WINDSOR AGAIN SUFFERS

Disastrous Conflagration on Sunday Morning Causes Much Destruction.

The town of Windsor which twenty-seven years ago on Oct. 17th was practically wiped out by fire suffered a similar experience on Sunday morning last although not of the same magnitude.

A. shortly after one o'clock the fire was discovered in a warehouse at the rear of the large brick building owned and occupied by Hants Wholesalers Ltd. on Water street.

The blaze, sweeping onward, crossed Water street, and the Stead Building known as the old post-office, in its burning hastened the destruction of the Brown Block, in which five families resided.

The fire demon passed by Mrs. Card's and P. T. Fugger's houses and swept across the bank residence occupied by P. A. Curry, also the Kelly house, occupied by Geo. D. Geldert.

A small wooden store on Water street, next Smith Bros. shoe store, occupied by Jas. Blatvelt, tailor, was completely destroyed. There the brick district resisted the onrushing flames with the assistance of the firemen.

Before this stage of the fire all the outside departments were co-operating with the locals, and only after almost three hours of a desperate struggle did the combined forces master the situation.

Over forty families lost their homes and many their entire belongings in the disaster. The total loss is placed at $350,000, with $150,000 insurance.

Football Notes

The Mt. Allison rugby team defeated the U. N. B. team at Sackville last Thursday afternoon by the score of 15 to 3.

The Wanderers of Halifax defeated the U. N. B. team at Halifax on Saturday by the score of 18 to 13.

On Monday at Glace Bay the Mt. Allison team went down to defeat before the Caledonia team, the score being 11 to 0.

ARMISTICE DAY

Wolfville Observed Memorial Anniversary in Fitting Manner.

That Wolfville people have not forgotten those of our sons who served and suffered in the Great War was amply demonstrated by the simple but fitting celebration of Armistice Day on Tuesday morning.

One of the most beautiful days in a season unsurpassed, the sun shone brightly on the vast crowd of citizens of the town and surrounding country gathered round the Memorial at the post-office to listen to and witness the exercises of the occasion.

The pupils of the public school were massed at the school grounds and marched to the scene of the celebration under the efficient direction of Principal Silver and the members of his staff, presenting a very fine appearance. The Girl Guides, the Boy Scouts and the Wolf Cubs, each with their colors, were arranged respectively in front, on the east, and on the west of the monument, while the members of the G.W.V.A. occupied a prominent position also on the right of the monument.

The programme which was outlined in THE ACADIAN last week by Mr. E. Percy Brown, who was responsible for the success of the undertaking, was carried out in detail in a manner which reflected the greatest credit upon all.

This included the singing by the children of the National Anthem, "O Canada," "The Recessional," prayer by Rev. R. F. Dixon with benediction by Rev. Dr. Marshall, and a most fitting and inspiring address by Mr. E. L. Curry, House Master at Acadia College Academy.

Once more we are assembled on this spot, reverently to do homage to the memory of those heroes who short years ago went out from among us to fight the battle for freedom and right. Primarily we honor the memory of those whose names are inscribed on the monument here, but at the same time we do honour to the great host of fallen heroes, of our own and other lands, who died for liberty.

By this act today we honour ourselves. We recall again those days of high adventure; days of bravely; days of self-sacrifice; days of fellowship with noble comrades; days of laughter, sorrow and of victory. Such memories time cannot blot out. And these memories, bring to us a message. And the message is concerned with the spirit and the sacrifice of those who laid their lives down for the altar.

What shall we say of a spirit that, in spite of circumstance, bodily fatigue, mud and muck; weight of pack; of rifle and of bombs; long marches and constant danger, found expression in a song such as this: "Pack all your troubles in your old kitbag and smile, smile, smile!"

What shall we say of their sacrifice? They were mostly boys who as "heroes, for instant sacrifice prepared" marched away from us not long ago. They loved us not but honour! And for honour they would die.

What shall we seek to catch their spirit and to be brave enough to sacrifice the lesser things for the greater, those "things they won, and trust with us to keep?"

Mr. Curry, who is himself a veteran of the war and a most effective speaker, was listened to with close attention. His address, which was most favorably commented upon, was practically as follows:

Following the stroke of eleven by the town clock two minutes of reverent silence in respect to the honored dead was given, after which the exercises were brought to a close by the sounding of the "Last Post" by James Northover and John Johnson.

Without ample protection many rose plants are lost every winter. At the Charlottetown P. E. I. Experiment Station, hybrid tea roses that were banked with earth and later covered with dry leaves and rough boards, came through the winter in fine condition.

The plants that were only banked with earth were, as a rule, severely injured and some were killed outright, according to the report of the Superintendent of the Station for 1923, issued by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

When news came last Sunday morning that our sister town of Windsor was in danger of being again wiped out by fire the new fire engine in charge of Mr. Frank Murphy was at once sent to the rescue. A speedy trip was made by the firemen who reached the scene in time to render most effective assistance and save a large amount of property.

At the time a very high wind was blowing and it was at considerable risk that the equipment was permitted to leave town but as a wise precautionary measure members of the fire company were detailed to keep a close watch through the night and be in readiness for immediate service if required. The engine with its pretty well exhausted crew arrived back at about 10.30 o'clock on Sunday morning.

FOR BETTER FIRE PROTECTION

Representatives of Districts Surrounding Wolfville Meet to Discuss Problem.

Representative citizens of Grand Pre, Hortonville, Greenwood, Gaspereau and Melancon attended the conference called by Mayor Chambers last Friday evening. These with a goodly number of those interested from town pretty well filled the Council Chamber in which special seating was provided for the occasion.

On motion of Dr. Roach Mayor Chambers was appointed chairman of the meeting and Coun. H. A. Peck was asked to act as secretary.

In a brief address the chairman stated the object of the meeting and called upon those who in response to his invitation had come to the meeting to express their views on the subject. He outlined the circumstances which led the town to purchase the new fire engine recently acquired and referred to the difficult position in which the Council found itself because of the requests for the use of the engine in cases of fires in surrounding sections.

While Wolfville would be always glad to render any possible assistance it must be remembered that the new equipment was secured in order to the better protect the property of the citizens against fires and that its absence at any time was a risk. Besides this the insurance on the machine covered only operations in Wolfville and would not apply if the machine was damaged while out of town.

His proposal was that the various sections should combine in the purchase of a similar machine which might be kept here and operated by the Wolfville firemen or placed in some other central location where it would always be available in time of need.

Town Manager Stairs was called upon and presented a statement of the probable cost of the undertaking, estimating that including interest, depreciation and operating expenses the yearly cost to each of the 370 property owners included in the section under consideration would be $2.93 for an engine similar to that owned by Wolfville, or $3.34 for a smaller machine.

After a further discussion of the matter, in which a number of those present took part, a resolution was unanimously passed, placing citizens present from the sections above mentioned on record as favouring the incorporation for fire protection purposes, such portions of said district as may appear advisable, and the acquiring of motor driven fire apparatus.

A committee composed of Messrs. E. H. Johnson, A. H. Patterson, O. A. Jess, Robie Newcombe, S. H. Tremblay, Allen Harris, G. L. Gertrude and James E. was appointed to prepare a suitable petition to be circulated in accordance with the statutes in said district, and to endeavor to arrange a special meeting of the Municipal Council at an early date to deal with the matter and to otherwise do all that may be necessary to ensure the early settlement of the question of fire protection.

It is hoped that the result of this meeting will be such as will provide efficient fire protection for the populous and prosperous sections surrounding this town.

I TOLD YOU SO

When the assessors made the assessment for the year 1923 the early in mind the matter of justice between Wolfville and the county of Kings and province of Nova Scotia. Had the assessment been allowed to stand such justice would have ensued. But some smart Alex thought he could monkey with one part and the other would adjust itself. It did adjust itself but not the way said Alex thought; if he were capable of such a process. I clearly stated and tried to impress it upon some of the numskulls in charge, of the trouble they were getting the town into; but like other long-eared creatures they were not amenable to reason and could only drive forward, and so the town is stuck for the sum of $600 which they never should be called upon to pay. Now they squeal and blame the fault on the assessors and apparently tell the Provincial Secretary so. At least his letter seems to imply such a statement.

Such a statement, if made to the Provincial Secretary, was simply a deliberate LIE for such was not the case. The assessors made a fair and just assessment but since it did not suit some of the bosses who did not wish to pay their fair share of the town taxes, things were so manipulated that the Appeal Court raised the entire assessment over 100% and so the town is stuck for the sum of $600. Now, fellow citizens, I ask in all fairness, who was responsible for such a blunder?

ANNUAL MEETING

Of the Children's Aid Society of Kings County on Tuesday Afternoon.

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society of Kings County was held at Parish Hall on Tuesday afternoon with the president, Mr. B. O. Davidson, in the chair. There was a fairly good attendance, although many sections of the county were unrepresented.

Rev. Dr. Marshall opened the meeting with an appropriate prayer, after which the minutes of the last annual meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. C. A. Patriquin, the secretary-treasurer, presented the financial record for the year, which indicated a slight deficit which it is hoped will be provided for by anticipated donations.

Rev. Douglas Hemmon read the report of the agent, Mr. H. Stairs, which proved a very interesting review of the work done during the year. Fourteen children were placed in the custody of the Society during the year, making the total number in the twelve years since the inception of the work here 119.

Many of these have been adopted into good homes, while eleven are now at the Maritime Home for Girls at Truro and three boys are at the Industrial School in Halifax. The report elicited considerable discussion and a number of those present gave expression to their appreciation of the value of the service rendered by the Society during the year.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President—B. O. Davidson; Vice President—H. Troyte-Bullock; Sec.-Treas.—C. A. Patriquin; Agent—H. Stairs.

The Presidents representing the various sections of the county were elected as follows: Kentville, Judge Webster and the Regent of the I. O. D. E.; Berwick, Mr. J. M. Patterson; Cannis, Mr. R. W. North; Canard, Rev. G. A. Logan; Hortonville and Grand Pre, Mrs. F. C. Dennison.

The Executive will include the officers of the Society and the following: Dr. M. R. Elliott, Mr. H. B. Calkin, Rev. Dr. Marshall, Rev. Dr. Hemmon, Miss Harry, the Regent of the I. O. D. E., Dr. Young, Mayor Chambers, Miss Annie M. Stuart and Mrs. W. A. Chipman.

The question of the care of the feeble-minded, which has always been one of the greatest problems facing the Society's work, was discussed at some length and a resolution was passed providing for a conference with the Municipal Councils and Children's Aid Societies of the Counties of Annapolis, Kings and Hants, with the hope of securing some feasible solution of the difficulty.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. H. M. Chase, barrister, of Kentville, who has freely and without charge given his services as solicitor for the Society, and whose counsel and services have been very helpful in the work.

