A New Novel by a New Writer.

The Honey Pot by Countess Marczynska. It is a story of the stage, and never perhaps have the expectations and disappointments of the aspirant for a successful stage career been more naturally described. Two girls, Maggie and Lexie, hold the interest throughout. They are excellently contrasted. Maggie, the daughter of an actress, having been associated with the stage from her earliest childhood and influenced by its freedom, while Lexie has been brought up in refinement and wants a career for the use of her talent. It is not too much to say that Maggie, the lovable and loving girl who, with all her worldly wisdom, falls a prey to the man who captures her fancy, is a triumph of characterisation. Natural and human she is the heart of the book; but hardly less interesting is Lexie's stubborn fight with its happy ending and the many intimate pictures of the life of the chorus-girl. The whole story rings true. Paper, 65c.; Cloth, 90c.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

"KYRA,"

The Ward of the Earl of Vering.

CHAPTER V.
The Beauty of the Hour.

"Is Charlie right?" he thought; "and am I indeed so favored as to be looked upon as a dangerous rival?"

Then, as he turned his glance to the lovely face beside him, and met her grand eyes examining his face, his heart beat fast.

"How crowded, is it not?" she said, as they passed along one of the corridors. "I thought you would not come to-night," she said, in that low voice which a woman uses for the man she is desirous of making her lord and master. "It is so hot and you looked so tired last night; and I thought of the clear Highland skies and the blue lakes, knowing that you would be thinking of them too, and I said, 'Mr. Chester will have gone to-day.'"

"And I am here," he said, looking down at her. "Don't you think I must be an insatiable drum follower?—that I must be irrevocably wedded to the follies and the gayeties of the life fashionable?"

She looked up at him.

"Why should I think about you at all?" she said, with an arch smile.

"Why, indeed?" he assented, fixing his dark eyes upon her. "Only because I think so much about you."

"Do you?" she retorted, softly; "and that is so little to think of."

"You do not know how small, how pitifully mean and insignificant most women's lives are. Now, a man has so many objects in life—so many ambitions—"

She was stopped by the strange smile on his handsome face.

"Your words seem like a reproach," he said. "I have no objects, no ambitions, beyond winning the Derby and—yes, you are right, I have one great ambition!"

By this time they had strolled into the ballroom again, and were in the midst of a waltz.

"How I should like to know it," she breathed, her face, almost touching his shoulder, turned up to his face with an expression of such serene innocence that would have fitted any child and deceived any man.

"How I wish that I dared tell you," he answered, his deep tones low and suppressed.

She sighed so softly, that it was like the rustle of the feathers on a dove's breast.

Cure the Skin Through the Skin

It is now thoroughly established among skin specialists that eczema is purely a skin disease, due to a germ beneath the skin and curable only through the skin. Thousands of people suffer with skin disease who are perfectly healthy otherwise, which shows that their blood is not diseased. Ugly-tasting stomach remedies are therefore as worthless for skin diseases as they are for a tooth-ache.

Eczema germs must be WASHED AWAY. Smeary salves do no good for they cannot penetrate the skin. They merely clog the pores and aid

"Some day I may find my courage up to the requisite point—I may dare to whisper what the object and ambition of my life is. Now—"

The waltz ended, and they stood for a moment underneath the gallery, her hand upon his arm, her eyes bent wistfully upon the bouquet in her hand. As he paused, hesitating as any man who is not a coxcomb will hesitate, the thin figure of Count Hudspiel came behind and then in front of them.

"Miss Devigne, this next is mine, I think? How do you do, Chester? Fearfully hot, isn't it? Ah, if you had but a mosquito I would forget that this is not my beloved Spain."

And with a smile that showed all his teeth, he held out his arm for Lillian Devigne.

Percy had received the count with his usual grim reserve and iron composure, and had spoken some cold words of greeting; but the count's civil smile and display of teeth were lost on him, for he had kept his eyes on Lillian Devigne's face. But there was no terror or pallor to reward his scrutiny and make him uncomfortable this time; Lillian Devigne met the count's looks pleasantly; with a faint smile exchanged Percy's strong muscular arm for the count's thin one without a word. As she did so, however, a glance, swift and sweet shot from her violet eyes to Percy's, and sent him to the anteroom with that swift heartbeat which always follows in a man's heart such a woman's shaft.

The anteroom was dimly lighted; the ballroom was intensely hot, and contained no attraction for him, for certainly the sight of Lillian Devigne dancing with Count Hudspiel was anything but an attraction; and Lillian Devigne alone had power to draw him to the hot and crowded assemblies which he contemned and disliked, and with a restless, unsatisfied sigh he picked out a dark corner and threw himself into a settee. Then, instantly, as was his wont, he plunged into abstracted thought, and for all consciousness of the place and scene, the ballroom and its whirling contents might have been a hundred miles away—all that, is, saving one human being of the many, and that one—Lillian Devigne!

"Here am I," he mused, "the freest man in England head over heels in love with the most lovely woman not only in England, but the world. Well, that is the simple statement of an acknowledged fact, and the deduction is—that I lose my liberty and gain a prize for which there are already a hundred competitors. Shall I gain it?—that is the question. Suppose I am ready to give up the drag, the whistles—the everything, will she be willing to crown the sacrifice and transform this useless, purposeless life of mine to an existence of blissful content? I love her as I shall never love another woman," he continued, stroking his mustache, "that is, if I know what love is," and he stretched out his hands and clasped his knee. "Yes, I know what love is—I love Lillian Devigne; and if I know what is a woman, she is as true as steel, and worthy of any man's love! Now let me think. Is there anything against me being myself?" and he pursed up his mouth. "What would Lady Devigne say? She's pleasant enough now, but— After all, I hear nothing of the estate, it may be rich, it may be poor. Ah!" he muttered, with a grim smile, "and my lord, the earl, may marry again, and so— and with a nod he emitted a low whistle, "and then all your heritage goes to the four corners of heaven with a whiff!"

As he mused there, no trembling by any means at the reverse of his temporal future, he was dimly aware of the entrance of two figures. They were, in fact, two old dowagers in search of the wine table, and, having filled themselves a glass each, they fell back, with a sigh of content, into the corner next that which held the soliloquizing Percy. The hum and music of the ballroom broke in upon the gossip of the old ladies for a time, and Percy, who at the best of times possessed the greatest indifference to other people's concerns, sat, or rather lounged, in his dark corner, deaf to the voices beside him, until, with a suddenness that brought his hand from his mustache to his knee, he heard Lillian Devigne's name floating on the torrent of their talk.

"That she is the beauty of the season no one can deny," murmured the one; "but, my dear countess, think of the mystery enveloping them. Lady Devigne married—a horror—oh, quite, and no end of strange stories have been whispered."

"Still the girl will do well," put in the other. "I have no doubt Percy Chester will have her, and he is not a bad match."

A doubtful purr responded to this, and Percy, paralyzed for the moment, sat and listened.

"I should not be too sure of that, nor too certain of her getting him. You know what that dreadful man, Captain Warner, said at Lady Brabazon's—"

"No, my dear; I was not there, I am sorry to say. What was it?"

"That he would wager a thousand pounds to one that she would be the Countess of Hudspiel."

"Ah! the thin, dark man! But, my dear countess, who is he?"

"Just what I said, and then Lady Brabazon reminded me of several little things we had both noticed. Now, my dear, the Brabazon's house overlooks Lady Devigne's, and Lady Brabazon tells me that the count is there nearly every day, and that the Devignes are always at home, too; and for another thing, no one has ever seen her refuse him a dance, or treat him in that cool, contemptuous way which she has with most of them. She is dancing with him now, my dear—and look—"

A Sample Gave Relief

Gin Pills

FOR THE KIDNEYS

Victoria, January 18th.

