The car has been recently tested and adopted by a cab company in Paris, and has been introduced and is largely used in England, where it is manufactured under the British patent by the Petrol Motor Syndicate of London, England. BRIGHAM YOUNG'S GRANDSON.

New York, Oct. 18.—Eugene Young, a grandson of Brigham Young, deceased 30 days, at a dinner of the Quill Club last night. "I wish," said he, "to see congress elect B. H. Roberts, because in him is represented the defiant spirit of Mormonism which has always held itself above the laws of our nations."

WAS CLEANING HIS GUN.

Essex, Oct. 18.—Thomas Hollinsworth, who lives near New Canaan, received terrible and probably fatal injuries by the discharge of a gun yesterday. He was cleaning a shotgun when it went off, the full charge entering his abdomen, tearing away the liver, the right lung and three ribs. His right hand was also shot off by the same discharge. There is little hope of his recovery. Mr. Hollinsworth is a prominent farmer in Colchester North.

Mr. J. J. Brady, of Strathroy, and Miss Mary Brady, daughter of Mr. James Brady, of Strathroy, were quietly married at the Church of the Holy Angels, St. Thomas, by Rev. Father Bayard this (Wednesday) morning.

An Interesting Case.

Mr. W. G. Phyllis, proprietor Bodega Hotel, 36 Wellington street east, Toronto, says: "While living in Chicago I was in a terrible shape with itching and bleeding piles. I tried several of the best physicians and was burnt and tortured in various ways by their treatments to no avail, besides spending a mint of money to no purpose. Since coming to Toronto I learned of Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used but one box and have not been troubled with piles in any shape or form since."

THAT WHITE FLAG.
A letter was brought to the British pockets at Ladysmith by Boer cyclists bearing a white flag, signed by the Newcastle magistrate, and sent in by permission of Commandant-General Joubert, stating that the Britishers who remained in Newcastle are all well.

BOERS NEAR GLENCOE
Camp Glencoe, Natal, Oct. 18, 2 p.m.—Boer scouts have been sighted at Haring Spruit, seven miles from the British camp, and an engagement is imminent.

SEARCHED FOR GOLD.
Lorenzo Marquez, Oct. 18.—The last of the leading Randites and managers of the gold fields and of the Eckstein, Robinson and Champ D'Or mines, together with a body of engineers, arrived here today. They report that they were searched for gold at the frontier by the Boers.

ENLISTING IN TEXAS.
San Antonio, Texas, Oct. 18.—The Express today says: An agent for the British Government is enlisting British subjects eligible for duty in the British first reserves for the war in South Africa. He proposes to form a regiment of Scots, and the first detachment of 300 men will rendezvous here on Thursday, and leave via the Mallory Line from Georgetown on Friday for New York. The men are to receive $500 bounty. They sail from New York, and will be organized into a command on their arrival at Cape Town.

According to a special dispatch from Natal, the Zulus are arming with assegais. Chief Dinkulu says he is unable to restrain them. It is expected they will be joined by the Swazis. The Basutos are said to manifest an attitude hostile to the Boers, and they may neutralize a certain number of the Boer forces.

BATTLE IN PROGRESS.
Ladysmith, Oct. 18.—5:25 p.m.—The British forces came into contact with the enemy in the neighborhood of Acton Homes and Lesters Station about 16 miles out, this morning. The firing began at 10 o'clock. The British cavalry patrols have been in action at Acton Homes and Lesters Station since midday and the action is still in progress. A number of casualties have been reported. Supports are leaving the camp and expect to fight tomorrow.

ADVANCE OF THE BOERS.
The war office has issued the following statement: News has been received from Gen. Sir George Stewart White, the general commanding in Natal, that the anticipated movement of Boer forces across the Drakensburg, already reported from several quarters, was likely to be continued on Oct. 17, in which case some of them might be expected to arrive at Eosan Bank that night, and probably to come into contact with our cavalry between Ladysmith and the passes of the Drakensburg. On the north the Boer forces from Ingagane are advancing, accompanied by a few batteries of artillery. On the Buffalo River the Boers from Vryheid are moving toward Van's and Rork's drifts. Our cavalry remain in observation and report movements in the Orange Free State.

THROUGH BOER CHANNELS.
London, Oct. 18.—A special dispatch, dated Pretoria, at noon, yesterday, says: After a few shots were fired at Mafeking, the white flag was hoisted. A Boer party bearing a flag of truce was sent to inquire whether the town surrendered. No definite reply was received. The burgher messenger was detained for six hours and then released.

Pretoria, Oct. 18.—Delayed.—The Boers continue to close in upon Mafeking and to destroy the railway north and south of the town. Among the prisoners captured at Lobatse was the Rev. Adrian Hofmeyer. He has since been released.

Another special dispatch from Pretoria says: The Boer Krupp batteries are now covering the town. Military engineers can be observed laying a temporary railroad, which will probably be used in an armored train defense by the garrison.

CAPTURED A BRITISH CAMP.
Lorenzo Marquez, Oct. 18.—The Volkssten, the Boer official organ at Pretoria, gives the following account of the occupation of the British camp at Ramatlabama, just north of Mafeking: "The British camp at Ramatlabama has been captured and sacked by Gen. Cronje after severe fighting. Many burghers were killed or wounded. The British loss is not known."

Thus far everywhere attended the burghers, but all reports tend to confirm the belief that Col. Baden-Powell is holding his own, and no credit is given to the vague rumor that a flag of truce had been displayed.

Big Fight in Prospect.

A considerable engagement is anticipated in the vicinity of Ladysmith today. The combined advance of Boers and Free State troops in this direction has been executed with not inconsiderable skill, and shows a clear appreciation of the British position.

MANY MULES FOR THE ARMY.
Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 18.—Twenty-five carloads of mules for the Transvaal, purchased in this market by the English government within the last ten days, were started for New Orleans today. Another train will follow for the same point in a few days. An estimate on 500 tons of hay for use in the South African campaign was made yesterday.

New Orleans, Oct. 18.—Three more English transports have arrived here to take the shipment of mules to Cape Town for the use of the British army in the Transvaal. The shipments are being seriously interrupted by the Texas quarantine.

The Montezuma will leave on Friday with 2,000 mules; the Corinthian will have 1,200 mules next week, and the Euronis about the same number on Nov. 1. Two other vessels are expected, which, it is thought, will carry all the mules needed by the British government for service in South Africa.

