A French electrician has devised an ingenious electrical low water signal for steam boilers, which indicates the existing water level at any distance from the generator, and when the water has sunk below a certain point rings a signal bell, while at the same time the sign "low water" appears on the indicating tablet.

The elephant hunters of Ceylon and India corroborate Humboldt's story that elephants, when they feel the approach of death, retire to a solitary and inaccessible valley, and there die in peace.

The superintendent of elephants to the government of India states that no living man has come across the corpse of a wild elephant that has died a natural death.

In the writings of Confucius, the great Chinese philosopher, occurs the following passage: "As we use a glass to examine the forms of things, so must we study antiquity in order to understand the present."

This sentence points most unmistakably to the use of magnifying glasses long before the time of the writer, who died 478 years B. C.

The Ganges, which gathers the waters of the Himalaya mountains, the loftiest in the world, is at 180 miles from its mouth, only 800 feet above the sea, and to fall these 800 feet in the long course of the river, is said to require more than a month.

It is stated that the Bank of France has almost entirely abandoned chemical tests in favor of the camera for detecting forgeries.

The sensitive plate not only precludes forgeries of the doings of the emperor or penknife, but frequently shows, under the bold figures of the forger, the sun originally borne by the check. So ready is the camera to detect ink marks that a carte-de-visite enclosed in a letter may be the eye appear without blushing, while a copy of it in the camera will probably exhibit traces of writing across the face, where it has merely been in contact with the written paper.

Prof. Marsh recently read a paper treating the dimensions of the brain and spinal cord in some extinct reptiles. He considered that the cerebral part of the brain in living mammals showed a decided increase as compared with the size of the extinct species.

The early mammals had smooth brains, and in the later ones convolutions appeared. The brains of birds and reptiles followed the same law. A large specimen of an extinct animal from the Rocky Mountains, which measured thirty feet in length, had a brain cavity not much larger than that of a dog.

There was, however, a large posterior cavity toward the spine. This suggests the idea that it is not the brain alone, but the whole nervous system, which may be the seat of mind.

"The inconvenient young lady," remarks the Electrician, "whom the newspapers have lately discovered administering electric shocks to everybody who shakes hands with her, is not an original phenomenon. To say nothing of the Canadians who habitually lighted the gas with their fingers' ends in quite modern times, Virgil tells us that the hair of Ascanius emitted a harmless flame, and Servius Tullius is known to have shot sparks out of his locks at the precocious age of seven.

A more exact counterpart of our female cotemporary, however, lived at Verona about a couple of centuries ago. Cassandra Buri was unable to sleep in linen sheets because of the fire emitted from her body on getting into bed. Such were the crackling and blazing that her maids often fancied that they had dropped live cinders out of the warming pan into the bed. This is the dull season."

The investigations of Herr Weith have shown that of various bodies of water, under otherwise similar conditions, that one has the greatest quantity of fish which contains the most dissolved bicarbonate of lime. A simple explanation of this seemingly strange fact is given.

The simple carbonate of lime is widely distributed on the bottoms of lakes, but being insoluble, is not taken up by the water. If, however, the water contain an abundance of carbonic acid—which is produced, of course, by animals in respiration—this transforms the carbonate into the bicarbonate, which readily dissolves in water. It appears, therefore, that, by a sure chemical analysis, one may with considerable probability estimate the quantity of fish in a body of water; and, conversely, Herr Weith has often been able to give a remarkably accurate statement of the chemical composition of a body of water on learning the quantity of fish contained in it.

A Good Thing. German Syrup is the special prescription of Dr. A. Boeche, a celebrated German Physician, and is acknowledged to be one of the most fortunate discoveries in Medicine. It quickly cures Croup, Colds and all Lung troubles of the severest nature, moving, as it does, the cause of the affection and leaving the parts in a strong and healthy condition. It is not an experimental medicine, but has stood the test of years, giving satisfaction in every case, which its rapidly increasing sale every season confirms. Two million bottles sold annually. Beware of medicines of similar names, lately introduced.

