Don't neglect the eyes. Lost sight is irrevocable. A dentist can replace a lost tooth with an artificial one which may pass for the tooth of nature, but no oculist can restore the eye once sightless to its normal state. Save your eyes from being overtaxed by using spectacles to relieve and strengthen them. We can fit almost every eye with the lens required to aid the sight and spare its optic nerves. Parties in town or country can have their eyes tested at their own homes if sufficient notice is given us at our store.

your child

You note the difference in children. Some have nearly every ailment, even with the best of care. Others far more exposed pass through unharmed. Weak children will have continuous colds in winter, poor digestion in summer. They are without power to resist disease, they have no reserve strength. Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites, is cod-liver oil, partly digested and adapted to the weaker digestions of children.

More creative power is contained in Hood's Sarsaparilla than in any other similar preparation. It costs the proprietor and manufacturer more. It costs the laborer more and it is worth more to the consumer. More skill is required in its preparation and it contains medicinal qualities than any other medicine. Consequently it has a record of more cures and its sales are more than those of any other preparation. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine so far because it is an honest medicine and thousands of testimonials prove that it does actually and permanently cure disease.

Spiritual Retreats.

Spiritual retreats being in the mind of the Catholic Church, a matter of leading importance, our readers will readily bear with what otherwise might seem too lengthy a detail in the following article. As is well said in the excellent monthly, the "Messenger of the Sacred Heart," New York, there is a strange fascination in solitude when the mind has something to engage its faculties. No man dreads to be alone when near the boundless, living waters of the sea, and all men willingly linger in repose at the sight of some majestic mountain. If the material universe make solitude so agreeable to the human soul, if the shadow and circumstance can make us seek what men naturally dread, there must be in the spiritual world whose reality and substance are but dimly figured by the things of sense, more than enough to withdraw us from the company of our fellows, that we may return to them filled with higher and nobler thoughts.

From the visible we learn to think of the invisible creation, and thence we ascend to contemplate the Creator of both. The same mercy which has ordained this process of the human soul, has sweetly provided, through the charitable zeal of some of its ministers, the means by which it may learn to cultivate the habit of retiring from mere external things to employ their minds and wills in the things of God. We cannot, moreover, help noticing that these same ministers of mercy have wisely chosen for these spiritual "Retreat" homes, the spots and scenes which of all in God's world are best adapted to suggest his own most impressive attributes.

The demands of modern life, taxing every faculty of mind and straining every nerve of body, leave little time for that rest in which the soul labors and is strengthened. Hence the occasional solitude that are placed in our way for the most part pass unnoticed.

True, indeed, priests and religious spend some days every year in the solitude of retreats, and come forth refreshed and more vigorous to the discharge of their duties. But laymen have no less need of solitude. Wholly absorbed in business or social cares, very many are in danger of death from starvation, not indeed that there is lack of food for the body, but there is an utter dearth of food for the soul. Prayer and meditation are the soul's food, and the soul waxeth faint from lack of food.

Stress of mental anxiety and restless worry, again and again, stratter nerve and brain, and force the strong man aside into a painful retirement. Some there are, too, who add to this mental strain the indulgence that waste away and destroy their mental powers. In the very noon of life they are cast aside as wrecks upon life's waters. Some of these linger on, dragging out their life in shameful retirement, or if they emerge for a time it is only to sink deeper into the depths. The retirement of which we write is neither painful nor shameful, nay, indeed, it is both pleasant and profitable.

Houses of Retreat are neither for mental nor for physical weakness; far from it, they are for those whose mental faculties are vigorous and whose strength of body will enable them to devote themselves to the consideration of serious affairs—serious, not in the sense of dull and dry, but in the sense of important. For what affair can be more important than that which concerns our eternal destiny? What consideration can so fully engross the earnest-minded man, the man who is impressed with the sense of the value of the soul?

The man who is forced by the needs of his position in life to labor and toil with mind and hand, day after day, of necessity, finds that his soul is in danger of being buried under a mountain of earthly cares. When he approaches the sacraments he puts aside these cares for awhile, but the effort he is obliged to make convinces him more and more that his soul must labor if it would not die. Spiritual exercises are as needful for the soul as corporal exercises are for the body. Now a retreat is a series of spiritual exercises, it is a period of labor to the soul. In retreat the soul gives proof of its life by its energy, and gains new vigor and new strength by its labors.

