LONDON, Nov. 7. - The Russian general staff has issued the following statement covering operations thru to

"Flerce combats on the River San and south of Przemysl, which have been going on for more than three weeks, resulted on Nov. 5 in a general retreat of the Austrians.

OPERATIONS BECOME INTERLACED.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The operations in the eastern and western theatres of the war respectively, which, during the early stages of the campaign, were only broadly related, are daily becoming more closely interlaced as the Russians draw nearer the German frontier.

BELGIANS REINFORCED IN TIME.

The French official announcement, given out in Par

says:

"On our left wing the situation is relatively quiet on the Yser, down stream from Dixmude. The Belgian troops, who advanced along the right bank of the Yser from Nieuport, in the direction of Lombaertzyde, and who had been counter attacked by the Germans, were sustained in time. The situation has been entirely re-established in this locality.

"At Dixmude the marine fusiliers repulsed a fresh counter offensive movement. Further to the south the attacks of the enemy around Bix-schoote also were repulsed by French troops, who subsequently advanced.

"To the east of Ypres the situation is without change. To the southeast of this town we have resumed the offensive in combination with the British troops operating in this region, and repulsed an attack particularly violent and pronounced by detachments belonging to the active army corps recently brought into this region by the Germans.

NO CHANGE ON THE YSER. The following Belgian official communication was given out a Havre today:

"The situation on the Yser shows no change. The enemy has posts on the left bank of the river, but has contented himself with a feeble artillery fire directed against the roads in the environs of Rams Capelle. "The defeats in Russian Poland seem to have resulted in the retreat of portions of the enemy's troops in Belgium. There has been reported particularly, in this connection, the departure toward the east of a division of 5000 men, who have been seen marching from Bruges toward Ghent. Furthermore, five troop trains left Brussels recently, going in the direc-

It is argued by British observers that if Germany can hold entrenched positions along the River Warthe in Russian Poland, she may be able to throw much needed men into Belgium, but on the other hand, if it is true that the Russians have occupied Kolo, on this river, the theory is advanced that the defensive value of the stream is to an extent lessened and it may require every man that Emperor William now has there if Germany hopes to put up a stand along the Warthe to rival the resistance shown along the Aisne.

WORKING CLOSELY TOGETHER.

A more frequent exchange of messages between General Joffre, the French commander-in-chief and Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian armies, would seem to indicate how closely the allies are attempting to make their movements consistent in both

No noteworthy change in France or Belgium was reported during the forenoon. The latest British official statement mentioned a decreased vigor in the German attacks in West Flanders, while the French communication said the battle was as violent as ever. The allies are reported as driving forward in the vicinity of Dixmude and were at last accounts taking the offensive south and east of Ypres, the point where, since last week, the Germans have been endeavoring to get thru. Many despatches speak of a stream of German reinforcements and the allies, in their official statements, have taken cognizance of the changed complexion of those fresh troops. It is pointed out that vast numbers of raw men may have proven inferior to a smaller and better trained force as the repulse of the German mixed forces along the Yser would indicate and that the use of more first line troops in Flanders may mean less prodigality and more heavy fighting than seems to have characterized the former German rushes.

150,000 FRESH TROOPS COMING.

A hundred and fifty thousand Germans, it is said, will be moved to Belgium from Muenster, Prussia, next week while troops who fought near Sedan already are in West Flanders.

The German attempt to reach the Straits of Dover appeared today to have relaxed temporarily. Along the now famous Yser, from the sands of the North Sea coast to the ruined Town of Dixmude, the situation today in the unemotional language of the French war office, was "relatively quiet." The fighting there has all but ceased, and the tide of battle has rolled southward, leaving behind it the countless dead, whose torn bodies are stretched thickly over many a field. South of Ypres on the line extending down over the French border to Arras, the Germans are preparing another furious onslaught, spurred on by their emperor. The main battle there, upon which depends so much for the Germans and allies alike, has not yet at Van on Lake Van in Armenia, and

ADVANTAGES TO THE ALLIES.

Along the rest of the battle line which stretches across France, ortant advantages are said to have been won by the allies. Today's official French statement says that the British and French forces have repulsed German attacks along almost the entire front and that northeast of Verdun, where the territory has long been disputed with exceptional ferocity, two villages have been captured by the allies. THE FALL OF TSINGTAU.

Pending decisive developments on any of the European fields of battle, the fall of Tsingtau held first place in the attention of military men today. Official reports from Tokio show that it was not without desperate resistance that the German garrison gave up the fight. For days the German forces had been subjected to a withering fire from land and sea. At last the central fort fell before the impetuous attack of the Japanese, whose bravery, says Tokio, rivalled that displayed in the historic charges on Port Arthur.

"Suddenly" says the official report from Tokio, "the flag of

"Suddenly" says the official report from Tokio, "the flag of oder ran up in the morning breeze on the weather bureau mount, towering above the sea and land."

Tokio today is celebrating with an outburst of popular enthusiasm the fall of Tsingtau, which occurred after a siege of about three weeks. The vice minister of the navy states that Japan will hold Tsingtau until the war is over, when she will "open negotiations" with China.

With the fighting at Tsingtau at an end, the question is raised as to what Japan will do next. It is suggested that she will now inaugurate an offensive naval campaign on the Pacific employing the fleet released from the bombardment of Tsingtau in an attempt to run down the German warships which wrought such havoc to the British shipping interests.

Notwithstanding Russian claims to an overwhelming success in the east, there is nothing to show that the German and Austrian forces have met great disaster and altho they were compelled to retreat they apparently were able to fall back upon strongly fortified positions selected in advance.

The income tax will range from $8 on incomes of between $500 and $550 to $7000 on incomes of between $95,000 and $100,000. Incomes exceeding $100,000 will pay 8 per cent of their total

The probability that they are safe in these positions, for the present at least, leads London to suggest that German troops will be withdrawn and rushed to the west to bolster up the battered forces there for a supreme effort to pierce the allied line to the south of Ypres. For the last two days heavy cannonading has been under way and this is believed to be preliminary to the main German attack.

Over the remainder of the battle line thru France there are no decisive changes. Altho today's official French statement asserts that the Germans have been driven back at various points, the situation in the main apparently is practically the same as has been the case for several weeks, so far as the general line of battle is concerned.

Russia, in an official statement, makes the claim that the resistance of the enemy has been broken, after fighting of several weeks along a front of 350 miles. This campaign has now been closed, in the opinion of the Russian military authorities, who say that a new period of the war TURKEY SEIZES VESSELS.

Of the fighting on land and sea brought about by Turkey's entrance into the war little was learned today. Turkish officials at Smyrna are said to have made further seizures of vessels of hostile countries, and the Russian general staff in Caucasia reports that the Turkish forces which attempted an offensive movement have been driven back with heavy losses.

Paris suggests that the Germans are making an important change in their military tactics. Mass formation is said to have been abandoned in the fighting in Flanders, infantrymen attacking in open order and seeking all available cover.

ENTIRE GERMAN UNITS CAPTURED. During the action against the positions on what is known as the Grand Crown of Nancy, according to a French semi-official announcement issued in Paris today, one German battalion alone left 300 dead on the battlefield. Many prisoners yesterday were made along the whole front, in some instances entire units being captured.

In the district of Lens, where a thick fog prevailed, two German de-nents took the opportunity to surrender voluntarily. One of them facilities took the opportunity to suffering voluntarily. One of them included an officer, three non-commissioned officers and fifty men. The Germans were weary of the hardships and fatigue imposed upon them and they were confident that they would be well treated by the French.

The latest list of casualties includes in the roll of wounded: Lord Ardee, acting colonel of the Irish Guards, eldest son of Lord Meath, seriously injured and now in a hospital at Boulogne; Lord Francis Scott, son of the Duke of Buccleuch.

Viscount Henry William Crichton, eldest son of the Earl of Erne, and major of the Royal Horse Guards, and Hugh Grosvenor, brother of the Duke of Westminster, have been captured by the kaiser's forces. The Hon. Chas. Douglas-Pennant is wounded and a prisoner.

greatness of empire is everything. It is the least and last of things to be considered in an imperial problem. Germany has only thought of herself and her own future, her own ideals and culture, her own safety and compeled the same sort of considerations of the surface, has some who look on the surface, has some who look on the surface, has professed the same sort of consideration for others that Germany has declaring that her object was to benefit the world, while she chiefly looked after herself. But essentially Britain has done more than this. She has enabled every man who wished to have at all the subject received to take the freedom and liberty Britons themselves possessed. She did not compel them to speak English even, as Germans compel their conquered tributaries to speak German.

All the subject races realise this and which Germany taunts them is merely a nominal one, while German subjection, when it is imposed, is anything but nominal. Even the Turks appreciate this fact, but they cannot help themselves now. Turkey has coquetted once too often, and now finds a suitor, who it is imposed, is anything the port, upon which Germany had lavished a wealth of care and money, the mesteves now. Turkey has coquetted once too often, and now finds a suitor, who its son the engagement being kept. Last week it was clear enough but nominal. Even the Turks appreciate this fact, but they cannot help that the old traditions of Turkey were being persisted in, and Europe was told that it was not really Turkey that but the wicked German officers. This scribe, nor the photographs to illustrate, nor the moving picture machines to bring before the eyes of civilization, go on as for weeks past on the plains of Belgium. There are no great battles, no brilliant strategy, no wonderful marches, nothing of the magic and glamor and romance of war as we used to read it in faction. as we used to read it in fiction. Mil-lions of men are hurled against each other in a gigantic slugging match, and the side which can keep its millions intact and supplied with ammunition will win. The kaiser is on the

BECAUSE: The larger flues in the "Sovereign" provide a more open draft, and bring the fire into contact with a greater area of the metal walls, which contain the water carrying heat to the Radiators. The wide flues in the "Sovereign" will draw a maximum amount of heat from a hard coal fire, or, when the dampers are opened, soft coal or wood, or any burnable waste material may be used to advantage in the milder season of the year when a heavy hard coalfire is not necessary.

IN AID OF THE UNEMPLOYED. The patriotic concert given under the auspices of the Withrow Mothers' Club on Friday evening in Broadview LO.O.F. Hall was an unqualified success, every number on the program being most enthusiastically encored by the large audience.

Mr. Will J. White and E. Jules Brazil created a furore in their combined numbers and Mr. Brazil's "Humor at the Piano" was most artistic, while Mr. White's own interpretation of "Tipperary" caused the audience to take up the refrain in a most inspiring manner. The Riverdale Quartet, consisting of Miss Hazel Hall, Mrs. Chattoe-Berry, Mr. A. Van der Voort and Mr. Charles Mitchell delighted the audience with their harmonious rendition of "The Soldier's Farewell" and "The Minstrel Boy," having to re-

Mrs. Chattoe-Berry's rich contralto voice was heard to perfection in "My Native Land," as also in the old favorite, "Annie Laurie," by special request. Other assisting artists were: Miss Olive Markle, Mrs. D., H. Bissell, little Miss Mavis Morton, Master Rob. little Miss Mavis Morton, Master Rob-ert Percival Walker, and Mr. H, Harwood-Jones, accompanist. Mr. R. M. COUNCIL'S WORK The following is an excerpt from an address given before the Commission on Conservation by Mrs. H. P. Plumptre, on behalf of the National Council of Women in relation to Conservation:
We have a large number of standing committees. For instance, we have a standing committee on public health, one of the most active and the oldest of all our committees. It is obvious that public health is a matter of national concern. It is also obvious that at concerns first of all and chiefly the women of the country, because it is women of the country, because it is on them that the stress of caring for the sick generally falls, and because it is they who find in their own homes the disabilities that are brought on them by such things as Dr. Hodgetts has just been speaking of to you. ### HOME GUARD IN MONTREAL

Fears of Invasion and Uprising of Alien Residents Causes Latest Move.

Special to The Sunday World.

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—Mr. Silas H. Carpenter, formerly chief of the Montreal detective department, is ready to begin the task of enrolling the thousands of aliens who are in the city now and who are Mording one of the biggest problems that Montreal has had to deal with in many years. It is estimated that there are 5000 men here who have no work and who are of German or Austrian hirth. The entry of Turkey into the war has little effect on Montreal, for all the Turks in the city are of no importance from a military standpoint.

