

A GALE-SWEPT CONFLAGRATION CUTS BIG SWATH AT SEATTLE

Millions of Dollars of Damage Done—Many Hundreds Homeless and Scores of Buildings Destroyed in Great Fire Along Waterfront.

[Associated Press.] Seattle, Wash., June 11.—Fire that broke out on the northern waterfront during a hurricane late last night was carried by the wind to a district to the eastward, thickly covered with wooden buildings, and in a short time twenty acres were ablaze, causing a loss of $1,000,000 and rendering five hundred people homeless. The fire, starting at Railroad avenue and Battery street, destroyed all the buildings on six city blocks. When the flames were at their height, burning brands set fire to houses several blocks from the main fire. Alarming reports of loss of life were circulated, but so far as can be learned there were not fatalities. Just as the firemen had begun to despair of saving a large and populous area east of Second avenue, the wind suddenly abated, and a brisk rain began to fall. So far as known only three persons were seriously hurt, although many firemen were injured slightly.

Sixty Horses Burned. Sixty horses were burned in a stable on Railroad avenue. The largest buildings burned were the Galbraith-Bacon warehouses, which covered an entire block. They were erected last year at a cost of $200,000. Another large building destroyed was that of the Puget Sound metal works. Hospitals in Peril. On the west side of First avenue, between Bay and Wall streets, a storage warehouse filled with rubber-insulated cables and electrical materials was made so hot that it was impossible to get near it. The Glenachry apartments, the Walden Hotel, and the Pacific Hotel at First avenue and Vine street were directly opposite the worst part of the fire and was in great danger. Ambulances were rushed from all parts of the city and patients were removed as rapidly as possible to the city hospital. After all the patients had been removed from the hospitals not much damage was done. There was no panic during the removal of the patients.

BISHOP FALLON CAME CLOSE TO FIGURING IN ACCIDENT

Carriage in Which He Was to Have Driven From Bothwell to Thamesford Grazed by a Wabash Express—Sisters of Father Brennan Had a Marvellous Escape.

His Lordship Bishop Fallon, of this city, came very close to figuring in an extremely narrow escape on the Grand Trunk tracks near Thamesville on Monday last, but the story did not get out until today. The bishop was attending confirmation services in Bothwell and Thamesville. In order to do so he intended to drive over with Father Brennan from Bothwell to the latter place. The rain was so heavy, however, that he took a train with the priest, and conducted the services in Thamesville. Father Brennan's two sisters had intended going over with the bishop and their brother, and they decided to drive. At Thamesville there is a very bad crossing, and just as the team got to the rails, the Wabash flyer, due about 2:15, came spinning along at about 70 miles an hour. The engineer sounded the whistle, the driver leaped the horses, and the spirited team bounded forward. The express cleared the rig by such a narrow margin that the wind as it swept by almost overturned the outfit. Father Brennan's sisters were almost prostrated, and were quite ill this week as a result of the fright.

ADVANCE PARTIES WORKING IN RAIN FOR THE BIG CAMP

Special Trains Will Carry the Troops to London On Monday—Rifle Shooting Will Be Chief Drill of the Men This Year.

The members of the advance parties which arrived yesterday have had a most unpleasant day in which to perform their work on Carling's Heights, but they have kept steadily on and everything is in readiness for the arrival of the troops on Monday. Special trains will bring the men and equipment to the camp, and will be in full swing by Monday afternoon. The officers state that about 2,000 men will receive training at the camp. A special feature will be made of the training in rifle shooting, as it is the aim of the department to make the men as proficient in this respect as possible. The rate of pay that the men will receive depends entirely upon the scores they make at the ranges. Regulations Amended. The latest order amends the regulations of last year.

BOY IS SATURATED WITH MICROBE THEORY

Teacher's Son Went All the Way Home From Springbank to Get Drink.

A number of citizens are enjoying a good joke on one of the teachers at the high school, whose little son on the day of the children's picnic was missing for some time. After a couple of hours he turned up all right, and inquiry brought forth the information that the little fellow had become thirsty, and having been told all ways to be careful about the water he drank, had gone all the way home to get a drink, and then came back to continue his fun at the picnic.

JOINT COMMITTEE CONSIDERED TAXATION AND ASSESSMENT

Many Stories Were Retold But No Conclusion Was Arrived at in Regard to Ald. Richter's Scheme to Lower the Tax Rate of London.

The second session of the joint committee of the city council held to discuss the scheme of Ald. Richter for the lowering of the city tax rate, failed to bring the members to any conclusion last evening, the meeting being adjourned after two hours' talk on the advantages and disadvantages of the different propositions. Ald. Richter read a paper, which he had prepared, in which the different phases of his scheme were dealt with in an exhaustive manner. The chief item taken up was the advisability of raising the assessed value of realty in the city with a view to obtaining a lower tax rate. THOUSANDS ATTEND FUNERAL OF THE LATE GOLDWIN SMITH

Public Burial Service Held at Toronto University Led by Anglican and Baptist Pastors While Many Prominent in All Walks Pay Last Honors.

[G. N. W. Dispatch.] Toronto, June 11.—The funeral of the late Dr. Goldwin Smith took place this afternoon under sombre skies and amid occasional showers of rain. A private service was held at the Grange in the morning, to which only immediate relatives were admitted. About 1 o'clock the body was taken to the Convocation Hall of the Toronto University, where at 2 o'clock a public service was held, conducted by Rev. W. H. Wallace, pastor of Beverly Street Baptist Church, and Rev. R. J. Moore, of St. George's Anglican Church. Thousands Present. The funeral cortege left for St. James' Cemetery at 3 o'clock going by way of St. Albans, Wellesley and Parliament streets. The first five carriages contained relatives of the family and members of the household. In the sixth were President Schurman and Prof. Hiram Corson, of Cornell University; Prof. H. R. Fairbough, of Stamford University, California; and President Falconer, of Toronto University. Following came one hundred carriages containing representatives of the governor-general, the Dominion and Ontario Governments, the members of the city council, the governors of Toronto University, and representatives of various other public bodies with which Dr. Smith had been more or less intimately associated. The streets along the route of the procession were lined with spectators, notwithstanding the dreariness of the day.

DOG-CATCHER NOT NECESSARY NOW

Police Will Summon All Who Do Not Keep Up to the Law.

It is not likely that a dog-catcher will be employed from this time on to replace Blackstock, who was dismissed by Mayor Beattie the other day. The roundup of dogs is practically completed, and there has been little need of such an official for a long time. The police will summon those who do not muzzle their dogs, and in this manner an effective check can be placed on dogs who have not the proper adornments.

WIRE MEN SAY STEEL FIRM IS ONLY BLUFFING

Local Wire and Nail Company Will Not Be Affected by the Move.

The announcement from Halifax that the Dominion Steel Corporation will build big mills to manufacture wire and nails to fight the firms forming the wire and nail merger is of considerable interest to business throughout this district, as the Western Wire and Nail Company, of this city, is one of the firms in the merger, having been absorbed about three months ago. "We believe the whole thing is simply a bluff on the part of the Dominion Steel Corporation to prevent firms in the merger from going ahead with the immense consolidation that they are proposing in Hamilton," said a gentleman in close touch with the situation to "The Advertiser." "The Dominion Steel Corporation had to buy the Hamilton firms out recently, but they couldn't do it." It is stated that the Western Wire and Nail factory here will not be affected in any way.

CONTRACT WAS AWARDED FOR STEEL TOWER

Water Commissioners Held a Meeting This Morning—A Rewiring Job.

At a brief session of the water commissioners held this morning the Ontario Wind Engine Company, of Toronto, was awarded the contract for the steel tower for the hydro-electric station for $760. At the last meeting of the board a couple of tenders were received for this work, but they were each about $1,200, although the estimated cost was $750. However, Engineer Glaubitz secured more favorable prices, and the contract was awarded as recommended by him. Engineer Roberts was instructed to prepare estimates of the cost of rewiring the pavilion at Springbank. The insurance rate is very high at the present time, but the companies will not make a reduction until the wiring is inspected and properly installed. City Architect Nutter was instructed to prepare plans for No. 2 sub-station in the east end. This work will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000. It was the intention of the commission to award the tenders for underground construction work, but the tenders were not ready, and it was decided to open them on Tuesday next. Those present were Commissioner A. T. McMath (chairman), Commissioners Pocock, Darch, William Wyatt, Engineer Roberts and Secretary Elliott.

CUBAN PINEAPPLES CAUSE A LAWSUIT

H. W. Brown, of Cuba, Brings an Action Against Joseph Tait, of This City.

The case of Harry William Brown, of Cuba, against Joseph Tait, of this city, has been entered for the county court sittings on June 14. The plaintiff claims $175.00 for pineapples which the plaintiff refused to accept, and $200 for breach of contract. The defendant in this case has entered a counter claim for $2,500 for breach of contract and $51.87 for loss by re-selling. In March, 1908, the defendant entered into a contract for the delivery of certain pineapples by the plaintiff, amounting to 125 crates, at a rate, valued at $175.00. It is alleged that the defendant refused to accept the pineapples, and the plaintiff claims the above amount, together with $200 for breach of contract. The defence states that the plaintiff agreed to ship and deliver to the defendant a quantity of pineapples to be of standard size. The defence further states that the pineapples were not of standard size.

WAS ACTRESS KILLED BY OLD ADMIRER?

Father of Murdered Woman's Husband Believes He Has Been Slain.

[Associated Press Cable.] Washington, June 11.—That one of her former admirers may have been at the bottom of the mystery of a trunk found containing the body of Mrs. Mary Scott Castle Charlton in Lake Como, Italy, is suspected by Paul Charlton, father-in-law of the unfortunate woman, who is a law clerk of the bureau of insular affairs in the war department. "From the few details available I believe that Porter, my son, is dead also. From the cheerful tone of his last letter I am inclined to believe that someone, possibly one of her former admirers who followed her to Italy, is at the bottom of the tragedy. "My son is about twenty years old, and for some time had been suffering from tuberculosis. He left Washington in December, 1908, and went to New York, where he obtained employment in the foreign department of the National City Bank. Early in 1910 he met Mrs. Mary Scott Castle, the divorced wife of Neville Castle, an attorney of San Francisco. She was 27 years old. I knew nothing of her and did not even know that Porter intended to marry her until after they had done so. They were married in Wilmington, Delaware, March 12 last, and several days later sailed from New York for Genoa. Only last Monday I received a letter from him telling of his plans. His letter was full of endearing references to his wife."

