PACKING HOUSES FOUND UNCLEAN.

London Physician Finds Sensational Reports of Chicago Factories True In Some Details

London, September 29.—Dr. F. J. Smith, a well known London physician, while attending the conference of the British Medical Association held recently in Toronto, took the opportunity of visiting Chicago and inspecting the Armour canned meat factories. He has returned to London, and in an interview with the correspondent of the London Tribune gave his views on the American meat packing scandal. While not wholly agreeing with the sensational statements of Upton Sinclair, he is of the opinion that considerable improvements might be effected in the carrying out of the industry.

"As you know," he said, "Messrs. Armour invited the British Medical Association to make an official inspection of their factories, but for many reasons the association did not see a way to accept the invitation. I decided to go and see for myself what was the true state of affairs. I went without giving any warning. The chief complaint I have got to make is that the buildings and appliances are of wood. The animals pass over wooden floors. The walls are wood. The trucks which convey the meat also are wood.

"Now, you cannot call that clean. In a business like this there must be a lot of blood splashed about, which soaks into the wood and becomes filthy. No amount of scrubbing and washing can make the floors clean. Then, seeing the meat lying about on the floors is not pleasant, and it is bound to happen that odd little bits will get into crevices and in course of time become rotten.

"In an industry like this there should be tiled floors and walls which when work is over can be thoroughly cleaned. The factories would then be sanitary, while with wood that cannot possibly be the case. As far as the process of producing canned meats is concerned I have no fault to find except that the meat is taken about on these wooden trucks, which are stained and soaked with blood and grease. There was an entire absence of that rush and feverish haste which has been so vividly described.

With regard to the charge that there is a lack of inspection, Dr. Smith said his observation convinced him that this was absolutely untrue and it was impossible for diseased animals to escape detection and condemnation.

Marie Antoinette Went West.

The magnificent Gourelay piano of Marie Antoinette design that attracted so much admiration in the T. Eaton Company's model drawing room at the Toronto Exhibition was selected by Mr. J. A. McDonald, of the McDonald Music Co., Halifax, who will exhibit it at the Halifax fair. This instrument with the Sheraton, Empire and Louis XV designs shown by Gourelay, Winter & Leeming this year gave the Canadian public and American visitors too, an effective object lesson on the important position to which Canada has attained in the creation of the artistic.

Gourelay pianos have secured the endorsement of the Canadian consumer with a readiness that falls to the lot of few commodities, and it has frequently been remarked that no other retail house in Canada could so readily manufacture an instrument and receive the immediate approval of a critical public as the Gourelay of Gourelay, Winter & Leeming has done.—From Canadian Music Trades Journal September 15th, 1906.

THE REPUBLIC OF THE ANTILLES COMES TO AN EARLY END.

5,600 Troops Off to Seize Cuba--Taft is Governor of the Island.

Havana, October 1.—"The republic is dead. Long live the republic." That is the cry that succeeds the revolution. At noon Saturday, Secretary William H. Taft in a proclamation in the Official Gazette, declared that as the Cuban Congress had failed to elect a successor to President Palma, whose decision to resign was irrevocable, the country was without a government, and that the United States would provisionally take charge of its affairs until its people could form constitutionally another republic. His action pleased the people, and there is perfect order and quiet. A military, not a new civil government is expected.

No troops were landed. The Cuban flag remains flying in its accustomed place, its courts are unchanged and there is no disturbance of the usual order of things.

The liberation of sixty-old political prisoners added to the general satisfaction over the peaceful ending of an intolerable situation. In the change not the slightest friction occurred anywhere, and if in the hearts of a few politicians who brought on the doom of the first republic there is dismay, the great mass of the people feel only joy at the prospect of a second more completely safeguarded by their powerful friend on the north.

PRaise Taft's Statement.

Mr. Taft's announcement of the intentions of the United States is regarded as a masterpiece. Without accusation, threat or reproach, in a few brief words he stated the necessity for the assumption of control, a determination to establish peace, and the intention of continuing the country's constitutional course with its own citizens up to and after the new elections, which shall determine the future permanent native government of the island. No one was wounded; all were reassured. The favorable reception of the proclamation was universal and pronounced.

Perhaps a more peaceful occupation of a capital with such a show of force in the war of the harbor was never heard of in history. To a majority of the Cubans it was welcome, but the tactful manner of its doing disarmed those who were ready to resist it. "We have been and children and teen quipped by a kind fate. It is less than we deserve," was a favorite expression, as was, "I hope the Yankees will never go away," a frequent one. It may be some time before they go. Mr. Taft's announcement throws no light on that subject.

KEPT MARINES ON SHIPS.

His work as Provisional Governor of Cuba really began last night. It had been planned to land three thousand marines and jacks from the fleet as soon as it was learned that the Cuban Congress would not meet to elect a successor to President Palma. These were to be camped in various open places in the city for its protection.

But Mr. Taft reflected that there were no signs of intended disorder, and being in advance of thoughtful public opinion of Havana, he disliked the idea of tearing them up for trenches and various military uses, unless it became absolutely necessary. Congress did not meet, the city remained quiet, and the ordinary police force of nine hundred was deemed sufficient to guard it overnight, when, if any outbreak occurred, additional forces could be quickly landed.

At President Palma's request thirty marines were sent from the Newark to guard the Treasury, and this is all that has been landed. The sight of a large body of foreign troops occupying their city was thus saved the Cubans, and they appreciated the fact and remained orderly. The feelings of some were ready to be hurt, but the sight of their own flags all day and the absence of a uniformed invader under the circumstances made them happy.

MR. PALMA'S FAREWELL.

Mr. Taft and Mr. Bacon at noon went to the palace to pay their respects to President Palma. He received them with kindness and courtesy, and when Mr. Taft told him what he had done, he remarked that it was the best possible solution of the difficulty into which his country had fallen, and could not have been settled by its own sons with any certainty of continuing peace. Here was the official surrender of the first Cuban Republic.

Vice-President Capote remarked that it was a great load off his mind. This amuses the Cubans, as they do not think their dead republic brought forth any statesman, and only one fair play leader. It is doubtful however, if he gets any reward, for Mr. Taft, in making up his cabinet, which he will do next week, will avoid any who have been prominent either as Moderates or Liberals in the strife that led to the end of the republic.

PRESIDENT ORDERS AN ARMY TO CUBA.

Washington, Sept. 29.—President Roosevelt tonight ordered an expedition of 5,600 soldiers to proceed to Cuba. This force will sail in detachments from Newport News, Va., within the next ten days. Brigadier General Funston will command the expedition when it lands on Cuban soil to support the policy of William H. Taft, the President's Commissioner to Cuba.

These orders marked the real beginning of American intervention in Cuba. The naval force at Havana now will simply bridge over any emergency arising before the troops arrive. Speculation is rife tonight as to whether this policy means the end of Cuban independence. Many persons think the army will not be withdrawn until American sovereignty is complete in the island. Others believe that this force is to show the people in correct and to induce the demand that Mr. Taft will be able to restore stable government under the Cuban flag. President Roosevelt's order was given as a result of the recommendation made by Secretary Taft this morning.

GOOD APPLES ARE SCARCE AND HIGH.

Large Demand for First-Class Stock Cannot Be Fully Supplied by the Dealers.

New York, September 29.—With daily receipts of about 8,000 barrels dealers are having trouble in filling their orders for first class apples. Many lots received this week have been poor. This large demand has had a tendency to advance prices on the best stock. Some lots of Western Jonathan sold as high as $5 a barrel, and from that price they graded off down to $2.50.

