Some good families sent a poor little Irish boy his fortune.

He died in this city on April 6th, 1890, an honest, hard working, meek and kind man. Patrick Shine, who, having accumulated some little wealth and knowing that his end was near, a few weeks previous to his death, bequeathed all his property to his faithful wife, Ellen, their union never having been blessed with children. The loss of her life companion pained the widow, and her grief was so great that just three months later—on June 6th, 1890—Ellen Shine, no longer able to bear up under her load of sorrow, quietly breathed her last to rejoin her beloved husband in another world.

Ellen Shine died intestate, and her property was taken charge of by Public Administrator James C. Pennie, who at once advertised and otherwise searched for any unknown heirs so that if they existed they could have an opportunity to present their claims.

Among the people who knew Ellen Shine was Mrs. Mary Ann Johnson, of 140 Bell street, the wife of a mechanic. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson were both of them natives of County Cork, Ireland, and whenever they met they would exchange reminiscences of the days of their youth. When Mrs. Johnson learned through the newspapers that her old friend had died and that the public administrator had charge of her property for the lack of legal claimants, she was greatly distressed, and the matter worried her for many weeks. In vain the good woman culgured her brains in an endeavor to remember whether she had ever heard of any one related to Ellen Shine. She could recollect no one.

The matter occupied her mind so much that it was not all surprising that one night (Aug. 30, 1891), after retiring, still much perturbed over the fact that all the money should go to strangers, Mrs. Johnson had her peaceful slumbers disturbed by a dream. She dreamed of Ellen Shine as a young girl home in Ireland, surrounded by a host of relatives, and conspicuous in that visionary picture from dreamland was the figure of Rev. Father James, well known to the dreamer.

When Mrs. Johnson awoke next morning she remembered her dream and through it strange that in it Father James should be mixed up with the youthful days of her late friend. The more she pondered over this to her, inexplicable fact the more she became convinced that the dreamer person to apply to for information concerning the relatives of Ellen Shine was the old parish priest, and she resolved at once to write to him.

Her surmise proved correct. In due time she received a letter from the Rev. Father James, now known as Canon Hegarty, in which he said that he knew Ellen Shine well when she was still at her Irish home; that her maiden name was Ellen Dooley, and that her nearest relative living was a nephew by the name of Joseph Cotter, residing in a village near Cork, called Carignave. The canon also advised Mrs. Johnson to turn the case over to some attorney at once.

Judge Levy gave satisfactory judgment, without more than the delay necessary for the purpose of obtaining the proofs of Cotter's claim from Ireland, and the young Irish lad was officially notified that he was the sole owner of a house and lot on Garden street, and another lot in the O'Neil and Healy tract, all left to him by an aunt whom he had never known, by the assistance of the beneficent fairies of Dreamland.—San Francisco Chronicle.

MISS JULIA VIGOR, THURSDAY, ONT.

Two Polish Jews, Harris Blank and Carl's Rosenkranz, were arrested in Montreal Sunday by New York detectives, charged with the murder of Jake Mabe, another Polish Jew, at Deseronto on March 18. Mabe was murdered for $5,000 which he had on his person.

Don't be discouraged about that exema till you have given Ayer's Sarsaparilla a persistent trial. Six bottles of this medicine cured the complaint for George S. Thomas, of Ada, Ohio, when all other remedies failed to afford any relief.

All that now remains of the Apostles of Christ are in the following places: Seven are sleeping the sleep of the just in Rome, viz.: Peter, Philip, James the Less, Judas, Bartholomew, Matthias and Simon. The remains of three lie in the kingdom of Naples—Matthew at Salerno, Andrew at Amalfi and Thomas at Ortona. One, James the Greater, was buried in Spain, at St. Jago de Compostella. Of the exact whereabouts of the remains of St. John the Evangelist there is much dispute. Mark and Luke are buried in Italy, the former at Venice, and the latter at Padua. St. Paul's remains are also believed to be in Italy. Peter is buried in Rome, in the church which bears his name, St. Peter's, and St. James the Lesser is buried in the Church of the Holy Apostles. Bartholomew is the church on that island in the Tiber which bears his name. The "Legends of the Apostles" places the remains of Matthias under the altar of the renowned Basilica.