London, Saturday, June 11. THE AUTOMOBILE AND ITS CRITICS.

Chancellor Day, of Syracuse University, who often brings himself before the public by eccentric utterances, denounces the automobile on moral and economic grounds.

Living beyond one's means is always bad morals, but it was a frequent failing before automobiles were invented. Automobiling at least yields some return to its votaries as a fresh air and open-air pastime.

Chancellor Day raises a more interesting question in economics than in ethics. The effect of a demand for luxuries upon wealth and employment has been a much-discussed problem among economists.

A CLERICAL CURIOSITY. Rev. A. H. Whalley, of Arnprior, is interesting as a survival of other days. A motion approving the work of the Laymen's Missionary Movement having been made at the Anglican Synod of Ottawa, Mr. Whalley confessed that he had no sympathy with it and gave his reasons:

"He, as a priest of the Church of God, could not favor members of the true church meeting non-churchmen on a common ground. Further, he could not be a party to a movement that would map out one portion of the world to be evangelized by the Presbyterians, one portion by the Methodists, a third by the Baptists, and so on.

Mr. Whalley is no doubt sincere in his opinions both of his own church and of others. If he were not in earnest, he would have had no motive in using language which is an echo of "Old, unhappy, far-off things, And battles long ago."

DEADLY EXPLOSIVES. The fact that in three Canadian provinces within the past month magazines containing explosives have accidentally blown up, killing almost a score of people and injuring many others, has prompted the conservation commission to issue a bulletin on the subject. Hardly a day passes that the press does not contain reports of the death of workmen engaged in mining or in railway construction, from the careless or ignorant use of explosives.

The bulletins in question notes what other countries have done in dealing with this problem. In all European coal-mining countries, regulations have been made against the use of coal mines of such explosives as are known to be dangerous.

Canada's industrial development has caused a great increase in the use of explosives, and the number of deaths from the careless use and storage of them has correspondingly increased.

THE MILK QUESTION. The London Medical Association is to be commended for taking up the question of the purity of the city's milk supply with a view to stricter safeguards for the public health.

Constant watchfulness is the price that must be paid for pure, clean milk. The average dairymen is conscientious, but conditions may arise in his herd or establishment of which he may not have knowledge.

With the co-operation of the London Asylum authorities, arrangements are to be made for bacteriological tests, and the sale of certified milk. Necessarily the price of certified milk will be higher than milk costs at present, because the dairymen furnishing it will be put to increased expense in the care and selection of their herds, and in complying with the strict conditions of the test, but there will be no compulsion in its use.

Sir Charles Hardinge will be the next viceroy of India. It would have been a great disappointment to Ottawa society if only a plain "Sir" had been sent to Rideau Hall.

Some people are inclined to say that Canada has no history. On the contrary, our annals are a veritable mine of romance and heroism.—Toronto News.

An Ottawa dispatch to Opposition papers says that if Sir Wilfrid Laurier does not appeal to the country this fall it will be because he has failed to budge the west. Sir Wilfrid will not appeal to the country this fall in any event, so that his opponents will be perfectly safe in decrying that western tour. They will catch him coming and going.

The London Morning Post says that to seek a compromise on the question of the House of Lords is like "searching in a dark room for a black cat which is not there."

Mr. Roosevelt has sailed for home. In a farewell message to the British people he says: "I would like to express my thanks, etc."

RESTRAINT. [Washington Star.] "So you think a woman has a sense of humor?" "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "But she has schooled herself to suppress it. Common politeness forbids a woman to laugh every time her husband says or does something ridiculous."

RIVER WATER THERE. [St. Thomas Times.] Commissioner Pocock, of London, says the London waterworks is a gold mine.

times, the St. Thomas waterworks is a coal mine.

REDEEMING A PROMISE. [Hamilton Times.] The Dominion Government, by withdrawing from sale or settlement of a vast tract of land on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, is making good its promises of a broad policy of conservation and forest preservation.

A MONUMENTAL FABRICATOR. [Hamilton Herald.] Probably the same cable correspondent who invented the story that Queen Alexandra accused John Burns to the face of having caused the King's death is responsible for the later stories that the King was received into the Roman Catholic Church on his deathbed, and that Queen Alexandra is now causing trouble by refusing to leave Buckingham Palace, and insisting upon having the royal standard flown from that royal residence.

A DUTY OF CITIZENSHIP. [Toronto Star.] If a man believes that the nation is in danger, and needs greater fleets and armies, it is his right and his duty to say so; and a similar duty rests upon a man who believes that the House of Lords should be curbed or reformed.

EASY. [Judge.] Stella—How can you tell if a painting is genuine? Bella—By whether it rubs off.

SHE WAS WISE. [Chicago News.] Spoonly—I am intoxicated with love for you. Miss Manyplunks—Oh, I see. And you want to try the gold cure.

MISTRUSTFUL. [Cleveland Leader.] Visitor—And you always did your darling robberies single-handed? Why didn't you have a pal? Prisoner—Well, I wuz afraid he might turn out to be dishonest.

CRUEL. [Washington Star.] "Always speak kindly of the absent," said young Miss Privately. "I would," replied Miss Cayenne. "If I thought it would be an inducement to some tiresome people to remain so."

WORRIED. [Baltimore American.] "I tell you I am worrying a lot over this baker's strike." "I don't see what call you have to worry. I heard your wife telling mine that she was going to make all the bread herself." "Yes, that's what's worrying me."

A USEFUL FOWL. [Kansas City Journal.] "Why don't you get rid of that hen? She never lays." "Well, she is an incessant cackler, and thus keeps the other hens at a high mark."

JUROR CATCHES JUDGE ASLEEP. [Columbian Dispatch.] Men who are summoned for jury duty are ingenious in their excuses, and it often happens that the selection of a jury is the most diverting part of the case. One who was called in the county court here complained that he was deaf. "You say that you are deaf?" remarked the judge. "Oh, what is it you say?" said the man. "I said, are you deaf?" observed the judge, in a louder tone. "You'll have to speak louder," was the reply. "or I can't hear you."

A LOGICAL CONCLUSION. [The Skeletel.] Magistrate—You say the prisoner turned round and stealthily whistled. What followed? Intelligent Witness—Please, your worship, his dog.

A STONE BAROMETER. It has been recorded that in Finland there is a stone, which, like a barometer, forecasts the weather. This stone, it is said, turns black, or blackish grey, when rain or bad weather is approaching, yet becomes covered with small white spots at the approach of clear weather.

CLINTON. [Special to The Advertiser.] Clinton, June 10.—On Wednesday evening the members of Rev. J. Green's Sunday morning class in Wesley Church unceremoniously took possession of his home and surprised him by presenting him with a silk umbrella, with a gold-mounted handle.

EXETER'S NEW WATERWORKS. On Thursday last, the laying of the water mains for the new waterworks at Exeter having been completed, the whole system was subjected to an exhaustive test under the direction of P. W. Parnock, C. E. of this city, who designed and superintended the construction of the work.

Hardynge Made Viceroy of India. London, June 11.—The appointment of Sir Charles Hardynge, permanent under-secretary of state for foreign affairs, as viceroy of India, in succession to the Earl of Minto, was officially announced yesterday.

ASKS KING GEORGE TO SPARE HIS LIFE. Ottawa, June 11.—The law must take its course in the cases of Walter Ross sentenced to hang at North Bay for the murder of his partner, Percy Parkinson, but who has repented of his crime, and broken of snail-pox in the jail at North Bay, and Robert Henderson, a young lad sentenced to be executed at Peterboro for the murder of an aged woman, Ross will die June 21 and Henderson on the 23d.

A FREIGHT ENGINE PLUNGES INTO LAKE. Rolled Down Sixty Feet Into Water Carrying Three of Crew to Death. Winnipeg, June 11.—Three C. P. R. trainmen, Engineer Wheatley, Fireman Clark and Brakeman McMillan, all of Superior, Ont., were drowned in Lake Superior at four o'clock yesterday morning, when their freight train struck a boulder on the track at Port Couvel, Ont., 125 miles east of Port Arthur, causing the train to leave the track and plunge into the lake, carrying with it many feet of permanent way, and the telegraph lines, thus interrupting direct communication. A wrecking train was hurried from Schreiber.

TURKISH EXPRESS WRECKED. Constantinople, June 11.—An express on the Oriental Railroad was wrecked near Luleburgaz, about 50 miles east of here today, through the collapse of a bridge. Several cars plunged into the water, and it was feared there were many casualties. A special train, carrying six physicians and nurses, was sent out from here.

EASY TO CURE THROAT TROUBLES AND CATARRH

Mrs. Pannell Writes from the Heart—Heed Her Advice.

"While a resident of Washington, D. C., I suffered continually and intensely with a bronchial trouble that was simply terrible to endure. I would have sworn that I could hardly breathe, I would choke up, fill up in my throat and bronchial tubes, and the doctoring that I did and the remedies used were of no benefit to me whatever. The doctor said that I would soon have consumption and the outlook was anything but encouraging. I heard about Booth's Hyomei being so beneficial in catarrhal and bronchial affections and procured an outfit, and am pleased to say that I received relief from the first by its use, and I continued with it and received a cure. It is about two years since I have suffered at all from my former trouble. There is nothing too good or strong enough for me to say regarding Hyomei."—Mrs. R. L. Pannell, 404 N. Augusta street, Staunton, Va., March 26, 1909.

AUTOS IN THE PARK
Parks Commissioner Pring Sets Him-

Parks Commissioner Pring states that he has been misunderstood in regard to his attitude toward automobiles in Victoria Park.
He does not favor barring out the autoists, but like all other citizens he would punish severely those who speed there.
Mr. Pring also objects to green drivers trying to run cars in the park, as on one occasion a certain autoist lost control of his car, and it crashed into a bench and smashed it fifty feet in on the lawn.
"I would have every man drive his car at a slow rate in the parks," Mr.
Pring said to the Advertiser. "There are always many children there, and any fast driving is accompanied by much danger."

ANSWER NEEDS OF THE COUNTY
County Council Will Likely Make Improvements to the Court House.
WILL MEET THE CITY

To Talk Over the Possibility of a Joint Municipal Building for London and Middlesex.