For several years I have been troubled with Kidney and Bladder Trouble, caused by uric acid, and the pains caused by the intermittent stoppage of urine was very severe. For this I was taking something or other continually with but little or no relief. At last a friend handed me a sample package of your Gin Pills. The contents of a sample gave me relief that I had not experienced in a long time. Since then I have been taking Gin Pills occasionally and have had no return of my former trouble. I am very gratified for the benefit derived, and feel sure that any one ailing as I was will find your Gin Pills will give the desired results.

This letter is from a well-known traveller of high standing in the City of Victoria. His name will be furnished to anyone desiring to obtain further information direct from him.

If you have any difficulty in getting Gin Pills from your dealers, order direct from us, enclosing 50 cents for 1 box, or $2.50 for 6 boxes. A sample box will be sent free upon request. (Mention this paper.)

then let the curtain drop, and, much to the dismay of the old ladies, who recognized him, strolled back to the ballroom, his face calm, but expressive of decision. Before he could reach the gallery toward which he was making, he was interrupted by Charlie.

"Where have you been, Percy? Hot, isn't it? but how jolly! I am looking for Miss Devigne; she has given me the next dance! Isn't it kind? Ah, there she is!" he ran on, as his scanning glance discovered her. "I must go now."

"Charlie," said Percy, quietly. "Do me a favor, will you? If Miss Devigne will permit the transfer, let me have this dance."

"Of course, dear old boy!" instantly responded Charlie; then he looked up at his cousin's handsome face, and, with a contented smile, hurried off to find a fresh partner.

Percy Chester went on his way, but the pair had disappeared; the count had gone toward one of the staircases, and Percy, after a minute's search, found Lillian Devigne seated beside her mother.

She did not see him approach; indeed it was some minutes before he could reach her, in consequence of the many times he had to stop to exchange small nothings with this one and that, for Percy Chester was a popular man, and generally in favor by both sexes; and as he stood talking with lady this, and madam that, his eyes wandered to the sweet face beyond, and he saw, or fancied that he detected a look of alarm and uneasiness upon it.

When he did reach her, she looked up with a little expression of surprise.

"I thought you had gone," she said; "I am waiting for Mr. Merivale, who seems to have forgotten me, quite unlike his usual gallantry."

"Charlie has not forgotten," he said, "but has given up the event of his evening to me. I am to have his dance, if you will accept of his substitute."

She shook her head slightly.

"No, I will not dance again to-night; it is too hot; and mamma is going, I think."

"It is too hot here," said Percy, quickly, "but it is cooler in the conservatory. Will you come and rest a little while?"

The speaker broke off to divert the attention of the other old lady to the ballroom, and Percy Chester, roused from his half-unconscious eavesdropping, started to his feet, and drew aside the heavy curtains to look also.

What he saw was the beauty of the season standing beside the same pillar near which he had stood with her not half an hour ago, listening to the count, her face pale and set, her whole attitude significant of a strong effort to suppress all signs of emotion. The count's face wore a dark and sinister smile, and was as significant of an effort at coercion.

Percy watched them for a moment,

She rose, and put her hand on his arm.

"For a little while I may perhaps, mamma?"

Lady Devigne nodded amiably, and Percy steered carefully through the throng.

"Ah," she breathed, as they entered the conservatory, "this is a delightful change! Oh, I am so tired!" and, with a little laugh, she slid her hand from his arm, and sank into a seat, half hidden by some overhanging ferns.

Percy stood beside her, looking down at her as she leaned back with peaceful languor, her small head, with its wealth of tightly bound hair, half drooping meditatively.

"Tired!" he said, "and yet they would have us believe that women can never weary of the scene of their triumph."

"Do not believe that," she said, raising her eyes, "if by triumph you mean the shallow admiration which men—women never admire one of themselves—yield us; do not be deceived, we know what it is worth, and we tire of it before it is expected."

"And there is no higher triumph?" he asked incredulously, taking in the beauty of her face, or its attitude of thoughtful repose.

"There may be," she sighed; "I know not. At least," with a smile, "I have not tasted of the sweetness yet, and so I am incredulous."

"Be mine the task to lead you forth in something higher than the empty flattery of the men," said Percy, bending over her with his earnest gaze.

"At least one man yields you no shallow, cold-hearted admiration; at least one man knows how to value your loveliness and your sweet worth. Miss Devigne! Lillian! I love you! Will you, can you bring yourself to be my wife?"

She started, trembled, and raised her eyes for one moment to his face, and then abashed by the fire of the usually impassive eyes, by the simple truth and innate nobleness of the handsome face, she hid her face in her hands.

Have a Good Complexion, The Flower of Good Health

The true secret of complexion lies in the blood. Keep it rich, pure, nutritious, and, above all, keep the system regular. No aid to complexion compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They tone and enrich the blood, clear the system of waste products, promote good digestion, and, in short, establish sound health, which, after all, is the keynote to all happiness and well-being. Don't delay; the charm of a lovely complexion and all the blessings of health are yours, once you employ this old-time family remedy. All dealers sell Hamilton's Pills in 25c. boxes.

The clothing of the boy is the problem that confronts most home dress-makers. From the time the wee baby starts to creep, mother begins to think: "What shall I do to make his clothes look different from sister's?" There are several ways of changing the first short dresses and here, too, might be mentioned, it is the wise mother who makes the very first dresses with armholes sufficiently large to fit a year-old baby and the neck bands in like proportion, for these dresses may be shortened. With the addition of cuffs and a turn down collar, these dresses are not only fit for several months' wear, but have quite a boyish air. Make the cuffs very long and turn them up; the little arms will all too soon outgrow them.

Vinegar will keep the hands white and smooth and prevent chapping when exposed to the cold air. Rub the vinegar on the hands after washing them and before they are quite dry.

"Thank you, I will take the Nerve Food with me."

"I don't want to miss a single dose, because it is doing me so much good. My nerves were so bad that I could not rest or sleep, and would get up in the morning feeling tired out. Besides that, I frequently had severe nervous headaches and got so cross and irritable that every little noise would set my nerves on edge. I did not seem to have any energy or strength, and the slightest exertion would use me up entirely. Then a friend told me of the benefit she obtained from using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I decided to give it a trial. It was not long till I found that I was sleeping better and enjoying my meals. There did not seem to be so much to worry me, and I began to find a new pleasure in life. It is wonderful the way the Nerve Food is building up my health and strength, and since I have been using it I have found out that many of my lady friends have had a similar experience. This is the way women everywhere are talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Seldom has any treatment ever aroused so much favorable comment. While natural and gentle in action, this food cure is wonderfully potent in building up the run-down system. Ask your friends about it and put it to the test when in need of restorative treatment."

Back From the Trenches.