For the greater number of Catholics the familiar mission exercises afford the only available opportunity for sustained serious thought on the great truths many, however, need and desire more than this. The Mission exercises are limited for the most people to the morning Mass and instruction, the evening instruction and sermon, as the rest of the day is claimed by business cares, in a retreat, on the contrary, the spiritual exercises form the only occupation and receive the undivided attention of mind and soul.

Until quite recently it was difficult for a layman to secure the benefits of a private retreat, not indeed from lack of will, but from dearth of opportunity. Now, however, the case is different. Religious houses, de voted wholly or in part to private retreats of laymen, under competent spiritual guidance, are to be found in various parts of the United States, and in Canada as well. For the present we subjoin the names we know in this our own country, and in the United States.

1. At Falls Views, Niagara, Ont., under the direction of the Carmelite Fathers.
2. The Novitiate of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary—Fathers of the Community of St. Basil.
3. The Jesuit Novitiate of the Canada Mission at the village of Saint Anicet, seven miles from Montreal.
4. The Novitiate of the Oblate Fathers, at Lachine, near Montreal, and the Novitiate of other religious orders men in those localities.
5. Villa Maures, Sainte Eglise Bay, Quebec, with its beautiful church, all of which the piety of the faithful there, donated for the apostolic work of retreats—happy evidence that the love for souls which animated the Bressani, a Nave, a Breban, a Jogues, a * * * a Rasle, and others of the glorious bands of the New France missionaries, has not died out among that Catholic population.
6. The old Rose Hill Manor House, on the grounds of Fordham College, New York. It is perhaps the first house in the United States that was open to the laity for retreats.
7. Georgetown College, Washington, and near the national capital. For many years it has made provision for the reception of laymen who wish to devote a few days to the exercises of a retreat.
8. St. Michael's Retreat, Passionist Monastery, West Hoboken, N. J.
9. The Jesuit Novitiate at Frederick, Md., and at Florissant, St. Louis, Mo.
10. The Trappist Fathers of Gethsemani Abbey, Nelson County, Ky.
11. Maures Institute, Keyser Island on the sound, near South Norwalk, Conn. It is the only house in the United States thus far devoted exclusively to the work of private retreats for priests and laymen. During the month of July, however, it is reserved to members of the Order. The name "island" is now somewhat of a misnomer, as the magnificent causeway built from the mainland makes this beautiful island a small peninsula, and enables visitors to drive on an excellent carriage road, all the (2 miles) from the depot in South Norwalk) to Maures House on the "island." The trolley cars come now within a mile of the Institution. The opportunities afforded by this House of Spiritual Retreats have been eagerly seized by many laymen and clergymen. Among the latter are to be mentioned the Bishops of Brooklyn, Albany, Ogdensburg and Hartford.

published by the glorious Society of Jesus has been the restoring of spiritual life or its nourishing by means of the Exercises which seem almost inspired in the work of your illustrious and sainted founder. Among the fruitful labors of the Society in this country not the least important has been the directing of these holy exercises for the spiritual regeneration of clergy and laity. The advantages which are offered in the Retreat at Keyser Island are evident to any observer, and I most earnestly hope that they will be appreciated and embraced by very many of both the clergy and laity. I cannot but wish you and the Fathers who are united with you in this work all the richest blessings, and I hope that abundant fruits will crown your labors and encourage you to continue them with the zeal and charity which has characterized them hitherto. With sentiments of highest esteem and fraternal charity I remain Most faithfully yours in X. (Signed) F. CARD SARTOLI, Pr. Del. Apost.

Of these Spiritual Exercises, His Holiness Leo XIII., in his address to the priests of the diocese of Perugia said: "When my spirit first began to feel the need of special assistance I sought it long without finding any. I read many books over and over again without being satisfied. Finally, when the book of the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius fell into my hands I was obliged to say, 'This is the solid sustenance I have been seeking.' Since then I have never put that book aside. It's consideration on the 'End of Man' would by itself suffice to reform and reconstruct the whole social world."