The county council appears to be of the opinion that the present court house and county buildings are adequate for the needs of the county.
The following report of the jail committee was adopted at yesterday afternoon's session of the council:
"Recommended, that the council express itself as willing to undertake such alterations to the court house and jail as will more adequately meet the increasing necessities of the city and county, and that the present municipal buildings are sufficient for the necessities of the county."
"However, the county would express itself as willing to receive and consider the proposals from the city as to the terms on which the city might acquire proprietary interest in the whole county property for the purpose of erecting joint municipal buildings thereon."
The committee further recommended that the repairs now being carried out under the direction of the county engineer and city architect.

Belmont School.
A deputation from the Belmont continuation school was heard requesting an increased grant. Last year's grant was $140, and the deputation asked that it be doubled, which would place
the school on a par with the Elgin County. The deputation consisted of John Dawes, W. H. O'Dell and John S. Cousins. The matter was referred to the educational committee.

Port Stanley Harbor.
The petitioning committee recommended that a delegation composed of the warden and W. A. Roberts, chairman of the committee, be appointed to confer with representatives from other townships to purchase a road now in use in the county, and two more if it is found satisfactory.

Woodstock, June 11.—The commit-

some time ago to investigate afternoon.

Many witnesses were examined, and the committee declares that some of the charges of corruption are true, and recommends a further probe.

Haag Shows Are Seen by a Pleased Crowd.
Despite the threatening weather
many hundreds witnessed the Haag Show parade this morning, and a tent full of pleased patrons testified their approval of what proved to be one of the best real circus performances witnessed here in several years. The programme included many excellent acts, seven or eight of them among the best seen here; in fact, the best in the business, as the manager announced. The show is conducted evidently by real businessmen, who do not permit gambling in any form and not an oath or imtemperate remark was heard on the grounds. The parade was the finest for its size that has been seen here. On the whole it is a good, clean, clever show, and those who saw the performance this afternoon will join in the hope that the Haag Shows will come again.
There will be another performance tonight, doors opening at 7 o'clock, performance at 8.—Winston Salem

IRISH PICNIC

Date of the Greatest of All Outings Has Been Decided Upon.
PLACE NOT YET SELECTED

The Irish Benevolent Society, at a meeting held last night in the board of trade rooms, named committees for the year, and also decided to hold the annual picnic on August 11. The place where the outing will be held was not decided upon, owing to the fact that a cash offer was received from Brantford, with other inducements.

The motion to hold the picnic on the date mentioned was made by Philip Pocock, seconded by B. C. McCann, and the following gentlemen, with the two above mentioned, were constituted a

GOLDWIN SMITH FAVORED BAPTISTS
Although Generally Supposed That He Was an Anglican.
[Special to The Advertiser.]
Toronto, Ont., June 11.—The will of Goldwin Smith, when published, will,
it is said, reveal the dead publicist's later preference for the Baptist over the Anglican Church.
During his long illness, the sage of the Grange was visited frequently by Rev. Harris Wallace, pastor of the Beverly Street Baptist Church, and was always glad to see him. He saw Rev. R. J. Moore, vicar of St. George's Anglican Church, seldom, though Mr.
Moore called weekly.
Goldwin Smith was formerly an Anglican and was never formally taken into the Baptist Church, but a statement made by one in close touch with him shows where his inclinations were. "The Anglicans claim him," said this man, "but they will find out when the will is read."

BOTHA STARTS A ROW
Decides to Contest the Riding of Sir
Percy Fitzpatrick.
Johannesburg, June 11. — Premier
Botha's determination to fight Sir Percy Fitzpatrick in Pretoria is the sole topic of conversation. Moderate feeling has undergone a strong revolution. The English papers, which were decidedly pro-Botha a fortnight since, denounce the contest as a wanton provocation of racial animosity and feeling in Natal. Such a movement to form a separate party will probably be harmful. Natalians will follow the lead of Jameson.

RENT IN THE STERN
Caused Loss of the French Submarine With Twenty-seven Lives.
Calais, France, June 11. — The manner of the sinking of the French submarine Pluviose was revealed today, when the superstructure emerged at low tide. A rent fifteen feet long and two feet wide was found in the stern, where the submerged craft had been struck by the channel steamer Pas de Calais. Two bodies were recovered before the rising tide again closed over the wreck. The Pluviose was sunk, with her crew of 27 men, in the English Channel, two miles off the French coast, on May 26. Since that time the wreckers have been engaged at every high tide in towing the submarine ashore. It was impossible to raise the wreck into the surface. Today in the shallow water of the jetty the superstructure rose to view and the first thorough examination was pursued.

Every housekeeper who has used Campbell's Vanish Stain is delighted with the results obtained. Nothing else like it, they say. So easy to apply, and so durable, it is JOLLY & CO. carry a full line of this popular stain.

THE WOMAN'S CORNER

WOMEN AND THEIR FADS

Toilet Notes.
When henna is used on brown hair to bring an auburn tint the leaves are boiled in water for ten minutes. The hair is shampooed and the henna is applied, leaves and all. It is permitted to dry on, and then another shampoo follows.

Shampooing the hair once each week is too often and will take all the life out of the growth. Instead of so many hirsute tubbings, cleanse the scalp with alcohol and water, of equal proportions. This may be done between the shampoos. Give the hair a thorough brushing, which should remove all the dust and dandruff. Pour the diluted alcohol in a little saucer, and by parting the hair rub it well into the scalp. This will cleanse away the excessive oil and will make the hair fluffy and clean. Alcohol is the best kind of an antiseptic, and these glowing baths will aid the growth of the hair.

One of the chief causes for wrinkles on women's faces is the fact that they refrain from wearing glasses when they should. Instead of recognizing and frankly acknowledging the symptoms of imperfect or failing sight, they persist in straining their eyes with the effort to find the right focus for seeing a particular object until the whole face is a mass of wrinkles and the worried expression remains fixed for good. Wearing glasses a year or two earlier—for the time usually comes when they must be worn—will not only prevent the unsightly wrinkles, but will also give relief from nerve strain.

Corset Cover Ribbons Supplied With Bodkins.

There is always the bother, when the clear undergarments come home from the laundry, of hunting up the bodkin, which has a most tiresome way of getting mislaid among one's belongings. Some new corset cover ribbons have small attachments at the ends, something like the tips on shoe laces, and it is the work of a moment to run the hard little tip in and out through the lace or embroidery heading. The tip may be left on the ribbon when the garment is laundered, or it may be clipped off, if—as is the custom of some women—new ribbons are used after each laundering.

A Quick Way of Perfuming the Wardrobe.

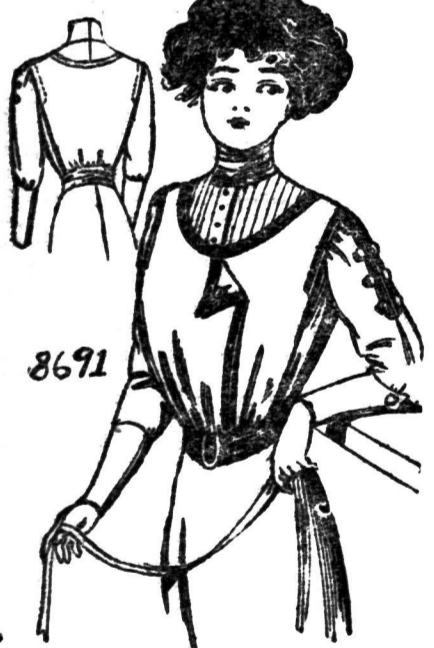

While silk pads filled with cotton layers sprinkled with delicate perfume are the most practical means of perfuming lingerie, dainty blouses, neckwear and the like, it is something of a task to keep small sachets in the heavier garments hanging in the clothes closet, and the perfume, used in small quantities as the various little bags call for, soon evaporates. A good way is to sprinkle a generous amount of the perfume in a deep saucer and burn it, allowing the fumes to penetrate all the articles of clothing in the clothes closet. Great care must be exercised, of course, not to set fire to anything near the pan of perfume.

8671—Ladies' Waist With Yoke—A Distinctive Style.

Many of this season's models are shown with side closings, and yoke details are also very popular. The design here submitted combines both these features: the tiny revers on the front is an effective addition, the Gibson pleats give breadth to the figure and the sleeve with deep, pointed cuff is most stylish. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 inches, bust measure, and requires 2½ yards of 44-inch material for the 36-inch size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents.

trains and steamers is a small square of stout linen well starched. The linen may be white, of course, but color is better. Make it about ten inches square with a half-inch hem, plain or hemstitched.

For use, fold it in the shape of a cornucopia and fasten together with safety pins. Place inside another cornucopia of paper or a paraffin tumbler and you have a catch-all that will last throughout the longest journey. It is as easily laundered as a handkerchief, but should, of course, be stiffly starched when possible. It is an excellent style of catch-all for the bathroom.

MARY'S COOK BOOK

A Spanish Omelet—Peel three good sized tomatoes. Slice with three small sweet green peppers from which the seeds have been removed, into a frying pan containing butter the size of an egg. Season with salt, pepper and a trifle of sugar or pinch of baking soda to correct the acid of the tomatoes. Do not stir, but shake the pan. When the peppers are cooked, which will be in about 15 minutes, dip into the pan from a shallow dish six eggs beaten as for scrambling; stir with a fork until the eggs are cooked. For variety's sake the eggs may be slipped whole, as for poaching, into the stewed tomatoes and peppers and cooked covered until the eggs are set.

FASHIONS

Evening slippers show embroidery of pink rosebuds on the vamps.

Black lace and black gauze are prominent materials in this season's wardrobe.

Some of the prettiest thin fabrics for summer frocks are half cotton, many are full cotton, and the mercerized thread is as fine and glossy as silk.

The newest separate waist is the "Magyar" blouse. Taffeta dotted foulard, linen and cotton goods are all used.

Natural, blue, lavender, grey and golden brown are the favorite colors for linen coat suits.

White serge suits with hair-line stripes of black are second to linen suits in popularity.

There is a tendency toward very short skirts this season. In Paris trailing skirts are slowly creeping in, but the short skirts remain favorites with the masses.

Dealers expect a big coat season. The full-length garment is the most prominent, with the 36-inch coat a close second.

Black chantilly lace and chiffon jumpers are in high favor for this summer.

CYNTHIA GREY'S CORRESPONDENTS

Simcoe, Ont.

Dear Miss Grey:—Is there anything that will make your eyelashes grow longer? If so, what is it?

