FARMERS FAVORED DURING PAST YEAR.

Price of Produce Was High While Goods They Bought Remained the Same.

Eggs Higher Than For Many Years. Bad Season of 1904 Followed by Hard Winter Blamed for Present Conditions.

The merchants of Bridgetown, almost without exception, report a good year during 1905. It was a year, nevertheless, in which everything favored the farmer. He sold his produce, or at least, a large portion of it, at a high figure, while the goods he had to purchase remained about the same and in some cases even fell off. At almost all the stores more goods were disposed of than during previous years, but strange to say, that although it was a year of plenty, several of the merchants report the collections as but fair, one or two of them going so far as to pronounce them poor. Great advances were made in several lines of produce, notably butter and eggs. This is attributed to the partial failure of the fall crops of 1904 and the unusually severe winter of 1904-05. Farmers could not afford to pay the high prices demanded by those who had feed to sell even when they were able to get it, which was not the case in many places, and as a consequence, it is estimated that fully 25 per cent. of the stock was killed off. None has been bought to replace it and it will be several years before the natural increase will bring it back to its old figure. It will easily be seen by this that only seventy-five per cent of the usual supply of butter and eggs was available and this coupled with the fact that the population was increased by several hundred men—railroad navvies—had the effect of driving the prices away up. Better is at the present time, from three to four cents a pound higher than last year, while eggs are higher than at any other season for many years. Thirty cents is the price now and the highest they have ever reached before was twenty-five cents, while the average price is about fourteen cents. Even at the high figure very few are offering. Vegetables are about the same in price as during 1904, but are very much superior in quality. One feature of the year is that considerable more cabbage was raised than ever before. Cheese, too, has advanced along with butter and eggs, and is now quoted at 14 cents at wholesale. This is owing to the great demand in the English market, there being a scarcity in the other sources of supply to that great market.

Sixty-six Cents on the Dollar.

Toronto, Dec. 29.—Sixty-six cents on the dollar is thought by Government Commissioner Cross to be the lowest sum likely to be paid by the York Loan to the shareholders.

1905 WAS PROSPEROUS YEAR FINANCIALLY.

Large Amount of the Town's Business is Done on Paper at the Banks.

Habit May Lead to Extravagance. Another Good Season Required to Even Matters Up in Farming Community.

Financially the business of Bridgetown is conducted in a manner considerably different from the other towns throughout the valley, in that so much of it is done on paper. Perhaps this is necessary in what is, to a large extent, farming territory, but financial experts here say that it has become too much of a habit. Merchants take notes from their farmer customers and discount them, which is of course, good legitimate business, but it is feared that this habit will ultimately have the result of making the farmer careless, as knowing that they will be carried along they may be led to over-purchasing, particularly if there is a strain of extravagance in their make-up. But if they do not abuse this privilege and pay strict attention to turning the money that is received into profitable channels, perhaps it may be made one of the best means for successful farming and may be termed good financing.

Last summer was a very prosperous season as there was the best hay crop in many years and vegetables and grain yielded in abundance. It is inferred that, as the direct result of this it was not found necessary to lay out any money for feed this fall as in former years. This, combined with the fact that apples are selling at a high price should make it very easy in enabling the farmer to meet the necessities of life. In 1904—that year being a very poor one, the farmers got behind and it will take all of 1905 and part of 1906 to enable them to catch up. But, taken as a whole, the year 1905 has been a good year in both the town and country. Only a little more than half the apples have been shipped so far and a possible slump might weaken the present condition of affairs, but authorities consider such as improbable as the world's supply this year is short.

In manufacturing circles all industries have made progress—some more, some less—and the same can be said of the merchants. There has not been a failure in Bridgetown during the whole year—a record to be proud of. Prospects for the immediate future are good, but everything depends on the sale of stock now on hand. Considerable money has been sent away for speculation but not so much as a few years ago. The tendency seems to be to invest money at home even at a less rate of interest than offered by many concerns, and as a result of this the deposits in the banks have largely increased.

MASONS CELEBRATED ST. JOHN'S DAY IN ROYAL STYLE.

Seventy-Five Sat Down to Dinner in the Masonic Building and Listened to Speeches Afterwards.

The celebration of St. John's day, December 27th, by Rothesay Lodge, A. F. and A. M., was a complete success. Early on the evening of that day the members gathered in their lodge room and at seven o'clock walked in procession to the Presbyterian church where they listened to a sermon by Rev. Mr. Macdonald. The latter was assisted by Rev. Mr. deBlois, of Annapolis, permanent grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia.

After the service they returned to the lodge room where they were met by their wives and friends. About nine o'clock the whole party repaired to the store beneath which, during the day, had been converted into a dining-room. Two long tables, tastefully decorated with lamps and flowers had been provided and the bare walls had been covered with a profusion of bunting. About seventy-five people sat down to enjoy the good things provided by "mine host, Conde," of the Grand Central Hotel. Following is the menu:

Worshipful Master, Dr. Anderson, presided at the function, and after full justice had been done, introduced the toast list, the first, of course, being the usual one to the King. This toast is a popular one at all banquets, but doubly so to a masonic gathering as the fraternity never forgets that His Majesty is a mason and that he, for years, occupied the highest office in the gift of that body in England.