A letter from Cracow, Poland, says: "The socialist movement in our city has attained considerable dimensions. For several years, thanks to various circumstances, their very energetic and clever leaders have managed to hold mass meetings on May Day, invariably coming to conflict with the police. The market-place, where the meetings were held, is in the centre of the city, and public gatherings and processions are forbidden by law. This year the May festival passed off very quietly. But another movement now threatens to set bounds to socialist activity. For the past year the Catholic working men have been quietly forming themselves into unions. All these unions bear the name of 'Friendship.' There are already five of them in the outlying villages around Cracow. Not long since the Cracovian Prince Bishop Puzyna honored one of these unions with a Sunday afternoon visit, on which occasion the whole village of Pronduk was gay with banners and garlands. On the third of May all these unions held a grand fête for the consecration of their banners. The third of May has a peculiar significance for Poles, because on that date, 1792, the new constitution was proclaimed, which, owing to the subsequent partition of Poland, was never carried into effect. This day was chosen to mark the contrast between patriotic work and the demonstrations of the socialists who care nothing for the fatherland. The members assembled at 8 o'clock in the morning. The socialists manifested an inclination to disturb the procession, but when they saw the members gathering by thousands, they evidently changed their minds, for they took themselves off, and the procession marched quietly through the city to the church of St. Nicholas. Not until they were quite near the church did the members strike up a hymn, and marching as they sang, came gradually into the church. It was a thrilling scene. Father Labaj consecrated the banners, during which ceremony the members of the union continued to sing Church hymns. Doctor Chotkowski preached a sermon on the attitude of the Catholic Church towards the labor question. In the afternoon the unions made an excursion to a neighboring forest where, until nightfall they were entertained with dramatic and other amusements. The most perfect order was maintained throughout the day. The weather was threatening, but it never actually rained."

Ladies in the world may be admitted for private retreat at the convents of religious orders of women, especially where there are novitiates of the same, such as the novitiates of the Ladies of the Sacred Heart, of the Sisters of Notre Dame, of the Grey Nuns, of the Ursulines of Quebec; at the Dominican Nuns of the Congregation of St. C. de Ricci, 836 Madison Ave., Albany, N. Y.; at two other similar institutions in New York City, and other such establishments throughout the country both here and in the United States.

The following on the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius will be found interesting to the reader. Letter of Right Rev. Michael Tierney, D. D., Bishop of Hartford, Conn., to the Rev. Father Superior of Maures Institute, Keyser Island, Conn.

Dear Rev. Father,—I heartily commend the work done at Maures Institute, since its opening. As the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius practised there are so specially calculated to foster and develop a solid and tender devotion to the Sacred Heart of our Lord, I the more earnestly long to see them in use among our Catholics, both clergy and laity.

Sincerely yours in Christ,
M. TIERNEY,
Bp. of Hartford.

The Work of Daily Bread has lately been established in the city of Mexico, in connection with the Salesian Orphan Asylum. Each member of this association pledges himself to supply for one day in every year all the bread that is required for the use of the asylum. The expense of this is, at the present, $7. The Salesian college, asylum and workshops where food and instruction are given to poor children, are wholly dependent on the alms of the faithful, and it speaks well for the piety and generosity of the citizens of Mexico that these benevolent institutions have been so well supported.

Comotion approaching panic must have been caused on a recent Sunday in an uptown west-side Baptist Church in New York City since the Catholic Standard and Times, when the pastor announced his having undertaken a crusade against the Jews. He is the same Rev. Dr. Haldeman on whose promise of wiping the Catholic Church from the face of the American continent we commented a few months ago. We suppose he thinks he must have succeeded in his former enterprise, now that he is ready for a new one. And why his regard to the Hebrew? Because "the Jew is the financial master of the world. The largest commercial interests in New York are run by Jews. The Jews own the best portions of land and the best palaces in Europe. In a few years the Jews will control every profession in the world." From this enumeration of "facts" that are not so he passes to prophecy: "The Jews will soon build up in Palestine the most powerful kingdom on earth. An anti-Christ reigning at Jerusalem, who is to make his appearance before long, will smite the enemies of the Jews, devastate the nations, cause them to live in fear and trembling, and turn almost every thing upside down. This royal anti-Christ will next be overthrown by divine power, and then the Jews, after repenting of their sins, will turn to Christianity," chiefly, we suppose, by reason of the timely warning given by Rev. Dr. Haldeman. But if his prognostications are no more reliable than his "facts," little attention need be paid to a prophet making from a New York Baptist pulpit announcements of coming events that were unknown to the prophets of the Bible. Neither Jew nor gentile need worry about his saying; for in spite of his former effort to demolish Catholicism, it still remains, more flourishing than ever.

A letter has just been discovered among the archives of the British Museum dated as far back as the year 1750, and which gives the origin of the game of billiards as now played. The game, it appears, was invented in 1560 by a pawnbroker by the name of William Kew, in London, who was in the habit of taking down every night the three balls which hung before his shop, and pushing them about with his wooden yard measure on his counter. Hence the name billiards, which is an corruption of Bill's yard.

