will cover the walls of your room.

To find out the cost of a Beaver Board ceiling for your room is easy.

Suppose your room is 12 feet square, then three Beaver Boards, each 4 ft. wide by 12 feet long will cover the ceiling.

1 Beaver Board 4 feet wide by 12 feet long, contains 48 square feet (because 4 times 12 equals 48), and 48 feet at 5 cents, equals $2.40; therefore 3 Boards at $2.40 each equals $7.20

To "put on" a Beaver Board ceiling, you require only THREE Beaver Boards, a hammer, a saw and a handful of nails.

Beaver Board suits the Newfoundland climate. We can show you a panel of Beaver Board which for 15 years has been exposed to raging storm and scorching sun, yet remains "good."

Supreme Court

RELD, BANKING & TRUST COEP.
REID, NEWF. CO. AND OTHERS.

SATURDAY, July 11.

When the Court resumed the hearing of the above mentioned case this morning, MR. HOWLEY continued his argument as follows:—

My Lord, might I first be allowed to express my thanks to your Lordship for the consideration which you gave to me yesterday afternoon, and also to express my appreciation of the manner in which my learned friend, counsel for the Plaintiffs, accepted my suggestion for an adjournment. I hope, my Lord, I shall be able to finish this matter during the morning session.

WALLACE LUMBER LANDS.

Your Lordship will remember that at the time of adjournment yesterday afternoon, I was asking your Lordship to consider the message No. 263, which is marked "H. B. T. 42," and is the message of April 8, 1921, from the Trust to Conroy with reference to the Wallace timber lands on the West Coast. It is alleged for the Defendants that the conduct of the Plaintiffs in suggesting, as they did in this message, that "H. D. Reid and you" (that is Conroy) "will be protected for profit on resale to Products Corporation" is misconduct on the part of the Plaintiffs, which, either by itself or taken in conjunction with other misconduct, is of such a nature as to cause a forfeiture of any rights which the Plaintiffs may have in connection with a claim for a commission under the commission agreement or in connection with the alternative claim for a quantum meruit. Now, my Lord, some evidence has been given as to this message, and the evidence given on behalf of the Plaintiffs is to the effect that the Plaintiffs did not, at the time of sending this message, expect or see where they could or would obtain any profit either to the Plaintiffs' Directors individually or to the Trust collectively out of the proposed transaction. It is further alleged that the contents of this message were discussed with Mr. H. D. Reid and arranged with him before he left London. On the other hand, the evidence for the Defence is that Mr. Reid tells us that he knows nothing about this message, that he never discussed it in any way, shape or form, and we have Mr. Conroy's evidence that, in so far as he was concerned, this suggestion of a profit on a resale to the Products Corporation was utterly unintelligible to him, that he could not understand it, he did not know to what it referred, and the only construction that he could put upon it was that it suggested a course of conduct on his part that was utterly repugnant to the nature of his obligations towards his clients. Now, my Lord, I submit that the message speaks for itself and does not offer any oral evidence either to support or rebut it. The wording of the message is, "H. D. Reid and you will be protected for profit on resale to the Products Corporation," and this is a message from the Trust, who at this time are the agents for that same Products Corporation, and those agents send a message to a Director of that Products Corporation suggesting to him that he and another director of that corporation will be protected for profit on resale to the principals of the parties who send the message, and I submit, my Lord, that it is wholly unnecessary to travel outside the language of that message in order to find that the charges of the defendants in their depositions that here is a case of misconduct on the part of the Plaintiff Company as the agent of the Newfoundland Products Corporation which is a suggestion for a betrayal of the interests of the Newfoundland Products Corporation, which interests the Plaintiff Company would have been bound to protect even if Mr. H. D. Reid and Mr. Conroy or any other individual director of the Newfoundland Products Corporation had made such a suggestion themselves, but in the light of the fact that the suggestion defrauds the Products Corporation in this transaction, at least to the extent of the profit which they had in mind to be made on resale to the company, is misconduct of the very grossest kind in so far as the Plaintiff Company is concerned with regard to the Newfoundland Products Corporation. And, my Lord, I submit that this particular matter, isolated, creates a case of such misconduct and this telegram evidences such misconduct unmistakably, that it is sufficient. But I submit further, my Lord, that when we review the whole story as I have tried to do, and when we consider the conduct of the Trust and its Directors towards the various interests that had been entrusted to them from the beginning to the end of the relationship between the Trust and the defendants, then I submit, my Lord, that this incident forms an important, and, if I may use the word, "consistent" chain in the improper conduct, the improper viewpoint of the Trust of their obligations to their principals all through the transactions.