Ladysmith, Natal, Oct. 18.—An official note published here says: A Free State commando yesterday commenced actual hostilities. The Free State has thus taken upon itself the responsibility of beginning war, and cannot hereafter pose as an injured party.

The Ladysmith dispatches sent tonight, and the Camp Glencoe dispatch of today, refer to different Boer forces; the Camp Glencoe dispatch referring to the Boers who are invading from Laing's Nek, and the Ladysmith dispatches to the Free State forces, advancing through Van Reenans Pass to Besters Station, and the Free State forces invading over the Tintwa Pass to Acton Homes.

The Boers claim to have captured a British camp near Mafeking, and the Free State troops commenced the hostilities at Ladysmith.

Only Capt. Chamoline decided to accompany him, with some natives. On July 16 the Tirailleurs mutilated and shot Chamoline, Capt. Voulet fled, and on July 17, tried to join the expedition, but he was shot by a sentry. The Tirailleurs then rejoined the expedition in good order, and the expedition, myself commanding, continued the mission and punished the murderers of Capt. Casemajoux, whose body was recovered."

The commemorative service was held this morning in honor of the late Capt. Chamoline, at the Church of St. Claude. President Loubet and all the members of the cabinet were represented. Mme. Loubet was present.

Paris, Oct. 18.—President Loubet today signed the pardon for Emil Arton, who in November,

THE TWO SOUTH AFRICAN REPUBLICS.

The above map, which is a complete representation of the face of the two South African Republics, will enable readers to form an adequate idea of the extent of ground necessary to be covered by the British troops opposing the Boers, and of the physical features of the terrain which has again assumed so much interest in the eyes of politicians and soldiers. The map shows a country thirty-six times as large as the section of the Province of Quebec shown as a comparison. The map shows the positions which might be defended by the Boers along the line taken in Jameson's raid—the position between Newcastle and Volksrust, including the Majuba Hill, Laing's Nek, and the tunnel on the railway where the line enters Transvaal territory. It shows the entire railway system of the two republics, and from Delagoa Bay on Portuguese territory, with the lines projected and in course of construction. It also indicates the forts at Pretoria and Johannesburg, of which detailed information exists in this country outside of the intelligence department of the war office.

SOUDAN'S DEBT TO ENGLAND

The Horrors Which Kitchener's Guns Swept Away.

The Salvation of the Whole People—Evidence of Slatin and Neufeld.

After the first rejoicings in England over Lord Kitchener's victory at Omdurman there was the usual period of criticism, during which the peace-at-any-price party bewailed the wholesale slaughter of the dervishes and called the sirdar to account for the murder of the wounded. It was said that the English themselves acted like savages, and many a homily was preached on the brutalizing influence of war.

But people who had read Slatin Pasha's story of fire and sword in the Sudan must have felt little sympathy for the khalifa's followers or their English advocates, and Charles Neufeld's relation of his twelve years of servitude to the mahdists will confirm them in the belief that the march of civilization upon barbarism cannot proceed too rapidly. "Chains and Slavery at Omdurman" is the title of the work whose revelation of horrors seems well-nigh incredible.

Cruelty was the pastime of the dervishes, the sport of their daily life under a tyranny which kept all men trembling, whether they were mahdists or not. The favorite of today might become the victim of tomorrow if the jealous fears of the khalifa were aroused. For all those who had incurred his displeasure there was the prospect of torture and death.

Slatin tells of a common punishment which consisted in lopping off the arm on one side, the leg on the other, and leaving the mutilated sufferer to die. Neufeld supplements this with a story which rivals those of the black hole of Calcutta. In a cell less than thirty feet square from 250 to 280 prisoners were kept at night, not once only, but repeatedly throughout periods that extended over two weeks. He says: "Any prisoner who went down on such a night never got up again alive; his cries would not be heard above the pandemonium of clanking chains and bars, imprecations and cursings, and for any one to attempt to bend down to assist if he did not mean only meant his going under also. In the morning, when we were allowed to stream out, five and six bodies would be found on the ground with the life crushed and trampled out of them."

A vivid description of one night in particular helps to a more perfect realization of the scene. On that occasion one of the prisoners was Ibrahim Pasha Fazel, an old officer of Gordon's. He had been shackled like the rest, and between the pain and the stench of the place had swooned. As he lay on the ground four Sudanese sat upon his legs, and Neufeld determined to go to his rescue. A desperate fight then ensued, which resulted in his release, but more horrors followed.

"At midnight the doors of the cell were thrown open again and about 20 men each, wearing a shayba, were thrust into the place. (A shayba is a kind of yoke fastened to the neck and the extended arm in such a way that to move the arm throttles the wearer.) Practically there was no room for them, but they had to be driven by some means. To make room for the jailers resorted to their favorite device of throwing into the cell handfuls of blazing straw and grass, and at the same time laying about the heads and shoulders of the prisoners with their whips.

Prior to this experience Neufeld had been led out, as he supposed, to execution, but he was tortured instead with all the devilish ingenuity of the American Indians. Spears and swords were thrust into his side and he was given to understand that the final blow was to be delivered by one big fellow who kept making passes at him. But each time the fettered man was jerked back by the chain which bound him, to the great delight of the thousands who were watching the play.

Neufeld is a German. Slatin is an Austrian, but both glory in the advance of the British, which saved the former from captivity. They have seen and felt too much of Dervish cruelty to mourn with the English peace party over the fall of a detestable despotism. Neufeld goes so far as to defend openly the killing of wounded dervishes on the ground that this was the only way to prevent the treacherous murder even of those who went to succor them.

But whatever may be said of the debate on this point, there can be no doubt that there is an infinitely better

GREAT BRITAIN'S MILITARY RESERVES

Strength of Various Arms—Procedure in Calling Them Out.

A correspondent is anxious to know the number of men at present serving in the army and navy reserves, circumstances in which they can be called out and the mode of procedure. On Jan. 1 last the army reserve, composed of regular soldiers, consisted of nearly 79,000 men, of whom 45,000 were under 35 years of age, 29,000 were between the ages of 35 and 40, and 4,000 between 40 and 45. The cavalry reserve consists of 2,800 men, the Royal Artillery of 10,500, the Royal Engineers of 3,000, the Foot Guards of 3,300, the Infantry Corps of 2,600, and the remainder are departmental. On Jan. 1 last the militia reserve consisted of 30,000 men, composed of the pick of the militia. They are a fine body of men, and would be a welcome addition to any regular regiment.

