Legal Decisions

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or another's or whether he has subscription or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay up all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until the amount is paid, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncollected is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Select Poetry.

Is it Worth While?

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother bearing his load on the rough road of life?

Is it worth while that we jeer at each other in the blackness of heart? that we war to the knife?

God pity us all in our pitiful strife.

God pity us all as we jostle each other: God pity us all for the triumph we feel when a fellow goes down 'neath his load on the road.

Pierced to the heart; words are keen—And mightier far for woe or for weal.

Were it not well, in this brief little journey

On over the isthmus, down into the tide, We give him a fish, instead of a serpent, Ere folding the hands to be and abide Forever and aye in the dust by our side?

Look at the roses saluting each other, Look at the herds all at peace on the plain—

Man and man only makes war on his brother, And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain?

Shamed by the beasts that go down on the plain.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble Some poor fellow-soldier down in the dust?

God pity us all! Time oft soon will tumble All of us together, like leaves in a gust, Humbled indeed down into the dust.

—Joachim Miller.

Interesting Story.

The Deacon's Girls.

"I never saw anyone alter so much in my life," said Gran'ther Allen.

"There wasn't a prettier girl than Deborah Hale all the country through, ten years ago, and now look at her!"

Gran'ther Allen was smoking his pipe out on the porch, where the morning glories, trained to strings, made a pretty screening of light and shade on the floor.

His wife, a hearty old woman, with a complexion like a rosy Spitzenburg apple, had just come to the door.

The Allen kept the post office, but here, in Pumpkintown, the mail-coach passed through only twice a week, and the Thursday letters were all sorted over and dealt out to their owners long ago.

On the other side of the wide, maple-shaded road stretched the well-painted fences and thrifty out-buildings of the Hubbard farm, and it was of Mrs. Elias Hubbard, the deacon's second wife, that Gran'ther Allen spoke.

"I reckon," said Mrs. Allen, "that she has a pretty hard scramble of it. Deacon Hubbard he don't believe in keeping no hired help, and them three step-daughters, I sort of reckon they ain't easy to manage."

"Milly ain't bad-hearted," observed Gran'ther Allen.

"No, and no more ain't Abby; and little Essie she loves Mrs. Hubbard as if she had been her own mother. But the deacon he squeezes every cent afore he pays it out. If Deborah was a hired help, she'd get wages, but I guess she don't see the color of much money as things is now."

While the old post-master and his wife were thus discussing the private affairs of the hand-oms, white-painted farm-house opposite, the dweller therein were greatly rejoicing over a certain piece of luck which had befallen them, in the shape of a bequest from a certain ancient grand-uncle, who seemed to have overlooked the necessity for dying until now.

He had left fifty dollars each to Millicent, Abigail and Esther Hubbard and each was discussing how she should spend this financial windfall.

"Better put it in the savings bank, gals," said Deacon Hubbard, sagely.

"But it was left to us to spend as we pleased, father," pleaded Abigail, a handsome, red-checked girl, with every black hair and eyes of the shallow, glittering ebon of a glass bead. "I should like a crimson cashmere gown."

"No, Abby, no," said Millicent, whose style of beauty was decidedly that of Titian's Fornarina. "A gown indeed, to be worn out and to be done with! Now is the chance, if ever, for a piano!"

"A piano!" Abby uttered the words with a gasp. "But fifty dollars wouldn't buy a piano."

"A hundred and fifty would go far towards it on the instalment plan, and out of the egg and butter and strawberry money we could easily manage the rest," explained Millicent.

The deacon shook his chin thoughtfully. To his estimation a piano was the most frivolous of all things, yet there was something in Milly's business-like way of putting the question that gratified his paternal instincts.

"The girls are what she's talking about," he said to himself.

"Well, she wouldn't that be splendid?" he said to his wife, "but, Abbie, dancing up and down. 'Where would you buy it—at Downes' store?'"

"No, I'd send direct to Bridgeport," said Millicent, who was evidently the master spirit of the two. "Downes would have less variety, and he'd charge more in the bargain. I will write to-night if you think best, Abby."

"But what does Esther say?"

"Esther will say just as we do, of course."

Esther Hubbard, the youngest and quietest of the three, was busy in pairing apples for a certain favorite pudding of the deacon's.

Her eyes were cast down, her cheeks flushed.

"No," she said, in a low voice, "I can't join in the piano project, gals. I'm very sorry, but—I've spent my money."