"The Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia" was replied to by Fred B. Fay and Rev. Mr. deBlois. Mr. Fay was proud he was a mason under the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, and in Annapolis County. It was in this county one hundred and fifty-six years ago, (1749) that the first lodge in British North America was organized at Annapolis Royal, followed shortly afterwards by Chebucto Lodge at Halifax. From these sprung the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia. Today there are eighty-five lodges with a membership of upwards of five thousand. The Grand Lodge was organized in 1866, and prior to this the lodges worked under the Grand Lodge of England. The Royal Standard of Halifax, still works under that lodge by special permission of the Nova Scotia lodge, but its membership consists principally of the military and naval element. It was in 1759 that we have the first mention of masonry in Nova Scotia but there is no doubt but that it existed a century and a half before then. Even back in DeMonts' time there is evidence of craft life. Some years ago a piece of trap rock was found on the shores of Annapolis Basin on which was marked the square and compass and the date 1646. It went to show that when the French were here masonry existed. But you may ask, what has that to do with the Grand Lodge? Perhaps nothing, except to show the antiquity of the order. The Grand Lodge is doing a good work for charity. We have today a ward in the Victoria General hospital, in Halifax, where any mason in Nova Scotia may receive treatment at no cost to him. The lodge is now laying plans for a home for aged and infirm masons. With this in view a mammoth fair is being arranged which will take place this year during the Dominion exhibition and it is hoped that there will be sufficient encouragement to ensure the erection of the home. Rev. Mr. deBlois said masonry was cosmopolitan, and spoke of the efforts of the order to induce sobriety. There were few drunkards in the active membership now—they may be of us but not with us. There is no objection to drinkers provided they do not drink to excess, although many Grand Lodges will not allow drinkers. Now a good mason must be a good man. Many join who have no idea of the benefits of masonry—it is a study of a lifetime. Did you ever notice how many orders have sprung up in your day—in my day? They did good work but they have gone. But masonry has lasted since the days of Solomon, still stands and will stand because God is at its head. Its every undertaking is conducted under divine principles. Every man who joins is prayed for by others and must pray for himself. B. Starratt replied to the toast "Our Country." Canada was a great country—a vigorous giant with vast possibilities. It has great natural resources and is pushing them. It has built immense transportation lines, is operating many steamship lines and is continually stretching out for more commerce. It is taking great strides in manufactures, and where we used to import such goods as clothing we now make them and offer better quality than we used to import. Ex-Mayor Shaner replied to "Our Civic Government." He had heard many remarks about Bridgetown being the most flourishing little place between Yarmouth and Halifax. He referred to the assessment (350,000) and the comparatively low rate of taxation (81.60 per cent). With this the town owes about $50,000 and have to offset this debt, a supply of water of the best quality in Canada, put in at a cost of $25,000; a schoolhouse, one (Continued on Page 5)

"MADE IN BRIDGETOWN" GOODS ARE WELL KNOWN.

May be Found From the Atlantic to the Pacific and Even in Great Britain.

There Was a Large Output Last Year. Barrels, Larrigans and Vinegar Were the Principal Articles of Export.

"Made in Bridgetown" goods have for some years past been forging ahead and can now be found in every important market in Canada between the Atlantic and the Pacific, in Great Britain and Newfoundland, and have even made an entry into the Gt. England States, where at the present time several canvassers are engaged in selling toilet racks and paper holders—two articles manufactured by J. H. Hicks & Sons. This is all good advertising for Bridgetown—advertising which has, of late, brought the town to the front to such an extent that it is now looked upon as the brightest spot in the western counties and takes rank as one of the leading manufacturing centres of the province. Situated as it is on an important line of railway, at the head of navigation on the Annapolis river, in the midst of one of the greatest fruit growing regions in the world and within easy reach of the best of lumber it is a wonder that more manufacturers, particularly in wood, have not located here. During the year just closed over 75,000 pairs of Bridgetown larrigans were disposed of throughout Canada and Newfoundland; over 200,000 gallons of the best cider vinegar left the two factories here, a great deal of it going to Great Britain, from 25,000 to 30,000 barrels were sent to provincial ports, and over 400 cabinets, referred to previously, were turned out by the Hicks factory every month. Besides these a lot of stoves and family castings were shipped, thousands of bricks were made and sold, carriages and sleighs were built and sent away, thousands of bottles of liniment manufactured, and on the whole every line of manufacturing represented here enjoyed a profitable year. Speaking of the larrigan factory alone their output increased fifty per cent. over that of 1904 and the number of hands employed was increased from forty to fifty. The tannery was enlarged and a steam plant was put in to run the machinery. In buying hides preference is given to those produced in Nova Scotia, but enough cannot be obtained from this source and it was found necessary to purchase $35,000 worth from New Brunswick. In connection with hides it may be interesting to note that the prices have so far advanced during the year that the price of the 1906 output of larrigans will have to be increased twenty-five per cent. It speaks well for the prosperity of Canada during 1905 that with this large output going to all portions of the Dominion, the company has found collections exceedingly good and has not lost one cent in bad debts during the whole year. Empire Liniment, too, has largely increased its territory during 1905. A new company, with a good capital, has been organized and they are stretching out towards the great (Continued on Page 5).

BRIDGETOWN'S GROWTH A STEADY ONE.