The military forces of the country may be divided into three categories—the first line, the second line and the third line. The first line is available for service in all quarters of the globe, and is composed of the regular army, the army reserve and the militia reserve; the two latter are utilized to bring the regular forces to a war footing, and can be called out by "proclamation" in case of imminent national danger and of great emergency, and are liable to serve anywhere at home and abroad. The second line is composed of the militia, and is available for home defense and for garrisoning foreign stations. The militia may be embodied by proclamation under the same circumstances as the army and militia reserves can be called out, i. e., in case of imminent national danger and great emergency. It is a thoroughly reliable force, has been embodied on seven different occasions, and has never failed the country. The third line is composed of the yeomanry and volunteers, and would only be called upon as a last resource. It is available only for home defense, and for the most part can only be called out when the United Kingdom itself is in danger of attack.

The yeomanry can be called out whenever the militia is embodied, but cannot be employed outside of Great Britain. It has in the past been called out for short periods in cases of riot and insurrection at home, and served with credit; but in recent years it has sadly diminished in numbers, while its efficiency is doubted. Neither the yeomanry nor volunteers can be employed in defense of Ireland, even should that part of the United Kingdom be invaded, although they could be employed on garrison duty in Great Britain in such a case. The present volunteer force has never yet been called upon nor put to the test; but there is no reason to think that it would serve otherwise than with credit.

The procedure in regard to calling out the reserves is as follows: When, in the opinion of the war office, mobilization appears imminent, general officers commanding at home and abroad would be duly warned to give them time to carry out any preliminary arrangements necessary. Before a mobilization can take place, the cabinet will, of course, have arrived at a decision that the military forces of the country should be placed on a war footing—that, in fact, a situation has arisen which may be termed one of "imminent national danger and of great emergency." The cabinet will also have decided whether the circumstances are such as to demand the calling out of the whole or only a part of the reserves. Her majesty in council can then, by proclamation, the occasion being first communicated to parliament, if sitting, or declared in council and notified by proclamation if parliament is not sitting, order the army reserve and militia reserve, or either, to be called out for permanent service. The general and other officers concerned will then arrange for the proclamation to be posted in all public places. A railway and passage warrant is then dispatched to each reservist, with notice to join; he will either, if pronounced physically fit, be drafted to his battalion to complete it to war strength, or remain at the depot for further disposal. It will be seen by these explanations, how foreign to their conditions of service are those cheap offers of embodiment on the part of certain volunteer corps, and how remote is the possibility of their being accepted.—London Globe.

AQUATIC.

THE SHAMROCK REPAIRED.
New York, Oct. 18.—The remeasuring of the Shamrock began this morning at Erie Basin, and 3,380 pounds of lead ballast were put on board the yacht during the night. This is said to have changed her waterline a few inches. The Shamrock had her new topmast fitted, but housed. Captain Wringle said the Shamrock would be ready for the race tomorrow. The yacht was reanchored inside Sandy Hook. The remeasuring resulted as follows: Waterline, 88 95-100; racing length, 102 565-1,000 feet. Under this measurement in the future races the Shamrock will be obliged to allow the Columbia 16 seconds.

ENGLISH OPINION.

The London afternoon papers illustrate the sportsmanlike view taken by all sections of the English press of the Columbia's victory yesterday. The St. James' Gazette says: "Our regret for the Shamrock's second defeat must be outweighed by our satisfaction at the fact that the accident was provided against beforehand, and that therefore no opportunity for a misunderstanding could exist on this occasion. The Shamrock's gear reached the crackling point first, and the fact that Columbia outsailed her with the same breeze shows that the American boat is the better, which it is just the object of these matches to settle one way or the other." The Pall Mall Gazette says: "This is a competition between constructors as well as sailors, and the American victory was perfectly fair and decisive."

ALBERT ST. - TORONTO.
Night of a joke. Muggsy McGraw kicked on a decision and made his team quit playing. Under the rules his club is fined $1,000, and the fine goes to the other club. As both the Baltimore and Brooklyn clubs belong to the same parties, this is very simple. Ned Hanlon, as a director of the Baltimore club, can pay the fine of $1,000 to Ned Hanlon, manager of the Brooklyn club, and there you are. He can settle the whole thing by changing $1,000 from his right hand to his left hand pocket. And still there are some people who wonder that there is any kick about syndicate ball.

Buck Freeman made a gallant try for an additional home run in Saturday's game. Three men were bases when Buck came to the bat, and he drove a long fly into right center. Foster got under it after a long run, notwithstanding he was playing out for the slugger, and held the ball. The men on bases all moved up a base, showing how far out the ball was driven.

AMUSEMENTS

"A GUILTY MOTHER."
Matinee and night today, the Grand will present Mr. Henry Myers' elaborate production, "A Guilty Mother."

This drama was first produced in England, and was successfully presented during a protracted run at nearly all of the theatres in many ways. The drama is a remarkable one, and has made a rare record on both sides of the Atlantic. The stage action develops a complication of plots, counter-plots and denouements of intense romance, the most sensational order, fully worthy of its reputation and its astounding financial success. The entire play is essentially true to human nature, and rendered extremely realistic by the combination of an excellent company, and an extraordinary amount of elaborate scenery. It is not only exciting in its rapid action and climaxes, but it is also a work of literature, both clever and convincing. As in all dramas, it is replete with pathos and thrilling adventures, and so true to life that nothing in it dispels the sense of reality. The eye is fascinated by the wealth of superb scenery, and the mind and imagination by the intensely sensitive romance of the plot. The costumes worn by the ladies are from Reine, of Paris, and are said to be very gorgeous.

"THE BRIDE-ELECT."
One of the important operatic events of the season will be the premier presentation here tomorrow night of Sousa's "The Bride-Elect," which comes to the Grand with the original company. Mr. Sousa has accomplished a marvelous work in this opera, as in addition to its wealth of beautiful musical features, Mr. Sousa has himself evolved a clever comic opera story, to which he has fitted a libretto with capital dialogue and charming lyrics. "The Bride-Elect" has been crowding the theaters everywhere to the doors. It has three marches, the greatest of which is known as "The Bride-Elect" march. Another is the justly celebrated "Unchain the Dogs of War," and his recent success, "Hands Across the Sea." The opera will be given by the great company, including a splendid chorus. Not the least interesting feature of the production is the fact that, at least, is the matter of the gorgeous costumes to be worn by the leading women in the cast. The management has been lavish in the extreme in providing for the growing and elaborate costumes of good taste and richness.