What the foreigners might do in the present struggle is suggested by the attacks which have been made on the guards at Coteau Landing this week. On two different nights shots have been fired at them from out of the woods along the track. One night ar attempt to wreck trains was discovered just in time. The bolts had been removed and the spikes drawn from the ties.

Most people are optimistic and think there will be no trouble, but the presence of such a large army of unemployed, and many of them belonging to the hostile nations, and only prevented from returning to Europe to fight against the British by the supremacy of the British navy, makes many entertain fears for the winter.

It is estimated that there are now 5000 vacant dwellings in this city. Rents, which have been soaring steadily for the last few years, are coming down, and landlords will get a bad blow when rent day comes again.

ROUMANIA MAY INTERVENE SOON

Her Army of 400,000, Well Equipped, Would Decide Issue.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The Sofia, Bulgaria, correspondent of The Times, in an interesting survey of the position of the Balkan countries in the European war, thinks there is now a prospect of the resumption of the movement in Roumania in favor of intervention and he points out that the well-equipped Roumanian arm, of 400,000 men, on Austro-Hungarian territory, would probably decide the issue of the campaign in Galicia and Poland. In regard to Bulgaria, he says that should she receive a mandate for the occupation of Macedonia, similar to that apparently accorded Greece for the occupation of Epirus, he understands that no difficulty would exist in mobilizing the Bulgarian army and placing it at the disposal of the entente powers. Some 200,000 men would thereby be available to act against Turkey, while should Servia refrain from action against Bulgaria another 100,000 Bulgarian troops would aid Servia against Austria.

This is why in the death list you do not find a mention of fatal catarrh; the death is caused not directly by the catarrh itself, but by a disease which was caused by catarrh. Medical books and cyclopedias will tell you even more serious news than we tell you here; probably after reading them you will have a full realization of what it is to have catarrh—a common disease, it is true, but with a common result—misery for years if not death.

I have suffered with catarrh since I was 4 years old, but it has annoyed me more in the last two years.

I tried everything I read or heard of, but they did me no good and I saw your advertisement in a paper and I wrote to you and received a sample package. I was impressed so favorably with the sample that I immediately sent for the full treatment.

I suffered much with the dropping back into my throat, and after I had taken the medicine for three or four weeks this nasty sensation entirely ceased and I have never had any return of it. I am now fully cured of my catarrh and am very grateful to you and your medicine.

I will be very glad to tell any one who I think needs it, and if you wish to use my name you may do so, as I am so grateful that I wish everybody who needs it would use it, and I am sure that it will cure them.—Miss Mattie Drullinger, Birdsells street, South Bend, Ind.

Half the unhappiness in the world comes from little inflammations. Cure them early.

All great things are conceived in "Sweat." Gauss worked hard and produced a cure that will live after him.

The reasons of the strongest always yield to the strongest reasons—common sense. Gauss' Treatment prevails for the same reason.

If the catarrh victim would stick to the treatment as faithfully as the catarrh sticks to him, that disease would probably be as infrequent as the now conquered diphtheria.

There are some people who, instead of making the best uses of the chances they have for a cure, are always telling of what they might do under happier circumstances. Send the coupon.

And so on down the list. Do you find a mention of catarrh? No. Because catarrh as a rule does not directly cause many deaths. But catarrh is indirectly the cause of many deaths. "Died of pneumonia" should better be "Died of pneumonia, caused by catarrh." The "caused by catarrh" is left off-what's the use? He's dead, anyway. And so catarrh is looked upon as a disease of slight consequence by those who don't know. Over every catarrh sufferer, no matter whether he has been suffering a month or five years, there hangs a dark shadow which is pointing with its dark, bony finger to the silent way. Will you follow it or fight it?

"He was an importer," answered Cobson. "His house had a big business in the States, with headuarters in New York, and depots at such places as Buffalo, Cleveland and Detroit. So he was a sort of counsel for the external relations of those who probably looked to the ex-consul as a sort of general commanding the German forces in Ontario. He was also a sort of general of communication and transportation for the indispensable supports that had to be brought from across the border at the critical moment. He had prepared the way for the arrival of men by the secret importation of the arms and the machine guns, one of which nodded good morning to me up here on Yonge street. It was never known exactly how many Germans there were in Toronto at the time of the Trick-I mean men living in the November," Cobson went on. "Before leaving home I didn't get an answer city and in places round about. The same Canadians cursed themselves afterwards—but it was not to think of all possible ways of being fooled and then be with the series of the same old trouble of the difference between foresight and hind sight. H. Stuart Watts, sales manager of the United Cigar Stores, Limited, has received a letter from a friend in St. Claude, enclosing a copy of a letter written by a French sergeant from Mulhouse (Muhlhausen) which reads as follows:

"When we asked for something to eat or drink, the people (German civilians) have got to let us have it, civilians) have got to let us have it, or else we show them the bayonet.

"Today I am writing from Mulhouse, a big town of 100,000 inhabitants, and very pretty, where we entered yesterday, but not without some trouble, as the town was occupied by Germans. There was a battle which lasted five hours. We do not know the losses as yet, but in any case we have seen heaps of dead, either French or Germans, especially Germans. You ought to see what our artillery gives them; they call it the 'devil's artillery. Fighting leaves us indifferent now; we go to the battle just as if to have a drink. # A Genuine Rupture Cure Sent on Trial To Prove It

Don't Wear a Truss Any Longer

After Thirty Years' Experience I Have Produced An Appliance for Men, Women and Children That Actually Cures Rupture.

If you have tried most everything else. If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fall is where I have my greatest success. Send attached coupon today and I will send you free my illustrated book on Rupture and its cure, showing my Appliance and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies.

I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge and once having seen my illustrated book and read it you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail today. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not.

Pennsylvania Man Thankful

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich. Dear Sir:—

Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your Appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could precure it. Dear Sir:-It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it.

My rupture is now all healed up and nothing ever did it but your Appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself I will say a good word for your Appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am,

Yours very sincerely,

JAMES A. BRITTON,

NOT UNDEVELOPT MAN BUT DIVERSE CONDUCTED BY MISS M.L.HART

T THE invitation of Mrs. George Dickson, president of the Women's Musical Club, ing was held at St. Margaret's College on Saturday afternon, Oct. 31.

The convener of the different committees gave a forecast of the season's plan of work, which promises many interesting programs. Mrs. A. H. C. Proctor announced that membership of the Choral Club is filling up splendidly and that much interesting music is already selected. The Choral Club has been fortunate in securing Mr. Peter Kennedy, director of the Canadian Academy of Music as its conductor. Another important branch of club work is being developed thru the ensemble committee, Miss M. A. E. Clarke, convenor; Miss Grace Smith has been appointed as director. The membership of this department is already most promising. Many promising violinists, 'cellists and planists joining as members, added to the other interesting division of the work is the very important one of shilanthropy. Very particularly do the members of the musical club realize their responsibility in bringing into the lives of the poor of our city the joys of music, thru concerts and study of the art. Mrs. Tower Ferguson, convenor of the philan-thropic committee, laid before the thropic committee, laid before the meeting the plan outlined for some of the efforts of this committee. A rich field for one phase of the work being that of social settlement, who are eager for assistance at weekly and monthly concerts where music is hungered for and seldom heard. The committee hopes for a choral dub and aspires for an orchestra in time. Miss Madeline Carter reported that the vocal committee had been most successful in increasing its membership and many of the programs are already completed. Miss Mary Moriey reported that the piano committee had its programs well in hand with a marked increase in the membership.

The Angio-French Club met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Miss Lucas, 121 Dunn avenue.

The Toronto Social Study Club held its meeting Wednesday at the residence of Mrs. Sydney E. Bailard, 44 Parkway avenue.

The Belgian Relief Fund is now over $1900. The committee have given their patronage to a three-act play entitled, "A Belgian Nurse." to be staged by Mr. Hollingworth and Mr. Buschlen in Massey Hall on

POPULAR PRESIDENT HONORED AND MAJORITY MARKED BY TORONTO COUNCIL of WOMEN

Twenty-one years of magnificent work. This is what the Toronto Local Council of Women have now to their credit, and this is what they commemorated on Thursday even-ing when they met in large numbers at the Temple Building in a resume of past efforts and present achieve-

Seldom is any length of service of longer duration than that already attained by some members of the cil, who at the beginning took themselves the burden of anyf exore I then chaotic and somewhat vague organization, but in some instances these are still in harness, and with the entiusiasm of premier days continuing the good work. To such there is certainly a great measure of praise due which is rightly theirs. Britain never asks of her soldiers a longer service than that which has been given by these faitaful members, and to those who achieve this with honor she gives a pension of recognition. The women workers of the council have no recompense save that which comes from the satisfaction of having part in the big battle of life which is always being wared in defense of the week. being waged in defense of the weak by the strong, and this sentiment may be honestly and honorably indulged in by no small number of the women of the council. It was the intention to celebrate the attaining of the council's majority by a double celebration in which the national as well as the local organizations, would have had part. This, however, like many other plans of the year, was frustrated by the war cloud which fell so unexpectedly a few months ago. The gatherly a few months ago. The gatherings and beautiful functions which were to have been graced by the women from all over Canada and by the Countess of Aberdeen, the founder of the Canadian Council, were all made impossible by the conditions and sentiments in which the war has involved the entire civilized world, yet the Toronto body felt that the occasion was too much one for rejoicing to be allowed to pass altogether without notice.

It was in this spirit that representatives of the fifty-seven societies tatives of the fifty-seven societies which now are affiliated with the council met in the Temple Building and at a sociable high tea enjoyed a reminiscent hour and the elation of much to be accomplished for good in the days to come. Old friends were missed. Particularly was this the case in reference to Lady Aberdeen, who from the time when returning from the Chicago World's Fair, where she had been inspired by the movement which then was in its earliest stages, among the wo-men of the republic, has always been a welcome force in the memorable moments in the life of the council. During her stay in Canada as the wife of the council. as the wife of the governor-general, she was in personal touch with everyone of its activities. Later she returned to Canada on three different occasions when she associated herself, as of old, and so much loved has she always been by the mem-bers everywhere that her enforced absence on this occasion was real personal cause for regret. Much of this was doubtless due to the fact that it ever had the good fortune to select women to the presidency who had the tact and poise as well as the intellectual ca-pacity and efficiency, to hold the members together while at the same time they were planning and fram-ing plans for the carrying out of Recognition was given this fact when the present national president, Mrs. Torrington, a former president of the Toronto council, was chosen to her office as head of the organiza-tion in Canada, and at the internation in Canada, and at the interna-tional gatherings when women from many parts of the world convened, places of honor and responsibility have never been denied to the women of Toronto.

Among the things for which the local council is known and has reason to felicitate itself, is its good son to felicitate itself, is its good fortune in its present popular and capable president. Seldom are the many graces and talents which Mrs. A. M. Huestis possesses in a generous degree, found in one personality. Sweet and graciously womanly, she is also a capable executive head and in the carrying out of the work of the council she never spares herself. The popularity and regard wwhich are hers from every individual in the council were voiced in the presentation which was made to her at the gathering on Thursday evening of a certificate of life.

The address was read by Mrs. L. A. Gurnett, and Mrs. Ruciman made the presentation membership together with a beautiful corsage bousquet and pin. If more were needed

No account of the council would be complete without mention of the ac-tivities of Mrs. Willoughby Cum-mings in its behalf. She might be mings in its behalf. She might be called its charter member, and in addition to representing Canada on many occasions in other lands, has for a number of years been the Dominion secretary, an office which involves no small amount of work and exceptional knowledge of the constitution and workings of the organization.

The function on Thursday evening The function on Thursday evening was honored by the presence of the past presidents, Mrs. George Dickson, Mrs. George Kerr, Miss Fitzgibbon, Miss Carty and Mrs. Torrington. Mrs. Grant Macdonald, honorary president and first president of the council was also present. Short speeches were made by these past workers, and Mrs. Huestis and Mrs. L. A. except that which may open to them taru the forethought of the stronger portion of the community. When men and women everywhere are seemingly doing their utmost to lighten the burdens of the time and Another thing which surely needs to be readjusted is the element of to alleviate the personal distress found on every hand, it almost seems ungracious to hint that much time is ing wasted, that circumlocution is too much in evidence, and that many things are left undone which are still necessary to even a bare existence for many who live in our city, and whom we are reminded are surely and truly our brethren. As an example one might ask what are the bureaus doing in the way of getting employment for the many who apply. We know of coarse that some few receive the thing which they ask, but the large majority, how do they fare? At a meeting lately, the statement was made that over twenty thousand nen in all had applied at the lately opened city bureau of employment. There was no mention made of the number who received a favorable response. What is the use of men and women registering if there is nothing to be gained by so doing? for it raises hopes, which after all but lead to disappointment.