Boeche's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1858, and is now sold in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price 75 cents. Sample bottle, 10 cents.

THE METROPOLITAN LADIES of Chatham are preparing for an Apion Fair and grand Christmas Supper to be held in the Temperance Hall on Tuesday the 21st inst.

OBITUARY.—Just as we go to press we learn that Judge Fisher died at Fredericton yesterday.

Wm. S. F. Esq., Chairman of St. John's Corporation is also dead.

PERSONAL.—Ursula Johnson, Esq., M. P. E. was in town on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday last.

J. R. Snowball, Esq., M. P. and Hon. Senator Murchison left Chatham for Ottawa on Monday evening.

A POSTPONEMENT.—The ticket holders in the Lottery which was to take place on the 10th of the present month at Chatham, will please take notice that owing to tickets not all being disposed of, the draw will be postponed until the evening of the 20th of the present month. T. R. Col. FITZ.

ADVERTISERS' correspondence is not to have. Our friends who desire to see their communications in print must send their real names in confidence. We may also remark that the ADVANCE is able to defend itself when it decides such a course necessary. Contents may be expressed by initials, letter that by word.

VENISON, the weather prophet promises a remarkably heavy snow-storm on 22nd inst., which may impede people's movements when they desire to visit the Miramichi Bookstore and purchase Christmas presents. It will therefore be well to everybody to anticipate the bad weather by making their purchases at as early a day as possible.

BRIDGE PURCHASE.—The Local Government has purchased the Woodstock Bridge for $5,000, the rails excepted, and will maintain it until the expiration of the term of the bridge in this county? When does the Board of Works intend to restore the Eskelobie Bridge? A mere fraction of the money given for the Woodstock Bridge would do it.

THOSE SAILORS.—Capt. Armstrong of the barque "Arcturion" informs us that he does not believe the sailors who walked out by the Chatham Branch Railway, and of whom one had a foot frozen, belonged to his ship as reported in last week's ADVANCE. From what we learn, however, we think our statement was correct, and that it is a mistake.

SHIPWRECK.—There is excellent sleighing at Shipigan harbor, though it came a little too early for business in that locality. A Caracut schooner from Quebec is frozen in there and the cargo is being hauled ashore and forwarded to its destination. It is reported that over half a dozen teams broke through the ice the other day at Shipigan.

THE CURLING AND SKATING RINK is ready for use. We learn it is the company's intention to open it to skaters as well as curlers this season in conformity with their agreement with the Public Square Committee, who kindly permitted them to erect an skating rink in the Square. As soon as possible, arrangements will be made as to the terms on which both curlers and skaters will occupy the building.

"EDWARD, SIR," was the subject of a lecture delivered in the Methodist Church Chatham, on Tuesday evening by Rev. S. C. Wells. There was a fair audience who were very effectively addressed to "get away" from everything that was in the way of true advancement. The lecturer illustrated his theme by referring to examples of men who had succeeded in life by "getting away" and as long as he, "get away" "get away" he succeeded in holding the attention of those present who were both interested and instructed. At the close a vote of thanks, moved by Rev. Mr. Steele and seconded by Mr. McNeill was unanimously tendered to the lecturer.

A GREAT PAPER.—We desire to call the attention of our readers to one of the greatest newspapers of the age—one that secures the best writers in this country and Europe, regardless of expense; has the best and latest book review of any paper in the country; has also articles upon financial subjects; has departments devoted to Fine Arts, Biblical Research (something that cannot be found in any other newspaper in the United States); Farm and Garden, Insurance, Weekly Market Reports, Cattle Market, Process Current, Dry Goods Quotations, etc. In fact, a newspaper fully suited to the requirements of every family, containing a fund of information which cannot be had in any other shape, and having a wide circulation all over the country and in Europe. We refer to "The Independent," of New York.

The largest, the safest, the best." See advertisement in another column, and send for specimen copy.