Now, my Lord, there are several other points, more or less of a minor nature, to which I would like to refer, and the first one is with regard to the claim for services in connection with the policy of the Defendant companies with regard to the Railway and the recognition that involves what has been referred to as "the segregation of assets." In the first place, my Lord, it was claimed on behalf of the Plaintiffs KENT, J.—Just one moment, Mr. Howley, before we leave the question of misconduct, I would like you to consider that matter in connection with the letter, or arrangement that was embodied in the letter, from Mr. Conroy of the 18th November. I mean by that that you dispensed with the services of the Trust, I think in July, and in November you write the Directors of the Trust and make the arrangement which is embodied in this letter of Mr. Conroy's. You had at that time knowledge of the various facts which you allege as misconduct. Do you not think that that arrangement, coupled with your knowledge, would have some bearing on the question whether you had waived it when you entered into that arrangement, provided that the misconduct which you allege is proved.

MR. HOWLEY—I had in mind dealing with that in connection with the termination of the agency.

KENT, J.—I just put it to you at that point. I thought you were leaving the subject.

THE RAILWAY.

MR. HOWLEY—I was about, my Lord, to ask your Lordship's consideration to the question with regard to the railway and the policy with regard to the assets held by the Reid Newfoundland Company and its associated companies. Your Lordship will remember that in his opening address my learned friend made reference to the services performed by the Plaintiffs in this connection, and he stated that the value to be attached to the claim of the Plaintiffs in this respect was not so much the value of services actually performed, as a value for conception of the idea which led to the adoption of the policy and programme that was carried out in connection with these matters, and the case for the Plaintiffs was somewhat differently put by Mr. Thomson in his examination, in which, as I understand it and as my memory serves me, his point was that the value of the services performed had regard more to the carrying out of the plan that had been decided upon rather than upon the formulation of the plan itself. Now, I think, my Lord, that a consideration of the evidence and of the correspondence will show that any service that was rendered to the defendants, any service of any moment that was rendered to the defendants, was a service rendered by Mr. Thomson in his capacity as a Director of the Reid Newfoundland Company. Your Lordship will remember that Mr. Thomson remained here from the first of April, 1920, down to about the end of that year, and officiated not alone as a director of the Reid Newfoundland Company, but, if I may so express it—and I think, my Lord, that we cannot be held to be ungenerous to Mr. Thomson when I use this expression and when I refer to the frank manner in which his services were deposed to by all the witnesses for the defendants—that he remained here officiating as a Director of the Reid Newfoundland Company, and, to a certain extent in a special capacity with regard to preparing data in connection with the railway service. Mr. Conroy and Mr. H. D. Reid have not suggested that Mr. Thomson was not during this period a very useful man and a man who performed a considerable amount of service. On the contrary, they have freely and frankly stated to your Lordship that he did do a great deal of useful work while he was here, but he did that work as a Director of the Reid Newfoundland Company and as an employee under the contract made as evidenced in letter, I think No. 501, under which Mr. Reid agreed to pay him the sum of $25,000. The letter No. 501, if your Lordship will remember states Mr. Reid's agreement to pay him a further sum of $15,000, but that he was paid in accordance with an understanding with him the sum of $25,000 is not disputed by either side. Now, with regard to the question of the conception of the idea of the segregation of assets, whilst the Plaintiffs have claimed credit for this idea I do not think, my Lord, that any doubt can exist, after having heard the evidence of Mr. Reid and Mr. Conroy, particularly the evidence of Mr. Conroy, I do not think that any doubt can exist in your Lordship's mind that the plan or scheme for the segregation of the assets of the Reid Newfoundland Company was conceived before Mr. Thomson had any connection with the company at all, much more