ESTABLISHED BY JOHN CAMERON IN 1883.

Managing Director and Editor, John Cameron

London, Thursday, Oct. 19.

The New Cabinet.

The retirement of Hon. A. S. Hardy, after 25 years of continuous public service, is an event of national consequence. He has given the best years of his life to his native Province, and regret at his withdrawal is intensified by the fact that ill-health has compelled the step. Mr. Hardy, as he intimates in his valedictory, leaves of his poorer in worldly possessions than when he entered it. That is a common fate of Canadian public men, and is of little concern to one like Mr. Hardy, who is rich in his public record. His reward is the gratitude of his fellow countrymen and the consciousness of duty well and faithfully performed. His memorial is the statute book of Ontario, in which his hand has written many of the most important chapters. Mr. Hardy has been not only a great parliamentarian, ready and forceful in debate, but still better, a practical legislator, a law-maker, with the constructive mind of the true statesman. His place in Canadian history is secure.

Hon. G. W. Ross needs no credentials to his party or to the Province. He has been conspicuous in the public eye since the first entered the House of Commons in 1872, as member for West Middlesex. He was one of the few Liberals who escaped defeat in the catastrophe of 1873. In 1882 he was again re-elected, and in 1883 transferred his services to the Ontario Legislature, as Minister of Education, a post which he has filled for sixteen years with a supreme ability attested by the magnificent school system of this Province. Mr. Ross is above all things progressive in his ideas, and has a genius for hard work and an indomitable pluck, which has been demonstrated in many a hard-fought campaign. His effectiveness is greatly increased by his gifts of oratory which make him unrivalled on the platform. In the rearrangement of his cabinet, the new Premier wisely proposes to free himself, as far as possible, from onerous duties of a departmental character. This will give him more time to move among the people, and keep in touch with public opinion.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., of Peterboro, the new member of the cabinet, is a successful journalist, immensely popular in his own riding, which returned him by a thousand majority at the last election. He is a man of remarkable vigor and enterprise, with a great deal of initiative. It is probable he will be given the administration of Crown Lands, for which he is peculiarly fitted. He has always taken a deep interest in Northern Ontario, and has an enthusiastic faith in its resources, so that we may look for an aggressive policy in developing the forest and mineral wealth of the Province.

The new cabinet will doubtless be accorded a fair trial by the Province, and under the capable leadership of Mr. Ross, it will sustain the brilliant record of its antecedents.

Injurious Yellow Campaigns.

It may be the object of the campaign of race and creed opened up so viciously by a number of yellow newspapers and yellow speakers is not unconnected with desire to divert attention from the great national prosperity which has been coincident with the present Dominion Administration. Canada is a country of marvelous natural resources, and the progress of the Dominion during the next ten or twenty years will be the wonder of the world, if we attend strictly to the business, and quietly yet firmly put down all attempts for unworthy purposes to stir up division in our composite population. In the following from the Toronto Globe there is a heap of common sense:

"One comes out of the presence of such vociferous and aggressive Americanism as was witnessed at Chicago, and turns with something like despair to the petty bickerings and village squabbles of Canadian politics. Surely we can find higher aims and larger issues for our people. We are at last on the highway to nationhood. There was hope that racial and religious quarrels had been put behind us for ever. But again the sky is overcast and many of our journals and politicians are seeking local popularity and party success through the mischievous and dangerous incitement of racial passions. We have had three years of peace, and these have been the most fruitful and the most splendid years of all our history. They who would disturb this happy condition and revive the miserable feuds and petty quarrels of darker days take a great responsibility, and must answer for it to the Canadian people. If we keep our feet in the true paths of progress we shall in ten years have ten or twelve millions of people in this country; we shall have a numerous commercial and industrial population in Ontario and Quebec; we shall have great mining communities in the east, in Northwestern Ontario and in the Pacific Province; we shall have another great through railway in the west; we shall have a numerous and prosperous population in the rich Saskatchewan country, and shall have settlements spreading away out into the Peace River Territories; we shall have perfected our channels of water transportation, and be carrying an enormous volume of the products of the west over Canadian routes, and sending them out to the ultimate markets from Canadian ports; and, best of all, we shall have won the right to speak on more equal terms with our neighbors and have vastly enhanced our moral and political power on this continent. For this great task we need all our energies, we need all our enthusiasm, we need a united people, so full of their mission and so determined in their purpose that they will see only the best in one another, and will enthusiastically absorb and assimilate the streams of immigrants that will come to us from across the border and from over the seas. Give us more hope, give us more faith, give us more tolerance, give us a sterner and more aggressive patriotism, and let us have done once and for all with domestic feuds that divide and impede, that make us contemptible at home and impotent abroad."

The Best Colonizer.

Poultny Bigelow, the American author and traveler, told the Germans and the Americans some unpalatable truths at the Geological Congress in Berlin this month. The American colonial experiment, with Cuba and the Philippines, he described as "likely to be costly on account of inexperience and conceit." Having visited both the German settlement of Kiaochow, in China, and the British settlement of Wei-Hai-Wei, in China, he found that the progress of the English settlement had been much more rapid and satisfactory, in spite of the longer time the Germans had been at work and the official efforts which had been made to develop Kiaochow. The military and official elements were, according to the lecturer, much too predominant in German settlements. He supported this contention by referring to the prosperity of Hong-Kong, and to the harmony which prevailed there between the military and the merchant classes. In the club at Hong-Kong, for example, an officer was often proposed for membership by a civilian; in a German colony that would be inconceivable. At the conclusion of his paper Mr. Bigelow advised the governments of colonial empires "not to be over-anxious to lead the way in colonial matters." They ought rather to allow the colonists the greatest possible freedom in their development, only granting them protection when it was much needed.

The area of the Orange Free State is 48,328 square miles. The population is 207,503, of whom only 77,116 are whites. The Orange Free State is essentially a pastoral country. The President is Judge Steyn, who was elected in February, 1896, for a period of five years. Legislative power is vested in the Volksraad, which consists of 58 members. The public revenue amounts to £402,223. There is no standing army in either republic, but all burghers capable of bearing arms may be called out for service. The process by which they are called out is known as commanding, and the officers entrusted with this duty are called field cornets. The field cornet is responsible for the organization and supplies required for the force.