Harry Lindley's Comedy Company. Harry Lindley's Comedy Company appeared here on Friday, Saturday and Monday evening last, producing "Our Boys," "The Two Orphans" and "Cats" with farces as afterpieces. The company was small, but made up in the way of talent for numerical weakness. Lindley was, as usual, a hot in himself. Mrs. Lindley (Louise Foster) and Lindley Jr., together with Mr. Walsh, were received as old favorites. Miss Violet Campbell and Miss Lucy Cutler and others, were new to Chatham audiences and soon gained admirers by their excellent acting. Notwithstanding their merits, the company were not patronized as well as they deserved. Mr. Lindley is a capital actor, but he does not seem to understand the art of business management. The fact that he did not do better business here was owing to inadequate announcement of his coming, and the talent he intended to bring with him. We have known inferior combinations with little dramatic merit to be succeeded by flaming posters into what Mr. Lindley might truthfully say of his company and be believed. He ought to allow himself to be properly announced when he is fairly well known and deservedly appreciated. We hope he will come back again at some time, bringing as good a company as he lets the people know of his intentions beforehand.

Northumberland Agricultural Society. The annual meeting of Northumberland Agricultural Society was held at the Canada House, Chatham, on Friday, 26th inst. The meeting was held on that day in order that the returns for the year might be forwarded, as required by the Provincial Board, and as it happened to be the period between open water and safe crossing on the river, the Newcastle and Douglastown members could not be present.

In the absence of Hon. Edward Williston, President; Vice President, B. Stapleton was called to the chair. The accounts and reports of the year were submitted, showing that the usual exhibits had not been held, owing to the funds of the society having been devoted to paying off the debt incurred by the purchase of the horse "Victor Hugo." It was shown that $1,100 had been paid on the horse, which had been purchased by the delegates of the Society at the suggestion of the Local Government, with the understanding between the Government and the delegates of the Society that the latter body should have their obligations of payment remitted to a certain extent in consideration of their assisting in the defeat of a ring formed by other societies to secure the importation of a great horse from the Government. It was decided that an exhibition should be held next autumn, however, as a general belief was expressed that the balance would be due on "Victor Hugo" would be assumed by the Board of Agriculture as a discharged obligation. A Committee was appointed to consider the claims of the Society in the matter upon the Board of Agriculture, and to have them forwarded by the President.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were:—E. W. Williston, President, Jas. Fish, 1st Vice President, B. Stapleton, 2nd Vice President, John Galloway, Secretary, John Galloway, Treasurer.

The Board of Directors consists of the above officers and the following members:—Chas. Sargent, D. G. Smith, Wm. Scarle, Wm. Martin, Wm. Falgout, J. F. Searle, John O'Brien, Nelson A. W. Mansford, Alex. Dickson, Geo. Dickson, Ernest Hutchison, John Johnston, Thos. Platt, Alex. Jessamine.

The membership of the Society is nearly one hundred, and the spirit pervading it is one of active enterprise in promoting the agricultural interests of the county.

A great many points of interest were developed in the discussions had on different subjects. While there was some regret expressed at the inability of the Society to exhibit during the two years past, it was conceded that the enterprise which led to the purchase of "Victor Hugo," although it had diverted the efforts of the organization from the usual course, proved a great benefit in improving the horse stock of the County. It was also gratifying to learn that the stock of "Victor Hugo" was in great favor among the horse practical users and judges of working horses on the Miramichi.

The Society voted a bonus of $30 to Mr. George F. Scarle in recognition of his enterprise in purchasing, at the late Provincial Exhibition, the Ayrshire Bull, "Bismark," and on condition that this animal should be kept by Mr. Scarle for two years, members of the Society to have the services secured for stock purposes only. The vote for this bonus was passed all the more readily as Mr. Scarle had also purchased, at the same time, the Ayrshire heifer, "Mayflower."