Deacon Hubbard dropped his news paper, and stared over the tops of his spectacle glasses.

The girls gave a little start.

"Already?" cried Abby.

"But that's nonsense!" said Milly.

"You couldn't, you know. You haven't been anywhere."

"At that minute there was a mysterious bumping sound on the doorstep—a knock—the entrance of a gleaming piece of furniture, accompanied by two stout men.

"I've bought a sewing machine for you," said Esther, springing up so suddenly that the apples, pared and unpared, rolled all over the floor.

"And here it is! Seth Pollock, down at the store, is the agent. I've seen mother sit up and sew weary seams by hand, night after night, for so many years, after a hard day's work in the kitchen and washhouse, that I made up my mind she shouldn't endure it any longer; so I put Uncle Ebenezer's money into a sewing machine—a present to you, mother dear?"

Little Mrs. Hubbard burst into tears. "Esie, my darling! But I can't let you sacrifice everything to me in this way."

"Whom else should I sacrifice to, mother?" whispered Esther. "Who is my best friend and dearest-counselor? Who do I love best in all the world?"

The deacon's face gloomed.

"I never did believe in teaching my women folk idleness," snarled he. "Hand sewing was good enough for my first wife. I guess it wouldn't have hurt Debby much. And if Esther was so anxious to get rid of her money, I could have used half 'ont to buy a new ox cart!"

"But you have so many things, father," pleaded Esther. "All your work, mostly, is done by machinery, and mother has to toil so endlessly."

"Humph!" commented the deacon. Millicent frowned; Abigail shrugged her shoulders.

Evidently, no one was in accord with poor little overworked Mrs. Hubbard, but Esther.

"I'm very sorry," said Esther, "that I haven't enough money to help you with the piano, too. I do so love music. I always longed for an instrument."

"Oh!" said Abby, with a toss of her black braids, "we shall have the piano all the same; so you needn't be afraid. It will only take us the longer to pay for it. One thing is very certain—you shall never strike a note on it."

Mrs. Hubbard followed Esther out into the kitchen.

"Oh, Essie," said she, "you shouldn't have thought of me. The girls are seriously angry."

"I can't help that," said Esther. "If they had any eyes, they would have seen, long ago, that this horrible sewing, in addition to everything else, was killing you!"

"But don't mind their refusing to let you share the piano, Essie," whispered the stepmother. "Mrs. Pritchett has one at the paragonage, and I used to play when I was a girl. We'll go down every day or two, and I will teach you. Abby and Milly laugh at Mrs. Pritchett's old-fashioned piano; but there's a deal of music in it yet!"

"I dew declare," said Gran'ther Allen, as the maple leaves began to carpet the paths with scarlet, and even to scatter ruby jewels here and there in the road, "Deacon Hubbard's wife is pickin' up a deal! I never seen her step so light afore, and she actually sings at work—a thing she never did before!"

"It's the sewing-machine," said his old wife. "I took a seam over, yes day afternoon, and it jes made a game o' play outen the hull thing."

So that, when Mrs. Judge Basset gave her May party the next spring, and invited Mrs. Hubbard, the invitation was accepted.

"I feel ever so much younger since that sewing machine came," said she.

Mrs. Basset had a grand piano, and a pianist who came from Bridgeport at so much a night; but when the company arrived, lo and behold! the professor had not put in an appearance.

"Dear me," what am I to do? Won't any of you young ladies oblige me with a waltz, just to get the dancers on the floor?"

"The young ladies present" giggled, looked at each other, but made no move.

Deacon Hubbard leaned across two intervening matrons and spoke to Millicent.

"Daughter," said he, "you can play?"

Millicent grew pale.

"I couldn't strike a note, pa," said she. "I'm to nervous."

"Abigail, then?"

"Oh, please don't ask me! I should only break down!" twittered Abby, shrinking back.

The deacon frowned.

But in the midst of his wrath a light step passed him. Esther, in her simple white serge dress and blue ribbons went up to the piano, and quietly seating herself, began to play that wild, sweet creation where joy and sorrow seems to strive in the most musical of refrains—"My Queen."

Every chord in the famous grand piano rang out. The dancers sprang to the floor.

Esther went on playing, as if her fingers were instinct with musical magnetism.

The deacon rubbed his spectacles; his hard features worked.

"I declare," said he, turning to his wife, "that is music! I dunno whether to laugh or cry. And is that really our little Esther? How did she ever learn to play like that? And the other girls keeping their piano tight-locked, too, all the time?"