Nine Modern Houses Were Built and Other Improvements Made During Year Just Closed.

Present Prospects Are Rather Dull. Lumber Shipments Practically Nil and Only Enough for Local Consumption.

Bridgetown's growth during the past year has been a steady one. For some years past buildings, all of a good class, too, have been going up at the rate of from six to twelve a year. The past year opened rather dull and continued a little slow all through. Nine modern residences were built, however, one business block was remodelled and a large addition was built to the Larrigan Company's tannery. The following are the owners of these new buildings: Union Bank of Halifax, Avard Bealer, G. B. Topper, J. H. Hicks & Sons, Henry B. Hicks, Stanley Grim, W. H. MacKenzie, James DeWitt.

Lumbering operations have not been up to the average as far as this town is concerned. The shipments have been practically nil and probably not more than 250,000 or 300,000 feet were brought here for local consumption and that was practically all from Dalhousie and neighborhood. The high prices reached in 1904 are still maintained and at present there is not much chance of a decrease. Just now there is nothing new in sight for the new year, but that is not taken as an indication that it will be a dull year by any means.

How Town's Secure Industries.

What sort of a town do manufacturers seek when they are looking for manufacturing sites? What kind of factories does the average town prefer? Some light on these questions is to be found in the latest circular of industrial information issued by the United States bureau of statistics. The bureau sent a circular letter to thousands of towns, including 321 in Massachusetts, asking what land was available for manufacturing purposes, and inquiring as to water power, tax-rebate, raw materials, natural products, railroad facilities, lighting system, water supply, available labor, and the kind of business best suited to the needs of the community. Of these 321 Massachusetts towns 231 replied, and 212 said they had land available for manufacturing purposes, the extent of it varying from four and a half acres to 9,000 acres. Fifty-five towns reported water power not yet utilized, but few had any great amount. Replies came from 144 towns having electric railways and seventy without them.

A striking feature of the replies is that few towns made much of a showing in regard to raw materials. With respect to natural products many had clay, sand, gravel, stone, peat and lumber. Thirty-one towns mentioned shoe factories that are no longer running. The replies from sixty-six towns reported in the aggregate 20,000 persons whose services could be had continuously. Shoe factories and canneries appear to be wanted in most places; forty-eight towns asked for shoe factories, twelve for box factories, forty-four for canneries, the raw material being close at hand, eleven for cotton mills, fifteen for machine shops, six for paper mills, nineteen for manufacturing of wooden goods, lumber being plenty, twenty-four for woolen mills, and twenty wanted hotels for summer boarders. Seventy-eight reported one or more idle workshops or factories.

The bureau of statistics seeks continually to place such information as this before capitalists who are looking for factory sites. In the circular referred to the bureau suggests that "if one factory or workshop could be established in each of the towns considered it would tend to prevent a further loss of the younger population and might be the means of drawing thereto many persons now out of employment in the cities."—St. John Telegraph.

Here's What May Betell Us This Year. Prophet Spangler Predicts All Sorts of Dire Disasters at Home and Abroad.

Here are Spangler's prophecies for 1906:

The dissolution of Russia. The overthrow of Turkey. The assassination of the Czar of Russia.

The assassination of the Sultan of Turkey.

The prevention of three wars by President Roosevelt.

A protracted race war in the South. Destructive spring floods in the United States.

A destructive eruption of Mount Vesuvius.

The activity of Mont Pelee and Popocatepetl.

Volcanic eruptions in all parts of the world.

The eruption of many volcanoes now supposed to be extinct.

Great loss of life at sea by storms. Destruction of two western cities by cyclones.

Earthquakes in all parts of the world. Destructive earthquakes in California and the Philippines.

Rebellion in Spain. Great disturbances all over Europe. Spangler says further that the summer of 1906 will be hot and sultry throughout the temperate zone, with excessive death rate.

That Christ will make His spirit felt among the peoples of the United States and England, in which countries there are to be fervent religious and potent political movements which are to overcome in a great degree the present spirit of graft and commercialism.

That the United States will continue as a world power and the leader of other nations.

That Pennsylvania is to have an administration of the people and that discoveries of corruption will be discovered which will drive some of the guilty to suicide.

That God will visit terrible vengeance upon the Russians for the massacre of the Jews.

Strong Complaints About Apples.

Ottawa, Dec. 29.—A. W. Donly, Canadian agent in Mexico, in his last report to the department of trade, condemns in most unsparring language the shipment of Canadian apples which has been sent to Mexico. He says the centre of the barrels contained scrub stock and naturally one wonders how this shipment escaped the eagle eyes of the inspectors.

H. R. Leighton & Co. Assign.

Boston, Dec. 29.—The recent boom in copper stocks on the Boston Stock Exchange, when prices went up in bounds, was an important contributing cause to the suspension of the stock brokerage firm of H. R. Leighton & Co., which assigned for the benefit of its creditors. Although the firm is not a member of any stock exchange, the assignment was adjudged of considerable importance from the fact that the firm has some forty branch offices. The firm declares that the suspension is due to the failure of a member of the Boston Stock Exchange to meet his obligation to the company, and to outstanding investments in copper to a greater or less extent, upon which the necessary money could not be realized. (The firm had a branch office in Halifax on Hollis street, E. F. Beck, manager. It is understood that several Halifax men have claims against the firm, some of them as high as $600. The investors there are probably interested in the concern to the extent of $3,000 or $4,000.)