Together, the meeting was a very harmonious one, the Society exhibiting vigor and earnestness which were very encouraging for future operations. We append the pedigrees of the Ayrshire Bull and heifer purchased by Mr. Scarle, taken from the New Brunswick Herd Book:—

1873—Ayrshire Bull, "Bismark," red and white well marked, calving April 1873, bred by Archibald Scott, Glasgow, Scotland, C. property of same. Got by Tom Talbot, 42, St. B. Dan "Challenge," 5th, 88 N. R. Grand Dan "Challenge," 2nd, No. 157—Ayrshire Heifer, May flower, calving May 1873, bred by S. H. Bligh, Hampton, Kings Co., Dan No. 65, Sir "Admiral" No. 50 N. B.

Ross Wins:—A London telegram of 4th inst. on the Ross-Ticket race says:—Ross had a lead of a length at the Post House, which is the first landmark after the start. Ticket after Barnes was going well within himself. Ticket, however, made a last game effort, Ross also spurred, eventually winning easily. Time 23min. 40sec.

The Prince of Wales' Gun.—The Prince of Wales has taken very much of late to a private hansom. He attended the last Sandown meeting in it both days; and while the Prince deserves credit, I think, for adopting a mode of conveyance at once so sensible and unostentatious, the cab itself is worthy of notice for its sublimity of comfort and good taste. By a simple application of the lever principle, the driver from his seat behind can shut and open his doors as required. In addition to large windows, two small windows are fixed in the cab behind the occupant to cast a Parthian glance behind him when he is; and a travelling clock with a luminous dial face in the centre of the splash board prevents the necessity of unbuckling the greaves to have recourse to a watch. I only hope His Royal Highness will pick up Sir Edmond Beaulieu's offer to cast a Parthian glance behind him when he is; and a travelling clock with a luminous dial face in the centre of the splash board prevents the necessity of unbuckling the greaves to have recourse to a watch.

Remarkable Picture. Probably the most remarkable picture of the age is "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRATORIA," now on exhibition in the Doré Gallery, London, England. It was begun immediately before the opening of the Franco-Prussian war, and during the career of the siege and Commune was kept folded up and buried in a place of safety, uninjured by shot and shell. For several years it has been on exhibition in London, and has attracted universal attention, being considered the principal feature of the wonderful Doré Gallery. The canvas measures 12 feet by 17 feet, and is painted some one hundred and seventy distinct figures, the central one being Jesus leaving Pilate's Judgment Hall for the place of execution. The scene as depicted by the renowned artist is independent of the religious, it is a French citizen who proposed to make the Panama Canal and, no doubt, if the work goes on, he expects to receive the protection of his own Government. He seems determined to go forward with the enterprise. Most of the Frenchmen who are interested in the matter are to be warned away summarily by a resolution of Congress, if the United States Government do about it. And if they are inferior to the French Government, what steps will the French Government take to protect its subjects? These are questions which, we suppose, can only be answered by events. Evening Telegraph.

BECKER'S PLEA FOR MEN WHO ARE NOT CONSTANT. Several of the men in public life notoriously come forward to support the cause of the "plea for men who are not constant." There are many of them, and they have a right to do anything that they have a mind to do, and nobody thinks anything of them. They have strength of character and they go along. I have one in my mind now but I shall not mention his name (laughter)—but if a man of unswerving life at some points commits an indiscretion—granting it to be the first time, a single act—the outcry is raised against the man. Ah, they say, "the man is fallen off; now we see what he is, and what he always has been; I knew his virtue was all pretence we are all alike, all tarred with the same stick!" And so there are men that stand eminent for their good qualities and take the risk of success in life on them. How many men there are if you could take their skin would be but grinning monkey! They go through life prosperously and die and go to the devil."—N. Y. World.

Health, and on no account to telegraph. I thought I should say for the best by having his funeral in England. I had however, a cast of his head taken, in case the citizens of St. John should wish to have a bust of one of their most eloquent and distinguished counsellors to place in their Hall. His services in the Fishery Arbitration alone were worthy of recognition, and that recognition, I doubt not, will be none the less prompt and hearty when it is remembered that he died far from home and in the cause of the Corporation of St. John.