There were several selected lots of Alexander sold at $3.50 a barrel, and many for $1 less. There was quite a demand for fall pippins that sold for $2.50 though many were made for twenty-five cents less. Gravenstein of good quality brought $3. There was a fair quality of greenings went to the retailers yesterday at $2, but choice ones were twenty-five cents higher.

With quite a demand for crab apples the top quotation is $3.25, though some choice ones were sold at a premium of twenty-five cents. Bartlett pears of the best grade are held firmly up to $5.50 a barrel. There is quite a large supply of Seckel pears in the market at from $4 a barrel down to $2.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

Victoria, B. C., September 29.—The steamship Arangi, arriving here today from Australia, told of a raid on Hamman Howard's mine, at the famous Kalgoolie gold fields, in which four masked men with revolvers attacked the mine staff, two landing and gagging the workers at the battery.

The quartet washed out considerable gold from the sluice boxes. To secure themselves from possible interference the robbers had cut the telephone wires. They secured more than $10,000 worth of gold.

Lombard, Sept. 29.—A unique service was held at Brickley on the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of the new temple of St. George's Church. A platform was erected near the summit, and on this a short service was held, those taking part including the vicar (the Rev. W. A. Currah), the choir and one venturesome woman.

London, Sept. 29.—Particulars of losses sustained in a curious scheme to search under the sea for sunken bullion were given in the bankruptcy court by the Rev. R. P. Duke, a Dorset curate, who had liabilities amounting to £15,434 but an estimated surplus in assets of £1,514. The debtor had been interested in an invention called a hydrophone and had expected to receive large sums from the treasury to be recovered by its use in the sea.

Afflicted with Sun. Eyes for 33 Years.

I have been afflicted with sore eyes for thirty-three years. Thirteen years ago I became totally blind and was blind for six years. My eyes were badly inflamed. One of my neighbors insisted upon my trying Chamberlain's Salve and gave me half a box of it. To my surprise it healed my eyes and my sight came back to me. D. C. Park, Cambrian, Kenton, Cumberland. Salve is for sale by W. A. Warren, Hen B.

Finds Czar's Army and Navy Nervous.

Doctor Sees Cause for Concern in Present Morale of Rank and File.

St. Petersburg, September 27.—Dr. Pokrovsky, writing in one of the medical journals, gives an interesting account of a psychological study he has made of the present morale of the Russian army rank and file. He states that with the system of very short service with the colors the Russian soldier never loses touch with the people and that he reflects all the varying popular moods and passions.

A great psychological change is going on in the Russian army which is becoming a barometer, showing the force and movements of the people as a whole. He says: "The remedies the authorities are seeking to apply to it can be effective only on the assumption that the army has no ties uniting it to the Russian people."

"I feel bound to declare," adds the doctor, "that the nerves of the soldiers are shaken, and that in consequence they are peculiarly susceptible to the influence of political agitators."

"There is, however, speedy reaction to every stimulation and a consequent weakening of the restraining faculties. I regard this nervous state of both the navy and army as justifying extreme anxiety as to the future course of events."

Quincy, Sprains and Swellings Cured.

"In November, 1901, I caught cold and had the quincy. My throat was swollen so I could hardly breathe. I applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me relief in a short time. In two days I was all right," says Mrs. L. Cousins, Otterburn, Mich. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment and is especially valuable for sprains and swellings. For sale by W. A. Warren, Pitt. B.

Mr. and Mrs. Elen Pottery and daughter Iva drove to Kingston last week to visit friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Avard C. Potter entertained a large number of friends Saturday evening, it being the twentieth anniversary of their marriage. They received a number of valuable and useful presents. Refreshments were served in abundance. The evening will long be remembered. We wish them many more happy years of life together.

BLOOD TROUBLES.

Cared Through the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

Thousands of women suffer from headaches, backaches, dizziness and nervousness. Few realize that their misery all comes from the bad state of their blood. They take one thing for their headache, another for their stomach, a third for their nerves. And yet all the while it is simply their blood that is the cause of all their trouble. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all these and other blood troubles because they actually make new, rich, red blood. Mrs. J. H. McArthur, St. Thomas, Ont., says: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done me a world of good. For about eighteen months I was a constant sufferer. I was terribly run down and the least exertion left me sagged out. I slept badly at night and this further weakened me, and finally I had to give up house-keeping and go boarding as I was quite unable to do any housework. I took doctor's medicine but it was of little or no benefit. One day a neighbor told me how much benefit she had derived from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and advised me to try them. I sent and got three boxes and by the time I had used them I could feel a change for the better. Then I got four boxes more, and before they were all gone my health was fully restored. To see me now one would not think I had ever been sick for a day, and I can honestly say I owe my renewed health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the greatest cure there is for the weakness and backaches and sideaches of anemias, all the distress of indigestion; all the pains and aches of rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgia, and the weakness and ill health that follows any disturbance of regularity in the blood supply. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A GUARANTEED CURE FOR PILES

Itching, Blind, Bleeding, Protruding Piles. Druggists are authorized to refund money if PAIN OINTMENT fails to cure in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach, whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes broadcast and on each bottle wrapper, what his medicines are made of and how they work. Thus he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backaches, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, oftentimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The Favorite Prescription strengthens the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervous and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuritis, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for its curative value. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Jayville, N.Y., and Buffalo, N.Y., and it will come to you by return post.

Gambling Curse Makes Society Girls Its Prey.

Dr. Townsend Describes "Poor Pigeons Plucked by Hungry Ladies at Bridge."

LEAPFROG IN THE ENGLISH SALONS.

Father Vaughan Finds Fresh Support In His Attacks on English Society Morals.

London, Sept. 28th.—Father Vaughan has been joined in his crusade "the sin of the smart set" by a well known Non-conformist minister, the Rev. Dr. Townsend, who, addressing a meeting of the Federation of Free Churches, alluded to the gambling curse, which he said was rife in its way like a chess board, in the country.

If they went up the Thames any Sunday and investigated what was going on in the mansions of nobility, which lined its banks they would find many filled with fashionable gambling parties, at which young girls were utterly ruined by the curse. These parties were chiefly held by hungry ladies seeking at bridge and whist parties to draw in these poor pigeons for the purpose of plucking them. It was a scandal to civilization, and he was glad that the King had set his face against this Sabbath desecration.

TELLS OF VICE.

"Phillips," in Vanity Fair, who is considered one of the best informed society correspondents, gives some amazing instances which would seem to prove that Father Vaughan and Dr. Townsend are not exaggerating. She says: "A man told me only the other day that he was staying with some of the set whom Father Vaughan has attacked, and that both men and women played leap frog in the hall in the evening after dinner. The hostess bore a great name and many of her guests were well known and well known in society. I have heard and seen some called amusements in country houses beside which leap frog would be considered a game of refinement and eminent good taste, and I will give the instances that came under my own notice. "A girl well known in certain hunting circles told me she was staying with some people and after dinner in the ballroom a man came up to her and said: "Do let me watch you, miss. I will watch you across the room."

WHISKEY DOWN THE BACK.

"They were watching sealed in the room, but she laughingly and quite good naturedly refused. He then said: 'Well, look here. If you don't let me carry you I shall supply my whiskey and soda down the back of your pretty white frock.' She, never for a moment supposing he was in earnest, said, 'All right. You can, but I shan't be watched. And a moment later he actually turned at least half his whiskey and soda down the back of her neck, amid roars of laughter from every one."

"Now I don't believe even the Queen's period can beat this for sheer vulgar impudence. The other story was related to me by a male relation of my own. He was staying with a very well known hostess, and after dinner the woman next to him, during a slightly heated argument, bit her finger nail and poured the water down his neck. His retaliation was to put his whole plate of grape skins down the back of her dress, a punishment I really think she has not deserved."