Then, too, it is now generally acknowledged that there are hundreds, which probably mount into the thousands, of human beings, men and women, who are simply un-employable, even if work were at hand for them to do. these are for the most part individuals who were never skilful, dependents more or less all their lives, and in some instances their late support in the shape of husband, brother or other relative has been removed directly or indirectly thru war conditions. For such there seems to be only one solution. This is to open houses thru-out the city and keep and support them until such times as things right themselves in a rearrange-ment of the civic situation. There are many houses now vacant which might be obtained at a moderate rent. To protect those to whom the coming winter brings shadows of homelessness and destitution, these houses should be opened, heated and provided with a kitchen, larder and supervision, so as to ensure exis-tence to the number, every day be-coming larger, who have no resource

Burke, rector of Newman The subject treated was "Plon in Civilization," and the spe The subject treated was "Pioneers in Civilization," and the speaker showed that the Catholic Church had thruout the ages of Christianity been in the van in this respect. Men and women had given their, all even life itself, for the general good and paradoxical as it may appear the best interests of society are served by the sacrifice of the strong in defence of the weak. In this relation of the strong to the weak, he said, the church had ever taught the equality of man before God and the law. To this was due the new respect of man for man, which did not exist in pagan times, the care given the child and the emancipation of woman. This influence of the church on society had been the most potent power in Christian civilization. At the regular meeting of the Canadian Business Women's Club, held in the Faculty of Education Building, Mr. John A Tory gave an address on insurance pointing out that it had many inducements which would make it a good line of work in which women might engage. The speaker also told the audience something of women might engage. The speaker also told the audience something of the work of the lately opened city bureau of employment and asked the assistance of the members in the social work of the times.

Another thing which surely needs to be readjusted is the element of suspicion which permeates so much of the work and endeavor of even the best intentioned amongst us. This suspicion shows itself in the often repeated direction and warning to workers to see that those whom they assist are "deserving." In this connection this word has a very ugly sound. Why not take it for granted that in this period or distress everyone who applies or whose case becomes known, is deserving? This would not always be true, imposters would creep in, some few would gain, and glory in doing so even the honesty was no element in the contract. But the majority may with safety be accepted as in nowise anxious to place themselves in the position of dependents, not to say, mendicants, unless forced by circumstances to do so.

The middleman and women, except well known volunteers and long-tried workers, are hardly needed in the dispensing of help to those who need it. Even with the best intentions in the world "fools sometimes venture in where engels fear to tread," and with one class in particular there should be no investigation thru the channel of any medium. The class referred to are the wives, mothers or others left in a measure dependent awing to the fact that their legal supporters have gone on the glarious mission of service to their country. Any fund that comes from patriotic sources should be distributed without other credential from the beneficiary, than that she is the one rightfully untilled to receive the fust recognition of the bravery of the husband or son whose absence deprives her of support. There is no room for investigation in such case any more than there would be to inquire into the use a man or woman makes of his or her than the number of these who fail to keep up the standard in the ordinary affairs of life.

Sanitarium Baths at Home.

"Now at home the ringing of the telephone, the gossip of callers, and the late hours tire you more than you realize. For a month take a room a little way out of town in a home with an upstairs porch. You can sleep out of doors there, take plenty of blankets and you won't be cold, and remember that the rest cure calls for a 5 o'clock bed hour every night.

"Each morning get up at 6 and take seme good breathing and stretching exercises, followed by one of the baths given in the most expensive sanitariums. These baths are easy to prepare at home, and act as a fine tonic for the day's work. These three Kneipp baths are given at the German sanitariums. "For the first, boil one pound of fresh pine needles and pine cones (broken into small pieces) for a half-hour, strain, and add the decoctions to hot bath water. This stimulates the skin, and has a very refreshing after effect.

"The next bath is prepared in the same way by boiling a bag filled with the flowering tops of hay or oat straw. The third is more elaborate, but extremely beneficial. Make a mixture of the following:

"After supper every night take a prisk walk of an hour and a half or two hours before you go to bed. Saturdays and Stundays take longer walks on country roads. Of course, you must not wear tight shoes, corset bones or even tight gloves, for they make the heart action irregular and counteract all the good of the exercise.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: A man who is in love with me comes to our house. Is it correct for him to stay until 11.30 at night and talk love to me? I am 17, and talk love to me? I am 17, and my parents are living, but don't seem to have any objection to this. He is a very nice man, but is about 40 years old. I do not love him, but he has means.—D. I. M.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: When one of my girl friends and I go out together she is always having such a good time that I feel there must be something wrong with me. She is a firt and tries to get the attention of all the men she can and is goodtime. to get the attention of all the men she can and is sometimes very loud. Do you think it is better to get friends that way or have just a few real ones? I am naturally reserved and will not push myself in, but how am I to get more attention from boys? This may seem awfully silly to you, Annie Laurie, for I see I have expressed myself very poorly.—Betsy.

Now, Betsy, stop fretting about your friend and all the beaux she has. Of course it is better to have a few really good friends than to know a lot of people who don't care a cent for you. Forget yourself and forget her.

When you go out take an interest—a genuine interest—in the people Can't you find that out and go there, too?

Why, there are a thousand ways. Put on your thinking cap, Billy, and you'll think one of them out.

If you don't, why, write to the girl herself. Ask her what man or middle-aged woman she knows that she will tell you of. She'll think up some one, all right, see if she doesn't, and then, Billy, when she does, don't you go and make yourself believe that there's something wrong about her just because she did something a little unconventional simply to oblige you. Good luck to you, Billy, and to the girl you like. Somehow, I feel that it's coming to you.

You needn't say much yourself. All you'll have to do is to listen and look intensely interested. He'll do the rest. Men like girls who like them. They want to be admired, fiattered, made much of—but not too openly.

It is very easy to be popular with men. It is not so easy to be truly loved by men who really count.

When you find out how simple the "popular" game is perhaps you will not care so much to play it, and then you can settle down to being really happy.

Much of the poetry as well as the nonsense associated with the beliefs of the efficacy of "staring" has been fostered by superstitions, traditions and the other restricted logic of the thoughtless, though much educated, civilized man. The absurd beliefs of the "influence" of a so-called "evil eye," want of knowledge about hypnotism over snakes and wild beasts by "the steady gaze of the eye"—all such untruths spread broadcast and then accepted as facts by the sheer weight of verbal repetition and the printing press are in part responsible for the errors.

NEWEST DEVICES MAKE COOKING EASY

By Ann Marie Lloyd.

HEN ADDING machines were invented, up-to-dake office managers ordered them. Labor and time-saving devices have always played a large part in promoting business downtown. Housewives will greatly aid the efficiency of their home hitchens the efficiency of their home kitchens uptown by discarding old utensils and supplying new inventions in their place.

Here are a few kitchen devices which make work easier and make longer leisure hours a possibility. There is an egg beater on the mar-ket which makes 600 revolutions a minute, whips an egg in 15 seconds and a cup of cream in two minutes and a half.

An aluminum disk, with rows of buttons embossed on either side, may be allowed to rest flat in the bottom of a kettle or pan, and will prevent the burning of food because the water has boiled out. Several minutes after meats, fruits or vegetables are quite dry they will con-tinue to cook without burning, and the noise of the boiling of juice be-low the disk warns the housekeeper of the danger so that she may add more water before the mixture is

A double aluminum skillet with a dividing partition makes it possible same time on one burner. There is a hinge at the dividing partition, as well, so that the skiller may be closed to brown food or to act as a baking dish. It is fine for doubling an omelet, or for turning French fried potatoes.

A new kind of cream dipper makes it possible to take the cream off the top of a bottle. A nickelled cylinder which is two inches long and one in an inch deep. The device is operated by a nickel handle. As the little cup is gently lowered into the bottle the cream is drawn into the cylinder, after which the cylinder is dropped into place, emptied.

So OFTEN a cook scalds her hands in trying to refill an empty tea kettle which has recently been on the fire. The hot steam rises from the open lid at the top. In order to prevent this a new tea kettle has been invented with a small lid just in front of the larger lid. A knob turns its cover to one side and the faucet may be inserted in it to fill the kettle with water.

A convenient wire strainer has an adjustable nut by which it may be attached to the back of any kitchen chair. The straining bag is attached to a wire ring and may be removed very easily. The device holds its place steadily, and if a pan is placed beneath, fruits or starch may be strained thru it. be strained thru it.

A new coffee mill is made of glass so that the cook can ascertain how much coffee remains to be ground. The mill is airtight and holds the aroma of the coffee.

A small wire rack which covers the baking pan is a convenience for cooking bacon, as it allows the grease to drip into the pan below as

A new double boiler is made so that the food is entirely surrounded by steam. It will cook evenly and does not crust at the top of the dish. There are holes in the rim of the food pan thru which steam enters the food compartment from the outer pan holding the boiling water. This double boiler is especially good for vegetables, as it preserves their flavor.

The psychologist might find it illuminating, and the rest of us would surely find it interesting, to know in what strange ways the absorbing ambition of successful musicians was first groused. "LORDS OF THE NORTH," by A. C. Laut, is a historical novel of the feud existing between the North-West and Hudson's Bay Fur Trading Companies at the beginning of the 19th century, and of the appalling outbursts resulting from that feud.

The story concerns the mysterious disappearance—pointing to kidnapping by Indians—of the wife and child of a prominent Quebec citizen. The frantic, and at times despairing search for Mariam and her child brings the reader across the Canada of those days by the "voyageur's" route, into the heart of the fur traders' country, where the life and varied experiences of the fur trader, the barbarous atrocities practiced by the Indians, and relieving all, the noble and self-sacrificing work of the missionaries, are faithfully and vividly described.

Perhaps nowhere could one set a better nicture of Condenses.

Perhaps nowhere could one get a better picture of Canada's fur trading days at the most flourishing period in the fur trading industry. The story opens in 1815—just long enough after Lord Selkirk had purchased controling interest in the Hudson's Bay Company to show unmistakable fruits of Canada's further of his policy. It will provide the property of his policy. Maple Leaf,

The history of the feud between the two companies is traced to the ultimate amalgamation of the North-West with the Hudson's Bay Company, which occurred in 1821.

For when he saw John's fearful plight,
He called, "Oh! horse, I say! I've got an OLD, OLD joke to tell, Come listen now I pray."

The horse stopped short right in mid-air;

You really can't tell how.

Six Years Ago. How he once had a fight with the kalser in the old English style and beat him is related by Mr. Alfred R. Price, hotel proprietor, Ilfracombe, North Devon. The fight took place in August, 1878. The kaiser, then nineteen, was on holiday with his tutor and others at Hfracombe. Mr. Price was then fifteen. "I was well paid to keep it out of the papers," said Mr. Price. The prince had had his morning bathe in the sea, and while waiting for the return of his tutor and the others, who had gone for a stroll along the shore, he began to amuse himself by throwing stones at the bathing machines. These belonged to young Price's father, and the boy told the prince to stop damaging his father's property.

"Do you know who I am?" demanded the prince.

I don't care who you are," replied young Price.
The prince promptly knocked the boy down with a blow on the nose, aimed with his left. The Devonshire lad got up and fought furiously for twenty minutes until the German party arrived and separated them. Both were marked, but the prince

TAFFETA DANCE FROCKS

APPETA will hold its own for popularity in dance frocks, and no debutante will, conone or more of these charming creations. They usually have circular skirts, tight-fitting over waist and hips with godet flares around the feet.

No matter what the skirt, however, the bodice is wrapped or draped with chiffon with a glint of gold or silver fabric showing thru or used as decoration. Bechoff-David brought out some wonderful metallie fabrics before the war interrupted fashion plans, and while these last they cannot fail to be in evidence on nearly every gown for the debutants or for her older sisters and cousins and aunts, to say nothing of her mother, who will be queenly in black velvet and golden tissue until the velvet supply, too, is exhausted.