Mrs. H. W. Phinney also received the thanks of the Society for very valuable assistance which she has rendered from time to time, and very genuine regret was expressed that she is soon to leave Wolfville.

Dr. Young, the new professor of psychology at Acadia University, was present and gave a brief address, expressing his interest in the work and offering his assistance in every way possible, which offer was very gladly accepted.

NOTICE!

Accounts for Water rates were sent out about three weeks ago giving notice that "Water service to those premises for which all water rates are not paid on or before November 15, 1924, will be turned off. The water will not be turned on again until all past due water rates have been paid, together with $2.00 for turning off and on."

There are $1600.00 of water rates still unpaid. Saturday, November 15, 1924, is the last day for payment. After that date, the foregoing notice will be effective.

BRAVO! WOLFVILLE LADIES

The ladies of the Wolfville Baptist church have recently been conducting a drive in order to complete their allotment of $200 of the $50,000 which the Baptist women of the Maritime Provinces are raising towards the Acadia Forward Movement.

Last Thursday night at a special meeting of the committee in charge of this drive it was announced that already nearly $1,200 had been secured and with one or two collectors yet to be heard from the ladies of the local church have undoubtedly "gone over the top" by some $300. This with the gift of $1000 by the Social and Benevolent Society to Acadia makes a total of $2,200 which the Baptist women of Wolfville have contributed to the "Forward Movement."

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT BECOMING UNPOPULAR

THERE CAN BE no question but that public opinion has undergone a very decided change in its attitude towards capital punishment in recent years. There have been so many cases in which juries have not been able to arrive at a verdict in trials for murder is due no doubt to the unwillingness on the part of the jurors to become partners in the imposition of the death penalty. The result has unquestionably been that in too many cases murderers have gone free who should be devoting their lives to repay the state for the loss sustained because of their crime. Capital punishment is the expression of a barbaric law based on revenge and hatred, and revenge and hatred should be no part of the make-up of enlightened and humane civilization. As a detriment to crime the death penalty has failed miserably according to the finding of those who have studied the question closely. As an instance it may be mentioned that in Italy, where the death penalty has been abolished since 1888, the homicide rate per 10,000 is 3.48 (1920), while in the United States, where capital punishment is the law of the land, it is 8.5 (1921). Not only that, but capital punishment is uncertain in its application. In Canada, the percentage of convictions for capital offenses is 80, while of acquittals it is 20. In Chicago the acquittals amount to 71 per cent., and the convictions to 29 per cent.

We have no wish to be understood as making a plea in behalf of those found guilty of the awful crime of murder; but is crude and degrading hanging the only answer of society to the pitiable creatures who kill their fellow man? Society must defend itself against the homicidal bandit if our civilization is to stand, but certainly a more humane and better justifiable means of doing this can be devised than that which now prevails.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF BOOSTING

IT DOES NOT require a very good memory to recall the time when men shied at the word psychology. Now it rolls off the tongue of the average after dinner orator without any apparent effort on the part of the speaker. Fifteen years ago it was regarded as something that should be discussed only by the very learned and as a fit subject for college and university study.

The dictionary says that psychology is the science of mind. Every day we hear of the psychology of this, that and the other thing, and the term has become one of common use.

Most of all, perhaps, in everyday use, psychology is connected with boosting and knocking. Reduced to its simplest terms, the psychology of knocking is the constant reiteration of the same complaint about any given subject that creates a state of mind among the people which leads them to accept it as "Gospel".

The same holds true with respect to boosting. Incessant and tireless boosting eventually causes optimistic views to prevail. Most anything within reason is possible through right thinking and right talking. We can produce the proper mental attitude with optimistic talk.

Wolfville possesses natural and inherent resources needed to build a thriving and prosperous community. In many respects it occupies a unique position and particularly as a residential centre has attractions which few places can offer. There is really nothing wrong with Wolfville except, perhaps, that the psychology that we hear so much about has been applied in the wrong direction.

When every resident of Wolfville begins to tell his neighbors and friends about the splendid attributes of his home community we shall begin to see results. There may be some who will want to indulge in this practice; whose mind has been working in the pulling backward groove so long that it will not function in any other direction. For this reason, the responsibility rests all the more heavily on those who want to go forward. Constant repetition of the possibilities of Wolfville and surroundings will eventually overcome those whose thinking has been in reverse and set their minds and hearts to the job before them.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR

SOME DAY a master of words will appear to preserve in epic form the heroic figure of the country doctor. If life—real life—is built on service to one's fellow man, then St. Peter is going to find this human practitioner up near the head of the class when he opens the pearly gates on judgement day. Unheralded, unsung these faithful healers of human ills undergo more genuine hardship in a year than fall to the lot of most mortals in a lifetime. Rain, snow, sleet, storms, blizzards, zero weather—the country doctor merely takes them as all in the day's work. He never regards his hardships, his sufferings, his never ending labors for a mere pittance as heroic. It is just plain duty with him. Romance? Not a bit of it: It is only service, the fulfilment of the code of ethics he accepted when he dedicated his life to the alleviation of sickness and suffering.

The hardships of country medical practice have produced more uncrowned, unhonored heroes than the world can ever realize. Consider the lot of a country practitioner in winter. It is night, the thermometer is flirting with zero; a 30-mile gale is whipping the snow across the open space like buckshot, and into the sheltered nooks in huge drifts. The country doctor has just turned in after a long, hard day, covering perhaps fifty or sixty miles in attendance at the bedside of the ill. Praying for a few hours rest, he barely hits the bed when the telephone rings and he learns that John Smith's wife has developed pneumonia. Does the fact that John Smith lives 15 or 20 miles away, over the worst roads imaginable, decide the doctor to wait until morning? Should the physician make the attempt tonight? There is never any question about it. He drags himself from between the warm covers, dresses, goes out and hitches up the horse or cranks the flyver, and is away on his long journey, battling the elements, fighting sleep, mastering fatigue in order that Mrs. Smith may live and care for her home and children.

A hundred years of such work will not make the country doctor rich—that is, as the world views riches. But it will give him something ineffably higher, better, and more satisfactory—the knowledge that he has given a life-time of service to mankind, the feeling that he has returned health, and peace, and happiness to the humble homes around him. The country doctor is one of the greatest, one of the most noble of our institutions. We do not appreciate their worth, even though we may be their patients. The world can never repay them for their services they have given. These are a race of real men.

NEWSPAPER IS THE BEST "AD"; BILLBOARDS TO GO

NEW YORK.—Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., world famous creator of the "Follies", has ordered destroyed 64 billboards facing highways and railroads near New York advertising his shows. "Because," says Ziegfeld—"The public doesn't want unsightly billboards. Newspaper advertising is far superior to any other form of attracting the attention of the public. Newspaper advertising can accomplish its purpose without defacing the landscape. The signboard is frequently not read. In contrast, the newspaper is authoritative."

SCHOOL CHILDREN AND THEIR HEALTH

Hurrah! school has opened again! And what of the health of the boys and girls? "Keep a child robust and sound in body until he is eighteen" say medical experts, "and the chances are he will remain so throughout life". How important then that its health should be maintained. A word to Parents. Are your children free from frequent colds, enlarged tonsils, adenoids, decaying teeth? These are serious hindrances to their health. Are they free from eyestrain? Do they hear well? Are they sound in body and limb? If not, then in school they lose a golden opportunity. "Canada a Land of Opportunities!" we say, and yet in this land are we breeding a race that shows appalling signs of deterioration? Statistics show an average of one physical defect for each school child in the United States. Fully twenty-five per cent of the nation's children are below par. How is it with Canada? Are your children underweight? Being underweight does not necessarily mean being unlearned. Our schools aim at wholesome citizenship, and whether your boy goes into professional life or industrial life, sound health is essential to his success. What then can we do to make our boys and girls fit for the work of life?

Medical examination in the school is not a fad. It is based on medical research and confirmed by experience. When the war broke out, over twenty-five per cent of our boys were physically unfit. We must not repeat that neglect to the rising generation. Systematic medical supervision must be given to our children during the years they are at school. Careful medical examination should be given every child entering the school. And the mother should be present to hear what the doctor has to say, and in turn to ask questions for the benefit of the child. Especially so, in the case of non-Anglo-Saxon mothers. Thus they will come to understand that the school doctor is trying to help their child. And the mothers' intelligent co-operation is needed to attain the best results.

During school age there are adenoids and diseased tonsils to be watched. There are ear-aches and eye-strains to be relieved, and teeth to be treated. There are skin and scalp diseases, spinal curve and weak feet, all of which can be helped and corrected if treated in time. A delicate child is no longer looked upon with pride. In-so-far as we are endeavoring to be healthy, ashamed to be unhealthy, we are awake to the ideal of our generation.

What of the Child's teeth? If teeth are lost, food cannot be chewed, if they are defective, disease germs lodge in them, if teeth and gums are diseased, poison invades the system and undermines the health. The child suffers pain, and no one can be at his best mentally or physically while suffering.

What of your Child's Sight and Hearing? Eye-strain or defective vision may cause irritability, headaches, nausea, loss of appetite, loss of infrequency of blinching. And deafness, starting with adenoid, hardening wax or a cold, may become impossible to remedy, unless taken at the beginning. Is your child to be under a handicap? Eye and ear defects are in a large measure responsible for inattentiveness, bad discipline and failure to be promoted. It all comes to this. We consider our reputation lost if our schools illiterate, a poor reputation secure if they come from our schools with needless physical defects and handicaps. Let every boy and girl in Canada be given a chance to be physically strong.

HOMES THAT ARE NOT HOMES

Parents are so much on the go nowadays, the margin of time beyond their necessary work is so completely taken up with entertainment, sport, social activities and a thousand and one distractions that home ceases to be a home and becomes merely a stopping place. What happens. Well, the divorce courts tell part of the story. The juvenile and criminal courts tell more of it. The school authorities are aware of many facts, and now and then they give utterance to wise counsels for parental ears. Principal Alfred E. Stearns.

of Phillips Andover Academy is one of the latest to do this. In an address before the fifteenth annual convention of the Massachusetts Parent Teacher Association, Principal Stearns declared that "parents of today are not on their jobs, and as a result the children suffer." The home he characterized as "the background and foundation of American life". He deplored the tendency to exalt individualism and selfishness, the unwillingness of parents to talk over with their children such matters as automobiles, joy rides, movies and reading, the neglect of discipline, the absence of home atmosphere and the omission of religious training. Of course there are still a great many homes of the better sort. These are the bulwark and hope of the nation.