2. What shade should a girl of 17 years wear this summer, having auburn hair and blue eyes?

3. What will remove freckles? I don't like to use a cream, but I would like to know what to use.

4. What old should a girl be to leave home to take a situation?

5. What could you use to make your hair a lighter color?

6. Is it wrong to flirt?

7. Is a girl of 17 old enough to go out evenings without a chaperon?

A CONSTANT READER.

1. I do not know of anything.

2. Any of the pretty tan or blue shades should be becoming to you.

3. There are many preparations. Would advise you to consult your druggist.

4. A great deal depends on the character of the girl. The business life is no easy one, by any means, and if it is not necessary for you to earn your own living at present, I would strongly urge your staying at home with mother for a few years. Of course, it is nice to have pin money of your own, but if you would be advised by one experienced, do not be in a hurry to get out into the turmoil and hardships of office, shop and business life. You will be "knocked" about enough without leaving the home nest too soon.

5. See No. 3.

6. Yes; certainly. It is a very deplorable practice.

7. If her parents know where and with whom she is going, and do not object, I think it is all right.

Dear Miss Grey:—How should a girl of 12 do her hair? My eyes are russet brown. What color of a dress would you prefer to go with them?

1. Comb loosely off the face (parted or not as preferred), and braid in one or two strands. Tie with wide ribbon at back of head and near end of braid.

2. Wear brown shades as near the color of your eyes as possible. Certainly.

Dear Miss Grey:—I have a question about the "Liverpool Cup." I have heard that it is a very valuable prize. Is it true?

1. Comb loosely off the face (parted or not as preferred), and braid in one or two strands. Tie with wide ribbon at back of head and near end of braid.

tain shades of blue should also be becoming.

Dear Miss Grey:—Please give a recipe for canning asparagus. W. F. B.

—Have large kettle half full of boiling salted water. Lay asparagus in this and boil until tender but not broken. Stand on end, tops up, in fruit jars, fill with the boiling water and seal immediately. Keep in cool, dark place.

Dear Miss Grey:—

1. I have a long-sleeved, high-necked linen semi-princess. How can I fix it? Poms become me, but parts don't. I don't like to have a bun, but I fix my hair? Would part in the side do? Which side should I part the most? I am 17. How can I darken my eyebrows? ROSEBUD.

Why "fix" it at all? A just summer semi-princess style, "wearable" this season. A Dutch collar in ecru lace might give a jaunty touch.

2 and 3. If pompadour style is becoming, why not wear it that way? Even though it is not the most recent style, what matter, if it suits your face? Parting on the left side would no doubt look very well.

4. Olive oil is said to darken the eyebrows.

THE MESSAGE

BY LOUIS TRACY, Author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Wheels of Fortune."

Such a reputation, once earned, is not easily shaken off. When he went out, the hall porter and the driver of a hansom were in deep converse. He paid the cabman at the colonial office, and his mind was busy with other things when he was brought back to earth again.

"Beg pardon, sir," said cabby, "but would you mind tellin' me the best thing for the Cup?" demanded Warden testily.

"The Liverpool Cup, sir."

"Beer, of course."

He escaped. The cabman took to the betting lists, so he drove back at once to interview the hall porter. A slight speculation followed, and two men mourned for many a day that they had not begged or borrowed more money elsewhere, with a competence on that amazingly lucky tip.

Warden did not expect to find anyone at the colonial office, but he went to him. The hour was nearly seven, and it is a popular theory that at four o'clock the clerks and civil servants throw aside the newspapers and other light literature with which they beguile the tedious of official routine. He meant to report his arrival in London, and learn from a door-keeper what time it would be advisable to call next day.

Warden was hardly expected, therefore, to be received forthwith by a silver-haired, smooth-spoken gentleman, who asked him to accompany him to the main points of his conversation with the under secretary at the foreign office.

Somewhat mystified, Warden began his recital. The first two sentences, the official nodded.

"Thank you, Captain Warden. I need not trouble you further, he said. "You see, we are not personally known to each other, and in such an exceedingly delicate matter as this threatened difficulty in Nigeria—wherein knowledge is confined to a very small circle—one has to be careful that one is speaking to the right man."

"Did you think it possible, then, that some stranger might have impersonated me?" demanded Warden, his eyes twinkling at the suggestion.

"Quite possible. I have done it myself twice, the first in London, the second to the complete satisfaction of my minister abroad, but hardly to my own. I had the fingers of my left hand shot off while making a dash for safety."

Certainly, reflected Warden, there were elements in the life of Whitechapel that escaped public notice.

"We have sent for you because you are wanted at once in West Africa," went on the other. "Letters to and from the Governor of Northern Nigeria have been submitted by the under secretary to the governor asking that you should be recalled from furlough. Though you are attached to the southern portion of the province, your experience, your highest appreciation of your tact and best fitted to deal with the natives of the disturbed region. It is not proposed that you should return by the ordinary mail service. We assume that the departure of officers and others for Lagos is closely watched at the present crisis, and a passage has been secured on a coast-guard steamer for a mythical personage named Alfred Williams. Initials on baggage or linen, therefore, cannot cause suspicion. Now, the Water Witch sails from Cardiff by Saturday afternoon's tide, and we would like Mr. Alfred Williams to go on board that morning."

Warden looked blankly at the speaker. It was then Thursday. It left him little more than a day in which to unravel the mystery that enveloped Evelyn and her whereabouts. A bitter rage welled up in his breast, but he controlled his face, and the official attributed his silence to the suddenness of his suggested departure.

"I am sorry that your leave should be spoiled in this fashion," continued the official voice. "But it is unavoidable. The time presses. When it is need scarcely tell you that when the Government wants a man's service it is good for the man."

"I shall be on board the Water Witch on Saturday," said Warden.

"Perhaps the lack of enthusiasm in his manner was puzzling, but the suave official said no more."

"And now for the instructions," he said. "The vessel touches at Cape Coast Castle, before going on to Lagos. You will be met there by some officer whom you are acquainted with. He will tell you the exact position of affairs, and what if any developments have taken place in the meantime. He will also give you the governor's views as to the way in which you should conduct them. You can best be utilized. I leave it to you to take the necessary precautions to conceal your movements and identity."

WHY NOT MAKE A COZY LITTLE LIVING ROOM OF YOUR PORCH FOR THE HOT SUMMER MONTHS?

A Cup of Tea on the Porch.

Whether you call it piazza or veranda, if it is anything larger than a yard square "front stoop," you can transform it into that last development of the modern home, the porch parlor, or the outdoor living-room.

As shade and seclusion are the essentials in a comfortable outdoor sitting-room, it is for them that the first expenditure is generally made. Morning glory, wild cucumber, wisteria or the fragrant white honeysuckle make ideal summer screening, and the moon-flower, though its foliage is coarse and its scent is heavy, is liked for its rapid growth in such exposures.

The old-fashioned chairs and an old sofa, long stored away in the attic, may be resurrected, and nimble fingers have covered with bright-colored fabrics will do wonders in the way of brightening up this outdoor sitting-room. Women make pillow-covers of everything from grey calico to burials for their porches. The discrediting, of course, choose fabrics which will not fade in the sun, such as checked, gingham, braided denims, linen crash, printed India cotton, or chintz of large design and brilliant hue. Matting and raffia make the best of porch pillows, for they can be cleaned indefinitely. Unbleached muslin, stencilled with peacocks or owls, is pretty and serviceable.

For the floor covering the old-fashioned rag carpet is the best of all—and the newest. The "afternoon tea" table may be covered with unbleached crash embroidered in Bulgarian colors, with the snowy hemstitched luncheon cloth. The hammock, too, is indispensable, and here, again, may the gay cushions be used. A willow chair or two are useful and decorative as well.

If, as is often the case, the porch is to be used as an outdoor sleeping room for baby, inclose one end with curtains of duck or denim, which run smoothly on small rods. This makes a bunk free from drafts on windy days, and from the heat of a midsummer noon. And mother, too, may nap while baby is sleeping, for she knows how much more refreshing this outdoor rest will be for tired muscles and nerves than the stuffy bedroom. Some sleep in the open as a cure for nervous prostration, some to improve their complexions, others—just because they want to—and hold that to be reason enough.

And the summer girl. She, too, has her possibilities, for she often uses the outdoor sitting-room to ensnare the unsuspecting bachelor. She crochets, for crocheting shows off her busy fingers, and while she's really idle, she looks energetic. It was a canny bachelor who discovered how canny is the summer girl when she crochets neckties of spool silk.

She made them three years ago, and year before last, and last year, and she is going to crochet them all this summer, even though they can now be bought, machine made, for 30 cents apiece.

"Spools of silk are round and soapy," observes this experienced gentleman. "They just naturally fall, and roll, and fall again. So when a man has picked up one spool some half-dozen times, he decides to hold it to keep the thread from tangling."

"Then he discovers—or he may not—that he is tied. He can't drift along casually to the next girl on the resort veranda any time he wants to. He never can grasp just the psychological moment for putting that spool down."

"And before he knows it, the chances are that he has got himself tangled, and tied and crocheted up with the silk for his whole long life!"

ALL AROUND THE HOME

BY CYNTHIA GREY.

When using grater for chocolate or lemon, don't dash in water, but have a little brush for that purpose and brush grater; will all come off and there won't be any waste.

Paraffin used for tops of jelly jars may be washed, dried and used again. A tin steap can be bought at the 10-cent store in which the paraffin may be kept and, when needed, can be set on stove until melted and easily poured over jelly. Keep twisted paper or cork on spout to prevent dirt getting in.

Bread crumb pancakes are made by soaking stale bread in buttermilk, using as a batter in place of flour. Add soda, salt and eggs and sufficient flour to thicken.

A small onion eaten just before retiring will often induce sleep. The taste may be removed by chewing a bit of parsley or celery.

A camp chair is a handy thing in a kitchen. It can be hung on the wall or kept under the table when not in use.

Put thin slices of cheese, place on square salt crackers, dot with butter and toast in oven. Serve while hot with afternoon tea.

Turn a cut lemon upside down on waxed paper. It will keep fresh a long time.

For rough and sensitive hands nothing better can be found than two ounces of listerine combined with glycerine. The surface will soon become smooth and less sensitive.

ENAMELED JEWELRY.
Bright blue enamel in round spots is set into the solid metal with a delightful smoothness that implies durability in much of the new silver jewelry.