A touch, too, which cannot but add to the simple beauty a debutante gown should display is the single corsage flower, which has again an important place in the demain of home furnishing and drawing-room decoration. It is so important that upholisterers have to employ lace-makers and are obliged to make lace purchases on a considerable scale. Among other things planos and windows are draped with lace leaving room for legitimate upholistery to come afterwards. All styles are available. The "Renaissance" combines with lace of quite modern origin. And, combining with all, and second to none in fashion or effect, is inced crochet. The present taste for crochet denotes a remarkable revival in this kind of thing. Another revival beside it, and making common cause with home vival in this kind of thing. Another revival beside it, and making common cause with house and especially drawing room decoration, is the equally old-fashioned netting. For long years past this species of handwork had been left almost exclusively to fishermen and their wives. It served for fishing nets and that was about all. But now it is coming back as fast as it can to the place it occupied, let us say, a hundred years ago, in the repertoire of fancy work for women. Then was the time when dainty slipper-cased feet were put forward and used in the service of the kind of fancy work known as netting. Now machinery does a great deal of the work which human fingers, aided by the foot, used to do. But whether wrought by fingers or machinery, it remains a fact that old fashioned settings.

Our nerves are like an intricate network of telegraph wires. They are controlled and nourished by a portion of the brain known as the nerve centres. The condition of the nerve centres depends upon the condition of the bodily health. When the bodily health is lowered the nerves suffer in sympathy. Then it is that we are tormented with "nerves," headaches, neuralgia, nervous debility. In such cases there is nothing to equal 'Wincarnis,' the 'Wine of Life.' Wincarnis' is a powerful nerve food which acts directly upon the nerve centres

The committee agreed unanimously, and no greater tribute could have been paid to Miss H— than that thick in her ability to do it "right," and yet only two years before she was unknown to any of these woman for whom she now stands as the highest and best type of the modern "visiting secretary."

For some years the position of social secretary has been one eagerly sought after by society girls, forced to earn their living; but such a position requires a wide knowledge of social affairs and details appertaining to society folk and is, therefore, a position that the average girl cannot fill successfully. The work of a visiting secretary is, however, well within the understanding of the girl or woman of an ordinary position in life and a fair education, and the girl already spoken of in this article has built up a career in this way which brings her in on an average of $50.00 a week.

During the past summer she was

During the past summer she was in Muskoka for the entire season following two of her employers by

"It really all began with a visit to my family physician and his decision that I was not strong enough to take a position offered me in a busy offica," she says. "I was faced with the cituation that most girls face newadays; that of realizing that the family income had decreased rather than increased since my school days and that real want was ahead of us unless I could do something to help unless I could do something to help.
I had been ill for quite a while when the offer of a position came to me and when mother refused to allow me to accept work until I was stronger I became desperate and sought the doctor, hoping to win his approbation and so overrule my mother's objections.

"He said frankly, however, that while I was well on the road to health, I was like all stay-at-home high strung and nervous and that it was not practical for me to endeavor to take up office work or a position in a shop.
"'I'll tell you what I'll do,' he added, "I'll pay you $5.00 a month to bills for me and extra for letters, and I'll give you an introduction to some other doctors who may like to employ you the same.

"It didn't sound very alluring to me with the vision of a regular salary still in my mind, but it was mething and I accepted. The doctors to whom I had letters were not the big strgeons and physicians win have regular secretaries but cusy men with nospital practice and things that kept them from looking after their letters and bilis.

GOT quite a little clientele of these men but it didn't fill my time so I decided to try some club women. The first two I called were far from cordial but the third one accepted my offer with diacrity and suggested that I come one hour a day to look after her fecters, and to arrange her appoint-ments for the day by telephone or note. After the first week that one hour a day became two hours a day and she paid me $6.00 a week. A little later on thru her I got two

I hesitated for a long time about it, but mother felt sure I would enjoy the work, and when I found that the actress and when I found that the actress was willing to pay $10 a week just to have that work taken off her hands, I was delighted. It was thru her that later on I found myself being employed by the stars playing limited enagements at the theatres, who required letters written and social engagements looked after, and now I doubt if there is a busing the start of the start o and now I doubt if there is a busier, happier or more prosperous worker

"I have thru the press of my work with women, given up the making out of bills and files for the physicians having turned the work over to a friend who delights in it, but I still think that is the best way for a girl to begin her career as a visit-ing secretary. It means small pay, of course, but it's steaty and the doctors are often able to get clients for you. It may be a patient with a breiten arm who wants a temporary secretary, or some society woman who is on the verge of a nervous breakdown and needs some one to shoulder the social burden for a while; it may be anyone like that and you would not be likely to get in touch with them other than thru

YOU MUST MAKE YOUR FEET BEHAVE NOW THAT SHORT SKIRTS are the VOGUE

M ARGARET Romaine, the grand opera prima donna who made her debut on the musical comedy stage last season in the name part of "The Midnight Girl," says that the newest responsibility placed upon the girl who follows the dictates of Dame Fashion is the short skirt. It means that girls must learn how to walk and how to place their feet without attracting undue attention, particularly if nature endowed them with large "understandings."

Years ago it was almost impos-

"understandings."

Years ago it was almost impossible to tell whether girls had large or small feet, but that was all done away with when the daiphanous gown, the directoire and the hobble skirt came into style last year. Now the least observing man can no longer remain unaware as to whether women have ankles, and the majority can tell just about what size shoe Miss So and So wears.

Now that the dance craze has sort of worn off, the latest fad is walking lessons, which consist of how to walk and how to place one's feet when in repose. And now that fashion declares that ankles and feet must be shown it's up to the girls to make these same ankles behave. It is absolutely necessary to cultivate habits of repose in their feet and ankles that will cause an admiring public to be glad of the change of styles. At the present time, however, they are not culti-vating these habits in Canada. At least not all of them. In Paris there is no need for such lessons. The is no need for such lessons. The Parisians always take care that they are most artistic from every standpoint, and one never sees a woman sit in an undignified or inartistic position. The Parisian studies pose and carriage just as ardently as Canadians study the new dances. Why, some of the positions girls get into in cars are really atrocious. Photographs bear me out in this statement, and photographs, as a rule, tell the truth.

There are a number of "DONT'S" for the girl to remember if she hopes to make her feet and ankles things of grace and beauty. First of all, she should not cross the legs and swing one foot in the air as if she owned the universe. It's ungraceful and exposes a large amount of stocking, and, worst of all, it is likely to cause appendicitis, according to a well informed physician.

Another important "DON'T" to remember is this: Be sure that you don't rest your heels on the ground and tilt the soles of the shoes up at a rakish angle. It may be comfortable, but it is unsightly and should be avoided. It also makes the feet look twice as large as they left. In that way she can rise with-out any difficulty and with ease. If feet look twice as large as they

Some, we might say, a majority of girls have an uncontrollable desire to cross their ankles. This is a very awkward position and has a ten-dency to bow the legs; that ought to be enough to break anyone of such a habit.

A very common sight is the girl with her feet twirled around the legs of a chair. If you stop to gaze around a dining-room containing ten girls, you can wager that eight out of that ten have their feet twirled in an unsightly position. Granting that it is comfortable it is hideous and tends to enlarge the girth of the THOUGHT then that my days were full, but I still had a little time; and this was soon taken up by actresses. It began when one of the clubwomen I worked for suggested that I call on the star of a stock company who wanted some one to answer the letters she received and to write notes of thanks for flowers, etc., getting the personal THE visiting secretary must be strict about hours, never keeping a client waiting, and unless specially requested it is wisest, on the other hand, not to get into the

the other hand, not to get into the habit of overstaying your time, as this may lead to the loss of some other client.

"Very often the secretary is called upon to represent her employer at some meeting or to interview strangers calling at the house for strangers calling at the house for various reasons, and so she must be particular about her appearance, always trimly, the simply, gowned. She must be careful, too, to preserve her alcofness from domestic diffi-culties and must be ready to carry out any work, which her employer plans out for her.

"As to prices, they, of course, vary according to the work and the time, but the visiting secretary will find it more profitable and more businesslike to charge by the hour, and as a general thing one dollar will be found a fair price.

"Much of the work that usually falls to the lot of only a social secre-tary now comes to me, as a result of my own course in such work with the daily papers as instructors. I was anxious to get more of the social work to do and so I read the society columns carefully each day, jotting down the hard names and odd names. I arranged and kept a little file of clippings about weddings, divorces and deaths that I might understand the changing re-lationships of the people concerned, and I also kept on file the accounts of big entertainments, novel affairs of all kinds and articles on menus and flower decorations.

"These I studied at home in the evenings, learning them as I pasted them in the big scrap books that served as a file, and so when one of my clients, who was ill, turned all the plans for a big dinner-dance over to me, I went ahead confident that I could make it a success. I suppose I made mistakes, but they must have been glossed over, for I didn't hear about it, and when I got my check that week there was an extra $25 added to it for my work. Since then I have done considerable work of this kind and it's a pleasant as well as a profitable branch that can grow out of the work of a visiting secretary.

"I found only one great difficulty during the early months of my work and that was that writing so much inclined me to be slovenly in it; that is to say, I formed letters too hastily for them to be clear, and for weeks and weeks it was a continual struggle between my haste and my determination, but the latter won, and now I can write fast and legibly both, and I think that most girls who take up this work will find they have this battle to face, especially in the endless mono of addressing invitations and work of that sort. They will also by the way, find that it takes time to learn to typewrite so cleanly that no corrections are required. "It is wise to provide yourself with a tiny dictionary, a copy of the blue book and a social register when you start your career, for misspelled names are the worst mistakes a visiting secretary can make, and she will find many times when her hosvague directions to write to 'Mrs. So and So, of Locust street,' will have to be augumented by a peep into the blue book or perhaps the 'phone book, for the full name and address of the lady in question. . . .

As to building up your trade, as I said before, it's best to do it thru the influence of your friends of physician, but if you are placed in a position where you can-not appeal in this fashion, look up the presidents of the local clubs, the busiest matrons who entertain, the leading theatrical stars, stock or otherwise, who may be in the city, and then buy some good plain white paper and write the best letter you paper and write the must be clear, can to each one. It must be clear, concise well written and simply worded, telling of the work you want, what you can do and what you will charge.

"You may say in the letter that you will call at a certain time and would appreciate it if they would see you, or, if not convenient, would they make an appointment for you to call on another day? That letter is not only your plea but your recommendation and if it's a good one is will get you clients; or, at least, i: will get you clients; or, at least, one or two to start with, and once having started you will find your clients will come of themselves to ask help in addressing wedding invi-tations, writing notes of thanks, an-swering letters of congratulation or for the regular daily round of bills and social notes.

"You will also, by the way, find that the suffrage leaders often re-quire help of this sort, and if you are earnest in your endeavors to carry out your duties you have a wide field with few rivals, because the visiting secretary is few and far between despite her usefulness."

What this clever girl does not mention is that she has also added considerably to her work by getting up the advertising for all the big charity events of the winter and al-so wrote the publicity for these entertainments earning quite a com-fortable sum, and not, as she says, because she had a talent for literature, but because she had learned to write good English, that would read smoothly.

So that's still another field that hte secretary's work leads up to and as everyone knows, the woman secretary today has a big future ahead of her that may lead up the ladder from clubs to the heights of

"Ten million mothers weepi like Rachel, for their children! What an ocean of tears! And each whether it be shed in Warsaw or Munich, Cracow or Cologne, Bruges or Amiens, Arras or Ely, London or Louvain. The grief of motherhood is a thing apart. It is outside the causes of war, the quarrels of races, the pride of empires. It is an older and more durable passion than any of the motives which send brave men into battle. States rise and fall, empires come and go, but thru all the vicissitudes of governing machinery the nation of mothers remains un-destroyed and indestructible. And when all the human links between nations are broken this link holds fast-between the mothers of the young soldiers who are slaying each other there is the link of a common

The Link That Holds. "It is well for the world that this last link holds when all the other links have snapped in the storm of war. The link of brotherhood is the first to go, and men with reluctant violence teach themselves to hate fellow-creatures whom they have never seen. This hate is an artificial passion, and it is not easy to keep it fed with the food upon which it lives. One of the mysteries of war is the undoubted fact that soldiers are not nearly as good haters as civilians. The truth is that you cannot kill a man without realizing that he is your brother. War melts them all. And our poor humanity has only the link of motherhood to save it from the fury of the jungle and the ferocity of the primeval slime. The War God may take everything else away, but this he cannot take. "Thru the smoke of burning cities we can decry the sweet, sad

Paul Poiret, in the Uniform He Wears as a Member of the 220th Territorials.