Mr. and Mrs. John Noseworthy, of Mullock Street, are just in receipt of a letter from their son Joseph, who left here with D Company, Newfoundland Regiment. He writes from "Somewhere in France" under date of April 8th, as follows:—
Dear Mother,— Just a few lines to tell you that I am very well. Mother, we are back from the trenches for a rest. I came out without a scratch, thank God. Keep on praying for your soldier boy. I must say it was pretty hard out here to your knees in mud and water. Well, mother, I cannot tell you much about the war, because our letters are read over and censored before you get them. Mother and father, I wish I could see you to tell you something of this life. I ask you both to be brave for my sake. Am I downhearted? No! My love to Lena, Esther and Albert, uncles and aunts. I am with you all in spirit and prayer, though not in body. Mother, I wrote two letters while I was in the firing line. I am hoping to get an answer soon. Do not fail to write for it is all the Company I get. Mother do not wait for a letter from me, but write often. Ask Lena not to forget to write every Sunday and tell more about the services of Rev. Dr. Jones. I do love dear old St. Thomas's Church. I shall see it again some day, please God. Cheer up, father, mother,

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

Aching Bones and Sore Joints Cured All Rheumatic Tendencies Destroyed

Away Go the Crutches, Every Sufferer Made Well Quickly.
Old age is usually afflicted with rheumatism. Very few past fifty escape its tortures.
Many it bends and deforms. Upon the countenances of others it marks the effects of its awful suffering. Nervine will cure rheumatism. It takes the pain out of throbbing muscles and swollen joints. It untwists gnarled knuckles. It does this quickly and surely.
Nervine is not used internally. You just rub it on—lots of hard rubbing is required for a minute or two, and then you feel Nervine penetrating through the tissues; you feel it drawing out the congestion, feel it sink in deeper and deeper till at last it touches the core of the joint or the heart of the muscle affected.
You won't stay in pain with Nervine—no one ever does. Just try it—you will be amazed at its magical power over pain, a power it gets from the extracts and juices of certain rare herbs and roots it contains. It's harmless—any child can use Nervine, can rub it on for a sore throat, for a bad cold, for stiff neck, for earache. No family remedy half so useful.
The large 50 cent bottle is the most economical; trial size 25 cents. All dealers.

Prisoner in Germany.

Reservist Edwin Samson now prisoner in Germany is a son of Mr. Joseph F. Samson, Flat Islands, B.I., and at the beginning of the war was one of the number who was transferred to H. M. G. S. Niobe. After a year in Atlantic waters he found himself in the North Sea where he was captured, and is now confined in a military prison. We hope and trust that the day is not far distant when he will be back again to gladden the hearts of his anxious parents.

Americans Keen to Recapture Share in Fishing Industry.

Washington, May 19.—A bill, prepared at the Department of Commerce and to be introduced in the House tomorrow by Majority Leader Kitchin, is designed to make possible the recapture from Canada of a great part of the Northern Pacific fishing industry, lost by American fishermen on account of the construction of the Grand Trunk Railway's extension to Prince Rupert last year, and through a subsidy granted the industry by the Canadian Government.
The measure would require that all halibut and salmon shipments reaching the United States through foreign territory be shipped in bond. Residents of Ketchikan, Alaska, have urged such legislation, claiming it will restore Ketchikan business lost to the Grand Trunk terminal town of Prince Rupert.

LLOYD GEORGE CONFERS WITH REDMOND AND CARSON.
LONDON, May 26. David Lloyd George has already entered upon preliminaries allotted to him of conciliation in the Irish factions. He had conversations to-day with John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, and Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, and has planned as course of action, which will involve visits to various parts of Ireland, and interviews with men of recent diverse opinions. The fact that Parliament will adjourn next Thursday for three weeks, is considered fortunate for his task, as this will make it impossible for any discussion to take place while negotiations are proceeding.

EAST AFRICAN SITUATION.
LONDON, May 26. A British official communication dealing with the situation in East Africa, made public to-day, says: Telegraphing on May 25, Lieut. General Smuts reports troops have occupied the following localities without opposition: On the Pagan river 26 miles south of Kahr railroad station, on the Usambar railway; Lembeni, on the same railway 20 miles south of Kahr and Mugala Pass between the northern central part; a mountain peak, 8 miles southeast of Lembeni. In the Khudoa-irangi area where the enemy suffered a severe check May 9 and 11 there are reports of renewed hostile activity. German forces in Ruanda are in retreat before converging Belgian columns which hold Kingali Nyansa.

NO TRUTH IN STATEMENT.
LONDON, May 26. John O'Connor, a prominent Nationalist member, who has represented North Killiney for many years, declared in a statement to-day, following a visit which he paid to a prison where a large number of Irish citizens, accused of participation in the recent rebellion, have been detained, since his arrival in England, that there was not the shadow of foundation for allegations of their ill-treatment by the military.

LITTLE CHANGE IN VERDUN SITUATION.

PARIS, May 26. There is little change in the situation on the Verdun front, says an official announcement this afternoon. Artillery bombardment was very violent about Avocourt Wood and Le Mort Homme. At the latter place a German attack was stopped by the French curtain of fire, at its inception on the right bank of the Meuse. The French succeeded in occupying a part of the trenches occupied yesterday by the Germans between Haudromont Wood and Thiaumont farm. Otherwise the battle front was calm.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, May 26. In the Argonne we have exploded successfully a mine at Fille Morte. On the left bank of the Meuse artillery activity was very fierce in Avocourt Wood sector and Le Mort Homme. In the last region a German attack in preparation miscarried on account of our cross-fire. On the right bank a counter attack was made the afternoon of a trench occupied yesterday by the enemy, between Haudromont Wood and Thiaumont farm. North of the said farm we have progressed during the night by grenade fighting, and captured some prisoners. A relatively calm night on the remainder of the front.

WILSON AND PEACE.

WASHINGTON, May 26. President Wilson is giving more serious attention to the possibility of restoring peace in Europe than any time since the war began. From an authoritative source it was learned to-day that the President was preparing to do everything possible in an informal way to bring about the discussion of peace between the belligerent nations. Although he has not indicated his intention immediately to offer his services formally as a mediator, an address to-morrow night before the League to enforce peace is expected to be of the nature of preliminary overtures. The President is convinced that the war is deadlocked, and that its continuance merely means the killing of more people and the further impoverishment of European nations, both belligerent and neutral.

Mrs. Patrick Williams Tells How Her Headache and Weakness Vanished When She Used the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills. St. Sossine, Kent Co., N.B., May 26. (Special).—"I feel it my duty to tell the public the great relief from headache and weakness I found in Dodd's Kidney Pills."
This is the message Mrs. Patrick Williams of this place sends to suffering women all over Canada. Like many other women she dislikes talking about her troubles, but she feels she would not be doing right to let others suffer when she had learned from her own experience how great is the relief and how easy is the cure to be found in Dodd's Kidney Pills.
Nine-tenths of the weakness and suffering women bears so bravely comes from sick kidneys. Sick or disordered kidneys fall in their duty of straining the impurities out of the blood. This means that these impurities, these seeds of disease, are carried to all parts of the body. The natural cure is Dodd's Kidney Pills. They always cure sick headache.

WORK OF SUBS.
WASHINGTON, May 26. Consul General Skinner, at London has forwarded the State Department to-day, Reuter's despatches reporting the sinking of the French steamer Corvatin from a cause not stated; the torpedoing of the Italian steamer Comigliano; damaging by a submarine of the Italian brigantine Teresa; escaping of the French collier Mira, previously reported sunk in the Mediterranean by a German submarine and the crew taken prisoners. Furnishing the Home
FOR The June Bride.

Of course you have planned to have an attractive home, one that is comfortable, cozy and homelike. Perhaps you are under the impression, though, that it will cost too much to furnish your home the way you would like to have it. If this is the case, remember there is one BIG FURNITURE STORE where you can always get the greatest value for the least money in Furniture for your Dining Room, Parlor, Kitchen, Bedroom and Hall, also a beautiful selection of Brass and White Enamel Bedsteads, Linoleum—a Store that does not quote fictitious values with high sounding discounts to try and mislead the inexperienced buyer; a Store with one price only to all, and that price the lowest at which you can buy the best goods.
THE STORE that gives this service is CALLAHAN, GLASS & CO., LTD., the Big Furniture Store on Duckworth Street and Theatre Hill. Come in, look around; all we ask is investigation and comparison. We are ready, able and willing to prove every statement we make to your satisfaction. We all like to feel at home in a store, and that is the way we want you to feel when you come here, from the time you get the friendly greeting at the door until you have finished.
You will find salespeople glad to show you around and also thoroughly competent to give you helpful service and practical advice in regards to any Home Furniture problems you may have. It will be your own fault if you pay more than you should for the goods you need, if you buy without seeing the Big Stock and values offered by Recent Recruiting.