"I have been giving her lessons all winter on Mrs. Pritchett's piano at the paragonage," said Mrs. Hubbard, her eyes lighting up with love and pride. "and I think—dear little Essie—she does me credit."

"Well, I swan!" said Deacon Hubbard. "I am proud of her—yes, I am! There ain't no use denyin' it. And what's she playin' now—a quadrille? I declare, it sounds just like the old country dances they had when I was a boy! I'd like to go down the middle myself, if only some of the old friends could stand up with me again; but the deacon surreptitiously wiped his eyes.

"I must get Essie to play the old tune some time when we're alone," said he.

The professional arrived soon, full of excuses for her delay, and Esther was relieved with the cordial thanks of her hostess.

"I didn't know you were such an artist!" said Mrs. Basset.

And the two other Misses Hubbard were ready to eat one another up with envy and chagrin.

"Now I tell you what, girls," said Deacon Hubbard, when at last they reached home, do you just unlock that piano, and give your sister a fair chance at it, or I'll turn you and I mean she shan't be treated worse than a pirate any longer."

"Oh, of course, she really does play!" tartly remarked Milly.

"But how were we to know it?" said Abby.

"I guess you know it now," said the deacon. "I was up and down 'round of Esther to-night. Come here and kiss me, my girl! There's a flute someone; where up garret, and I mean to screw the pieces together, and see if I can't remember some of the good old tunes we used to like when I was a boy. P'raps we can have some duets. And mother shall play, too," with a kindly glance at his pale little second wife, "if ever she gets time to play anything else than the everlasting 'eck, 'eck o' that sewin'-machine."

From that day there was a change in the social atmosphere of the Hubbard farmhouse. Milly and Abby, so long the ruling elements, fell into the background. Esther and her stepmother became the queen and princess royal.

"And," said Esther, "father is so kind, and home is so homelike—and it is all owing to the money Uncle Ebenezer left us."

"No," said Mrs. Hubbard, quietly, "it is all owing to Esther's sweet nature and generous heart."—Saturday Night.

A Lover of Titles.

"Did you give the man money?" was asked of a citizen who had just parted with a man who walked with a limp.

"Yes—a quarter." "He's a chronic beat." "Well, perhaps." "But you should discourage such characters."

"Yes, I know; but when a man comes up to you, and calls you colonel, and says he was right behind you when you charged that battery at Antietam, how can you go back on him?" "But you were not at Antietam?" "No." "You were not a colonel?" "No." "You didn't even enlist in the late war?" "No, and do you suppose I'm going to own it up for the sake of saving a quarter? Not much! I've got a half dollar for the first man who calls me general."—Detroit Free Press.

Dr. Geo. A. Pickles, a very eminent doctor of Mahone Bay, N. S., says: "I knew a man on this Bay who has been sick for a long time. All the medicine we tried or could think of did not reach his case. He tried Canadian Bitters and other Patent Medicines, all failed and he was gradually growing worse. At last he tried a bottle of Dr. Norton's Dock Blood Purifier. Imagine my surprise that in less than a week he was much improved in health, and by the time he had finished the second bottle he was a well man. I now have great call on my Drug Store for Dock Blood Purifier which in the case mentioned proved itself far superior to any Bitters or Blood Purifier that I have ever known."

Fatal Glass.

"I sometimes think what I would do if Fred took to drinking," said a notable housekeeper to a friend. "It is so dreadful, what if it should come into my dish." At the same time she was mixing in liquor with Fred's dainty dishes. And one day, when he missed the old wine flavor in the pudding sauce on the table, he petulantly tipped his chair back, and refused to eat any of the food. The dreaded shadow came ultimately, and the friend thought the hand of the mother that stirred the wine into the son's food mixed the fatal glass for him.—National Bulletin.

HOSPITAL REMEDIES.

What are they? The growth of intelligence in medical matters has given rise to a demand for a class of genuine, reliable medicine. The opportunity of the ignorant and quack, who grew rich curing everything out of a single bottle has passed. To supply satisfactorily this demand this list of remedies has been created. They are the favorite prescriptions of the most famous medical practitioners of the day, gathered from the hospitals of London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. Prescriptions which cost the patients offered prepared and ready for use at the nominal price of one dollar each. Not one of them is a cure all; each one has only the reasonable power of curing a single disease, and each one keeps its contract. Sufferers from Catarrh, Diseased Lungs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Consumption, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Fever and Ague, Neuralgia, Female Weakness, Leucorrhoea or Nervous Debility, should send stamp for descriptive catalogue to Hospital Remedies Co., 308 1/2 West King St., Toronto. If your druggist does not keep these remedies remit price and we will send direct.