"Hampden Lead, or what is known as the non-gated end of Margate, can not hope to excel this in behavior. Therefore when Father Vaughan attacks a certain set for the tendency toward horseplay he by no means exaggerates."

Arabian War Costs Sultan 50,000 Men

Turkish Government Spends 16 Months in Vain Effort to Subdue Villayet.

Constantinople, Sept. 27.—During the last sixteen months it is estimated that 50,000 of the Sultan's troops have been destroyed by battle and disease in the fight the Turkish government is carrying on to subdue the Arabs in the Yemen, a Turkish vilayet in southwest Arabia, along the Red Sea. Recently it was the cause of a bitter dispute, nearly ending in war with England.

The Arabs have recognized the authority of the Sultan and maintain a ceaseless guerilla warfare against the Sultan's troops. Little is heard of the cost of this desperate struggle, the cost of which to the Sultan is enormous.

The Sultan's troops are all sent from Turkey in Europe, and the native Turkish troops in Syria and Mesopotamia sympathize with the insurgent Arabs.

The troops do not know where they are bound when the transports sail from Turkish ports.

Despite the large forces now in the Yemen, the Turks hold only the shore forts and one or two strong positions in the interior.

This little known war is being watched closely by England and Italy, and Germany, which is Turkey's only rival among the European powers, keeps an eye on the progress of events.

Walter Mills, bookkeeper in W. A. Piggott's store, has rented a room from Avard Mills and moved his family here.

A Light, Foamy Every Day Sleigh

The cause of a good deal of the feeling of poor running quality in other sleighs is that they are not built on a straight line. You can see a straight line in the wheels and the runners. They are built on a curve, which gives them a wobble in appearance and yet perfect safety in use. The sleigh is built on a straight line, and the wheels and runners are built on a straight line.

SIR LEMUEL JONES, C. I. E., was chief commissioner of Burma, Lawrence Jones, captain of the tramp steamer Newcastle Maid, was his brother. More than that, they were twins, as like as two drops of water. It was known that Sir Lemuel should rise to be chief commissioner, while it was Larry's own fault that he was only captain of a freighter, but they both enjoyed themselves, each after his kind.

One morning in November the Newcastle Maid glided up the Irrawadi and swung to moorings just off the main wharf at Rangoon. Larry had not seen his brother for years, and for the matter that did not care if many more years passed before he saw him. Their paths ran at right angles. He was there for a cargo of rice, not to renew family ties.

It was because the chief engineer of the Newcastle Maid was a man after his own heart that he said before going ashore: "I don't want to go late as a gale here, for I've had a letter from the owners over that last break I made in Calcutta. If I come off seas over just lock me in the cabin and don't let me out. No matter what I say, keep me there until I'm braced up."

Then the captain went ashore. He took a drive out through the cantonments. As he bowed along in the old gharry a new experience came to him. Gentlemen lifted their hats and ladies driving in their carriages smiled and bowed in the most gracious manner.

"I wonder if there's anything sticking to my face," thought Larry, and he passed his hand carefully over his rounded surface. It seemed all right. But still they kept it up—everybody he met, and one officer, going by on his pony, took a pull at the animal's head and shouted, "Are you coming to the club tonight, sir?"

"No!" roared the captain, for he hadn't the faintest idea of going to a club without an invitation.

"They'll be awfully disappointed," came the echo of the officer's voice. The gharry opened up a gap between them.

"Very kind," muttered Larry, "but I fancy they'll get over it. Must have been the next minute Larry was busy staring open mouthed at the image of himself sitting in a carriage just in front. The carriage was turning out of a compound and blocked the road so that his own driver was forced to stop. He recognized the other man. It was Sir Lemuel, his twin brother.

The recognition was mutual. The commissioner bowed quite coldly, the captain called out, "How are you, brother?"

Then the big Water hoses whipped the carriage down the road at a slashing gait, and Larry was left alone.

"So that's why they've been taking off their hats to me," he mused. "They think I'm the chief commissioner. I must have been taking me for Sir Lemuel. I wonder what they're doing here. I'd like to be in his shoes just for a day to see how it feels to be king of Burma."

All the way back to the hotel he was thinking about it. Arrived there, he wrote a note addressed to the chief commissioner and sent it off by a messenger. "That will bring him," he muttered. "He always was a bit afraid of me."

It was 6 o'clock when Sir Lemuel arrived in his carriage. There was a great scurrying about of servants and no end of saluting the "Lat Sahib," for it was not often that the chief commissioner honored the hotel with his presence. He was shown to Captain Jones' room.

"Take a seat, Lem," said Captain Larry cheerfully. "I wanted to see you and thought you'd rather come here than receive me at Government House."

"Please do not be so formal," said Sir Lemuel in his most dignified manner. "I have to attend a dinner at the club tonight in honor of the return of our judicial commissioner."

"Oh, Sir Lemuel will be there in time for that," chuckled the captain. "But first, Lem, for the sake of old times, I want you to drink a glass of wine with me. You know, we took a drink together 'prety often the first year of our existence." Then he broke into a loud, sniggering laugh that irritated the commissioner.

"While I don't approve of drinking to the extent you've carried it," said Sir Lemuel with judicial severity, "still I can't refuse a glass proffered by my brother."

"Your twin brother," broke in Larry. "Of whom you've always been so fond, you know."

"I really must be going, so please tell me where she is?"

"Where is she? When is she coming back?" he gasped.

"Oh, Sir Lemuel, it was only to say that she had arrived safely in Rangoon."

"Thank God for that!" exclaimed the captain, with a rare burst of reverence. The private secretary looked rather astonished. Sir Lemuel had always been a very devoted husband, but not the sort of man to give way to an expression of strong feeling simply because his wife had arrived at the end of her journey.

"Do you happen to remember what she said about coming back?" he asked of the wondering secretary.

"No, Sir Lemuel; but she'll probably remain till her sister is out of danger—a couple of weeks, perhaps."

"Of course, of course," said the captain. "Thank the Lord! I meant to say that she's had a safe voyage," he corrected himself, leaving a great sigh of relief. "That's one rock out of the channel," he muttered.

A bear was waiting patiently for him to go and change his dress. The captain whistled softly to himself when he saw the dress suit all laid out for him. He called it a "quick change" as he called it. As he noticed dressing the "boob"—he of the gorgeous liver—appeared, announcing, "Johnson Sahib, sir."

"Who?" queried Captain Larry.

"Secretary Sahib, sir."

"Oh, that's my private secretary," he thought.

"I've brought the speech, Sir Lemuel," said the young man as he entered, "but I've had to wait for the chief commissioner to be in."

"Look here, Johnson," he said, "I think fewer or something's working on me. I can't remember men's names all mixed up. I wouldn't go to this dinner tonight if I hadn't promised to. I ought to stay at home. Now I want you to help me through, and if it goes off all right I'll double your salary next month. Safe to promise that?" he muttered to himself.

"Let Lem attend to it."

At the club as the captain entered the band struck up "God Save the Queen."

"By Jingo, we're late!" he said. "The show is over."

"He has got fever or sun, sure," he thought. "Oh, no, Sir Lemuel, they're waiting for you to sit down to dinner. There's Mr. Barrow, the judicial commissioner, and Jones, the father of all Burmans."

"Hello! There's the ship's log!" exclaimed the captain, looking at the big volumes in the entrance. "Won't you get the ship's log for me?"

"I know that," angrily answered Larry. "I don't have to be told my business."

"Certainly, Sir Lemuel; but you asked me to jog your memory, as you are so apt to forget these things, you know."

"Quite right, quite right," answered the captain. "If you catch me forgetting anything else just hold out a signal—that is, tip me the wink, will you?"