Good Work of Superintendents of Education.

The Superintendents of Education are doing great service to the cause of recruiting. By their instrumentality the teachers and children of schools were the ready and willing agents in distributing some 50,000 copies of recruiting numbers of the daily papers to the homes of their parents. This morning, Dr. Harriman joins Lieut. Murphy and a squad to begin a recruiting campaign in the districts of Harbor Main, Brigus, Harbor Grace and Carbonear. Lieut. Murphy is generally had already arranged to inquire into the matter before this Commission was specially appointed to deal with the expenditure of public moneys, inquiries into which are specially conferred on the Auditor-General by the Audit Act, 1899. He therefore, appears to me an illegal proceeding to supersede the functions of his office by this Commission recently appointed. In a letter directed to Mr. Coaker by Mr. F. C. Bertau he states that "the inquiry which I proposed to conduct myself in my capacity as Auditor-General will, therefore, cease and the whole matter will be taken up by the Commission recently appointed."

I would also direct your attention to the personnel of the Commission, other than the Auditor-General. Mr. Jesse Whiteway is a member of the political party of which the Hon. M. P. Cashin belongs. He was a member of the House of Assembly from 1909 to 1913, and a supporter of Sir Edward Morris. At the last election he was a candidate for the same party. As to Mr. R. T. McGrath, he holds the office of Inspector of Customs, and is, therefore, a subordinate in the department over which the Hon. M. P. Cashin presides. As the inquiry relates to an alleged payment to the Hon. M. P. Cashin of bounty for the schooner "Lornina," Your Excellency will see the impropriety of Mr. Jesse Whiteway, and, particularly of a subordinate of the Hon. M. P. Cashin being members of the Commission of Inquiry. I, therefore, desire to protest most strongly and respectfully against the issue of this Commission, and would suggest to Your Excellency the recall of the Commission which has been issued, and the leaving of the inquiry in the hands of Mr. F. C. Bertau, the Auditor-General, who is removed by the tenor of his office from all political and other influences, and in whom we have every reason to have confidence.

I am, Your Excellency,
Yours most respectfully,
(Sgd.) W. F. LLOYD,
Leader of the Opposition of the House of Assembly.

The Lornina Case.

Appended will be found a letter of protest which Mr. W. F. Lloyd, as Leader of the Opposition in the House of Assembly, has written against the issue of a Commission which is to supersede an inquiry which the Auditor General had decided to hold into the payment of a certain bounty for the schooner "Lornina." Under the Audit Act, the Auditor General is the sole authority to inquire into the payment of public moneys. He had notified Mr. Coaker that he intended to hold an inquiry under the Audit Act, and the other day he wrote to Mr. Coaker stating that "the inquiry which I proposed to conduct myself in my capacity as Auditor General will, therefore, cease, and the whole matter will be taken up by the Commission recently appointed." The whole spirit and object of the Audit Act, and the position of independent tenure in his office, is against any interference by the Government in the conduct of an inquiry by the Auditor General. He is the sole authority for an inquiry into the expenditure of public moneys under the Audit Act, and it is improper to dilute his authority by associating others with him. A further objection is taken to the two members who have been appointed with him. These are we understand, Mr. Jesse Whiteway, who has for many years been associated with the present Government party, and Mr. R. T. McGrath who is objected to as a subordinate of Mr. Cashin in the departments over which the latter presides. As to an inquiry into the loss of the Lornina, the Commission should be composed of men similar to those called for in a Marine Court of Enquiry, viz., a lawyer, and two men well acquainted with the sea and schooners; and who do not occupy positions to which objections can be properly taken. It will be seen that His Excellency the Governor has referred the protest to his ministers.

PROTEST OF LEADER OF OPPOSITION.

[COPY.] St. John's, May 25, 1916.

To His Excellency Sir Walter Davidson, K.C.M.G., City.

Sir,—I most respectfully desire to draw your attention to the Commission which I understand has been directed through the advice of your Ministers from you to Mr. Jesse Whiteway, Mr. R. T. McGrath and Mr. F. C. Bertau, Comptroller and Auditor-General, to enquire into the matter of the payment of bounty of the schooner "Lornina." It may not be known to Your Excellency that Mr. Bertau in his capacity as Auditor-General had already arranged to inquire into the matter before this Commission was specially appointed to deal with the expenditure of public moneys, inquiries into which are specially conferred on the Auditor-General by the Audit Act, 1899. He therefore, appears to me an illegal proceeding to supersede the functions of his office by this Commission recently appointed. In a letter directed to Mr. Coaker by Mr. F. C. Bertau he states that "the inquiry which I proposed to conduct myself in my capacity as Auditor-General will, therefore, cease and the whole matter will be taken up by the Commission recently appointed."

I would also direct your attention to the personnel of the Commission, other than the Auditor-General. Mr. Jesse Whiteway is a member of the political party of which the Hon. M. P. Cashin belongs. He was a member of the House of Assembly from 1909 to 1913, and a supporter of Sir Edward Morris. At the last election he was a candidate for the same party. As to Mr. R. T. McGrath, he holds the office of Inspector of Customs, and is, therefore, a subordinate in the department over which the Hon. M. P. Cashin presides. As the inquiry relates to an alleged payment to the Hon. M. P. Cashin of bounty for the schooner "Lornina," Your Excellency will see the impropriety of Mr. Jesse Whiteway, and, particularly of a subordinate of the Hon. M. P. Cashin being members of the Commission of Inquiry. I, therefore, desire to protest most strongly and respectfully against the issue of this Commission, and would suggest to Your Excellency the recall of the Commission which has been issued, and the leaving of the inquiry in the hands of Mr. F. C. Bertau, the Auditor-General, who is removed by the tenor of his office from all political and other influences, and in whom we have every reason to have confidence.

His Excellency Refers Protest to Ministers.

[COPY.] Government House, St. John's, Nfld., May 25th, 1916.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 25th instant conveying your protest, in your capacity as Leader of the Opposition in the House of Assembly, to the composition of the Commission appointed to enquire into the matter of the payment of bounty of the schooner "Lornina."

I shall lay your protest before my Ministers for their consideration.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,

Newfoundlander Awarded the D. S. O.

Another Newfoundlander in the person of Major Edward John Wighton, has been signally honored by His Majesty King George V. The King has been pleased to have conferred on the gallant Major the Distinguished Service Order. Major Wighton is a son of Colonel Wighton and a brother of Capt. Charles Wighton, who was killed in action while fighting with the Newfoundland Regiment in Gallipoli. Mr. Richard J. Walsh, of the Beach, is his uncle. Before the commencing of the war he was attached to the Royal Garrison Artillery staff at Plymouth, and has since been given command of No. 4 Siege Battery. It is understood that while spending ten days in England on furlough, the D.S.O. was conferred upon him by the King. Captain Charles Wighton was a veteran of the South African War, and was mentioned in despatches for gallantry on the field of battle. The name of Wighton will live long in the hearts and minds of the people of Newfoundland. We congratulate Major Wighton, D.S.O. also his relations in St. John's and abroad. And when peace is declared we hope to have a visit from the distinguished son of Old Terra Nova.