before the Trust had any connection with the company and before the Trust came into existence. Mr. Conroy has very clearly and fully explained to your Lordship the position of affairs when he came into the Reid Newfoundland Company, in 1917, in succession to the late Mr. Furlong, and he has explained that he gave consideration to the charter of the Reid Newfoundland Company and was of opinion that under that charter it was within the power of the Reid Newfoundland Co. to segregate its assets in the manner which he planned and in the manner in which it was subsequently carried out. My learned friend at some point of the proceedings made some suggestion which suggested that from his point of view he questioned whether that plan or scheme existed under the Act which constituted the Reid Newfoundland Company's charter. Well, that is another question of law and your Lordship has the Act, and if it should be necessary to pronounce upon it I have no doubt that it will receive your Lordship's consideration, but the more immediate point that I wish to make is not whether the charter gives such power to the Reid Newfoundland Company as a matter of law, but as a matter of fact, that the advice of Mr. Reid Newfoundland Company at the time was of opinion that the charter did give them the power, and whether his opinion was sound or whether it was erroneous, it was acted upon as the plan for the segregation of assets was conceived and worked out by Mr. Conroy, the legal adviser to the Reid Newfoundland Company, before there was any connection at all between Mr. Thomson and the defendants, and in the month of May, 1919, months before the incorporation of the Plaintiff Company, and very shortly after the preliminary conversations between Mr. Thomson and Mr. Reid, which led to the associations of Thomson and Reid, Conroy had prepared and submitted to the President of the Plaintiff family remedy will not disappoint those who use it, correcting the mistakes made in eating and living. corporation of the subsidiaries did not take place until as late as December, 1920. Now, my Lord, what did the Plaintiffs do in connection with the railway and the segregation of assets and the position of the Reid Newfoundland Company under the various Companies Acts? Did they do anything? I say, yes, they did. They officiated as agents for the Reid Newfoundland Company to this extent, and that: A Bill, which was drafted by Mr. Elliott, K.C., of Montreal, one of the Canadian legal advisers of the Reid Newfoundland Company, was sent over to London, given to Mr. Thomson by Mr. Elliott to send over to London, for the purpose of being transcribed on English paper by an English office. If your Lordship will be good enough to look at No. 502 in Volume 2, which is "H.B.T. 49," that is a letter written on the 19th of February, 1920, by Mr. Elliott to Mr. Thomson in Montreal. Mr. Thomson at this time was a Director of the Reid Newfoundland Company. The letter speaks of enclosing the draft bill for presentation to the Legislature of Newfoundland, entitled "The Companies' Clauses Consolidation Act" and goes on to deal with the Bill section by section, and this letter, my Lord, might I point out, does not give us any suggestion as to what it is proposed shall be done with the Bill beyond the statement that it is for presentation to the Legislature of Newfoundland, but in the next exhibit, No. 503, which is "W.H.G. 56" and is a letter from H. B. Thomson at Montreal to Mr. Greenwood, in London, dated the 23rd of February, just four days after, the date of Elliott's letter to Thomson, he says:

"Dear Greenwood—The draft copy of the amended Companies' Act are going forward to-day addressed to Major MacDonald. The understanding is that these are to be handed over to the Trust's solicitor, Mr. Parker, and he is to send it to the Hon. W. R. Warren, at St. John's, Newfoundland, indicating that it is necessary for the obtaining of British capital that this amended Companies' Act should be passed at the coming session of Parliament," and the postscript to that letter, my Lord, says, "I am enclosing copy of the amended Companies' Act in case the copy sent to MacDonald should go astray," but the letter from Thomson to MacDonald does not seem to be here, my Lord.

MR. EMERSON—I think it is. It is No. 500, you see.
MR. HOWLEY—Yes, pardon me. The first letter in the book, my Lord, No. 500, although I do not see that that can be it, Mr. Emerson. That letter is a letter no doubt from Mr. Thomson to MacDonald, but it is dated February 5th and that is two weeks before Elliott writes his letter enclosing the draft Bill.