"We've had a telegram from Lady Jones, Sir Lemuel," said the waiter. "The cold perspiration stood out on the captain's forehead. This was something that he had forgotten all about. A bachelor himself, it had never occurred to him that Sir Lemuel was probably married and that he would have to face the wife.

"Where is she? When is she coming back?" he gasped.

"Oh, Sir Lemuel, it was only to say that she had arrived safely in Rangoon."

"Thank God for that!" exclaimed the captain, with a rare burst of reverence. The private secretary looked rather astonished. Then the big Water hoses whipped the carriage down the road at a slashing gait, and Larry was left alone.

"So that's why they've been taking off their hats to me," he mused. "They think I'm the chief commissioner. I must have been taking me for Sir Lemuel. I wonder what they're doing here. I'd like to be in his shoes just for a day to see how it feels to be king of Burma."

All the way back to the hotel he was thinking about it. Arrived there, he wrote a note addressed to the chief commissioner and sent it off by a messenger. "That will bring him," he muttered. "He always was a bit afraid of me."

It was 6 o'clock when Sir Lemuel arrived in his carriage. There was a great scurrying about of servants and no end of saluting the "Lat Sahib," for it was not often that the chief commissioner honored the hotel with his presence. He was shown to Captain Jones' room.

"Take a seat, Lem," said Captain Larry cheerfully. "I wanted to see you and thought you'd rather come here than receive me at Government House."

"Please do not be so formal," said Sir Lemuel in his most dignified manner. "I have to attend a dinner at the club tonight in honor of the return of our judicial commissioner."

"Oh, Sir Lemuel will be there in time for that," chuckled the captain. "But first, Lem, for the sake of old times, I want you to drink a glass of wine with me. You know, we took a drink together 'prety often the first year of our existence." Then he broke into a loud, sniggering laugh that irritated the commissioner.

"While I don't approve of drinking to the extent you've carried it," said Sir Lemuel with judicial severity, "still I can't refuse a glass proffered by my brother."

"Your twin brother," broke in Larry. "Of whom you've always been so fond, you know."

"I really must be going, so please tell me where she is?"

"Where is she? When is she coming back?" he gasped.

"Oh, Sir Lemuel, it was only to say that she had arrived safely in Rangoon."

"Thank God for that!" exclaimed the captain, with a rare burst of reverence. The private secretary looked rather astonished. Sir Lemuel had always been a very devoted husband, but not the sort of man to give way to an expression of strong feeling simply because his wife had arrived at the end of her journey.

"Do you happen to remember what she said about coming back?" he asked of the wondering secretary.

"No, Sir Lemuel; but she'll probably remain till her sister is out of danger—a couple of weeks, perhaps."

"Of course, of course," said the captain. "Thank the Lord! I meant to say that she's had a safe voyage," he corrected himself, leaving a great sigh of relief. "That's one rock out of the channel," he muttered.

A bear was waiting patiently for him to go and change his dress. The captain whistled softly to himself when he saw the dress suit all laid out for him. He called it a "quick change" as he called it. As

He draped him in his own sailor outfit, but he had forgotten all about. A bachelor himself, it had never occurred to him that Sir Lemuel was probably married and that he would have to face the wife.

"Where is she? When is she coming back?" he gasped.

Then the captain went ashore. He took a drive out through the cantonments. As he bowed along in the old gharry a new experience came to him. Gentlemen lifted their hats and ladies driving in their carriages smiled and bowed in the most gracious manner.

"I wonder if there's anything sticking to my face," thought Larry, and he passed his hand carefully over his rounded surface. It seemed all right. But still they kept it up—everybody he met, and one officer, going by on his pony, took a pull at the animal's head and shouted, "Are you coming to the club tonight, sir?"

"No!" roared the captain, for he hadn't the faintest idea of going to a club without an invitation.

"They'll be awfully disappointed," came the echo of the officer's voice. The gharry opened up a gap between them.

"Very kind," muttered Larry, "but I fancy they'll get over it. Must have been the next minute Larry was busy staring open mouthed at the image of himself sitting in a carriage just in front. The carriage was turning out of a compound and blocked the road so that his own driver was forced to stop. He recognized the other man. It was Sir Lemuel, his twin brother.

The recognition was mutual. The commissioner bowed quite coldly, the captain called out, "How are you, brother?"

Then the big Water hoses whipped the carriage down the road at a slashing gait, and Larry was left alone.

Mrs. Olive Gertrude Cassier Begins Case to Share Estate of Salisbury Wreck Victim.

(New York Herald) Mrs. Olive Gertrude Cassier, of Seaboard, Mass., who says she is the widow of Louis Cassier, publisher, who was killed in the railroad disaster at Salisbury, England, has obtained an order from the Surrogate's Court requiring the executor of the will to show cause why she should not be permitted to intervene in a contest which was recently brought that her interests may be protected.

Herbert C. Smythe, her attorney, states that he believes she is entitled to share in the estate. She is not mentioned in the will, the chief legatee being Agnes N. Cassier, of Bridgeport, Conn., who is referred to as the wife of the testator.

HYMENEAL.

BATH-ETTER.

Stewiacke, Sept. 27.—One of the prettiest weddings ever witnessed in Stewiacke took place at the residence of Mrs. James Etter, on Wednesday afternoon, when her daughter Margaret was united in marriage to F. E. Bath, of Bridgetown. The parties were beautifully decorated. In the front parlor where the ceremony took place, the walls were banked with potted plants and ferns. The brightness of the ideal September day gave beauty and charm to the occasion. Promptly at the appointed hour Rev. A. H. Campbell passed to the altar and was followed by the groom and his best man, Mr. Frank Bath, his brother. Immediately after, preceded by her ring bearer, Miss Marion Campbell, the bride entered leaning on the arm of her mother, while the wedding march was beautifully rendered by Miss J. C. McNeil. The bride was elegantly gowned in white silk. She wore a veil held in place by rosebuds and carried a bouquet of bridal roses, looking exceedingly beautiful.

Following the ceremony, a luncheon was served to the assembled guests, after which the happy couple, amid showers of congratulations and good wishes, took the train for Halifax. The bride went away in a handsome suit of navy blue broadcloth, with hat to match. The groom's present to the bride, was a white ostrich feather boa. The groom's present to the ring bearer was a gold bracelet, and to the organist a diamond pin. The bride received a large and valuable collection of presents, including a cheque from her mother. Mr. and Mrs. Bath will be "at home" Wednesday and Thursday of next week, Oct. 10th and 11th at Bridgetown.

THOMSON-MUNRO.

A most happy event took place today at 11 O'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Munro, Mount Pleasant Farm, when their daughter Lena Winbury, was united in marriage to Gordon G. Thomson, of Halifax. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. E. Daley, in the presence of the immediate friends and family. The groom was supported by his brother. The wedding march was finely rendered by Mrs. W. E. Reed. After the ceremony and a delectable luncheon the newly wedded couple left by the west "Bluenose" for a trip to New York and other points. The presents from the family and friends were many and useful and bore testimony to the high esteem in which the young couple were held. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Thomson will be at home at No. 273 Tower Road, Halifax after Nov. 1st.

OBITUARY.

ALBERT WALKER.