Sunday Observance.

A British Columbia Clergyman Proposes Against Proposed Legislation on this Subject.

(Daily News, Nelson, B. C.)

We have read with great pleasure a communication by the Rev. H. S. Akhurst to the Kamloops Standard, dealing with the subject of Sunday observance in general and the proposed Lord's Day Alliance measure in particular. Mr. Akhurst writes with commendable frankness and we trust that his example will be widely followed by the clergy throughout British Columbia. The dominion government and the parliament of Canada should be given to understand clearly and unequivocally that the legislation proposed by the Lord's Day Alliance is entirely at variance with the conceptions of liberty and justice held by the great mass of the people of this country. Rev. Mr. Akhurst's timely letter reads as follows:

To the Editor of the Standard: Dear Sir,—There have been sent to me forms of petitions to the senate and commons of Canada seeking the enactment of legislation on Sunday observance. May I be permitted space in your paper in which to explain why I am unable to sign these or canvas for signatures. These petitions must be taken in connection with the meeting clauses of the law which the Dominion Lord's Day Alliance is strenuously advocating. These petitions, besides making illegal the Sunday indulgence in many innocent recreations, will deprive many working people of the only opportunity they now have of spending a few hours in the healthful open air of the country, and so escaping for a brief spell the soul-deadening surroundings of their daily life. This act will not prevent the rich from using their own carriages, boats and other conveyances, or from employing their domestic servants on the Lord's day, but the poor who cannot afford such possessions, and have few, if any, opportunities other than Sunday of using public conveniences for so on that day. Must we conclude that hired service is for the rich a necessity, but for the poor a desecration of the Sabbath? Is it just to refuse a public concession of those kinds of recreation to the poor which the rich have long taken without hesitation? Above all is it wise to multiply re-restrictions and requirements beyond what is essential, when we know that men so hemmed in break the artificial barriers, and in doing so with a sense of guilt become hardened and prepared to transgress commandments of divine and eternal obligations. Let us in all lawful and expedient ways try to ensure to every man his weekly day of rest, though that may not in all cases or on all occasions coincide with the Sunday. By all means lawful let us try to lead men to what we believe to be a right observance of that day. But as Christians we have no right to go further than St. Paul did when he said: "one man esteemed one day above another," while "another esteemed every day alike," the apostle only said: "Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind."

Much of the work of the Lord's Day Alliance is commendable, but their proposed law in its present form seems neither advisable nor just, and to sign their petitions, though very general in form, would signify approval of the law.

Thanking you for your courtesy,

Yours truly, H. S. AKHURST.

Apple Trees.

One of the greatest mistakes in buying nursery stock is the buying of cheap or second class trees, because you can get them for $20.00 a hundred, while we can sell you first class stock from the E. D. Smith Nursery at $25.00 a hundred. Think of it, saving five cents on the foundation of a tree that may give you five dollars a year later on. It may seem like economy at the time without giving it a thought, but it is mighty poor economy. It is about the same kind of economy as buying a scrub cow as the foundation of a herd because one could get her cheap. It is more emphatically true of nursery stock than of almost anything else—that the best is none too good. Persons intending to plant in the spring would do well to communicate with us before placing their order.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 3TH, 1906.

The announcement in the last issue of the Monitor has, of course, prepared its readers to receive this issue as the first to appear under the new management. It is indeed gratifying to learn that J. H. Hicks & Sons have decided to rebuild their factory in Bridgetown. They had been seriously thinking of moving it either to Ontario or Maine, but, fortunately for the town, gave up the idea.

Husband Was Idle, Wife Took Her Life

New York, Dec. 30. - Discouraged and despondent because her husband had lost employment, Mrs. John F. Ford, a bride of six weeks, ended her life early today by drinking carbolic acid. When the couple were married Ford had a position as salesman in a New York store, but he was laid off a week before Christmas and has been unable to obtain employment ever since that time.

had a small sum of money in the bank and he urged his wife to bear up, telling her that he surely would succeed in getting something to do before their funds were exhausted. During the night she left her husband's side and swallowed an ounce of carbolic acid. Ford was awakened by the crash of a dish which his wife had knocked to the floor in the darkness. Mrs. Ford died as she was being taken to a hospital.

Dynamic Explosion at Torbrook. Shock Caused Windows to Shake Fully Half a Mile From the Spot.

On Sunday night at 12 o'clock there was considerable excitement in town. Just as 1905 was passing into the "has-beens" a large amount of dynamite was exploded at the Wheelock shaft.

The town turned out en masse, some in the scantiest attire, and a large number went to the shaft to ascertain the cause of this bizarre serenade. The shock of the explosion was so great as to cause to shake violently the windows of houses half a mile distant.

E. H. Banks has finished his mill and will shortly instal a large boiler to saw timber for the miners.

Miss Ada Brown, who has been teaching in the Canadian West for two years, returned home on the 20th ult.

HYMENEAL.