POWER BRAKES FOR AUTOMOBILES

Automobiles have self-starters; why don't they have self-stoppers? No doubt, many a car owner has asked this question and wondered about the feasibility of power brakes. Now comes the report from the automotive manufacturing centres that the question has been asked and turned over seriously in the minds of automotive engineers. Experimentation, in fact, has been under way for some time, looking toward the perfection of mechanical means of deceleration. It is also agreed among certain automotive engineers that the business of shifting gears should be a mechanical operation.

Power brakes have been successfully used for many years on steam trains and electric cars; but for some reason it seems not to have occurred to anybody until recently that a self-stopper, as well as a self-starter, should be part of the standard equipment of every car. Reports which have become current in automotive circles recently indicate that air-brakes may soon make their appearance on passenger automobiles. They have already been used on the big motor buses used in suburban and interurban highway service.

No motor car can be brought to a standstill while descending a hill without the use of a lot of energy on the part of the driver. The driver may not realize it, but he is called upon to exert a great amount of strength every time he pushes on the foot pedal or pulls the emergency brake lever. Certain engineers now declare that so crude a method of bringing a car to a standstill is no longer necessary.

The manipulation of brakes by mechanical power will have nothing to do with the number of brakes used or their location, for the idea can be adapted with equal facility to two-wheel or four-wheel outfits. All that the power brake is expected to do is to eliminate the brake pedal.

Compressed air is considered the most practical medium of braking power, because it can be applied in a wide variety of ways. Compressed air can be generated by a pump operated by the propeller shaft. In this way the car's momentum can be used to effect the compression of the air. Electric power can also be used to supply compressed air. There are almost as many ways of generating compressed air as there are ways of applying it.

Another plan under consideration provides for a combination of compressed air and hydraulic pressure. To stop a car with the use of compressed air or with hydraulic pressure would render unnecessary the exertion of physical effort. With the self-stopper, the driver will be able to give all his attention to the clutch and the accelerator.

"Content's A Kingdom"

Thomas Heywood

Every citizen of Wolfville should possess it For, are not the Prosperity, Progress and general Welfare of a great Community best reflected in the CONTENTED DISPOSITIONS OF ITS RESIDENTS?

Put yourself in the place of the visitor within our gates. If he's the type who judge as they pass---and most of them do---he'll formulate his opinion of us and our town by the welcome he receives, the friendliness he observes about him, the neighborliness of our citizens---the state of CONTENTMENT we show.

So go about with a friendly smile---one that you really mean. Speak a kind word for Wolfville whenever the opportunity presents itself. Do a kind deed for your neighbor now and then and he'll do as much for you. Make the visitor feel at home by imparting what information you can with a cheerfulness that bespeaks your CONTENTMENT in living in this great community.

Surely, you have every reason in the world to be CONTENT here Your interests, both commercial and social, are here. Our resources are just beginning to be developed. And yours are the countless opportunities to make this a better place in which to live and enjoy life to its fullest extent.

We, the undersigned professional and business interests, believe that the happy CONTENTED citizen is a better Advertisement for Wolfville than the biggest billboard on earth could be.

Heed this advice and---BE ONE.

Personal and Social

Mrs. S. P. Bigelow, of Halifax, is visiting in town, a guest at Acadia Lodge.

Miss McElhinney spent the Thanksgiving holidays with friends in Halifax and Truro.

Mrs. Wylie Manning and two children, of Amherst, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Manning's parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. E. DeWitt, Park street.

Dr. F. W. Patterson, accompanied by his daughter, spent Sunday last in Halifax where Dr. Patterson was the preacher on Sunday morning at the First Baptist church.

Rev. H. T. DeWolf, principal of Acadia Seminary, spent last Sunday in Halifax, where he was one of the speakers at the anniversary service at the West End Baptist church.

Mrs. F. P. Rockwell and Miss Beatrice Rockwell leave Friday morning for New York, spending some time there before going to Florida, where they will remain during the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fowler, who have spent the past season at their pleasant Summer home at Hantsport, have returned to Wolfville for the winter, and are occupying rooms at Acadia Lodge.

Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Lingley returned to Wolfville on Tuesday and will occupy an apartment at Evangeline Cottage during the winter. Many friends are glad to give them a welcome back.

Mrs. Harry O. Bennett who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Harriott Colwell, and other relatives at Newtonville for the past three weeks, started on Tuesday for her home at Chater, Manitoba.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster B. Carl, of Schenectady, N. Y., who are spending their honeymoon in Nova Scotia, were in Wolfville for a brief stay at the home of the former's sister, Mrs. B. O. Davison, Summer street.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. MacKenzie left on Tuesday to spend the winter at Lakeland, Florida. Wolfville people generally will join The ACADIAN in wishing them an enjoyable winter in the land of perpetual summer.

Rev. and Mrs. F. H. Beals have returned from Hantsport and are occupying their own home on Central avenue. Wolfville friends are very glad to welcome them back and to know that Mr. Beals has made splendid progress towards recovery from his recent serious operation.

AVONPORT

Miss Olive Parker, of Halifax, spent the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Parker, returning to the city Tuesday morning.

Miss Cora M. Walsh, of staff of the Kentville Pub. Co., was the guest of her mother for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtney, of Shubenacadie, are spending the week with their daughter, Miss C. A. Holmes.

Mr. W. A. Walsh is in Halifax attending the Grand Division, S. of T., as a delegate from Hopeful Division.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Holmes spent a few days of last week in Windsor, visiting their son Ralph.

Miss Mildred Young, of Windsor, is the guest of her friend, Miss Adelaide Borden.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Trefry and little son Robert, of Kentville, spent Sunday with the former's father, Mr. L. M. Trefry.

Miss Isabell Daniels, of Martock, has been the guest during the week past of her aunt, Miss Alice Fuller.

Our school teacher, Miss Woodworth, spent the Thanksgiving holidays at her home in Port Williams.

Mr. Fred Wallace has leased his residence here for the winter to a Mr. and Mrs. Walker, who have been residing in Wolfville. Mr. Wallace expects to leave on Friday to spend a few months in Massachusetts.

MENDING GLASSWARE

There are several good preparations for mending broken tumblers and other glassware, but the following is highly recommended by a housewife, who claims the mended article can be put into boiling water without breaking apart:

To make the preparation add one part solution of bicarbonate of potash to five parts of gelatine. Cover the broken edges of the glass with this, press them together and stand the mended article in the direct sunlight for 2 1/2 hours. If neatly done the break will not be visible.

Epitaph: "He didn't have time to stop at the crossing; he has plenty of leisure now."

The Gift Shop

Here is where the lover of the distinctive may ramble to her heart's content, 'mongst little gifts, big gifts, gifts dainty and inexpensive, gifts for everybody.

The Gift Shop is fun to visit, even if you don't spend a cent.

We certainly welcome you to come in and look around and feast your eyes on gifts of individuality from every clime.

P.S. We have just opened up the most distinctive line of Christmas greeting cards in town. You'll say so when you see them.

GRAND PRE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The November meeting of the Grand Pre Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Townshend. The retiring president, Mrs. F. C. Dennison, opened the meeting.

Sunshine boxes and flowers were sent to the ill during the month. Miss Stuart read a petition prepared by the North American Historical Society requesting the government to erect a suitable marble or granite monument at Grand Pre, in memory of Colonel Noble. The Institute passed a motion in endorsing the petition.

A motion was passed requesting the government to supply free insulin to needy persons. The doctors are to control the distribution.

As this was our annual meeting the officers for the ensuing year were appointed, namely, president, Mrs. Roy Woodman; vice-president, Mrs. Alden Harris; secretary, Mrs. L. P. Dennison; directors, Miss Clara Vaughn, Mrs. May Hutchinson, Mrs. William Evans and Miss Mary Eaton.

Miss Laura Trenholm read the opening poem. We were then favored with an address by Miss Davidson, Organizer of Home Nursing Classes in connection with the Red Cross. Miss Davidson gave a splendid outline of the work covered by the classes. It was considered advisable to wait until next month before taking action.

Refreshments were served by the committee. Our interest centred on the large, beautifully decorated birthday cake containing eleven candles. The ex-presidents took turns extinguishing the candles and cutting the cake.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. A. Woodman.

CARD-PIKE

The following clipping from the Schenectady (N. Y.) Gazette will be read with interest by old friends of the groom. Mr. Card, who was at one time a student at the Wolfville High School, is a son of Mr. J. M. Card, now of Wolfville, in this county. For a number of years he has held an important position with the General Electric Co.

"Faith A. Pike, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Pike of 11 Frank street, and Foster B. Card of 12 Western Parkway, were married Saturday by Rev. W. J. O'Leary at the home of the bride at 10 o'clock. The bride was attended by her sister, Alta A. Pike, and the best man was William C. Carl, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a gown of canon crepe and carried white roses. Her attendant wore the same kind of gown and carried white roses.

After a wedding trip of two weeks, Mr. and Mrs. Card will be at home at 9 Eagle street after December 1st.

The Evening News of New Glasgow speaking of Harry Murray and his company in "The Rosary" has the following: "It is not saying too much to state that this group of players is the best gathered together in a play of this kind". At the Orpheum Theatre on Monday, Nov. 17th.

No one knows when Wolfville may be visited by as disastrous a fire as raged in Windsor on Sunday. Is your property fully insured? If not consult

NEW CROSS RECALLS ACADIANS' SUFFERINGS

A new cross has been erected at Mordecai to mark the spot where the fugitive Acadians settled, and underwent such suffering in the winter of 1755. For many years there has been a wooden cross on the spot, but a short time ago it was decided to raise funds to place a permanent structure there, and the work has now been completed, the new cross being of cobble stones and cement, set on a concrete base.

Blue Bird Tea better than ever. Owing to a breakdown in our equipment THE ACADIAN this week reaches its readers a few hours late. We express our regret for the delay which has been wholly unavoidable.

A large barn belonging to Mr. Charles Wallace, adjoining the Parade Ground in Upper Casard, was burned to the ground on Wednesday morning. The cause of the fire is as yet unknown. The returned men of Wolfville and vicinity attended service at St. John's Church last Sunday morning. Under the direction of Major Macpherson and Sergeant Angus they marched to and from the church where they were appropriately addressed by the Rector, Rev. R. F. Dixon.

The three-masted Parrsboro schooner "Minas Prince", Capt. W. H. Smith, arrived on Monday from St. Stephen, N. B., and will load pulp for the Casper and River Power Co. She will take about 50 tons and other vessels are expected shortly to accommodate the remainder of the shipment.