It becomes our painful duty at this time to chronicle the death of Albert Walker, one of our most esteemed and respected citizens, which took place on Wednesday evening of last week. He had been in poor health for some time past from the effects of paralytic shocks, but last week he was mortally stricken and died very suddenly. He was just past the prime of life being 67 years of age. He was one of the Valley's well established and most progressive farmers. He owned and occupied one of the finest farms in the Valley, being a part of the homestead of his ancestors, who settled there in the early part of the seventeenth century, and has been occupied by succeeding generations ever since. He was the eldest son of the late Thomas Granville Walker, who was a son of Robert Walker, who first settled there prior to 1760. None of the fine old homestead has ever passed out of the name since. He married Annie, daughter of the late Robert W. Longley, whom he leaves a widow with two sons and one daughter, to mourn the loss of a devoted husband and a most indulgent father. Mr. Walker was a man of most sterling qualities, his honesty was never questioned, no stain ever blotched his reputation in life, none can ever do him as his memory in death. His remains were interred at the Centre Granville cemetery on Friday afternoon, the Rev. Ernest Underwood officiating. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved family.

Cloves in Church.

"When I was a boy the whole family went to church," says a Kansas City man. "We lived in the country, and every Sabbath morning the family coach was pulled out, a team hitched to it and the family was piled in. The roads were awful, but that made no difference; he had to go.

"I will remember that mother put on her Sunday dress. It was a black silk, and somewhere in it there was a pocket and in the pocket a handkerchief and in the handkerchief some cloves. When we got to the church I remember we went up in front, where my father had a pew.

"When the preacher got going I also remember that some of us children would begin to get sleepy, and then I knew that mother would take out that handkerchief and give out a clove to each one of us youngsters to keep us awake. I was thinking about it just the other day, and I just wondered if a child or a man in these modern times would take a clove out of his handkerchief or pocket in church and put it in his mouth what in the world his neighbor would think of him."—Kansas City Journal.

Too Busy to Grow.

A small office boy who had worked in the same position for two years on a salary of $3 a week finally plucked up enough courage to ask for an increase in wages.

"How much more would you like to have?" inquired his employer.

"Well," answered the lad, "I don't think $2 more a week would be too much."

"Well, you seem to me a rather small boy to be earning $3 a week," remarked his employer.

"I suppose I do. I know I'm small for my age," the boy explained, "but, to tell you the truth, since I've been here I haven't had time to grow."

He got the raise.—St. Nicholas.

Underwear and Callus.

The reasons for the flannel underwear preventing chilling are these: The material is a bad conductor of heat, hence it retains in itself the heat acquired from the body, and this heat is largely given to the moisture absorbed. Flannel also absorbs more moisture than an equal thickness of cotton or linen, and it retains moisture better than either. Now, the passing away of moisture into the air always means the cooling of the surface from which it passes. Taking an ordinary thin garment of linen or cotton, the loss of moisture may be so rapid as to cause a very great cooling, amounting, so far as the skin itself is concerned, to a chill.

Do You Know?

That the holder of a check cannot render the maker liable, should the bank on which it is drawn fail, if he has neglected to present it for payment within a short time after receiving it?

That, except in four states, the holder of a check cannot sue the bank on which it is drawn should it decline to pay, though having an ample deposit belonging to the maker?

That a purchaser in good faith of a negotiable note or check obtains a good title thereto even though the seller had stolen it?

That, unless relieved by statute or express agreement, a tenant is liable for the rent of his store after it has burned down, although he was in no way negligent?

That an agreement for the sale of land must be in writing and that the payment of a part of the purchase money will not render the agreement a valid one?

That if an innkeeper loses or waives his lien for keeping his guest's property the lien is not revived by regaining the property?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Mississippi.

Mississippi was originally Mecht Saba, "Father of Waters," it was first called Mississippi by Tabott, a Jesuit explorer, and one account after another has been since added until it has become down. The Choctaws called it the "Long river," the Illinois Indians knew it as the "Great Fish river," on old maps it is designated as La Grande Riviere, Riviere Conception, Riviere Baude, Fleuve St. Louis, Rio del Esperito Santo, Rio Escondido and many other names. The Indian tribes that lived on its banks named different sections to please themselves, and it is said that from its source to its mouth it was originally called by more than 100 names. Some philologists doubt the correctness of the translations given above and commonly received and think the original word means "all the rivers of the earth."

A Favored Instrument.

The story is told of a newly rich woman who on the occasion of her daughter's wedding gave a large reception, for which music was furnished by an orchestra of twelve pieces. The leader of this orchestra was a violinist who had achieved a social as well as a professional success, and the rich woman evidently wished to recognize this fact and make clear her knowledge of it. When the evening was half over the butler approached the musicians, who were having a short intermission, and in his loudest manner he said after referring to a paper in his hand:

"The violin sits in the dining room; the rest of the instruments sits in the pantry."

Taptoo is not the only way in which taptoo was formerly spelled. Taptoo and taptoo are also to be found in old books. Watson's Military Dictionary, fifth edition, 1765, gives the following: "To beat the taptoo, to order all to retire to their quarters; taptoo, sometimes called the retreat; the beat of drum at night for all soldiers in garrison to retire to their quarters and to their tents in the field."

In the 1768 edition of Grose's "Military Antiquities" the following is to be found: "Taptoo, the signal for soldiers to retire to their quarters or barracks and to the sutlers to draw no more liquor, from whence it derives its name; the taptoo is seldom beat in camp."

In Johnson's Dictionary "taptoes," meaning a general beat of drums, was given as the derivation of taptoo, but that was surely one of the "whimsical guesses at etymology suggested by previous writers." Watson says that the beat called "the general" was to give notice to the forces that they are to march and that "batter de tambour" was the corresponding term in French.—Notes and Queries.

When an Actress Sings.

"Actresses are among my best customers," said the saleswoman in the waist department. "They usually have a clear idea of what they want. Their figures are good, and it is therefore easy to fit them. They do not economize on the price. When I see an actress come in I know I am going to sell a good waist with no trouble at all. She will state exactly what she is looking for. She will slip it on, glance at it quickly but with the knowing eye, order it sent and be off, without wasting her time or mine. She's a delightful relief from the woman who tries on three dozen blouses, doesn't know what she wants in the first place and at the end of two hours goes away without buying anything. Oh, yes; there are plenty of such women, but they're never actresses!"—Philadelphia Record.

Use Both Hands.

That people should learn to use both hands with equal freedom is a matter of great importance. If when the right hand of a workman is tired he can continue his task with the left, then it is obvious that he will get through more work than a right handed man. In the boys' mechanical department in the German schools much of the work is done by the left hand under compulsion. The boys are taught to save, plane and hammer with the left hand as well as the right. The scholar is also taught to draw large circles on the blackboard, first with one hand and then with the other. Man is the only one who can use all his limbs with equal facility. Man uses his eyes equally well and also the legs, except that most people kick with the right foot. But how few can use more than one hand to advantage? And this is so simply because of lack of early training.

Throat Coughs

A tickling in the throat; hoarseness at times; a deep breath irritates it;—these are features of a throat cough. They're very deceptive and a cough mixture won't cure them. You want something that will heal the inflamed membranes, enrich the blood and tone up the system.

Scott's Emulsion

is just such a remedy. It has wonderful healing and nourishing power. Removes the cause of the cough and the whole system is given new strength and vigor.

(PRONOUNCED SIC-KEEN)

Quickly Cures Consumption, Bronchitis, La. Grippe, Pneumonia, Coughs, Colds, Congestions, Night Sweats, Weakness, Pains and Aches, Hemorrhages.

It is a great system tonic and stomach regulator. Life is worth living, therefore if you have or are threatened with Consumption or Pulmonary trouble in any of its varied and insidious forms try in

PSYCHINE

(Pronounced Sickeen)

It will do more to conquer that unquarrelable and relentless hacking cough, to banish that unnatural hectic flush or that hollow, pallid cheek, yes, to bring you back from the very verge of the grave and restore you to perfect health, beauty and vigor than all other so-called Consumption cures combined. Psychine is the only dependable cure for Consumption.