A Canadian Favorite.
A season of green fruits and summer drenches is the time when the worst forms of cholera morbus, diarrhea, and bowel complaints prevail. As a safeguard Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry should be kept in the house. For 25 years it has been the most reliable remedy.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., July 19.
Rumors have reached here from Timor that there has been a volcanic eruption on the island of Sangar, one of the Philippine group, and that the inhabitants have been killed. A native from the Talante islands who landed at Selucan four weeks ago brought a remarkable story to the effect that several other natives had just returned from a voyage near Sangar. They had intended to land on the island, but were prevented by the sight of mountains of boiling lava and fire. They reported that the whole island was on fire. The water along the coast was full, they said, of half-burned wrecks, pieces of houses and charred bodies. The whole population, estimated at about 12,000, seemed to have been swept into the sea or burned, as not a living soul was to be seen. Streams of lava were still flowing toward the shore, showing that the activity of the volcano had not abated.

The steamer "Catteroth" from China to Sydney, brought a similar story yesterday. Near Sangar, her captain said, she passed through miles of debris, dismasted from anything he had before seen at sea. Poles and sides of huts, most of them charred and broken, were mingled with each other as the natives of the Philippines are in cooking. Many unrecognizable objects resembling charred trunks were also seen. Articles of household furniture were identified by a sailor who had lived in the Philippines as peculiar to the natives of Sangar and the near-by islands of the Philippine group. The ship was passing through the wreckage from 10 a. m. to 1.30 p. m. These reports are partially credited here, although they are believed to have been exaggerated. The formation of Sangar is volcanic and several small centers near the centre of the island are known to have threatened activity during the last ten months.

MERELY A SUGGESTION OF HIS

He was copyholder in the proof-room of a daily paper—a quiet, reserved man, of whom little was known except that he was always on hand and attended closely to his business.

When he came to the list of the killed and injured in the report of the accident he suddenly stopped and for a moment seemed unable to speak. Then he recovered his self possession and read the list.

"The last name is spelled wrong," he said quietly when he had finished it.

"That young man's name?" asked the editor of the paper.

"Yes," he replied. "It's according to the copy, but—" He reached over and crossed out a letter.

"Now it's all right," he said.

"You're a faithful fellow," said the editor, "but you're a good deal better than the proof reader."

"Let's finish this," said the other sharply.

"Why, man, you're sick," exclaimed the proof-reader, as he looked up. "You're as white as a—"

"A little faint," was the reply, but I can finish this galley, any more."

He finished it and then without a word went for his coat.

"I'll try to get around to-morrow, but to-night—"

"Look here! Where are you going?" asked the proof-reader.

"Home," he replied, and if there's a train in the morning I may go to it. I don't know what was coming on that train until I saw—

A

August Flower

The Hon. J. W. Remondino is the Sheriff of Kent Co., Del., and lives at Dover, the County Seat and Capital of the State. The sheriff is a gentleman fifty-nine years of age, and this is what he says: "I have used your August Flower for several years in my family and for my own use, and found it does me more good than any other remedy. I have been troubled with what I call Sick Headache. A pain comes in the back part of my head first, and then soon a general headache comes. I become sick and vomit. At times, too, I have a fullness after eating, a pressure after eating at the pit of the stomach, and a sickness when food comes to rise up in my throat and mouth. When I feel this coming on, if I take a little August Flower, it relieves me, and is the best remedy I have ever taken for it. For this reason I take it and recommend it to others, and with great remedy for Dyspepsia, &c."

CHATHAM, N. B., JULY 28, 1892.

Newspaper Label.

Mr. Hawke of the Moncton Transcript has been found guilty of publishing a libel on Dr. Weldon, M. P. for Albert County. The case occupied the circuit court at Dorchester three days last week. Judge Fraser presided and the lawyers principally engaged were W. W. Wells for plaintiff and Hon. H. R. Emerson for defendant. The libel charged lay in the fact that the Transcript stated that Dr. Weldon, in going to parliament claimed and received mileage for the distance between Halifax and Ottawa, when his domicile, according to his election papers, was in Albert County. It was, moreover, implied that Dr. Weldon had claimed mileage, when he had travelled on a pass, and the expression "Dr. Weldon's claim of mileage for Halifax places him on the same plane as McGreevy, Senechal, Langvin and Chaplain, who are all boodlers in common," was also used.