At the close of the Armistice Day proceedings on Tuesday morning a collection was taken on the suggestion of Mayor Chambers in aid of the sufferers by the Windsor fire. The amount received was $101 which will probably be considerably increased by subsequent contributions.

Of "The Rosary" coming to the Orpheum Theatre on Nov. 17, The Truro News says: "Harry Murray lived up to his reputation of producing a show away ahead of the average travelling stock company. In the star role of Father Kelly he was nearly perfect in the part and was assisted by clever artists."

On Wednesday Policeman Crowell made a seizure of twenty barrels of bottled ale at Port Williams station, which has been placed in the custody of the County Inspector at Kentville. This liquor, which had arrived by shipments of two barrels and was consigned in the name of a well known resident of the county, had been accumulating for some time. It will probably be destroyed.

Town Manager Stairs has recently prepared a complete plan of the town water system for the use of the fire company. It shows the location of the hydrants and all particulars respecting the system likely to be of information in case of fire and should be most useful. The plan is posted in the fire rooms so that every member of the company may become familiar with it.

At a meeting held last evening of the committee appointed last Friday evening to canvas the matter of fire protection equipment for the section surrounding Wolfville it was decided to recommend the purchase of an engine similar to that recently purchased by this town. It is understood that last Saturday night's fire at Windsor has considerably enhanced the interest in the proposition.

In "The Rosary" coming to Orpheum Theatre on Nov. 17th, Harry Murray formerly leader of 85th Band concert party, has found a true vehicle for his talent. And in the role of Rev. Brian Kelly he makes the most of his opportunity. The Rosary is a play that appeals to the emotions, with the old familiar triangular problem bringing its usual trail of doubt and jealousy. The heavier work however is shot through with delightful humour.

TOURIST REVENUE EQUALS THAT N. B. PROVINCE

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Tourist traffic in New Brunswick during the past summer fell nearly three millions of dollars in the province, an amount almost equal to the total provincial revenue, is the estimate of proponents of a scheme for increasing tourist travel by a publicity campaign. That 70,000 tourists came to New Brunswick this year, C. B. Allan, secretary of the N. B. Tourist Association, estimates.

Apples Trees and the British Preference. We have bought the total output for the Annapolis Valley of Brson Brothers' Nurseries of Ontario, which are selling at moderate prices. This stock has been giving great satisfaction the past few years.

The British Preference was defeated by six votes in the British House of Commons, 272 votes for, 278 votes against. Best opinions are that this preference will be granted within a few years, and growers having trees then coming in bearing will be in a position to take advantage of same. We strongly recommend growers planting the Winesap for a well colored, long-keeping dessert apple, highly appreciated on the British markets. Friday afternoon, Nov. 6, at the home of the president, Mrs. W. W. Harris, his subject being "World Peace", a subject that is foremost in the minds of thinking men and women. The speaker divided his theme into three propositions: 1. If the church does not end war, war will end the church. 2. If civilization does not end war, war will end civilization. 3. If man does not end war, war will end man.

"These startling statements," said Dr. Hodgson, "were never before true, for war is not what it once was. The instruments of destruction used in the last war are as playing things compared with the later advance in science. Poison gases, germs dropped in the water, submarine and aeroplane warfare, steam and electricity will nigh annihilate time and space. In the old wars, rules had to be obeyed, war was a game, now it is a life and death struggle. Another war would hurl the world into the dark ages, blotting out all the highest and best of our manhood, those who have built up a culture. We are getting ready for another war. The same system that produced the last war must not be used again."

Only by the organization of international life can we abolish war. We must have a world court, a parliament of man, a federation of the world. Nations must come together and sit around a common arbitration board. Only by a world parliament can war be abolished. We can all do our part by fostering a better understanding, work and pray toward this end and that a better spirit, that of the brotherhood of man, may be inculcated in our political life. The vision of the prophet will then be realized and "the sword shall be turned into the ploughshare".

The speaker was tendered a very hearty vote of thanks for his interesting and helpful address. Vocal solos by Mrs. George Osborne Bowser and a piano solo by Mrs. John Burgess were greatly enjoyed, after which all joined in community singing. The committee reported twelve barrels of fruit and vegetables sent to the Infants' Home Halifax. A committee was appointed to consult with the school trustees in regard to expenditure necessary for the improvement of the school horse sheds that they might be of use in connection with Community Hall. The Institute decided to pay for certain articles necessary for the work in connection with their prize list for the School Exhibition. At the close of the meeting a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments served.

PRINCE CLOSED WEMBLEY FAIR

The Exhibition Was a Success, the Attendance Being 18,000,000. WEMBLEY, England, Nov. 2.—The British Empire Exhibition, which opened April 23, was officially closed on Saturday when the Prince of Wales, just returned from Canada, and the United States, addressed a large audience in the stadium.

As President of the Exhibition, the Prince declared that the venture had achieved the full measure of success in the task it had set out to accomplish.

It had given a picture of the Dominion to the people at home, he declared, which indicated the resources and boundless potentialities of their territories. He had also created a greater demand for Empire products as well as giving better knowledge of the overseas territory to the peoples of the overland territory. Resources of Great Britain and a more sympathetic understanding of the problem of the Empire in development and defense.

Despite the unkind attitude of the British weather, the Prince concluded approximately 18,000,000 persons had passed the turnstiles of the exhibition, creating a record for Great Britain.

"Well, well," said the plasterer, coming out of the savings bank, to a college professor just going in, "what are you doing here?" "It is much easier for a man to get strong political convictions if he reads only one daily paper."

It would be perfectly useless to write to John D. Rockefeller to ask him for a lock of his hair.

For that purpose an "apreader" went over it digging out the earth and gravel on either side of the track down to the level of the bottom of the ties. A gang of men followed to shovel out the gravel between the ties and screen and graded as to size, to be dumped in the corner of the track. The gang that followed raised the track four or five inches and tamped the stone solidly underneath every tie. That was the first lift and then followed other car loads of stone and another gang gave the track another lift and again tamped the stone underneath, so that every tie had a good eight inches of stone between it and the clay bed of the track. More stone followed and then came the trimming and surfacing gang and the job was finished.

All the time this work was going on many passengers and freight trains were passing over the line every day. Their running was not interfered with in the slightest degree, a fact which greatly complicated the matter in hand, notwithstanding which it was finished to the entire satisfaction of the Company's officers, which is to say that the construction now completed is typical of the most recent developments in high grade passenger track construction. Another stretch of track which received similar attention this year is the Company's line between Montreal and Ottawa.

ANNUAL CRUSADE MEETING

The annual crusade meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of United Baptist church was held on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 5, president, Mrs. (Rev.) W. G. Heisler, in the chair. The sister societies of Percau Baptist church and Canning Methodist church were on this occasion guests of this society, more than one hundred gathering to listen to a programme of much interest. The meeting opened by the singing of "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name" after which the scripture lesson, Romans 10, was read by the president, who followed with prayer. Then came the roll call by the secretary, Mrs. Arthur North, which was largely responded to. Miss Marion Eaton was appointed treasurer for the Acadia fund. The programme, an interesting one, included a vocal duet by two of the members of the Mission Band, Miss Helen Newcombe and Miss Minnie Ross, whose sweet voices charmed the audience. The accompanist was Miss Marion Eaton. Mrs. Heisler then in a few well chosen words extended a cordial welcome to the visiting societies. Mrs. Arthur North read selections from Tidings, after which readings by Miss Sylvia Heisler, Mrs. Payzant Cox; vocal solos by Miss Ona Ward and a ladies trio, composed of Mrs. E. F. Avery, Miss Isabel Meek, Miss Ruth Bigelow, were much enjoyed.

The first speaker was Mrs. Hardy, for many years missionary to India, who expressed the disappointment of Mrs. Gullison who owing to illness was unable to address us. Mrs. Hardy, who is a delightfully interesting speaker, expressed pleasure in the part taken in the programme by the Mission Band. She chose for her subject, "Moonlight Scenes in India".

Scene I. In the month of March of the year 1912, after a hot and trying day, accompanied by her little daughter Ayah, the speaker saw more than thirty little ones carrying their mid-day meal, on their heads rushing towards them, all anxious to see the little white baby. These tiny tots were engaged in carrying brick for the erection of the Rajah's palace, and on their return at the close of the day would carry with them their wage of one and a half cents. Suddenly a lower caste man let his shadow fall on the pot of one of these little ones, who in tears rushed to the stream scouring the vessel with all her strength.

Scene II. The great oriental moon had arisen, when a long line of carts with gaily dressed women and children, followed by a great procession, rose before them. They were going to the Bay of Bengal, thirty miles distant, to have their sins washed away. These poor deluded people who worshipped the mighty river here prayed that their bodies might be kept from harm and their sins washed away—a beautiful prayer to a living God, but these people had never heard of Him. When they returned after three days chakra-rigged violently for they had partaken of the filthy water. Their money and offerings carried by them to the tanks were given to the priests. Hundreds of thousands go there every year and these priests are the cause of the slaughter through disease of thousands of innocents. When the Christian natives were asked why they did not go their response was, "We would not go to the tank, we know of Jesus Christ who washes our sins away" and they were saved of this dread disease.

Scene III. One moonlight night a group of minstrels came to the bazaar and played and sang songs of their heroes and goddesses. The native Christians who tell their people of God in their own way reach great masses of the people. They begin thus "God gave His only Son to die because He thought you were worth while. Would you give your sons?" "Not our sons—our daughters," comes the response. "But He died that you might live to help those around you, and all you have to do is to accept Him." The masses now coming are hindoo and their teachers are attempting to reach them by the same methods as the Christians. But there is one thing they cannot do. We carry to them the pearl of great price—this they eliminate. Will India go for Mohammedanism or Christ? Let us lift up His banner, that it may float over India. Touching references were made to the missionaries who had gone out from our midst, Miss Winnifred Eaton, of Canard, and Dr. Perry Eaton, of Mrs. Newton Eaton, Canning. We cannot say Our Father unless we believe in Him as the Saviour of mankind, and if we do this we must obey His command, "Go ye into all the world," said the speaker. Mrs. Hardy was the recipient of a hearty vote of appreciation for her delightfully helpful address, and was asked to convey the best wishes of the society to Mrs. Gullison.

Mrs. C. H. Martell was the next speaker, centering her thoughts on the beautiful Mission Home in Wolfville. It is a fine thought that when our missionaries come home, weary and worn and many like the Master with "No place to lay their heads," they have a haven of rest. Percau, Canard and Billtown societies have the privilege of furnishing Rev. R. E. and Mrs. Gullison's room, which is under the direction of Mrs. Lawrence Eaton, one of the most faithful workers. A vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Martell and the hope expressed that we might soon again have the pleasure of meeting with them. The meeting closed with prayer, after which all gathered in the vestry where a delightful supper was enjoyed. Those who assisted were, Mrs. Heisler, Mrs. William Newcombe, Mrs. William Evelyn, Mrs. Lester Melvin, Mrs. L. M. Ward, Mrs. Arthur North, Misses Marion Eaton, Ruth Bigelow and the Misses Heisler. The afternoon full of pleasure marked one of the finest meetings in the history of the church.