What Others Say.

Banished "The Recessional."

[Chicago Times-Herald.]

Superintendent Andrews takes precious good pains "Let Me Forget" that common sense is not his most distinguishing attribute. His objection to Kipling's "Recessional" being sung in the public schools because "it is strongly theistic" is about as far fetched as the criticism of a same man can be.

Having rejected the "Recessional," we would advise Dr. Andrews to start a crusade against the singing of "America" in the public schools, for why should sensitive atheistic ears be outraged with such lines as these:

"Our fathers' God, to Thee,
Author of Liberty,
To Thee I sing:
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by Thy might,
Great God, our King."

Having disposed of our national hymn, Dr. Andrews might well turn his attention to Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic." How harshly must such lines as these grate upon the ears of the children of an atheist:

"In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me;
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men holy,
While God is marching on."

Having suppressed all hymns and songs that refer to the deity, Dr. Andrews might turn his attention to the Declaration of Independence, Washington's farewell address, and Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, which all are strongly theistic as the "Recessional" by the time Dr. Andrews has eradicated all references to God from the poetry and prose sung or read in the public schools, it would not be surprising if he found himself also eradicated.

The Growth of English.

[Chicago Tribune.]

In the French schools a student may study English or German as parents direct. As many as 90 per cent elect German. In the Polytechnique and St. Cyr schools, where army officers are trained, German is required. In the naval school the cadets must learn English. These requirements are based on the fact that France is more likely to fight Germany on land and England on water, and hence German is the most useful foreign tongue for an army officer and English for the naval commander. But in the schools where children are trained for business life these considerations do not carry weight.

The tendency to elect German rather than English is combated by many French scholars, one of whom gives expression to his ideas in La Science Sociale. He declares that the only consideration that should guide parents in which language will be of most use. Admitting this, he contends that English should be chosen, because it is the language of commerce. At the beginning of the nineteenth century French, German, Spanish and Russian each had wider currency than English, but at present

English is far in the lead, the proportion in the whole having increased from 12½ to 27½ per cent. German today is spoken by 18½ per cent—the same proportion as in 1821. All point to the continued growth of the English language, and as it is today the language of commerce in Asia and Africa it is the one that is most useful for a business man.

Preachers' Study and Freshness.

[London Spectator.]

The Archbishop of Canterbury gave a characteristically manly address at a public meeting held in Birmingham town hall, in connection with the Worcester Diocesan Conference. With great earnestness and conviction he challenged the popular notion that it was not necessary for a clergyman to be a learned man. Possibly he laid too much stress upon the knowledge of the languages in which the Bible is written, but his plea for general culture was excellent. He had known, he said, men who had neglected study, and who began by being very effective preachers, but who ended by being failures, as they had exhausted their knowledge and experience. "As an old schoolmaster," he said, "that what was wanted in a teacher was knowledge, accuracy and fulness of knowledge, and above everything else, freshness. No man could go on long teaching who had ceased to be a student." They did not want men in the church who had poured out all that was within them, and who had nothing to say that was not quite stale and beaten. He said that the Archbishop went on to say that he sometimes felt that it would be a good thing "if they could examine ministers to see whether they retained the knowledge and freshness that was necessary, but it would not be a very easy thing to do, and they had not made any provision for it." It is not the conventional thing to say that a man can only keep his freshness of mind by study, but it is nevertheless absolutely true.

THE TEMPORARY BOUNDARY LINE

That Will Probably Separate Alaska From Canada.

New York, Oct. 18.—The proposal of establishing a temporary boundary line between Canada and Alaska, will, the Herald's Washington correspondent says, be signed today or Thursday in Washington. The provisional line, the correspondent says, does not differ from that already described as connecting the Canadian customs houses on the White and Chukot Passes, and proceeding thence to a mountain peak a mile and a half northwest of the Indian village of Kiaman. Mr. Hay has not granted the Canadian claim to a port on the Lynn Canal. In fact, the temporary boundary pushes the Canadian authority even beyond the Haida Gwaii Islands, for the present with the establishment of a modus vivendi, the authorities propose to move slowly in the matter of effecting the permanent arrangement, and before agreeing to any important concessions they will consult the temper of the senate.

As the modus vivendi has no time limit there need be no haste in the negotiations, and the Canadian correspondent arrangement. It is believed that the British Government, after the modus vivendi is signed, will push the negotiations which will allow warehouse privileges to Canadians and the transportation of their goods in bond over American territory. The immediate effect of the temporary settlement of the Alaskan boundary question will be that a meeting of the joint commission will occur probably next month. It is not understood that the conference will deal with the Alaskan boundary question, the negotiations for the permanent settlement of the dispute being left to the two governments.

HUSBAND AND WIFE CREMATED.

Green Lake, Wis., Oct. 18.—The Terrace Beach casino, a large hotel owned by W. A. Mayer, burned to the ground last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Mayer, parents of Mrs. Mayer, who occupied a room above the dining hall, were burned to death. Mr. Jenks was lying very ill in bed, and not expected to live. Mrs. Jenks made an heroic attempt to save her husband, but before she could rescue him the flames cut off all escape, and the aged couple died together.

CRITICAL SITUATION IN VENEZUELA.

Caracas, Venezuela, Oct. 18.—Senhor Marcos, the peace-loving doctor, an ultimatum from the insurgent commander, Gen. Cipriano Castro, returned to Caracas today from Valencia, to meet President Andrade, who is expected to give an answer in the course of the day.

ECZEMA ON NOSE

For 9 Years Cured by CUTICURA In a Short Time After Five Doctors Failed.

I have suffered for nine years with sores in my nose. I consulted five doctors, and he told me it was never so bad that would soon pass away. I had four doctors treat me for nose trouble, but without seeming to do any good. My trouble was so bad my husband told me I should go to N. Y. City and get treated. The best doctor in the city for nose, eye, and throat told me I had eczema in the worst form, and I must stay and get treated three times a week. I did not seem to get any relief, so my husband sent for me to come home. While I was home I decided to try CUTICURA REMEDY. I got CUTICURA SOAP, CUTICURA (ointment), and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, and was surprised to find it was but a short time when my nose was all well. Mrs. C. S. VAN FOSTRAND, April 23, 1898. Point o' Woods, Bay Shore, L. I.

course of the day. President Andrade cannot do otherwise than accept the conditions imposed by Gen. Castro, as he is virtually abandoned by all his supporters. LARNED VS. MARCONI System of Wireless Telegraphy the Subject of a Lawsuit.