Miss Wood Saved

"I have to thank Psychine for my present health. Last spring and summer I was so weak that I could hardly drag myself across the floor. I could not sleep the carpet under any consideration; I went for a drive I had to lay down when I came back; I went for a mile or two on my wheel I was too weak to lift it through the gate-way, and many times I dropped utterly exhausted from fatigue. Instead of a pale, hollow-cheeked, melancholy girl, I am today healthy and full of life."

No. 3 "Scots Queen"

A Light, Roomy Every Day Stiegh

The cause of a great deal of the feeling of poor running quality in other styles is that they are not built to track in our roads, and are also too low. You can use a straight or double bar shaft, and on any road you want to with a "Scots Queen." They are built higher than the ordinary, which gives them added beauty in appearance and perfect safety in rough roads. Finished in a Blue or Heliogray, and Plush trimming, makes a nice job.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Rev. F. S. Bamford, of St. John, will preach in the Baptist Church next Sunday in the morning and evening.

The Larrigan Manufacturers' Association of the Maritime Provinces will hold a special meeting in Bridgetown, November 15.

Sunday next being the first in October the evening service in the respective churches will begin at 7 o'clock and so continue until further notice.

On Saturday there will be a general shoot on the Bridgetown range, open to all the military teams of Annapolis county, commencing at 9 o'clock and continuing throughout the day. There will be two competitions and the entrance fee will be $1.50. All the competitors will be expected to furnish their own ammunition. The merchants of the town have very generously subscribed to the fund and a very liberal prize list will be offered. There will be from thirty to thirty-five prizes consisting of many useful articles such as a half barrel of flour, ladies' shoes, etc. and also five annual subscriptions to the Weekly Monitor or Bear River Telephone.

PERSONAL MENTION

44 Lighthouses Swept Away In Hurricane.

Four Keepers Were Drowned and Much Other Damage Done Around New Orleans.

New Orleans, October 2.—Forty-four light houses are either swept into the sea and lost or so badly damaged that no light can be shown and four lighthouse keepers drowned during last night's hurricane, is the summary of the report made by the light house inspector Shears, New Orleans, of lighthouses located on the coast and adjacent islands between the mouth of the Mississippi river and Mobile. Mr. Shears did not investigate the lighthouses located between Mobile and Pensacola.

Frank Charlton Drowned In the Miller Brook.

Seized With a Fit While Drowning a Hive of Bees He Fell to His Death.

Frank Charlton, only son of Phineas Charlton, South Williamson, was found dead in the Miller Brook at that place yesterday morning about 9 o'clock. The young man had been subject to fits all his life and it is thought that he was seized with one while at the brook, causing him to fall into it. He had left his home a quarter of a mile distant, some few minutes before, with the intention of darning out a hive of bees. To do this he stood on a bundle of hoop poles soaking in the brook, and the fact that his body was found close to this bundle, indicates that he was seized with a fit while standing there. The young man was twenty-five years old and bore an exemplary character. The funeral takes place today at 2 o'clock. He was a brother of Mrs. Stanley Marshall and Mrs. (Rev.) J. H. Balcon, of Clarence.

How About Painting?

If your house is at all weather beaten, paint it. Don't let it "run down". Paint it with SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT—most economical paint on the market.

S.W.P. is most economical because it works easiest under the brush, covers the greatest surface to the gallon, wears longest, and is always full measure.

What We Claim for Ferrol

FERROL is an Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, and if it were nothing more it would take front rank because of the quality and quantity of the oil used and the scientific method of preparation. But FERROL has special claims which take it out of the ordinary class of Emulsion altogether. For instance:

FERROL combines Iron and Phosphorus with the oil, and no other emulsion contains these ingredients, although it is well known that they should always be administered together, as each is the complement of the other.

FERROL is so scientifically prepared that the first processes of digestion are actually performed in the process of manufacture, and the emulsion is ready for instant absorption into the blood. This is of the utmost importance to persons with delicate stomachs.

FERROL

unlike other emulsions, is positively palatable, and not only in a thousand find any difficulty in taking it. FERROL contains the three essentials of life, viz.: Fat, Iron, and Phosphorus—they have never been combined before.

FERROL holds the record for increasing the weight. FERROL has received more endorsements from medical men than any other preparation on the market.

FERROL will cure any case of Consumption that is capable of cure.

FERROL is an absolute specific for Colds, Croup, Bronchitis and all kindred troubles.

FERROL is an unfailing remedy for nervous prostration, Chronic Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

Finally, the formula is freely published, and in taking FERROL you "know what you take."

The Wings of the Morning

By LOUIS TRACY
Copyright, 1903, by Edward J. Clode

"Biscuits! They thought the bags contained patent fodder until I enlightened them."
It was on the tip of her tongue to pounce on him with the cognom. "Then you have been an officer in the army." But she forbore. She had guessed this earlier. Yet the miscellaneous light in her eyes defied control. He was warned in time and pulled himself up short.
"You read my face like a book," she cried.

"No printed page was ever so legible. Now, Miss Deane, we have gossiped too long. I am a jagged this morning, but before starting work I have a few serious remarks to make."
"I repudiate diggs!" she inquired saucily.
"I repudiate diggs!" In the first place, you must not make any more expressions in the matter of food. The eggs were a wonderful effort; but, flattered by success, you may poison yourself."
"Secondly?"

"You must never pass out of my sight without carrying a revolver, not so much for defence, but as a signal. Did you take one when you went bird's nesting?"
"No. Why?"
There was a troubled look in his eyes when he answered:
"It is best to tell you at once that before help reaches us we may be visited by cruel and bloodthirsty savages. I would not even mention that if it were a remote contingency. As matters stand, you ought to know that such a thing may happen. Let us trust in God's goodness, that assistance may come soon. The island has seemingly been deserted for many months, and therefore, our best chance of escape. But I am obliged to warn you lest you should be taken unawares."

Iris was serious enough now.
"How do you know that such danger threatens us?" she demanded.
He countered readily. "Because I happen to have read a good deal about the China sea and its frequenters," he said. "I am the last man in the world to alarm you needlessly. All I mean among the bushes, abandoned, forgotten, horrific. Then he smothered a cry of surprise.
"By Jove!" he muttered. "There is no 'X' and dot. The sign is meant for a skull and crossbones. It lies exactly on the part of the island where we saw that queer looking bald patch today. First thing tomorrow before the girl awakes I must examine that place."

He resolutely stretched himself on his side, and the great outcrops, now thoroughly dried by sun and fire. In a minute he was sound asleep.

CHAPTER V.
HE AWOKE to find the sun high in the heavens. Iris was up and eating breakfast; a fine fire was crackling cheerfully, and the presiding goddess had an altered her appearance that the sailor surveyed her with astonishment.
He noisily assumed a sitting posture, tucked his feet beneath him and blinked. The girl's face was not where he had expected it. Her white canvas shoes were replaced by spick and span, this island, and her white canvas shoes were replaced by spick and span, this island, and her white canvas shoes were replaced by spick and span, this island.

So soundly had he slept that his senses returned but slowly. At last he had risen with the dawn and, consulting her natural feeling of repulsion, selected from the store he accumulated yesterday some more suitable garments than those in which she escaped from the wreck.
He quietly took stock of his own lattered condition and passed a reflective hand over the stubble on his chin. In a few days his face would resemble a scrubbing brush. In that momentary moment he would have exchanged even his pipe and tobacco box, worth untold gold, for shaving tackle. Who can say why his thoughts took such a turn? Twenty-four hours can effect great changes in the human mind if controlling influences are active.