WHY HE WAS LOCKED UP

He attracted instant attention because he was wearing that odd combination, an overcoat and a straw hat. The bank cashier asked him what he wanted. The stranger presented a cheque for 80 million dollars and said he wanted it cashed.

He gave his name as John D. Rockefeller, and unquestionably believed it. The cashier detained him with conversation until police arrived. This happened in Hammond, Ind. Investigation revealed that he had escaped from his keepers in Michigan.

The joke is not altogether on this lunatic. As a matter of fact, he was just as happy as if he really had the 80 millions. More than that, probably happier.

It isn't so much what we possess or are in life, as what we think we have and are.

The baby with his first rattle is happier than the rich man with a new motor car, racing horse or country estate.

The hungry ditch-digger's slab of pie tastes better to him than a $5 luncheon to a fellow with a jaded appetite.

Happiness is in the imagination. Life is what we make it.

This apparently wasn't intended to be an intellectual world. For, while knowledge does not necessarily bring unhappiness, it does bring disillusion. And ignorance is nearly always happy.

For one thing, ignorance doesn't know enough to worry.

Ignorance has fears, which intelligence laughs at.

But, of the two evils, worry is far worse than fear. Both are destroyers, yet for every man who dies of fear a thousand at least are sent to premature graves by worry.

If Socrates could drop back into the discussion, he might suggest that a man who imagines 80 millions is the supreme thing in life.

The greatest values are imaginary. Maturity would be happier if the imagination that makes youth joyful were

NEW LAMP BURNS 94 p. c. AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, J. M. Johnson, 246 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

WOMEN OF THE FUTURE

Girls of today come nearer being modern Dianas than their sisters of the preceding generations. The physical education department of an Ohio co-educational college has presented the evidence.

The modern girl is taller, stronger and heavier than her grandmother and her mother were at the same age. The tests are conclusive, for they represent studies made of 1600 women entering college in each of three periods from 1886 to 1903, from 1909 to 1915 and from 1918 to 1922.

The average "freshman" woman up to 1903 was five feet two and six-tenths inches in height. Her college sister of this day is nearly two inches taller.

In weight another increase is recorded. The average 18-year-old college girl weighs 116 pounds. Her predecessor of 1886 weighed slightly more than 112.

Various strength tests similarly show the superiority of the modern girl. Feminine styles and the social requirements for women today admittedly are not perfect, although they represent a distinct advance over the last decades of the nineteenth and the first decade of the twentieth centuries.

A red-headed Irish boy once applied for a position in a messenger office. The manager, after hiring him, sent him on an errand in one of the most fashionable districts. Half an hour later the manager was called to the phone, and the following conversation took place:

"Have you a red-headed boy working for you?"

"Yes."

"Well, this is the janitor at the Oakland Apartments, where your boy came to deliver a message. He insisted on coming in the front way, and was so persistent that I was forced to draw a gun."

"Good heavens. You didn't shoot him, did you?"

"No, but I want my gun back."

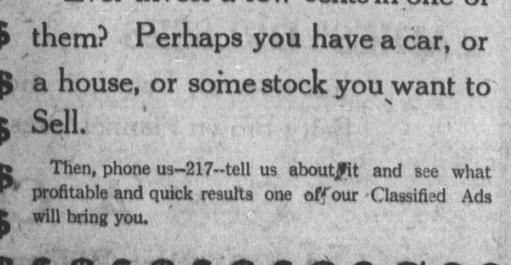

Epitaph: "He didn't have time to stop at the crossing; he has plenty of leisure now."

From there it gained the roadway and made for the parsonage orchard, where it was entangled in the wire fence. When again free it bounded away through the orchards to the westward. Fortunately the close season prevented it being captured.

The two-masted schooner, Edna May, from Parrsboro, is in port loading staves for Rockland, Maine.

Rev. O. N. Chipman preached an impressive Thanksgiving sermon on Sunday morning from the words, "Remember all the way the Lord thy God hath led thee". He alluded to the reason that so many were wearing the poppy on this day as a flower of remembrance.

Misses Hattie Murphy and Hazel MacDonald went to Windsor on Saturday to spend the Thanksgiving holidays.

Several from this vicinity attended the meeting of the Kings County Liberal Association last Tuesday at Kentville. Mr. C. A. Campbell was elected president for the ensuing year.

Capt. J. E. Faulkner came home on Saturday to spend a few days. He was accompanied by his wife, who has been spending the past two weeks with him on the "Canadian Mariner" in New York.

Mr. Kempton Bezanon was called to Windsor at daylight on Sunday morning to assist in repairing the damage to the electric work caused by the destructive fire of Saturday night.

The "Delta Alpha" class of the Sunday School entertained the "Crusaders" on Monday evening at the home of their teacher, Mrs. O. G. Cogswell. The gathering was a farewell for Miss Ruby Kennedy, a "Delta Alpha" who is leaving for the United States to train for a nurse. The evening was spent in games and other pastimes, the happy gathering breaking up about 11:30 p.m. Miss Kennedy was presented with a birthday book from her class.

An Armistice meeting was held in Citizens' Hall on Tuesday evening, November 11th. The programme was given by the three schools, Town Plot, Church Street, and Port Williams, consisting of readings, exercises and recitations. Mr. E. W. Robinson, M.P., was the speaker of the evening.

Congratulations are in order for Mr. and Mrs. Kempton Lantz on the birth of a daughter at the Wood Maternity Hospital.

News was received here on Wednesday morning of the death of Mrs. W. H. Chase, Wolfville.

Mr. D. C. Clarke, of G. H. Chase and Co., was in Parrsboro recently on business.

Mr. A. N. Coulston is in Sydney on a business trip.

Miss Hazel Dodge, of the Kentville Academy staff, spent the holidays with her cousin, Mrs. A. N. Coulston.

Mr. C. A. Newcombe, deputy of "Lily of the Valley" Division, went to Halifax Wednesday morning to attend the annual session of the Grand Division.

Mrs. Hardy Vaughn and Miss Margaret Weaver visited at Church Street on Wednesday, guests of their sister, Mrs. C. A. Newcombe.

Miss Annie Morine has resigned her position at Wood Bros., Halifax, and is now at her home at Church Street with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Byard Morine.

Mr. Gordon Thomson, of St. John, N. B., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomson.

NOTED HYGIENIST

Mrs. Clive Rolfe, O.B.E., noted social worker of Great Britain, who is to visit Canada this month to attend the National Health Conference. Mrs. Rolfe will lecture in Canada under the auspices of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council. She is the eldest daughter of Admiral Sir Cecil Burney, G.C., M.G., who was second in command at Jutland.

GREENWICH

Miss Winona Betts, R.N., returned to the home of her aunt, Mrs. Lilla Forsythe, the first of last week, from a visit of several weeks at the home of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Chesley, in Hantsport.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Bishop and Rev. and Mrs. Hemmeon returned home last Tuesday evening from a five days trip in the former's automobile, camping out while away. They enjoyed it well, even though late in the season.

In a recent Acadian article on the Gravenstein apple being much improved by not being picked so early, has been well proven this season in this community, we are told. The apples are much better, larger, beautifully coloured, very hard and firm, and will keep better by being left on the trees weeks longer; whereas those picked at the time of usual picking to ship, soon wilted and had no colour, lots even rotting in the centre of the apple. The same thing was proved out last year we are told.

Messrs. Philip and Robert Bishop, accompanied by Alex. Andrew, left last Friday by auto "for the woods" on a hunting trip of a few days.

Miss Joyce Harvey, who is teaching at Glenmont, spent the week end and the Thanksgiving holiday at her home here.

Rev. D. B. Hemmeon, D.D., of Wolfville, who has been on a vacation, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church here again on Sunday afternoon and delivered a splendid sermon, referring to Thanksgiving. The duet sung by Mrs. W. Curry and Mr. Turpit was much enjoyed. The church was nicely decorated in keeping with the season, with fruit, vegetables, sheaves of wheat, etc.

A Sing was enjoyed by a number of the young people at the home of Miss Lillian Bishop on Sunday evening.

Mr. Emmerson Johnson is now in Truro, again pursuing his work at the Agricultural College there. We wish him success.

Among those who entertained at Thanksgiving dinner on Monday was Mr. and Mrs. Charles Forsythe, having Mr. and Mrs. James Robertson and three children, the aged mother of Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. Lovitt Bishop, all of North Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Burpee L. Bishop entertained at dinner on the holiday the following guests, Mrs. Bishop's brother, Mr. Andrew Cobb, architect of Bedford, with Mrs. Cobb and two little daughters and Mrs. Cobb's father; Mr. and Mrs. Mills and daughter, of Granville, Annapolis County, both parties enjoying the return trip in their cars.

A number of the residents in the community motored to Windsor on Sunday and Monday to view the ruins of the recent fire there.

A few from here went to Wolfville Monday evening to enjoy the program of movies at the Orpheum.

Mrs. William Seaboyer, of Canard, who has been a patient here at the home of Nurse Andrew the past two weeks, returned home with her infant son, Gerald David, on Tuesday morning.

At a special meeting of our school trustees last Thursday evening a month's leave was granted to our teacher, Mrs. McKay, owing to the serious illness of her husband and his expected operation.

We learn that Mr. Ward, of Kingston, is to supply for her during her absence. We wish him success and extend to Mrs. McKay the deep interest of all in the community. She will be greatly missed.

A number of our farmers are now busy plowing.

EXPORT OF EELGRASS TO UNITED STATES

YARMOUTH, Nov. 8.—According to information available from the Boston and Yarmouth Steamship Company, it is found that during the past year fully $75,000 worth of eelgrass has been exported by its steamers from Yarmouth to ports in the United States. Eelgrass landed at Yarmouth is worth $7.50 a ton, which means that a thousand tons has been this year shipped by steamer. A large quantity has also been sent by rail, which means that this industry is worth over $100,000 to the County of Yarmouth. The eelgrass is manufactured in the United States by Cabots into quilts for sheathing, being used to deaden the sound in floors and partitions, insulating cold storage and ice houses, refrigerators etc. Those who are familiar with this article say that it is capable of further extension in its markets, and that large quantities are available all along the coast for shipment.

Hardware Dealer—"Anything for you today, Mose?"