RUTH CAMERON

A dentist friend of mine has recently become convinced that hidden abscesses at the roots of teeth are the source of most human ills. He tells lurid tales of rheumatism, neuralgia, blindness and even insanity caused by the poison poured into the system from these hidden plague spots. If you mention any ailment from a pain in your foot to a headache he suggests that you have your teeth examined.

Nor is this, as you might think, caused by a desire for business. That is not possible, because he does not possess the apparatus for the X-ray examination.

He Blames Bad Teeth for Every Ill.

No, it is merely that he has become so impressed by the important part that teeth do play in the general health that he has lost his sense of perspective and proportion. He knows that almost any symptom could be caused by diseased teeth and he gets the idea that almost every symptom is so caused.

It is interesting and rather amusing to look back and see how often the cause of all human ills has been discovered.

Of course you remember when lack of fresh air was seized upon as the cause-all.

And then, again it was adenoids or overgrown tonsils that could be held accountable for any sluggishness, physical or mental.

The Oculist Says Eye-Strain Causes Backache.

Listen to the oculist and he will tell you that half the time indigestion or backache or general lassitude are nothing but symptoms of eye-strain. Again we are told that we will never need to worry about our health if we will only chew every mouthful of food forty or fifty times. Coffee was the cause of all ills, according to a relative of mine. She was addicted to health fads and every time we visited her insisted on imposing them upon us. After the anti-coffee spasm passed, drinking water at meals became her bete-noir, and I can still remember the discomfort I suffered from being denied the two or three glasses to which I was accustomed.

Both Are Wrong And Both Are Right.

What's the answer to it all? They can't all be right; are they all wrong?

No; they are all some right and some wrong.

They each have a good idea but they lose their sense of perspective over it.

Every extreme represents some bit of truth. The wise man extracts the bit of truth without going to the extreme.

In other words, the wise way is not to be a faddist about anything, but to look after all the big essentials of health, to get as much fresh air as possible, to chew one's food properly, to drink enough water, at meals if one wishes, but not to wash down unchewed food with it, to keep one's intestines healthy, to get sleep enough, to look after teeth and eyes, to trace any warning symptom to its source.

And last but not least, not to think too much about the whole matter.

WALT MARION

My friends come back from the babbling brooks, and talk of the things they done with their poles and reels, and their lines and hooks, till the setting of the sun. And each at the end remarks, "I wish I had had good luck to-day; but the biggest fish, and the finest fish, was the fish that got away." I have heard that yarn for a hundred years, and I'll hear it till I die, and when a fisherman hold appears, I heave me a sob and sigh; for I know full well he will stand and dish the story that's old and gray, of the biggest fish, and the finest fish, and the fish that got away. It's the freckled boy with the old time bait, and the fishline coarse and stout, who sits him down by the brook to wait for a bite, and his pole goes, "Swish!" Eureka and boom-de-ay! He has caught the fish, the world famous fish that so often got away!

French Gradually Taking the Offensive

An American Military Observer's View of the Fighting at Verdun—Huns Like the Man Wrestling With the Bear.

New York, May 23.—The Paris correspondent of the Tribune cables the following:—

"I talked this morning with one of the American military observers in France who had just returned from the front, where he witnessed the German attacks on Verdun on Saturday and Sunday.

"What do you think the attack means?" I asked.

"It looks to me like the dying gasp," he replied.

"But haven't there been a good many of these dying gasps?" I said.

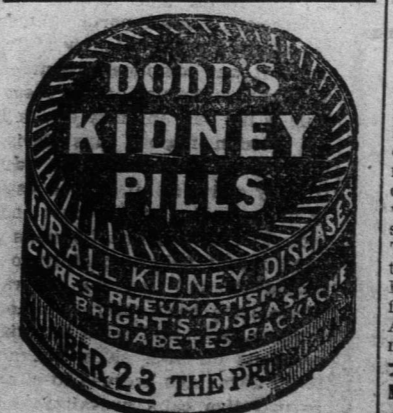

"Yes," he answered, "they began several weeks ago and since they began the French who until that time had acted purely on the defensive have been gradually taking the offensive into their hands. If you follow the action closely, you will see that recently the offensive has often, if not more often, comes from the French as from the Germans.

"This puts the Germans in the position where they have to attack. They are now in the position of the man who was wrestling with the bear. The man was ready to quit but the bear wouldn't. The Germans have either got to attack at Verdun or submit to attacks by the French, while the French held the dominating positions. This seems the veritable dying gasp by the Germans before Verdun, but it is a terrific convulsion."

FACIAL REPAIRS.

(By Harold Begbie in the Daily Chronicle, London.)

Sculptor and Surgeon.

How things happen! At the beginning of the war Colonel Bruce Porter, of the R.A.M.C., made a speech to the Chelsea Arts Club. He said it was a finer thing to mend the bodies of broken soldiers than to paint pretty faces on canvas. He asked his hearers to make a sacrifice of their art and, if they were too old to fight, to accept the lowest service in the ranks of the R.A.M.C. Among his hearers was the sculptor, Mr. Derwent Wood. A few months after the making of this speech I paid a visit to the 3rd London Military Hospital on Wandsworth Common. As I walked across the grounds with Colonel Bruce Porter we came across a party of orderlies rolling a newly-laid asphalt path. The colonel stopped and introduced me to these orderlies. One of them was Mr. Derwent Wood. Now, see how things fall out. Derwent Wood was soon drafted into the wards. He took plaster casts of damaged limbs. He became a master of splints. In the course of this work he saw some of the saddest sights of war; he saw the human face so awfully disfigured that a man must shudder to behold such havoc. This sight moved the sculptor's compassion. He said to the colonel and said to him, "Let me see what I can do to these poor smashed faces; let me see if I can build them up again." Gladly did the colonel consent. But who was to pay for such work? The colonel has a benevolent fund at his wonderful hospital, and out of these gifts of money from rich friends and grateful patients he does many a kind and beautiful action which could hardly pass the official auditor. He said, "The benevolent fund shall pay."

There was a fine trooper in the hospital, a married man, whose face had been broken by an explosive bullet. I must not attempt to describe the ruin of that face. Enough for you to know that this senseless man himself said it was impossible to live in that condition. And of a truth it was a thousand times better for him to be dead. Well, I have just been talking to this man. Across a room it is impossible to detect anything unusual in his face. At the distance of a few paces you see only a mark like a scar on one of his cheeks. And he laughs when he talks to you, and he tells you that he is going to drive a taxicab, and he says that he can now paint his nose whatever color he chooses—green if he likes! Ah, but he speaks in a quite different voice, and he does not jest at all, when he tells you, or tries to tell you, what his feelings are toward Derwent Wood. This man has a wife who adores him, and his home is his heaven.

A Human Repairing Shop.

I saw other men in this same repairing shop. I saw them with their masks and without their masks. At one moment I had to set my teeth as I looked, and at the next I was talking to a whole man and exchanging jests with him. A boy would come forward whose face made it hard for me not to utter a groan. Derwent Wood pointed out the bullet's work, showed the surgeon's difficulty, showed his difficulty and then said, "Now put on your mask." The boy lifted a little, light, delicately-moulded metal thing in his hands, passed something behind his ears, and I was looking at a brother man whose face was whole and whose sham eye seemed to have as much pride and pleasure as his real eye. The moulding of the mask is as perfect as the painting of the flesh.