MR. EMERSON—You will see if you read the letter, "I am enclosing draft of Amended Companies' Act." There is some mix-up about this, but obviously it is the one referred to.

MR. HOWLEY—That may be the one. Well, my Lord, if we refer to that letter I think it bears out the position I am contending.

MONTREAL, Feb. 5, 1920.

Major J. A. MacDonald, London.

Dear MacDonald—Relative to the Companies' Act in Newfoundland and amendments to the Companies' Clauses Act, which would be of great benefit to investors in Newfoundland and put it on the same footing as other Colonies—I enclose herewith a draft of these Amendments that would accomplish what we want or what is wanted, and I have also asked the Solicitor here to write a covering letter freshly explaining the situation.

Mr. Greenwood is thoroughly conversant with this matter, and he will explain it to you. The idea is for Mr. Parker to take the matter up by correspondence with the Hon. Wm. Warren, of St. John's, Newfoundland, who, I understand, has been appointed solicitor for the Fish Company and it would also be of great advantage if Mr. Parker could have an opportunity of meeting the Hon. W. P. Coaker, while in England and explain to him the necessity and the equitableness of the amendment in order to place Newfoundland in the same position as other countries seeking the support of British investors by way of opening up industries on the island. I have no doubt you will give this matter your correct attention after conferring with Mr. Greenwood.

Yours faithfully,

HENRY B. THOMSON.

And then, my Lord, to come back to this postscript, No. 503. It says:—"I am enclosing a copy of the amended Companies' Act, in case the copy sent to MacDonald would go astray."

In the letter to Major MacDonald from Mr. Thomson you will find a long explanatory letter from the Company's Solicitor here, Mr. H. J. Elliott, concerning the Act. It is important that we should not be identified with the proposed Bill at all, so that you may consider Mr. Elliott's letter for the use of the English solicitor only, and when he passes on the Act to Newfoundland he should write his own explanatory letter, and retain Mr. Elliott's in his possession and make no reference to his name whatsoever.

I take it you will see Major MacDonald about this at once.

The copy of the Act which your Solicitor sends over to Newfoundland should be a copy made in the solicitor's office, on English paper and in English style, so as to have everything look as though the whole business originated in London.

The Newfoundland Parliament opens some time about the first of April, and it will be necessary to have this matter attended to as soon as possible.

H. D. R.

I submit, my Lord, that here we have a definition and a description of the services rendered by the Trust in connection with this railway matter, and I fail to find anywhere else in the correspondence or evidence any support for the position that any further services were rendered, and what is the service that is rendered here? An Act is drafted by the Reid Newfoundland Company's legal adviser in Montreal, has no bearing on or reference whatsoever to the question of the splitting up of the assets of the Reid Newfoundland Company or the manner in which it has been done, because that scheme has been decided upon independently of this transaction altogether and is afterwards carried out to completion by Mr. Conroy without reference to this matter at all, and, in fact, my Lord, carried out by Mr. Conroy although the Act or the proposed Act which was the subject matter of this correspondence never went on the Statute Book at all, and the Trust and the Trust's solicitors in London were utilized merely for the purpose of re-copying the Bill drafted by Elliott and re-copying on the letterhead of the English solicitors practically Elliott's explanatory letter and forwarding them to the Attorney General as if they had emanated from the London office instead of from Elliott's office in Montreal. That I submit, my Lord, and that only, is the service performed for the defendants in connection with the railway and the segregation of assets, and we have in evidence the Bill presented by the Trust's solicitors for the services rendered in this regard, and that bill has been paid, and, my Lord, it is, if I might point out to your Lordship, an interesting matter for consideration that in this matter of so much moment, according to the contention of the Plaintiffs, that the bill of the solicitors who performed practically whatever work there was to perform is so small in its amount and so short in its description of the services rendered. I submit, my Lord, that the evidence shows that the segregation of assets was devised and carried out without the assistance of the Plaintiffs in any manner whatsoever, that the segregation of assets was devised and carried out without any reference to or without assistance from the amendments to the Companies' Act which was afterwards adopted instead of Elliott's proposed Bill, and that even if your Lordship should find a connection between the segregation of assets and the manner in which it was carried out and the amendment to the Companies' Act which was afterwards adopted instead of Elliott's proposed Bill, and that even if your Lordship should find a connection between the segregation of assets and the manner in which it was carried out and the amendment to the Companies' Act which was afterwards adopted instead of Elliott's proposed Bill, there is nothing to connect that amendment to the Companies' Act with anything done or participated in by the Plaintiffs, because the evidence between the Attorney General and Mr. Conroy and the terms of that Act, insofar as they did not emanate from the Attorney General's office or from the Law Clerk of the House at the time, were suggested by Mr. Conroy, and that even if that Act has any bearing upon the idea of the segregation of the assets, the plaintiffs in no way whatsoever can claim any credit for the originating of that amending Act or for its contents.