New York, Oct. 18.—Lymman C. Larned, of Boston, brought suit in the United States circuit, against Guglielmo Marconi, to restrain him and his agents from using the system of wireless telegraphy which Larned claims is an infringement of a patent now controlled by him.

The plaintiff in his complaint alleges that the original inventor of this system of telegraphing was Amos Emerson Dolbear, and a patent for the system invented by Dolbear was issued on the 6th of October, 1888, to the Dolbear Electric Telephone Company, which has acquired all rights to use the system. These rights were transferred to Larned on the 22nd of July last. Larned alleges that the means described in the patent under which Marconi purports to carry on his system, cannot be used for such work, and are not adapted for commercial use. Larned asks damages in the sum of $100,000 and for an injunction restraining Marconi from using the alleged infringing system of telegraphy pending the termination of the suit.

The Strange Metamorphosis.

The other side, too, looked unhappy. Feeling themselves in a position of extreme delicacy and embarrassment. For, if they played their best, they ran some risk of offending the doctor, or, what was worse, driving him over into their ranks; while, if, on the other hand, they allowed themselves to be too easily worsted, they might be suspected of sulkenness and temper-ness which he was very ready to discover and resent.

Dr. Grimestone, for his part, enjoyed the exercise, and had no idea that he was not a thoroughly welcome and valued playmate. But though it was pleasant to outsiders to see a school-master permitting himself to share in the recreation of his pupils, it must be owned that to the latter the advantages of the arrangement seemed something more than dubious.

Mr. Buitude, being on the side adopted by the doctor, found too soon that he was expected to play his part. More than ever anxious now to conclude, he did his very best to conquer his natural repugnance and not appear alarmed as the ball came in his way; but, although driving a boating expression he "sugared" with some adroitness, he was promptly found out, for his son had been a dashing and plucky player.

It was bitter for him to run meekly about while scathing sarcasms and comments on his want of courage were being hurled at his head. It shattered the scant remains of his self-respect, but he dared not protest or say a single word to open the doctor's eyes to the injustice he was doing him.

He was unpleasantly reminded, too, of the disfavor he had acquired among his companions, by some one or other of them running up to him every moment when the doctor's attention was called elsewhere, and starting him, nerves by a sly look or pinch, or an abusive epithet hissed viciously into his ears—Chawner being especially industrious in this respect.

And in this unsatisfactory way the afternoon dragged along until the dusk gathered and the lamps were lighted, and it became too dark to see goal-posts or ball.

By the time play was stopped and the school reformed for the march home, Mr. Buitude felt that he was glad even to get back to labor as a relief from such a form of enjoyment. It was perhaps the most miserable afternoon he had ever spent in his whole easy-going life. In the course of it he had passed from brightest hope to utter despair; and now nothing remained to him but to convince the doctor, which he felt quite unequal to do, or to make his escape without money—which would inevitably end in a recapture.

May no one who reads this ever be placed upon the horns of such a dilemma!

CHAPTER IX.

If it were not that it was so absolutely essential to the interest of this story, I think I should almost prefer to draw a veil over the sufferings of Mr. Buitude during the rest of that unhappy week at Clifton House; but it would only be false delicacy to do so.

Things went worse and worse with him. The real Dick, in his most objectionable moods, could never have contrived to render himself one-quarter so disliked and suspected as his substitute was by the whole school—master and boys.

It was in a great measure his own fault, too; for to an ordinary boy the life there would not have had any intolerable hardships, if it held out no exceptional attractions. But he would not accommodate himself to circumstances, and try, during his enforced stay, to get as much instruction and enjoyment as possible out of his new life.

Perhaps, in his position, it would be too much to expect such a thing, and, at all events, it never even occurred to him to attempt it. He consumed himself with inward raging and chafing at his hard lot, and his utter powerlessness to break the spell which bound him.

Sometimes, indeed, he would resolve to bear it no longer, and would start up impulsively to impart his misfortunes to someone in minor authority—not the doctor, he had given that; but in resigned despair long since. But, as surely as he found himself coming to the point, the words would stick fast in his throat, and he was only too thankful to get away, with his tale untold, on any frivolous pretext that first suggested itself.

This, of course, brought him into suspicion, for such conduct had the appearance of a systematic course of practical joking, and even the most impartial teachers will sometimes form an unfavorable opinion of a particular boy on rather slender grounds, and then find themselves confirmed in it in his most insignificant actions.

As for the school generally, his scowls and his sulkenness, his deficiency in the daring and impudence that had warmed their hearts toward Dick, and, above all, his strange knack of getting into trouble—for he seldom received what he considered an indignity without making a formal complaint—all this brought him a hearty dislike and contempt as, perhaps, the most unsympathetic boy ever earned since boarding-schools were first invented.

The only boy who still seemed to retain a secret tenderness for him as the Dick he had once looked up to and admired, was Jolland, who persisted in believing, in spite of his belief, that this apparent change of demeanor was a perverted kind of joke on Buitude's part, which he would condescend to explain some day when it had gone far enough, and he wore and annoyed Paul beyond endurance by perpetually urging him to abandon his ill-judged experiment and discover the point of the joke.

But for Jolland's help, which he persevered in giving in spite of the opposition and unpopularity it brought upon himself, Mr. Buitude would have found it impossible to make any pretense of performing the tasks required of him. He found himself required, as a matter of course, to have a certain familiarity with Greek paradigms and German conversation scraps, propositions in Euclid and Latin gerunds, of all which, having had a strict commercial education in his young days, he had not so much as heard before his metamorphosis. But by carefully copying Jolland's exercises, and introducing enough mistakes of his own to supply the necessary local color, he was able to escape to a great degree the discovery of his blank ignorance on all these subjects—an ignorance which would certainly have been put down as mere idleness and obstinacy.

But it will be readily believed that he lived in constant fear of such discovery, and, as it was, his dependence on a little scamp like his son's friend was a sore humiliation to one who had naturally supposed hitherto that any knowledge he had not happened to acquire could only be meretricious and useless.