Says the Halifax Herald: "A young Halifax man went up the line on the W. & A. railway a few days ago to see his best girl. The girl's brother received him—rather warmly, horse-whipping him from Three Mile Point to Newport Station."

Impure Blood

Is the cause of Boils, Carbuncles, Pimples, Eczema, and cutaneous eruptions of all kinds. There can be no permanent cure for these complaints until the poison is eliminated from the system. To do this thoroughly, the safest and most effective medicine is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Give it a trial.

"For the past twenty-five years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of all diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."—C. C. Stock, Druggist, Lowell, Mass.

"My wife was for a long time a sufferer from tumors on the neck. Nothing did her any good until she tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which made a complete cure."—W. S. Martin, Burning Springs, W. Va.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

PREPARED BY Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

In the dash H. Davis was doing well when he fell.

For a time it looked as though the kick would be a tie when Knapp's toe tapped the tin and Kempton declined to try again.

The hop, step and jump was interesting, there being a number of contestants.

In the vault had Bill been followed it is evident he could have cleared a few more inches.

The broad jumps should have had heavier dumb-bells.

A race between William Payzant and Squire P. A. Dixon, the latter carrying a 13 year old boy and taking 55 yards start, was comical.

Prices ranging from $2.50 to $3.00 in value had been given by the Wolfville merchants and were presented with appropriate remarks by Dr. Jones.

The prize for the broad jump, given by Mr. J. Shaw, unfortunately was overlooked but was handed over afterward.

Thanking the ACADIAN for this space and those who directly or indirectly helped us carry out our programme, we are,

Yours truly, A. A. A. A. J. KEMPTON, Recorder.

Acacia Villa Seminary.

DEAR ACADIANS:—The examination at Acacia Villa, Horton Landing, took place on the Queen's Birthday. The day was unpleasant, but quite a number of visitors attended, half of whom were ladies. The training at this school is thorough. The pupils are well drilled in "first principles," are made to understand their work before they leave it; there is no cramming for exam, and consequently the boys are always ready and their work at the close well done. In the morning the "class order for examination" was as follows: Spelling and Reading, Geography, Arithmetic, Canadian History, Latin class in Caesar, Geometry, Latin, Reader, English Grammar. Afternoon, Natural Philosophy, British History, Virgil.

This completed the class work, and was most satisfactory all through, from the oldest to the youngest little fellow just beginning to explore the mysteries of the spelling-book. Next there were declamations and dialogues by sixteen of the boys. This part of the programme elicited much applause and was gone throughout, while A. Sutherland's "Mezappa's Ride to Death" and H. Burrell's "The Battle of Killiecrankie" were very well done. At the close H. Burrell presented a hundred dollar gold watch and the following address to Mr Patterson, who made a suitable reply:

To A. MCN. PATTERSON, A. M., Principal of Acacia Villa Seminary. DEAR SIR,—On this, the 21st Anniversary of the opening of Acacia Villa Seminary, it is fitting that the coming of age of your excellent institution for the training of boys should be marked in some special manner, and we think the best way in which this may be done is by presenting to you, its worthy principal and our esteemed instructor, this watch, as a token of esteem and respect with which you are regarded by us, your pupils of '88-'89, and the "old boys" out in the busy world who have so kindly assisted us in the purchase of this useful article. Some of us are leaving the school for the last time at the close of this term; and on behalf of the boys of '88-'89, and of those "old boys" who helped us, I have great pleasure in presenting to you this token of the regard with which you and your family may live long to enjoy the well-earned fruits of your labor, and also that the "old school" may for many years to come be the means of sending forth young men, the peers of those already so successful and useful in the world.

After this pleasing ceremony, so gratifying to Mr Patterson, was ended, brief addresses were given by Revs. D. W. Johnson, R. D. Ross, Warden Curry, Capt. Tuzo, Mr Forsyth and Dr Chipman, and "the boys" were out and off for their "summer vacation." Some of your readers will be interested to know more about the watch which is one of the most valuable Waltham's made. The school could not raise so large an amount, and the following circular was sent abroad, in reply to which, came letters and dollars from far and near:

CIRCULAR. We, boys of Acacia Villa, wish to present our teacher with a testimonial of our respect and esteem.