How Widespread Feminine Anxiety for the King of Fashion, Now

PAUL POIRET, the Master of Salons, as he is distinguished in his beloved Paris, and Commander-in-Chief of Fashion, as he is known to the world at large, has thrown aside the silken subtleties of smart mode creation and taken up the rifle and the pick in the defence of his country. He is no soldier by meres courtesy-holding a clerical job, for instance, at the safe distance of official headquarters-but a grimy, rank and file infantryman, whose hands, shaped to the deft designing of things of beauty to drape the form of woman, are now devoted to digging trenches, throwing in fortifications, when they are not pulling a trigger on the firing line. In the meanwhile his costly establishment, the paradise of fashion for millionaire maid and matron, is given over to the making of military wear. The entire celebrated Martine Salon is possessed by the grim spirit of War. "The great establishment of Poiret," writes a recent visitor, "except for the gallant work it is doing for the soldiers, might as well be closed. The purple and pink stripes, the flaunt. ing Bakst motifs, the rose-hued carpets, the green walls, the mural decorations of riotous colors and forms, the dull folds of curtains, which cut off fitting spaces, are not obscured from your leisurely study by the intrusion of any other visitor." Monsieur Poiret is a member of the 220th territorials, and his sacrifice to his country is as complete as can be, when measured by the immensely profitable business he has put aside. He says that France is too seriously occupied with her responsibilities to be thinking of fashions-whether or not they will be influenced by the military motif or like propositions.

While he is with his face toward the enemy, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who were among exultant that the invader has met many obstacles, another force of conquest is at work to despoil him of much of his beautiful dominion -his own personal dominion-only the enemy is exceedingly friendly enemy, which, while it is earnestly bent upon conquest, is nevertheless prone to acknowledge him the "dearest and sweetest" commander of fashion. And so it is that, while Poiret stands eager, rifle in hand, waiting the command to fire or charge, in his Woman, while she is maintaining a strict neutrality so far as the big war is concerned, is up to her pretty ears in campaign plans to invade and conquer much of the territory he has considered his by right of brilliant conquest. She is awfully sorry for Paul Poiret, but one must be dressed.

With all the European fashion centres distraught by wars, New York has dared to claim the leadership. Take not our word for this, but the pronouncement of such women prominent in American social life as Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Vincent Astor and the patronesses of the brilliant fashion fete held in New York last week.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish tells of 12 smart women at Newport during last summer who appeared in the same Paris model. Such standardization amounts to wearing a livery, and she avers if dressmakers can furnish individual designs the women who spend thousands yearly in Paris will be glad to wear

"Heretofore," Mrs. Fish says, "the excuse fressmakers has been that we to buy anything but a French model, and that they had no incentive to create and no opportunity to launch their own designs; that New York gives no stimulus for artistic appreciation and no recognized occasions such as Longchamps and Auteuil-for displaying their models. Well, this can no longer be said, as the women of society, with trained artistic appreciation, are lending their patronage and best energies to offer our dressmakers just such an occasion as those enjoyed by the couturiers odding to an occasional acquaintance back in own from a salmon-shooting trip in British Guiana, or somewhere. We ourselves are just back from banging about with the grouse in Wormwood Scrubbs. One must return sometimes if one happens to have some bally property here to look after-heigho!

Morning

There is a vast difference between a "Lounge" or "Sofa" suit and the thing vulgarly known as a "Business suit."

The "Lounge" suit is worn when one is lying on a chaise-lounge or "London Club Sofa," sipping a silver fizz and looking idly over one's copy of "The Tatler"—It is beastly bad form to fall asleep in it, but an occasional batting of the evelid is permissible.

Mannish suits are being made this season out of sheeps' wool, and are in three pieces-coat, walstcoat, and trousers. This innovation is direct from Picadilly-I saw several there this season (dear old London!).

The walstcoat is a sleeveless garment worn underneath the coat, and the trousers are cunningly arranged with belt loops and suspender buttons. This solves the great problem of the day. They will not slip down and disclose the underwear. For no matter how exquisite one's undergarments are or how beautifully hemstitched or inlaid with marquetterie or Cluny lace, it is not considered good form, or even volatile de riz au cressons to show them except at small or informal affairs.

Afternoon

The trousers are either slit to the knee or not. Colored monograms on the hip pockets are shocking form.

An innovation which I predict will not be unwelcome to those of us with handsome creamy ecks and a dimple or two under the Adam's apple, is the throatless or wide-open collar, as ictured in the accompanying sketch.

This is especially grateful to the buck on the Avenue, as it allows the utmost freedom to the neck. While the black countplaster taches de beaute are very individual, yet they smack a trifle of effiminacy and are really not being taken up by the verile sporting set.

Mi-sentleman's shirts are more exquisite than over before, as the "dicky" is no longer smart. In point of fact it is entirely tabu as a part of the evening wear—it is quite defence d'afficher. if I may put it that way.

Some of the foreign tailors are trying, in ain methinks, to force a coffee-colored dress suit on the sprigs-about-town, but bronzed men of the world who know a thing or two and who have wrung society dry will not secept it, preferring to stick to the more formal and sober olors like magenta and heliotrope, as of yore, inching into favor, this side o' sea for motoring. Another individual note is the trouser with turn-up cuffs attached. This will come as a joyous relief to all of us Brummellians, as it has been a beastly nuisance to pin the cuffs to our trousers when our main Winterbottom was not strictly sober. There will no longer be the hideous possibility of pinning by mistake a pair of Irish homespun cuffs to one's evening trousers.

The work of the aviator is far more complex than is imagined.

The two chief duties of air-craft are the discovery of the enemy's artillery positions and the control and correction of the are from our own batteries. To perform these it is necessary for the pilot or the observer, or both if the machine is a two-seater, to keep in close touch with the artillery commander, and as soon as the guns are in position the latter explains to the aviator the general direction and nature of the target that is to be discovered. The seroplane then rises to the necessary height, keeping behind the battery in order to run less risks of injury by hostile fire. Meanwhile, two large strips of white cloth are laid on the ground near the battery to indicate the supposed direction of the objective. The aeroplane then flies out over the battery to find the exact position of the enemy's guns. There are three kinds of observation to be carried out by the aeroplane before the battery can bring its fire to bear on the exact point desired; these are, direction or line of fire, ranging or distance and calculation as to the point at which shells should be timed to burst. To determine the direction of fire the observer steers his machine in the the wonderful success of aerowatching the burst of his batteries' shells on each outward journey, and signalling the result by means of colored lights or by dropping messages on each return over the battery. The course of his flight will always be on that side of the battery which is furthest from the sun in order that his signals will be easily seen. The direction having been satisfactorylly reached by these methods, the observer receives a signal from the battery, communicated by strips of white cloth laid in certain combinations on the ground, to observe for range. He now steershis machine in the form of a figure of eight, always turning towards the target, as may be seen from the arrows in the rough diagram, drawn, signalling the result in the manner already described. He will keep in . front or behind his battery according

WITH AIR-CRAFT. The above signals are formed of white cloth strips laid upon the ground. 1, Signifies "Observe for General Effect of Fire." 2, "Repeat last Signal." 8, "Fresh Target on Right." 4, "Land."

The timing of the ruse is then observed from the same position, and when this information is obtained and communicated to his battery, the observer will fly to a position vertically over the target and watch the general results of the fire, reporting his observations from time to time by flying over the battery and dropping messages. In cases like the present, where hostile aircraft are always present, it is necessary to place a lookout man whose sole duty it will be to keep a continuous watch on the machine, so that no confusion can arise as to which machine the signals are given by. It is necessary that the type of projectile fired by the battery, while observations are being taken, should be different in its effect to that which is being fired at the same object by other batteries, so that it may be easily distinguished by the aviator.

Shrapnel bursting in the air, while easily visible, has little value for purposes of observation, because it is difficult to determine from above the height at which it bursts. The best and most easily seen type of fire from an aeroplane is provided by percussion shells.

The code of signals from aeroplane to battery is formed of red, white and green lights in various combinations; as an instance, one white light signifies "I am over the target," and one red and one green indicate that the range, direction or timing of the fuse, according to whichever is being observed, is correct. The code of signalling from battery to air-craft is equally interesting; the white strips of cloth already mentioned are roughly arranged in the shape of letters, with their heads to the direction of the enemy's lines, each of which conveys a different meaning; several of these ..... are illustrated in the accompanying diagram.

A High Financier

In 1863, Khedive Ismail come to the throne, his brain throbbing with hig became prosperous, and Ismail found his credit good among the powers, and so, without any trouble, he raised the national debt of his country from $15,-000,000 te $425,000,000 in thirteen short years. In 1876 the Khediye found controling interest in the canal from small. Here started England's trouble.

Arabi was asked to surrender, the eighty two Great Britain placed her foot on Egyptian soil—on Egypt the ancient.

Arabi was asked to surrender, the Alexandria forts were dismantled, and the powers were asked to unite in the protection of the canal, but they refused it was then that Great Britain decided to send the soil for a mere minute then it attempts to Cano to occupy that city, which surpenetrate the unknown depths of the past history of Egypt. Egypt is almost synonymous with age. The mere mensquelching of this by Gordon enough has been written. And so Great Rule. synonymous with age. The mere men-tion of Egypt makes one think of pyra-mids and mummies, of temples and of the country, altho Egypt at that time was not much to be proud of. its teems of crocodiles almost as of the Egypt that Great Britain fairly well, with a pretty little interstepped into was the most hopeless est of thirty per cent. Starvation and slavery were the lot of the working-duced the Bank of England method of finance into the country in juxtaposition to the high finance or rather lack of finance of Ismail. It was a success, for notwithstanding enorm-ous reductions in the ratio of taxation the revenues last year were over twice as great as in the year 1882; and there have been enormous expenditures for public works. The canal-shares which Beaconstield had purchased for $20,-000,000 are now worth seven times that sum. The remarkable financial on of foreign capital which is just as safe in Egypt today as is British

Land values have advanced 1006 per cent, due in part to the great Assouan dam, completed a few years ago, part of the greatest prigation scheme the world has known. Irrigation has made it possible for each man to till his own soil and eat the fruits of his lands, itundreds of thousands of acres have been opened un for cultivation that previously had been desert wastes.

The work of Cremer was not spectacular, but it was gradual, steady, and secure, the task he set out to accomplish is not completed, but no one who knew Egypt in 1882 ever expected in one lifetime the changes that have taken place. He organized the Agri-Bank, which lends money to the fellaheen at reasonable interest, the principal and interest to be paid in instalments that are less than the

Educational Movements

Another example of the work of Cromer is in the reorganization of the a joke to a well organized and practical body of men, which have garrisoned the country ever office. The fighting qualities of the native ligypcian soldiers have been proved. On the road to Tokar in 1891 Col. Holled-Smith tells of an encounter in which the men fought with "remarkable intrepidity," whereas a few years previusly Egyptian soldiers, regardless of their numbers, were scorned. No one now has any apprehension as to the efficiency of the native army, with its British officers, which garrisons the outposts all the way to the Seudan. England's campaign to cuucate the people of Egypt is less sp ctacular in its results than the more material revolutions, but it is none the less there.

Lord Cromer, foremost in the

When Lord Cromer took office he saw the country a Mohammedan university, which have but here to do they were the old and new forms of education to defere Oxford and Cambridge were thought of. ### LOOK IN SIBERIA FOR

THE COMING SUPERMAN S BERIA'S UNIQUE population should possess considerable interest for the eugenists, says The New York Medical Journal. From 1658 until 1900, from 2000 to 20,000 Russians were exiled annually to Siberia, mainly for voicing ideas and opinions which favored democracy and other modern theories; in other words, the inhabitants of the territory seem always to have been men and women of original habits of thought, of mental qualifications which would have made them prominent and distinguished under a form of government more like our own. As we understand it these exiles have lived an outdoor life, rigorous, perhaps, but of the host healthful kind. Consequently we find in Siberia a most unusual combination of intel-lectual equipment of high quality with physical surroundings adapted to fur-nish bodily vigor and excellent health, a union produced by accident of the exact kind that eugenists are striving to effect by design.