Mr. Emerson, for Mr. Hawke, undertook to show that the word boodler, was not necessarily a word of reproach, but was applied to all persons who received public money, as, for instance, for railway subsidies. Dr. Weldon proved that he drew mileage from one of his places of residence—that from which he actually travelled—and that, though he received railway mileage, he never used them, but always paid his fare. The judge's charge occupied two hours, and the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, assessing damages at $50, which, of course, carries costs. It is said that a majority of the jurors were political opponents of Dr. Weldon, but the verdict is generally considered in fact to be a vindication.

Mr. Hawke will of course have a goodly number of sympathizers, for political feeling runs so high with many persons that they seem to think almost any statement reflecting discredit upon their opponents justifiable, regardless of whether it is true or not. The verdict will have the effect, it is to be hoped, of curbing the recklessness of statement which is a characteristic of the Moncton papers, and thus improving the tone of journalism in the province.

Manitoba.

The Assembly elections in Manitoba took place last Saturday and have resulted in Premier Greenway being sustained, with a large majority. The question at issue was that of free nonsectarian schools, which were favored by the government. A plebiscite was also taken on the question of prohibition of the liquor traffic, and the vote was very largely in favor of prohibitive legislation.

A Chance for Mr. Davies.

A Montreal despatch of last Sunday to the St. John Telegraph says that Hon. Mr. Laurier is seriously considering resigning from the leadership of the Liberal party. It is well known that Mr. Laurier has for a long time been dissatisfied with his party's prospects. He does not think he is receiving the support he should from Ontario, and he is also comparatively poor man. His fight is hard to give the proper time to his party and to attend to the practice of his profession. The only reason why he has not given up the leadership long ago is that he was afraid he might be accused of deserting it in a crisis. It is very likely that if a proposed Liberal convention in which Mr. Laurier will ask the party representatives, to choose a new leader, "The despatch further says" he will shortly take up his residence in Montreal, where he will exercise his profession". This will, no doubt, lead to the choice of Mr. Davies of P. E. I. as the Liberal leader, for Sir Richard Cartwright, even with his acknowledged ability, is an impossible leader because of his offensive personality.

St. John is Immodest.

St. John had a new kind of sensation last week. A troupe of performers called Turner's English Gaiety Girls, many of whom were Yankee lasses, were advertised to give an entertainment to the city last Thursday evening at the Women's Christian Temperance Union memorialized the common consent to prevent the show, on the ground that it was an immodest one. As the Council met on Thursday night and the show was advertised to give an entertainment to the city last Thursday evening at the Women's Christian Temperance Union memorialized the common consent to prevent the show, on the ground that it was an immodest one.

A Peculiar Case.

W. Robert May, of the firm of J. S. May & Son, merchant tailors, St. John, has been arrested at Estport, Maine, for smuggling, and taken to Boston for trial. He is accused of filling orders for St. John for Boston people and smuggling the goods to the customs by steamship, with the help of an express company's agent. Mr. J. S. May, father of Robert, and head of the firm, says that his son was deceived to export by a telegram purporting to come from a gentleman with whom he was well acquainted. He knew that he carried no goods and had not been engaged in smuggling, and Mr. May considers the arrest a high-handed proceeding.

Why Not?

Some of the party papers are publishing the following: HALIFAX, July 25.—The Ribblesdale and Ontario Navigation Company, which is justly regarded as the most rapid type, has completed a trip to the Dominion government that places the N. P. in a somewhat ridiculous light. The company recently got a new steamer built at the works of John Roach, of Chester, Pennsylvania. She is named the Columbia and is of iron and her construction and equipment are of modern and expensive style, after the style of the magnificent Sand boat.