He led a nightmare sort of existence for some days, until something happened which roused him from his state of passive misery into one more active attempt at protest.

It was Saturday morning, and he had come down to breakfast, after being knocked about as usual in the dormitory over night, with a dull, heavy, how long this horrible state of things could possibly be going to last, when he saw on his plate a letter with the Paddington postmark, addressed in a familiar hand—his daughter Barbara's. For an instant his hopes rose high. Surely the impostor had been found out at last, and the envelope would contain an urgent invitation to him to come back and resume his rights—an invitation which he might show to the doctor as his best apology.

But when he looked at the address, which was "Master Richard Buitude," he felt a misgiving. It was unlikely that Barbara would address him thus if she knew the truth; he hesitated before tearing it open.

Then he tried to persuade himself that of course she would have the sense to keep up appearances for his own sake on the outside of the letter, and he compelled himself to open the envelope with fingers that trembled nervously.

REGARDING THE RAILWAYS

Convention of General Agents—Increased Earnings of the Grand Trunk.

At today's session of the general agents' convention, at Boston, George H. Daniels, of the New York Central road was elected president.

The traffic returns of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the week ended Oct. 14, 1899, amounted to $896,000, as compared with $807,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

A Port Huron telegram says: Hitherto but one trainmaster has been between the work of the Chicago and Grand Trunk road between here and Chicago, but the increased traffic has necessitated a division of duties. Accordingly, John Williams, a former trainmaster, has been assigned to the route between Battle Creek and Chicago, and C. S. Cunningham, formerly of the London yards, has been assigned to the trainmaster's duties between here and Battle Creek. A double track between this point and Chicago will be built. Surveyors are at work laying stakes for the new track, which will increase the speed and safety with delays and the chances of collisions.

Lucius Tuttle, of Boston, the head of the Boston and Maine system, was today chosen president of the Maine Central Railroad, to succeed Franklin A. Wilson, of Bangor, Me.

The statement that the bubonic plague is raging at Santos is officially confirmed.

Hans Andersen has a story of a buffalo that scorned the snow flakes. "Pouf," he snorted, "I can blow you away with a breath, which you do to me?" But the flakes kept falling, falling, until the buffalo was almost buried, and the hunter slipped along the snow crust and made him an easy prey. There's another hunter who hunts to kill, who makes many a man his victim because of a folly like that of the buffalo in Andersen's fable. It's a little thing to have that uneasy feeling in the stomach after eating. Sour risings and belching are also reckoned little things. Yet these little things are among the minor marks of a disordered condition of the stomach and organs of nutrition and digestion. Of themselves they may not kill, but if despised they may open a pathway to some deadly disease.

Don't neglect the first symptoms of indigestion or "stomach trouble." The timely use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery may avert a more serious danger. It will surely cure any disease of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, excepting cancer.

Mr. Ned Nelson, the celebrated Irish comedian and mimic of 37 Bowden Street, Camden, N.J., writes: "We fulfilled an engagement of twelve weeks and the constant traveling gave me a bad touch of that dreaded disease called dyspepsia. I had tried everything possible to cure it, till last week, while playing at B. F. Keith's Bijou Theater, Philadelphia, in the Nelson Trio, a professional friend of mine advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I tried it, and, thank God, with good result."

SUPPLEMENTARY ARMY ESTIMATE

O. Britain—85,000 More Men and an Additional $50,000,000.

In Consequence of the Situation in South Africa—Total Estimate $158,089,000—Mr. Harcourt Scores Chamberlain.

London, Oct. 18.—A supplementary army estimate has been issued, asking the House of Commons to vote an additional 85,000 men and £10,000,000, in consequence of the situation in South Africa. It is explained that the 85,000 men represent the probable maximum excess beyond the establishments fixed for the year 1899-1900, and in consequence of the calling out of the reserves and of the temporary transfer of troops from the Indian to the British establishments. With the additional £10,000,000, the total army estimates are £39,617,200.

The house agreed to consider the royal message tomorrow. A motion by Mr. Balfour, appropriating the entire special session for government business was carried by 279 votes against 48.

The debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne was then resumed. Mr. F. J. St. John (Liberal), member for Burnley, moved an amendment strongly disapproving the conduct of the negotiations with the Transvaal. He attacked the policy of the secretary of state for war and demanded that the latter should clear himself of the charge of complicity in the Transvaal raid.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes and the South Africa League, Mr. Stanhope said: "The British high commissioner in South Africa (Sir Alfred Milner) is anxious to quit his position. A diplomatist in his position, while acquitting the government as a whole of any connection with these doubtful transactions, and believing that the course adopted by the government is the only one, should end this crisis, and that they have worked for this consummation during the last year."

Mr. Samuel Thomas Evans (Liberal), member for the middle division of Glamorganshire.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt (Liberal), member for West Monmouthshire, and former official leader of the Liberal party, following several minor speeches for and against the government, said it was the duty of the government to support the government in maintaining the integrity of the dominions of the Queen, but that they had a right to speak of the policy of the government in an altogether different tone. He went on to justify the opposition criticism of the conduct of the negotiations prior to the receipt of the ultimatum, declaring like belief that there were salient transactions in the negotiations which did not tend to a peaceful solution. "Although I do not charge the government," said Sir William, "with deliberately avoiding a peaceful solution, in my opinion there is no justification for saying that there has been criminal obstinacy on the part of the Transvaal. Step by step, it will be found, on wise advice from the Orange Free State and the government of Cape Colony, the Transvaal (until the door was shut) yielded, and was continuing to yield to our demands. He then proceeded to contrast Mr. Chamberlain's previous attitude, and when the negotiations had reached a most promising point, could not be considered favorable to a peaceful settlement. Discussing the cause of the final breach, Sir William said: "On Sept. 6 the Transvaal sent a dispatch pressing for the appointment of a joint commission to consider their offer of a compromise. That offer was dropped. Everybody is now convinced that suzerainty was dropped in 1894. (Loud ministerial protests.) At any successive secretaries of state were of that opinion."

Mr. Chamberlain emphatically dissented.

Sir William, resuming, went on to remark that suzerainty was only formally announced to President Kruger by Mr. Chamberlain in 1898. He commented upon the extraordinary delay in sending the final proposals of Great Britain to the Transvaal, and said, "has a right to know what the proposals of the government are. The government has no right to involve the nation in a war in the dark. I cannot but think that a good deal of the Orange Free State was rejected, and I think the negotiations might have been conducted differently with a different issue. I dissociate myself altogether from the government of the kind for the measures that have led to this war, although I am prepared to support the government in the unhappy conflict in which we are engaged."