The banks of California, according to Mr. Reuss, have plenty of money for legitimate purposes and legitimate business, but they are not letting the speculators do any plunging. The automobile business is the same in Los Angeles as it is anywhere else. The cut-price-would-be-agent is commencing to go up against it as well as the wild-cat trader. People are buying good automobiles but are very well as the wild-cat trader. People are buying good automobiles but are very chary in their dealings with the big majority of agents. The interest taken in the high-priced automobiles shows that conditions are right. There are the usual number of near financiers who never had anything and never will, yet manage to put up a good front somehow and excite an awful howl about how tight money is and how poor business is, but the fellow who is attending to business and making the best of things is not as bad off as appearances indicate. Mr. Reuss says that he does not look for a record breaking year by any means, but he does believe that the conservative element in Southern California will make money.

Armored Cars for Toronto

The war news from day to day shows definitely that arme motor cars have been of the greatest value in the present strug For scouting purposes, and for general offensive and defer operations, they have proved highly efficient.

We should have a couple of these vehicles in Toronto home defense. Our Home Guard is a fine body of men, de ing of support, and it would be a good thing if some of Toro rich men got together and equipped this organization with couple of high-class armored cars, and the necessary rapid-fire guns. MOTORCYCLING By A. N. B.

st not be imagined that all the It must not be imagined that all the creers and despatches of the expeditionary force have been carried by motorcyclists. The main method of transmitting messages is by telegraph, and wires are laid from headquarters to all the outlying stations and lines of the army; but with the rapidly retraining or advancing columns, such as there are in France today, it is quite the state of the expedition of the Ansonia Hotel, which post he had held for years past, and is now temporarily residing at 251 West 73rd street. His decision undoubtedly will be regretted by these it is to lay wires to keep pace with the or retreat, as the case may

As can be imagined, this was most exciting and dangerous work, and motoroyclists were used for it in large numbers. The danger lay, not in the mountry forces or in the speaker's table at the dinner recently given in honor of the late Will R. Pitman, and was commended not only by Mr. Pitman, who, as is quite generally known, always held Dr. Thornley in high regard, but also by John L. Donovan, present head of the competition committee of the F. A. M.

In this connection it might be added regular infantry forces or in the nemy's artillery, but in the wandering ands of Uhlans, who would of Uhlans, who would come stal news from individual motorcyclists at the front is almost impos-sible, so strict are the rules laid down by the military authoritties. If a man what so write home he is given a printed post card and told to cross out what does not apply to him. On these most cards are sentences such as: "I post cards are sentences such as: "I am quite well"; "I shall be out of hospital soon"; "I have not heard from you lately," etc., etc. Then follow spaces for the writer's usual signature and the date. and the date. There is also a note to the writer, to the effect that if he adds anything else whatever, the post card will be destroyed.

Thus the only news of motorcyclists' actual doings at the front has to be obtained except in isolated cases, from those wounded despatch riders who have been sent back to England to have been sent back to England to recoup. Corporals Busby and Berlandina, who were in the same section of fifteen, and who, curiously enough, were wounded at almost exactly the same time, have for some days been lying in the London Hospital. The tales these have have to tell are of the es these men have to tell are of the greatest interest to all—how they have had to rough it; how the machines est interest to all—how they have have stood up to the work, the weather conditions, and a mass of detail. . In this connection it might be added that Mr. Donovan's speech quite took the wind out of those who heard the chairman make his annual report at St. Louis, and either shows that Donovan has lived over the summer to learn that with contests being staged in great numbers, his job is in reality no bed of roses, or that Thornley's friends in the organization have been making converts to the cause. These men do excellent work in many of the smaller English towns, but what is more useful still is that they are all the time fitting themselves for active service abroad, should their country have need

It is said that recently on the Coven-try-Birmingham road, England, a mo-torcyclist had his side-car removed by an armoured car which passed him at full speed. # BEAUTY OF CAR DESIGN

. How Looks May Be Improved

Beauty of design as applied to the vantage of bringing considerable modern motor car affords a vast field for improvement. It is the pre-eminent requisite in the construction of every pleasure car. Invariably, there is to be found a mechanism and construction of merit in each car, the outstruction of at a slight angle. In the development of an axle movement, the direction of which approaches the normal angle of shock there will be new methods brought out in which the design of the car should distinctive individuality.

master hand of the designer to more ources than any other feature. First. we find the advertising man, a leader of his profession, describing the graceful curved lines and luxurious body of the car he represents. Next in order comes the salesman, a man of refinement, using the dignity of his car in effecting a favorable impression upon the prospective buyer. The owner's social standing, to a large degree, is measured by the car he owns.

Many cars with that exclusive aristocratic air and a symmetry almost unapproachable, lose considerable of their dignity by marring a work of art by an unsightly emergency tire. While this equipment is essential at present, provision will be made for the discontinuance of this practice.

While a variety of shock absorbers are to be found attached to the rear springs and are essential to the comfort of the occupants, we must admit that they do not improve the appearance by their presence.

The recent announcement by the LONG RUN ON "HIGH."

The recent announcement by the track management that it would in the future supervise manufacturers' tests on its own responsibility, is declared well founded on precedent, similar trials having been conducted under the auspices of the Chicago Automobile Club, without A. There are two logical reasons to be advanced. First, the side elevation or three-quarter view presents the attractive curved lires of the car body together with more details of the make up than could otherwise be shown. Second, the front design of the modern car has not been developed to the same degree of per-In the display of cars from photo sanction; nor, it is said, is there any animus manifested toward the A. J. F. Galloway of Columbus recent property is not a unusual record by driving from Toledo to his home city in a Studebaker "Four" without a shift in gears, after once getting under way. The performance was successful despite several bad hills and a considerable stretch of mud, all of which the car pulled without trouble on "high."

J. F. Galloway of Columbus recent have attained. Within the next two years, we may expect to see the conventional front design of the car undergo a radical change such as will be in marked contrast to present methods of construction. Relief from the thods of construction. Relief from the vertical action of the axle movement is an engineering problem which must be overcome. This has the disadstresses to hear on the mechanism for the reason that impacts due to obstructions are not vertical, but occur at a slight angle. In the development the forward end of the car should receive many advantages. Beauty of design percolates from the LITTLE THINGS WORTH KNOWING It is safer to use low gear when crossing a railway track than to slow down on high and run the risk of the engine "dying."

If the engine is high powered, and the clutch takes hold rigidly, suddenly starting or stopping the car, great wear on the rear wheel treads

When the porcelain on the exposed part of a spark plug gets covered with grease and dirt the current will often pit across from the erm metal of the engine and a miss will

It is better to test dry batteries after a run, rather than before the car is taken out. An ammeter should be employed and any batteries found to be run down should be replaced.

At least once each year the springs should be removed from a car and the leaves be separated and polished and well olled with graphite grease. The advantage is surpising.

A large amount of the weariness of long riding is due to side shaking. To obviate this use a cushion containing feathers. They allow side-slip better

THE "RED CLUB."

Where have they moved to? Had them pretty near landed, then I lost them, but I'll have them next week without fail. Sherlock Holmes, the famous detective, would have made this same remark if he had been working on the case, but our World reporter is nearly a Holmes himself, and he will surely have them all under his spell by this time next week.

What will the judge say? Who is this party? All these questions are asked every day, and still no one is in a position to answer, but next week, remember we promise for sure, next week we will have it all, and a sigh of relief will be forthcoming from all, who have been interested in this small but BIG meaning title, "The Red Club."

'ENGLAND EXPECTS" VALUABLE FILM

The cinematograph has often been made a vehicle for propagandiam, and, ndeed, in almost every form of human activity it has nowadays played an influential part. It is doubtful, however, whether any film has ever been produced which can quite equal the Lon-don Film Company's latest work as an example of public-spirited enterprise and active patriotism.

At the present unexampled crisis in our country's affairs, the great urgent need is for more men to join our national fighting forces, and how widely this need is recognized is made clear by the printed appeals which have been brought before the public's notice by almost every conceivable means thruout the land. It has, however, been left for the London Film Company to frame this appeal in a manner which is, perhaps, more striking, more direct, and more irresistible than any other yet conceived.

"England Expects," as will be gathered from our remarks, is a picture play designed, one may presume, with play designed, one may presume, with the sole purpose of assisting the all-important recruiting movement. It is a pictorial call to arms—a living appeal for this most noble and urgent of causes. The picture should not be confounded with the many excellent patriotic films now upon the market, for, altho these latter perform an ad-mirable and invaluable service in keeping up the nation's heart, fostering loyal sentiments, and indirectly stirring up cur fighting spirit, they do not pretend, nor are they intended, to possess the character of the London Film Company's production.

JOHN BARRYMORE IN "MAN FROM MEXICO"

John Barymore, irresistible, inimit able, who made his first appearance in motion pictures a few months when he was starred in the Famous when he was starred in the Famous "An Players' comedy production, "An American Citizen," returns to the screen in a second Famous Players-Paramount release, H. A. Du Souchet's cemedy triumph, "The Man From Mexico.

As was evidenced in his former film characterization, John Barrymore's greatest talent lies in the depiction of umorous dilemmas and farcical dif ficulties, and "The Man From Mexico" is crowded with this element comedy. The situations are just the kind that afford the star ample and unlimited opportunities for the display of his droll mannerisms and delightful, mirth-provoking pranks.
"The Man From Mexico" has been recorded in theatrical history as one of the greatest comedies of the past two decades. The humorous incidents occur so rapidly that there is scarcely pause of laughter thruout the entire production. In the film version the plot is greatly amplified, and many laughable situations that were only referred to in the original production are incorporated in the film, with the result that the motion picture adaptation surpasses the stage version in humer and appeal. The production, which is in five parts, will be released on the Paramount program November

From Australia Mary Pickford Receives Loving Cup and Album Given by Thousands of Admirers.

ONE OF the most unique, spontaneous and pleasing demon-strations ever accorded a screen favorite, was extended to Mary Pickford, the brightest star in the "movie" firmament, when Hilliard Johnston, representing the exhibitors and public of Australia, brought her an immense loving cup and a big album of autographs from her admirers across the Pacific, as a mark of appreciation of

Mr. Johnson announced his mission and explained that the idea of tendering Miss Pickford this unusua tribute emanated from the Greater J D. Williams Amusement Co., on the occasion of the star's triumph in "Tess of the Storm Company," and met with a general response from the Australian public.

Attached to the album is the great seal of the City of Sydney, which has never before been attached to any but official documents. The album also contains the official signature of the Lord Mayor of Sydney, and the officia attestation of the town clerk. The official signatures of these officers have never before been granted for

Mr. Johnson remarked that when one stopped to think that thirteen thousand odd persons who walked up to the desk in front of the Crystal Palace lobby to sign the album did so because they felt they were expressing directly to Miss Pickford their warmhearted admiration, one would realize the millions of friends she had made thruout the wide world by expressing to them, in the silent language of the screen, her universal message.

On the cover of the album are impressed the lines, "The Roll to Honor Our Little Mary Pickford—a Tribute from Australia." And on the fly-leaf appears the following: "Art is universal, human sympathy international, genlus the property of the world. Your 'Tess,' Mary is ours. She will live long in our hearts—we love you for ner."

Society Dances Will Also Have a Share of Massey Hall Program -But Classic Works Will Predominate.

Never before has any great premiere danseuse undertaken, with the dancing organization required, to give so elaborate and complete a presentation of society dances. And yet this portion of the program is surpassed by the classical works which Pavlowa is to interpret at her coming performance in Massey Hall next Saturday. There will be divertissements from among the will be divertissements from among the ten new ones prepared specially for Pavlowa; solo dances, duet dances and dances demanding four or more soloists. But the pretentious ballets (which reflect the rare art of the Rus-

(which reflect the rare art of the Russians, and in which lyric, poetic, dramatic, musical, dancing and scenic arts are combined in a single and harmonicus whole) will be the finest ever attempted or seen in this country.

Among these ballets are: 'Flora's Awakening," "Amarilla," "The Seven Daughters of the Ghost King" (all new it, this country) and "Walpurgis-Night" and "Puppen-Fee" (The Fairy Doll). These two latter works, because of their having been given in America on only a few occasions and not at all in recent years, comprise not at all in recent years, comprise two important novelties. And Pavlowa has never before given them on this continent. The splendor of the scenes and the beauty of the costumes have already aroused the enthusiasm of all who have seen these ballets percrmed. "Flora's Awakening," a mythological any purpose of this kind. The signatures in the album are each and every one the bona-fide autographs of "Little Mary's" admirers, who voluntarily placed them there as a tribute to her art and popularity.