Before the ship could get under Canadian registry, the owners would have to pay $200,000. To do the government out of this money the company took the Columbia to Newfoundland, and had her registered there under the British flag without tax, and she is now on her way to Quebec to engage in passenger traffic on the Labrador business in Canada. The little trike is worth just $50,000 to the big T. Co. company. Whoever got the foregoing despatch up must either know little of the cost of one of the "magnificent steam boats," or is deliberately misleading, for $200,000 would not go half way in building such boats, for instance, as the Elgin on the Plymouth, of the Fall River Line. All the same, however, the Ribblesdale company has simply performed a fair, business-like operation in registering the Columbia in Newfoundland.

Deport on Canada and the United States.

The Canadian Dominion and the American Commonwealth trace most of the political institutions they possess to the great English mother of all governments. In the course of their divergences have naturally grown up in the working out of those institutions. It is generally taken for granted in the United States that in these diversities the advantages are altogether on the side of the States. This, however, I take to be a mistaken view. I think Canadians may fairly claim that they possess institutions worthy of the study and imitation of their neighbors.

JACK'S SWEETHEART.

"Aunt, you must listen to me! The proud heart is thrown back and the blue eyes flashing like sapphires in the sun. 'I will not marry Mr. Chester—despite him! You know well that if he had no money you would never admit him to your house.' Oh, aunt, I never even dreamed you were so mercenary! 'I am not—for myself. It is for you, child—it is of your future that I am thinking. I must die some time, and you know the conditions of my husband's will make it impossible for me to leave you one penny. Could you bear poverty after enjoying all the pleasures which wealth can give? Ah, child, it is a hard, bitter opposition to battle with when one is so young and lovely as you are! 'Have no profession, aunt. I shall not start. And even if I had no way of earning my bread I would not marry a man whom I detest for his money. 'Perhaps you and Jack Dunraven have resolved to try poverty together,' suggested Mrs. Thornton. There is the faintest suspicion of a sneer on the handsome mouth, but she is too well bred to allow it to become anything more than a suggestion. 'Poverty with the man I love would be happiness compared with a blighted life. Aunt, do you believe in unnecessary marriages? 'Why not? I married the man my parents chose for me; a man they knew could give me every thing my heart desired, and as whose wife I would be a queen in society? 'Were you happy? 'The handsome brows contracted a little. 'Yes, child—what an absurd question. 'Ah, aunt, I don't believe it. You were not as happy as you could have been. Do you really think that I would be happy as Mr. Chester's wife. Let your heart speak. 'But the inscrutable mask is on her face again; that instant's agony is over. She has cast off the young lover who had her love for the wealthy suitor. Well, the world is no wiser. 'Why should you not?' she says. 'You would be made to reject him. Beth, he can give you every luxury; more even than I can. He is old, true, but that is nothing. He would exchange his wealth for your youth and beauty. You could do no better. Even if, with all my ambition, would be satisfied with such a marriage. You have done brilliantly—succeeded my hopes. But you must forget Jack; he is poor, he could never make you happy. 'Is wealth, luxury, pleasure all one must live for? Is love to be in no place in one's life at all?' cries Beth. Mrs. Thornton shrugs her beautiful shoulders. 'When one is young one's heart is apt to take the lead in one's life,' she says. 'You are young, what are you to expect? Mr. Chester will be here this evening—see that he receives the answer he should. 'With this she sweeps gracefully away, throwing a significant smile at her niece as she closes the door. 'Ah, Jack said both Russell, softly, 'I will be true to you till death—through poverty, through everything. You doubt my love now, but some day I will prove to you how even a society girl can love. 'It has been bitterly cold all day, and for the first time perhaps in many weeks the street corners are deserted. A warm home and a warmer fire is every stray pedestrian's goal. And now, just at dusk, as the lights are just peeping through the gathering gloom, a fine cut snow begins to fall. The usual crowd at the little station is dispersing; the bustle and excitement caused by the arrival of the through passenger train has subsided and the operator is left once more to himself. She closes her book with a little snap, goes up to the blazing fire in the huge, ugly stove and holds out her slender hands to its warm radiance. 'The petted darling of a wealthy home and innumerable friends in a common serge gown.' She laughs softly and rubs one hand up under the sleeve of her dress. 'I wonder what Mr. Chester would say were he to see me now? Ah, poor aunt, I wish you could have lived! But perhaps it is best as it is, and I am glad—glad you could not leave me one dollar. Poor proud Jack! What he hears that I—I, the supposed heiress—am poor, even poorer than he is, will be come to me—then? The door opens and slams, letting in a cold gust of rain, wind and snow. 'Ah, Lenn, is that you?' she says brightly, as a young giant of a fellow comes toward her, slinking the snow from his clothes like a great dog. 'How could you remember me on a night like this? And no overcoat?' she exclaims. 'Why, you will freeze? 'His handsome face lights up with a smile that displays a dazzling row of teeth. 'Perhaps I stopped in to get warm,' he said requisitely, 'and not to see you at all. Why, it was only yesterday that you gave me a blank. I never knew what it was to count the minutes before you came. I never had this restlessness before, but with you I am calm; you quiet me; just one glance from your eyes—that is enough. 