Silver is a revival in the jeweler's art, so old that it is new again, as are a great many more little things in the fashion world.

Buttons particularly are inlaid with enamel. Made of platinum or polished silver they are colored by the little spots of bright enamel pressed into openings, made in the smooth surface. Just two or three of them on a garment will give an elegant touch that could not be got by a full dozen of another sort.

PLAYTIME STORIES

WILLING HANDS.
Jack's mamma was not feeling well and had gone upstairs to lie down, after telling Jack, aged four, and Kathrine, a wee neighbor girl of three and a half, to be good children and not make too much noise.

They had built houses with the blocks until they tired of it, put their dolls to sleep, and then went to the kitchen for a drink of water. Both children were sorry for Jackie's mamma. "Cause it isn't fun to be sick," her said her wanted to clean house," Jack solemnly announced.

"We can clean house," piped up Kathrine.

Jackie, standing on a chair reaching for a cup of water, caught sight of a yellow box on a shelf over the sink. On the box were pictures of two little dark children dressed in ruffled skirts. His mamma had told him a story of how those little folks had scrubbed a queen's palace. Just the idea! He and Kathrine would take off their clothes and put on cleaning skirts like the picture children.

It was some work for the babies to take off their clothes. They got two of mother's dish towels from the kitchen hook and fastened them round their waists for make-believe skirts.

CAN CHIVALRY EXIST MUCH LONGER?

Why Should It, Asks Mrs. Newell Dwight Hillis—Says American Women Are Developing to Such a Plane of Independence That They Have No Need for Man's Protection—A Time of Transition.

The age of chivalry is almost done in the United States, if we are to accept the dictum of some among the shrewdest observers of modern manners, among them Mrs. Newell Dwight Hillis, wife of the pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn.

It is not that American men are in their heart of hearts, less gallant, but that American women are developing physically and mentally to such a plane of independence that they have no need for chivalry's protection.

It means a complete change in our national manners, and one which is so dear to us that it may be regarded as already arrived.

"The six-foot captain of the basketball team," observes Mrs. Hillis, "laughs at the slender youth who would protect her. The business woman can earn her own support and be beholden to no one."

As she points out, the position of the modern American woman of education and training, such as is to be acquired in colleges and normal schools, is unique in the history of the sex. She develops ambitions and capacities utterly beyond anything dreamed of in Europe, and she is not content with marriage, although she may be either single or married while her evolution is in progress.

It leaves her a novelty to which this generation is gradually becoming accustomed, a factor it must reckon with, and yet an experience of the present and the future whose complete destiny is far from being already worked out.

Her fate, once so meekly at the disposal of man, is now in her own hands. Mrs. Hillis sees her molding it both for her own welfare and for that of the world about her; but so far as man's influence is concerned, it is counting less and less, one way or the other.

She would disdain an inch of advantage. As an all-round athlete, Miss Eleanor Sears would no doubt satisfy Mrs. Hillis' requirement that the modern woman be able to laugh at male protection, while the old phrase of "arms and the man" applies as well now to women, since Mrs. Elizabeth Tupperwein has proved herself one of the crack shots of America.

The list, if it were supplemented with the names of the women who have achieved prosperity in trade, law, medicine and other competitive fields of livelihood, would fill a page. Reviewing the changes which these achievements have brought about, Mrs. Hillis remarked:

"All the old home life and tasks and simple pleasures are changed. It is as cheap and much easier to buy clothing ready made as to have it made in the home. Quiet hours when mothers and daughters sat together uninterrupted by telephone or doorbell are memories of the past. It is doubtful whether anything in our present conditions can make up to the loss of the quiet hours on the other hand, degenerate into the society women, who bear the reproaches of critics and of hypercritics, although social diversions are not invariably criminal.

All these women, young, middle-aged and advanced in years, have their separate measures of responsibility under the new condition of woman's affairs; and all, if they would but assume them, have their paths of happy usefulness marked out for them. Mrs. Hillis puts the duty and the way very clearly, as though she were blazing a road through the forest of difficulties which the novel state of things has raised up.

Her Right to be Supported.

"Society is organized upon a basis which recognizes the right of woman to be supported by other people, because she is expected to make her return as mother and home-maker. When she declines to fulfill these duties, or when, without any fault of her own, she cannot fulfill these duties, society experienced that relation to regard it only as a poet's ideal.

It is a transition time. It is too soon to predict the future. Meanwhile, what is to be done? Should woman undertake to share the work of man? Not at all, unless necessarily compelled. Such increase of competition has already greatly increased his difficulties. Shall we go back to the old, quiet, clinging and simpler living? We cannot. The men will not have it. Then what? Such conditions have not come about by chance. We are in a world where there is a definite purpose running through all events, where there is a definite march forward. It is, then, for women to find their place and fall in line."

"The women of wealth, large or moderate; the women of leisure, the women of resources in excess of their own needs, constitute a class which, from their surplus of time, may contract the 'club fever' and make too much of talk and too little of deeds. They may, on the other hand, degenerate into the society women, who bear the reproaches of critics and of hypercritics, although social diversions are not invariably criminal.

All these women, young, middle-aged and advanced in years, have their separate measures of responsibility under the new condition of woman's affairs; and all, if they would but assume them, have their paths of happy usefulness marked out for them. Mrs. Hillis puts the duty and the way very clearly, as though she were blazing a road through the forest of difficulties which the novel state of things has raised up.

Her Right to be Supported.

"Society is organized upon a basis which recognizes the right of woman to be supported by other people, because she is expected to make her return as mother and home-maker. When she declines to fulfill these duties, or when, without any fault of her own, she cannot fulfill these duties, society and state have the right to expect of her an equivalent in other service.

"Economic and philanthropic work in the old, narrow sense, but the betterment in every way of our future citizens as well as the relief of present distress—seem at present the most possible and most needed way of returning an equivalent for value received. The transition from the old home life with its constant demands, and the new conditions where the demands are largely external and not obligatory, has come with a realization on the part of women to what it signifies, so it is not strange that it should be unappreciated and misunderstood.

There is a very simple old rule which clarifies the whole matter. 'Every benefit implies an obligation; every opportunity a responsibility.' When women once awakened to the fact that, however conditions may have changed, underlying principles remain the same, and that their own duties will be met as is befitting the women of our great republic."

Now this, if the new woman of Mrs. Hillis' vision has any of the mettle she sees in her, appears likely to make an excellent equivalent for value received. The position of woman has held hitherto in society.

She has attained the stage when no armored knight need come dusting down the road to rescue her from the dark tower, and then kneel in creaking joints and hinges to be rewarded with the privilege of a kiss upon the tips of her perfumed, taper fingers.

Knights? Shucks! This is the era when Lady Swendin ought to be thinking about hauling her own war harness off the manor wall and riding out to deeds of daring do, saving a beggar boy here and there, and rescuing a white slave there, and winning prizes of philanthropy happen near enough to that perfumed maid to give her a chance at them.

And as for the kisses—well, grateful to be kissed, and in the absence of their rescue, can do quite as well in gratitude as the old-fashioned, heroic knights used to, in the absence of their chivalrous manners.—Philadelphia North American.

Railways Breaking Down Caste System in India

Frank Carpenter Describes Cause and Effect—The Railways Great Civilizers Although They Stir Up the Revolutionists—Indian Railways Described.

(By Frank G. Carpenter.)

Calcutta, India.—The railways of India are the strongest link in the chain which binds it to Great Britain, and at the same time one of the factors in the unrest which is tearing the country apart. The extreme views turned from a call upon Mr. Robertson, the viceroy's secretary of commerce and industry, under which department the railways are managed.

"One of the striking features of this unrest just now is an anti-railroad crusade carried on by the extremists among the revolutionary agitators. They claim that the means by which British money for robbing the natives, they say that the dividends and interest go out of India, and that the railways are a bad thing for the people, not only in the money way, but on the ground of religion. They are using this argument to excite the masses, who can be stirred up only by attacking their religion and imperiling their caste. The extreme views among the native leaders, who could regulate the traffic to suit their faith."

India's Greatest Civilizer.

"But are the extremists not right in saying that the railways are affecting caste prejudices?" I asked.

"Yes," replied the secretary. "They are bringing the people of India together and, for a time, at least, leveling the caste level. When we first began to build railways the natives demanded that special cars be furnished for certain castes. The Hindus and Mohammedans would not sit down together and the Brahmins demanded to flock by themselves. After a time they found that they could not get the cars, and they then, tacitly decided that caste must be abolished while on the rails. Since the native has apparently dropped such prejudices when he enters the cars, although he assumes them the more rigidly when he leaves. You cannot imagine what the means until we have lived a long time in India and know something of the people."

India's Big Railway System.

The British have a right to be proud of their Indian railways. The mileage of the Indian lines now exceeds that of any country in Asia, and is surpassed by only four other countries of the world. It amounts to more than 30,000 miles and it has doubled within the past twenty years. India has comparatively far more railways than Russia. It has one mile to every sixty square miles of country, and the 1,000 people. The railways here are well built and economically managed. Two-thirds of the lines have been constructed by the government and the balance more than half were built by the native states. I do not know the exact cost of construction per mile, but altogether the roads have cost more than $1,200,000,000, which is low in comparison with those of the United States.

Most of the Indian railways are paying dividends. Their gross earnings are fast approximating $200,000,000 a year, and the traffic is steadily increasing, both as to passengers and freight. The passengers annually carried now number more than 300,000,000 and the freight amounts to something like $2,000,000,000. These figures are small in comparison with those of our railways, but it must be remembered that we have more than seven times the mileage of India and that our capitalization is more than thirteen times the cost of the Indian roads. Our railway mileage approximates 300,000, our capital is over $16,000,000,000 and our net railroad earnings are more than $200,000,000 per annum.

At the Stations.

But come with me and take a railroad trip across India. We shall start at Calcutta and go by the East Indian route. We drive, in a closed, a closed box upon wheels, hauled by lean horses and driven by a Hindoo in turban and gown to the station.

The express goes at night and it is a p. m. when we reach there. The depot is a large building covering a block, with long waiting rooms extending out from the train. The floors are of stone and they are covered with natives. Men and women are sitting and lying about. Here they sprawl out at full length on the flag and there squat in groups against the railing between the waiting rooms and the train shed. All are wrapped in white sheets, and as they see me take notes they pull these up around their dark faces to shield them from the gaze of the heathen foreigner. Some have covered their heads and lie asleep on the sand.