Now, my Lord, there is one other point to which I feel I ought to give attention, inasmuch as I feel that I ought not to overlook anything, whether my opinion is that it is already settled or not, and that is, your Lordship will remember that in the course of the evidence it transpired that at the time the arrangements were made with the Armstrong Whitworth Company in the fall of 1920, a sum of money amounting to $500,000 was paid by the Armstrong Whitworth Company to the Reid Newfoundland Company, and Plaintiffs claim to be entitled to a commission of ten per cent. on that $500,000. They ask for judgment awarding them $50,000 with regard to that sum. I submit, my Lord, that from the evidence before your Lordship that that sum has been paid by the Armstrong Whitworth Company for and on account of the Newfoundland Power & Paper Company, and the Newfoundland Power & Paper Company is under an obligation to repay that sum to the Armstrong Whitworth Company, and inasmuch as the Newfoundland Power & Paper Company belongs as to half to the Reid Newfoundland Company, the Reid Newfoundland Company has to participate in the burden of that repayment to Armstrong Whitworth & Company to the extent approximately of one-half, so that on the payment of the $500,000 to the Reid Newfoundland Company the ultimate result means that the Reid Newfoundland Company get the benefit of only half that amount. But, apart from that altogether, my Lord, I submit that this is not a payment as to which the Plaintiffs would be entitled to a commission, even if your Lordship held that there was a commission agreement operative in favour of the Plaintiffs with regard to the transaction that took place with the Humber lands. This is not a payment of purchase money, nor can it in any way be construed as part of a purchase price. This is a reimbursement for moneys expended and expenses incurred in connection with the Newfoundland Products Corporation, and it seems to me, my Lord, that the position is very clear and understandable. Here we have the Reid Newfoundland Company, and, working side by side with it one of its subsidiaries, the Newfoundland Products Corporation, incorporated as far back as 1915 and not owning of itself one dollar in cash. The work of inspection and survey and reporting from an engineering standpoint, and various other matters in connection with that property, with a view to getting it down to the stage when it is negotiable, involves the expenditure of money, and the Reid Newfoundland Company—I frankly admit, my Lord, not with any philanthropic purposes and entirely in its own interest, itself and its shareholders—financed the Products Corporation in this work to such an extent that down to June 30, 1922, the actual cash outlay amounted to $280,000, without taking into consideration the debiting of that account with any proportion whatever of the overhead expenses or expenses of the Reid organization, whose staff, or various members of whose staff, from time to time, put in a considerable amount of work and gave a considerable amount of their time and attention to the affairs of the Newfoundland Products Corporation, and it was estimated approximately that this actual expenditure, on which the Reid Newfoundland Company itself was paying interest during this period to the Bank of Montreal, would, if such interest and a reasonable proportion of overhead expenses be added to it, amount to at least $500,000. As a matter of fact, my Lord, although no direct evidence was given on the subject, I think it is a mere matter of calculation as to what that figure would amount to if the interest charges alone for the period covered by the expenditure were added to the capital amount, and we contend that when the Armstrong Whitworth people became associated with us as partners in the property known as the Humber scheme, they were receiving jointly with us the benefit of this expenditure that had been previously made on the Products Corporation and that it was only fair that they should participate in the burden of that expenditure, and that they should by such participation relieve us of the burden, and hence follows the payment of that expenditure, with the consequent understanding with the Power & Paper Company that it would in turn repay the Armstrongs the money, and the net result will be, when all that has been accomplished and the Products Corporation, or as it is now, the Power & Paper Company, repay Armstrongs that money, it will mean that the burden of that $500,000 expenditure which was made in connection with that property will fall equally upon the Reid Newfoundland Company and the Armstrong Company, because it will have been discharged by this Power & Paper Company which is owned roughly half by each of the parties. So far then as this transaction is concerned, I submit that it cannot be taken into account as part of any purchase price. It is a separate, independent transaction, and has reference entirely to the discharge of the burdens on that property which are still outstanding, and is a joint transaction of the Armstrong Whitworth Company and the Reid Company, the ultimate burden of which will fall half on each.