The house then adjourned.

THE ALASKAN MODUS VIVENDI

Answer of the United States to Britain's Last Proposal.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—Secretary Hay had a conference today with Mr. Tower, the Charge of the British Embassy here relative to the Alaskan modus vivendi. The secretary had already given consideration to the last proposition of the British Government, and was prepared to submit the answer from the United States which in this case takes the form of another proposition. This last proposition differs in no essential from that which has already served as the basis of the agreement between Secretary Hay and Mr. Tower, but upon close scrutiny of the latest form it was deemed advisable by our government to make a few changes in the text, solely with the view to clearing up beyond any chance of doubtful construction a few of the points of the agreement.

It is not doubted that the changes will be acceptable to the British Government; indeed, they may be of a character that will warrant Mr. Tower in accepting them on his own responsibility. In such case the agreement may be ratified in a very short time. Mr. Tower may decide, however, to submit the changes to the foreign office by cable, in which case the completion of the agreement may be delayed for a day or two. There will be no formal document to receive the signatures of the parties of the agreement, as was the case in the negotiations of the Behring Sea modus vivendi, but the agreement defining the temporary boundary will be set out in the notes exchanged between the secretary and Mr. Tower.

LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a third of a century and it saved my life. I was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me good."

Present and future health demands that this increase in weight should be steady and never failing.

To delicate children, Scott's Emulsion brings richer blood and firmer flesh. Better color comes to the cheeks and stronger muscles to the limbs. The gain in weight is substantial; it comes to stay.

THERE'S ONLY ONE "BEST"

Perhaps your grocer has sold you cornmeal and told you that it was Gold Dust Cornmeal. Perhaps you've thought it no better than any other. Some grocers have been known to sell inferior brands under the name of "Gold Dust," and that is just where the trouble begins.

The trouble ends when you attempt to make your grocer prove his statement true, because "There's only one best"—only one Cornmeal that is absolutely free from dirt, that has each grain evenly cut, that is the color of virgin gold.

Insist and you will get it.

An International Favorite.

The New York Tribune says: Apenta, a Hungarian aperient water, bottled at the springs, Budapest, is a purgative water, but of a mild and non-irritating character, due to the presence of a large quantity of sulphate of magnesia, considerably exceeding the sulphate of soda. Prof. Althaus, of London, author of "The Spas of Europe," says that this is an excellent combination, rendering the water superior to other aperient waters which contain too large a percentage of sulphate of soda. Analysis made at different times by Prof. Lieberman, of Budapest; Tichborne, of Dublin; and Fouché, of Paris, point to the constancy of the constituents of Apenta, confirmed by a certificate of Prof. von Podor. Prof. Althaus, Bogoslovsky, Lancereaux and Liebreich lay great stress on the medical supervision at the Apenta springs and the constancy of the water.

The name of the Apollinaris Company, which appears on the Apenta labels, is of itself a guarantee of quality, but with the additional endorsement of the scientific and medical men quoted here it is easy to understand why Apenta ranks so high as a laxative and purgative, and is used in all the principal hospitals of Europe and the United States.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

A farewell reception was tendered to Mr. George Miller at the Palace Dancing Academy last night on the occasion of his leaving this city to accept a position with the American Spool Cotton Company at Chicago.

There were 160 guests present, and all joined in wishing George every success in his new sphere. He has been connected with the firm of R. C. Struthers & Co. for the last eight years. Mr. Miller was furnished by Day-ton & McCormick's Orchestra. Refreshments were served at midnight. The party wound up to the strains of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

THE LYCEUM COMPANY.

The Lyceum Company closed their London engagement with "Othello" last night. Mr. Edouard D'Oize showed an intelligent conception of the title role, though his "Othello" was not as satisfying as his "Hamlet," because of physical limitations and a surplus of declamatory vigor at times.

In some of the scenes, however, he was very effective, and his whole work stamped him as a thoroughly conscientious artist. Mr. Elmer Buffham made an excellent Iago, forceful, and graceful in his movements. The Lyceum Company's performance of "Othello" was a most successful one. The company has established a clientele here who will welcome their return.

HANDSOME NEW BUSINESS BLOCK

Tenders Called for Two Five Storied Warehouses To Be Erected Opposite the Teumseh House.

A five-storied block will shortly be erected on the southeast corner of Richmond and York streets. Tenders for the new building have been called by the architects, Messrs. Moore & Henry. The new building will be 98 feet wide and 110 feet long, and be built of red pressed brick, with a cut stone front. A commodious lot for two warehouses is to be provided in it. The London Shoe Company will occupy the corner one. The owners of the property are Messrs. Cruikshank and Barker.

On the site at present are some old frame land marks that the citizens generally will not be sorry to see go. They have long been an offense to the eye.

Matrimonial.

CURTIS-SUTHERLAND.

Dr. E. E. Curtis, of Saginaw, Mich., and Miss Elizabeth Sutherland, daughter of Mr. Adam Sutherland, of 180 Princes street, were united in marriage yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents.

Rev. Dr. E. Stuart, B.A., pastor of Knox Church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate friends and relatives of the bride and groom. Mr. John B. Sutherland, of Sherbrooke, Mich., was groomsmen. Dr. and Mrs. Curtis left on the afternoon train, and will spend their honeymoon in Toronto, Montreal and other eastern cities.

The students of the college look upon the approaching wedding as a most fitting occasion upon which to express their esteem for the doctor and his bride, and with this purpose in view have bestowed a handsome present. JAILER BOSTON'S ANNUAL REPORT

496 Prisoners Confined in London Jail During the Year.

Cost of Maintenance Materially Lower Than in 1898—Interesting Statistics.

Governor Boston, of the county jail, has completed his report for the year ending Sept. 30, 1899. It shows the number of prisoners committed to have been 467, a decrease of 30 compared with 1898. The cost this year per prisoner was 6.5 cents, considerably less than last year, when the cost was 6.7 cents. For food, clothing, etc., the cost was $2,060 77; and this with officers' salaries totaled $5,908 13. This is $725 09 less than for 1898, when the cost totaled $6,633 23. The reduction is in a great measure due to excellent and economical management.