Notice this woman near me. She lies on the floor with her head on a bag, so covered that only the thin face can be seen. As I look a black Hindoo in dirty white cotton lies down beside her. He is her husband. He places his head on the bag and is soon fast asleep.

There, the gong rings! A train is called and the third-class passengers rush their way through. Some carry baggage upon their heads. Others have bags and bundles on shoulders and backs. All the men are barefooted and all wear turbans, caps or white sheets, and the women are in white sheets, and their thin legs are naked.

The poor benighted Hindoo notices me and he looks at me. He is outcast from first to last. For pants he makes his skin do.

Mixed with this motley crowd are Mohammedans in gowns, Perses with hats like inverted coal scuttles, and British soldiers, and the servants of civil officials in livery. It is one of the strangest crowds to be found anywhere, and the white clothing so predominant in this light it seems ghostlike and ghastly.

Indian Valets.

We sit down a moment in the station while our servants buy the tickets, check the baggage and secure our seats.

There is more nonsense talked about backache than any other disease. Some people have been frightened into the belief that every backache means deadly kidney trouble, and that the only cure is the use of scientific fact not one backache in twenty has anything to do with the kidneys. Most backaches come from sheer weakness and kidney drugs don't do anything to cure them. The only thing to brace you up and give you new strength and that is exactly what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do. Other backaches are really muscular rheumatism, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the worst cases of rheumatism by driving the poisonous acid out of the blood. Other backaches are the symptoms of ordinary ailments such as influenza, indigestion, constipation and liver complaint. In women backaches often come from the use of blue glass, which is low in comparison with those of the United States.

The one way to cure these backaches is to strike at the root of the trouble with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which enrich the blood and bring strength to aching backs and weak nerves. Mr. Alex. Cockburn, Deloraine, Man., writes: "About three years ago I suffered terribly from backache. I consulted a doctor and took his medicine, and wore a plaster, but did not get the least relief. Then I got a bit, but as it was as useless as the other treatment, and my suffering still continued. Then one of my friends asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I did. Before they were all used there was some improvement in my condition and I got three boxes more. By the time I had taken these all the signs of the pain had gone, and as it was permanent, my only regret is that I did not hear of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills sooner, for not only would it have saved me the expense of twenty-five dollars uselessly spent in other treatments."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or returned to the manufacturer by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Doctors' Preference

What then becomes of men's chivalry? Mrs. Hillis sees it fast disappearing, and is in doubt whether it is worth preserving under the new dispensation of woman's self-dependence.

"The chivalry of American men has been our boast," she comments. "We have gloried in this noble quality even among the lower classes. It is a question whether it can exist much longer, whether it is already as general as formerly. And why should it be?"

"The old basis of feudal chivalry was frailty and dependence. The spirit of protection sprang up because women needed protection. The American girl scoffs at that. She is self-reliant and self-sufficient. The six-foot captain of the basketball team laughs outright at the slender youth who would protect her. The business woman can earn her own support and would be beholden to no one. If there is more respect for the masculine in all this, it is strange that men recognize and treat it as such."

"The attitude of our women is unprecedented. It is unlike that of the German woman whose aspiration is to be a good housewife and a good mother, the French woman, who has gone further than we in doing away with home and family, but who is her husband's partner, his treasurer, the planner and manager of his economies and business enterprises, and even to save as the American woman to spend. We are unlike the English woman, who still retains the idea that a man's house is his castle and he its chief."

"Woman's position as it stands today, is hard to define; the period, according to Mrs. Hillis' observations, is one distinctly of transition, with the past definitely cut off from retreat and the future a salvation only to be made by dint of hard courage and high intent. And there is always woman's love longing to be reckoned with. As she explains it:

"It is difficult to define the position of the American woman, especially since there are so many and so many kinds of her. In this period of transition few exactly agree as to what she should be. All cling to the homage, many scorn the protection. Her independence and equality to the other sex must be recognized. She is slower to accept man's responsibility and accountability. The prospect of losing her ease and irresponsibility frightens some, but to many more the great dread is the loss of that delicate ideal relation suggested by Tennyson's well-known lines beginning:

"Woman is not undeveloped man, but diverse—distinct individualities. But like each other even as those who love."

"In spite of scoffers, too many have

A New style Gas range

Double cooking top; no "stooping" necessary while cooking or baking

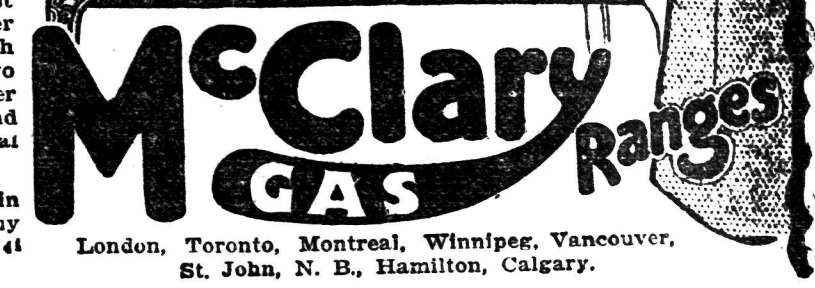

Model H is a new 1910 style of gas range. It will soon achieve great popularity. With Model H you can cook a meal with the greatest ease and convenience. You will never be crowded for room. The cooking top is double size—equal to eight burners and a simmering burner. And just note the convenient location of the baking and broiler ovens. No "stooping" is necessary when putting in or taking out pies, cakes, steaks, etc.

The broiler and drip pans are smoothly coated with white enamel. You can wash and clean them as thoroughly as you can an enamelled sauce pan. You can change the oven from a circulating to a direct action oven by simply moving a slide.

Be sure and see Model H at the nearest McClary agency. Also look at the other seven styles of McClary Gas Ranges. Each style can be supplied with or without two burner extension, oven thermometer, water heater, reservoir, high speed blower and prizes of philanthropy happen near enough to that perfumed maid to give her a chance at them.

And as for the kisses—well, grateful to be kissed, and in the absence of their rescue, can do quite as well in gratitude as the old-fashioned, heroic knights used to, in the absence of their chivalrous manners.—Philadelphia North American.

our seats in the train. In India everybody who is anybody travels with a servant. In fact it is almost impossible for an Englishman or American to get along without one, and in bringing up your railway fares you must add to the fare of the class by which you travel a third-class fare for your servant. This servant speaks English. He acts as your interpreter, attends to the hiring and paying of your cabs, and waits upon you at the hotels. In many places you will get nothing to eat if you have no servant. Your bed is not made, your boots are not blacked, and you may clap your hands and ring and ring without getting an answer. If you have a servant he sleeps on the stone floor outside your door and shifts with the other servants to get the best for you.

If you do not watch him he will cheat you right and left and always gets a commission of 10 per cent upon all that he takes.

Forty Thieves.

The most of these servants are thieves. They make me think of the gang which Ali Baba robbed. I know they rob me, and I have already had them in my employment during this trip to India. The first almost froze to death at Darjeeling. He had not enough muscle to get what I wanted, and after I discarded him I found some woolen clothes missing. The second was a black liar with a turban as big as a peck measure. He was partially blind because of his eyes and was clad in European dress and a stockinged pair of shoes. There was also a little trouble as to a gold sovereign which I had lost and which he at once picked out of the outside pocket of my overcoat. I now have a tall, fine-looking Aryan with a swarthy complexion, an enormous black moustache and a height of six feet. He wears a costly turban and a long gown belted in at the waist. I pay him 32 cents a day, but, of course, he has his commissions.

This man will manage our trip. He gets in advance through the gates, and when we reach the cars he finds that the best seats are covered with our pillows and bedding. Everyone carries his own sleeping conveniences while travelling. The cars have leather-covered benches, and the passengers make their own beds. As a rule the women have cars to themselves, so that the men can undress and put on their pajamas as nightfall comes on. In the morning the servants roll up the comforts and rugs and pack them away under the seat or on the racks overhead.

Passenger Traffic.

In travelling over India I have found the cars universally well filled. Every train has its first, second and third classes. The first is made up of British officials, Americans and well-to-do Englishmen, with now and then a high-ranking native official. The second has the poorer classes of the British, army officers of second rank, with now and then a soldier or so, and perhaps well-to-do natives, and a third class, which is made up of the people, and, as I have already said, it brings the profits. It constitutes two-thirds of the traffic, the rate being considerably less than one-half cent per mile. During the past year more than two hundred million passengers were carried at that rate, and the traffic is increasing greatly from year to year.

As to the women passengers, those of the first and second class have cars especially for them. A Hindoo lady dare not show her face without losing caste, and no Mohammedan woman goes about without her head veiled. The ordinary compartment for such people has windows of blue glass which permit the women to look out, but through which the men cannot see in. The women come to the depots in closed chairs or palanquins. They pull their shawls over their faces as they walk through the stations, and at the same time may leave their feet and ankles entirely bare. The ankles often have rings of silver and gold on them, and the slippers below may be of gold thread. In some of the compartments the windows are so fixed that the women cannot see out, and upon one train which took me up the Himalaya mountains we had a car covered with canvas as thick as the tent of a circus. This was filled with Hindoo ladies going up to Darjeeling. They were riding through the finest scenery of the world, but for all that they might as well have been tied up in leather bags and sent on as mail.

At the Stations.

One of the greatest enemies of the railroad in India is the white ant. The insect eats the ties, the telegraph poles and everything wooden. It chews up the posts at the stations, and more than a half million Hindoos and other East Indians employed on the railroads. They are the laborers who build the roads, and at the same time many of them have important positions in connection with the traffic. There are Indian station agents and Indian brakemen, with now and then an Indian engineer. Not a few of the conductors are natives, and nearly all the telegraph clerks are Hindoos or other East Indians, who have grad-

CANADA'S ONLY LYNCHING HAPPENED 65 YEARS AGO

On Tenth-Concession of Lanark—Terrible Punishment of a Man Suspected of Murder—The Story.

By George Dalton, in Collier's Weekly.