Then came a sharp revulsion of feeling. His name was Robert—a man, he reached for his boots, and Iris heard him.
"Good morning!" she cried, smiling sweetly. "I thought you would never awake. I suppose you were very, very tired. Please wash quickly. The eggs will be hard."
"Eggs?"
"Yes. I made a collection among the trees. I tasted one of a lot that looked good. It was first rate."

He had not the moral courage to begin the day with a rebuke. She was irrefragable, but she really must not do these things. He smothered a sigh in the improvised basin which was placed ready for him.
Miss Deane had prepared a capital meal. Of course the ham and biscuits still bulked large in the bill of fare, but there were boiled eggs, fried bananas and an elderly coconut. These things, supplemented by clear, cold water, were not so bad for a couple of castaways hundreds of miles from everywhere.

For the life of him the man could not refrain from displaying the conversational art in which he excelled. Their talk dealt with Italy, Egypt, India. He spoke with the ease of culture and enthusiasm. Once he slipped into anecdote apropos of the helplessness of British soldiers in any matter outside the scope of the king's regulations. "I remember," he said, "seeing a cavalry subaltern and the members of an escort sitting half starved on a number of bags piled up in the Sudan desert, well grown trees, where the ground bore traces of humanity in the shape of a wrinkled and mildewed pair of Chinese boots, a wooden sandal, even the decayed remains of a park, or litter. At last he reached the edge of the pit, and the sight that met his eyes bled him spellbound.

The labor of many hands had torn a chasm, a quarry, out of the side of the hill. Roughly circular in shape, it had a diameter of perhaps a hundred feet, and at its deepest part, toward the cliff, it ran to a depth of forty feet. On the lower side, where the sailor stood, it descended rapidly for some fifteen feet.
Grasses, shrubs, plants of every variety, grew in profusion down the steep slopes wherever seeds could find precarious nurture until a point was reached about ten or eleven feet from the bottom. There all vegetation ceased, as if forbidden to cross a magical circle.
Below this belt the place was a charnel house. The bones of men and animals mingled in wild confusion. Most were mere skeletons. A few bodies—some the sailor counted—yet preserved some resemblance of humanity. These latter were scattered among the older rotting skeletons. These latter were the first harvest of this modern gold mine. Characteristic hats and weapons denoted their nationality. The other things were the first harvest of this modern gold mine. Characteristic hats and weapons denoted their nationality. The other things were the first harvest of this modern gold mine.

Visitors to the Dominion Exhibition "too numerous to mention."
Miss Maude Porter, of Wolfville, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Roop.
Invitations are out for the reception of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Allen, at the home of Mr. Charles Allen, on the evening of Thursday, October 4th.
We are sorry to report Percy McNay ill at time of writing.
Miss Daisy Widd, of Westchester, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Ernest Froman.

A missionary tea for the members and friends of the W.M.A.S. is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Grimm on the evening of October 2nd.
Mrs. W. C. Sproule and two children returned on Saturday from a visit with relatives and friends in the Valley.
Miss Willa Roop leaves today (1st) to take a position in the millinery department at H. D. Woodbury's, Kingston.

Mrs. Drum, of Newton, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Roop.
Miss Oda Grimm and James Harnish recently spent a few days at Pleasant River.
Miss Grace Grimm has returned from Halifax where she has been attending the millinery openings. She will take charge of the millinery department in J. C. Grimm's store.
The picnic at Chain Lakes given by the Davison Lumber Co. on the 29th was largely attended by people from all parts of Annapolis and Lunenburg counties. Trains were run from Middleton and Lunenburg connecting with the D. L. Co.'s trains at Springfield Junction. It is estimated that about four thousand were present and "a jolly good time" seems to be the sentiment of all present.

How is Cure a Cold.
The question of how to cure a cold without unnecessary loss of time is one in which we are all more or less interested, for the quicker a cold is gotten rid of the lesser the danger of pneumonia and other serious diseases. B. W. E. Hall, of Waverly, Va., has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for years and says: "I firmly believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be absolutely the best preparation on the market for colds. I have recommended it to my friends and they all profit with me. For sale by W. A. Warren, Pharm. B."

MR. JARED BARTON leaned his gray head wearily on his hand.
"There they go again," he said aloud in a distressed tone. "And there she came here they were thicker than the other side. I wish I could find a way out of this mess."

The angry voices which had been the cause of this soliloquy became angrier and more threatening.
"And if I ever see you looking at her again with that sick cat expression on your mug I'll injure it so you can't get up for a week."
"That's Dick," said the father, laughing in spite of himself at this threat.

"Bess always gets ahead. He's just what I was when I was his age," chuckled the man in the library. "Great Scott! They'll kill each other yet! Here, you young hounds!" he yelled, rushing out into the hall. "You pie yourself up and get out of this. If you're got to fight, you go out behind the barn and fight till one or the other of you gets killed. Look out there, Dick!"

Dick had his brother down and was sitting on him. He had just raised his arm to administer a good blow on the upturned face of Bert when the latter caught his arm and dragged him off.
"Bert did not take the trouble to get up, but lay flat on his back, looking up at his brother with a wicked one-sided grin."

"Get up, Bert," ordered his father, and he snuffed to his feet. Very suddenly Mrs. Barton's patience gave out. Catching Bert by the collar and retaining his grip on Dick's arm, he shook both boys until his face grew purple.

"What do you mean by this?" he asked the banisters gasping for breath. The boys made no attempt to resist; they merely grew utterly limp. They were taken to their rooms and left to their rage, with fair hair and dreary gray eyes. All of the mischief perpetrated in the particular suburb in which they lived was sooner or later tracked to their door or to the doors of their innocent accomplices. They had one redeeming feature; until a few weeks ago they had been good boys.

When one was punished the other was punished before the rest of the family could get into the room. It seemed, sometimes, to their anguished parents as if the twins could read each other's mind.

While their mother was alive she had been able to control them to some extent, and her last words were, "Keep the twins together." At that time they were so close that "an blade couldn't be aimed between them," as Mr. Barton remarked. But that was some time ago.

"The same old story," he said wearily and went back into his library, leaving the twins glaring at each other. Presently they began to look sheepish. Then they sprang up and stood with their hands at the same time. The argument was understood to be closed for the present.

Mr. Barton watched them go down the street together, arm in arm, and gave a sigh of relief. He knew he would have an hour or two of peace.

While he stood musing at the window his little daughter Bess and her governess came around the corner and in at the gate.

"What does she mean by encouraging those young whelps to fall in love with each other?" he said. "His daughter Bess bounced into the room waving an envelope in her hand. "Letter from Bob," she whooped. "Hurry up and read it!"

"Quietly, Bessie," said Miss Gray, who had entered behind the little girl. "When you have finished visiting with your father, come upstairs and I will help you with your French for tomorrow."

that I can beat you at this game," and he departed cheerfully for the west.
Mr. Barton thought of all this rather complacently, and then he sat down and wrote a letter to Bob. It was even more characteristic than the letter from his son.

My dear Bob—"The time has come," said the walrus said, "to speak of many things." I'm in the devil of a fix, and I guess it's your turn to show out your old dad. Besides, you got me into it. It was you with your precious Boston House that got me to engage a governess for my tomboy girl. I blessed you profusely at first, and, as far as Bess goes, I still do. She is getting quite tame. But the Boston House, as you call your brothers, have set up a three ring circus, and I have to go around watching the animals so they won't bite each other and get into a phobia. I'm getting a little too old to play the role of ringmaster with any success. "And it's all on account of Eliza," as we used to sing.

This governess whom I got on your advice is a very engaging young lady, and, in fact, she has engaged the affections of those two pups. I don't blame 'em very much, either. That's the worst of it. She says she's twenty-one, but she doesn't look a day over eighteen. A cunning little Boston-eyed trick you could hide up your sleeve. Has an A. B. from Wellesley and claims she was born and bred in Boston, which is really all I have against her. The twins began by hating her, and I had to give 'em a couple of thrashings apiece to make 'em stop playing unbecomingly practical jokes. Now I have to thrash 'em to keep 'em from loving her too strongly.