The loving cup was purchased with 13,651½ Australian pennies, each one of which was voluntarily dropped into glass jars placed in the lobby of the Crystal Palace for this purpose.

"Flora's Awakening," a mythological ballet, in one act, and a single scene, was arranged by M. Clustine. The music is by Richard Drigo and the scenery and costumes by Albert Rothenstein, a young English artist who has recently won great attention. The charming quality of this ballet and the splendid opportunities afforded Mile. Pavlowa for the display of her dancing and pantomimic arts make it one of the most effective pieces in the repertoire.

The presentation of these gifts is all the more remarkable because the object of the tribute was ten thousand miles away at the time.

That the Russian premiere danseuse has undertaken nore than ever may be seen by the iveness and pretentious qualiries of her repertoire. Her appearance here, and that of her company, should be an event of the season.

Theodore Stier, conductor of the great orchestra with Mile. Anna Pav-

He first conducted performances of the ballet of "ocular opera" for Pavlowa in 1910, and is regarded by many authorities as the best beliet conductor of the day. It seems that there is a lot of difference between conducting a regular symphonic program, or conducting an orchestra for an operatic performance, and leading the musicians who play for a dancing performance. In fact it is claimed that some of the greatest symphonic and operatic conductors of the day would make a sorry mess the score, "La Fille Mal Gardee." any rate, over in St. Petersburg at the mperial Opera House they have sepaete conductors for the opera and the

Even with its age—it is twenty one years since it was originally produced—it is vastly superior to contemporary dramas of society, which, together with its literary qualities and together with its literary qualities and brilliant flashes of epigram and paradox renders it one of the most interesting dramatic offerings in many seasons. Miss Anglin has staged and cast the play in a most careful and praiseworthy manner, and in the role of the worldy but fascinating Mrs. Erlynne she gives a distinguished, convincing performance from first to last, which puts the dominating artistic touch to the revival.

The basic theme of the play is the experience of a young queen exiled by reasons of po-litical dissension in her own kingdom, little queen proves that there is not much difference between royalty and the common people when they are wrecked by the buffets of circumstances. For sheer charm of story, quaintness and daintiness of the central character, this production is one of the gems of the current dramatic era. Another feature of the Hippodrome bill will be the presentation of some of the greatest war pictures that has ever been recorded. The English dirigible "Beta" is shown flying over London; German prisoners of war, and what they are doing; torpedo boat destroyers at work, and other wonder-ful photography of the world's great-

Off Flores In the

Everyone knows, or should know, the story of Sir Richard Grenville, whose death, more than four centuries ago made him immortal in English history. Off Flores, in the Azores, that cluster of islands about a thousand miles west of the Portugal coast, Sir Richard, then commanding the Revenge, encountered a squadron of Spanish men-of-war, and fought them till his little ship sank, with her colors flying, all as visualized in Tennyson's stirring ballad. All down the centuries, past Nelson's time, and on thru the stages in the change from oak to steel, that tradition has prevailed. Fight the enemy, no matter what the odds, so long as there are boards to float on and men to man the guns. It is a glorious tradition, and many a time and oft in history has it been an inspiration that ended in victory. For, in the days before steam conquered wind, the sailor counted. To gain the weather-gauge and so command the situation was the goal of the commander and the joy of the officers and crew.

These were the days, too, when seamanship counted. Fleets and squadrons were then very much at the mercy of wind and weather. The wind, in Shakspere's poetic phrase, was ever a chartered libertine, and a sudden shift from one quarter to another might destroy the weary work of months. Steam, by rendering ships independent of air currents, immediately and fundamentally changed sea strategy and battle tactics, too, are now largely dependent on the weight and range of the broadsides. Yet, so far as the British navy is concerned, the maxims of Nelson's day still prevail. Give battle, whatever the odds, if so be that damage can be inflicted on the enemy. Better to die, having so done, than turn an ignominious tail to the enemy. The kaiser, who has modelled his navy on British lines, has adopted its traditions with modifications. Sink rather than surrender, but run rather than risk the peril of a superior force.

The Fight in the Pacific

Last week recorded the defeat of three British by five German cruisers. Two of these latter were greatly superior in weight and range of broadside, and made the most of that advantage. Their presence, too, appears to have been entirely unsuspected. At the outbreak of the war, they were stationed in the southwestern Pacific, and were the bugbears of the New Zealand expeditionary force despatched to the Samoan Islands, until it was joined at New Caledonia by the Australian fleet and the French cruiser Montcalm. Since then they paid casual visits to Papeite, the capital of Tahlti, one of the Society Islands, and favored it with a reminder that Europe was at war. Knowing that the Australia, the flagship of the Australian fleet, and a battle cruiser of the dreadnought type, was on their trail, the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau sought fresh seas and chances new off the western coast of South America, an unsuspected move that has left Germany for the time being masters of the situation in the eastern ocean, presents much the same opportunity as the finding of a needle in a haystack. The area of vision is limited by the rotundity of the earth, and at best is of relatively small dimensions. All the chances favor the hunted cruiser, since the pursuing ships traveling at full speed betray themselves by their smoke long before they rise above the horizon. That is one of the reasons which have led to the replacement of coal by oil as a fuel. In fact, the short experience of this war has already more than justified the radical changes made by Sir John, now Lord Fisher, when in practical control of British naval policy. His proposals were bitterly assailed by the older school of experts, but his insistence that the main batteries must decide the issue has been proved. Submarines were not in his day the disturbing problem.

Germany Prepared and Confident

For more than a generation the German autocracy has been preparing for war on land and sea. Year after year military and naval experts have labored to perfect the men and machines that were to form the weapon forged for world conquest. Al Ithat science, technical knowledge, iron discipline and careful prevision could achieve has been done for that one purpose. And in their heart, German officers, from the kaiser downwards, despised what they heard to be, as compared with their own, the puny and badly-directed methods of their coming adversaries. They were arrogant, because they were confident in the superlority of German power, in the secrecy of their arms, in the vast ramifications of the spy system, which are only now being unfolded to a wondering world. Nor was that confidence without a measuse of warrant. Had the German war plans materialized, and had Britain remanied neutral, it is not at all improbable that the kaiser would have been wel lon the road to European domination. His tremendous engine of destruction might have rolled over northern France and battered its way into Paris within the first month of war. Even as events happened, it reached the summed up the present stage of the war. But it would be a grave mistake to underestimate the resources of Germany; or to imagine that the Germans are already beaten. If it is a long, long way to Tipperary, it is longer still to Berlin, unless the Russian armies continue their surprising and unexpected series of successes. Russia was the one nation that the haughty Germans regarded with some degree of apprehension. Slow and unwieldy as he held the Russian power to be, he did not underrate its latent strength, and knew well Russia's huge reserves of men. But, with France crushed, there was always the possibility of buying Russia off, and postponing the final struggle for supremsey between the Teuton and the Slav. As things stand, however, the kaiser is between two hot fires, and may get roasted all cound without eucceeding in extinguishing either of them. He must be in a fever of anxiety, even if his faith in his Almighty aly remains unshaken.

The Ebbing Tide

A good many forward movements received something like a check in the various elections held thruout the United States on Tuesday last. Prohibition and votes for women were decisively defeated in several states, and tariff reform was given a black eye in nearly every part of the country. Not only this, but many pronounced reactionaries were victorious, including Senator Boyes Penrose of Pennsylvania, and Uncle Joe Cannon of Illinois.

All reform and progress seem to gain upon the land at high tide. One watching the waves break and fall back can scarcely tell at first whether ground is being gained or lost. Thus nearly all reform movements appear one year to be rushing irresistibly forward, and the next to be falling back impotently.

Equal suffrage seems to have fared best where the women were fewest. In Nevada sturdy miners rallied to a man to support votes

Still Undecided

While it may be taken for granted that parliament will not be summoned before January, there is still the possibility of an early appeal to the country. We have heard little about it lately, but then it must be remembered that the head of the government is invalided in Virginia, and his chief political adviser has been away from the capital. Even were a session called, say for January 7, it would be quite possible to vote supply, dissolve, and have an

Few venture to prophesy, altho many argue for and against an appeal to the country. It is said that the election might as well be held now as next September, and thus give the government a new lease of power, and a free hand to deal with the problems of war and peace. On the other hand, it is contended that a political truce was arranged at the outbreak of the war, which it would be little less than treasonable to violate. There was certainly no express treaty between the two political parties, altho to the onlooker there seemed to be something like an entente between the leader of the government and the leader of the opposition at the August session. In any event, it is the privilege of the party in power to fix the date of the

Cheering the Cell

Anyone who has purchased a set of books on the instalment plan must have noticed how quickly time passes during the course of collection. You scarcely get rid of the collector by forking over the March payment than he is at your side again, reminding you that it is April. "You were here only yesterday," the purchaser protests, but is soon compelled to admit that a month instead of a day has gone by since he saw the collector last.

Would it, therefore, not be a humane thing to allow the prisoners in the penitentiary to purchase books on the instalment plan? They would be in prison just as long, but it would not seem so long to them. But, however he obtains the books, is there any sense or reason in a rule which forbids the man in a prison cell to improve and relieve his mind by reading books and newspapers?

Except for Mr. Hanna's penal farm, Canada lags far behind other countries in prison reform. Something, we believe, is to be hoped for from the recent investigation at Kingston, but unfortunately extraneous issues and personal brawls turned the inquiry into a controversy.

Poisoning the Wells

There is good reason to believe that some periodicals in the United States that have enjoyed a reputation in the past for moderation and impartiality, have been secretly purchased by the German government for the purpose of misinforming the American public as to the facts, and for the purpose of changing public opinion, which up to this time has been strongly in favor of the allies. The World has called attention to this performance, and has named some of the magazines. It is up to them to meet the charges, if they can do so.

There can be no objection to the kaiser buying a magazine in the United States, if he can do so; or to any person selling him a magazine or newspaper. It is a free country, with a free press, and neutral in this war. What we contend, however, is that the periodicals suddenly changed from judges to advocates, should explain their conversion, or at any rate admit they have been bought up or bought out.

Professor Hugo Munsterburg is the genius who is directing these publications; and no doubt they are purchased on his recommendation. He is a man of ability; but he is a German, not an American, and he is trying to poison the wells from which the American people must imbibe

CRUSTS AND CRUMBS

By Albert Ernest Stafford

Theosophical Society is a body which is intended to become a nucleus of the Universal Brotherhood of Humanity, without distinction of ace, creed, sex, caste or color. As I suggested last week, many different bodies have arisen in the Movement. each varying in point of view in some degree from the others, and therefore resenting a most fascinaitng contemporary study of the growth and development of a world-wide religious Each of the divisions represents some variation from the original ideal, and of course each division declares itself to be the one and only genuine original. The subtlety of some of the changes is notable. The Scelety I quoted from last week, for example, has changed its object from the original by the transposition of the articles- "to form the nucleus of a Universal Brotherhood," instead of "a nucleus of the Universal Brotherhood of Humanity," the original implication being that the Universal Brotherhood of Humanity was a fact in nature which had only to be recognized, but could only be recognized by the formation of a nucleus for that purpose. Another body, styling itself "The Universal Brotherhood," has shandoned the specific wording of the main object, and assumes that it alone represents the universal movement which has been active in all ages, giving specific warning against all other bodies professing to have similar objects, and charging them with misleading the public. This breach of good manners and of the ruain principle of toleration which is the real excuse for being of any of these bodies is due to an idiosyncrasy of the "Leader and Official Head" of the body, who does not appear to appreciate the fact that "handsome is thru the that handsome does." The original all-inclusive nature of the Movement is disregarded or denied by some of developed five sub-races of these societies which prohibit membership in any rival body, or frown upon such an exhibition of brotherhood, forbidding any intercourse in the conduction and third catastrophe out the conduction of the conduction and third catastrophe out the conduction and third catastrophe out the conduction of the conduction and third catastrophe out the conduction of the conducti some cases, such as the shaking of about 200,000 and 80,000 year the evil influence of "black magic" superstition having taken hold of large numbers of dupes, who do not understand that superstition is itself one of the most fatal forms of "black magic."