'She lays one soft hand on his powerful brow once. 'Poor Lenn,' she says softly, 'I am sorry.' He turns away and draws one hand across his eyes, then smiles at her in almost his usual light-hearted fashion. 'By the way,' he says, 'I am afraid the bridge across the river just below here will not hold 802 to-night if it is loaded as usual. Well, I'm off; I may be back this way in an hour to help you keep away the cold. 'He buttons his coat about his throat and draws his fur cap over his eyes. At the door he looks back with a slight smile. 'I feel strangely reluctant to leave you here alone,' he says wistfully. 'What could harm me?' 'Nothing in all Trenton that I know of—but would you like me to stay with you?' 'How good you are! she says. 'But do you think I would allow you to go without your supper in order that you might protect me from unseen peril?' She laughs merrily. 'No, Lenn, I am as safe as if—as if—well, nothing can happen to me, at all events. So go with a clear conscience. 'And this time he goes and does not look back. She shivers a little as she remembers what he has said about the bridge. What a sudden chill of terror his words had struck to her heart. 'The bridge will not hold 802,' she says to herself. 'It is a through passenger and will not stop unless I signal. I must find out. It is not due for half an hour yet. I shall have time.' She throws a long, dark cloak over her shoulders and takes down a red light from the wall. With another glance at the clock she rushes out in the stormy black night. Down the track she speeds, the lantern dancing through the darkness like a will-o'-the-wisp. The bridge is a quarter of a mile from the station, but she knows every step of the way. Suddenly a deep, roaring sound meets her ears. 'The river! The river!' she gasps. 'Lenn said to-day it had risen fearfully. That frail bridge will be swept away as if it were a stick in such a fierce torrent. 'Now she is at the bridge, but now she is in the water. The last of it is swept away in the black seething waters as she reaches the bank, and at that moment, another sound, heard faintly above the roar of the river, sends a new terror to her heart. A distant thundering sound, and she knows the train is coming through the cut half a mile away. 'Oh, God, for some strength!' she exclaims. 'All those souls must not be lost! 'She struggles on through the thin, cutting snow in her face like so many tiny lashes. On comes the express—nearer, nearer. Gradually the roar of the river changes into the roar of the on-coming train. Once she stumbles and falls, and her fingers, stiff with cold, almost lose their grasp on the precious red signal; but she is up almost before she touches the ground. 'Only a few more rods,' she breathes, 'and they are saved. 'Now she can see the lights from the station, and almost simultaneously there flashes around a curve in the inky darkness the headlight of 802 coming down the track at full speed. With a last desperate effort she gains the station, and standing in the centre of the track, waves the red light frantically above her head. She tries to cry out but her voice is drowned in the roar of the wind and the approaching train. But the engineer's head is out of the cab window; he sees the slender figure on the track, he sees the wind-blown figure on the track, he sees the white face gleaming in the dazzling glare of the headlight. He throws back his lever, and gradually—gradually—the long train comes to a standstill, the engine panting and quivering like a live thing and sending out great volumes of dense smoke. They are saved! The lantern falls from her numb hand, and she sinks down on the track, shivering and trembling all over. There is a knock about her in an instant asking questions that she is too exhausted to reply to, but among all the strange faces she sees one familiar one that sends the blood to her white face and the light to her eyes. She holds out her hand with a little faint cry, and it is clasped in both of Jack's warm ones and held close to his heart. Then she turns to the conductor, who is standing impatiently beside her. 'The bridge is gone' she says. The words came with difficulty through her white cold lips. 'I—I, the supposed heiress—am poor, even poorer than he is, will be come to me—then? 'When they all know what had occurred what a cheer is raised for her. Jack leads her into the station and brings the best chair he can find in the office and seats her before the glowing fire—her own Jack! And she saved his life! A great throbbing of exultation goes through her as she sees him standing there, so strong and tall and handsome. Ah, now she knows how a society girl can love! 'She is almost dead with cold, but she smiles faintly at him and then the white lids close, but not before she knows Lenn is beside her and has her hands in his and is bending over her his young face white and anxious, and so, between the two men who love her, she gains consciousness a little and receives the heartfelt thanks of all the passengers. Jack and Lenn have shaken hands cordially and Lenn, with a horrible ache in his heart, has gone away and left them together. He knows that is the man that Beth loves, but he bears it bravely. Beth is happy and he tries to be glad for her sake. Jack has her hands in his and is looking into the sweet eyes. 'You have saved my life,' he says, and the gay voice is very grave now. 'Are you going to make me wish that you had not? I had heard of your aunt's death, and my heart ached for you, but I dared not come near you. I waited to hear of your marriage to Mr. Chester, but I did not. Ah! Beth, brave little girl, to face poverty when you could have commanded millions by a single little word. 'It was for you, Jack,' she says in a low voice. 'I loved you—could I swear to love another? Aunt tried very hard to persuade me to accept Mr. Chester. Poor aunt! she sighs, and the shadowed eyes brighten with a smile. 'I have you, Jack,' she says. 'You will never leave me again,' softly, 'will you?' 'No, sweetheart, he says, 'never again.'—Waverly Magazine.