His funeral took place to-day at half past twelve, and was conducted by Rev. W. R. Kent, Mr. Addison, of Linklater; Mr. Brown, his junior counsel, Mr. John Ward Stratton, Mr. Doty and myself attending as mourners, and he lies now at rest in a sunny spot of the Brownson cemetery.

For Robin.

Margery Nixon made a pretty picture as she stood in the doorway one bright June morning. The sun glinted down and turned her flaxen hair to gold...

such cases persons wish to be interested and amuse themselves with their mental and physical exertion. They, therefore, take up a good book or newspaper, which proves a source of agreeable and innocent enjoyment.

When written with a skillful hand fiction may be made a powerful means of education. Its style interests the masses, and it has an important influence in forming the tastes and characters of those who read it.

The value of fiction as an educator is shown by its introduction into the New Testament in the form of parables. The very name parable signifies a fable or allegorical relation or representation of something real in life or nature...

"You do not love me, lass, or you would not be so quick to make an excuse to send me off. I have always had a fondness for Robin, and an as willing to take him under my roof-tree and care for him as though he had been of kin to me."

Margery was greatly surprised at Robin's evident knowledge of the King's Testament; and she was also much troubled by the extreme terror it had occasioned him. For if his forebodings also were true, he would be going to his death. But kindly commands must be obeyed, and Robin was soon on his way to Henry's prison.

He threw himself pale and trembling at his sovereign's feet and begged to be sent home again before night-fall. "I am of no use to any one but my brother George and my sister Margery," he pleaded; "and if you keep me here I shall surely die. I know it, I shall be 'clammed.'"

"Those who hide shall find," answered Robin, sentimentally, to the king's great surprise. He had himself secreted the gem, and had put the question to the boy to test his powers, secretly distrusting them. But his ready reply caused a change of opinion in the king's mind, and Robin was at once installed a prime favorite at court.

Her first step in the path of sacrifice had now been taken. She had alienated George, and the future looked indeed dark to the suffering orphan. In about an hour Robin came in, snatching along with awkward, shambling gait, as though his limbs had been strung too loosely upon his frame.

He was hungry; and seating himself at the rude table upon which Margery had spread a frugal meal of black bread and goat's milk, he began to eat ravenously.

Margery went up to him and stroked his hair, hating to look in his color—which hung in elf-locks upon either side of his face.

"Poor Robin!" she said, softly. "Does Robin love sister?" "Robin glanced up with a vacant smile. But something in the expression of Margery's face seemed to stir up within his mind some dormant emotion.

He put out his hand and drew her toward him so as to look into her face. His eyes grew suddenly instinct with intelligence, and he began to mutter to himself. It was a common habit of his when anything occurred to arouse his sluggish intellect to interest. Sometimes he would croon over a jingle of words which seemed to bear with them a hidden meaning; and Margery's memory was stored with them, although, as yet, she was unaware of Robin's singular gift of prescience.

"Why have you sent my George away?" Robin had not been within hearing distance of the house at the time she had had the interview with her lover.

"Did he tell you to say that to me?" But Robin looked at her in a mournful, shiding way, and said: "You have been unkind and cruel to George, and I am going after him to tell him so."

And, in spite of Margery's endeavors to detain him, he rushed into into the darkness of the night which was rapidly closing in around them.

He did not return until late on the following day. Then he brought George with him. They both looked weary and worn, as though from a long journey, but the young lover's face was bright with newly-awakened hope.

"I came with Robin," he said, "because he told me that I must, or you would cry. You see my lass, the poor innocent has the right kind of wisdom. He knows that it is a sin for you to break your vows, and my heart at the same time. Don't you, Rob, Rob?"

But the brief interval of intelligent action had passed away. Robin was again as one in a dream—oblivious to all but the mere creature-comforts of food and rest.

Like others of her class, Margery had an almost superstitious reverence for him whom God had thus afflicted. She had therefore made a brave fight to carry out her idea of duty—but even daft Robin was against her, she must be in the wrong. So she yielded to George's arguments and consented to become his wife.