MCCORMICK-CHESLEY. As intimated in our columns last week, an event of more than local interest took place in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Bridgewater, Lunenburg Co., on Wednesday, Dec. 27th, when John, son of the late George McCormick, of Granville Centre, was united in marriage to Annie L., eldest daughter of the late Phineas L. Chesley, of Upper Granville, Annapolis, N. S., the officiating clergyman being Rev. E. Underwood, rector of Bridgetown. On account of the early hour at which the ceremony took place the service was very quiet but none the less impressive. The bride, dressed in a travelling suit of green chiffon broadcloth with hat to match of velvet and white mauline, was led to the altar on the arm of her cousin, Judge Chesley, of Lunenburg, who subsequently gave her away. The church, too, was in keeping with the occasion being beautifully decorated for the Christmas festival. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. McCormick left for Halifax where the first part of the honeymoon was spent. The bride and groom are both well known outside as well as in Annapolis County, and have the good wishes of an unusually large circle of friends for their future happiness.

Another Hope Young Sensation. Report in Boston Says That Money Sent for the New Trial Was Wrongly Used.

(Special Despatch to the Monitor). Digby, Jan. 3.—Harry L. Denison, prosecuting attorney was interviewed yesterday as to the report from Boston to the effect that Hope Young's lawyer, Robert G. Munroe, had announced his intention of taking proceedings against the authorities, and that money sent from Boston for a fund for Hope Young's defence had disappeared. Mr. Denison stated that attorney Denison and Deputy Sheriff Burnham to pay of some expenses of the previous trial. It is said the report is an utter fabrication from beginning to end and without the slightest foundation. Munroe stated he was in no way responsible for its use and was surprised to sign a statement to that effect. Probably the local authorities of Digby will ask for an investigation by the government into the whole matter, including the treatment and care of Hope Young since her arrest.

Selected Story. Rocks and the Revenue

By Julian Batchelder. "Caves," echoed the girl. "I don't see what you care about caves. Are you a revenue?"

"I hope to be a source of revenue to your father," he laughed lightly. "I suppose he would not mind giving me a room and board for a while?"

"To a revenue!" Corson smiled. The girl's tones enlightened him. He had dimly heard that revenue officers were not popular in that part of Tennessee.

"I did not mean I hoped to be a revenue officer," he explained. "There is another meaning to revenue. It means income, profit; I merely want to board with him."

"What do you want of the caves?" she demanded suspiciously. "I am studying the formation. I am a geologist." The girl looked as if she thought a geologist might be something even more formidable than a revenue official, and he went on with the explanation.

"I write books about rocks, and I want to write about the limestone caves of this region. I have just spent a month at Mammoth cave, in Kentucky, and wish to find some of the caves in the region about here."

"I guess you'll take you in," she agreed. "Come on ahead," and she turned up the narrow path. Twenty minutes before he had climbed down from the seat of Hank Bassom's lumber wagon and Hank had jerked a thumb over in the direction of the hill. "I guess the Pawlings kin care for you all," he suggested. "Go long."

The last had started the horse and had left Corson standing undecided in the road until Elizabeth Pawling, crashing through the underbrush, had been brought to a sudden stop by the unexpected apparition of a stranger.

Now he was following her back up the trail and wondering how it was that women were so fair. Just before they reached the clearing the girl paused. "I guess you'll take you," she said with a prelude, "but you'd better not say anything about caves. They ain't healthy for strangers hereabouts."

She took up her way without waiting for reply, but acting on her advice, he simply announced himself as a geologist and stilled all further questions by announcing his willingness to pay a dollar a day for board.

Then began the golden era. With his little geological hammer and a specimen bag he roamed the mountains, spending the whole of the glorious autumn day in the open and returning to the cabin to sleep the healthful sleep of complete exhaustion.

On all of these trips Elizabeth accompanied him and his early admiration quickly deepened into love. On her part she affected a contempt for his weakness, for an illness had compelled him to take a rest from his college work, and had suggested this mountain trip. In the clear air he soon regained his strength, however, and in time she abandoned her taunts.

Her father, he learned, had been a man of breeding who had fled to the mountains because of some election quarrel. It was from him that she had obtained some slight education, but his death had interrupted her studies and he found her an eager pupil. In the rests between their walks he unfolded to the girl vistas of that world of learning which was home to him, but to her a strange and glorious country.

It was she in turn who led him to the caves and he found a dozen or so of varying size that exactly suited his purpose. In some of these were traces of fire and smoke stained roofs which she explained by saying that doubtless hunters had occupied the cavern.

At night she hung over the back of his chair as he sat at the rude table transcribing his notes, and watching with breathless interest his pen as it flew over the paper, never stumbling at the long geological terms.

She was leaning over his chair one evening when with a sudden cry she straightened up and turned to face some one who had just entered. For a while Corson went on writing, too absorbed in his work to notice the conversation until the door slammed and Bess came toward him with a white face.

"Who was it?" he asked idly as he looked up from his work. "No one," she said with a forced laugh. "Just Jim Jordan. He's used to come here very often."

He soon found enlightenment, for the next morning, after a sleepless night he went out early, before the rest of the house was stirring. Over in the east there was a faint signal of the approaching dawn, but the stars still sparkled overhead. He went down the path to the spring and sat down on the flat rock to watch the coming of the day.

A crashing in the underbrush aroused him and he sprang to his feet to confront a huge raw-boned man

My Hair is Extra Long

Even Corson had to stoop to enter the passage and as he emerged into the larger cavern he found himself pinioned from behind before he could straighten up. He had gained greatly in strength as he had recovered his health, but at his best he would have been no match for the hairy mountain-tainer and he presently found himself trussed up securely and flung to the floor of the cave.