"Bert setting too much for me. If you expect to keep my gray hairs out of the grave, you come home and distract their attention. You always could manage them, because you did not have to live with them. This is both a prayer and a command. Come home and help your helpees."

P. R.—If you still feel that you must marry, marry the governess. She's the one I saw from Boston too. Privately, I think she was born in Chicago, and Wellesley is all that ails her. Perhaps she knows you. I haven't asked her. He sent this letter and at dinner that evening looked around his table with a complacent and chuckling satisfaction. The twins looked thin and pathetic and tried not to eat much.

Miss Gray was demure and smiling in a dainty dinner gown, and the hoiden, Bess, had her hair ribbons properly tied and both stockings pulled up. Dinner was peaceful, but there was a tempest afterward, and Mr. Barton sent the twins to bed at a o'clock. He was unusually gentle and patient with them.

After they had made up for the night they talked about this. They did not like the look of it.
"Did you see how he grinned at her? Just like an old goat! If we don't settle who's to have her, she'll get busy, but I end things by getting her himself," said Bert.

"Make a pretty stepmother. Rather prettier than her stepsons, I should say," was the dominating reply.
Two days later Mr. Barton came to lunch with a telegram in his hand.

"The good news," he said. "Bob's coming Thursday."
Bess gave a whoop and a jump and grabbed the telegram, which Bert snatched from her hand before she had had a chance to read a word.

"Hurrah!" yelled Dick, doing a war dance specialty of his.
Miss Gray, with a very red face, tried to keep Bess from dancing a jig on the table, and Mr. Barton, seeing her evident annoyance, spoke apologetically. "When you become acquainted with Bob, you'll not wonder quite so much at this splendid joy. He's rather a good sort, if he is like his dad. Shouldn't wonder if you'd like him," he continued complacently. "He has a habit of being fond of Boston."

"I shall do my best to like him," she said prettily to the old man, and she ran upstairs and said to herself, "I'll see that the Boston habit becomes settled."

Thursday came. All the family but the governess went to the train, and Bob was almost carried home on the family shoulders. Dinner had been postponed for his coming, and Miss Gray waited rather nervously in the dining room. She had donned her prettiest dinner gown, and her eyes were very bright and her cheeks very pink.

The twins came first and stood to one side to see what Bob would say to their divinity. In a moment they leaped, weak and helpless, against each other, and then they feebly left the room. Bob, not waiting for the introduction Mr. Barton seemed trying to make, walked across the room and kissed Bess good-bye.

Mr. Barton grew solemn, darkly purple. "So you're in the too, you, you?" "No, dear, dear," said Bob. "I bet you currency to cookies I'd bet you at this game. You're skinned. The currency is mine. Buck up, dad, and salute your daughter. As for the twins, they can't say they don't like their sister."

A Cunning Baboon.
In South Africa some of the fruit gardens are much exposed to the ravages of large cecropiaphic apes, and a good guard has to be kept or the results of long labor would be lost. In some of these gardens grow certain shrubs which are much affected by wasps, the insects liking to attach themselves to their nests. These wasps, though small, have a very venomous sting. Baboons had often been noticed eating with envious glances the fast ripening fruit in one certain garden, but feared to gather for fear of attracting the assaults of the wasps. One morning the farmer heard terrible cries, and with the aid of a good field-glass he witnessed the following tragedy: A large, venerable baboon, chief of the band, was catching the younger apes and pitching them into the shrubs whereon hung the wasps' nests. This he repeated again and again in spite of the most piteous cries from his victims. Of course the wasps assumed the defensive in swarms. During this part of the performance the old brute quietly fed on the fruit, deigning occasionally to throw fragmentary remains to some female and young baboons a little farther off."

Afflicted with Sore Eyes for 33 Years.
I have been afflicted with sore eyes for thirty-three years. Thirteen years ago I became totally blind and was blind for six years. My eyes were badly inflamed. One of my neighbors insisted upon my trying Chamberlain's Salve and gave me a box of it. To my surprise it healed my eyes in a few days. My eyes came back to me.—P. C. Eavis, Cynthia, Kentucky. Chamberlain's Salve is for sale by W. A. Warren, Pharm. B.

LAWRENCETOWN.

Rev. J. T. Eaton of Weymouth, is spending a few days in town.

F. E. Wheelock and W. H. Longley left last week to take a course at Yale.

Poy Whitman who has been spending a few weeks here, returned last week to Melford, Mass.

Several from here attended the picnic at Springfield and the Dominion camp last Saturday.

Dr. W. R. Morse of Ohio, Yarmouth county, has been paying his old home a visit. All were glad to see the genial face of the Doc.

Every day finds many of our citizens going to Halifax and all those returning speak in the highest terms of the exhibits of our grand Dominion. Only a few days remaining for those who wish to go.

The D. A. R. would have been somewhat handicapped the past few weeks had it not been for our grand system of water. Their engines have all been having their tanks filled here, as it was impossible to get water at their own tanks east or west of us. They gladly pay for same and our firm have charge of the watering up of the engines.

J. E. Schaffer has as many as eighteen persons in his apple warehouse getting apples ready for South Africa market. Most of the apples and pears are being packed in bushel boxes and half barrels, both of which make a neat and compact package, and when the fancy paper stoweling is on, they show up well. Better call in there any day and see this work done.

Dr. Hall gave an interesting talk on his recent trip to Europe in Whitney's hall on Monday evening. He told of his trip, of several weeks duration, from the time he left until his arrival home. The account of the doctor gave of the many sights of London held the closest attention of the large audience. The proceeds of the lectures go toward a library for our schools.

Mrs. Stephen Pennell passed away on Friday evening last she had a severe paralytic stroke from which she never recovered. The deceased lady was the eldest daughter of the late Deacon Albert Dunn, of Ingilville, and she leaves a husband, mother and two sisters to mourn their loss. Mr. P. has the full sympathy of all in his bereavement.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It cures in a few days for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by druggists, 75 cents.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Misses Mabel and Ella Longley and brother Willard have been visiting their uncles in Halifax the last two weeks.

The Pandora Thermometer

The thermometer on the Pandora range oven means precisely in accuracy to the cook what the square and compass mean to the draftsman. Without the square and compass the draftsman would have to work entirely by guess, just as you do without an accurate and reliable thermometer on your oven.

The Pandora thermometer reduces cooking to an exact science. You know precisely how much heat you have and what it will do in a given time. It is one of the small things which makes the Pandora so much different and better than common ranges.

A Horse's Nose.

A man at the horse market recently refused to buy an apparently desirable animal on the ground that "he had a Roman nose."

"A horse's nose tells a whole lot about his disposition," said the reader of equine character. "An animal with a prominent nose has courage and stubbornness in equal proportion; consequently he makes a first class balker.

Noses of the pacific variety indicate meekness. A nose that is wide between the eyes denotes trustworthiness and generally vigorous temperament.

LIVED ON GREEN BANANAS.

American Sailors Shipwrecked Had Hard Time Keeping Alive.

Victoria, B. C. Sept. 29.—The steamship Cambrian, which returned to Sydney from a South Sea cruise, has reported a picking up of American seamen, Charles Green and William Brown, who lived for seven and a half months on green bananas for the most part, when they were cast away from their wrecked Indian schooner Saria, on Easter Island.

The Chileans on the island succored their countrymen, but refused food to the Americans as well as lodging. The two were shown a cave to sleep in, but found