After they were married, Robin proved to be a great help to George's fortunes, instead of the hindrance to them which Margery had feared. He took great pride and pleasure in helping his new brother in the necessary work about his land, and soon learned to plough as straight and even as a trow in the rich, brown soil, as even as George himself, who was the champion ploughman of the country.

It was while thus engaged that the turning point of his destiny came. One day he stepped suddenly in the middle of his work, and with a wild look and startled gesture called out: "Now, Dick! now, Harry! Oh, hell, Dick! Oh, well, done, Harry! Harry has gained the day!"

A surprised group soon gathered round him, listening to him wondering, and trying to make out his meaning. But it remained a riddle until the following day. Then came news of the Battle of Bosworth, at which Richard III. had been slain, and Henry VII. made King of England.

Robin had evidently had a vision of the scene at the very moment of Henry's victory. From that time he was no longer called "daft Robin," but "Robin the Prophet."

"I have heard of an old Saxon word for 'starved.' Margery tried to soothe him, but in vain. He would not be comforted until she humored his singular whim (as she thought it), and suffered him to hide behind a pile of unbleached flax in an out-house.

A few hours later a messenger came from the king with orders to bring Robin to him. He had heard an account of his peculiar gifts, and with his usual shrewdness wished to turn them to account by keeping him near his person.

Margery was greatly surprised at Robin's evident knowledge of the King's Testament; and she was also much troubled by the extreme terror it had occasioned him. For if his forebodings also were true, he would be going to his death. But kindly commands must be obeyed, and Robin was soon on his way to Henry's prison.

He threw himself pale and trembling at his sovereign's feet and begged to be sent home again before night-fall. "I am of no use to any one but my brother George and my sister Margery," he pleaded; "and if you keep me here I shall surely die. I know it, I shall be 'clammed.'"

He put out his hand and drew her toward him so as to look into her face. His eyes grew suddenly instinct with intelligence, and he began to mutter to himself. It was a common habit of his when anything occurred to arouse his sluggish intellect to interest. Sometimes he would croon over a jingle of words which seemed to bear with them a hidden meaning; and Margery's memory was stored with them, although, as yet, she was unaware of Robin's singular gift of prescience.

"Why have you sent my George away?" Robin had not been within hearing distance of the house at the time she had had the interview with her lover.

"Did he tell you to say that to me?" But Robin looked at her in a mournful, shiding way, and said: "You have been unkind and cruel to George, and I am going after him to tell him so."

And, in spite of Margery's endeavors to detain him, he rushed into into the darkness of the night which was rapidly closing in around them.

He did not return until late on the following day. Then he brought George with him. They both looked weary and worn, as though from a long journey, but the young lover's face was bright with newly-awakened hope.

"I came with Robin," he said, "because he told me that I must, or you would cry. You see my lass, the poor innocent has the right kind of wisdom. He knows that it is a sin for you to break your vows, and my heart at the same time. Don't you, Rob, Rob?"

But the brief interval of intelligent action had passed away. Robin was again as one in a dream—oblivious to all but the mere creature-comforts of food and rest.

Like others of her class, Margery had an almost superstitious reverence for him whom God had thus afflicted. She had therefore made a brave fight to carry out her idea of duty—but even daft Robin was against her, she must be in the wrong. So she yielded to George's arguments and consented to become his wife.

After they were married, Robin proved to be a great help to George's fortunes, instead of the hindrance to them which Margery had feared. He took great pride and pleasure in helping his new brother in the necessary work about his land, and soon learned to plough as straight and even as a trow in the rich, brown soil, as even as George himself, who was the champion ploughman of the country.

It was while thus engaged that the turning point of his destiny came. One day he stepped suddenly in the middle of his work, and with a wild look and startled gesture called out: "Now, Dick! now, Harry! Oh, hell, Dick! Oh, well, done, Harry! Harry has gained the day!"

A surprised group soon gathered round him, listening to him wondering, and trying to make out his meaning. But it remained a riddle until the following day. Then came news of the Battle of Bosworth, at which Richard III. had been slain, and Henry VII. made King of England.