The other picked up the torch which had fallen to the floor in the struggle and thrust it before Corson's face. "I guess you won't steal my gal after all, Mister Revenue," he taunted. "You can't fool me with the story that you just want to look at the rocks. You are looking for stills, well, look! This is the biggest hereabouts. Small the mash?"

Corson had been sensible of a peculiar odor. Now it all flashed upon him. He had heard that sometimes stills were thrown before Corson's face, why Bess had led him only to the smaller caves and had insisted upon being his guide on all occasions. This was the man who had visited the house the night before, and he had been trussed up.

The disappearance of the light told him that Jordan had left the cave, and as he lay there with his hands bound behind him he wondered why he had not been killed. It was short shifts for a revenue officer, and yet he was being saved. Perhaps it was but the prelude to a form of death beside which the sharp impact of a bullet would be merciful indeed.

Presently his position became a torture to him. His arms had been bound tightly behind his back, and now his weight pressing heavily upon them had become an agony. He sought to gain relief by a change of posture, but he had been thrown between two castles, and it was impossible to turn over. In the end nature came to his relief, and he fainted.

He woke with a sensation as if he had swallowed liquid fire and in the dusky glow of a torch he found Bess leaning over him. For a moment he watched her idly as she chafed his wrists, then memory flashed back and he sought to rise. His legs, still numb from the rope, refused to support him and he sank back weakly.

"We must get out of here," he murmured. "How did you find me, Bess?" "I followed Jim's trail from the spring," she explained. "I could see that you had gone there and when I saw that you had followed Jim I knew where to come."

"Then you knew of this place all the time?" he asked reproachfully. "Of course, but I knew it would be death to bring you here. It has been arranged anyway to make them believe that you were not a revenue. Now Jim will make them all think you are."

She handed him a glass filled with something that looked like water but the moment it touched his palate he knew that it was moonshine whiskey and he felt the burning sensation of mouth and throat. She had forced some down his throat to revive him.

"I think we had better be getting out of here," he murmured, as he started toward the entrance. She sprang to his side and supported him, but even with her help his progress was slow. Just as they reached the entrance to the tunnel a light shone from the further end and back of the light appeared Jordan's face.

"With a cry, Bess threw her torch straight at him. He warred it off with the knot he carried in his hand and the two fell blazing to the floor. Bess leaped at him like a tigress, but she was quickly subdued and catching up the torch Jordan came into the larger cave, followed by the girl.

"I thought maybe you'd be up to some trick," he laughed as he snapped a pair of rusty handcuffs on Corson's wrists. "I can't help but keep guard. The boys won't be back until day after tomorrow, so I can keep him here until then without them finding out. After that you know what a revenue hound gets."

"He's not a revenue," she declared indignantly. "He was just looking at the caves." "You tell that to the boys," laughed Jordan. "I have a different story. I guess he was some round interfering between two lovers' hearts again."

He added leg irons to the handcuffs and placed a slice of corn pone and some water beside the man. The chain of the leg irons he spiked to the side of the cave and then, satisfied with his work, he turned to Bess. "You come with me," he commanded. "I want to talk to you all."

With one last glance at Corson, the girl followed Jordan from the cave. With a groan, Corson realized that Jordan would make her marriage the price of his liberty. He would rather die than see her married to the man. He wished he had told her so before she went to Jordan's house.

Within the hour the two returned. Bess' face was white and set, and in the first glance she gave him he read her decision. Jordan spoke first. "Revenue," he said lightly. "I thought as it might make you more easy like to know that you ain't going to die, Bess and me is to be married, and that bein' the case, I ain't got nothin' to hold agin you."

THIS PRETTY CANADIENNE

Saved From Terrible Kidney Disease By "Fruit-a-tives."

Masson, P.Q., Nov. 16th, 1904. "I have much pleasure in reporting to you the great benefit I have received from taking 'Fruit-a-tives'—and I feel that I cannot say too much in favor of a medicine which has done me so much good. I was a martyr to that distressing complaint, chronic constipation accompanied with severe headaches, backache, sick stomach and all the symptoms of dyspepsia. I had also a dreadful complexion, pale in the extreme and black under the eyes. I had every symptom of kidney irritation and I had been told by physicians that my kidneys were affected. I consulted a number of physicians and took various remedies but received very little benefit. Last May I was advised to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and when I began to take them I had little faith of getting anything to give me permanent relief, but after I had taken half a box of 'Fruit-a-tives' I began to feel better and before I had finished one box the constipation was relieved, the headaches left me, the pain in my back was better and I could sleep as soundly as when I was child. Also, my complexion began to clear up again, all the aches and pains disappeared and the black circles under my eyes went away. The pain in the back gradually left me and all signs of kidney disease disappeared by the first of August after I had taken three boxes. Since then I have continued to improve and now I have none of my old symptoms and my appetite is good, digestion splendid and my complexion is as when I was a young girl. Also the constipation from which I had suffered so long is entirely cured and it is not necessary for me to take the 'Fruit-a-tives' now as I am quite well in every way. I took no medicine but 'Fruit-a-tives' but I followed faithfully the directions as to diet etc., given in the pamphlet which accompanies each box of 'Fruit-a-tives.' (Sgd.) FLORENCE JAMESON.