"Canada has never had a lynching." This statement has been repeated so frequently that it is accepted as true by nearly all people who know anything of Canada. Of late it has appeared thus specifically stated in several magazines of Canadian and American circulation. It is readily believed in view of the general law-abiding character of the Canadian people, who are the cream of the emigrants from Europe and the United States. It is quite in keeping with the respect for law prevalent in Canada among her native-born residents and all settlers and visitors; it is as much in keeping with the flexible, yet equitable, justice of the land, and yet it is not true. Canada had a lynching, and one of a peculiarly shocking character in its details. It did not occur in her frontiers, but in the heart of a district not fifty miles from the capital of the Dominion. The excuse for the act, if any excuse can be made for such an act, was the terrible character of the crime of which the victim was guilty, coupled with fear on the part of the community that he would be able to escape its consequences. That such fear was apparently unfounded does not weaken the excuse.

Lanark County Has the Honor.

The man lynched was named Isbey; he was taken from the county jail at Perth, Ontario, in Lanark County. The men who lynched him were said to be his neighbors and some townsmen, and the crime of which he was guilty was the murder of his wife and all his family but one boy, supposed to be dumb at the time of the murder, but whose tongue was loosed as he grew older, and who gave the testimony upon which the murderer was imprisoned. Other strong circumstantial evidence, and at length a confession, with either falsehood or mystery as its chief component, brought home to all that Isbey was a murderer. He had repented and confessed, and the confession, and the repouising of his cause by the minister to whom this repentance was professed, along with a report that a plea of insanity, based on the weird details of the confession, would be made the basis of an effort to save Isbey, were sufficient to arouse the fury of the settlers among whom he lived. In the night the jail door was broken in with a tree trunk as a battering ram in the powerful hands of the sturdy men, the deputy sheriff was overpowered with his guards, and Isbey was taken and hanged.

The Story of a Centenarian.

It must be more than sixty-five years since this occurrence, for it was told to me by a woman who was nearly one hundred years old when she talked to me about it. She has since died at the age of one hundred and three. Her name was Mrs. James Smith, of the tenth concession of Lanark. Her son, T. W. Smith, now a man of seventy-five years, still lives on the homestead, some six miles from the scene of the murder that brought about this terrible occurrence. R. L. Richardson, editor of the Winnipeg Tribune, has written a book, "The Tenth Concession," based somewhat upon this occurrence, the new being the child who was witness in the case; the murder took place on the farm adjoining the author's boyhood home, and his mother took the supposedly dumb boy to care for after the murder of the mother and older children. Many others from Ballderson, Ontario, the district in which the murder occurred, can corroborate any statements of the facts, including W. A. McIntyre, principal of the Manitoba Normal School, the editor of the Perth Courier, can produce from old files the main narrative of the events. "Yes," said old Mrs. Smith, reminisccently. "Some say now that he was tongue-tied or slow of speech, but we called him 'the dumb boy,' and those that know it best says that the God opened his mouth that the guilty might be brought to judgment. Isbey was settler like the rest of us; we knew little about him though, for he stayed by himself a lot. He had a handsome wife and four children besides the little lad just walking that we thought was dumb.

"One day Isbey came running through the woods, yelling to the neighbors nearest his house was on fire. When they came nothing could be done; he said he had been chopping in the clearing beyond the hill and came home to find the house afire. He had the dumb boy with him, and the bodies of the others were found in the ruins of the burned building. A neighbor woman took the child, and no one doubted his story just then. Yes, some one did, for I told my wife, and she seemed queer that when all of us were weeping over the remains of the poor mother and children, Isbey was eating a good supper of bread and pork, and James said: 'Don't make things any worse, unless—' and he would say no more.

The Dumb Speaks.

"Years after, the little dumb Isbey lad was watching the woman who kept him as she piled coals over the back oven on the hearth when he spoke suddenly and said: 'That is what father did; he hit mother with the black stick and threw her and sister into the cellar.'

"The woman called her husband, and the lad repeated his story. Before a week Isbey was in Perth jail, and the lad's evidence was heard by the magistrate. Other things now came to light, that the bodies had been found under the floor beams, and such things as men notice and remember when needed. Isbey finally broke down and confessed; he pretended repentance and conversion while there was hope for his life, but he had his eye on the scaffold he broke into fearful cursing and told the true story of his crime.

"While drinking in Perth he quarrelled with a stranger, who taunted him with 'Go home to your beauty wife, and see who visits her when you're away.' The taunt was a lie, but Isbey brooded over it till, he said, the devil himself came to him as he chopped in the woods and told him he should kill her and her children; the devil was in the shape of a black man, he said, and held stakes for him to sharpen and harden in the fire, and with these he killed his wife and children. When he raised the stick to hit the dumb boy, the child looked up and smiled, and he thought the lad was dumb and could not tell anyway, so he did not hit him. This was his story.

Making Razor-Strops of the Victim.

"When it got abroad that Isbey's lawyer was going to save him from the gallows by this story, making him out to be insane, and people had also heard that the minister he confessed to was trying to save him, they broke into the jail and lynched him. The deputy was a strong and fearless man, and his guards were stronger and bigger, but the men who came were determined to have Isbey, and what could three do against a hundred?"

"Worse than hanging him, they flayed him and made razor-strops and pouches of his hide, after an Indian custom. I have seen these articles myself."

Returning to Lanark after many years' absence, I drove from Almonte to Perth, and at the fork of the road we saw the old chimney (built as one of those old Scotch masons could build) still standing by the roadside on a rise of ground that commands one of the most beautiful rural scenes in Canada. We walked over to the spot and found the cellar full of them, still distinguishable. A passing laborer said: "Yes, that is the old Isbey chimney," and with his pitchfork he pointed out the Richardson and McIntyre farm-houses and others whose names were in the Order of Geneva is distinguished down that the church cannot fulfill its social function without "spiritual police and ecclesiastical discipline."

CHURCH DISCIPLINE IN SCOTLAND

Story of Stern Spiritual Government That Favored No Person—A Book Full of Interest.

Dr. Hay Fleming's "The Reformation in Scotland: Causes, Characteristics, Consequences" (Hodder and Stoughton, 10s 6 net) travels over a wide field and bristles with controversial topics. To the average man who is not enamored of controversial questions, perhaps the most interesting part of the book is that which deals with discipline in the Reformed Church. In the Reformation, the greatly admired, held the view that the Church had to do not only with the conversion of the individual, but also with the purification of social life. In the Order of Geneva is distinguished down that the church cannot fulfill its social function without "spiritual police and ecclesiastical discipline."

How zealously the Reformers set themselves to reproduce in Scotland the methods of Geneva is seen by the evidence afforded in Dr. Fleming's book.

Forms of Correction.

Church discipline, stern in its methods, was carried out without respect of persons. Not only the common people but the clergy had to submit to the public censure of the church. Thus we find the lord treasurer of Scotland for a breach of the Seventh Commandment compelled to give public satisfaction in the Church of St. Giles. In 1587 the Countess of Argyll was ordained to make public repentance for assisting at the baptism of James VI. "in a papistical manner," the repentance to take place in the chapel in which the baptism had been performed. For a grave breach of the Seventh Commandment, Paul Methven, minister of Jedburgh, who had a good reputation for honesty and godliness, was publicly excommunicated and deprived of all functions in the church. It sometimes happened that the accused parties rebelled against their ecclesiastical superiors, but frequently on second thoughts they concluded that discretion was the better part of valor and showed signs of repentance. In these cases provision was made for the submission of the penitent, but in order to mark the gravity of the offence the accused was ordered to stand for an hour in a humiliating position outside the church door on Sabbath morning with a paper on his head, on which were written the words, "Behold the Contemner."

The Elder's Duty.

It might be supposed that such methods of discipline would gradually disappear as Scotland became more enlightened, but as a matter of fact during the eighteenth century the power of the kirk was consolidated and its system of discipline reduced to something like scientific precision. How completely the kirk set itself to the work of social reform is shown in the following extracts from the late Dr. John Watson's (Jan MacLaren) book, "The Scot in the Eighteenth Century":

"It was the duty of the elders to go round a village at 10 p.m. and see that the people were in their homes, from which has arisen the phrase 'elder's hours.' And upon them lay the task, difficult in every age, of supervising the public-houses; for though drinking was one of the characteristic customs of the eighteenth century, drunkenness was treated as one of the sins of the flesh. The elders also patrolled the markets and fairs to see that nothing was done amiss; they were, indeed, under the direction of the minister, the moral police of the parish, and if they had no direct authority they could always appeal for the help of the magistrates, and, in some cases, it was arranged that a magistrate should sit in the session in order to take civil action when the limit of ecclesiastical authority had been reached. The whole range of transgressions, small and great, came within the range of this court's vision and the lash of its punishment. A foot-thief was tried for carrying food to his mother on the Sabbath, and Hamilton, Robert Burns' friend, for ordering a dish of new potatoes to be dug in his garden on the same day."

Self-Imposed Tyranny.

In his chapter on Scotland, Buckle writing from the standpoint of modern Liberalism, was fairly baffled for an explanation of the strange fact that the Scots should submit to what he considered clerical despotism in its most tyrannical form. Had he known the working of Scottish ecclesiasticism the cause would have been clear, and that the tyranny was self-imposed, and

KING EDWARD'S GODSONS

The Oldest Was Born in 1863, the Youngest Only Two Months Ago

In making arrangements for the funeral procession of King Edward, it was proposed by one of the court officials that a place should be assigned to the adult godsons of the dead monarch, but for some reason this suggestion met with small encouragement and was finally ignored.

The oldest godson of late King Edward is Lord Castlemaine, who was born in 1863 while the youngest is the infant Lord Somerton, born two months ago to Lord and Lady Normanton.

The heir apparent, Prince Eddie, was King Edward's nearest and dearest godson, while another favorite was Prince Olaf of Norway, who was christened at Sandringham when he was a year old. Count Gleichen, who is 42, was a godson who enjoyed King Edward's special favor, and the late sovereign had planned to attend his wedding in June, which was to be held in the Chapel Royal.

It was as Prince of Wales, of course, that King Edward took sponsor to his godchildren. In 1871 he became godfather to the present Duke of Marlborough, and a quarter of a century later he conferred the same honor upon the duke's elder son, Lord Blandford. Other dual godsons were the Duke of Albani, who is now 37; Lord Hamilton eldest son of the Duke of Abercorn, and Lord Albert Edward Godolphin Osborne, brother of the Duke of Devonshire.

Lord Dalmeny, who married Miss Grosvenor last year, was a frequent guest at Sandringham, for the late King had a great admiration for this godson as sportsman.

John Ward, brother of the Earl of Dudley, was a godson in whom he always took deep interest. When Mr. Ward married Miss Jane Reid, daughter of the American ambassador, King Edward attended the wedding, and he stood godfather to their son last spring.