account of various matters with which they differ from her in opinion. The Society having been formed with the express object of bringing those together who did differ in opinion, so that they might develop the virtue of tolerance in their relations with one another, the absurdity of all who retire and form a new or "independent" society on account of a difference of pinion is obvious. The theory underlying the movement seems to be that rumanity, which has existed for ages beyond the limits usually set by official history, passes in the course of its development thru a number of well marked stages, known as Root Races, Subraces, Family Races and other divisions. These appear on earth in great epochs marked chronologically by the movement of the Sun in the heavens, as indicated by the Zodiac, which marks the seasons of the career of Humanity as definitely as the ordinary seasons of the year indicate seed-time and harvest. Men are born, according to their nature, into the conditions of historical season, national soil, and ethical or religious climate which are suited to them. They cannot develop in any but appropriate conditions, suited to their several natures, any more than English daisles will grow in Canada, grapes in Greenland, or Cactus in Labrador. The surface of the earth changes, the axis having shifted several times, and continents now inhabited once were spread ander ocean depths, while earlier populous continents like Lemuria and Atlantis now lie submerged beneath the Pacific and Atlantic oceans. Individual men are born again and of the universal brotherhood of him again upon earth according to their disposition and behaviour, drawn to the environment which fits their character, under modifying considerations of their relations with other individuals, previously established. As a rule groups of people are born earth together according to the affinity of their tastes, and the necessity they are under to settle old score. with each other. CRICKET ROUNDS, Hamilton, Nov. 7.—Eddie Livingstone with his T.R. & A.A. team invaded the mountain city this afternoon in an effort to retard the Hamilton Rowing Club in its clin for the O. R. F. There was a good arowd present to watch the contest and a more ideal day could not be desired. There was a slight wind which gave the team kicking to the north a slight

VARSITY STADIUM, Nov. 7.—Excitement was at fever heat when Varsity and McGill lined up today in what promised to be the most strenuous Intercollegiate fixure of the year. Whether the blue and white would be able to display the form hat they have been showing in the practices was the question which the fans were sking before the game. The McGill outfit were none too confident about the outcome, and one of the most worried men from Montreal was Coach Frank Shaughnessy. The feeling in Montreal was that a victory over Varsity would occasion surprise.

early, and when the players took the field every point had been taken, and Standing room was at a premium.

Before the game started it was not known whether Carr or Doyle would start at left half. Dick Sheehy and Lindsay had the other two places on the back division cinched, and it was decided not to start Red McKenzie. "Gamey" Stratton was listed to start at quarter, and the boy looked good in the preliminary workout. Bill O'Reilly was due to start at right scrim instead of Nicholson. Otherwise the line-up was intact. For McGill the famous quarter, Quilty, was at left middle wing. Promptly at 2.30 the red and white trotted out and were greeted with a McGill yell from the throats of 2000 students. # JOHNSON GETS ONE

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Richard Nelin is the name of a new umpire just secured by President Ban Johnson for the American League staff next year lent results in the International League during the past four years. He was strongly recommended to Big. Ban by President Barrow, who desired to see Nailin go up the ladder. It is believed that Jack Sheridan, the veteran of the staff, will not return next year, which will provide a place for the new man. Sheridan will probably be retained as a sort of supervisor of umpires, spending his time roaming around the circuit for the purpose of watching the work of the field officials.

Not Afraid of the Black Man and Will Meet Him Any Time.

New York, Nov. 7.—The Jess Willard Company announces that if the public demands a match with Sam Langford as the preliminary to a match with Jack Johnson, the sacrifice will be made. This seems to be a perfectly safe stand to take, as the public is not particularly interested in the matter one way or the other.

If Willard really believes in himself the will require no urging to tackle Langford or anyone else. Ring followers have a strong hunch that when the real hope comes along it will be a man who will not pick and choose opponents. The man wanted is the own giving will take them all as they come, giving will take them all take them all take

CLOSE TO CENTURY FOR ST. ANDREWS

Ran Up Ninety-Eight Points | Defeated Trinity School With on Upper Canada in Little Big Four Fixture

St. Andrews campus Saturday morn-by the score of 98 to 7. The U.C.C. ing by the score of 98 to 7. The U.C.C. boys were simply outclassed all the way, and the Saints could not resist the temptation to run up an overwhelming majority. The Scotchmen were in fine mettle and simply walked at will thru the lines of their opponents. Bucks of all kinds were used and gains were made of a really remarkable nature. Sixteen touchdowns were corralled by the red and white during the game, and they only falled, in one thing and that was their attempt to make their points amount to an even century.

attempt to make their points amount to an even century.

Upper Canada did not seem to have anything but about two good outside wing men. They were given so much work to do, however, that they soon became lost in the shuffle. To pick a good man on the Saints team is very hard, as they were all good and no one was a feature man any more than the other. They all played their positions and were behind every play with all their weight telling. Their half-backs displayed good judgment and ran back with good gains to their credit. At the end of the first quarter the score was 23 to 1 in favor of the Saints, and they added another twenty to this at half-time. Three-quarter time was 78 to 7.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(Special to NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(special to The Sunday World.)—The big event in boxing the coming week is the Freddy Weish-Charlie White match to be held in Milwaukee Monday avening. This is by far the most important light-weight contest arranged since the London meeting between Ritchie and Weish, in which the world's champion-thin changed bands. For in White Weish, in which the world's champion-ship changed hands. For in White, if the dope is reliable, Chicago has a candidate for the lightweight title whose claims are worthy of serious whose claims are worthy of serious consideration.

White has been coming along very last for several years, but his first real bid for fame was in the match with Ritchie at Milwaukee last spring. In that bout White demonstrated beyond all question that he is a boxer of great class—a majority of the experts present awarded him the decision over Ritchie. The latter, himself, afterwards told me that the Chicago Hebrew gave him the hardest battle of his career, and that White tame within an ace of winning the bitle by a knock-out. It was only Willie's wonderful recuperative powers and liberal stock of gameness and stamina that enabled him to weather the first few rounds and come back like the great little fighter he is towards the finish of the battle.

However, in Weish the Chicago boxer will meet one of the shrewdest heads in the game. Accounts of the London match between Ritchie and Weish vary according to the prejudices of those telling the story, but there is little doubt that Weish's generalship was what earned him the verdict over his more aggressive opponent. Ritchie's style of fighting suffered a considerable handicap under the strict British observance of the rules, and the probability is that Weish was justiv en-handicap under the strict British observance of the rules, and the probability is that Weish was justly entitled to the decision on points.

White found Ritchie a target for his punches; he will not find it so easy a matter to hit the Englishman, on the principle that a moving object is fiarder to wallop than a stationary one. And Weish is here, there and everyfichere about the ring when at his best, a boxer who relies so strongly on the punch as he does will, naturally, look slow in comparison with the speedy Welsh. Most any boxer can strike a knock-out blow if allowed to set himself before letting it go, but if forced to step around fast to land his punches; it is an entirely different matter. White met Ritchie coming right into him, and let go. Freddy will hardly per-

J. KILBANE MAY BOX JOE MANDOT

Featherweight Champion for the Lightweight Class-Is He in Earnest?

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 .- Johnny Kil-NEW YORK. Nov. 7.—Johnny Kil-bane is said to have accepted terms to meet Joe Mandot at an early date. The featherweight has made so many bluffs about meeting lightweights that it is not unlikely that this is only an-other attempt to obtain a little pub-licity. However, it is no secret that the Clevelander has outgrown the featherweight class, so he may have decided to take a chance rather than remain idle. However, if White elects to make it a test of boxing skill with his opponent, and I fancy that Freddy's superior knowledge of the fine points of the art will enable him to make Charley fight the way he wants him to, the champion should earn the popular decision on points. Of course, there is the chance that White may be clever enough to make it an even thing with Welsh, and if he can keep the latter going at top speed for five or six rounds without a good breathing spell there is also the chance that his youth will count largely in his favor in the latter rounds.

Both New Orleans and Akron, are named as the place where Kilbane will stage his lightweight coming-out party. New Orleans offers the biggest purse for a twenty-round bout, but the men would have to go only half that distance in Ohio, a circumstance division is popularly supposed to be 133 pounds ringside, it has been the prerogative of the champion to name the weight for all matches in which the title has been at stake. While Battling Nelson was champion he compelled his opponents to do 133, and Ad. Wolgast, who easily made the weight, also followed in the footsteps of his preedecessor. Ritchie, however, has been more liberal in that respect, not because he is inclined to give an opponent any the best of it, but because he finds the higher scale more to cause he finds the higher scale more to his liking.

Charley White and Johnny Dundee, two of the most likely looking contenders, are smaller boys. In fact Dundee can easily do 128 pounds, and in making matches at 133 is giving away considerable poundage. To box such big fellows as Ritchie and Weish where the conditions permit weighing where the conditions permit weighing in at 135 pounds six or seven hours before ringtime it will be seen what a tremendous handleap in poundage he would be up against.

he would be up against.

With the world's champion and the American title holder endeavoring to raise the weight for the lightweight division it would seem that Mr. P. McFarland's rumored return to the ring is most opportune. Packey ought to be able to meet the conditions now exacted by the two leading exponents of the division withou trouble. But I imagine if Mac really determined to come back he would find that those conditions only went for the little fellows. The probability is that both Weish and Ritchie would make impossible conditions for the clever stockyards boxer.

will count largely in his favor in the latter rounds.
With all Welsh's supposed superiority as a boxer and his advantage in experience and ring generaldship, it should be remembered that he is not exactly a spring chicken. Where there is genuine ability on both sides youth is a great factor in favor of its pospessor.

The match promises to be a great sporting event, and should boom boxing in Milwaukee and the middle west. New York matchmakers missed a great card when they permitted the western promoters to grab this match.

It is expected that Willie Ritchie will arrive in this city within the next few weeks in search of matches. According to a dispatch from the coast, Willie recently turned down an offer to box Johnny Dundee at Los Angeles because he was asked to weigh in at 185 pounds several hours before ringtime. If this is correct it begins to look as if there is some truth in the report that the American lightweight champion is rapidly outgrowing the division. Willie has gone on record according to the same report, that he will make weight for no one but Welsh.

Young Charley Weinert, the Newark heavyweight, and his showing at that time earned him the match with Gibbons. But as it turned out boxing Weinert and boxing Gibbons are two entirely different propositions. Mike made Mexwell run away from him for ten rounds. And even under those conditions he succeeded in giving him some licking.

After the match Gibbons announced that he was ready to box any man in the world at any old weight. I rather fancy Mike was spoofing the boys when he made that spiel. But seriously he would have a good chance with any boxer in the ring today, with the possible exception of Langford and Johnson. Of course, it is my belief that a good big man can always lick a good little man, but where are the good big men newadays? I can't think of any among the whites unless it may of any among the whites unless it may be Jess Willard. But Jess has not yet shown anything bordering on cham-

I will take the opportunity here of publicly answering a question asked of me the other day in a letter written by one of the readers of this ten by one of the readers of this column. Here's the question: "Do you honestly think that any of the white heavyweights have a chance to win the world's championship in a battle with Jack Johnson?" Here's the answer: Billy Maxwell outpointed Young Charley Weinert. Weinert went over to Philadelphia and created a mild sensation by triuming hig Im over to Philadelphia and created a mild sensation by trimming big Jim Coffey, touted as one of the best of the white heavies. Mike Gibbons, a light middleweight, lambasted Maxwell around the ring for ten rounds just missing a knockout by a hair's breadth. Now, friend reager, what chance do you think Gibbons would have with Jack Johnson? If you can figure that cut, you have the answer. But to get back to Gibbons and his defi to any man in the game. We will be satisfied if Mike will confine his efforts for the present to the middle-weight division. We have been urging the St. Pour man for a long time to ness to sign articles, and that he is ready to fight anywhere or any place. And when we recall what Sam Lang-ford recently did to Gunboat Smith, we can hardly blame the big smoke for jumping at the chance to pick up $30,-000—which is the amount guaranteed him win or lose. There doesn't appear to be much chance for him to lose. Johnson is also to be allowed 50 per cent. of the moving picture privileges

Just where the promoters expect to reap their financial reward in the proposed match can be found to travel the distance if will be necessary to go—even if the fight is held in Juarez—to pay the incidental expenses let alone Johnson's end. The American sporting public wants to see Willard lick someone worth while in the heavyweight division before they will accept him as a contender for the world's title.