Every part of the body is constantly decaying and being renewed. The dead cells, or tissue waste, should be removed by the skin, kidneys and bowels. When these organs do not act regularly, this poisonous matter stays in the system—is taken up by the blood—carried to heart, liver, stomach, brain and nerves all over the body—and poisons everything it touches.

'Fruit-a-tives' keep each organ clean and healthy. 'Fruit-a-tives' act on the skin, stimulating the millions of minute glands and opening the pores so the waste can escape. They act on the liver sending more bile into the bowels and making the bowels move regularly and naturally every day. They act on the kidneys, strengthening and invigorating these organs and curing all kidney disorders.

"Bess," he pleaded, "I'd rather die than see you married to that man. Don't mind me, dear. Don't make yourself miserable for life just to set me free. It is my own fault and I should pay the penalty."

"I don't want to marry a revenue," she said thickly. "I don't want to marry you. I thought I liked you, but I guess it's always been Jim."

He searched her face with his glance, but she met his look evenly and steadily. The eyes were sunken a little and the face looked wan and pinched, but she met his gaze without flinching and his heart sank within him.

With a groan he turned his face to the wall. He heard Jordan explaining that Bess had to go to town for her wedding finery and that after they were married he would be released. Then the cave darkened again and he was left to himself.

In a sort of delirium he passed the next two days. The agony of mind was added to the agony of flesh and he scarcely gave heed to Jordan's visits, though he mechanically ate the corn pone the moonshiner brought.

Then, in one of the visits, Jordan announced that Bess had returned and that the wedding was set for tomorrow.

That night the cave was filled with men. From their talk he gathered that they were celebrating Jordan's approaching nuptials and he writhed in agony as Jordan told the story of his conquest.

They were gathered about the rear of the cavern where the barrels were stored and suddenly Corson's quick ears caught—the sound of stealthy footsteps and he strained toward the tunnel whence the sound came.

Then he heard a clicking sound that brought every man in the roystering crowd to his feet already half sobbed, there was a quick command, a rush, the sound of firing, hoarse shouts and the noise of stamping of feet mingled.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

NO 1. By Rev. E. E. Daley, of the Bridgetown Baptist Church.

Job XLII-5, 6.-I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth thee. Wherefore, I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes.

Among the senses with which God has endowed us, few, if any, gain a better apprehension of a thing than sight. There are degrees of knowledge. The farmer may know of the soil and seed, but when a man of science tells him of the nature of the soil, etc., it begins to dawn upon him that he has been dealing with matters on which he has had very little light.

Supposing the forces that restrain men in the commission of sin were removed, what would be the result? The day will dawn when every restraint will be removed and we shall see sin in all its awfulness. Sin does not belong to this world and by-and-by the time will come when it will go to its own climate and develop.

These are some ideas of sin; we can see them in everyday life. We get would not believe it until that angel told me he had dealt lightly with angels who had sinned. God has punished sin with fire and flame, whirlwind and deluge. In Revelations we read of the fierceness of the wrath of God.

would not believe it until that angel told me he had dealt lightly with angels who had sinned. God has punished sin with fire and flame, whirlwind and deluge. In Revelations we read of the fierceness of the wrath of God. We say this in figurative language and so it is, but if it means anything it means that God will punish sin. We get a conception of what things are by beholding a better. The man who compares himself with a fellowman sees his insignificance as he compares himself with God. As we look upon God we should have a vision of ourselves that should make us cry: "I abhor myself."

Tonight we are turning another corner in the highway of time-of life. What better time to turn to God? Can you not see that sin is your greatest foe? It is better to live in disease than to live and die in sin. Let me ask you to make a start tonight and let 1906 be for God and for Eternity.

Hope Young Driven Mad by Brutality. Lawyer Intimates That Inhuman Treatment in Prison Caused Insanity.

(Boston American.) That May Hope Young, the nineteen year old Boston girl, who went insane in prison at Digby, N. S., the day originally set for her hanging for the murder of her adopted child, May Ward, was driven mad by the inhuman treatment accorded her by prison officials, is the charge made by R. G. Munroe, of Digby, the convicted woman's counsel, in a letter received by Mrs. Kate Brodie of No. 30 North Mead street, Charlestown, sister of May Hope Young.

An issue of the cause of Hope Young's madness may be obtained from a perusal of this excerpt from Mr. Munroe's letter: "Since August 23 Hope has endured practically solitary confinement. She has had neither light nor heat. She required constant care, yet no woman had been employed to be with her or care for her. "I have made every endeavor to have the rigor of her imprisonment lessened since the judgment of death and ordering her a new trial, but without result.

"I may say that I am not very much surprised that the character of her imprisonment and the terrible strain of lying so long under sentence of death should have resulted in her present condition. She should have constant care, but is utterly neglected. She seldom sees anyone. Only at the rarest intervals the jailer and myself have talked with her through a narrow window.

"She is under the hallucination that somebody has been hanged in her cell. This I may say is not very far from right for Peter Wheeler was hanged within the jail building a few years ago. I do not think the jail physician understands her condition at all. My impression is that she is suffering from nervous prostration as much as anything else she has been moved to a smaller cell some distance from the one she formerly occupied. She is to be moved immediately (25th) to the insane hospital. Someone should visit her and see that she gets proper medical attendance, or she will be relegated to an obscure part of the institution and be utterly neglected. You know what that means.