Mose—"How I must take some iron for my blood, and I s'pects I might as well buy it from you."

END OF OLD NOVA SCOTIA SHIP

In October, when the sea-going tug-boat "Daniel Munro" collided with the barge "Glooscap" outside of New York harbor, causing barge to sink and afterward to be blown up to clear navigation, Nova Scotia lost one of her historic sea marks. The ship "Glooscap", 221 feet keel, 42 feet beam, 24 feet hold, with a tonnage of about 1900 tons, was launched at Spencer's Island on August 20th, thirty three years ago, being Cumberland County's largest ship, as well as one of the strongest vessels afloat, as evidenced by her shape when lost. This latter feature was attributable to the fact that she was double diagonally ceiled. For many years she was in the India and China trade, until steam crowded out the windjammer, when she was sold to the Gypsum Packet Co. Her commander was Capt. Geo. D. Spicer, who with R. W. Spicer, Mrs. H. C. Jenks, J. E. Bigelow and N. W. Eaton are the survivors of the Spencer's Island Company, who built a fleet of vessels at Spencer's Island from 1880 to 1894. The largest ones of which are more. Of the smaller vessels the "Germ" is in South America, the "Evolunt" is beaten over a bar on the W. S. coast last winter and still lives, the "Exception" is still above water, while the "Perfection" was burned at sea.

Scratching noises in a radio receiver seem to be the noises that are prevalent in most sets that are noisy. These noises may be due to one or more of several causes. Those fans having sets that are scratchy will do well to read over the following list and then look over their sets for the points mentioned.

CAUSES OF NOISE IN RECEIVING SETS

The first place to look for trouble is the aerial and ground. If there is any corrosion in any of the joints they should be taken apart and cleaned. Then resoldered. Any joint that is not soldered is liable to cause scratchy noises in the phones.

The next place to look for trouble in this line is on the tube prongs. If there is any corrosion here it should be filed off and the prong preferably given a coating of solder. Use rosin as a flux in this case.

The binding posts on the sockets, rheostats and other parts of the set, if loose, will cause scratchy noises. All nuts should be tightened with a pair of pliers to eliminate any chance of overlooking one nut.

Loose soldered connections in any of the leads in the set will cause scratchy noises and also clicks that are easily traced by touching the wires when the phones are in the circuit and the tubes lit.

Any friction bearings on variable condensers, variometers, or vario couplers will cause any amount of scratchy noises. It would be better to put pigtail connections on all the equipment that now have this type of bearing and forego the necessity of cleaning the shafts and rods every time the set becomes noisy.

Scratchy noises are often due to loose phone connections. This is easily traced by shaking the phone cord while the phones are connected to the set with the tubes turned on.

HANTSPORT HAPPENINGS

Dr. S. McLeod, of Upper Steviacke, returned home on Monday, after spending several days with Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Dickie.

Capt. and Mrs. A. McDonald had for their guests on Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Pelton.

Rev. Dr. Sidey is spending a well earned vacation with his family. Dr. Sidey has been conducting a very successful evangelistic campaign on the island. Mr. Donald Card, who has been assisting him, accompanied him to Hantsport.

Mr. and Mrs. St. C. Jones have for their guest Miss Josephine Jones, of Weymouth.

Mayor and Mrs. Murray and Master Do, who have been on an extended motor trip to different parts of the province, returned home the last of the week.

Laurie Fullerton, of Charlotte town, was the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Fullerton, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Davison returned to Halifax on Saturday, after spending a week at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Davison.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Fash arrived in Hantsport last week and are occupying the parsonage.

Mr. Keye, of Moncton, visited his sister, Mrs. R. S. McDonald, recently.

Mrs. Boomer and little daughter was the guest of Mrs. Irene Cochrane on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, of Annapolis, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Asaph Newcombe.

Dr. and Mrs. Cook, of Berwick, Dr. and Mrs. Bishop, Miss Helena Bishop and Master Robert Bishop, of Kentville, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bradshaw on Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. Sidey and family were Thanksgiving guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Card, Burlington.

Mr. Stanley Robinson has purchased the Arthur Smith property on Willow street and with his family will occupy it in the near future.

The Hantsport Fire Department reviewed the Windsor Fire Department on Sunday evening, returning home on Monday morning.

Mr. T. Patton, of New Glasgow, spent Sunday with his family here.

Misses Annie Reid and Pauline Pular spent the Thanksgiving season at their respective homes here.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover Beazley and Miss Abbie Beazley, of Dartmouth, spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. J. Beazley.

Misses Pearl Graham and Lizzie Smith, of Kentville, spent Monday in town.

Misses Stella Taylor, of North Grand Pre, and Pamela Blackburn, of Burlington, were home for the holiday season.

Miss Gladys Frizzle, of Wolfville, spent the holidays at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frizzle, Holmes Hill.

Messrs. A. Gill, G. Kewley, and T. Turner were home for the holidays.

Capt. Salter, of Bridgetown, was a recent visitor to Hantsport.

Mr. Ellsworth Morris, an Acadia University student, spent the holidays with his father, Mr. Geo. Morris.

Saturday was "Poppy Day" in Hantsport.

Mrs. John McDonald and Mrs. Gordon Gould (nee Lena McDonald), of Mapleton, visited Mr. and Mrs. J. Lockhart on Monday.

Mr. Rock spent several days in Halifax last week.

Thanksgiving sermons and special music featured the services in the different churches here on Sunday. The Rev. Mr. Fash, who recently accepted a call to the Baptist church, was heard the first time on Sunday. Mr. Fash delivered a particularly interesting address on "Opportunity" in the evening. The solo, "The Watchman", by W. H. Squires, was exceptionally well rendered by Mr. R. G. Burns. Mr. Hugh Rolph was heard to great advantage in his solo in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning.

turned. Rebecca Elder came and stopped till meeting time. Thursday Mother went to Olivia's to spend the day. Joe wanted us to go too, but we had promised my brothers to go up there. We found them with their music. Charlotte and Amelia Frost came and spent the evening with us, then they, with the boys and Ann, came home with us for a walk. There was a candy party over at Uncle Patton's. Friday evening we went to a temperance meeting. Nelson Terfry from Weymouth gave a speech and Deacon Holmes read an interesting piece on the trial of "Mr. Alcohol and Mr. Moderate Drinker". Yesterday afternoon Ann came down and helped me sew on the cloak Simeon brought me. In the evening Rob and John came down. We studied Geography, read, and had a spelling lesson. We spent a very pleasant evening and it seems quite like old times to have Simeon home.

21st. I have been alone today as Simeon had to go to Wolfville. Ann and David Huntly called in a while, having been to Olivia's for the evening and were on their way home.

22nd. We had a pleasant visit today from Capt. Kendal and wife, James Frizzle and family, and Father and Mother. In the evening my brothers and Ann came down, and Simeon entertained us with sailor's yarns.

23rd. We attended prayer meeting—had a good meeting. William Irish spoke well. Yesterday and the day before I made Simeon assist me in the school. The children seemed pleased and kept him busy.

25th. We arose early this morning and I got my washing out before school time. Simeon went to Windsor. Susannah and Mary Davidson are here, I would not let them go home as it is snowing so hard. Hibbert arrived Wednesday night from Halifax, having just returned from Fredericksburg.

26th. Susannah and Mary Eliza went home early this morning. James Phalen came in and took dinner with us. Hibbert and Mary went for a sleigh drive and Ann is staying with the children. Mr. and Mrs. G. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Terfry, Elmira and Grace all came and spent the evening. It seemed so like old times to see Grace again. We spent a very pleasant evening.

27th. We heard a good sermon this morning from Mr. McKean who walked in from the College. John Frost came and took dinner with us. I think he is a devout Christian, and he has a good influence with his associates.

28th. We spent this evening at Father's in company with Joe and Olivia, Hibbert and Mary. The tongues kept pretty busy, particularly about the rates, which are very unusual. The rate gatherer has been along. Mother has the greatest set of so-in-law to make speeches and comparisons of any I know of. They are a jovial lot.

29th. This has been a stormy day. I had twelve scholars. Simeon had to take Adah home as she cried after the other scholars had gone. We read in the evening from some of Fowler's books.

30th. Mr. Bezanson has been here today laying a floor. It is stormy and the roads drifted, but we went up to meeting in the evening.

Feb. 3rd. Sunday. This has been a rainy day, and the wind blowing. Capt. Michener and Maria, Joe Davidson and family spent the evening here last night. There was a sawing bee at Mrs. Dorman's and we all went over a while. The house was full. After our company had gone I sat up till nearly twelve to finish my cloak.

5th. I had 21 scholars today and I almost got out of patience with some of them, they were so noisy. I was much startled today to hear of the death of Rebecca Treacy. I did not know she was ill. I can not refrain from mourning as I know I will not be seeing her again in this life. I think of the many happy hours we have spent together and recall them one by one.

TOO MANY WHITE-COLLAR GRADUATES

(From the Financial Post.)

There is a growing conviction among those who are studying world industrial developments that in Canada our educational system is producing too many white-collar graduates and not turning out sufficient number of competent mechanics—if our manufacturing concerns are to hold a place in world markets.

In a recent address, C. H. Carlisle, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, predicted that Germany and France would soon be in a position to enter energetically into the world's markets, and as Ontario at present exports nearly 50 per cent. of her industries.

STANLEY BALDWIN AND THE MISTRESS OF NO. 10 DOWNING ST.

A new photograph of Rt. Hon. and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin taken just before the British elections.

trial production, particularly automobiles and accessories, he declared that we would have to face the problem of new competition from countries where wages were low and hours long.

To meet this situation requires efficiency on the part of both management and workers. Men who have made outstanding successes of their own lives—who have grown from poor boys into great leaders—almost invariably agree that boys should get to work at the calling for which they are suited and which they propose to follow, not later than fourteen years of age, because from fourteen to twenty are the years in which they benefit most from training. Many of the business and financial leaders in the United States and Europe are sending their own boys to work at the age of fourteen for this reason. Boys and girls will have a better opportunity to become prosperous and useful citizens if, after completing their public school education, at eleven or twelve, they can be sent to the technical schools to learn chemistry or a mechanical trade or given practical instruction in whatever calling they propose to follow, thus combining practical work with their further learning.

The cost of this enlarged technical education could be met, largely at least, by curtailing the heavy appropriations now made for higher education. The universities are doing a great work but there is tremendous waste of material and energy. Too many mentally under-sized boys and girls are sent there on whom an art education is not only wasted but proves an actual handicap in that it takes the very best years of their life and talents them for the work in which their talent would give a reasonable opportunity for success.