Mr Patterson has been teaching nearly thirty years and hundreds of his boys are now men engaged in the active pursuits of life, many of them filling the highest positions in the Dominion.

We boys of '89 wish to raise $100 by dollar subscriptions and present Mr Patterson with a gold watch and chain.

We cannot accomplish this unaided, and we appeal to the "old boys" for help, and we are sure the memory of the happy school-boy days at Acacia Villa will bring us many a dollar from the boys now busy in the world's great school.

This circular will be mailed to every old student whose address we can obtain. Please reply to

A. D. READING, Acacia Villa, Horton Landing, King's Co., N. S.

Some of these letters are interesting reading. I will quote one to show how a business man regards the school of his boyhood.

DEAR SIR,—Please add enclosed dollar to Patterson's presentation fund. Yours is a good idea, and it is a wonder it was not thought of before. This "grand old man" has done most useful work in many ways. One which particularly strikes me at the present I will mention.

He has provided a healthy Christmas house and school for a large number of boys who had lost one or both parents and who otherwise would probably have missed that guidance, counsel, training and development which he has always so conscientiously and carefully given. Yours very truly, Comment is unnecessary. Com. Porter wants eggs at 13 cents doz. Watch and wait for the Hyers Sisters Gorgeous Parade at noon on June 3d.

BAND CONCERT.—Do not fail to hear the Band Concert next Monday, June 3d, at 7 p. m., in front of Witter's Hall. Prof. Geo. Freeman, the great Australian Cornetist, will render one of his best selections.

FISHING TACKLE.—Fine stock now open. R. PRAT.

GONE TO BOSTON.—Addison LeCain, the popular conductor of the W. & A. R., left on Saturday morning last for a flying visit to Boston. His train will be in charge of Conductor W. Clarke, during his absence.

Paper Fancy Blinds at the Wolfville Book Store.

ST JOHN'S CHURCH, WOLFVILLE.—Next Sunday, June 2d, there will be afternoon service as usual at three o'clock in St John's church. The subject of the sermon will be, "The Gospel of Romanism, the Gospel of Protestantism, and the Gospel of Christ in reference to the Commencement of Divine Life in the Soul." Text, St John, III, 5. The usual morning service on the first Sunday in the month is postponed to June 9th, the Festival of Whit-Sunday.

Best Lime, $1.50 per Cask. R. PRAT.

DR. JONSON.—In addition to his lecture in College Hall on Friday evening last, Dr. Jonson preached at Canard on Sunday morning and in the Baptist church of this place in the evening. Sunday afternoon he spoke in College Hall on the subject of foreign missions. The meetings were all well attended, the church on Sunday evening being crowded. We noticed among those present persons from all parts of the county. The sermons and addresses were highly appreciated.

Wire Fencing, plain and barbed, and sets at WALTER BROWN'S.

SUPREME COURT.—The spring term of the Supreme Court will open on Tuesday next, in the Court House Kentville. Judge Wetherby presiding. There are four civil suits on the docket—viz., Rockwell vs. Tupper, Croker vs. Randall, Sanford et al vs. Sanford, and McArthur vs. Fisher. The first two are entered by W. E. Rocco, the third by Chipman & Shaffer, the last by Harrington and Chipman, of Halifax. Several criminal cases await investigation by the Grand Jury.

Use the Excelsior Dyes they prove to be the best and will dye almost twice as much as any other dyes, only 8 cents.

DEATH OF L. VAN ESS FISHER.—We deeply regret to have to announce the death of Mr Leander Van Ess Fisher, which occurred at the residence of his sister, Mrs E. Hodge, East Boston, Mass., on Friday last. Mr Fisher was a son of George W. Fisher, Esq., of Somerset.

Early in life he was afflicted with a disease in his leg which necessitated amputation. Until quite recently he has been in business in Berwick. A few weeks ago he entered a commercial college in Boston. It is supposed that hard study, combined with the extreme heat, induced the disease, completion of the brain, from which he died on Friday. He was buried at Berwick on Monday, the body being brought to Halifax by the steamer Halifax on Sunday night, accompanied by his brother, Mr Pascal S. Fisher, and his sister, Mrs E. Hodge—Walter's Chronicle.

Ladies be sure and ask your druggists and grocers for the Excelsior Dyes they are only 8 cents a package, and will dye brighter and dye more goods than any dyes sold.

MARRIED. STEARNS.—WOODWORTH.—At Boston, Thursday, May 23d, Mr Frank A. Stearns and Miss Alice Woodworth, formerly of Wolfville.