"I cannot spend any more money for her. There is no man living who could have done as much for Hope as I have done for nothing. You had better get friends who have money to help at once. "R. G. MUNROE."

A Thrilling Story of the Sea. Heroic and Successful Attempts to Save Life During Saturday Night's Storm.

Digby, Dec. 30.—As intimated in last night's despatch a narrow escape from drowning had occurred in the Bay of Fundy, off Whale Cove. The story now reads like a miracle and tells a story of great bravery and the thrilling escape of four deaths instead of two, as reported last night.

Goods in Bridgetown Are Well Known.

(Continued from Page 1.) Northwest, where a depot is soon to be established from which an express will direct the company's forward movements. Both the vinegar factories have done a good business and one of them has made a special effort to catch the British trade, a member of the firm having spent some time in England. Their efforts have not been in vain and it is gratifying to know that a market has already been established there.

On the whole industrial Bridgetown starts the new year full of hope. The loss of one of the factories—that of the Messrs. Hicks—by fire two weeks ago, is lamentable, and it is sincerely hoped that the firm will soon see their way clear to rebuild and with new and improved machinery their output should be largely increased. During the past few days there has been a persistent rumor that the firm contemplated moving their factory either to Maine or to Western Ontario, and the rumor was not without foundation, as the members of the firm themselves acknowledge that they are considering the question. The town should make a special effort to keep this factory even if it was found necessary to give it a cash bonus, or relieve it of taxation for a period of years.

Electricity the Power of the Future.

Mr. Thomas A. Edison, in a recent interview said several striking things about electrical power and its relation to commerce, among them the following: "Not only will electric power be developed and distributed from the coal mines in the future, but all the water power in the world will be used for the production of electricity. That movement has begun and is advancing rapidly. In California, where men have nerve enough to overcome habits, they are transmitting electric power 225 miles by wire and running street cars and lighting the cities by it.

"When you come to think that one horse-power is equal to twenty-five men, and that water-power changed into electrical energy is practically perpetual—the investment being simply for the original plant—you get some idea of the importance of the changes that the world is bound to see, changes that have already begun and are well under way."

"The great problem of electricity now, in Mr. Edison's opinion, is contained in the fact that we only get about fifteen per cent. of the energy of the coal we burn. Eighty-five per cent. goes up the chimney. Now, if we could find a way to get the energy out of the coal by some direct process, without wasting 85 per cent. of it, the result would be," Mr. Edison raised his hands, closed his eyes and gave a soft prolonged whistle. "It would so multiply and so cheapen electric power as to inaugurate a new epoch in the history of the world. It is practically impossible to exaggerate the consequences of discovery that would produce electricity direct from coal, or in any way to avoid the waste consequent upon the use of boilers and engines. I expect to see this done. I have done it myself, and so have others, but not in a way to make it commercially valuable."

He says 300,000 scientific men are now at work on problems connected with electricity, and that anyone of them may make the great discovery. He believes this great discovery will be made within his own lifetime, and he is no longer young. "The direct process," he says, "will give the world electricity at such a low cost that electric light can be used by everybody and railways can be operated at a fraction of their present expense. The city of New York could be lit as brilliantly in the nighttime as in the daytime without any additional cost. The great discovery which in English

A Wreck Expert.

"I have taken part as a representative of the insurance underwriters in the investigation of 600 shipwrecks. Most of these wrecks are due to running aground. The causes of wrecks are drink, fog, neglect to use the sounding-lead and unknown currents." The speaker was a broad ex-shipper. He went on: "The most dangerous waters lie off the east coast of England, Cape Ushant and Cape Finisterre. "In the past the shifting of the cargo caused a good many wrecks, but the adoption of feed-pipes has changed all that. Cargoes liable to shift consist of wheat, iron ore, coal and so on. Great feed-pipes, filled with part of such cargoes, now run down into the hold, and if the cargo shifts all the pipes automatically pour more cargo into the space that has been made vacant.

Reasons Why Poultry Pay.

Professor Gilbert, of Ottawa, gives the following reasons why poultry is valuable to the farmer. Because he ought, by their means to convert a great deal of the waste of his farm into money in the shape of eggs and chickens for market.

Because, with intelligent management, they ought to be all year revenue producers, with the exception of perhaps two months during the moulting season.

Because poultry will yield him a quicker return for the capital invested than any other department of agriculture.

Because the manure from the poultry house will make valuable compost for use in either vegetable garden or orchard. The birds themselves, if allowed to run in plum or apple orchard, will destroy all injurious insect life.

Because, while cereals and fruits can only be successfully grown in certain sections, poultry can be raised in all parts of the country.

Because poultry raising is an employment in which the farmer's wife and daughters can engage, and leave him free to attend other departments.

Because it will bring him the best results in the shape of new-laid eggs during the winter season, when the farmer has time on his hands.

Because to start poultry raising on the farm requires little or no capital. By good management poultry can be made with little cost a valuable adjunct to the farm.

Insulted a Chinese God. "I had a friend who came very near losing his life in the interior of China from his knowledge of the superstitions of the natives," said Mr. T. H. Gunn, of New York, at the Shoreham.