The Battle of the Ballots.

At this writing considerable doubt and uncertainty exists regarding the actual standing of the political parties in Canada, in consequence of the elections held all over the Dominion yesterday. The Grits claim that the Government is defeated and that Laurier will have a good working majority of Liberals when Parliament meets. But, in the absence of complete returns from Quebec, Ontario and the West, the question admits of much speculation. It is true that, according to present accounts, the three French Cabinet Ministers, Angers, Tailon and Desjardins, have been defeated in Quebec. It must be remembered, however, that, although this is a very serious blow to the Government, it does not mean that the Grits have secured a majority in the House of Commons. The Liberal majority in the House of Commons is still a very slender one, and it is not until the returns from Ontario and the West are known that the actual standing of the parties can be ascertained. The Grits claim that the Government is defeated and that Laurier will have a good working majority of Liberals when Parliament meets. stood from the following plank in their platform: "We renew and emphasize our allegiance to the policy of protection as the bulwark of American industrial independence and the foundation of American development and prosperity. This true American policy forbids foreign products that encourage home industry. It puts the burden of revenue on foreign goods; it secures the American market for the American producer; it upholds the American standard of wages for the American workman; it puts the factory by the side of the farm and makes the American farmer less dependent on foreign demand and price; it diffuses general thrift and founds the strength of all on the strength of each. In its reasonable application it is just, fair and impartial, equally opposed to foreign and domestic monopoly, to sectional discrimination and individual favoritism. We denounce the present Democratic tariff as sectional, injurious to the public credit and destructive to business enterprise. We demand such an equitable tariff on foreign imports which come into competition with American products as will not furnish adequate revenue for the necessary expenses of the government, but will protect American labor from degradation to the wage level of other lands."

In the face of the foregoing declaration of principles how foolish it would be for Canada to depart from the National policy. It must be plain to everyone who gives the question the slightest thought that, were the free trade principles advocated by the Grits to obtain, Canada would be at the mercy of our protected neighbors to the south. With their highly protected industries and free access to our markets our manufacturing and mercantile interests would be thrown out of employment, and the capital invested be lost. Not only that, but reciprocity would be out of the question; for the Republicans, notwithstanding that they place a reciprocity plank in their platform, will never make any advances in that direction until they are convinced they will thereby reap some benefit. But if the tariff barriers on the Canadian side were thrown down they would have nothing to gain by offering us reciprocity, from the very fact that they would already have free access to our markets, which is all they want. It must, therefore, be evident to everybody that the only hope Canada might have of obtaining reciprocity with her republican neighbors, if she so desired, would be by standing by the National Policy and keeping up the barriers that protect our home industries and preserve our home markets.

St. Dunstan's College.

The closing exercises of St. Dunstan's College, for the academic year 1895-6, took place in the Lyceum, before a large audience, on Thursday evening last. His Lordship, Bishop McDonald, presided over the exercises, and the Rev. Peter Curran, Rector of the College, presided over the exercises of the day. The exercises were presided over by the Rev. J. G. McDonald, of Summerside; his Hon. Lieutenant Governor Howland; D. J. Kane, Esq., U. S. Consul, his worship Mayor Lawson, and Judge D. O. M. Beaudin, occurred on the stage. The prizes, except the medals and diplomas, have been distributed at the college during the afternoon, and the names were simply read, saving considerable time. Following is the programme:

concentrated Philosophical thought. The address to the graduates was delivered by Rev. D. J. G. McDonald, of Summerside. In thought and diction it was excellent, and its eloquent delivery elicited rapturous and repeated demonstrations of applause. The address dealt with the matter of education, from a literary and Philosophical point of view and enunciated in emphatic and unmistakable language the essential constituents of a thorough mental and moral training. The Rev. orator then reviewed the history of old St. Dunstan's and showed how her aim had always been to impart a sound Christian education such as he had enunciated. He next passed in review the galaxy of her graduates who had won distinction in the different professions and in all walks of life. Complimentary addresses were then delivered by his Honor the Lieutenant Governor, his Honor the Mayor, the U. S. Consul, Judge Beaudin and the Rev. Rector of the College. The last named paid a high compliment to the excellence of the work done in St. Dunstan's by his first Rector, the Father Augustus. The interesting proceedings were then brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.