A former professor in a Canadian university, now an executive in a large organization in which the training of young men is one of his most important duties, said a few days ago that he had much fewer successes with university graduates than with boys who came with only a good common and high school education. Addressing the Toronto Canadian Club this week, Dr.

Gordon Laing, M.A., Ph. D., D. Litt., stressed the great waste that this country and all countries are suffering through inefficient primary education. It is just as important that there be capable teachers in the public and technical schools as in the universities and this should be recognized in fixing the salaries paid.

MRS. FASH HONORED BY MISSION CIRCLE

Given Life Membership in Baptist Branch on Eve of Departure.

Following the regular morning service in the Baptist church on Sunday, the ladies of the congregation assembled in the ladies' parlor, where Mrs. G. J. C. White, as president of the Mission Circle, presented Mrs. Fash with a life membership in the W. M. S. of the Baptist church, together with her membership pin. Mrs. Fash made a very feeling reply and expressed her sincere appreciation in being remembered in this way.

Mrs. Fash, who, with Mr. Fash, left this week early for the east, has been a very active worker in the mission circle during her residence here and will be greatly missed. In making the presentation, Mrs. White expressed the regrets of all the members in her departure from Summerland and wished her every happiness in her new home.—Summerland (B. Col.) Review.

HIS ADVICE IS WIDELY SOUGHT

Fred. P. Mann, a retailer in Devil's Lake, North Dakota, has the distinction of selling more merchandise than is sold in any store of equal size in the world. Because of his success, he is much in demand at meetings of retail merchants. Here is a short extract from one of Mr. Mann's speeches:

"I would feel I was tied hand and foot, if I failed to tell the public through the home paper what I have to sell. The best time to advertise is when times are hard or business is bad and your competitor either curtails his advertising or is not advertising at all. I believe the newspapers of this country are the greatest business builders the world has ever known. I have tried to do business without printer's ink as well as with it, and my conclusion is that the merchant who thinks he can prosper without advertising his goods, is foolish."

Why Advertise ?

Bruce Barton relates a story about a friend who approached the proprietor of a retail store to sell him an advertising contract. "Why should I advertise?" asked the dealer. "I've been here for twenty years. There isn't a man, woman or child here who doesn't know who I am and what I sell."

The advertising man promptly asked, "What is that building over there?"

The proprietor answered, "That's the oldest church in this town."

"How long has it been there?" the advertising man asked.

"Oh, I don't know, seventy-five years probably."

"And yet," explained the advertising man, "they ring the church bell every Sunday morning."

CHAPTER XXIV

"I have seen some financial muddles in my time and some manipulation that was on the borderline of pure theft," Charlie Hale said to Rod, "but this is a little the worst mess I ever had to do with."

They were going over the situation in Hale's private office, which had once been Grove's sanctum, sitting by the same table upon which Grove had leaned his elbows long ago, when he remonstrated with Rod for walking Beach Avenue with Mary Thorn. Beyond its walls the faint murmur of voices arose, and the remote tapping of typewriters. "Take this Spruce Supplies Limited for an example," Hale continued. "One of the apparently honest failures that left the Norquay Trust in the lurch. Spruce Supplies was organized by Richston and Wall. There were other stockholders—all dummies. Once incorporated, Wall and Richston accordingly dispose of all interest in the company. Then Spruce Supplies proceeds to issue three hundred thousand dollars' worth of five-year, seven per cent bonds against their holdings, which consist of timber limits, camp equipment, and logging machinery, valued at seven hundred thousand dollars. The Norquay Trust takes these bonds as security for a loan of three hundred thousand, recommended and authorized by Wall, Richston, etc., in their capacity as directors. The concern is supposed to create a sinking fund to retire these bonds at maturity. They begin timber operations with a flourish. For two years they pay the bond interest. But after two years they cease payments. In the fullness of time the Norquay Trust forecloses and acquires all the assets. But in my investigation of these assets, I discovered that Spruce Supplies operated on a tremendous scale while they did work. The timber is practically all cut, the equipment is pretty well worn out. The other two hundred thousand, estimated seven or eight hundred thousand dollars' worth of timber removed—prices went rocketing for airplane spruce, you know. A liberal estimate of what we have to show for three hundred thousand cash is less than sixty thousand in real value."

"There were seven shareholders. Five owned two shares apiece. Two are clerks who disappeared in the draft. Three are bond salesmen—forty-dollar-a-week men. The two who owned the bulk of the stock—well, one's a sort of confidential man in Richston's office. The other was for ten years in Wall's employment. They're both out of the country; with a few thousand dollars apiece, I imagine. Dummies—pure and simple. You can guess who got the money. But you can't prove anything. I doubt if you could take legal action against those fox-y old birds if you had proof that the pair looted Spruce Supplies. It was ostensibly a legal transaction. The Norquay Trust Company should have protected itself, you see."

"And that's only one of several such," Hale concluded. "They made a milk cow of this business. They saw that funds were invested where they would do the most good for them. They simply made a goat of Grove."

Rod stared at the figures on a sheet of paper before him. "Liabilities practically four hundred thousand in excess of available assets," he murmured. "That's a hump to get over. How long can we reasonably expect to go on—mean how much grace will we have to meet everything without going into forced liquidation?"

"With a fair amount of revenue from some outside source—say eighty or a hundred thousand every six months—we can go right along as usual," Hale replied. "There's no immediate call for funds. All the pressing obligations your father provided funds to meet. There's only a dead loss that this concern can't shake off by its own efforts. We can't have—cut operating expenses to the bone. But as a trust company we can't legitimately—make money fast enough to get even."

"There's only one outside source of revenue available, you know," Rod reminded. "Is it wise to go any farther?" Hale shifted uneasily. "You'll beggar yourself."

"Between begging myself and begging other people, there doesn't seem to be much choice," Hale said earnestly. "Do you consider yourself personally responsible for Grove's actions?" Hale asked earnestly.

"You know what the governor's idea was," Rod answered. "Grove put this over pretty much on the strength of the family standing. So we were tacitly involved. We'll be a public stink if we sit back. We aren't morally responsible; we are morally. That was his idea. I'm inclined to agree."

"That's drawing it pretty fine," Hale responded. "Grove was his son. Individually you are not to blame at all. It's easy to make a grand gesture and go down. Heroic sort of thing. But once you're down everybody'll walk on you."

"What are you getting at?" Rod demanded impatiently. "Do you want me to cut and run with the swag—like a burglar? It amounts to pretty much the same. I kept the state intact, and these people all lose their money. I don't quite see why you should try to dissuade me."

"I'm rather anxious to know just how far you will go with it," Hale replied. "Suppose you change your mind when the going gets rough? I've got involved in this myself through connection by marriage."

Hale didn't resent the question. He answered frankly. "Well, yes and no. I wasn't a rich man to begin with and four years in the army didn't improve my finances. Still, I can get by comfortably on my profession. It wouldn't be convenient to have it continue. But that is not what disturbs me. I don't like to think of the family fortune all shot to pieces, the old place up the coast passing into the hands of some damned profiteer—some pot-bellied swab who may be a barrel or more of building useless ships or selling bacon to the government. The rallying point of the whole clan will be gone. You'll be like a feudal baron without a castle, without a single man-at-arms."

"Still, you see my position, don't you?" Rod persisted. "Surely," Hale admitted. "I'm not dense—or unsympathetic. Noblesse oblige. Only it's a pity. People won't care one way or the other a year after it's over. Everybody's too busy whipping his own particular devil around the stump. When your wife has to wear cotton stockings and do her own cooking, the very people you're protecting don't only think of you with contemptuous pity."

"I would rather incur their contempt than my own," Rod answered that the last had stung him a little. "Well, I'll keep in touch. So long."

He went home, back to the rented house which they kept on for convenience. Six weeks at Hawk's Nest had revived the old feeling of its being the only place he could ever truly regard as home. That fierce possessive pride rose stronger than ever in his breast when he stood among those massive trees rising in brown-trunked ranks over Big Dent, when he lay in his bed at night and looked drowsily up at the high, beamed ceiling. It was as permanent as the hills—or it should be made so. And it was his, his own, to keep and pass on to another generation of Norquays—if he could. If he could? There had never been a question of that nature to harass a Norquay since the cornerstone was leveled into place in 1809. If he could? Why shouldn't he? It was simply a matter of his hands in his pockets, aloof, unmoved, while Grove's white elephant died for lack of the nourishment he alone could supply. Hadn't his father done enough? The figures had staggered Rod at the time. Although every active productive undertaking of the estate had stopped for the duration of the war, yet their fortune had not shrunk appreciably. Not until Rod's father began to pour it into those looted coffers. Every liquid asset, bonds, gilt-edged securities, real estate—all hypothecated to raise funds.

Hopless to think of ever redeeming them. But there was still timber which with labor and machinery he could transform into money. He owned that clear of all encumbrance, thousands of acres of it, the finest virgin timber on the Pacific coast. With Hawk's Nest and standing timber he still had firm grasp of the old, comfortable security for himself and all the collateral branches of the Norquay clan.

Why should he voluntarily give that up? To organize his forces, to live under the pressure of a struggle for more and more revenue, to drive labor, to watch markets and prices with a feverish intensity, to live and breathe and think in terms of money and more money was hateful to him. To whip up a sick heart day after day. Suppose it laid down on him? Who would carry on? He looked back from his own doorstep at the square roof and the skeleton sign of the Norquay Trust looming on the jagged downtown skyline. It was like an inverted pyramid resting on his shoulders, crushing him.

He walked through the living room with a glance. He knew Mary would be upstairs where she had arranged a workshop for herself with a desk, a shelf of books, a typewriter. She sat there making aimless marks on the margin of a pad on which she had written a few sentences.

He had explained the situation to her roughly long ago. Now he sat down to explain in detail, to outline his personal relation to an inherited problem. "There it is," he concluded. "What do you think? I can go through with it, or I can let it go. It may beat me if I do my best. At most we'll only have Hawk's Nest and some machinery. I can hardly hope to salvage more than that."

She looked at him for a second with an enigmatical smile. "Why ask me, Rod?" she said finally. "You're going to do what one would naturally expect you to do. You've made up your mind. You don't really consider that you have much choice, do you?"

"No," he admitted. "I can't see that I have. I hate the job. I don't like cutting my own throat. I don't like paying for a dead horse that somebody else killed. But I simply can't do the other thing."

"I don't like poverty," Mary said presently. "I've known comparative poverty, though, and I'm not much the worse for it. I'm confident that between us we could manage very well if we had nothing but the clothes we stand in. One can sometimes turn dreams into dollars. No, I'm not much afraid of anything the world can do to us. Rod junior will manage to grow up into something of a man on considerably less than a steen thousand a year. If you feel that something more vital to you than money is involved in this. One has to be guided in such matters by one's convictions. A profound conviction, right or wrong, is a tremendous driving force. If you throttle it to grasp a material advantage—People do sometimes. And they suffer for it."