The room where the wonders take place was once the scullery of a recreation hut. It is small, it is gloomy, it is without a soul. The stone floor strikes coldly through your feet; a sink at the side of the walls makes for melancholy; as a place for the washing of dishes you could give it a fair number of marks; but as a sculptor's studio it is impossible. Alterations are to be made; for directly Sir Alfred Keoch heard of this wonderful work, he not only relieved Colonel Bruce Porter's Benevolent Fund of all such charges, but with the imagination and sympathy of a great organizer he gave orders that all cases of facial damage should be sent to the Third London. And so Derwent Wood is to have a studio, and never again, I take it, will he pull a roller over asphalt paths.

But I wonder whether any other room will ever give him the fine rapture of these first experiments in a "disused scullery." To find that you can give a man back his face, to find that you can fill up horror with a semblance of human beauty, to discover that a boy who has fought for you, and who has become so tragically blasted that it were better for him to die, can be patched and repaired in such a manner that no one can detect his ruin—I doubt if life can give many greater moments than these. "The first rapture, of course, will go. The work will become hard, fatiguing, monotonous. Instead of the discoverer's thrill, the artist's craving for creative work will come and will stay. "The highest qualities of the human mind—patience, a sense of duty, and endurance—will have to be summoned, and summoned often. And in those days Derwent Wood will have to go back, I think, many, many times to strength and for inspiration.

The Canary and the Artist.

There was a canary in this room. It made no sound in its cage, and for the most part sat on its perch looking out through the bars at funeral casts of arms, legs, feet, hands and faces. But when its master took a great lump of plaster, in which was embedded the delicate cast of a damaged face, and began to tap at the plaster with hammer and chisel in order to release the mould, this little bird sang to us from its cage, not with joy, not with passion of any kind, but with a soft and almost sorrowful note of subdued sympathy. "It always sings to me," said the sculptor, "when I start tapping."

Imagine him, then, tapping at the plaster with hammer and chisel, in this grey scullery, the bird singing to him, and the long day going slowly and wearily as yesterday went, as last week went, as month after month has gone since the war started. He is an artist, and his heart hungers for creative work. The first joy of these new experiments is going. He will probably be given a commission and set at the head of this new department in the R.A.M.C. But the only thing which keeps him going, the only thing which makes it possible for him to bear the strain of this long sacrifice (you ask the canary) is the knowledge that he is doing something useful for those who have given all for their country.

He spoke to me of a mother in Australia who has given three sons, all of whom have been wounded and one terribly disfigured. "It's hard for her," he said; "but we've patched the worst of them up, and we're sending a photograph on ahead, to let her down easily. When you can do something in cases like that, it's—it's—well, it's worth while."

It is splendid to find such sacrifice, splendid to find art in alliance with science, splendid to find the R.A.M.C. full of enthusiasm for new ideas; but most splendid, I think, to know that those who suffer for us so dreadfully, those to whom we owe so great a debt, can be healed, as it were, by magic.

Success.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Success is what a man achieves when he accomplishes his aim. There is a suspicion that success consists either of fame or riches, but there are really a great many kinds of success. It depends on what a man aims at.

Some men spell success as follows: "Success." They are unsuccessful as soon as the Federal Grand Jury indicts them for trying to run the earth.

Other men have an ambition to die outside of the poorhouse. If they do this by a margin of twenty-seven cents and two shirts, they are successful men.

Some men are not successful until the whole world talks about them. Others are not successful until people begin to talk about them, after which they have to throw away a perfectly good name and become somebody else, elsewhere.

A statesman is successful if the next generation remembers him. A politician is successful if the governor-elect remembers him.

A novelist is successful when everybody reads him. A poet is successful when nobody understands him.

An artist is successful when people buy his pictures. So is a matinee actor. A humorist is successful when everyone laughs at him. But an inventor isn't successful until everyone is sorry they laughed at him.

A farmer is successful when he can raise enough corn to buy an automobile. An automobile dealer is successful when he can sell enough automobiles to buy a farm.

An aviator is successful when he succeeds in staying up in the air. That is the difference between an aviator and baseball pitcher.

Some people are successful early in life, like Joseph Holmann, who was a famous pianist at nine, or Pitt, who was Prime Minister at twenty-five. Others do not succeed until several hundred years after they are dead. It took Homer five hundred years to make good, and Poe, who staved to death, is now one of our most successful writers.

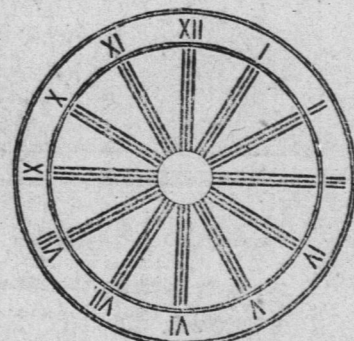

Success is sweet, but it is also intoxicating and goes to the head faster than Tom and Jerry. The cautious man who is about to be successful will increase his head in barrel hoops and defy it to do its worst.

Pansy League.

Government House.
Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—Will you please let me write and thank all my kind friends for the lovely letters cheering me on and for the very generous subscriptions they have sent me. Last Monday I went harnessed in my own little Pansy cart loaded with one hundred dollars for the C. E. Orphanage, to Mrs. Gosling. You know she is the kind lady who is also working hard for the little children, and she also works very hard for small and big animals. And she does so like to know that even animals have a good and kind home. I left my last kitten (her name is Frills) with Mrs. Gosling. We miss her very much in the Nursery. She is also working hard when I kissed her good-bye she gave me her first present $1.00 for the League. Thank you Frills. Then on my way home I saw a nice dog named Terry, at Mr. O'Regan's, and he gave me a gold $5. Thank you, sir. That dear cow named Lady, sent me seven more members and is still working for more. Many pats, dear Lady. Then Rowly, I have to thank him for his nice gift of $1.00 to my sale and also for sending such nice members. Biddy and Peggy, such nice pussies, sent me 60 cents for my sale. They were afraid of the rain, perhaps they had lost their rubbers. Many thanks to dear Jack and Butler for their jolly letters, even if they are old stay-at-homes, they cheer many. Buller is named after General Buller. He was a dear. He was one of those who knew that all work and no play makes Jack (or Tommy) a dull boy. He firmly believed in both work and play for girls and boys. Tabby and Bob have brought two Theological puzzles to our League, so now our education will not be neglected. Their names are Kruger and Trickle. Dear Ghost, Rover, Kitty and Jet, many thanks for your gay little poem. Please tell me where you live? If Mr. Editor will kindly print it, I think there are many who will enjoy it; I did.

Now Ghost appears, all dressed in white? I hope, my dears, Pansy will not get a fright.

Rover is here too, he wants to join saying, "How do you do? Will you take my coin?"

Then Kitty springs up (Ginger colored is she) Get away pup! I want to pay my fee.

She brings with her Jet, great friends are they I think that all as yet are willing to pay.

I have also to thank Mr. Calver who sells my bunches of Pansies for my League. That is a real and very kind help to me. Well, dear friends, I must not stop to write more. But I do love having the nice letters from you all. I nearly forgot to thank Tatters and little Rex for their photos. I am going to put them in my photograph album. I love having them to look at when I sit by the nice warm fire. So I do hope some more are coming, and I am longing for some more members. I have now 201 members and in two days have collected $8.81. I am going to earn another $100.00 to keep the first $100 warm and cosy.

"The Common Rat."