The first godson the late King adopted after his accession was Edward Reid, the first child of the court physician, Sir James Reid. Sir James was for many years a personal friend of the late King, and he accompanied the King on his last trip to Biarritz and was in constant attendance during his final illness at Buckingham Palace.

SERMON FROM SHAKESPEARE

And of all my lands is nothing left me but by body's length. Henry VI, Part III, Act V, Sc. 2.

Warwick, in the battle of Barnet, had received his death wound. He was the wealthiest nobleman in England and the most powerful. He had a "Proud scatter-up men pull-down of kings." In his dying moments what a weak thing he was, how powerless was his wealth to save him. He realized that his years of energetic action, his ambitious and successful schemes and plots had left him absolute owner of just as much land as would hold his body's length. A soldier thought that! The greedy robber, the land-grabber should take it to heart. Man's wealth is evidently not to hoard and possess. He must have a higher destiny or else life is a failure and not worth the living.

It was natural that Shakespeare should make Warwick speak of England in terms of land. England in the fifteenth century was an agricultural country. The ideal life for every Englishman was one spent, war when he was engaged in war, on his broad estates. He was a kind of landlord; his retainers and his tenants were his subjects. He was proud of his broad fields, his parks with oak and chestnut shaded. It was the ideal of the nation. Even an aristocrat would not to hoard and possess. He evidently had a higher destiny or else life is a failure and not worth the living.

HIS DAUGHTER KNEW THE RIGHT REMEDY TO CURE KIDNEY TROUBLE.

The United States is all right, you know, but Uncle Sam's doctors have not found a cure for serious Kidney Trouble. When sick folks down there want to get well, they send to Canada for Gin Pills.

At least, that is the way Mr. H. S. Ball, of Oxford, Ohio, was cured of a bad case of Kidney Disease.

Mr. Ball took the usual remedies prescribed by the doctors, and wore plasters, and was rubbed with liniments—but steadily grew worse. In a letter to his daughter, who lived in Canada, Mr. Ball wrote of his serious condition. His daughter immediately sent him two boxes of Gin Pills, which did him so much good that he knew he had found the right remedy at last.

"Find enclosed one dollar for which please send me two boxes of Gin Pills. My daughter sent me two boxes and I had a bad case and am getting well. I find I am getting well here in the same fix that I was in, and I shall surely recommend Gin Pills to everybody."

TERRIER CALLS UP CENTRAL.

The operator at Grimsby telephone exchange received an unexpected call from the premises of a firm of tobaccoists in the early hours of Sunday morning. Putting the instrument to his ear, his surprise developed into wonderment, for all he could get in reply to his usual query, "What number, please," was the vigorous barking of a dog.

Coming to the conclusion that there were burglars in the place, the operator informed the police. In the meantime the owner of the dog suddenly remembering that he had, contrary to practice, left the animal, a fox terrier, in the office, had gone to the premises to release it. When he arrived he found a couple of police officers about to force an entrance, and their astonishment was great when, reaching the office, they found that the terrier had climbed onto a desk five feet high and knocked the receiver of the telephone. Used to hearing its master's voice over the instrument, it had apparently barked into the mouthpiece to draw attention to its plight.—Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

CAUSE OF THE WHITE PLAGUE.

The reason why houses are haunted by the dread plague of tuberculosis is that there is only a flitting sensation, or an "all gone" sinking feeling, or again, there may be a most violent beating, with flushings of the skin, and visible pulsations of the arteries.

There may also be experienced a smothering sensation, gasping for breath, and feeling as though about to die.

In all such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart and restoring it to its normal beat, is beyond all question marvellous, as our thousands of testimonials will show.

Palpitation of the Heart.

One of the first danger signals that announces something wrong with the heart is the irregular or violent throbbing. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all gone" sinking feeling, or again, there may be a most violent beating, with flushings of the skin, and visible pulsations of the arteries.

Germany's Socialist Army Its Amazing Discipline

Handled With Consummate Generalship and Better Drilled Than the Kaiser's Official Army or Any Other in Europe—The Quiet But Mighty Struggle That Is Going on Over the Franchise, and That Divides Germany Into Two Rivals Who Will Not Stop Fighting Until One or the Other Is Done For.

Germany is laughing over a funny story invented by a Munich humorist, a grim and significant story in its own right.

"Kaiser Wilhelm," runs the tale, "reviewed his well-drilled legions on Tempelhof Field, and exhorted them to be true to the Kaiser and to shoot at night all foes of social order and public peace."

"As he finished this exhortation, a sinuous black procession defiled down the adjacent road. It was uniformed and unarmed, but it tramped forward steadily with more than martial discipline, and at a single cry of command changed formation, deployed and in hurried masses advanced as if to attack."

"His majesty's soldier eye fixed the magnificent drilled host. Who are these splendid fellows?" he asked.

"Your majesty," replied the first lieutenant, "said an aide-de-camp on their way to a meeting of protest."

The central organization works with the same impressive efficiency. The "Samaritans," as the Socialists call their ambulance and first help corps, can be concentrated at a single spot a moment's notice.

"Fifty Samaritans were scattered over vast areas, observing by constantly converging crowds of demonstrators and apparently inaccessible. Yet within twenty minutes of the first telephone order the fifty men were found en route for Treptow."

"How can you guarantee order if I authorize the demonstration?" asked the policeman.

"There was some hidden irony in this reply, because the Prussian subject learns discipline in the army through blows and rough punishments, while the social democrats claim that they keep order by moral authority alone."

"The immediate problem of these social warriors is not the overthrow of the agrarian conservative or 'junkie' class domination in Germany. In demonstrating for equal, direct, secret and universal suffrage in Prussian diet elections the new party is aiming at something which does not concern Prussia alone."

representatives out of 435. This suppression of the Prussian democracy in Prussia counteracts the advantages of the Liberal franchise law for the imperial Reichstag; and until the Prussian democracy captures the Prussian diet the whole German governmental system must remain agrarian and reactionary.

The real reaction at issue is which class is to gain control of the empire. According to the Prussian constitution the Socialists can never win. The Liberal franchise law they demand cannot be passed without the reactionary diet's consent, and the diet will remain reactionary until the Liberal franchise law is passed.

As long as social democracy protests peacefully the Prussian Government cannot persecute it. But it is marked, so long as will the Prussian Government continue to ignore its protests. Hence the discipline, ideal order and extreme moderation of the social democratic movement, as well as a strong side, and many Socialists secretly think that a little less talk about the party's love of peace would be desirable.

The dominant spirits in the social democratic party reply that to steal the peace would be to play into the Government's hands. The Prussian bureaucracy, they contend, is only waiting for a chance to wipe out the whole popular movement.

One complaint is that the party does not show the elasticity and adaptability which are needed for the attainment of practical results. The social democrats have been accused of German legislation because, following their leader Bebel and their philosopher Kautsky, they have refused to collaborate with the bourgeois Liberals.

ing through. The first dancing lights of the bluettes and suspended fairy lamps with their meagre charge of oil, cast curious outlines on the walls. Ogreish forms leaped mysteriously. There were fuses and tinklers, veiled women, queer little bullock carts with jangling bells, loading pariah dogs, naked children, filthy and misshapen fakirs, opulent, corrupt men in red and blue, Arab horse dealers—all the world jostling and shouldering along.

But Briscoe did not care to consider the wonder or variety of this great fantasia. His attention was absorbed in manipulating his pony so as to avoid injuring anyone as he hurried along, and somewhat nervously, suddenly finding the clatter of hoofs close behind, dismounted and around in his efforts to escape. In and out he twisted and turned until, in a long thoroughfare, little used, he took the opportunity to gallop. A police havildar rode him down, but he reached the scene. In considerable excitement the man told of the terrors that awaited on the top of the neighboring hill, where the guard house stood. So he dismounted and climbed.

Before he reached the edge of the clearing he found armed police lying under cover watching the city building. It was entirely surrounded, and the question still remained, "Should it be rushed?" The inspector of police came to the young adjutant as he stood out of view of the defendant.

"No, no, Sahib," cried the man from within the jail, "go away. You are a good sahib. I do not want to kill you! Let the other come and take me!"

He was not quite Briscoe's usual voice, but the person to remove the barricade and come out. Neither was it quite Briscoe's usual voice that ordered the police to come forward and take the stalwart native in uniform to the Choultry.

OLD LONDON'S UNIQUE PARISH

Has But One Inhabitant and Is in Heart of Thickly-Populated Region.

The heart of London, that region about the Bank of England and the Royal Exchange, which has been dubbed "the financial hub of the world," stands in what is the strangest spot in the city. There is in this parish no church, no municipal office, and, it is said, but one inhabitant; yet its value in a parochial and official sense is equal to that of many another parish in the British metropolis with its thousands of taxpayers.

This is the parish of St. Christopher-le-Stocks, says HARRY WESTLEY. Some seven hundred years ago it was founded, no one knows exactly how or by whom, and is still in existence with all its rights and dignities.

The church was the spiritual resort of all "godly shop keepers."

In 1624 a graveyard was attached to the church, and it was upon this that the Bank of England was founded so that in 1781 the church was demolished. But no doubt to save the consciences of the money-makers the parochial rights and dignities were still maintained. The garden with the fountain within the Bank of England marks the site of the burial ground. The last interment took place 100 years ago, being that of one Jenkins, a bank clerk, 7 feet 5 inches high.

So the old Church of St. Christopher-le-Stocks went its way, but its parish remains, embracing the end of the space in front of the bank and the Mansion House. This parish has one inhabitant, and he enjoys full rights of voting for Parliament and all municipal councils.

THE SUBALTERN A SHORT STORY By Alexander Graham Simpson. The mess table was well decorated with trophies, and the sportsmen among the officers were jubilant at the addition of a new cup. They were all sportsmen, of course, though some were more sporting than others. That is, however, by the way. Conversation flowed cheerfully, and chaff that, respectful chaff which is essential under the eye of a sedate and accustomed to sound principles of discipline, was not wanting. Briscoe was adjutant. He was also a sportsman: not the sporting sportsman—just the plain thing. Besides that he was a student, and worked "the end" for the school. That was very necessary. In the first place the extra pay for the adjutancy was a godsend to a poor subaltern. In the second place, when half the British officers in a native regiment are away on special plague duty, whoever is responsible for regimental efficiency has need of a good punkah coolie during office hours.