Now, my Lord, before I proceed to deal with the question of the termination of the agency contract and its effect on the subsequent position, there are two matters to which I would like to draw your Lordship's attention, and the first is with reference to the Railway Commission. Your Lordship will recollect that it has been asserted that Mr. Thomson came here on the first of April, 1920, and during his stay here the Government Railway Commission came into existence, and that was a benefit to the defendants in as much as it relieved the Reid Newfoundland Company from the burden of operating the railway for the time being at a loss. The evidence before your Lordship, I think, very clearly establishes that the idea of the Government Railway Commission emanated from a member of the Government. It emanated from Mr. Coaker, according to the evidence, and your Lordship will recollect that it was not until Mr. H. D. Reid was in the box and after Mr. Thomson had gone through his examination and cross examination and re-examination that the statement that this Railway Commission emanated from Mr. Coaker, a member of the Government, was made, and it was then suggested that somewhere about the time that this happened Mr. Thomson had made a visit to Port Union, the place where Mr. Coaker resided, but this belated suggestion of Mr. Thomson's visit to Port Union—and, my Lord, I do not deny, I admit that Mr. Thomson did visit Port Union—but this belated suggestion that this visit to Port Union was connected with the origin of the Railway Commission idea, was not followed up beyond a mere statement that Mr. Thomson visited Port Union. There was nothing further suggested, and your Lordship is left, and I presume your Lordship will be asked by the Plaintiffs to decide that because Thomson visited Port Union and the idea of the Railway Commission was first mooted by Mr. Coaker, that then Mr. Thomson is responsible for the Railway Commission. I do not think that it is sufficiently strong for your Lordship. I do not think your Lordship will be led to come to any such decision, but supposing for the sake of argument that this statement or this evidence raises in your Lordship's mind the idea that the origin of the idea of the Railway Commission did come from Mr. Thomson, I would like to ask your Lordship to consider what the Trust has to do with the matter. If it came from Mr. Thomson it came from him personally, and it came from him at a time when he was here in Newfoundland acting as a Director of the Reid Newfoundland Company. Now, it has been suggested by my learned friend that because Thomson occupied the dual position of a Director of the Reid Newfoundland Company and a Director of the Plaintiff Company, and that because at that meeting of the Reid Newfoundland Company's Directors held on the 14th of August, 1920, this position was stated and Mr. Thomson was asked to continue to act on the Board in matters with which the Trust had nothing to do, that then in all cases where there is any doubt as to whether Mr. Thomson acted as a Reid Newfoundland Company's Director or as a Director or agent of the Trust, that your Lordship must give My learned friend informed me that he cannot find any specific plea of the termination of the agency in the pleadings.

MR. HOWLEY—Yes, that is the foundation of the claim from their standpoint, but I was referring to the fact that we had not pleaded in our case the termination of the agency.