She sat tapping the pad with her pencil. "Queer complications crop up over such a question," she said at last. "I wonder if you know that practically all my father's money is in the Norquay Trust. The few thousands that are to keep him and mamma in comfort while they live—all be saved out of a lifetime of work."

"Good Lord, no, I didn't know that," Rod said. "He didn't get it out when the scramble was on?"

She shook her head. "He laughed when I asked him. I did. I telephoned him when you told me what was happening downtown. He hasn't even thought of revoking the trust. You see," she explained, "he made a trust fund of it and draws only the income. He said that people could make damned fools of themselves on the strength of a rumor, but that he was sure anything the Norquay family backed was as solid as Gibraltar."

"Well, you have the key to why Grove shot himself, and to why my father obeyed God. It's a reality I have to abide by. If we go down, we go down with our flag flying."

"But we won't go down," she said cheerfully. "She came and put her arms encouragingly about him. "We may lose materially, but there are precious things that can't be taken away from yourself. Only you'll have to be careful of this. You'll have to relax. You've been strung up for weeks, brooding over this mess. I don't like that. You mustn't. We'll play the cards we hold, and if we lose, why we'll have played without cheating. Eh? Smile, Roderick Dhu."

"You're a jewel," Rod whispered. "I won't brood any more. Rod whistled. "I'm going to get under way. May I have a man in to dinner if I can get hold of him?"

"Half a dozen, if you like," Mary smiled. "They went downstairs. Rod called a regimental headquarters at Hastings Park. He got some information there, and called another number. Yes, Mr. Hall was in. In another minute Rod had him on the wire. Yes, he could come out to the house."

In the broad mirror of Rod's imagination, as he sat waiting, there stood forth successive images of what he meant to accomplish and how. His mind had a faculty of projecting ways and means, not as sketchy ideas, but as extraordinarily vivid pictures of the actual proceeding. He meant to make Andy Hall labor staff. His program took form in flashes, glimpses of men, machinery, stretches of forest, booming grounds—all energized, dynamic. There was a simplicity that he appreciated in such an undertaking. It was not a matter of finessing, of juggling with pawns and tokens, but of honest, purposeful, under a directing force to supply human needs. He liked that aspect of what he meant to do.

Hall was ushered in by Yick Sing. He was in civilian clothes, a small bronze button in his left lapel. Rod led him upstairs to Mary's den.

"How long since you were demobbed?" "About two weeks," Hall answered. "Good. I'm going to start a pretty extensive logging show. Will you help me organize it?"

"Why pick on me?" Andy inquired languidly. "I know you," Rod replied. "You know logging and loggers. I want a man who will understand what I'm driving at; a man I can trust."

"How do you know you can trust me?" "I don't know it. I feel it." A queer expression flickered across Andy's face. "A rebel like me?" he said. "You know what I think about your class—you masters of my class. You people who have control of all the sources of power. You give us jobs or take them away, according to the dictates of your interest. You understand and believe in class distinctions, don't you?"

"I understand them, yes. But character is more important than class." "What is character?" Hall demanded. "Indefinable in most cases. But it's recognizable. Whatever your situation in life, without this thing we call character you're a dud. It exists independent of class. A leisurely education, quickened intelligence, liberal education, a tradition of uprightness, is supposed to form it. But it crops out, regardless of all these things. It's inherent in some people. It's an individual quality, not a class hall-mark. But I'm getting away from the point. Your social and economic theories have very little to do with your individual function in society as it stands. You don't imagine there's a working-class movement for general betterment on foot in this country that will be imperiled by your working for me as a well-paid assistant in a job I'm undertaking? Do you?"

Andy grinned broadly. "Hardly. So long as industry supplies jobs at living wages, everything'll be lovely. Give 'em jobs. That's all they want. They're uncomfortable in their minds unless there's somebody to tell 'em what to do. Tchik!"

He shrugged his shoulders. "A soggy lump of dough," he grumbled. "Still, such as they are, I belong to 'em. I know what they're up against better than they do. And I'm sorry for 'em, without being able to change things."

"You find your people, the workers," Rod said, "a soggy lump of dough that the active brains of the world rather ruthlessly knead into such shapes as they require. And I find greediness, thoughtlessness, arrogance and waste outstanding features among a considerable portion of my own class, which we agree control and directs industry. Neither of us likes the prospect, but what can we do about it? Not much. We didn't create this state of affairs. But our actions are shaped by it. Even if a certain humane instinct in us revolts at being mixed up in an unseemly scramble where everybody is grabbing what he can, we have to accept that condition. If we have to fight for what we want—whether it's merely to exist or to pursue an ideal—why not fight with the best weapon that offers? I'm offering you a commission in industry instead of enlistment in the ranks. It's neither philanthropy, nor a bribe on my part."

"You pay me a compliment," Andy said gravely. "It's true I know logging and loggers. But I don't know that I'd make a good boss—from the employer's point of view. It would not be possible for me to drive men."

"I don't want to drive men," Rod broke out impulsively. "I want to lead 'em, if it can be done. If I can give men just a little more security in their jobs, a little better conditions under which to work, a little more return in wages, that's more to them than all the theory in a thousand books. So long as men must work for wages they'll choose to work where they get the most for their effort. That's the sort of condition I want to create. Circumstances compel me to log for a profit like every other logger. But I'm neither a hog nor a parasite. I'm willing to share profits with the men who make them for me."

"All right, I'm your man," Andy said abruptly. "I never intended to look at a pay check again. I can be a free and unfettered beachcomber and make a living and still be my own boss. But this looks interesting to me. If you don't like my style, or I yours, I can quit on short notice."

"Yes," Rod smiled. "That's where you have the best of the bargain. You can quit. I can't."

"That's rather stretching it a bit," Andy observed dryly. "I can't see that."

"You will presently," Rod informed him. He sketched for Andy the benefit of the situation in which he stood, the necessity for creating revenue, the obligation which he felt to rest heavily upon him. "If I can pull out in a couple of years with Hawk's Nest, some machinery and a well-organized crew, I'll be lucky," he said. "If I can do that, men and machinery is all I need to build up a permanent structure of industry that will take care of my wants and the wants of every man in the organization."

"You're an idealist, Norquay. I didn't think there were any left. I didn't believe idealism existed as a practical working force in any possible employer's mind. I'd got so lately that I didn't think there was anybody left in the world to whom a square deal meant anything but a convenient phrase. After all, that's what you're after, isn't it? Trying to live up to your notion of what constitutes a square deal?"

"Yes, I think that's about it," Rod agreed. "Well, if you don't find the going too hard, if too many practical difficulties don't trip you," Andy prophesied, "I'll say that if you tackle the logging game in the same spirit you'll go a long way. It's a damned scarce sort of spirit. The square deal. This is going to be very interesting. When do I start in your what's the program?"

"I want you to begin to-morrow looking up a woods' boss and getting together a crew. We'll shoot 'em up to the old Valdez camp, start the falling gear, and begin overhauling the machinery that's stored at the old camp. There's a watchman in charge, and everything's in good shape. We'll have to frame up a wage schedule. There will have to be some renovating on the camp. All sorts of details arranged. If you can meet me at the office in the morning, we'll tackle the first arrangements."

"I'll be there," Andy promised. "Meantime," said Rod, "let's go downstairs where it's more comfortable. If you have no other engagement you may as well stay to dinner."

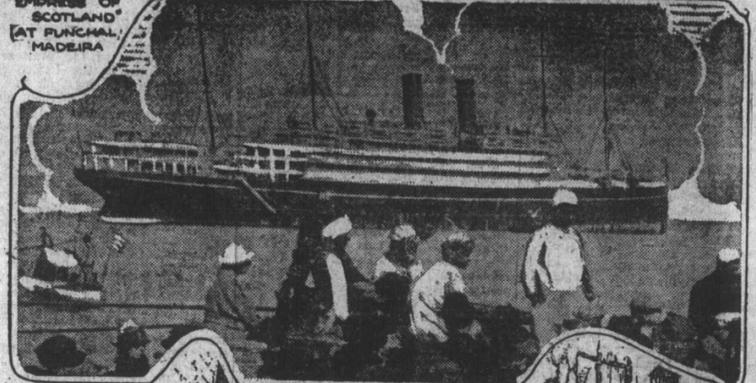

"Thanks, I will," Andy accepted. "You won't mind, I suppose, having the cook serve square peas for me?"

"They chuckled and so managed to dissipate the last trace of stiffness between them. Rod considered that he had won a minor victory. He knew that Andy Hall was one of those occasional beings who sprang from obscure sources with brains, courage, a pertinacious diligence in whatever he undertook, with infinite capacities for loyalty to either a person or an idea; the sort of man who leads forlorn proletarian hopes and is sometimes crucified by his own kind for fighting their battles. He could trust Andy Hall. Rod would have found it difficult to say, off-hand, just why. But he knew that he could. And he had to have about him men whom he could trust, men who could understand that he was not simply another exploiter seeking ruthlessly his own advantage.

Mediterranean Was Once Whole World

"Empress of Scotland" at PUNJAL, MADEIRA. History's pages. "Have you looped the loop around the Mediterranean?" is a phrase much in vogue, and each year thousands of wanderlust folk are able to say "Yes!" and wish that they were going to loop the same old loop again.

The "Empress of Scotland," if a big steamship of 26,000 tons gross register and 37,500 tons displacement, could be interviewed, would say that she was departing on her fourth annual cruise of the Mediterranean from New York on Feb. 9, 1935, and that although she could find her way around in the dark she would much prefer daylight so that she would not miss any of the wonderful scenery of the Mediterranean. Passengers on the "Empress" will see Madeira, then drop in to pay a call upon Lisbon, Portugal, as well as another call upon Cadiz, Spain, with Seville as a side trip. Gibraltar, the famous "Rock" next gets the once over, and then Algiers, capital of the French colony of Algeria is visited. Athens, Greece, Constantinople and the Bosphorus are next, and when the ship visits Beyrouit and Haifa all the famous places of the Holy Land are within a short distance of the vessel. The storied Nile awaits the "Empress" and 12 days are spent in seeing the cities of Alexandria and Cairo, the Pyramids, the Sphinx, etc.; then Naples, Pompeii, Rome, Monaco, Cherbourg, Southampton and other places. One can see a lot in 62 days in and about this cradle of civilization, and that's the job of the big oil-burning "Empress of Scotland," the largest vessel in the whole Canadian Pacific fleet.