An Agency for Spreading Disease.
We read reports published in foreign newspapers, showing how certain cities and towns or corporations in such places are getting rid of the rat nuisance. Some cities have gone so far as to offer a bounty from 5 to 25 cents for every rat killed. If every firm would keep an account of the amount of damage done by this class of vermin, and would forward a copy of said account to the Mayor of the city or the Premier of the country, the data gathered would throw more light on the ravages of rats. The fast increasing rat is working havoc among our business establishments, and to an astonishing degree has infested the private dwelling. Nothing in the way of a widespread campaign has been done to remove this evil; we have been contented for generations to pay little or no attention to what we are accustomed to consider of no importance, despite the fact that experience has taught us that rats and mice are one of the greatest agencies for spreading disease. If it was found that keeping dogs was dangerous to the public health, we would raise the cry throughout the land to have every dog destroyed.—Ex.

Patriotic Association

PAYS TRIBUTE TO MAJOR MACPHERSON.

The Patriotic Association met last night at the Board of Trade Rooms. His Excellency the Governor presided over a large attendance of members. Mr. W. J. Higgins performed the duties of Secretary in the absence of Dr. Burke, who is on a recruiting campaign.

A communication from Sir Bartle C. Frere, a retired Army Major, who had been engaged in hospital work, was read by the Chairman. Extracts from the communication are:—

"I have only this moment learnt that the delightful friend I have made here, Cluny Macpherson, of Newfoundland, is known to Your Excellency, and I must make bold to write one line to say (what you already probably know quite well) i.e., what admirable work he has done and is still doing for the Army, or rather for the Armies, for he has woken them all up to his views with the combating of German gas attacks, and has invented gas helmets and machines wherewith to counteract this latest product of Kultur. I have very rarely met so interesting and attractive a man. I hear, too, highest praise of all the Newfoundland troops, whom you have sent to assist us in this war, and only yesterday met a man who was expatiating on their military virtues, their sturdiness and their modesty.

"I could not resist writing to tell you about Macpherson's fine work here (Egypt) and in France. He is a man in a thousand."

It was also announced by His Excellency the Governor that the residence of Mrs. Locke-King, of Brooklands, a commodious mansion, had been made into a convalescent home for the quartering of our wounded soldiers whom His Excellency felt certain would be carefully attended to there.

The Reserve Force Recruiting, Non-Combatant Selection, Patriotic Association, Musketry and Red Cross Committees submitted their reports, through Messrs. J. A. Cliff, K. C., Hon. M. P. Cashin, Dr. W. F. Lloyd, St. W. Horwood, J. S. Munni, Capt. Rennie and F. H. Steer, respectively, and they were adopted.

It was shown in the report of the Reserve Committee that 1,017 men had presented themselves for enlistment since Feb. 1st last and out of that number 712 had been duly attested. The present strength of the Regiment is 625. To help the Regimental authorities in controlling and disciplining of the men the Curling and Prince's Bank will be used.

Up to April 30th the statement presented by the Finance Committee showed a total disbursement of $973,355.95 in connection with the Regiment and $313,373.38 with the Reserve Force, a balance of $1,226.84 being left.

Dr. Lloyd, on behalf of the Recruiting Committee, gave a resume of the excellent work to stimulate recruiting by the school teachers in the way of distributing literature. He spoke in complimentary terms of the efforts of Rev. Dr. Curtis, W. W. Blackall, Esq., Dr. V. P. Burke, Lieutenant L. C. Murphy and Private Phil Jensen and in praising the work of Sergt. Bellon and Pte. Shears, who returned from active service recently, quoted a reference of Dr. Curtis. Encouraging reports, he said, have been received from Mr. Blackall, who with Sergt. Long and Ptes. Thistle and Pelley, are on a recruiting mission at St. George's; from Lieut. Murphy, who left St. John's this morning for Holyrood where he will be joined by Dr. Hanrahan and later visit other Conception Bay points; from Ptes. Jensen and Tibbs, who are at present recruiting in Trinity and Bonavista Bays. Private Jensen lectures at Whitbourne to-night. The campaign has aroused much interest and helped to swell the Red Cross funds in a large measure. Mrs. Greene, of Bell Island, who has given three sons to the Regiment, was cheered and applauded enthusiastically.

It was stated by the Non-Combatant that Rev. W. W. Cotton, of Bay of Islands, had been accepted for service as a hospital orderly with a unit organized by the University of Toronto, had been recommended for transport to Toronto.

Mr. J. S. Munn presented the statement of the Patriotic Fund showing that 229 local and 24 Canadian grants were now current and that $13,029.41 had been paid Newfoundland beneficiaries with $3,060.49 to Canadians. The collection to date for Tag Day amounted to $1,956.15, as reported by Mr. Steer. About $200 more are expected to come in.

The Red Cross receipts are $11,279.81 with other sources to be heard from.

Mr. R. G. Rendell suggested and the suggestion was adopted to transmit the Empire Day funds through the Overseas Club, and $100 left over from the Trafalgar Day fund be added to the Red Cross fund.

Empire Day at Caplin Cove.

Empire Day—what is it? Ask the children of Caplin Cove, B.D.V. Dist. And did they celebrate it this year? Yes, to its utmost, as it was never before celebrated in this Cove. What a glorious sight to see the children doing their bit to show their loyalty as true Britishers, marching away with banners gay and singing as they passed through the place. All the children of the place, about 50 in number, met in the School Chapel at 10 a.m., saluted the flag when in line for marching, and then paraded. Having returned to the School Chapel they went through various drills, songs and recitations suitable for the day, which showed some careful preparation. The teacher, Miss B. Roll, explained to the gathered assembly the patriotism was not merely the unfurling of a flag, but that they could be patriotic by feeling and showing, by their actions, and words, their duty to God and neighbour, their responsibility as God's children, and by feeding that spirit of sympathy and self-sacrifice which we all have. The programme was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem. (Sed.) *LOVER OF COUNTRY.

THE THOUGHTS OF THEOBALD.

SYMPATHY.

To have true sympathy with anyone, one must have had a similar experience as that one. Not every appeal for sympathy finds a ready response, because the response is limited owing to our many and different view points and feelings. In the cause of suffering, physical suffering, there is always a universal suffering. Very few of us get along without suffering, and while few have experienced the wounds of war, yet even a cut finger gives us a keener appreciation of the agony of a shrapnel wound. And so no fund receives such a ready response as the Red Cross Fund, a fund that is humanitarian in every sense of the word. And it is something to feel that in a few days we can raise sufficient to keep the British Red Cross work going ahead for almost twenty-four hours. It is a fund that draws contributions from every pocket, whether it has little or much to give, and doubtless the "Lady of the Lamb" looks down in silent content to see that suffering does not go uncare for.

WOMEN AND THE VOTE.

Under the New Charter, women rate payers, or those who are tenants and occupiers of houses are permitted to vote in Municipal Elections. A motion to enlarge the franchise and include all women over 21 was not encouraged among the Citizens' Committee. The step is not such an impossible one in these days as it seemed say ten years ago. In spite of the militant tactics of the Pankhursts, which no doubt hindered the cause so far as Parliament was concerned, a large multitude of women have been unnoticed, qualifying for the vote, and we find that in this war, testing time as it has been, has found women content and ready and above all, capable of taking the place of a man, and doing his work, in many cases better and faster than he did. We find women working in the engineering shops, running street cars, and we find them at the front as cool as any man, talking their share of dangerous occupations and taking the leading share in that great work of caring for the sick and the sore and the wounded of our regiment. How it can be possible to refuse their entry into full citizenship after such a record I cannot imagine, nor can conservation supply an adequate reason.

After the war, if not during the war, women will as a matter of course, not by courtesy, but by right, receive the full privileges and rights of citizenship.

WOMEN AND CIVICS.

In civic work women especially are needed. The problems of housing, vice, public safety, health will find a far less compromising attitude from women than the average man. Their part in civics has been universally acknowledged and we find that in many countries (New Zealand, the Australias, many States and Cities in Canada and others) have already given women the vote and as a result the fabric of civilization is still intact—indeed there have been greater attempts to mend the torn parts, and civilization cannot but be higher with women co-operating with men in its law-making.