Now, my Lord, if your Lordship accepts my contention that at the time of the Blakstad agreement of April 5, 1921, the Plaintiffs were not entitled to commission by reason of the fact that Armstrong Whitworths had become associated with the matter, as they were only connected with it as Contractors and Not as Purchasers.

that that is the only interpretation that can be placed upon the Minutes of August 14, 1920, that they were only to be paid in case of success, no matter what work for labor they put in on the matter, and that was the reason why the commission was so high; and then, my Lord, having regard to the Minutes of August 14, 1920, and having regard to what the Plaintiffs did under it up to the 5th of April, 1921, when the Blakstad agreement was signed.

the question is: Did the Trust introduce the Armstrong Whitworth people so that by that introduction they had brought about the relation of vendor and purchaser? and I say, No, they did not.

Now, my Lord, if your Lordship accepts my contention that at the time of the Blakstad agreement of April 5, 1921, the Plaintiffs were not entitled to commission by reason of the fact that Armstrong Whitworths had become associated with the matter, as they were only connected with it as Contractors and Not as Purchasers.

There is another case in which I would like to refer your Lordship, and that is the case of Diddot vs. Friesner, reported in Times Law Reports, Volume 11, page 187.

The next point, my Lord, that arises is a very important one, and that is with regard to the position of the right to a commission under the Minute of August 14, 1920, on the introduction of the Armstrong Whitworth Company.

MR. EMERSON—This is the Humber, is it?

MR. HOWLEY—Yes, the Humber. Lord Justice Bowen, in his judgment, reported in Times Law Reports, Volume 11, page 187.

though I do not think that it would be necessary for me to prove this contention, that the transaction of October 13th, 1922, was not the consequence, directly or indirectly, of the negotiations referred to in the letter which Conroy wrote on the 15th November, 1921.

KENT, J.—You have referred to these cases before, I think.

MR. HOWLEY—Some of them, my Lord. Then, my Lord, there is another case, that of Nightingale and Others vs. Parsons, reported in Law Reports, 1914, 2 K.B.D., page 821.

There is another case, my Lord, in which I would like to refer your Lordship, and that is the case of Diddot vs. Friesner, reported in Times Law Reports, Volume 11, page 187.

is the case of Brisson vs. Davies, reported in Times Law Reports, Volume 27, page 442, which deals with the right to a commission on introducing a purchaser, and the head note, with your Lordship's permission, I shall read.

On the question of the right to terminate, my Lord, there is the case of Campanari vs. Woodburn, 1854, 15 C.B. 400; or perhaps your Lordship would rather refer to the case of Frith vs. Frith, which is reported in 1906 Appeal Cases, 254.

There is another case, my Lord, in which I would like to refer your Lordship, and that is the case of Burchell vs. Gowrie & Blockhouse Colliers, Ltd., which originated in Canada and went to the Privy Council on appeal in the year 1910.

There is another case, my Lord, in which I would like to refer your Lordship, and that is the case of Diddot vs. Friesner, reported in Times Law Reports, Volume 11, page 187.

The next point, my Lord, that arises is a very important one, and that is with regard to the position of the right to a commission under the Minute of August 14, 1920, on the introduction of the Armstrong Whitworth Company.

of matters, and I feel that there is no doubt that your Lordship will have carefully and thoroughly investigated every phase of the situation before your Lordship hands down the ultimate decision.

SHORTAGE OF HARVESTERS FEARED. OTTAWA, July 27. Shortage of harvesters to harvest the western crop is regarded as a possibility in immigration circles here.

the former, Jack Holt, in the role of Richard Parrish, allows himself to be completely swept off his feet by Rita Coventry, superbly portrayed by Miss Naldi. Agnes Ayres, as Parrish's fiancée, Alice Meldrum, in Cleveland visiting her sister, hears of Richard's indiscretions and when he finally does come to visit her, she tells him that he has not played fair and that he can go back to Rita Coventry.

At length however, Parrish makes her understand that it is she whom he really loves and is accepted when he asks her to marry him. Rita, in the meantime, has become quite taken up with a youthful and unusually talented piano tuner, an accomplished musician, and has not given Parrish as much as a passing thought.

Robert Edson and Julia Faye are among the more prominent players in the supporting cast, vying with the principals for special mention. There are many massive scenes in "Don't Call It Love." It is produced in the usual de Mille fashion, true to life and humanly appealing.