Seven Years Suffering. GENTLEMEN,—I have suffered very much from inflammatory rheumatism, which through wrong treatment left ugly gnarling scars on my hands and feet. With these I suffered for seven years, during which time I had neither sleep nor stopping on. I commenced using B. B. R. externally and internally, using the pills also, and I can say now that the scars are entirely cured, and have been for some time. I believe the bitters were the means of saving my life.

Miramichi Advance. Beginning with the issue of November 6th, 1890, when the ADVANCE entered upon its Seventeenth Year of Publication! The publisher made an important change in the terms on which the paper is furnished to Subscribers. These include

1st. Strict adherence to the system of cash in advance for all subscriptions. 2nd. The reduction of the price of the paper to

One Dollar a Year! It is to be particularly understood that all outstanding subscription accounts due after November 6th, 1890, are to be settled on the old terms, viz, $2 per year, the advertised circulation rate.

I have made special arrangements with the WEEKLY TELEGRAPH OF ST JOHN AND THE FAMILY HERALD AND WEEKLY STAR of Montreal by which I will furnish either of those papers and the

"ADVANCE" TOGETHER AT

One Dollar and Sixty Cents a Year! I have made the foregoing changes in the business of the ADVANCE for two reasons.

The first is because many patrons who have been given credit, have abused the privilege to such an extent as to make the business of publishing the paper a non-paying one, and it is necessary, in my own interest and that of those who do pay, that I should no longer continue to furnish the ADVANCE to those non-paying subscribers. The second reason is that I wish to meet the competition of the city weeklies, which are made up from the type of the dailies and, therefore, cost little for production in comparison with a local paper like the ADVANCE, the type of which must be set up especially for it.

Having published the ADVANCE for sixteen years, and endeavored to make it a creditable representative of Miramichi and North Shore enterprises—a paper which may be taken into any household without fear that it has catered to sensationalism at the sacrifice of that cleanliness of matter, which is too often neglected by the press of the day—I have reason to hope the foregoing announcement will meet with general approval and be the means of largely increasing the circulation and influence of the paper.