It is not because women have been able to shoulder the tasks of men that they are entitled to the vote. If it was a question of strength, the horse would have a greater right than man to vote. But the vote represents not might, but the power of aggregate common-sense (which is the most uncommon sense), for it is said that in the long run it is true that the common judgment of ordinary men is wiser than all the experts that exist.

The health of the city, moral and physical, radiates from the homes of the city, and from the schools. Now what a great number of women teachers we have. What education along civic lines do they possess. As a matter of fact our schools do not help much to teach the art of good citizenship. What shall it profit a boy or girl to know how many members of the Assembly there are, and their term of office if he or she knows not what personal responsibility as a citizen means, and has no desire to render social and civic service to those around in the city.

WANTED: A SMOKE AND DUST ABATEMENT COMMISSION FOR ST. JOHN'S.

Under the term "Nuisances" in the New Charter is "Any chimney sending forth black smoke in such quantity as to be objectionable to neighbours." In towns with a greater number of factories than we have, the smoke nuisance is of no small matter. Some people hold that smoke is a necessary evil, voicing the theory that our industries are to be served, and not serve the community. Booth Tarkington in the "The Turmoil," has Mr. Sheridan, a manufacturer, express this attitude when he says to a committee of plaintive housewives who called to beg his aid against the smoke nuisance: "Smoke's what brings your husbands' money home on Saturday night. . . . you go home and ask your husbands what smoke puts in their pockets out o' the pay roll—and you'll come around next time to get me to turn out more smoke instead of chokin' it off!" But in spite of this view we have to learn sometime or other that industry was made for man, not man for industry. These perverted ideas of Mr. Sheridan are responsible for the construction of our cities on the "jerry-built" plan, are responsible for our soot, and the dusty carelessness of our city life. And cities are now beginning to realize that the smoke nuisance is a serious obstacle to any kind of city planning, that it destroys building materials, retards the growth of vegetation, cuts off sunlight and daylight, prolongs fogs, is injurious to comfort and health, and is costly both to the smoke maker and the public. In this, our city, almost all who live south of Military and LeMarchant Roads are at constant warfare with the soot, not alone from factory chimneys but from all chimneys. When the sun's rays are pouring down and the day is joyous overhead, one in these localities dare only to open windows at the expense of ruined curtains, carpets, etc. That matter can be improved by means of smoke consumers or other methods is shown by the exertions made in other cities. It is estimated that as a matter of fact 20% at least of the coal consumption goes up the chimney as a tribute to "King Smoke." Electricity and gas have their advantages over coal and many things can be accomplished electrically when we are able to obtain current at a reasonable rate.

The dust problem is closely allied to the smoke nuisance and I believe that one of the greatest horrors of our city will be obliterated if an intelligent Commission of engineers, scientists, and practical men were appointed to go into the matter and see if it can be settled satisfactorily. Legal prohibition against smoke production does not in itself serve to secure satisfactory results. It should be accompanied by a campaign for intelligent furnace construction, by measures designed to educate owners, engineers and firemen and by effective inspection, when it ought to prove of high value.

THE CREATION PICTURES.

I saw nearly the whole series of the Bible pictures shown in the British Hall the last few weeks, and I must say that in the mechanism of the moving pictures, in the natural and reverent manner of the actors, I have never seen so good an exhibition. They were far removed from the moving picture shows with their many pictures of false sentiment, jerky movements and jingly music.

While one may not quite follow the deductions which these people form from their explicit belief in the Bible, yet one cannot but respect their evident sincerity. It seems Pastor Russell some twenty or thirty years ago prophesied the Great War that would come in 1914. He also says that this is only the beginning of trouble—the great Armageddon is to come afterward and will be a terrible war between Capital and Labour. We have heard rumours of this conflict but I have always had hopes that this war would have brought these two forces together in fighting for a common objective. Sometimes it seems as if there were signs of co-operation between money and labour and then the dream gets shattered again. Private enterprise in many ways has failed miserably to give itself to the country's need. The Home Government has again and again had to step in and take over factories and run them in order to obtain supplies as needed. Army contracts and big profits, have joined hands. Even the street boys in London have a sort of chant which they sing when they see a lady with all the latest styles on:

She's the Army Contractor's Only Daughter,
Spending it now.

The recent telegraph message that some big steamship line had made (I was going to say earned "but not now") 65% profit after payment of profit tax, only draws attention to the shame of it all. There will be no peace between Capital and Labour till they come together not only as partners in good work and common interests but as partners in the tangible fruits of labour which, filthy lucre though it be, means comfort or the lack of it, misery in these days when money has so much become the arbiter of man's life.

Recruiting Progresses

Mr. F. J. Morris, Chairman of the Recruiting Committee, has received the following message:—

AT TREPASSEY.

TREPASSEY, May 24. Enthusiastic patriotic meeting held here last night in Total Abstinence Hall which was crowded to the doors. President of T. A. Society, Mr. James Waddleton, whose son is at the front met Rev. William O'Flaherty, P.P. and Dr. Burke at the door, and escorted them to the platform. The Magistrate, Dr. Giovannetti, called the meeting to order and introduced Dr. Burke to the audience. The lecturer held the closest attention of the meeting for upwards of an hour. His remarks were received most enthusiastically. Mr. George Devoreaux proposed and Mr. Joe Devoreaux seconded a vote of thanks which having been carried unanimously, the Magistrate asked Fr. O'Flaherty to address the audience. His excellent and eloquent patriotic address was listened to with vast and most earnest attention. Singing of God Save the King was led by the church choir. The meeting closed with cheers for King, Country and Trepassey Volunteers. Nine have already volunteered, two of whom, Private Lawrence Dunphy and Reservist William St. Croix have made the supreme sacrifice. One, Thomas Waddleton, has been invalided home. Many more have signified their intention of volunteering at end of fishery.

AT LANCE COVE.

EAS TWABANA, May 24. Lance Cove school house was thronged last night. Mr. Charles Taylor presided. The speakers were: Councillors Bennett and Murphy, Rev. Father Nangle, F. Jardine and Lieut. Leo Murphy. There was great enthusiasm and several volunteers, making sixteen enrollments for the district.

GETTING REPAIRS.—Repairs to the S. S. Oldgate, which arrived here yesterday damaged, will occupy about a week.

Little Lectures
by NURSE WINGARNIS.
(Lecture No. 2.)
"Nerves"

Our nerves are similar to an intricate network of telegraph wires. Controlled and nourished by a portion of the brain—known as the nerve centres—the delicate thread-like nerves radiate in all directions throughout the body. So long as the nerve centres are capable of continually supplying nourishment to the nerves, the nerves will remain strong and healthy. But directly the nerve centres become weakened by overwork, worry or anxiety, they are unable to transmit the necessary nourishment, and the nerves become worn out and "on edge." Then it is that a sudden sound makes you "jump"—you get irritable—you suffer from neuralgia—you are restless and depressed. In this condition there is nothing to equal

Because, being a powerful nerve food, "Wingarnis" gets right to the root of the trouble, and, by creating a supply of new nerve force, stimulates and re-vitalizes the whole nervous system. Try "Wingarnis" for "Nerves." It is wonderful. Over 10,000 Doctors recommend it. Begin to get well FREE.

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district."
He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the trinity of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them, I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is—well, mere child's play."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very un-obtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness—all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances, by the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO
X. Lamp and GASTREAM Radiators fill all light and heat requirements.
